Mr. McNamara: As my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State said, the statements from my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister are built into the Bill, and do not necessarily amount to any rewriting of the agreement.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has shown considerable courage and skill. She is right to say that the Bill applies only to prisoners in Northern Ireland: it is a Northern Irish Bill. What applies in the Republic of Ireland depends on what the Government there do to implement the agreement, to which they have also put their hand. I presume that people in the Northern Ireland Office will hear from people in the Department of Foreign Affairs in Dublin precisely what is happening there, and I hope that my hon. Friend the Minister will be able to give that information to the House later today.

My hon. Friend the Member for Linlithgow (Mr. Dalyell) made a point that was echoed by the hon. Member for Basingstoke (Mr. Hunter), but if they read the Bill carefully, they will see that the Scots Guardsmen are covered by it, and that it is up to them whether they want to take advantage of it. One does not have to be a member of a paramilitary organisation to be eligible for early release under the Bill; one need only have been accused and convicted of a scheduled offence.

Mr. Robert McCartney: I believe that the hon. Gentleman's interpretation is correct, but the point was that an accelerated release was being contended for for the two Scots Guardsmen, rather than an application under the Bill, and therein lies the difference between the two cases.

Mr. McNamara: Given the time scale that is being considered, the legislation could be on the stocks before the consultations on the case have been concluded.

Dr. Godman: Whatever the merits of the case for the early release of the two Scots Guardsmen, as a west of Scotland Member I can tell my hon. Friend and the House that rarely does a surgery go by without someone coming along to say that the lads deserve a break. I have mixed feelings on the matter, but I make the point because, even though my hon. Friend the Member for Linlithgow (Mr. Dalyell) could not be described as a west of Scotland Member, I would bet my bottom dollar that he receives similar representations at his surgeries.

Mr. McNamara: My hon. Friend is right. When the soldier from Yorkshire was in a similar situation, we also received such representations. In all the cases, the soldiers had been found guilty, and had, on occasions, concocted stories that the courts were not prepared to accept and that tended to cloud any claims of innocence that they might have made. I make no stronger point than that.

Mr. Robathan: It is true that, in the case of Private Clegg, a story was concocted, but Guardsmen Fisher and Wright throughout told precisely what they believed to be the truth. In my view, they committed a grievous error that led to a fatality. I make no criticism of the court, but they did not concoct a story. Perhaps the most iniquitous aspect of the matter is that they are serving their sentence whereas people who deliberately set out to commit murder are to be released.

Mr. McNamara: As the hon. Gentleman said, they committed a grievous offence, and they are therefore covered by the Bill. The previous Government, whom he supported, failed lamentably to find a suitable offence, less than murder but more than mere manslaughter, to cover members of the security forces in that position, despite the fact that the then Opposition made many efforts to get them to consider the matter seriously.

My next point concerns the sentence review commissioners, one of whom "shall be appointed chairman". The relevant clause refers to people

"commanding widespread acceptance throughout the community in Northern Ireland."

There were unhappy words and experiences between representatives of the two communities over appointment of members of Mr. Patten's commission on the Royal Ulster Constabulary. I hope that that can be avoided this time and that there will be more careful consideration of community recommendations, so that the commissioners will be seen to have widespread support in all sections of the community.

I now turn to the main burden of my speech. The South African experience shows that, in the search for truth and reconciliation, the healing process for individuals and their communities requires considerable long-term care and attention, but that the release of prisoners is also an essential ingredient of conflict resolution. It is right that the matter should be tackled early, so that deeper sources of pain and hurt can be addressed.

The Bill provides for the inclusion of all prisoners whose convictions are conflict-related. That would include members of the armed forces. It would also include individuals who are, or who may claim to be, victims of miscarriages of justice. Some prisoners on paramilitary wings may have chosen to remain silent about their wrongful convictions. Some who have protested their innocence may have associated with paramilitary prisoners; others will not have.

I should like the Minister of State to say that the access of prisoners to the Criminal Cases Review Commission and their right of appeal in either jurisdiction will not be limited or forfeited as a result of their transfer to another jurisdiction or by accelerated release. People who fulfil the criteria and obtain accelerated release but who claim to have been victims of miscarriages of justice, or who have had their cases referred to the CCRC, should not have their position prejudiced by applying for early release.

I should also like the Minister to say that, where prisoners have declared and maintained their innocence, it will not be held against them, as it is in some cases in the rest of the United Kingdom when prisoners appeal for parole: because they claim that they never committed the offence in the first place, they have to stay in prison because they are not showing remorse.

The next matter to which I wish to refer is the integration of former prisoners. Prisoners have played a key role in this peace process. As my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State showed when she visited the Maze prison at Christmas, it was essential that the prisoners understood the Government's intentions and what their representatives outside were seeking to achieve. The prisoners who have been released and those who are still inside will be critical in making all aspects of the agreement work and in helping the search for reconciliation.

I therefore welcome the specific commitment by the Government in the agreement, to which the parties participating have signed up:

"The Governments continue to recognise the importance of measures to facilitate the reintegration of prisoners into the community by providing support both prior to and after release, including assistance directed towards availing of employment opportunities, re-training and/or re-skilling, and further education."

The prisoners' organisations must be recognised as part of the consultative process in trying to achieve that, as must the Northern Ireland Association for the Care and Resettlement of Offenders and appropriate voluntary agencies, to develop proper resettlement and retraining plans for each prisoner.

We do not know precisely how many prisoners are involved. In answering a written question, my hon. Friend the Minister of State could not give me the number of people who regard themselves as politically motivated and who have been through the system. The figure may be around 10,000, although republicans claim that it may be as high as 20,000. If there are that many people, making a new start for them will be difficult.

All prisoners, whatever plaudits they receive at their party conferences, have disadvantages, and some will face discrimination in gaining employment. In the light of the agreement and optimism for the future, we should consider how long people released from prison after serving time for scheduled offences should keep criminal records.

A criminal record can bar someone from entering professions. It bars entry to the law, social work, teaching, banking, insurance, policing and the civil service. It may affect a person's ability to apply for a licence to drive a public carriage vehicle or taxi. It may affect access to education and eligibility for grants and other forms of assistance. Security vetting can affect great areas of employment. The operation of section 42 of the Fair

[Mr. McNamara]

Employment Act, which the Government are reviewing, may discourage companies from employing former prisoners.

There are different aspects to the problem, and different ways have been sought to deal with it. In South Africa, the Truth and Reconciliation Commission proposed an indemnification Bill to expunge the records of political prisoners. In Canada, where there were problems in the Yukon with reintegrating the disproportionate number of former prisoners from the indigenous native American population, there is a specific clause in the Bill of Rights preventing discrimination on grounds of a criminal record. I know that the Standing Advisory Commission on Human Rights is examining that, but reintegration of prisoners into the community merits careful consideration.

Prison officers also face an uncertain future. The inevitable reorganisation of the Northern Ireland Prison Service is likely to result in the permanent closure of the Maze prison. That will have consequences for job security and career development among the officers and staff of the Northern Ireland Prison Service. That must be carefully addressed. They will lose their jobs, when they have long served the community and been exposed to dangerous positions. How do we protect and compensate them, and give them retraining and resettlement? Downsizing will follow naturally from this legislation, and we cannot ignore our responsibilities to former prison officers.

The closures will affect local communities and their economies. I am happy to say that the Government have started such a dialogue with the Northern Ireland Prison Officers Association and the people involved. That is welcome, because, unless we start creating some confidence, we could have prison incidents, unacceptable risks might be taken, and we could get political flashpoints.

If we are making changes in preparation for prisoners going out into the free world, it would be well also to consider how prison regimes might be altered so that matters such as grounds for compassionate leave, parole and weekend leave can be handled more quickly, effectively and efficiently. I suggest that we should consider carefully whether strip searching, especially of women prisoners, cannot be brought to an end.

The major point made by the hon. Member for Bracknell (Mr. MacKay) was on whether there should be some tightening up in the legislation, or whether prisoner release should be directly associated with decommissioning in one way or another. I would reject associating releases with decommissioning. I believe that the terms suggested by the hon. Gentleman would constitute a rewriting of the terms of the Good Friday agreement. He was trying to revisit matters raised during the negotiations and rejected. It was an attempt to rewrite something that the parties to the negotiations accepted could not be done in that particular way. I believe, as does my hon. Friend the Member for Newry and Armagh (Mr. Mallon), in the integrity of the agreement.

I draw the attention of the House to a letter that some may have received from the Northern Ireland Association for the Care and Resettlement of Offenders, an organisation with considerable experience in dealing with released prisoners from both sides of the community who have been sentenced for scheduled offences. NIACRO said:

> "An essential part of that Agreement was the commitment that the majority of politically motivated prisoners would, if the peace held, be released within two years. It is our view, based on our experience and knowledge of prisoners, their organisations and the communities from which they come, that, if the commitment to release is altered, or if new conditions are put upon it, the Agreement will fail and large scale violence will return."

I ask people who seek to alter the agreement to listen to that letter. The organisation is experienced in this matter. It would be wrong for Members of Parliament not to hear the expression of the opinion of experienced people, no matter how unpalatable it may be to them.

NIACRO continues:

> "Specifically—if a new condition is laid down in legislation, that decommissioning of weapons must occur before, or in some other way be concretely linked to, prisoner release, that would represent a breach of the terms of the Agreement and would be seen as the failure of peaceful means and a reason for a return to violence."

That is not my opinion, or what I want to see. It is the considered judgment of what will happen if the agreement is altered.

NIACRO goes on:

> "The Draft Northern Ireland (Sentences) Bill provides that the Secretary of State shall take into account whether an organisation is fully co-operating with the Decommissioning Body in assessing the state of their ceasefire . . . That, in itself, represents an interpretation of the Agreement rather than its actual words; to go any further could be disastrous."

Those are NIACRO's words, not mine. I ask the House to bear that opinion carefully in mind.

Mr. Jeffrey Donaldson (Lagan Valley): Does the hon. Gentleman accept that implicit in that statement is the threat of renewed violence, and that organisations are not really committed to peaceful and democratic means but are engaged in a tactical ceasefire, and will revert to violence if they do not get their way? Is he aware of another memorandum circulated by NIACRO to its staff officers, which says that the next argument to be pursued is that for an amnesty for those terrorists who have not yet been brought to justice for offences that they have committed? Does he agree with NIACRO that it should pursue such an amnesty? What does that say about NIACRO?

Mr. McNamara: On the first point, there is a real chance of an increase in violence if the terms of the agreement are not honoured and if people seek to change it. That does not mean that I approve of an increase in violence or want it. God knows, I have seen enough of terrorism. It has touched people in our families just as much as it has touched other people's. We know what it is about. I do not want to see an increase in violence. I am telling hon. Members what an organisation supported by the Government and working specifically to resettle prisoners of all sorts feels about the situation.

On the second point, about an amnesty, I have not seen the memorandum. Until I have seen its contents, I will not make a judgment on it, but it seems to me that, in whatever scheme is created, offences committed before the declaration of the second ceasefire and the signing of the agreement are a different kettle of fish from offences committed after the ceasefire and the signing of the agreement.

Mr. Robert McCartney: I agree with the hon. Gentleman that the terms of the agreement are what all the parties have agreed to and that they cannot be altered, amended or varied by any party, including the Government. Is it not the case that the Prime Minister has led other participants in the negotiations and those who voted yes in the referendum to believe that the agreement could be altered by legislation passed in this House to meet some of the points that would certainly have caused them to vote no had he not given those pledges?

Mr. McNamara: I do not accept that. I do not find anything contained in the agreement, on decommissioning or other matters such as the membership of the Executive, that goes beyond what my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister said. What my right hon. Friend said is contained in the agreement. I believe that he acquitted himself well on the issue, and that he and my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State deserve merit for their sterling work to ensure that an agreement was reached by which so many of the parties could feel themselves bound.

Mr. Grieve: Does the hon. Gentleman agree that the wording of clause 3(9)(b)—

"has ceased to be involved in any acts of violence or of preparation for violence"—

means that preparation for violence and a failure to decommission must go hand in hand? If there is no decommissioning, under the terms of the agreement that must amount to a preparation for the renewal of violence.

Mr. McNamara: That is not so. Her Majesty's Government have an Army, a Navy and an Air Force. They are not preparing for aggression: they are at peace. If someone has a gun at home—that is allowed in Northern Ireland—that does not necessarily mean that he will go out and kill people with it. If I am asked whether there should be immediate decommissioning and whether all illegal arms should be surrendered, I answer yes. But if I am asked whether I think that will happen, I answer no.

I agreed strongly with the point about victims stressed by the hon. Member for Harrogate and Knaresborough (Mr. Willis). Whether this is a matter for the legislation is a point that can be considered when we see the hon. Gentleman's amendment. It was the Bloomfield report which dealt humanely and compassionately with the victims of violence. What matters more than the legislation is that the spirit of Bloomfield's recommendations should be put into operation.

This is an important Bill. The House is perhaps unhappy with it because of what it implies and what it means. It is nevertheless significant, and it should go through the House without alteration.

6.11 pm

Mr. Andrew Hunter (Basingstoke): I shall begin with an historical footnote. In 1996, after the IRA abandoned the first so-called ceasefire, there was an appreciable apprehension that the loyalist terrorist organisations might resume full-scale violence. I was a fringe participant in a number of meetings and discussions with Ministers at which, among other things, the option of early release for terrorist prisoners was considered as an inducement to prevent loyalist terrorists from returning to violence. Although I had some misgivings, I thought that the option should at least be considered seriously and purposefully. Indeed, I wrote a paper suggesting certain mechanisms and procedures that would allow the early release of loyalist terrorist prisoners to be implemented. My suggestions were not entirely dissimilar to some aspects of the Bill.

My proposals were warmly received in Dublin because the Irish Government were anxious for any movement on the prisoner issue; but the Secretary of State rejected them out of hand. He argued strongly against the details of my proposals and against any further relaxation of the sentences of loyalist prisoners.

In the course of the subsequent discussions I became increasingly aware of the terrifying implications of going down the road that has ultimately led us to the early release provisions of the Belfast agreement and of this Bill. For the time being my view may be a minority and unpopular one, but I shall state it nevertheless. I oppose the Bill in absolute terms as a matter of principle, and on pragmatic grounds as well.

I oppose the Bill in principle because there is no moral justification for the early release of prisoners. When we pursue policies in a moral vacuum, we run the risk of courting trouble. I do not accept that crimes of violence are less serious, or that their perpetrators can be treated more leniently, if they have been committed for political motives. The Bill therefore sets a dangerous precedent. It is incompatible with the rule of law; it marks the triumph of terror. The argument is morally wrong, and if we give the Bill a Second Reading tonight we shall be deeply mistaken.

The early release of prisoners is a scandalous affront to the victims of terror. Justice for them should not be cast aside lightly in the pursuit of political expediency. Early release is an intolerable pay-off for the bravery and sacrifices of the security forces—not least the past and present officers of the Royal Ulster Constabulary, 300 of whom have lost their lives and many more of whom have suffered dreadful injuries while protecting their fellow citizens from the monstrous evil of terrorist violence.

Many people voted yes in the referendum in the hope of a better future for themselves and their children. But let us consider the sort of values on which this new Northern Ireland is to be built. The hon. and learned Member for North Down (Mr. McCartney) has made the point eloquently; I hope that he will forgive me for quoting him:

"It will be a society which bends morality and justice for political expediency . . . a society governed by those whose supporters elevate killers into media celebrities . . . and homicidal maniacs into heroes and role models".

This is not the way to build a just and stable society in Northern Ireland. I oppose the early release of terrorist prisoners on those absolute grounds.

There is another reason why I dislike the Bill. Unless it is amended in Committee, it will be an abiding monument to a broken promise. Many Unionists voted yes in the referendum because they understood that the Prime Minister had promised a direct link in legislation between decommissioning and Sinn Fein's participation in the Executive, and between decommissioning and the early release of terrorist prisoners—what the hon. Member for Lagan Valley (Mr. Donaldson) has called the precondition of actual and on-going decommissioning.

[Mr. Andrew Hunter]

Unionists believed that the Prime Minister had made that promise because the media told them that he had. The media had also told them that the right hon. Member for Upper Bann (Mr. Trimble), my hon. Friend the Member for Bracknell (Mr. MacKay) and others had welcomed the fact that the Prime Minister made that promise. The Northern Ireland Office will have known of those media reports; to the best of my knowledge it issued no correction or denial. We can therefore assume that the reports were accurate. They were, after all, consistent with what the Prime Minister told the House on 6 May, which was that decommissioning was part of the giving up of violence essential for the early release of prisoners. He repeated the pledge in respect of Sinn Fein's participation in government in his referendum day letter, which appeared in the Irish News and News Letter:

"Representatives of parties linked to paramilitary groups can only be in a future Northern Ireland Government if it is clear that there is to be no more violence and the threat of violence has gone. That doesn't mean just decommissioning".

There followed the catalogue of other measures that we have heard a number of times.

On the release of prisoners, as the Bill stands and unless it is amended, the Prime Minister has broken his promise and the people of Northern Ireland will know it. The Bill contains no direct linkage between the actual and on-going decommissioning and early release. The relevant requirement, stated in clause 3(9)(d), is that an organisation

"is co-operating fully with any Commission of the kind referred to in section 7 of the Northern Ireland Arms Decommissioning Act 1997."

Nothing in that Act or in the Bill demands actual and on-going decommissioning as a precondition for early release, or for participation in the government of Northern Ireland. The Bill as it stands points to a Prime Minister who has gone back on his word and taken the people of Northern Ireland for a ride. He duped many Unionists into voting yes with a promise that he has not fulfilled.

If one promise has been broken, how can the people of Northern Ireland be sure that others will not be broken? What about the promises of a secure future for the RUC and about terrorists not becoming members of a new police force? Those count for nothing, especially now that we know of the Secretary of State's private dealings with the IRA on those matters. Unless the Bill is amended, the issue of early release will prove to be another obscene landmark on what was intended to be a peace process, but which, in reality, long ago became a shameful process of appeasement.

6.21 pm

Dr. Norman A. Godman (Greenock and Inverclyde): I reject utterly the observations made by the hon. Member for Basingstoke (Mr. Hunter). Far from being an obscenity, the Bill is a political inevitability, as my hon. Friend the Member for Newry and Armagh (Mr. Mallon) said in his quite remarkable speech.

I hesitate to involve myself in debates of this sort because I do not live in Northern Ireland, although I am a frequent visitor and like to think of myself as a friend of Northern Ireland. Many of the Northern Ireland Members sitting opposite know my constituency well—especially the hon. Member for Belfast, South (Rev. Martin Smyth). When we speak of violence and of the victims of violence and their families, we in Scotland know that we have been enormously lucky because, over the past 30 years, there has been only a handful of violence incidents. For some strange pan-Celtic reason, the General Army Council of the Provisional IRA decided not to extend its so-called military campaign to Scotland. I recall—I was teaching in Edinburgh at the time—a bomb being detonated in the ladies lavatory in Edinburgh castle in 1971 and the father of the infamous Jason Campbell bombing a Catholic pub in Glasgow not far from where my wife was born and raised, but such isolated incidents apart we in Scotland have been lucky.

However, we have lost constituents who, when serving with the security forces, have been murdered in Northern Ireland. I remember a young lad from Port Glasgow—a married man with a very young family—being murdered while out on patrol in Northern Ireland. Only two months ago, I was in the constituency of my hon. Friend the Member for Newry and Armagh and saw teenage soldiers, members of the Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders, on patrol. As an ex-service man, I had the good sense not to go over and ask, "Which constituency are you from?" I left them to their military activities, but I would have bet my last pound that one or two members of that patrol were constituents of mine, because the Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders recruit widely in the west of Scotland. Nevertheless, as an individual, I am nothing more and nothing less than a frequent visitor to Northern Ireland.

Mr. Winnick: Speaking of atrocities, 25 people were butchered on 21 November 1974 in Birmingham, very near my constituency; we are never likely to forget that, or all the other atrocities. Regarding the unfortunate and negative speech made by the hon. Member for Basingstoke (Mr. Hunter), does my hon. Friend recall the Northern Ireland (Remission of Sentences) Act 1995, which was introduced by the previous Government and in effect stated, on the basis of an IRA ceasefire, that prisoners would be released without any qualification whatsoever? We are to a large extent following what the previous Government did in this respect; moreover, we are laying down qualifications, which are stated in the Bill.

Dr. Godman: I recall that legislation going through the House, but I do not recall the hon. Member for Basingstoke offering the observation that it was obscene.

Rev. Martin Smyth (Belfast, South): When the hon. Gentleman said that he was an infrequent participant in debates on Northern Ireland I was rather amazed, because we welcome his participation and the records of the House show that he has, quite rightly, participated well. We recognise the sacrifice of people from Great Britain—soldiers and civilians—resulting from the IRA campaign. That is in part why we are concerned that there has not been the mettle in this place to face down terrorism instead of encourage it.

Dr. Godman: I am grateful to the hon. Gentleman for his kind remarks. There is a tangled historical relationship between Scotland and Ireland and I am proud to participate in debates such as this, but I have not experienced the violence at first hand and nor has any member of my family. I believe that the Bill, along with other measures taken by the Labour Government, will lead to those young soldier constituents of mine either coming home or serving elsewhere, perhaps as United Nations peacekeepers.

Mr. McNamara: My hon. Friend welcomed the statement made by the hon. Member for Belfast, South (Rev. Martin Smyth), but I am sure that he does not accept the last sentence; that the House has encouraged terrorism and has not had the mettle to face up to it.

Dr. Godman: My honourable and old Friend's attention must have lapsed for a second. I did not say that I welcomed the statement made by the hon. Member for Belfast, South; I said that I welcomed what he said about my involvement in debates. The hon. Gentleman knows only too well where I stand vis-a-vis his perspective on these issues.

I should like to put the Bill in the context of what was recently described to me as the "constitutional helter-skelter" in which we are involved. This has been a remarkable year for Northern Ireland. My right hon. Friends the Prime Minister and the Secretary of State and Northern Ireland Ministers have played a remarkable role. In particular, I congratulate the Minister of State, my hon. Friend the Member for East Kilbride (Mr. Ingram), on being in the Chamber this afternoon when both of us would have liked to see the Scotland-Brazil game. I blame the usual channels for not putting the debate back a day, or for not postponing the opening of the World cup until tomorrow.

There have been remarkable developments. As one who has been involved with the families of those killed on Bloody Sunday, I think that the decision to initiate a commission of inquiry into that dreadful affair is a courageous one for the Government, especially my right hon. Friends the Secretary of State and the Prime Minister, to take. Looking across at Northern Ireland over the years, I never thought that within my time in Parliament we would get as far as the Belfast agreement takes us. We in Scotland got a superb result in our referendum and a similarly dramatic result was achieved in the Northern Ireland referendum. Now, Northern Ireland is to hold elections to an assembly, although I happen to think that they are being held too early and that a period of reflection is needed—[Interruption.] I thought that that remark would get a reaction from Northern Ireland Members. I base my remarks on my experience of Scotland's preparations for our elections, although the Scottish National party might thank us for being so deliberate. The Bill is part of the overall change that is taking place under the Government's direction. I am not an uncritical supporter of the Government on these matters and I shall make one or two comments to which I hope my hon. Friend the Minister of State will respond.

I share the repugnance felt by many over the early release of people who have committed violent crimes. Just before and after I entered the House, I was part of the Parole Board system in Scotland. I had to interview many men who had committed dreadful crimes and who were being assessed for release under licence—murderers and others, some of whom had been caught up in the troubles in Northern Ireland. I remember over a period of six months interviewing three men who had received heavy sentences for running arms and explosives to paramilitary loyalist groups. It was my task to interview them and express an opinion as to whether they should be released under licence, so I have some experience at the coal face.

I reject the argument, advanced by some on the left, that such people have been engaged in some kind of military campaign. It is absurd and obscene to speak of people waging a military campaign in a mature parliamentary democracy. They have committed acts of terrorism. They are not military campaigners in my view. My sympathy, along with everyone else's, is with the families of those who have been murdered and with those who have suffered severe, crippling injuries.

At the same time, I share the view of Dave Wall, the chief executive of the Northern Ireland Association for the Care and Resettlement of Offenders, who stated in a letter that many of us have received:

"Prisoner release is not an easy matter for the people of Northern Ireland or of Britain."

That is an understatement. The letter continues:

"It does involve recognising that the violence of the past thirty years was politically motivated, however repugnant that violence was . . . It is, however, a necessary part of a negotiated political settlement to the violent conflict."

That was the sentiment expressed by my hon. Friend the Member for Newry and Armagh in his eloquent speech. We know that this is a political Bill, but the circumstances demand such a response from the Government.

Mr. Robert McCartney: Is the hon. Gentleman suggesting that morality, justice and the rule of law can be sacrificed because it is politically expedient to reach some sort of agreement and that the emphasis on the word political cures all? Does he believe that this is a political expedient, so all the principles on which a civilised democracy is based can be set aside to deliver what expediency requires?

Dr. Godman: On political morality, I think that I can stand shoulder to shoulder with the hon. and learned Gentleman. There are moments when unpalatable decisions must be made in the interests of the greater good of communities that we in this place seek to represent.

Mr. McCartney indicated dissent.

Dr. Godman: The hon. and learned Gentleman shakes his head. We part company on most issues. On the rule of law, he is a lawyer and a Queen's Counsel. I am not a lawyer. I have an interest in Scots law, but I am not sure that my knowledge would get me past the first year of an undergraduate course.

In terms of the sociology of law and law making, mature parliamentary democracies must enact laws that some people find difficult to stomach—such as the hon. Member for Basingstoke and, presumably, the hon. and learned Member for North Down (Mr. McCartney). The circumstances demand that we respond in the way that the Government have responded, no matter how great our sense of repugnance at the acts of some people.

When I interviewed prisoners for possible release under licence, I thought that some of them should stay in those prisons—Edinburgh, Peterhead, Shotts and elsewhere—for the rest of their natural lives, but we had to consider whether such people could, after a period in prison, serve useful lives in the community. As I said earlier, I understand some of the serious reservations that Opposition Members hold, but to earn the trust of the overwhelming majority of the people of Northern Ireland the Bill is inevitable and necessary, even though, as has been acknowledged, it is a political Bill.

[Dr. Godman]

My hon. Friend the Member for Hull, North (Mr. McNamara) asked about prisoners in the Irish Republic. In my view it is almost inevitable that the Dail will pass legislation that will make the procedures compatible. We are fellow member states of the Council of Europe and I cannot see that a discrepancy in procedures could continue for long.

I have some questions about specific details of the Bill, to which I hope my hon. Friend the Minister of State will respond in his winding-up speech.

Mr. William Ross: The hon. Gentleman referred to changes in the law that he believes will be necessary in the Irish Republic. Does he think that the Dail will pass legislation that would release the murderer of Garda McCabe within two years?

Dr. Godman: I need hardly remind the hon. Gentleman that under the agreement such developments will take place. What the Deputies in the Dail choose to do is a matter for them, but whatever they do must take cognisance of the terms of the agreement.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State mentioned the possible engagement of a psychiatrist or psychologist. My hon. Friend the Minister may consider this an esoteric point, but I suggest that it might be more useful to employ the services of a consultant psychiatrist who has experience of forensic psychiatry, rather than a psychologist. When referring to a psychologist, does the Secretary of State mean a clinical psychologist with experience in the Prison Service? I do not wish to diminish the talents of psychologists in Northern Ireland and elsewhere, but in the circumstances, serious consideration should be given to my suggestion, offered immodestly, that a consultant psychiatrist with forensic psychiatric experience should be appointed, rather than a clinical or other psychologist.

It is proposed in clause 1(2)(a) that one of the commissioners should be a lawyer. I believe that that lawyer, male or female, should have practised in Northern Ireland. Similarly, I think that civic society should be represented in the ranks of the commissioners—I am not sure how many there will be. I suggest—with my characteristic modesty—that perhaps a senior academic specialising in conflict resolution or an academic with considerable and recent experience of analysing the communities and recent developments in Northern Ireland should be appointed. I support whole heartedly clause 1(3), which states:

> "In making appointments the Secretary of State shall have regard to the desirability of the Commissioners, as a group, commanding widespread acceptance throughout the community in Northern Ireland."

That is a categorical imperative.

I must offer a word or two on the subject of Scots Guardsmen Wright and Fisher. Several hon. Members have referred to their case and one said that they had committed a grievous error. In my view they committed a grievous offence for which they were convicted in a court of law. Nevertheless, I believe that after five or six years in prison they should be given some sympathetic consideration. I suggested in an earlier debate that it might help them and their families if they were transferred to a prison in Scotland, but I understand that they have made no such request. It might be in their best interests to remain within the jurisdiction of Northern Ireland—I know that there have been no complaints recently about their treatment.

I reject what the hon. Member for Basingstoke said about the Bill. His remarks were disgraceful and inflammatory, but utterly typical of him. The Bill must be supported by hon. Members on both sides of the House—I know that Liberal Democrat Members will and I hope that many Conservative Members, after examining it, will do likewise. It is a political Bill, but I believe that it is necessary in terms of the agreement and the expectations, needs and concerns of the people of Northern Ireland.

6.42 pm

Rev. Ian Paisley (North Antrim): We are discussing a proposition that one would have thought would never be discussed in the House—the mother of Parliaments and the defender of democracy and law and order. It seems amazing that we are considering how we can let out of prison people who have committed the vilest and most terrible atrocities. It is right to say that all parties to the agreement accepted that.

It is also correct to say that I cannot find in the agreement any linkage between prisoner releases and decommissioning or anything else. I have read the agreement many times—I have analysed it—but I cannot find a rule that decommissioning must occur in 24 months. People should not try, for their own ends, to read into the agreement what is not there.

The hon. Member for Greenock and Inverclyde (Dr. Godman) accused the hon. Member for Basingstoke (Mr. Hunter) of making an inflammatory speech. I assure him that people in Northern Ireland feel deeply about this matter. The Liberal Democrat spokesman, the hon. Member for Harrogate and Knaresborough (Mr. Willis), talked forcefully and with passion about what happened in his area. That feeling is multiplied thousands of times in Northern Ireland. We cannot expect people simply to stand by as if this were an unimportant matter about which they have no feelings.

Feelings in Northern Ireland run very deep. People claim that they will approach these matters with great sensitivity, but the victims of violence whom I know resent that. They say, "They tell us that they will approach these matters sensitively, but how can they say that when I will receive a letter announcing that the person who murdered my father has been released when he should have been incarcerated for another 10 or 15 years?"

The people who say how deeply they feel, how much they weep and how sensitive they are should stop, because that is much resented by those who have suffered the most. I have attended more funerals—on both sides of the divide—than any other Northern Ireland Member, and I know how people feel. I make it absolutely clear to the House that people's feelings are not alleviated by the promises made by anyone in high places.

The Secretary of State has argued—I have listened to her on television and in this place—that there is a package and that, although people may not like the prisoner releases, we must take the whole package. Why is there a package? There is a package because the IRA had a gun and that gun was pointed at the two Governments and at those who were prepared to bow their knee to it. This House has debated before a treaty for peace: the famous treaty between Great Britain and Northern Ireland. The House was told then that if it decided to accept the treaty, all would be well: everything would be normal, the gun would be out of Irish politics and it would be wonderful. Northern Ireland's founding father, Lord Carson, speaking in a debate in the House of Lords on that occasion, said:

"One thing the noble Marquess entirely forgot to tell us was how the Government came to the conclusion that these Articles of Treaty were so much for the benefit of the country. The difficulty I have in commenting upon them at all is that, unless as a matter of mere pretence, when we are seeming to be very dignified and concerned, there is not a noble Lord in this House who believes for a moment that these terms were passed upon the merits. Not at all. They were passed with a revolver pointed at your head. And you know it. You know you passed them because you were beaten. You know you passed them because Sinn Fein with its Army in Ireland has beaten you. Why do you not say so?"

The House should acknowledge tonight that the IRA beat the Governments and beat into submission those who were foolish enough to put their hands to this document. Lord Carson continued:

"ought Unionist leaders to have been parties to that—Unionist leaders who had undertaken to defend Unionist policy? . . . the truth of the matter is that if you go on like this, if you have men in high positions stating today that A is white, and tomorrow arguing that it is certainly black, you will destroy the confidence of the democracy of this country in its rulers and in its institutions."—[Official Report, House of Lords, 14 December 1921; Vol. 48, c. 40-43.]

We have heard and had surprising things happen in Northern Ireland. The Prime Minister came to Northern Ireland three times, and on each occasion he was giving undertaking after undertaking. One of his undertakings—I have already mentioned this in the debate to the Secretary of State and the Opposition spokesman—was reported widely in the Northern Ireland press. The right hon. Gentleman said that violence had to be given up, and that decommissioning was part of that. That was a clear statement. If violence is to be given up—one of the terms of the Bill is that violence must have been given up—how is that to happen if the second part of the approach is not applied?

Right hon. and hon. Members have been frank and said that the Prime Minister swayed many people. No doubt he did. He came to Northern Ireland and gave us many promises. The right hon. Gentleman promised that the IRA would never be in government until it had decommissioned. There is nothing in the agreement to that effect.

We heard a moving speech from the hon. Member for Newry and Armagh (Mr. Mallon), but he went on to tell us that we have a debt of honour to put the Bill through the House. I have no debt of honour to men—

Mr. Mallon: I must accept that the hon. Gentleman did not hear clearly what I said. I said that the Bill places a debt of honour on the shoulders of those parties associated with paramilitary groupings never again to threaten or use violence. That is the debt of honour to which I referred.

Rev. Ian Paisley: I am sorry. I misunderstood the hon. Gentleman. He knows that. I accept what he says, and withdraw what I said.

I am saying that we in Northern Ireland have a debt of honour not to the paramilitarists but to their victims, including the people they killed. I believe that there is forgiveness, but not until there is repentance. I have never heard an IRA paramilitarist express remorse for his deeds. I have listened carefully, and when paramilitarists have been pushed on television and radio, or in a public place, not one of them has ever expressed remorse. Not one of them has said, "I regret that I did that act." There is no forgiveness until there is repentance. If someone expresses remorse, we may challenge his motives, but we cannot challenge the fact that that is what he has said.

I am hearing only more and more threats from the IRA. Undertakings were given by the Prime Minister and we were told that when legislation was introduced those undertakings would be incorporated within it. That has not happened. Indeed, the argument advanced from the Government Benches is that that should not happen. It is argued that the Prime Minister was not saying, when he did say, that decommissioning was an essential part of the end of violence.

Who in Northern Ireland believes that there is an end of it? Who believes that violence has ended? I have the statistics for the first quarter of this year. They relate to the operation of the prevention of terrorism legislation and of the emergency provisions Acts. Anyone reading these statistics would not think there was any peace in the country. They tell us that 177 persons were detained in Northern Ireland under the Prevention of Terrorism (Temporary Provisions) Act 1989. There were 48 applications for extension of detention, all of which were granted. Those applications related to 37 individuals, 11 being subject to more than one extension. No exclusion orders were made. In addition, 125 persons were detained for 48 hours or less, 52 for more than 48 hours. Apparently, 36 persons were charged with 62 offences, including 12 of murder and 19 firearm offences—and so on.

With these statistics, can we really say that peace has broken out? Go to Royal avenue and tell the business community that an incendiary bombing was peace. Go to those people whom the Secretary of State rightly described as having their kneecaps shot off in obscene circumstances. Go to the families that have come under terrible attack in the past days. Against that background, how can it be said that there is peace?

If that is the basis for peace, what is the peace? If the Bill passes through the House tonight and subsequently passes through the other place, and the circumstances in Northern Ireland remain the same, will the Secretary of State tell me that there is a state of peace and she can continue releasing prisoners? There is no state of peace at present.

We have heard from the hon. Member for Hull, North (Mr. McNamara) about the activities of a certain organisation that helps prisoners. However, we have only to note what such people have said in the past and what they will continue to say. To say that the House should realise that there will be serious and terrible trouble if this matter is proceeded with is, of course, a threat.

[Rev. Ian Paisley]

We know that the Bill will be enacted. We know from the Conservative spokesman that the Opposition will not go too tough at the Bill. They will vote for it, and give it its first blessing. When it comes to consideration in Committee, they will find some excuse not to press amendments hard. We know what happened with the Police Bill, as it was then was, and other Bills. We know that the Bill will pass through the House.

Mr. MacKay: I give the hon. Gentleman an assurance that we shall be tabling amendments tomorrow for the Committee stage of the Bill. They will be exactly along the lines that I set out earlier. If the amendments are not accepted by the Government or if the Government do not come up with suitable options, we shall most certainly be pressing them to Divisions. We shall be expecting the hon. Gentleman and his colleagues to join us in supporting our amendments.

Rev. Ian Paisley: I invite the hon. Gentleman to join me in the Division Lobby tonight to vote against the Bill. This is a bad Bill and it should not be before us. The hon. Member for Basingstoke is right. However, the Tory party has told us what it will do, and it will do it. The Bill will become law. There will be no change in terms of decommissioning. Similarly, there will be no change in terms of terrorists getting into government. The Bill will go through and everybody knows it. The Secretary of State and the Minister of State know that that is the position. I have been long enough in the House to know whether a Bill will be rejected. The Bill will sail through the House.

However, at the end of the day, it will not be Members who represent constituencies outwith Northern Ireland who will be suffering. The ordinary people on the streets of Northern Ireland will suffer. It is wrong to suggest that the overwhelming majority in Northern Ireland are in favour of the Bill. Let me disillusion those who say that. The hon. Member for Newry and Armagh told us that more than 42 per cent. of those who voted in the referendum were nationalists and republicans. I think I have quoted the hon. Gentleman correctly this time. If that is so, that is more than half of the 71 per cent. Who were the other people who voted?

There are people in Northern Ireland who said no because they have convictions about the future. Others said yes because they were foolish enough to believe the Prime Minister; foolish enough to believe that all his promises would be honoured. His promises cannot be honoured, for the simple reason that the agreement must be taken as it is—all of it. If one wants to change the agreement, one does not do so here. One changes it by recalling the talks so that everyone who agreed it will have a say. That is the only way in which it can be changed, so the House is held captive to the agreement.

The legislation will go through, and the people of Northern Ireland will have sad and terrible happenings coming to them. Think of the gunmen released on the streets and the caches of arms still available for them to use. Think of the police force that there will be moves to disarm—

Marjorie Mowlam: No.

Rev. Ian Paisley: Well, the right hon. Lady should read the agreement. Perhaps she has not read that part of the agreement. It refers to working towards the disarming of the police.

Marjorie Mowlam: Yes.

Rev. Ian Paisley: That will happen within a certain period and will start within a year. We could have police disarming, gunmen on the streets with caches of arms available to them, and the gun at our head again. If the IRA then says that something more has to be done, we will bow to it again. Those are the facts which the people of Northern Ireland face.

The good thing is that we are having an election, and that people have time to reflect. A lot of people who voted yes have reflected and they are no longer saying yes. When we have the results of the election, and when we see the real representation of the people reflected in the assembly, what will the House do? Will it want to change the rules and say that it no longer goes by consensus?

First, we were told that we had to have a majority of the Unionist people and a majority of the nationalist people before there could be an agreement. When we mentioned that during the referendum, the Government hit the ceiling and said that it should be 50 per cent. plus one. There was no consensus in regard to that. With 50 per cent. plus one, we could be taken into a united Ireland.

What will happen when we have an assembly representing the real ideas? There will be no Prime Minister writing graffiti on the wall and saying, "Here are my pledges." We will vote on the issue. The Government are out of it. The big money that so liberally flowed to condition people, with the spin doctors working overtime and being well paid for it, will go, and we will have an ordinary Ulster election. What will happen then? If there are 30 Unionists, they might claim to have a strong voice. The percentage was to help the nationalists, but it will help the Unionists.

I was rather surprised, yet I should not be, that the right hon. Member for Strangford (Mr. Taylor) said that if, in the assembly, the republicans fail to deliver decommissioning, as is required—according to my reading of the document, it is not required, but the right hon. Gentleman says that it is—the Unionists will exercise their majority position to end the assembly. He went on to say—this makes me laugh—that the world will support the Unionists and reject the republicans. That is utter nonsense. I have heard it all before.

I was told by the Prime Minister that if the ceasefire was ever broken the IRA would be wiped out. What happened? Within a few hours of Canary Wharf being blown up, the Government were talking to the IRA. That will be tested now. The Prime Minister and the Government will be tested. Will they change? Can these changes be made? If not, what will happen when we have an assembly which mirrors the real views of the people of Northern Ireland?

The debate is not over; it is only starting. All I can say is that it is sad that, when we have so many other pressing issues to take care of, we are discussing how to let felons, criminals and murderers out of prison before they have served the time that was given to them in a court of law acting according to the laws of the United Kingdom.

Several hon. Members rose—

Mr. Deputy Speaker (Mr. Michael Lord): Order. Before I call the next speaker, I should say that the debate so far has been characterised by extremely long speeches. Many hon. Members are seeking to catch my eye, and, unless contributions are shorter, many hon. Members will be disappointed.

7.5 pm

Ms Margaret Moran (Luton, South): I shall attempt to be brief. I support the Bill and add my congratulations to all those who were involved in the Northern Ireland agreement. As many hon. Members have said, this is an extraordinary and historic Bill. It is the first piece of legislation after the historic agreement and the overwhelming yes vote in Northern Ireland.

Listening to the hon. Member for North Antrim (Rev. Ian Paisley), I almost felt that the Northern Ireland agreement and the overwhelming yes vote—the voice of the people of Northern Ireland—had not happened. It appears that some hon. Members—we hope this is not translated into the New Northern Ireland Assembly—wish to rewrite history at every turn. As a new hon. Member, while acknowledging that I do not have the length and depth of experience on Northern Ireland issues that others may have, I simply say to those hon. Members who constantly seek to rewrite history that that has got us nowhere, but we are now making progress, so please take that progress and let us move on.

It is worth reminding ourselves of the overwhelming euphoria after the democratic decision of the people of Northern Ireland to vote yes to the Good Friday agreement. But after every good party comes the hangover—in the case of that particular party, the pause for thought. It was inevitable that the first decision after the yes vote would be the tough one which would implement the agreement and translate it into effective legislation. The toughest one is inevitably the decision concerning the early release of prisoners. That was an inevitable decision which everyone who signed the agreement and everyone in the House recognised was the linchpin of the agreement and any future peace deal for Northern Ireland. It was always going to be a fraught and sensitive decision.

In making our decisions tonight, it is important that we commend the courage of all those who were involved in taking the political risk that was involved in the Northern Ireland agreement—the risk for peace which entailed taking the decisions that we are translating into legislation tonight.

It is important, too, that we all retain the courage, when tough decisions such as this are being made, to follow them through and not attempt to rewrite them when the going gets rough. The going will get rough, as we know from our postbags and from the media's translation of the decisions we will be making tonight. It is important that we stand firm and retain our courage, knowing that what we are doing is delivering the decision democratically made by the people of Northern Ireland—their long-held desire for peace.

It is also important to emphasise that the criteria in the Bill are tough. Contrary to the assertions of some hon. Members, they unequivocally translate and incorporate the Prime Minister's words into legislation. There can be no doubt whatever that the Prime Minister's commitment to end violence is translated into the Bill. I refer hon. Members to clause 3. To ensure that there is no doubt about that, will my hon. Friend the Minister of State tell the House when he replies to the debate why, under clause 3(5), the third condition that the commissioners will apply is relevant only to someone who would be released immediately, and not to prisoners who might not be released for some time? It is important that the House hears the strength of that criterion.

As other hon. Members have emphasised, this is not a pick-and-mix package. One cannot pull out the sweeties and throw away the liquorice. We must take tough decisions now if we are to have peace in Northern Ireland. It is important to remember the strength of the yes vote: 71 per cent. in agreement; and, significantly, 75 per cent. of women in Northern Ireland voting for peace and an end to the boys with toys and the men with guns—[HON. MEMBERS: "Nonsense."] It is far from nonsense. It is a democratic decision and it shows that the old politics of Northern Ireland—predominantly male politics—are long overdue for change. I hope that we shall see that change in the new assembly.

All parties who signed up to the Northern Ireland agreement knew at the outset that compromises would have to be made. They also knew that the Bill was of fundamental importance to the political settlement and that prisoners would have an important influence on the outcome of the agreement.

As I said earlier, I do not have the experience of other hon. Members in respect of prisoners' issues. However, I remember a poignant visit which I and other new Members made soon after the election last May to discuss the Northern Ireland peace process with all political parties and a number of relatives' organisations. The memory that will stay with me is of a meeting with former prisoners who, for a long time, had been at the forefront of discussions about peace. Their burning ambition to see an end to violence and a successful conclusion to the agreement was overwhelming. We shall do those prisoners an honour in ensuring that we not only pass the Bill but recognise the need to deal with issues in respect of their victims.

Other hon. Members have also emphasised the importance, in passing the Bill, of acknowledging the suffering of victims. That is not to say that we should trade suffering—far from it. I welcome the measures that I understand will be taken to address victims' needs. I hope that considerable measures will be taken in future legislation or elsewhere to deal with victims' on-going needs.

We must also ensure that victims are notified of the release of prisoners. Although it may not be appropriate to encompass that in the Bill, it is a significant issue for victims. They must at least be allowed the courtesy of knowing when the prisoner relevant to their experience is to be released. That request has been made by the Northern Ireland Victim Support group, and I hope that the Secretary of State and her team will take it on board.

[Ms Margaret Moran]

It is important that steps are taken to reintegrate prisoners into the community. For good or ill, throughout the process prisoners have had a significant influence on the outcome, and they will continue to have a significant influence on the sustaining of peace in Northern Ireland. Prisoners must be afforded opportunities that will enable them to play a positive role in long-term peace in their communities.

It ill behoves Members to attempt to whip up hysteria with headlines about murderers being released and prisoners being given the key to prison doors. That is not what the Bill is about, and it does not help to secure long-term and sustainable peace in Northern Ireland. I remind hon. Members that this is not a new scheme. The House will recall the Northern Ireland (Remission of Sentences) Bill introduced in 1995 by the previous Government. That Bill made possible the early release of prisoners in Northern Ireland, in response to the IRA ceasefire at that time. The House may also recall that the programme of early releases, which, unlike this Bill, set no licence conditions on those released, continued against a background of on-going IRA violence, with the bombing of Canary Wharf and the Lisburn barracks, despite the fact that no arms were surrendered. The early release of prisoners has been part of the response of successive Governments—Conservative and Labour—to positive developments in Northern Ireland, which is why the Bill must be seen in that context.

The Bill is a linchpin. It is an historical and important part of translating the positive decision of the people of Northern Ireland into practice, and I commend it to the House.

7.16 pm

Mr. Jeffrey Donaldson (Lagan Valley): For me, this is a night of regret. The hon. Member for Luton, South (Ms Moran) talked about hysteria. I live in Northern Ireland and my family has suffered at the hands of terrorists. I have watched hysteria in England recently when paedophiles and child murderers have been released into the community: I have seen people riot and destroy property. There has not been a single riot in Northern Ireland as a result of this Bill. There is no hysteria. People very much regret the Bill because they do not like the fact that prisoners and murderers will be released—so let us not talk about hysteria. People object to the Bill on a point of principle, not because they want to whip up hysteria.

Those who oppose the Bill—I am one of them—want to see justice done in Northern Ireland. We want justice for the victims of terrorism. If the Home Secretary announced today the release of Myra Hindley, I wonder how many hon. Members would stand up and welcome it—yet they welcome the release of people who have committed far more serious crimes, perhaps multiple murders. It is another case of double standards being applied to Northern Ireland.

May I quote the words of resident magistrate Mr. Tom Travers, who was a victim of terrorism and whose daughter Mary was murdered by the IRA? He said:

"Almost 3,000 persons, men, women and children, have been murdered by terrorist criminals.

If we remind ourselves of the circumstances surrounding any one of these deaths we will, if we have even a shred of morality or compassion, shudder in horror at the special treatment now proposed for them."

The Bill differentiates between terrorist murderers and so-called ordinary criminals. What is the difference between the value of the life of an RUC constable and the value of the life of a woman who has been murdered by her husband? What difference in the value of the life of that police officer warrants the release of the person who murdered him, while the husband who murdered his wife stays in prison? What does the Bill do for the value of the lives of the victims of violence?

The Bill concedes the status of political prisoner to members of terrorist organisations. It differentiates between the crimes committed by a terrorist in Northern Ireland and the crimes committed by so-called ordinary criminals, and accords to those terrorist crimes a different status. It accords them the very status that the terrorist organisations have been seeking for years: political status. The Bill creates a dangerous precedent. Terrorism is still with us in Northern Ireland. The threat of terrorist violence remains. If we concede a special status to the crimes committed by those terrorists, we shall create a precedent that will haunt us in years to come.

One of the conditions to be met by a prisoner seeking release under this scheme is that he "is not a supporter of a terrorist organisation."

I have been inside the Maze prison and have seen the regime there. The terrorist organisations in the Maze prison are grouped together by the prison authorities in different H blocks and are given status as terrorist organisations.

Under the Bill, to qualify for early release, a prisoner is required not to be a supporter of a terrorist organisation. The Bill defines a terrorist organisation. That is interesting, because part I of the Prevention of Terrorism (Temporary Provisions) Act 1989 contains provisions on proscribed organisations and also defines a terrorist organisation. It states:

"The Secretary of State may by order made by statutory instrument . . . add to Schedule 1 to this Act any organisation that appears to him to be concerned in, or in promoting or encouraging, terrorism occurring in the United Kingdom and connected with the affairs of Northern Ireland".

That definition is repeated almost word for word in the Bill before us.

The Secretary of State told us that she will not be removing the IRA, the UVF and the UDA from the list of proscribed organisations because she still regards them as terrorist organisations. Yet members of those organisations who are prisoners and who apply for release under this scheme will no longer be deemed to be members of a terrorist organisation. How can that be? Surely the provisions of the Prevention of Terrorism (Temporary Provisions) Act 1989 conflict with those in the Bill. When is a terrorist organisation not a terrorist organisation? We need to know the answers to those questions, but the Secretary of State's remarks were unconvincing.

A member of the IRA may come before the courts charged with membership of the IRA, as it is a proscribed organisation. He will be able to argue that the provisions of the Bill that allow members of the IRA to be released from prison as they are not deemed to be members of a terrorist organisation conflict with the provisions in the 1989 Act. The Secretary of State must consider carefully the implications and impact of this legislation. The IRA and other organisations will want the Secretary of State to remove them from the list of proscribed organisations if she deems them no longer to be terrorist organisations for the purposes of the release of prisoners. If my reading of the Bill is correct, how can a person be a terrorist inside the Maze prison and a member of the IRA, and not be a terrorist outside the Maze prison and a member of the IRA? That requires clarification.

Mr. McWalter: Nelson Mandela was once deemed to be a terrorist and is now honoured as the President of South Africa. People may have one status at one time and a different status at another.

Mr. Donaldson: I thank the hon. Gentleman for his intervention. I accept that terrorists can reform, but that is not my point. How can someone be a terrorist inside the Maze prison and not be a terrorist the minute he steps outside the door of the prison? How can it be illegal for someone to be a member of the IRA when he is inside the Maze prison, if, the minute he steps outside as a freed prisoner, he is no longer committing an offence even though he is still a member of the IRA?

Mr. William Ross: As my hon. Friend has explained so clearly to the House, surely the implication of the Bill is that the Secretary of State intends to remove all these terrorist organisations from the proscribed list. It cannot be otherwise.

Mr. Donaldson: I am grateful for that intervention. That is what I need to know, and it is what the people of Northern Ireland want to know. If the officer commanding the Provisional IRA in the Maze prison is released from prison and is still a member of the IRA, how can he no longer be a terrorist when his colleagues in the IRA outside the prison are deemed to be terrorists under the 1989 Act? Many people in Northern Ireland will want to know the answers to those questions.

Rev. Martin Smyth: Hysteria and misunderstanding have been referred to this evening. Journalists, who wrote objectively in the national papers at the weekend, touched on that point and suggested that in two years' time the IRA will be like the Salvation Army and the Boys Brigade. I raised that issue with people at a Boys Brigade function on Saturday and they said that it would be a wonderful tribute if that were to happen—although none of us think it will.

Mr. Donaldson: I am grateful for that intervention, which brings me on to the issue of decommissioning. Under the Bill, decommissioning is only one of a range of factors that the Secretary of State will take into account in determining whether a terrorist organisation is no longer a terrorist organisation. There is considerable ambiguity in the wording of the provision. What does the Bill mean by "co-operating fully" with the commission? Is there a requirement for actual and on-going decommissioning by the terrorist organisations? If not, can we have that spelt out please?

I intend to table amendments in Committee to require actual and on-going decommissioning of paramilitary weapons by terrorist organisations, because I believe that such a test is necessary to show their commitment to the democratic process. I do not see such a provision in the Bill.

Mr. Mallon: Will the hon. Gentleman confirm that that was the previous Government's policy—known as Washington 3—and that they were glad to drop it when the report of the international commission was produced? Will he also confirm that the issue that he has declared he will table as an amendment was debated at length in the talks process and was not included in the agreement? Is he saying that he will table amendments contrary to the terms of the agreement that his party has signed?

Mr. Donaldson: I remind the hon. Gentleman that the agreement talks about full decommissioning of terrorist weapons within two years. How else will we get decommissioning if we do not require the terrorist organisations to decommission? That is the reality. I need to know, and the House is entitled to know, how the Secretary of State will interpret the provision that refers to organisations' fully co-operating with the decommissioning body. Will the right hon. Lady interpret it as a requirement for actual and on-going decommissioning? If "co-operating fully" merely means that those concerned will go and talk to the body without delivering any guns, I think that that constitutes a breach of the agreement.

Mr. Robert McCartney: Is the hon. Gentleman correct in asserting that the agreement provides for full decommissioning within two years? Is it not more correct to say that the agreement suggests that parties fronting paramilitary organisations retaining weapons will use such influence as they may have to persuade them to decommission within two years, although there is neither a sanction nor a requirement in that regard?

Mr. Donaldson: The hon. and learned Gentleman is right. That is one of the reasons why I voted against the agreement: I did not think that it required the terrorist organisations to deliver on decommissioning. We heard from the IRA, in its statement following the agreement, that it would not decommission its weapons. I think it was one Danny Morrison who said recently, "We won't even decommission the rust, never mind the rifles." The House is entitled to know whether the Government will hold the terrorist organisations to their requirements. Will the Prime Minister deliver on the pledge that he gave the people of Northern Ireland that he would require the decommissioning of terrorist weapons? If he does not, he will have broken that pledge to the people of Northern Ireland.

Another question arising from the Bill is that of the extradition of fugitives from justice. I wonder whether the Secretary of State has engaged in discussions with the Irish Government about extradition procedures in the event of a released prisoner's breaching the terms of his licence under the legislation, and seeking refuge in the Irish Republic. If a prisoner who is released breaches his licence and seeks refuge in the Republic, will we be faced with the same old charade of having to wait two or three years for the Irish courts to decide that he committed a political offence and that he will not be extradited, or will the Government seek a commitment from the Irish Government that, if such prisoners breach their licences and seek refuge in the Irish Republic, they will be returned forthwith to the jurisdiction of the United Kingdom to complete their full sentence? I hope that the Government will seek and obtain such an assurance from the Irish Government, in the spirit of the new co-operation that is breaking out under the agreement between Northern Ireland and the Irish Republic.

[Mr. Donaldson]

Will the Secretary of State seek an assurance from the Irish Government that they will introduce an effective fast-track procedure to deal with the extradition of such individuals? Will she give us an assurance that the Government will pursue the extradition of fugitives from justice who currently reside in both the United States and the Irish Republic? Among their number, of course, are some of the terrorists who escaped from the Maze prison in the early 1980s. I think the people of Northern Ireland will want an assurance that the Government will continue to press for their extradition, and that they will not qualify for the early release provisions in the Bill for as long as they are outside the jurisdiction of the United Kingdom.

Rev. Martin Smyth: I am sorry to interrupt again, but my intervention relates to that very point. The hon. Member for Hull, North (Mr. McNamara) suggested that there should be an amnesty for those whose offences were committed before the signing of the agreement. Is that already happening? Is it the case that recently a fugitive from justice in Northern Ireland, one Owen Carron, was stopped in County Fermanagh, and that, after he had telephoned someone—in this wonderful age of the mobile phone—the patrol that had stopped him was ordered to release him?

Mr. Donaldson: I understand that nowadays all leading members of Sinn Fein have a direct line to the Secretary of State. I understand that, when they are stopped by the security forces, they simply make a telephone call, following which they are speedily sent on their way.

Many of the provisions in the Bill relate to powers given to the Secretary of State. If the House passes the legislation, it will be placing considerable trust in the Secretary of State and her successors. Many people will be watching the Secretary of State: they will be watching to see how she implements the Bill, and, in particular, how she intends to implement the provisions that make her responsible for determining whether a terrorist organisation is a terrorist organisation for the purposes of the release of prisoners.

Many victims of violence will also be watching the Secretary of State. They will want to know whether she will hold the terrorists to account. The Secretary of State must ensure that the terrorists deliver, and end the violence—which includes the decommissioning of weapons. Otherwise, the prisoners should stay in prison. I think that that is the message that the victims of violence would want to give the Secretary of State. Many will doubt her determination. If she fails to hold the terrorists to account, she will have failed the victims of violence and their families.

Let me again quote the words of Tom Travers:

> "As a victim of terrorism the provisions for the release of those qualifying prisoners underlines something of which I have been aware for a very long time, namely, that society in general, and the Government in particular, does not cherish victims at all."

The Secretary of State has a responsibility to prove that the feeling that Tom Travers and many other victims have is wrong. She has a responsibility to ensure that the Government deliver on the commitments that have been given, and to hold terrorist organisations to account by ensuring that they deliver an end to violence and decommission their weapons. If they do not, the prisoners should stay where they belong: in prison. Justice must be seen to be done.

7.36 pm

Mr. Eddie McGrady (South Down): When we debate the release, or early release, of prisoners, we must be aware that we are touching every nerve and every emotion of those who have been victims of violence for the past 30 years or so. We must be conscious of the hurt that we can so easily cause such people through unwarranted and inappropriate remarks.

That struck me as an aspect of the referendum campaign. The "no" campaign cleverly latched on to the three emotive issues in the agreement: prisoner release, decommissioning and policing. By the very nature of the subject matter, some of the issues are transient—for instance, the issue of prisoners, whom time or the law will release in one way or another. The general debate failed to focus on the permanency of the core issues—issues of the institutions that were established, or could be established, by the agreement. It is a pity that the debate has not focused on that.

I agree with the hon. Member for North Antrim (Rev. Ian Paisley) in one respect. He said that a letter sent to victims announcing the release of a prisoner connected with their sorrow would not greatly ameliorate their suffering. I accept that. Contrary to the experiences of the hon. Member for Lagan Valley (Mr. Donaldson), many of my constituents who are victims—nationalists, Unionists or members of no party—have sent me the most generous messages that I have ever received. I am talking about those who have experienced a tragic death in their families, who have themselves been maimed or have been victims of some other atrocity. I was humbled by the generosity and, if you like, the Christianity, of the sentiments that were expressed, and I resented the fact that, during political campaigns, those people's emotions were played on and used in a political way.

On 18 June 1994, within 10 miles of where I live, seven men, ranging from a 17-year-old boy to an 84-year-old man, were gunned down in a pub, slaughtered while they were watching a football match. Two months later a reserve constable was gunned down while serving customers in his shop. Presumably, the first killings were carried out by the Loyalist Volunteer Force and the second was carried out by the IRA. On 31 August 1994, on the eve of the ceasefire, my home town was subjected to a massive mortar attack that was aimed at the police station. The trajectory was over a children's playground and on that fine summer night the children were out enjoying their playtime. Just 10 months ago in July, a young person who lives near me was brutally murdered, presumably by the LVF, and his body was grossly and horribly mutilated and buried in a pit under cattle.

Those four incidents have one thing in common, apart from the fact that they all occurred in my locality: not one person has been made amenable to the law. That means that the people who perpetrated those atrocities and carried out horrible acts on a body are somewhere in the community, either in my area or in the neighbouring area, and are walking about to this day.

To play on people's fears about the release of those who have been brought to justice, found guilty and sentenced to a fixed term in prison or to a life sentence is to miss the point altogether. We are engaged in implementing one of the processes in an historic agreement which, as many hon. Members have said, has been endorsed by the vast majority of people in the north of Ireland and in the Republic of Ireland. The Bill is part of that agreement, and I resent being accused by hon. Members, some of whom are not in their places, of somehow lacking morality and principle because I support the legislation. We have put together a delicate package with inevitable pros and cons—some of it I do not like and some of it my political opponents do not like. But together we have forged a sensitive agreement and—more important—it has been endorsed by the people of the north of Ireland and of the Republic of Ireland.

The hon. Member for North Antrim, who is not now in his place, quoted at length from what Lord Carson said some 80 years ago. Time has passed; our society has evolved. Politics has moved a million miles since that time, and this is our opportunity to lay to rest once and for all the violence in Irish politics. There is no guarantee that we will do so, but we have an opportunity to reach the holy grail that has evaded us not just for decades but for centuries.

I ask those who oppose the legislation—and especially those who do not live in my community and who have not suffered as my people, whether Unionist or nationalist, have suffered over the years—to try to understand that we are trying to put together an acceptable arrangement. It is not perfect by any means and it requires some matters to be dealt with in a way that will enable the agreement to get widespread support, and that is what the legislation is about. I shall not debate the nuts and bolts and the paragraphs in the Bill. I simply say that those who oppose it oppose the will of the people of Northern Ireland, and that is fundamentally undemocratic.

7.44 pm

Mr. Andrew Robathan (Blaby): I shall try to be brief. No doubt, Mr. Deputy Speaker, you will remind me if I am still speaking at the end of 10 minutes.

I agree with the hon. Member for South Down (Mr. McGrady) that we should look to the future and not to the past. It is distressing that Irish politics is so often discussed in terms of the past. I do not feel responsible for the potato famine, but it is often brought up by Irish nationalists when they discuss the relationship between the United Kingdom and the south of Ireland.

I shall deal first with the case of Guardsman Fisher and Guardsman Wright to which hon. Members referred. Those two young men committed a grievous error. They were found guilty of murder and, technically, I am sure that that was right. However, they were sent to Northern Ireland by this United Kingdom Parliament—by the British state, as I am sure the IRA would say—not to do their own will but to do their duty in preserving public order in Northern Ireland. As I said, they made a grievous error which resulted in a regrettable death and they were found guilty of murder.

To compare two young men who went out to do their duty to this country with some of the people whose release from prison we are discussing is quite wrong. As every hon. Member knows, some of those people were guilty of the most unspeakable acts of barbarism and torture in both communities. We should view the case of Fisher and Wright with a great deal more sympathy than has been shown so far. I was first contacted about the case about four years ago during the judicial process. Four years later, they are still in gaol, and most hon. Members and the Government would agree that they should be released forthwith or as soon as possible.

The Bill as a whole is rotten, but I am not minded to oppose it. It is about freeing people who have been involved in all sorts of barbaric acts. As the right hon. Member for Upper Bann (Mr. Trimble) rightly said, those people are not political prisoners: they have all been convicted of crimes. I do not live in Northern Ireland, but I spent a long time there. Too many of my Northern Ireland friends have died and I have been to too many funerals not to feel strongly about this issue. However, we must put aside our personal feelings and look to the future. I should like to quote a resolution with which I am entirely in agreement:

"Conference believes that progress can only be made towards a lasting political solution in Northern Ireland when the gun has been removed completely from Irish politics."

That is a sensible resolution, because a political solution must have no reference to the gun. That resolution was passed by the Labour party at its annual conference in 1994.

Getting rid of the gun and agreeing to the Bill are part of the peace process. However, as the hon. Member for North Antrim (Rev. Ian Paisley) said, there is not yet peace in Northern Ireland. There are punishment beatings: there were two last week in west Belfast. The punishments involve knee-cappings and weapons and they are extremely bloody affairs. A Mr. Knocker was murdered recently in Fermanagh, and the perpetrators were almost certainly people who were connected to the IRA. There were murders by the IRA and, I think, the UVF before Christmas. They happened during the peace process and people were briefly removed from the talks, but those organisations may be given legitimacy in the assembly.

Has the Minister or the RUC any information or intelligence to the effect that the Sinn Fein information centre in west Belfast has been co-ordinating some of the intimidation, threats and punishment beatings? My intelligence is that the Sinn Fein information centre has been responsible for warnings that were given to people to leave the Province. That has been going on for years.

As the Prime Minister said, the release of prisoners must be linked to decommissioning. I was not present to hear him say so, and cannot therefore comment on the exact words. However, nobody has denied them and what he said appears to be so. In 1996, when giving the John Smith memorial lecture in Antrim, the present Secretary of State said:

"These fears can only be addressed, to my mind, by all parties signing up to the six Mitchell principles—which includes a commitment to the total disarmament of all paramilitary organisations".

I agree with her entirely.

In April, the Prime Minister said:

"We said that we want the total disarmament of all paramilitary organisations . . . Meanwhile, it would obviously be a travesty of democracy if parties associated with paramilitary organisations held Executive office in the assembly while they continued to be engaged in or to threaten terrorism."—[Official Report, 22 April 1998; Vol. 310, c. 811-12.]

In 1993, the former Prime Minister, my right hon. Friend the Member for Huntingdon (Mr. Major), said that "all" weapons must be handed in before talks could go on. Later, as an article of good faith, that demand was reduced to "some" weapons.

[Mr. Andrew Robathan]

I should like to quote from the Mitchell principles, because some people may have forgotten them. The document states:

"parties to such negotiations affirm their total and absolute commitment:

To the total disarmament of all paramilitary organisations;

To agree that such disarmament must be verifiable to the satisfaction of an independent commission;

To renounce unto themselves, and to oppose any effort by others, to use force, or threaten to use force . . .

To urge that 'punishment' killings and beatings stop and to take effective steps to prevent such actions."

We have had negotiations, the agreement, the referendum and now this Bill, but there has been no decommissioning of weapons and punishment beatings and violence continue. What does this peace mean? Does it mean merely a ceasefire, which may be temporary, like others? The Bill assumes lasting peace. I fully understand that prisoner releases are of enormous importance to both sides of the peace process, but so is decommissioning. The two must be clearly linked. Sinn Fein will be standing in the assembly elections and thinks that it can be part of the process, yet it is inextricably linked to the IRA, which has said, no, it will not decommission its weapons.

All hon. Members understand that, to achieve peace, there must be compromise. Many compromises have been unpalatable to people on all sides of the argument. I have seen this Government, the previous Government and the Unionists make compromises, but I have yet to see the IRA make any compromise at all.

The Secretary of State said that she wanted to see decommissioning, as do we all. She also said that, as the Bill states, prisoners would not be released if they were found to be supporters of terrorist organisations. If Sinn Fein is inextricably linked to the IRA, which is not laying down weapons and is to remain a proscribed organisation, how can IRA prisoners be released and Sinn Fein take part in the peace process? That does not add up. The time for compromise and fudge is past.

Under the Bill, prisoners will not be released until their parent organisation is "co-operating fully" with the decommissioning body. The problem is that we do not know enough about that body. We do not know its terms of reference, powers or responsibilities. More than anything else, we do not know what "co-operating fully" means. That leaves a sense of fudge, misrepresentation and misunderstanding, which gives a very dangerous impression and may be regarded as the first step toward betrayal of the undertakings so clearly given by the Prime Minister in the lead-up to the referendum. The Bill must define clearly, explicitly and beyond any reasonable doubt exactly what "co-operating fully" means.

I should like to pick up a point made by the right hon. Member for Upper Bann, the leader of the Ulster Unionist party. There is already a fear of gangster war and of turf wars in Northern Ireland. There is a huge stock of weapons, and there are many people who are able to use such weapons. A front organisation for the IRA, Direct Action Against Drugs, has been carrying out barbarous attacks on people in west Belfast. There was the death of Mr. Knocker, who was alleged to have been—I have no idea whether it is true—a drugs dealer. I understand that IRA terrorists have done rather well out of this conflict, and that some of them used to retire to villas on the Costa del Sol.

I am concerned that, given the large stock of weapons in circulation, a Russian-style Mafia will develop. If those weapons are not removed, there will be no real peace in the Province. The Government must ensure decommissioning; the release of prisoners must be the best lever by which to achieve that. The requirement of decommissioning should be stated clearly in the Bill, and I hope that it will be by Third Reading.

At the moment, the Bill is a mess; there is too much fudge in it. As I have said before, lasting peace in Northern Ireland cannot be built on sand or fudge. It must be achieved on the understanding and with the backing of everybody. The referendum result went the way that I wished, but, if the Bill is not clear and unequivocal, stating that prisoners are released only when decommissioning has taken place, it is unlikely that it will achieve lasting peace in Northern Ireland.

7.55 pm

Mr. Desmond Browne (Kilmarnock and Loudoun): I am grateful for the opportunity to make a short contribution to this very important debate. Although I was present for the beginning of the debate, I apologise to right hon. and hon. Members for not having heard all the speeches. I think that I missed only two or three.

I have listened with care to the speeches of those who oppose the Bill. Although I respect the honesty and sincerity of their contributions, I cannot help but comment that those who are fundamentally opposed to the release of prisoners are failing to listen to what the people of Northern Ireland are telling them. To that extent, I agree with the hon. Member for South Down (Mr. McGrady) and others. Undoubtedly, the decision taken by the people in the referendum on 22 May was overwhelmingly in favour of the Good Friday agreement.

In the presence of Unionist Members of Parliament, I feel, strangely, that I have somehow to justify my contribution to Northern Ireland debates by establishing my credentials; otherwise, as I have heard in sedentary remarks, one's comments are merely dismissed as if they are uninformed.

Since I was elected last year, I have spent some considerable time acquainting myself with the politics and the people of Northern Ireland, although, before that, I knew them well because my mother was born in Northern Ireland and I spent a great deal of my childhood there—quite apart from time spent there as an adult with my family and extended family. I know the problems well. I have made a point of spending time speaking to the people of Northern Ireland, particularly through these important times. I have also been a member of the Select Committee on Northern Ireland Affairs.

From recent contact with people in Northern Ireland and discussion about politics, it is clear to me that those who voted for the agreement did not seek to pick and choose which parts to support—nor should politicians. The Northern Ireland electorate are sophisticated; they understand the issues involved in their politics. They recognise that parts of the agreement could be interpreted as perpetrating injustices on either community, or, indeed, parts of communities, but they bravely chose the agreement as the only way forward.

An essential part of the agreement is the early release of the majority of politically motivated prisoners, against certain conditions. The agreement requires the British and Irish Governments to put in place mechanisms to provide for an accelerated programme for the release of qualifying prisoners. It goes on to express the intention that all such prisoners will be released, should circumstances allow it, within two years of the programme coming into effect. The Bill is designed to fulfil that requirement on the part of the British Government. I am clear in my mind that that part of the agreement is supported by a large majority of the people of Northern Ireland, and therefore feel obliged to support the Bill.

My hon. Friend the Member for Hull, North (Mr. McNamara) is entirely correct: any transferred prisoners who are serving their sentences in the Republic of Ireland are subject to the jurisdiction of that country. That is why, on the prisoners' transfer, it was necessary for an undertaking to be given ensuring that their tariffs would be served. They were to be subject to the jurisdiction of that country, and control of their release could not be determined by this country.

Paragraph 1 of the agreement's provisions on prisoners requires the Government of the Republic of Ireland to establish in that country a mechanism for the accelerated release of prisoners. Accordingly, one should expect that, eventually, all qualifying prisoners imprisoned in the Republic of Ireland will qualify for accelerated release under the Republic of Ireland's programme. Under the agreement, it is appropriate that they should be so released. Had they not been transferred, this legislation would have covered them, and they would have qualified for accelerated release under its mechanisms.

There is therefore no injustice, or distortion of justice, in the agreement. Had those prisoners who have been mentioned in this debate remained in prisons in the United Kingdom, they would have qualified for release under mechanisms provided in the Bill.

Throughout the past decade, as peace has been discussed in Northern Ireland, it has always been clearly understood that prisoners were a central issue in the peace process. That fact has been conceded in this debate by right hon. and hon. Members, not least by the hon. Member for Blaby (Mr. Robathan). It has been understood also that prisoners' early release would be crucial to the success of any agreement. Any peace process in Northern Ireland is likely to be successful only if it commands the respect and support of more than only the broad middle ground of society.

It has been estimated—I have recently re-read the estimates, to refresh my memory—that there are more than 10,000 former prisoners in Northern Ireland, many of whom have been convicted of politically motivated crime. If that statistic is true, the extended families of former prisoners must amount to at least 50,000 people, which is a significant proportion of Northern Ireland's total population. No all-inclusive peace process could ignore those people. No all-inclusive process could not deal with the prisoner issue.

It was therefore inevitable that, in settling the prisoner issue, many people would find the solution distasteful and unpalatable. It was also inevitable that, if there were to be a peace process, the issue had to be addressed at some stage.

I realise that application of the amnesty to perpetrators of the awful crimes that have been committed in the past three decades in Northern Ireland is a price that many—but not all—victims and families of victims think is not worth paying. I have heard expressed, and understand, the feelings of some victims and their families. However, in the circumstances, I do not agree with them. I do not want to be mealy-mouthed about that.

Although a society that is emerging from violent conflict should not forget the appalling cost of the intervening years, the needless and senseless loss of life, the pain and suffering of families or the devastation of communities, the only true insurance against further decades of such senseless and needless violence is a strong and lasting peace process that looks forward. That cannot be achieved without the commitment of the communities that bred and nurtured the perpetrators of that violence in the first place. Dealing with the prisoner issue is the key to such a commitment.

Those who oppose the Bill describe the future of society in Northern Ireland as "polluted by freed terrorists". The hon. Member for Blaby suggested that there would be a Russian-style Mafia. The Bill's opponents describe a society dominated by terrorists who make important political decisions while continuing their trade of violence. However, in so doing, they ignore the realities of the immediate history of Northern Ireland. Since 1985, 438 republican, loyalist and other lifers have been freed. Of that total, only 18 former prisoners have had their licence revoked and been recalled to prison, and only two—one from each faction—have been reconvicted of terrorist offences. Moreover, former prisoners and internees have already played a remarkable role in rebuilding the peace process. Others—too numerous to mention—have distinguished themselves as community leaders and visionary politicians in Northern Ireland.

Under the normal remission tariffs which already apply, the great majority of prisoners serving fixed sentences would be free by the agreement's July 2000 deadline. Today, I read statistics suggesting that there were 340 qualifying prisoners, of whom 269—leaving only 71—would be released under current remission tariffs. The legislation will enable about half the prisoners to win accelerated release in coming months, once the new sentence review commissioners get down to considering individual cases. The other half of the prisoners will be released sooner than was scheduled. Those statistics are neither remarkable nor earth shattering.

The number of people who will be affected by the Bill and the agreement is small compared with the numbers who have already been released from prisons in Northern Ireland—most of whom have not reoffended, and the vast majority of whom are playing a major contributory role in society.

Clause 10(7) allows the Secretary of State to vary by order the two-year release period. I invite my hon. Friend the Minister to tell the House in what circumstances the Secretary of State would consider it to be justified to vary the release period.

I should like also to mention a larger issue—with which I trust that the Opposition spokesman, the hon. Member for North-East Cambridgeshire (Mr. Moss), will deal in his reply. About three times in this debate, the hon. Member for Bracknell (Mr. MacKay) refused to allow me to intervene in his speech—although perhaps, having heard the sedentary remarks that were made, I understand why he did not allow me to do so. I now ask the hon. Member for North–East Cambridgeshire to answer the question that I tried to ask earlier. How can the hon. Member for Bracknell commend the agreement—which he described as "truly momentous", for which, as he told the House, he campaigned, and which he was "delighted" had obtained a yes vote—but describe the Bill as undermining the rule of law? The Bill attempts only to enact in the United Kingdom the Government's commitment, made in an agreement for which he himself had campaigned.

[Mr. Desmond Browne]

I perceive that, as an hon. Member, it is my duty to respect the will of the people of Northern Ireland, as expressed in their resounding yes in a referendum on the Good Friday agreement. The Bill reflects the agreement, as accepted by the people of Northern Ireland. Accordingly, I commend it to the House.

8.6 pm

Mr. Robert McCartney (North Down): There seems to be a suggestion in the House that those who oppose the agreement and the Bill are somehow wreckers and opponents of peace. All such suggestions are quite untrue. The 275,000 people who voted against the agreement are all in favour of peace. I am certain that all of them desire a permanent end to violence. All of them wish for a secure future for their children.

Mr. Browne: Will the hon. and learned Gentleman give way?

Mr. McCartney: No.

Perhaps, like myself, those people feel that a peace or future that is allegedly based on the good will of terrorists is a very poor foundation for the future of their children. They perhaps also fear that an agreement that appears to ignore—because it is not politically expedient to do otherwise—the principles of the rule of law, of morality and of justice does not offer a secure basis for a future permanent and lasting peace in Northern Ireland.

I opposed the agreement, and I oppose the Bill, because I believe in and desire peace. I wish to have a permanent end to violence, and to ensure a secure future for the young people of Northern Ireland. However, I am equally convinced that this agreement will not offer any of those things. Why do I say that? Because the peace process out of which it has been produced was based on terror—it was based on violence and the threat of further violence, if those who had the weapons of violence were not appeased and their desires were not propitiated.

That is exactly what happened in this agreement. It is totally and completely based on the appeasement of terrorism. The Bill, which purports to release the perpetrators of the most horrific and violent crimes back into society, is but one instalment in an on-going process of terrorist appeasement.

History records no example of a minority group using political violence to achieve its purposes which has ceased to use violence while it has continued to be successful in achieving its purposes, until it has either achieved its ultimate aims or been defeated by democracy. Those who have used political violence successfully do not stop using it unless they are defeated by the forces of the rule of law, by morality and the principles of democracy. Sinn Fein-IRA will be no exception to that historical principle.

I say Sinn Fein-IRA, because the Secretary of State on Monday last week and the Prime Minister last Wednesday both confirmed that those two groupings were inextricably linked, which means that they are incapable of being separated. So we have Sinn Fein protesting its democratic potential, and the IRA, with which it is inextricably linked, saying that it will never decommission until its ultimate political aims and ambitions have been achieved.

Where does that leave this much-vaunted agreement and process? At the Sinn Fein Ard Feis, when politically endorsing the Belfast agreement, speaker after speaker stated, to acclamation, that they would continue to adhere to their traditional policies of military violence and political advancement—the twin-track approach. Where does that leave this agreement?

We have heard much about the agreement and how it is the product of the democratic voice of the people of Northern Ireland, but perhaps the House should have some insight into how it was achieved—by subjecting the Northern Ireland electorate to a massive propaganda campaign, the like of which has never been equalled in British constitutional history. Absolutely no stone went unturned. There was an endless stream of the politically famous from all parties and a collection of celebrities, from Richard Branson to Bono of U2, to you name it. All of them afforded compliant media with opportunities for an orgy of publicity for a pro-agreement vote. It was a disgusting exhibition of Government power.

The late Isaiah Berlin wrote 40 years ago that few Governments have much difficulty persuading the people to do what that Government wish. In the 40 intervening years, the techniques of persuasion and the technology for so doing have increased one hundredfold, and every one of them was employed during the agreement.

Furthermore, two weeks into the agreement, I discovered that the Government were paying for detailed focus group reports and private polls at substantial expense, and that they were providing that information to the parties known to be in the yes camp. Only when I threatened to take the matter to court because the information was being produced with public funding, was it handed over to parties in the no camp.

The last lot of opinion polls on the Wednesday before the agreement showed that, if the don't knows had continued to transfer to the noes at the rate that they were doing, the result would have been about 60:40, or perhaps even better than 40 per cent. for the no camp. At that point, when the yes campaign was terrified of the result, Downing street took over, the Prime Minister appeared again in Northern Ireland, and the pledges were given.

I give that background because those pledges are reckoned by all the pollsters to have been central and significant in the result that was ultimately obtained on Friday 22 May—absolutely central. At this point I must say that I entirely agree with the comments of the hon. Member for Hull, North (Mr. McNamara). The agreement is a multi-party agreement. It was entered into by all the parties and the two Governments, and it cannot be altered, amended or varied except with the agreement of all the parties to it.

What happened was that the Prime Minister realised in the final week of the referendum campaign that the pro-Union electorate were totally unhappy about two things—the release of prisoners and the fact that, under the terms of the agreement, there was no clear direction that decommissioning would have to take place before representatives of Sinn Fein could take Executive office. On that basis, the Prime Minister attempted to reassure the pro-Union electorate with his pledges, which were all understood in Northern Ireland to mean that there would be decommissioning, and that it would have to take place before Sinn Fein representatives could take their places in any Executive.

Sinn Fein, Mr. Gerry Adams and Mr. McGuinness have repeatedly reasserted—the hon. Member for Hull, North was correct—that this is an agreement and that they are going to hold the Government to its terms. They are going to insist that, if members of their party are returned in sufficient numbers to allow them to have two members in ministerial posts in a Northern Ireland Executive, under the D'Hondt principles they will be entitled to them without that being in any way connected with any obligation to decommission.

The truth is that, because of the desperate circumstances that faced the Prime Minister and the yes vote in the final weeks, he has entered into a truly Faustian bargain. Sinn Fein-IRA will not let him out of that bargain, but he will be called on by the pro-Union community to go back on it, in the form of legislation. That is the crux of the Bill.

I could never understand the position of the Conservative Opposition or that of some Ulster Unionist Members who kept saying that things could be put right by the legislation, because I have never believed that, under the terms of the multi-party agreement, any party, including the British Government, could alter it unilaterally by legislation without the agreement of all the other parties.

The Government will escape from that dilemma by means of deception, fraud and fudge. The Bill is as full of political fudge as a village fete is of the real stuff, but it will have to be dissected and cleared up, because, sooner or later, the people of Northern Ireland, who, we have been told, are athirst for peace, will call on the Prime Minister to fulfil his pledges.

The claims made by the hon. Member for Newry and Armagh (Mr. Mallon) about there being no new preconditions, such as linking the Bill to decommissioning, were never made loudly and clearly by his party in the referendum campaign, because that would have blown the whistle on the true situation: that such preconditions could not be secured. The Government are not, and should not be, in a position to link decommissioning with the agreement, which stands on its own feet, but I take issue with the hon. Gentleman, because that was not made abundantly clear in the referendum campaign, as it is now.

Mr. Mallon: Will the hon. and learned Gentleman give way?

Mr. McCartney: I will in just a moment.

In furtherance of the plot, the SDLP ran two separate pieces of election propaganda: one, for the soft Unionists, who it hoped would vote yes, was in completely muted colours and talked about partnerships, sharing and all the things that we can do together; the other was a much tougher piece of straightforward nationalist propaganda, talking of the achievements of the SDLP, from 1981 and the totality of relationships up to its final achievement of the agreement en route to its goal of a united Ireland.

When we speak of the democratic views of the people of Northern Ireland, we should bear it in mind that they have yet to make a decision on the promises and assurances that were given to them about what would happen if they voted yes.

Mr. Mallon: Will the hon. and learned Gentleman give way now?

Mr. McCartney: Not just at the moment. I want to talk about the release of prisoners, which is related to decommissioning. [HON. MEMBERS: "Give way."] I do not intend to give way.

Mr. McNamara: You said that you would.

Mr. McCartney: I said that I would, in due time, and I have not yet finished my point.

Several hon. Members have spoken about the victims. There have been victims in Northern Ireland since 1969, and there are now more than 3,000, but until it became necessary to secure their agreement to, or at least acquiescence in, the release of convicted criminals, their feelings were not even considered.

The victims were ignored for the best part of 30 years, but, when it became necessary to assuage their rightful indignation and anger and that of their relatives, suddenly Sir Kenneth Bloomfield was called into operation, and a physical memorial in Londonderry was proposed. Victims became the focus of Government attention only when their good will—and the good will of the community that supported them—was needed to allow convicted criminals and terrorists to be set free.

There has been a great deal of talk about those gentlemen being released and how money should be spent on reintegrating them into the community, and we have heard at length about what NIACRO and others have to say about them. When the Secretary of State went to persuade those people that they should support the ceasefire, the television cameras followed her into the so-called loyalist compound, and some of them were filmed against graffiti and murals. Michael Stone, who is about to be released even though he murdered five people and injured many others, was filmed against a mural that said, "Yabbadabbadoo, any Fenian will do" and, "Kill them all, let God sort them out".

I am speaking about so-called loyalist terrorists, because I want to make it abundantly clear that I despise, loathe and detest terrorists of any kind, serving any claimed cause, be they green, orange or multi-coloured. They are loathsome, despicable people, who should be dealt with regardless of whom they claim to represent.

We are told that, if those people are to be released back into society, they will be required to give up associations with the organisations that spawned them. When the Balcombe street murderers were released from prisons in the Republic to attend the Ard Feis, they arrived as absolute heroes and were given an enormous welcome, because they were seen as violent terrorists, exercising the military strategy of Sinn Fein, which is inextricably linked with them, as they are the cutting edge of its organisation.

Mr. Mallon: I agree with the Prime Minister about new preconditions. A press release on the Bill said:

[Mr. Mallon]

"As the Prime Minister said during the Referendum campaign, the following factors will be taken into account. They are not new preconditions but are essential to help us to reach an overall judgement".

My party opposed the Washington 3 precondition. We oppose it now. We are going to insist that everyone abides by the agreement that we have reached.

On our two sets of literature, there was only one set during the referendum. One person became a little urgent about fighting the assembly election, and that is why our election manifesto went out on the last Sunday. I am not sure that that is a hanging offence.

Mr. McCartney: I never suggested that it was a hanging offence. The two sets of election literature were clearly aimed at two different sets of people, and had two different purposes.

On the release of convicted criminals, the term "prisoner" has overtones of prisoners of war or people fighting according to the rules of the Geneva convention. Let me say something about the connection between these freedom fighters, these released prisoners and what they actually do.

Sinn Fein has 38 candidates for the assembly elections, of whom more than half have criminal convictions of a fairly serious nature. The Sinn Fein candidate in East Londonderry killed three soldiers. Mr. Paul Butler, the Sinn Fein candidate for Lagan Valley, shot a 50-year-old RUC reserve constable in the back of the head. Joe Cahill, aged 78, was once sentenced to death for murder. Gerry Kelly, its representative in Belfast, North, was sentenced to life imprisonment for the Old Bailey bomb, as a result of which one person was killed and 250 injured. In his escape from the Maze, he shot a prison warder in the head.

When I hear hon. Members talk of all the democracy, benefits and peace that the agreement is going to pour forth upon the people of Northern Ireland, I am reminded of a single instance that sums it all up.

My party's candidate in the election in Belfast, North served in the Ulster Defence Regiment for seven years. He have will have among his opponents the following: John White of the Ulster Democratic party, who hacked to death Senator Paddy Wilson and his girl friend, stabbing each of them 54 times; the aforesaid Gerry Kelly of Sinn Fein, who injured 250 people and killed one at the Old Bailey; and another loyalist, Mr. Billy Hutchinson, one of these Progressive Unionists, the radical politicians we heard about earlier. He was involved in the casual killing from a car of two Catholics.

That is the democracy that results from the agreement—three candidates who between them have murdered six people. Is that what democracy and this agreement are about? Is that the true basis upon which there will be lasting peace in Northern Ireland? Those who believe that should buy a few volumes of the Brothers Grimm and Hans Christian Andersen.

8.33 pm

Mr. William Ross (East Londonderry): I have one slight correction for the hon. and learned Member for North Down (Mr. McCartney). The Sinn Fein member who is standing in East Londonderry, or at least one of them, Mr. O'Kane, is a fairly near neighbour of mine. He did not kill three soldiers, but three RAF mechanics. At his trial, he said that, if he got the chance, he would do it all over again. That puts the matter in clear context.

As time is moving on and several hon. Members wish to speak, I shall try to be briefer than usual.

There have been several claims about the number of persons who will be released early under this legislation. The standard excuse, which has been made by many, including some members of my party, is that many of those prisoners would be out in two years in any case. That is true, but it is also a fact that the prisoners are already the beneficiaries of a generous shortening of their sentences. That said, 79 of those who will be out in two years would have had very long periods of imprisonment ahead of them but for the Bill.

I will not weary the House with the details this evening, but they are set out in Hansard in response to questions that I have tabled in recent weeks. There is one person whose release date in Great Britain was 2019. Several others would have served nine or 10 years into the next century. They will all be out in a couple of years. Those who are to be transferred to the Irish Republic will no doubt be even more generously treated, unless they happen to have shot a Garda officer in the Republic, in which case they will do their 40 years.

Such people will be released only if the organisation to which they belong is committed to purely peaceful and democratic action. We suffer from a barrage of voices telling us that that is the case with regard to the IRA and the other terrorist groups. In fact, there is a scarcely a day, or more accurately a night, on which acts of violence are not committed by members of those organisations or by their subcontractors to ensure their continuing dominance in some areas of Northern Ireland. That violence has been calmly ignored by the Government and all those who laud the agreement. Given that that is the case, I have no confidence that this Secretary of State will specify any of those organisations as terrorist.

The Bill will impact on existing legislation. My hon. Friend the Member for Lagan Valley (Mr. Donaldson) considered in some depth which organisations are terrorist. It seems to me that, if the terrorist organisations simply say the correct soothing words, they will no longer be illegal bodies, and there will be no prosecutions for membership.

That leads to the question of extraditions from the Irish Republic and elsewhere of people sought by the RUC in connection with terrorist acts. I am pleased that the Secretary of State is here, because one example is Rita O'Hare, one of the wanted terrorists with whom she is on speaking terms. I admit that the relationship appears to reach the huggy-feely stage only when they are in the Irish Republic, because the woman concerned is a bail absconder in Northern Ireland.

The Secretary of State no doubt knows that the woman went on the run after recovering from her bullet wounds sufficiently to travel. The wounds were sustained while she was attempting to murder soldiers in Northern Ireland. She did not repent of her activities. Indeed, she continued with them, because she later served three years in the Republic for trying to smuggle explosives inside her body into Portlaoise prison.

Rita O'Hare's defence against extradition to Northern Ireland was upheld by the Irish courts on the ground that the attempted murder charge was a political offence.

thereby illustrating the great difficulty of getting an extradition from the Irish Republic. Her very defence goes a long way to proving that she was guilty of the charge brought against her. Clearly she is ideally qualified to advise the Secretary of State on extradition matters, and will not, I am sure, be slow to offer such advice.

However, I remind the right hon. Lady of section 18 of the Prevention of Terrorism (Temporary Provisions) Act 1989, which states:

"A person is guilty of an offence if he has information which he knows or believes might be of material assistance . . . in securing the apprehension, prosecution or conviction of any other person for an offence involving the commission, preparation or instigation of such an act, and fails without reasonable excuse to disclose that information as soon as reasonably practicable . . . in Northern Ireland, to a constable or member of Her Majesty's Forces."

I should be interested to hear whether the Secretary of State has complied with that section with regard to her contacts with the loathsome woman with whom she seems to find so much in common. The Secretary of State should also look up the penalties, which I think she will find of interest.

Of course, what applies to the case of Rita O'Hare also applies to the other assorted thugs and murderers who will be released under the provisions of the Bill. We can also expect reoffenders to leave the United Kingdom jurisdiction, and they will never be extradited for trial for any offences.

The Bill also raises concerns about the position of those awaiting trial and sentence, and those who may yet be charged with murders or other crimes committed long ago. Some other neighbours of mine are in the courts in Belfast this week for attempted murder of members of the RUC in Dungiven.

When all has been said and done—a lot has been said today—the bottom line is that a large number of persons who have been found guilty and sentenced for very terrible acts will be out of prison early, long before their sentences would normally be completed. That is nothing short of a blatant corruption and interference with the judicial process, the concept of punishment for crime and the rehabilitation and reform of prisoners.

The passing and application of the Bill will confirm the IRA's claim, certainly in the minds of its members and supporters, that it is engaged in a just war, and that those convicted are not only prisoners of war but political prisoners rather than murderers and thugs. That is a psychological thing with the IRA, its supporters and other terrorist organisations, which so few people in this place seem to understand.

I believe that the consequences of accepting the IRA view of its terrorist campaign are vast, and can only intensify the deep and real contempt felt by many of the law-abiding citizens for those who have conceived and are carrying into effect this policy of abject surrender to the diktats of murderers. That is what the Bill is really about. It is an abject surrender to the diktats of murderers, and we had better realise exactly what we are putting our hand and our votes to.

8.41 pm

Mr. Tony McWalter (Hemel Hempstead): I rise partly because a large number of those who have spoken are well qualified to speak on these matters, whereas I feel very under-qualified as I have lived all my life in England and my association with Ireland is through my family—but perhaps someone who is not so well qualified has a role to play in the debate, which is often characterised too much by certainty and not enough by probability, uncertainty and a feeling of trying to tease out new solutions rather than being convinced that one has the solution all along and that all that needs to happen is for everyone else to agree.

Some material points have been made—I think particularly about decommissioning—but I am not sure whether the appropriate place to put firm assurances about decommissioning is in the Bill or in a translation of what is clearly in the Bill into the political process through the good offices of the Secretary of State.

Mr. Grieve: Will the hon. Gentleman give way?

Mr. McWalter: In a moment. I certainly agree that we have to ensure that the conditions spelt out by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister and others are secured by the time we come to release from custody anyone who is guilty of terrible offences.

Mr. Grieve: The hon. Gentleman has answered the question that I was about to ask. I infer from what he says that his reading of the text of the agreement, which I submit is the critical issue, is as one with the Prime Minister's, as expressed to the House in his answers in Prime Minister's questions on 6 May.

Mr. McWalter: Indeed, but I submit to the hon. Gentleman and others that it is not clear whether we need to incorporate those ideas and commitment into statute, or whether the Bill will in the end provide us with a facility for ensuring that those commitments are honoured in the deed.

My feeling of under-qualification for the debate extends to other things, but my experience of Northern Ireland—or as some would call it, the north of Ireland—is characterised by an extraordinary gulf between what I have found there and what I have found in my own England. Although we have heard stirring speeches from, among others, the United Kingdom Unionist Member, the hon. and learned Member for North Down (Mr. McCartney), the fact is that there is a great gulf.

For example, there are not many places in England where there is a huge gap between people in how they describe a town. If I say that I am driving to Londonderry, I seem to be on one side of the fence. If I say that I am driving to Derry, I am on the other side of the fence. I had better make sure which I say when I am in the Shankill road or the Falls road. It is strange for those of us who are English that so much should ride on a word—even our life if we get it wrong in the wrong circumstances.

When I have been to Northern Ireland, I have often encountered phenomena that English people find perplexing. I have been on a bus that never reached Oxford Street bus station because a bomb went off 10 minutes before. I have been in a pub in Castlewellan that had no windows because it had been blown apart by a bomb. However, one of the things that I have not experienced—I understand that this makes a great difference—is how it feels to have a member of my family blown up by a bomb. My uncle lived in Castlewellan, but he was not a victim.

[Mr. McWalter]

I understand that the passion in the debate about victims is vital. I resent the suggestion, made by the hon. and learned Member for North Down, that victims come into the process right at the end. One of the extraordinary things about the debate is that so many of the victims have been prepared to construct a testimonial to their murdered loved ones. They say that there could be no better testament than for them to work in the memory of their loved ones to construct a lasting peace. That is something with which those of us who are debating these matters and who support the agreement must work constructively.

We have in Northern Ireland a society in which many of us have aspirations for radical change because we want our fellow countrymen and British islanders to enjoy a life that the rest of us in these islands usually enjoy.

By way of illustration of the problems in Northern Ireland, I offer the following story. I went for a job at the university of Ulster in Coleraine. Some hon. Members may think that the selection board was wise not to select me. In any case, from a shortlist of three I somehow managed not to get the job—

Mr. William Ross: Two did not.

Mr. McWalter: The hon. Gentleman's pals were probably on the panel.

Mr. Ross: No, they were not.

Mr. McWalter: When I walked into the hotel, a policeman asked me if he could check my bag. Being English and having a strong respect for policemen, I of course agreed. He removed the contents of my bag—Marks and Spencer shirts, and so on. He also asked if he could inspect my toilet bag. It contained razors and a tube of Colgate toothpaste, which the policeman squeezed out to make sure that it was not Semtex. A society in which that can happen is a society in need of radical change. Since 1972, when that incident took place, that society has been at war.

Some people have argued that the answer to war is to strengthen the rule of law. I understand that point of view, but it has not worked—because enough people in Northern Ireland feel alienated from the law and from the Government. At last, with this agreement, we have managed to marginalise a large number of people who still believe in the bullet and the bomb. The right hon. Member for Upper Bann (Mr. Trimble) was right to say that peace must be a precondition of any change. Admittedly there is still no peace; there are still what he called marginal elements who can kill. Some places are still unsafe and the marginal elements still have the capacity to murder people, but thanks to the agreement they no longer constitute a large minority: they are a shattered and fragmented rump.

I began by saying that I am unqualified to serve on the Northern Ireland Affairs Committee, although I do. I do however have one vital qualification: I have seen the future. There is in my constituency a church called St. Paul's, in Highfield. It is shared by Catholics and Anglicans. At 8.30 on Sunday mornings there is a Protestant service conducted by a woman minister, and at 11 o'clock there is a Catholic mass. Such a thing is almost unheard of in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Robert McCartney: The idea that the two communities in Northern Ireland are at daggers drawn is erroneous. I have attended every sort of Catholic service, from nuptial mass to benediction, in almost every Catholic church in Belfast and in many churches in Rome—and I have no hang-ups at all.

Mr. McWalter: I thank the hon. and learned Gentleman, but I did not say that the communities were at daggers drawn. I said that a significant minority felt so alienated that they did not recognise what the hon. and learned Gentleman would call the rule of law. Of course, in my parish there are also a few people who do not respect the rule of law, but where such people form a significant minority the law has to be reconstructed so as to attract their assent.

Mr. Mallon: I was intrigued by the hon. Gentleman's experience with the toothpaste. It is true that we are different, but we are the product of our environment. We have been governed by this Parliament since the Act of Union of 1800. I suggest that that has something to do with our conditioning—that the diversity in the north of Ireland may stem partly from that.

Mr. McWalter: I thank the hon. Gentleman for his remarks. It is extraordinary that a tube of toothpaste can be regarded as a venomous item over the water. I was unfazed by the incident, but I can imagine members of the minority community in Northern Ireland feeling threatened, intimidated and resentful in such circumstances. We in England are used to working constructively with the police authorities.

What we need to foster, following the agreement, is the spirit of St. Paul's church in Highfield. Its experience needs to be etched on the life of Northern Ireland. From now on no one, republican or Unionist, should regard it as strange to work with members of the other community in a spirit of mutual understanding and multicultural exchange.

8.57 pm

Mr. Peter Robinson (Belfast, East): There has at least been an acceptance by many who have spoken today that while the roots of the Bill can be found in the Belfast agreement, that agreement has been given significant support by the undertakings, promises and pledges offered by the Prime Minister during the referendum campaign.

I recognise that 71 per cent. of those who voted in the referendum voted in favour of the agreement, but I do not accept the contention that that represents a majority of both our communities. It is clear that a majority of the Unionist community voted against the agreement—[Interruption.] The giggling hon. Member for Hemel Hempstead (Mr. McWalter) should take into account some simple statistics: 71 per cent. voted yes; according to the hon. Member for Newry and Armagh (Mr. Mallon), 42 per cent. of those were nationalists but, accepting that perhaps 5 per cent. of the nationalist community voted no—although the exit polls did not show that to be the case—that would represent about 2 per cent. of the overall community, thereby reducing the figure back down to 40 per cent.; about 8 per cent. of the votes in Northern Ireland come from what are described as others, such as the Alliance party, the Women's Coalition, Labour and other bits and pieces, which gives us 48 per cent.

Mr. Winnick: What a way to describe such groups.

Mr. Robinson: The hon. Gentleman would never identify with Labour in Northern Ireland—it is an entirely different species there. That gives 48 per cent., leaving only 23 per cent. who voted yes from the Unionist community, as opposed to 29 per cent. who voted no from the Unionist community. Therefore, the clear majority of the Unionist community voted against the agreement.

The Government know that; their own polls show that that was the case. Indeed, those polls so alarmed them that they sent the Prime Minister post haste to Northern Ireland to do whatever he could to turn the tide of events. To that end, he gave a series of commitments which, in my view, are as crucial to the future of the Bill as is the agreement. People in Northern Ireland voted not simply on their reading of the Belfast agreement, but on the interpretation of that agreement given by the Prime Minister. When the Prime Minister indicated clearly that there would be a direct linkage between actual decommissioning and any prisoners being released, people were prepared to believe it.

In the House, the Leader of the Opposition asked the Prime Minister:

"Does he agree that prisoners should not be released early until the organisations to which they belong have substantially decommissioned their weapons?"

The Prime Minister replied:

"It is essential that any agreement is signed up to in full."—[Official Report, 6 May 1998; Vol. 311, c. 711.]

He said that the answer to the question was yes. He said a lot of other things, but he answered yes to the question, put directly to him by the Leader of the Opposition, which asked for decommissioning prior to any releases taking place. The Prime Minister made a further comment on 13 May:

"Especially after the events at the weekend, it must be clear and demonstrated . . . that if people are to take their places on the Northern Ireland Executive and participate in the provisions on prisoner release, we must be sure that violence is given up for good. We must demonstrate that clearly."—[Official Report, 13 May 1998; Vol. 312, c. 365.]

Neither of those pledges has been fulfilled in the Bill. There is no direct linkage between decommissioning and the release of prisoners, nor is there any requirement for decommissioning prior to prisoners being released. All the Bill says is that that is one of the issues that the Secretary of State will take into account, but she is not required to do so even if she finds out that decommissioning has not taken place. There is no requirement in the Bill for decommissioning to have been signed up to, or to have taken place, before prisoners start to be released.

There is no requirement for violence to have ended for good, even though the Bill talks about

"a complete and unequivocal ceasefire."

Those are strange words to use because we had a complete ceasefire announced by the Provisional IRA. But it was broken by the Provisional IRA when it bombed Canary Wharf. A complete ceasefire is not a permanent end to violence, nor does it mean giving up violence for good. That pledge is broken in the Bill—the Prime Minister did not live up to his words.

The Prime Minister came over to Northern Ireland campaigning and gave a further pledge, which was published in the Belfast News Letter of Thursday 14 May. He said

"People need to know that if they are sitting down in the room of the executive of the Northern Ireland assembly with other people then they are not sitting there with the guns under the table, outside the door and all the rest of it. That can't happen and we must make it absolutely clear that that can't happen."

Why is it that we in Northern Ireland are not to see the settlement Bill before people go to the polls on 25 June? One would have thought it might be appropriate for that Bill to be published before 25 June so that we could see whether the Prime Minister was keeping his pledges. I am sure that the Secretary of State will want to put right any impression that the people of Northern Ireland might have that the Prime Minister will welsh on those commitments, as he welshed on the commitments on decommissioning and the release of prisoners.

In his last bid, the Prime Minister made a dramatic statement and personally signed his five pledges to the people of Northern Ireland, which were displayed on a large billboard. The same pledge as previously was made on prison releases. Pledge No. 5 stated:

"Prisoners kept in unless violence is given up for good."

That is clearly a requirement for a permanent end to violence—not a tactical cessation of violence, not a pause in violence, not simply giving up violence for a few years, but giving up violence for good.

How is that to be demonstrated? The Prime Minister said in his Balmoral speech that it would be demonstrated by an end to punishment beatings and by standing down the organisation and dismantling it. Those are the key issues, along with decommissioning, that show that violence is being given up for good.

The Prime Minister did not keep his word to the people of Northern Ireland. The pledges are not kept in the Bill. If he broke those pledges, the people of Northern Ireland can be certain that the other four pledges that he signed in Coleraine are unlikely to be kept when the settlement Bill is eventually published.

I agree with the hon. Members for Newry and Armagh and for Hull, North (Mr. McNamara) that this Bill probably keeps to the lines of the agreement. It does not keep to the basis of the Prime Minister's pledges, but it is in line with the agreement, because the agreement, as we argued during the campaign, did not require decommissioning. It required only that certain individuals should use their best endeavours and influence to bring about decommissioning. The agreement made it clear that within two years, all the prisoners would get out.

One Labour Back Bencher made the remarkable statement that the Bill is not about letting murderers out on to the streets. What is it about then? Of course it is about letting murderers out on to the streets. That is its whole purpose. The Minister gave figures to journalists to show how many murderers would be allowed out on to the streets.

As soon as the Bill is passed, a contradiction in law will be created. I agree that there is no doubt that the Bill will be passed, given the size of the Labour majority.

[Mr. Robinson]

Under one piece of legislation, the IRA and other terrorist organisations are proscribed, but when the Secretary of State is asked to make a determination under clause 3(8) on whether various organisations are terrorist organisations, she will undoubtedly come to the conclusion that the IRA is, for the purposes of the Bill, not a terrorist organisation.

So certain was I that the Secretary of State would come to that conclusion that I was prepared to stake my political career on it. After 19 years in the House, I made it clear that if the Secretary of State was prepared to come out publicly before last Monday and make a statement giving a clear undertaking that she would list the Provisional IRA as a terrorist organisation under that clause, I would be happy to withdraw. I thought that, offered such a carrot, the Secretary of State, keen to get rid of me, would jump at the opportunity, but she did not take it. I even made sure that she was aware of it by speaking to her private secretary, to ensure that she knew the great possibilities that lay before her.

The Secretary of State could not give such an undertaking publicly because she has no intention of determining that, for the purposes of the Bill, the Provisional IRA is a terrorist organisation. She will determine that it is not.

By doing that, the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland will be saying, "You can hold on to 100 tonnes of weapons and enough explosives and guns to carry on waging war for another 20 years, but I will not determine that you are a terrorist organisation." She will say, "You can have all the plans to wreck and ruin the Province, but I will not determine that you are a terrorist organisation. You can have a structure and a terrorist network throughout the Province, but I will not determine that you are a terrorist organisation." That is how Mad Hattered the Bill is. Even though the IRA is proscribed as a terrorist organisation by an Act of Parliament, the Secretary of State has determined that it should not be included in a specified list of terrorist organisations. She will do the same to other terrorist organisations as well.

We also have the nonsense—emphasised by the Secretary of State in her remarks—that it is an offence to be a member of a proscribed terrorist organisation. An IRA man in the Maze prison can declare that he is a member of the Provisional IRA—which is a proscribed organisation—and the Secretary of State may release him from prison because she does not determine that that proscribed organisation should be included in the list of terrorist organisations. That man will be allowed on to the street even though he has admitted that he is a member of an organisation that everyone knows is a terrorist organisation and which is legally proscribed as such by an Act of Parliament. That is an absolute absurdity.

Other factors must be taken into account in terms of the prisoners. I do not think that it is sufficient to allow convicted prisoners to leave gaol if they have not repented or expressed regret for their crimes. Prisoners can get out of gaol without renouncing violence because they will get out on the basis of their organisation's status. However, when those people are out on licence, they will not be put back into prison on the basis of their organisation's status. If their organisation returns to violence, they will still be free because it is their individual behaviour that matters to the Secretary of State and to the commission. That is entirely wrong and the provision must clearly be amended in Committee.

I do not believe that the Bill's criteria for determining a terrorist organisation are sufficient. Clearly, we must take account—we shall seek to amend the Bill to this effect—of the views of the Chief Constable of the Royal Ulster Constabulary, who must believe that an organisation is no longer a threat to the people of Northern Ireland. Such a provision must be inserted into the Bill so that we can hear an independent and impartial view rather than the political views being expressed in the House tonight.

It is probably fairly obvious that I intend to vote against the Bill. I will do so on principle. I believe that sentences may be reduced by a very narrow margin in certain circumstances—on the ground of good behaviour, for example. The review bodies examine a series of factors, such as the likelihood of a prisoner reoffending, but that applies to only a small part of a sentence. The Bill introduces an amnesty in everything but name. The Government know it, and they think that, by calling it something else, they will fool the people. They will not. When the gates open, the prisoners will start to leave. Hundreds of prisoners will get out in that two-year period, and most of them will be murderers.

I shall vote against the Bill on principle. We accept the fact that the Government will pursue the Bill and that it will pass, but we shall seek to amend it in Committee. I know that the Government will not accept the substantial amendments that we shall propose, as they will be contrary to the Government's deal with Sinn Fein-IRA.

Will the Secretary of State assure the House that, when the commission is established, in deciding its composition, she will not feel that it is necessary to telephone an on-the-run terrorist, such as Rita O'Hare, or a former leader of the Provisional IRA and Army Council member, such as Martin McGuinness, seeking their approval? When she establishes the commission, whose advice will the Secretary of State take on the issue of prisoner releases? Will she again have to secure the approval of Sinn Fein-IRA representatives?

9.14 pm

Mr. William Thompson (West Tyrone): It will be no surprise to the House when I say that I was opposed to the agreement and recommended the people of Northern Ireland to vote no in the referendum. As the Bill is a result of that agreement, it will come as no surprise that I am opposed to it.

For 25 years, we have had violence in Northern Ireland with terrorists at their work. We have seen murder and mayhem on many occasions. We have heard many announcements from Governments that they will defeat terrorism. They have said that the terrorists will not get what they want. However, the reality is that, because of American influence, European influence, southern Irish influence and influence from the civil servants in the Foreign Office and the Northern Ireland Office, the British Government never had the guts to beat terrorism.

If we do not beat terrorism, in the end we negotiate with the terrorists and appease them. The agreement that has been signed is not a peace agreement but an appeasement agreement. We can see the result of that in the Bill. It represents appeasement to terrorism. The terrorists were there to make a deal, and their condition was that they had to get their prisoners out. That applied both to Sinn Fein and to the terrorists from the nationalist side as well as the terrorist organisations from the Unionist side. That was the price that they demanded for the agreement—or part of the price—and, so that the agreement could be reached, they got it. They wanted to get their prisoners out.

The Bill acknowledges something that has always been denied, which is that there were political prisoners in Northern Ireland. They may not have been called political prisoners—they may have been termed special status prisoners—but in reality they have been political prisoners. Men and women who have been involved in terrorism are now to be treated differently from every other criminal who is in prison in Northern Ireland. That is immoral and it discriminates against the ordinary criminal who has to do his full term in prison, even though the offences that he has committed may be much less than some of the terrorist crimes that have been committed by others.

Mr. Winnick: Will the hon. Gentleman explain why the leader and deputy leader of his party have come to a very different conclusion from him about the negotiated agreement? Why has the majority of the governing part of his organisation also decided to back the agreement?

Mr. Thompson: I did not hear exactly all that the hon. Gentleman said, but I know that many parties accept the agreement. Indeed, my own party has accepted it. I accept that. I accept also that the majority of the people of Northern Ireland have accepted it. However, that does not mean that I must accept it. I believe that it is wrong. As I believe that it is wrong, I therefore believe that I have the right to oppose it as it continues to come into development in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Winnick: I was really asking why the hon. Gentleman believes—of course, he has a perfect right to oppose the Bill in a free House of Commons—that the leader and deputy leader of his party, as well as the majority of the governing part of his organisation, take a very different view from him over the negotiated agreement.

Mr. Thompson: The hon. Gentleman asks a question to which I really do not know the answer. I ask him to ask those to whom he refers why they reached such a decision. It is certainly not one with which I agree.

The Bill is a betrayal of all the good men and women from the security forces who gave their lives in the pursuit of the defeat of terrorism. Many of them spent nights patrolling the roads trying to defend the ordinary people of Northern Ireland in order to defeat terrorism. They died in vain, because terrorism has not been defeated. Terrorism is succeeding still in Northern Ireland.

The so-called safeguards in the Bill are meaningless. Many people in Northern Ireland were persuaded to vote yes by the promises given by the Prime Minister when he came to Northern Ireland on three occasions. When they saw him on television, they took him at his word. I tried to persuade them that what he signed and said was meaningless, but they would not believe that. Now, in the Bill, we discover that what I believed has come true. The Prime Minister's promises have not been fulfilled in the Bill.

Time is of the essence, so I conclude by saying that this is a bad Bill. It is a sad day for the House of Commons when it considers a Bill to release murderers. Therefore, I shall oppose it.

9.20 pm

Mr. Dominic Grieve (Beaconsfield): I shall be brief and I apologise, therefore, if I cannot develop one or two of my arguments as much as I would have wished.

I was happy to support the agreement when it came before the House. Various things have been said about it in this debate, and I find myself as unable to agree with the hon. Member for Belfast, East (Mr. Robinson) as I am with the hon. Member for Hemel Hempstead (Mr. McWalter).

Ultimately, Northern Ireland is a civil society. It enjoys, in substantial areas, a great measure of peace, but we belittle the people of Northern Ireland if we attribute to them a state of wardom such that we have to extend or change the law to accommodate their circumstances. It is a bad precedent.

That having been said, the agreement implies on our part an act of hard-headed faith. I have never had any doubt in my mind that if violence comes to an end, that of itself is a good precondition for looking at the case of each individual convicted for an act of violence. If the violence has ceased, it is a good reason for releasing them as soon as possible. That would have applied whether or not the agreement had come into being.

Therefore, if we are approaching a situation where peace will come to Northern Ireland, there are sound reasons for looking to release prisoners as expeditiously as possible, as long as we do not release into the community those who will resume violence.

There are matters connected with the agreement which have given me cause for concern. Applying my mind as a lawyer, I read the agreement carefully and I concluded that what the Prime Minister had to say on 6 May about the linkage between the release of prisoners and the cessation of violence and decommissioning was, on a reading of the agreement, correct. I hope that it is, because I am concerned not about whether other parties to the agreement may come to a different interpretation but to know the Government's interpretation of the agreement.

Listening to the debate, there has been enough casuistry from supporters of the Government to suggest that there are those who read into the agreement some very different things from others about the linkage of decommissioning with the cessation of violence.

As I said earlier in an intervention, I have no doubt that the agreement can be construed—it is reflected in the legislation—as meaning that an act of preparation for violence would be the failure within the two-year period to achieve the substantial decommissioning that is envisaged in the agreement.

If that is not the case, the sooner the Government say so, the better. There is a tendency in circumstances of this kind to have a hope and a prayer, and sometimes to go beyond what is realistic. It is important that people know where they stand. Obfuscation may be a Government art form, but it will do us no good in this context. If the matter is not clarified now, it will be clarified later, with far worse consequences.

[Mr. Dominic Grieve]

I am prepared to accept what the Prime Minister said, because it appears to be in accordance with the agreement, but I seek confirmation of that. The question of what amendments are tabled or become critical in Committee will depend on how the Government interpret the agreement to the House and on the assurances that can be given that what the Prime Minister said on the matter is correct. I believe that the agreement and the Bill match, and that the agreement was properly reflected by what the Prime Minister said, but I look forward to reassurance that that is indeed the case.

The issue with which I now wish to deal briefly may be slightly off the remit of the Bill, but it is important. I expect that, by the time the two-year period is up, there will be virtually no IRA prisoners in this country who have not been transferred either to Northern Ireland or to the Republic. I understand that the remit of the Bill concerns prisoners transferred to Northern Ireland, but the status of prisoners transferred to the Republic is a matter of abiding curiosity to me. Some of those prisoners have the unique and unpleasant distinction of being virtually the only ones subject to the full life tariff. Some were transferred on the Irish Government's explicit assurance that they accepted the full life tariff imposed by the Home Secretary.

Where do those prisoners fit into the agreement? If they do not fit into the Bill, into what agreement do they fit? I do not accept that they are merely the responsibility of the Government of the Irish Republic, because that Government's previous ability to release them has been fettered by their assurance of the full life tariff.

There are exceptions—properly made—in the Bill. I know from my experience of encountering terrorists in the courts that they come in all shapes and sizes—from the young romantic who has murdered, but who may properly wish to be released into the community quickly, to the psychopath who probably constitutes a danger to the community whether or not he is a member of a terrorist organisation, and who was drawn to terrorist organisations like a bee to a honey pot.

What measure of control will the Government exercise over influencing the release date of prisoners transferred to the Irish Republic, and how do such prisoners fit into the agreement? Even if the matter falls outside the remit of the Bill, I should be grateful for an explanation of how that will work.

I thank the House for allowing me the indulgence of exceeding the normal time for Back-Bench speeches in order that I might raise those matters.

9.27 pm

Mr. Malcolm Moss (North-East Cambridgeshire): I am more than happy to have given my hon. Friend the Member for Beaconsfield (Mr. Grieve) five or six minutes for his excellent contribution to this debate.

I reiterate the comments of my hon. Friend the Member for Bracknell (Mr. MacKay) in thanking the Secretary of State and her Ministers for involving the Opposition and seeking our advice in the drafting of the Bill. As my hon. Friend said, some of our points have been incorporated, but the Bill still does not go far enough to satisfy our concerns and those of many people in Northern Ireland. As my hon. Friend said, we shall submit amendments and force those to a vote in Committee unless we have further accommodation from the Government.

Contrary to the accusations of some Labour Members, we do not seek to rewrite the agreement; we merely seek to make clear in the Bill the intent and the terms of the agreement. That is no less an intent than the Prime Minister has sought to achieve in his various comments over the past few weeks.

I seek clarification from the Minister on two questions that were put to the Secretary of State by my hon. Friend the Member for Bracknell. The first relates to the issue of Guardsmen Fisher and Wright. We seek confirmation that the Bill does not apply in their case. Clause 3(3)(a) sets a first condition that the sentence must be for a qualifying offence. It seems to me that the offences committed by Guardsmen Fisher and Wright do not fulfil that condition. Perhaps the Minister will clarify that when he responds to the debate.

Clause 1(5) refers to a lawyer who holds a legal qualification in any jurisdiction. The issue raised was not dealt with fully. There is still some doubt, and we seek confirmation that the qualification should be from the United Kingdom.

I can say in response to the hon. Member for Kilmarnock and Loudoun (Mr. Browne) that we welcome the agreement and we acknowledge that it is a momentous event in the history of Northern Ireland. History will determine how momentous it is, but it is a key and significant step. We want further progress on the basis of that agreement. There is a glimmer of hope, and that was shown by the positive 71 per cent. vote in the referendum. However, that is conditional on good faith being exercised by all the participating parties. The commitments by the signatories to the agreement are clear cut and have repeatedly been endorsed and elaborated on by the Prime Minister himself.

It is the duty of the Opposition to challenge the wording of the legislation that interprets the intent of the agreement. There may well be differing views on the legal interpretation of words in the Bill. Is that not what the courts will be asked to determine? As a lawyer, the hon. Member for Kilmarnock and Loudoun should have understood that fundamental point.

There is no inconsistency in our position. We have made it clear in the House, in private meetings with the Prime Minister and the Secretary of State, and publicly in Northern Ireland and in mainland Britain that we seek a clear and unequivocal commitment to giving up violence for good, and that includes decommissioning. We believe that that commitment should also apply to the release of prisoners. After all, the Prime Minister has said no less. The hon. Member for Belfast, East (Mr. Robinson), in his powerful speech, and my hon. Friend the Member for Beaconsfield alluded to many of the Prime Minister's comments in the past few weeks. In the limited time available to me, I do not intend to reiterate them. In the Prime Minister's various interviews and statements on 6 May, 14 May and 17 May in the House and in Northern Ireland, the word "decommissioning" occurred time and again. Furthermore, on every occasion he linked decommissioning to both prisoner release and the taking up of Executive positions in the assembly.

The Bill does not make those links in anything like the same clear and unequivocal way. That is the critical issue. The people of Northern Ireland were entitled to believe what the Prime Minister said about those links when they voted yes to the agreement. The House is entitled to believe that the Prime Minister meant what he said under questioning from the Leader of the Opposition. The country as a whole is entitled to believe the Prime Minister when he promises to link legislation on prisoner release to the giving up of violence for good. The Prime Minister said that the "war is finished, done with, gone".

To ordinary men and women in Northern Ireland and in mainland Britain, it is inconceivable that an organisation that eschews violence and terrorism cannot co-operate fully and totally with the decommissioning process.

My hon. Friend the Member for Bracknell, the right hon. Member for Upper Bann (Mr. Trimble) and the hon. Member for Harrogate and Knaresborough (Mr. Willis) raised the issue of the prisoners transferred to the Republic of Ireland.

The intention of the agreement is clear from paragraph 1 of the section on prisoners, on page 25. I think that the hon. Member for Hull, North (Mr. McNamara) quoted from it twice. It states:

"Both Governments will put in place mechanisms to provide for an accelerated programme for the release of prisoners, including transferred prisoners, convicted of scheduled offences in Northern Ireland or, in the case of those sentenced outside Northern Ireland, similar offences (referred to hereafter as qualifying prisoners)."

Clause 15 of the Bill deals with sentences passed outside Northern Ireland—that is, in mainland Great Britain. Subsection (1) gives the Secretary of State power to provide for clauses 3 to 13 to take effect, if the prisoner concerned meets the four conditions specified in clause 3(3) to (6).

It strikes me that, if the likes of Paul Magee and the Balcombe street gang had stayed in prisons in the United Kingdom—as provided for in clause 15—they would have been subject to this legislation. The fact that they have been transferred to the Republic of Ireland under a separate jurisdiction does create a slight problem, but, given the intent in the paragraph in the agreement on the release of prisoners, I do not think that they can be seen to have prejudiced their case by moving from prisons here to prisons in the Republic. I hope that the Minister will clarify that point for once and for all.

The hon. Member for Newry and Armagh (Mr. Mallon) said—and I think that his comments were echoed by the hon. Member for Hull, North—that there was no question of introducing new elements into the agreement, and, by inference, into the Bill. He implied that no embellishment would be countenanced—particularly to clause 3(8) and (9), the subsections which are at the heart of the Bill. Indeed, he challenged both the Prime Minister and the Secretary of State to come to the Floor of the House and say why the legislation was to be changed from the word and the spirit of the agreement.

I presume from those comments that the hon. Gentleman is content with the words in the Bill as drafted. I also presume that he was consulted about those words before the Bill was drafted. That is not a problem. Consultation was widespread, and many parties were included: I have already accepted that. It is, however, unusual for the first draft of a Bill, as it appears on Second Reading, to be perfect. I am surprised that the hon. Gentleman does not entertain the view that other words and combinations of words could strengthen the legislation in a way that we would like, while still not going beyond the terms of the agreement.

I shall give the Minister plenty of time in which to speak, as I know that he has many questions to answer. I have raised some of the key issues, principally those arising in clause 3(8) and (9). We shall be tabling amendments to those key provisions. We hope that the spirit of co-operation that the Government have shown hitherto will continue when the Bill returns to the Floor of the House for its Committee stage next week.

9.38 pm

The Minister of State, Northern Ireland Office (Mr. Adam Ingram): This has been an interesting and wide-ranging debate about an issue that generates strong emotions. In the time available, I shall do my best to deal with all the points that have been raised, although it may not be possible for me to do so. It will certainly be possible to discuss the details of many of the points raised this evening in Committee.

There have been many difficult and dark days in the troubled history of Northern Ireland, but 10 April and 22 May stand out like beacons. On those days a new light shone on the Province, a ray of hope and the glimmer of a better tomorrow. The Good Friday agreement and the referendum which endorsed it so convincingly are without doubt significant turning points in the history of Northern Ireland. Those two events are the opportunity for the people of Northern Ireland to move forward into a future that is no longer plagued by violence and blighted by fear.

All hon. Members have an obligation to listen to what the people of Northern Ireland have said. They are the people who have been living with the troubles all these years and who have been most damaged by them. They are saying that they want a better future for themselves and their families.

When the participants to the talks signed the agreement on Good Friday, they knew that hard decisions lay ahead and that difficult actions would be required. Equally, when the people of Northern Ireland overwhelmingly voted yes in the referendum, they did so knowing that they would have to accept decisions and developments that had previously been anathema to them. The talks participants and the people of Northern Ireland endorsed the Good Friday agreement knowing that it was a total package that would stand or fall as a whole.

The legislation deals with one of the first of the important matters on which the agreement can either founder or move ahead. The Government have made no secret of the fact that the prisoner element of the agreement was not easy for us. We share the concerns of many people about the early release of prisoners. However, it is time for all those who have suffered hurt over the past 30 years to take a deep breath and say that, although this is not necessarily a perfect end to the troubles, realistically it is the only one.

I shall now deal with the issue of victims. During my time in Northern Ireland I have constantly been amazed at the capacity of so many of those who have suffered gravely over the years, whether from the discriminate bombings and shootings of republican terrorists or from the evil sectarian murders by so-called loyalists, to forgive and to look ahead. Without that, politicians would not have been given the time and space in which to forge a better future.

[Mr. Adam Ingram]

In my role as Minister for victims, I am particularly conscious of the Bill's possible impact on victims and their families. I understand the hurt and the fears of many of those people, and I understand the need to ensure that their concerns and interests are properly addressed. In that context, I should like to thank the hon. Member for Harrogate and Knaresborough (Mr. Willis) and my hon. Friend the Member for Luton, South (Ms Moran), who also spoke about victims, for their comments. They both pertinently drew attention to the need to ensure that victims who want the information can find out when particular offenders will be released. Lord Alderdice and the Alliance party have shown a particular interest in the issue and have made similar suggestions and representations on behalf of victims. In Committee next week, I shall be happy to consider further questions on the issue with a view to tabling a Government amendment to tackle it.

The hon. Member for Harrogate and Knaresborough asked how the Republic of Ireland would deal with victims. That is a matter for the Government of the Republic. They have also appointed a Minister with responsibility for dealing with victims of terrorism over the years in the Republic, and I am due to meet him shortly to discuss what we can jointly do. Legislation and how to deal specifically with such issues are matters for that Government.

The hon. Member for North Antrim (Rev. Ian Paisley) spoke about the sensitivity of victims and about informing them. We shall have to deal with Victim Support and other such groups to ensure that information will be offered sympathetically. The overriding principle is that it will be for victims to decide whether they want to receive information. We shall be establishing a procedure whereby victims may identify themselves if they wish information to be brought forward, so that they can ease some of the pain that they may feel about prisoner releases as the releases begin to progress over the coming months and years.

The hon. and learned Member for North Down (Mr. McCartney), who is not present, said that we were only now beginning to think about the issue of victims. Just about everything that the hon. and learned Gentleman says is wrong. He is wrong again on the issue of victims. It is not true that victims have been ignored by this or by previous Governments. Over the years, considerable sums of money have been routed towards groups that have sought to assist victims. Since this Government took office, we have established a commission specifically to consider the issue. It has reported recently; a Minister responsible for victims has been appointed; and we are making great progress. It is wrong to say that we have ignored victims over the years; that is simply not so.

The hon. Member for Harrogate and Knaresborough asked whether the Secretary of State would consult the Chief Constable and the General Officer Commanding on whether a ceasefire was being maintained. The answer to that is yes. It is clear that they are both key players in understanding the effect of what is taking place on the ground. Of course, at present, both the Secretary of State and I are constantly in touch with the Chief Constable and the General Officer Commanding in assessing security matters on a week-by-week basis.

I turn to the safeguards in the Bill. Although we owe it to victims and to the people of Northern Ireland to address fears about release, we must obviously take account of how we go about it. The Bill builds in the major safeguards which were envisaged at the conclusion of Good Friday agreement and which the Prime Minister has promised since.

The gates of the Maze prison are not being flung open and prisoners will not be granted an amnesty for their criminal actions. The safeguards will ensure that prisoners who support terrorist groups that continue to engage in violence or return to violence will not be released. Prisoners who will be released on licence will be recalled if they engage in terrorist activities after release. Safeguards also ensure that the programme of release can be stopped if circumstances change. That means that, if a terrorist group returns to violence, prisoners who support the organisation will not be released, and those who continue to support it while on licence can be recalled. Another important safeguard is that life sentence prisoners will not be released if they are a danger to the public. Those are very important criteria and will be rigidly applied.

I turn to the Prime Minister's pledges. The message that the Prime Minister gave is very clear, and was confirmed in his statement to the people of Northern Ireland on 14 May. He said that, if parties are to benefit from accelerated release, their commitment to democratic, non-violent means must be established in an objective, meaningful and verifiable way. He said that a range of factors were to be taken into account in clarifying whether the terms and spirit of the agreement have been met and whether violence has genuinely been given up for good.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State set out the following factors in her introductory statement, and they are now included in the Bill. They are whether an organisation is committed to the use now and in future of only democratic and peaceful means to achieve its objectives; has ceased to be involved in any acts of violence or preparation for violence; is not directing or promoting acts of violence committed by other organisations; and is co-operating fully with the decommissioning body.

Since we are judging what assurances have been given, it is worth looking at what has happened. It is worth underlining that prisoners have been released throughout the troubles. They include almost 450 life sentence prisoners who were released through the life sentence release mechanisms set up by the Conservative Government in 1983. Only two of them have been recalled as a result of further serious terrorist-type offences. Those prisoners include also more than 245 fixed-sentence prisoners released early under legislation introduced by the Conservative Government as recently as 1995. Only two of those prisoners have had their licence revoked.

The 1995 legislation was introduced during a period in which both loyalists and the Provisional IRA had ceasefires in place, and continued in force even when the PIRA ceasefire broke down, with the horrific docklands bombing. Although the previous Government had power to suspend by order that legislation, they chose not to do so. In many respects, we are today considering building on that Conservative legislation.

The new scheme will lead to earlier release and will for the first time involve life sentence prisoners. However, the changes are balanced by safeguards that were absent from the 1995 legislation. Specifically, we will be able to penalise organisations that do not maintain ceasefires and to prevent release of prisoners, especially life sentence prisoners, who will be a risk to the public.

Mr. John D. Taylor (Strangford): Will the Minister make it clear whether IRA prisoners can be released regardless of whether there is decommissioning?

Mr. Ingram: As the right hon. Gentleman knows, one of the factors that has to be taken into account—it is one of the four factors—is commitment by those organisations to be engaged fully in that process. That factor is quite clear both from what the Prime Minister has said and in the legislation.

I tell the right hon. Member for Strangford that every hon. Member wants an end to paramilitary weapons. We all want decommissioning. The Government have initiated legislation to achieve that end. In the next few weeks, we will be signing the scheme to put into effect the means to achieve it. However, ultimately, the mechanism that those organisations would apply in decommissioning is voluntary. It is the organisations that will have to comply with the factors and produce the weapons. We do not have mechanisms to take weapons from organisations unless they co-operate with the schemes, which will be signed up to within the next few weeks.

I shall deal now with the points raised by the hon. Member for Bracknell (Mr. MacKay), which were raised again by the hon. Member for North-East Cambridgeshire (Mr. Moss).

Mr. Robathan: Will the Minister give way?

Mr. Ingram: No; I should like now to deal specifically with the transfer of prisoners, as I am very conscious of the time.

Mr. MacKay: On decommissioning, and in response to the Minister's reply to the right hon. Member for Strangford (Mr. Taylor), may I ask whether the Minister agrees with the Prime Minister's statement on the Floor of the House that "It is essential that organisations that want to benefit from the early release of prisoners should give up violence. Decommissioning is part of that"?

If decommissioning is part of release, surely the Minister will agree that it must be a prerequisite—rather than the Secretary of State or her successors merely saying that they will take it into account. If the Minister can give us that confirmation today, I think that we will have very few problems with the rest of the Bill.

Mr. Ingram: Of course I agree with the Prime Minister. However, let me quote the Prime Minister's exact comments, which have been quoted selectively. In reply to the Leader of the Opposition, the Prime Minister said:

"Again, I agree with the right hon. Gentleman. It is essential that organisations that want to benefit from the early release of prisoners should give up violence."

We all agree with that. He continued:

"Decommissioning is part of that, of course, but it goes further. It is not just a question of decommissioning, but a question of making sure, as the agreement says, that there is a complete and unequivocal ceasefire. What is more, there is provision in the agreement for that to be kept under constant review."—[Official Report, 6 May 1998; Vol. 311, c. 711.]

So what the Prime Minister said—

Mr. MacKay: Will the Minister give way?

Mr. Ingram: No.

What the Prime Minister said—[HON. MEMBERS: "Give way."] I am answering the point. The Prime Minister's comments went further than the assurance now sought by the hon. Member for Bracknell. On that basis, I hope that the hon. Gentleman now finds it within himself to judge that he can support the legislation.

Mr. MacKay: I am glad that the hon. Gentleman has quoted the passage in full—it was purely because of the time that I did not—because I agree with the rest of what the Prime Minister said. Any reasonable person who looks at what he said—a lot of reasonable people in the Province looked at it and decided in the end to vote yes during the referendum campaign—would judge that decommissioning had to take place before prisoners were released. That is absolute fact. If that is not conceded in the legislation, the people of Northern Ireland will have been ratted upon.

Mr. Ingram: I am sorry that the hon. Gentleman is being so offensive about the Prime Minister, who made such a—

Mr. Deputy Speaker (Mr. Michael J. Martin): Order. I remind the hon. Member for Bracknell (Mr. MacKay) that we should always use temperate language in the House.

Mr. MacKay: I will withdraw the words "ratted upon" and say misled.

Mr. Ingram: The hon. Gentleman is merely finding another way of being offensive. Clearly, that has been the whole import of what he has been saying. We have a bipartisan approach and we are trying to move forward. The hon. Gentleman is now saying that the Prime Minister has misled the House and the people of Northern Ireland, while at the same time saying that he welcomes the agreement and recognises the major contribution that the Prime Minister made in bringing it about and getting that tremendous vote on 22 May. Can the hon. Gentleman get his act together? Can he begin to think clearly whether he wants to compliment the Prime Minister or to insult him?

Mr. MacKay: I am not saying that the Prime Minister misled the House, if the legislation is corrected. I am assuming that the Prime Minister acted in good faith and was saying what would be in the legislation; but it is not in the legislation, and unless the legislation is amended, people will assume that the right hon. Gentleman has misled the House. I am asking the Minister to ensure that that provision is in the legislation—then there will be no problems whatever.

Mr. Ingram: Perhaps I should have taken longer for my winding-up speech, if that had been permitted; because of those interventions, I will not now have time to cover all the points made.

[Mr. Ingram]

I shall deal with the point made by the hon. Member for Bracknell about the Prime Minister's assurances and what is reflected in the legislation. Clause 3(9), which must of course be considered with all the other factors that have to come into play, states:

"In applying subsection (8)(b) the Secretary of State shall in particular take into account whether an organisation—

(a) is committed to the use now and in the future of only democratic and peaceful means to achieve its objectives;

(b) has ceased to be involved in any acts of violence or of preparation for violence;

(c) is directing or promoting acts of violence committed by other organisations;

(d) is co-operating fully with any Commission of the kind referred to in section 7 of the Northern Ireland Arms Decommissioning Act 1997."

Those are four clear factors, which the Secretary of State will take into account and which are wholly consistent with what the Prime Minister said in the House and to the people of Northern Ireland. I hope that when the hon. Member for Bracknell leaves the Chamber he will reflect on those—he probably will not correct his thoughts at this point in time. He has complimented the Prime Minister in the past and he should compliment him again for ensuring that those factors are in the legislation. They are important and they will have to be taken into account.

The transfer of prisoners from England—not from the mainland as the hon. Member for Bracknell said—to the Republic of Ireland is another critical area that has been mentioned. Repatriation of such prisoners was agreed on the basis that the Republic would continue to enforce their sentences. The hon. Gentleman and others referred to a particular prisoner, Magee, who would normally expect to serve a period similar to that which he could have expected to serve in England.

Under the Belfast agreement, both Governments agreed to introduce mechanisms for the early release of prisoners—the agreement that the hon. Gentleman says he supports. The sentences of those prisoners repatriated to the Republic of Ireland may therefore be reviewed under the terms of the agreement. That is a clear reading of the agreement. It cannot be interpreted in any other way. It is a matter for the Republic of Ireland how it implements its aspect of the agreement, in the same way as it is a matter for the House how we implement ours. My understanding is that legislation will not be required in the Republic, but that is a matter for its jurisdiction.

Many other points need to be dealt with, and I am sure that we will do that in Committee.

Question put, That the Bill be now read a Second time:—

The House divided: Ayes 343, Noes 10.

Division No. 299] [9.59 pm

AYES

Abbott, Ms Diane
Ainger, Nick
Ainsworth, Peter (E Surrey)
Ainsworth, Robert (Cov'try NE)
Allan, Richard
Allen, Graham
Ancram, Rt Hon Michael
Anderson, Donald (Swansea E)
Arbuthnot, James
Armstrong, Ms Hilary
Ashton, Joe
Atkins, Charlotte
Baker, Norman
Ballard, Jackie
Barron, Kevin Battle, John
Bayley, Hugh
Beard, Nigel
Beckett, Rt Hon Mrs Margaret
Bell, Martin (Tatton)
Bennett, Andrew F
Berry, Roger
Betts, Clive
Blair, Rt Hon Tony
Blizzard, Bob
Boateng, Paul
Borrow, David
Boswell, Tim
Bottomley, Peter (Worthing W)
Bottomley, Rt Hon Mrs Virginia
Bradley, Keith (Withington)
Brooke, Rt Hon Peter
Brown, Rt Hon Nick (Newcastle E)
Brown, Russell (Dumfries)
Browne, Desmond
Burgon, Colin
Burnett, John
Burns, Simon
Butler, Mrs Christine
Byers, Stephen
Cabom, Richard
Campbell, Ronnie (Blyth V)
Campbell-Savours, Dale
Canavan, Dennis
Caplin, Ivor
Caton, Martin
Chapman, Ben (Wirral S)
Chaytor, David
Chisholm, Malcolm
Chope, Christopher
Clappison, James
Clark, Rt Hon Dr David (S Shields)
Clark, Paul (Gillingham)
Clarke, Rt Hon Kenneth (Rushcliffe)
Clarke, Tony (Northampton S)
Clwyd, Ann
Coaker, Vernon
Coffey, Ms Ann
Cohen, Harry
Collins, Tim
Colman, Tony
Corbett, Robin
Corbyn, Jeremy
Corston, Ms Jean
Cotter, Brian
Cox, Tom
Cran, James
Crausby, David
Cryer, Mrs Ann (Keighley)
Cryer, John (Hornchurch)
Cummings, John
Cunliffe, Lawrence
Cunningham, Jim (Cov'try S)
Curtis-Thomas, Mrs Claire
Dalyell, Tam
Darling, Rt Hon Alistair
Darvill, Keith
Davey, Edward (Kingston)
Davidson, Ian
Davies, Rt Hon Denzil (Llanelli)
Davies, Geraint (Croydon C)
Davies, Quentin (Grantham)
Davies, Rt Hon Ron (Caerphilly)
Davis, Terry (B'ham Hodge H)
Dawson, Hilton
Dean, Mrs Janet
Denham, John
Dismore, Andrew
Dobson, Rt Hon Frank
Doran, Frank
Dorrell, Rt Hon Stephen
Dowd, Jim
Drew, David
Duncan Smith, Iain
Eagle, Maria (L'pool Garston)
Edwards, Huw
Efford, Clive
Ellman, Mrs Louise
Ennis, Jeff
Etherington, Bill
Evans, Nigel
Field, Rt Hon Frank
Fisher, Mark
Fitzpatrick, Jim
Fitzsimons, Lorna
Flint, Caroline
Flynn, Paul
Foster, Michael Jabez (Hastings)
Foster, Michael J (Worcester)
Fowler, Rt Hon Sir Norman
Fox, Dr Liam
Fyfe, Maria
Gapes, Mike
Garnier, Edward
George, Andrew (St Ives)
George, Bruce (Walsall S)
Gerrard, Neil
Gibson, Dr Ian
Gilroy, Mrs Linda
Godman, Dr Norman A
Godsiff, Roger Goggins, Paul
Golding, Mrs Llin
Gordon, Mrs Eileen
Gorrie, Donald
Grant, Bernie
Green, Damian
Greenway, John
Grieve, Dominic
Griffiths, Win (Bridgend)
Grocott, Bruce
Grogan, John
Gunnell, John
Hague, Rt Hon William
Hain, Peter
Hall, Patrick (Bedford)
Hamilton, Fabian (Leeds NE)
Hammond, Philip
Hanson, David
Harris, Dr Evan
Hayes, John
Heal, Mrs Sylvia
Heald, Oliver
Healey, John
Heath, David (Somerton & Frome)
Heppell, John
Hesford, Stephen
Hinchliffe, David
Hoey, Kate
Hogg, Rt Hon Douglas
Home Robertson, John
Hoon, Geoffrey
Hope, Phil
Hopkins, Kelvin
Hughes, Ms Beverley (Stretford)
Hughes, Kevin (Doncaster N)
Humble, Mrs Joan
Hurst, Alan
Hutton, John
Iddon, Dr Brian
Illsley, Eric
Ingram, Adam
Jackson, Ms Glenda (Hampstead)
Jackson, Helen (Hillsborough)
Jamieson, David
Jenkin, Bernard
Jenkins, Brian

Johnson, Alan (Hull W & Hessle)
Johnson, Miss Melanie (Welwyn Hatfield)
Jones, Barry (Alyn & Deeside)
Jones, Mrs Fiona (Newark)
Jones, Ieuan Wyn (Ynys Môn)
Jones, Dr Lynne (Selly Oak)
Jowell, Ms Tessa
Keeble, Ms Sally
Keen, Ann (Brentford & Isleworth)
Kemp, Fraser
Kennedy, Jane (Wavertree)
Key, Robert
Kilfoyle, Peter
King, Ms Oona (Bethnal Green)
King, Rt Hon Tom (Bridgwater)
Kirkbride, Miss Julie
Kumar, Dr Ashok
Ladyman, Dr Stephen
Laing, Mrs Eleanor
Lansley, Andrew
Lawrence, Ms Jackie
Laxton, Bob
Lepper, David
Leslie, Christopher
Letwin, Oliver
Lewis, Ivan (Bury S)
Lewis, Terry (Worsley)
Liddell, Mrs Helen
Lidington, David
Livingstone, Ken
Llwyd, Elfyn
Love, Andrew
Luff, Peter
McAllion, John
McAvoy, Thomas
McCartney, Ian (Makerfield)
McDonagh, Siobhain
McDonnell, John
McFall, John
McGrady, Eddie
McGuire, Mrs Anne
McIsaac, Shona
MacKay, Andrew
Mackinlay, Andrew
McLoughlin, Patrick
McNamara, Kevin
McNulty, Tony
McWalter, Tony
McWilliam, John
Madel, Sir David
Mahon, Mrs Alice
Mallaber, Judy
Mallon, Seamus
Mandelson, Peter
Maples, John
Marek, Dr John
Marshall, Jim (Leicester S)
Maude, Rt Hon Francis
Maxton, John
May, Mrs Theresa
Meacher, Rt Hon Michael
Meale, Alan
Merron, Gillian
Michael, Alun
Michie, Bill (Sheff'ld Heeley)
Milburn, Alan
Mitchell, Austin
Moffatt, Laura
Moonie, Dr Lewis
Moran, Ms Margaret
Morgan, Rhodri (Cardiff W)
Morley, Elliot
Morris, Ms Estelle (B'ham Yardley)
Moss, Malcolm
Mowlam, Rt Hon Marjorie
Mudie, George
Mullin, Chris
Murphy, Denis (Wansbeck)
Murphy, Paul (Torfaen)
Nicholls, Patrick
Oaten, Mark
O'Brien, Bill (Normanton)
O'Brien, Mike (N Warks)
Olner, Bill
Paice, James
Palmer, Dr Nick
Pearson, Ian
Perham, Ms Linda
Pickthall, Colin
Pike, Peter L
Plaskitt, James
Pond, Chris
Prentice, Ms Bridget (Lewisham E)
Prescott, Rt Hon John
Primarolo, Dawn
Prosser, Gwyn
Purchase, Ken
Quin, Ms Joyce
Quinn, Lawrie
Rammell, Bill
Raynsford, Nick
Redwood, Rt Hon John
Reed, Andrew (Loughborough)
Robinson, Geoffrey (Cov'try NW)
Rogers, Allan
Rooker, Jeff
Rooney, Terry
Rowlands, Ted
Ruane, Chris
Ruddock, Ms Joan
Russell, Bob (Colchester)
Ryan, Ms Joan
Salter, Martin
Savidge, Malcolm
Sedgemore, Brian
Shaw, Jonathan
Sheldon, Rt Hon Robert
Shephard, Rt Hon Mrs Gillian
Simpson, Alan (Nottingham S)
Simpson, Keith (Mid–Norfolk)
Singh, Marsha
Skinner, Dennis
Smith, Angela (Basildon)
Smith, Rt Hon Chris (Islington S)
Smith, Miss Geraldine (Morecambe & Lunesdale)
Smith, John (Glamorgan)
Smith, Llew (Blaenau Gwent)
Smith, Sir Robert (W Ab'd'ns)
Snape, Peter
Soley, Clive
Southworth, Ms Helen
Spellar, John
Spelman, Mrs Caroline
Spring, Richard
Squire, Ms Rachel
Stevenson, George
Stewart, Ian (Eccles)
Stinchcombe, Paul
Stoate, Dr Howard
Stott, Roger
Stringer, Graham
Sutcliffe, Gerry
Taylor, Rt Hon Mrs Ann (Dewsbury)
Taylor, Ms Dari (Stockton S)
Taylor, John M (Solihull)
Thomas, Gareth (Clwyd W)
Thomas, Gareth R (Harrow W)
Timms, Stephen
Tipping, Paddy
Tonge, Dr Jenny
Touhig, Don
Trend, Michael Turner, Dennis (Wolverh'ton SE)
Twigg, Derek (Halton)
Twigg, Stephen (Enfield)
Vis, Dr Rudi
Ward, Ms Claire
Watts, David
Whitehead, Dr Alan
Whittingdale, John
Widdecombe, Rt Hon Miss Ann
Willetts, David
Williams, Rt Hon Alan (Swansea W)
Williams, Alan W (E Carmarthen)
Williams, Mrs Betty (Conwy)
Willis, Phil
Winnick, David
Winterton, Ms Rosie (Doncaster C)
Wise, Audrey
Wood, Mike
Woolas, Phil
Worthington, Tony Wright, Anthony D (Gt Yarmouth)
Wyatt, Derek
Yeo, Tim
Young, Rt Hon Sir George

Tellers for the Ayes:
Janet Anderson and
Mr. Greg Pope.

NOES

Donaldson, Jeffrey
Flight, Howard
McCartney, Robert (N Down)
Paisley, Rev Ian
Robertson, Laurence (Tewk'b'ry)
Robinson, Peter (Belfast E)
Ross, William (E Lond'y)
Thompson, William
Trimble, Rt Hon David
Winterton, Nicholas (Macclesfield)

Tellers for the Noes:
Mr. John D. Taylor and
Rev. Martin Smyth.

Question accordingly agreed to.

Bill read a Second time.

Motion made, and Question put forthwith, pursuant to Standing Order No. 63 (Committal of Bills),

That the Bill be committed to a Committee of the whole House.—[Jane Kennedy.]

Question agreed to.

Committee tomorrow.

NORTHERN IRELAND (SENTENCES) BILL
[MONEY]

Queen's recommendation having been signified—

Motion made, and Question put forthwith, pursuant to Standing Order No. 52(1)(a),

That, for the purposes of any Act resulting from the Northern Ireland (Sentences) Bill, it is expedient to authorise the payment out of money provided by Parliament of any expenditure incurred by the Secretary of State by virtue of the Act.—[Jane Kennedy.]

Question agreed to.

Grantham Hospital

Motion made, and Question proposed, That this House do now adjourn.—[Jane Kennedy.]

10.14 pm

Mr. Quentin Davies (Grantham and Stamford): I am grateful for the opportunity to take up in the House a matter of vital importance to my constituents. Grantham hospital is a successful general hospital with a wide range of activities, including obstetrics and gynaecology, which are presided over by three consultants. The hospital has benefited a great deal from expansion and investment over the past 20 years of Conservative government—the last party political point I will make this evening.

Grantham hospital has depended for its maternity and obstetric service on paediatric support delivered, on contract, from Queens Medical Centre in Nottingham. That support includes the necessary neonatal cover to enable obstetricians to practise in the full confidence that they will be able to resuscitate when necessary and deal with difficult cases.

All that has now been put at risk. I have it at first hand from Queens Medical Centre that it would have been perfectly happy to continue with its contract, but that contract conflicted with the ambition of Lincolnshire Health to set up an ambulatory paediatric system throughout Lincolnshire, to be based at Lincoln county hospital. It was to be made answerable to consultants based in Lincoln and Boston, and the expectation was that in-patient paediatric cases would be referred to Lincoln county hospital; so Lincolnshire Health made it plain to Queens that it could no longer expect to supply in-patient and out-patient paediatric services. Queens Medical Centre therefore gave notice that it could not continue to provide the necessary neonatal cover. There is thus the prospect of an end to all maternity services and all deliveries in Grantham hospital.

I emphasise this history because it is important to appreciate that, if there is a crisis, it has been created by Lincolnshire Health. If we are seeking solutions, they are solutions to problems gratuitously caused by Lincolnshire Health.

At the end of last year, Lincolnshire Health produced a draft consultation document setting out one preferred option and three others that were dismissed in the same document. The community health council rightly objected to that method of proceeding; I am delighted to acknowledge that the Government shared the council's view. Lincolnshire Health was ordered to produce a genuinely open consultation document, to ensure that the options were considered dispassionately and professionally. Lincolnshire Health was also required to give a commitment to conduct a survey of opinion among women in the area covered by Grantham hospital.

It is my contention—I have no doubt that that contention will be 100 per cent. vindicated by the document discovery process that will be launched when we have a judicial review, which I trust we will now have, given that the community health council has requested one—that, first, the survey that was carried out has been blatantly ignored by Lincolnshire Health and simply thrown into the wastepaper basket; and, secondly, far from carrying out the genuine consultation exercise promised by Lincolnshire Health, the whole process has been made a mockery. On both commitments—to have a survey to take account of local opinion and to carry out a proper consultation process—Lincolnshire Health has acted in bad faith and has deceived both the Government and the public.

Since February, the survey has been undertaken, and 95 per cent. of respondents expressed their wish that the status quo should continue. The overwhelming majority of those who were asked what they would like to happen if the status quo could not continue chose option 3, which is the availability in Grantham hospital of maternity services under midwife supervision. However, Lincolnshire Health continues to be committed absolutely to option 2, which is the abolition of all maternity services in Grantham hospital, so that no deliveries could take place there.

Another event that has taken place since February is that, as a result of discussions between Grantham hospital and Leicester royal infirmary an agreement has been reached in principle under which Leicester royal infirmary would be prepared to supply the consultant cover that Queens Medical Centre is now reluctantly withdrawing. That would enable a proper consultant-led neonatal facility to be re-established in Grantham hospital and so enable a full range of obstetric and gynaecological services to continue there. I quote a letter, dated 21 April 1998, from the acting chief executive of Leicester royal infirmary, David Sissling, who writes:

"We would be very interested in working in partnership with Grantham and District hospital in respect of obstetric services."

Notwithstanding the results of the survey, the commitment from Leicester royal infirmary, or the undertakings publicly given by Lincolnshire Health at the beginning of the year, a meeting of the health authority was held on 28 May in Sleaford—not in Grantham, whose population has a particular interest, although Sleaford people use Grantham's maternity services as well; incidentally, I am delighted to see my right hon. and learned Friend the Member for Sleaford and North Hykeham (Mr. Hogg) in the Chamber this evening. I was present in the audience throughout the period in which the public were admitted to the meeting, but I have never in my life seen such a mockery made of a meeting of a publicly accountable authority.

The executive of Lincolnshire Health who made the presentation focused entirely on option 2, which would remove all possibility of any deliveries taking place in Grantham hospital; she almost entirely ignored the other options, except to dismiss them, and said nothing whatever about the offer from Leicester royal infirmary.

Mr. John Hayes (South Holland and The Deepings): It has to be said that holding a shambles of a public meeting was the pattern established throughout Lincolnshire and in every town in Lincolnshire during the consultation on the reorganisation.

Mr. Davies: I am grateful to my hon. Friend, whose comment reinforces the serious concern that we in Lincolnshire all feel about the conduct of our health authority in recent times.

To return to the meeting of 28 May, what was even more surprising than the fact that the executive charged with giving the board an objective assessment of the merits and demerits of each proposal should have concentrated on only one proposal was that, when the non-executive members of the board expressed their view that they were inclined to go for option 3—the midwife option—the Lincolnshire Health executive told them that it was too late, because the decision had already been taken and, even more scandalous, public money had already been expended on building and construction work at Lincoln county hospital on the assumption that option 2 would be selected. A complete mockery was made of the procedures. It is an extremely serious state of affairs, not merely for Lincolnshire, but for the country as a whole, that a public authority should conduct itself in such a fashion.

The closing of maternity facilities in Grantham hospital will be an unmitigated disaster for mothers, families and prospective mothers in Grantham and the surrounding villages, Sleaford, Newark and the other towns—about 100,000 people in all, who have been so well looked after by Grantham hospital over the years. It would mean an hour's travel on bad roads to get to a hospital where a delivery could take place.

It is all too easy to foresee the perils and tragedies that could ensue. There is the danger of babies being delivered in ambulances or passenger motor cars—as the Minister knows, most women are driven privately to hospital when they have babies, rather than transported in ambulances. There is the danger of mothers suffering haemorrhages and dying in a car or an ambulance on the way to one of the general hospitals an hour away. That is an appalling prospect, and a hideous responsibility would descend on the shoulders of anyone who connived at or accepted such a proposal.

There are other considerations of less enormous human significance, but nevertheless important ones. As we all know, mothers who are about to deliver often have premature symptoms. If the hospital is close to their home, they can be sent home and told to come back the next day if symptoms continue, or to return later. If they live an hour away on a bad road, they will presumably have to be kept in hospital overnight, and possibly for one or two nights before they deliver.

National health beds will thereby be occupied unnecessarily and expensively, and there will be considerable disruption to the families concerned. In its decision, Lincolnshire Health has taken no account of such incremental national health costs, or of the incremental ambulance costs that will be caused by the proposals.

A further consequence of the decision will be to weaken Grantham hospital, and perhaps fatally to emasculate it. If not only obstetrics but gynaecology are withdrawn, that may undermine the viability of the accident and emergency department, because no gynaecological facilities will be available as a back-up. If we lost accident and emergency, apart from the obvious danger to people's health and lives, it would be impossible for us to retain critical care beds in Grantham. If we had no critical care beds, I doubt whether surgeons would be prepared to undertake major or abdominal surgery in Grantham hospital.

By an inexorable clinical logic, that scenario leads to the closure of Grantham as a general hospital. There is a corresponding financial logic that leads in the same direction. We all know that hospitals have a high operational gearing and that fixed costs are a high proportion of total costs. If some facilities are withdrawn—Lincolnshire Health proposes to withdraw at a stroke paediatrics, gynaecology and obstetrics—that undermines the financial viability of what remains. Again, the path leads inexorably to the closure of Grantham as a general hospital.

[Mr. Davies]

The lives and health of mothers and potentially of babies are at stake. Also at stake is the confidence of the British people in the integrity of our institutions and the procedures that have been established for taking public decisions of this kind. The conduct of Lincolnshire Health over the past few weeks is an affront to every principle of sound administrative procedure, and to every principle on which a public authority should be based. It makes a mockery of the concept of fiduciary responsibility, on which health authorities were originally established.

10.29 pm

Mr. Douglas Hogg (Sleaford and North Hykeham): I know that the House wishes to hear the Government's response, so I shall be brief. I congratulate my hon. Friend the Member for Grantham and Stamford (Mr. Davies) on securing this Adjournment debate and I endorse everything that he said. My constituents who use Grantham hospital view the proposals of Lincolnshire Health with great concern. They believe—as do many hon. Members and I—that it is important that Grantham hospital retains a consultant-led paediatric and obstetric service. Lincolnshire Health's proposals do not make provision for that and, accordingly, they are objectionable.

I know that the community health council is making a formal legal objection, so the matter will come before the Secretary of State, who will be responsible for the ultimate decision. The hon. Member for Newark (Mrs. Jones) and I have met the Secretary of State to discuss the matter and we shall continue to press him. We believe that he should rule that Lincolnshire Health's proposals are unacceptable and should be rejected. He should insist on the retention of Grantham hospital as a fully fledged district general hospital, preserving, in particular, a consultant-led paediatric and obstetric service.

10.30 pm

Mrs. Fiona Jones (Newark): I do not think that there is any disagreement between the hon. Member for Grantham and Stamford (Mr. Davies), the right hon. and learned Member for Sleaford and North Hykeham (Mr. Hogg) and myself. Many women in my constituency go to Grantham and District hospital to have their babies. A maternity unit at Newark closed in the 1980s, and the women of my constituency were assured that they could have their babies at Grantham hospital, which involves a journey of 15 minutes. The closure of Grantham hospital will distance the health service from my constituents and it will mean that women must travel for almost an hour to either the Lincoln county hospital or to hospitals in Nottingham to have their babies. I have had babies in recent years, and I believe that that is totally unacceptable. People should be able to access local hospitals that are situated within a reasonable distance.

I am unhappy about Lincolnshire Health's proposals. They assume that, if Grantham and District hospital cannot deliver babies utilising a consultant-led service, all women will go to the hospital at Lincoln. That logic is fundamentally flawed because many women will opt to go to hospitals in Nottingham. Therefore, Lincolnshire Health will lose many clients—if that is the current terminology.

I am also extremely unhappy about the position adopted by the royal college. The Lincolnshire Health review is about finance, but the closure of maternity services at Grantham hospital is more about the position of the Royal College of Paediatricians. I accept entirely that paediatrics is a shrinking service, but I do not accept that, because members of the Royal College of Paediatricians find it inconvenient to train at a smaller hospital such as Grantham, my constituents must distance themselves from a service that they need. The Government must consider that issue: the Royal College of Paediatricians has decided that it does not want to train its paediatricians at local hospitals, so we cannot have consultant-led units at smaller hospitals and women cannot have their babies at local hospitals in rural areas. That is totally unacceptable.

10.34 pm

The Minister for Public Health (Ms Tessa Jowell): I begin by congratulating the hon. Member for Grantham and Stamford (Mr. Davies) on securing an Adjournment debate on Grantham and District hospital. My ministerial colleagues and I are well aware of the concerns that exist locally about the current and future level of health services provided by the hospital.

The hon. Gentleman has made known his concerns about Lincolnshire Health's proposals for Grantham hospital through meetings and correspondence with Ministers, as he has said. I acknowledge his efforts and those of other hon. Members, including my hon. Friend the Member for Newark (Mrs. Jones), in bringing together key local people in a constructive attempt to resolve the concerns about the level of services provided at Grantham and District hospital.

I am aware that the key issue that has prompted the hon. Gentleman to call for this debate is the decision taken by Lincolnshire Health at the end of May, in line with its consultation document, that with effect from 1 August Grantham and District hospital should provide only antenatal and post-natal out-patient care and day-care gynaecology, with consultant and midwife care being provided by other hospitals.

I know that this has caused concern in the Grantham area, and that that concern has been expressed specifically by the South Lincolnshire community health council. I am also aware that the Royal College of Midwives has criticised the consultation process that Lincolnshire Health has followed. I shall return to the consultation process later. The health authority wishes to keep discussion open following this decision. The door is not closed. I reiterate, the door is not closed.

I shall say a little about Grantham and District hospital before moving on to the health authority's current proposals and maternity services in general.

Mr. Quentin Davies: The Minister says that the door is not closed, but Lincolnshire Health took a formal decision on 28 May. The community health council, equally formally, has objected to it. The door is indeed not closed; it is open to Ministers to reverse the decision taken by the health authority and to introduce some sanity into the provision of health care in south Lincolnshire. I hope that the hon. Lady and her colleagues will live up to those important responsibilities.

Ms Jowell: I am well aware of the stage that decisions have reached. I am aware also that further options are still being considered. I hope that the hon. Gentleman, in the spirit of his great concern about the issue, will make his contribution to the continuing discussions with the health authority.

I shall say a little about Grantham and District hospital before going on to the health authority's current proposals and maternity services in general. Sadly, for most people outside the local area, Grantham and District hospital will always be associated with the evil actions of Beverly Allitt during 1991. Locally, the hospital is held in high regard. It is a real testament to the comment, dedication and professionalism of the hospital's staff that that is the case. This is illustrated by the concern shown about Lincolnshire Health's proposals to change the services provided at the hospital, obstetrics and gynaecology being the matter of the debate. Concern has been shown locally in the press and in correspondence and representations to Ministers.

After the dreadful events of the Allitt case, paediatric services at Grantham were provided on a satellite basis by the Queens Medical Centre in Nottingham. Last year, the Queens Medical Centre made it known to Lincolnshire Health that it intended to withdraw from providing in-patient paediatric services because of concerns about clinical safety.

That decision was based on clinical isssues. Difficulties in recruiting consultant paediatricians to run the service were being experienced. That meant that standards of support for junior doctor training were not being met. The effectiveness of the service depends on the clinical skills of staff and on the trust's ability to recruit staff of the highest calibre. It also depends on a sufficient number of patients and variety of cases to allow staff to maintain and develop their skills. Those were all issues which could not be solved in relation to paediatric services at Grantham.

I understand, via public consultation, that the public and the CHC supported the health authority's decision to provide the majority of children's services from within Lincolnshire with an ambulatory service at Grantham hospital. The clinical implications of that development and its consequences for the obstetric and gynaecology services are clear. Without 24-hour paediatric cover seven days a week, the safe delivery of high-risk babies is unsustainable and clinically unsafe.

I fully understand that any proposal to change the services in a hospital causes concern. In this case, it is important to understand that the proposals are being made on grounds of clinical safety and, as my hon. Friend the Member for Newark made clear, not on grounds of finance.

Mrs. Fiona Jones: It is important to define a high-risk birth. A first birth is a high-risk birth. Therefore, any woman in my area who is having her first baby could not use a unit that is not consultant led.

Ms Jowell: A high-risk birth is determined clinically and defined within clinical guidelines. I agree with the point behind my hon. Friend's intervention. The circumstances of hospitals that serve rural communities are an important issue in relation to this set of decisions. It is important that hospitals in rural areas can meet tests of accessibility, clinical safety and the confidence of the communities that they serve. Scattered rural communities present different issues compared with densely populated urban centres.

As time is short, I reassure the hon. Member for Grantham and Stamford, and other hon. Members who have shown so much concern about the issue, that the decision-making process is continuing. The need for safe, clinically effective and efficient services throughout the county must underpin the review of services in Lincolnshire. Those factors will be of paramount importance in making decisions about obstetric and gynaecology services in Grantham.

Significant investment has been made by the health authority in paramedic obstetric training, with 36 staff receiving additional training in the last year to accommodate the needs of a service which is divided between two or more hospitals. That is an essential part of developing support for high-risk delivery.

As the hon. Gentleman made clear, the CHC is seeking judicial review. I hope that it will not pursue that course, and that it will be possible to resolve the matter locally. I reiterate that the decision-making process is still open. If the matter cannot be resolved locally, the decision will fall to Ministers.

Question put and agreed to.

Adjourned accordingly at sixteen minutes to Eleven o'clock.

House of Commons

Thursday 11 June 1998

The House met at half-past Two o'clock

PRAYERS

[MADAM SPEAKER in the Chair]

LLOYDS TSB BILL [LORDS](By Order)

Order for Third Reading read.

To be read the Third time on Thursday 18 June.

Oral Answers to Questions

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

The Secretary of State was asked—

Ethnic Minorities

1. Ms Helen Southworth (Warrington, South): How he intends to ensure that people from ethnic minorities have equal access to the new deal. [43751]

The Minister for Employment, Welfare to Work and Equal Opportunities (Mr. Andrew Smith): Ethnic minorities will, of course, have the same entitlements as anyone else to all aspects of the new deal. For the first time in employment programmes, we have brought in ethnic monitoring, and we are working closely with ethnic minority groups and businesses. Trained personal advisers will help to tackle both barriers to employment and the discrimination that ethnic minorities face. A key priority of the new deal is to ensure full and fair opportunities for people, whatever their ethnic origin. As there are still appallingly high levels of unemployment among black and Asian people, that help is long overdue.

Ms Southworth: Does the Minister welcome the fact that three black organisations have joined up to provide gateway services? Does he agree that every local new deal partnership has a responsibility to be a true, rather than just a paper, partnership that is inclusive of all members of the local community so that people from minority ethnic organisations can have equal access to the opportunities of the new deal, and a real step forward into employment?

Mr. Smith: I agree with my hon. Friend's two good points. We are encouraging ethnic minority community groups and businesses to be involved at all levels of the new deal, and we are acting on their advice. A six-monthly review of the effectiveness of local partnerships in involving representatives of local ethnic minority communities will ensure that the new deal is reaching those clients.

Independent-Maintained School Partnerships

2. Mr. Nick St. Aubyn (Guildford): What responses he has received during the period of consultation before his Department issues regulations governing partnership between local education authorities and independent schools. [43752]

The Minister for School Standards (Mr. Stephen Byers): We intend to begin consultation on draft regulations once the School Standards and Framework Bill receives Royal Assent.

Mr. St. Aubyn: Given that the Minister has demanded that Surrey council spends an additional 5 per cent. on education this year, while the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions has cut Surrey's funding by 1 per cent., how does he expect Surrey to meet his desire when its efforts to do so in partnership with independent schools are being hamstrung by delays caused by his own Department?

Mr. Byers: No delays are being caused by my Department. I wrote to the hon. Gentleman on 22 March and 12 May to ask for details of the scheme that is being promoted by Surrey. I regret that he has not replied to those letters or supplied me with details of the scheme. Perhaps he knows full well that Surrey's proposals have met almost universal opposition from schools in Surrey. The message to Conservative councillors in Surrey is that they should give priority to education in the county's own schools, as the Labour Government do. Those schools should be given every pound that the Government have provided to Surrey.

Mr. Dale Campbell-Savours (Workington): Who benefits from partnerships, and how?

Mr. Byers: There is the possibility, in a positive sense, to have partnerships between the independent sector and the maintained sector in a way that actually builds bridges for the benefit of all children. What the Government are not prepared to see is the sort of scheme being promoted by some authorities which seek to replace the assisted places scheme with a local variation that is not about building bridges but about reinforcing divisions. The Government believe that the time has come to put dogma to one side, and to have a school system that meets the needs of all our children, not just a few.

Class Sizes (Leicestershire)

3. Mr. Andrew Robathan (Blaby): If he will make a statement on primary school class sizes in Leicestershire. [43753]

The Secretary of State for Education and Employment (Mr. David Blunkett): In January this year, the average primary class size in Leicestershire was 26. Last year, it was 26.7. Currently, 21.7 per cent. of children are in classes of more than 30. Last year, the figure was 23.4 per cent.

Mr. Robathan: My figures show that the average primary class size has gone down by 0.06 of a pupil in one year. Even the Secretary of State would have to admit that it will take some time for that to work its way through to reduced class sizes. The children of most parents will have left primary school before there is any effect. What does the Secretary of State say to the 30 parents from Thistley Meadow school in Blaby who have written to me, some of whom voted Labour in the general election because they believed in Labour's pledge? When is a pledge an early pledge and when is it a late one? Was not the little card that I have with me, Labour's general election pledge card, a fraud perpetrated by new Labour on the parents of Leicestershire and the people of the United Kingdom?

Mr. Blunkett: Many more might have voted Labour if they had known that there would be a reduction of 0.7 per cent. in just one year [HON. MEMBERS: "0.06"] I am using the official figures. Leicestershire has received £291,000 and Leicester city £584,000 so that 4,100 children will be in smaller class sizes from September, with an extra 65 teachers.

Mr. Andrew Reed (Loughborough): I am sure that my right hon. Friend remembers visiting Sileby Highgate school in Leicestershire, at which I am a governor, in 1996. He will recall that all its class sizes were well over 30. That was under the previous Administration, so we do not need to take any lectures. Will he confirm what he told me in a written answer last July—that in Leicestershire the cost of the assisted places scheme for the 447 pupils who were benefiting from it was £1.49 million? Does he agree that that money is much better spent on reducing class sizes in Leicestershire schools, particularly Sileby Highgate?

Mr. Blunkett: I agree with my hon. Friend. That is why those who buy private education put tremendous emphasis on class sizes. It ill becomes Conservative Members to proclaim that they are in favour of smaller classes for the children of those who buy private education but to be against it for the children whom they should represent.

Mr. Don Foster (Bath): Does the Secretary of State realise that, to implement his Government's literacy scheme, teachers are required to create a maximum of five groups of six pupils? That is 30 for every class.

Madam Speaker: Order. The question relates specifically to Leicestershire.

Mr. Foster: I assure you, Madam Speaker, that this is very much about Leicestershire. I hope that the Secretary of State is aware that his literacy scheme requires five groups of six pupils. Given that he has no plans to reduce key stage 2 classes—

Madam Speaker: Order. I am sorry but the hon. Gentleman is not accepting my guidance. I am moving on. This is about Leicestershire.

Mr. Jim Marshall (Leicester, South): I hope it is, Madam Speaker, as I represent a Leicestershire seat. May I confirm what my right hon. Friend said about infant class sizes in the city of Leicester—that, because of the extra money that the city has received this year, there will be no infant class in excess of 30 from September this year? Does he accept that 10 per cent. of junior classes will be in excess of 30, however, and that one reason for that is that local heads and governors make the decisions on the distribution of class sizes? Will he signal his intention to offer guidance to heads and governors about the need to have smaller class sizes across the whole age group?

Mr. Blunkett: A prerequisite of the plans that will have to be submitted this autumn will be that reductions in class sizes will not have a knock-on effect for primary schooling as a whole. Leicester and Leicestershire will benefit from the £62 million that we have allocated for this year and from the 1,500 extra teachers. Some 100,000 children will gain from the investment that we are making nationally.

Mr. David Willetts (Havant): I am sure that the Secretary of State is familiar with the report of the Local Government Association, representing Leicestershire—and other parts of the country—on the devastating practical implications of the Government's class size pledge. Can the right hon. Gentleman assure parents in Leicestershire—and throughout the country—that there will be no reduction in parental choice and no increase in mixed-year teaching as a result of the Government's pledge?

Mr. Blunkett: We have made it absolutely clear that parental preference is a critical part of enabling people to make the right choice in sending their children to the nearest high-quality school. We have made no bones about the fact that, where there are mixed-age classes, the guidance of Ofsted and the standards unit should be followed in making them work. I find it difficult to answer the question coming from an hon. Member who has written and spoken condemning the argument about class size, suggesting,

"there is little evidence of any correlation between class size and educational achievements".

No wonder he wrote it in a book called "Why Vote Conservative?" He knows he has the answer in the words he used.

Schools (Bury)

5. Mr. Ivan Lewis (Bury, South): If he will make a statement on the (a) performance and (b) level of funding of Bury's schools. [43755]

The Minister for School Standards (Mr. Stephen Byers): Key indicators show that the performance of Bury's schools is above the England average. The level of Bury's standard spending assessment in 1998–99 was £67.8 million—an increase of 6.4 per cent. on the figure for 1997–98. That amounts to an extra £109 for every primary pupil and an extra £127 for every secondary pupil.

Mr. Lewis: I thank my hon. Friend for that response. Is he aware that, before and during the election, my hon. Friends and I promised people that five, six and seven-year-olds would be taught in classes of 30 and under by about 2001, which will be towards the end of the first term of the Labour Government? Is he further aware that from September 1998, 95 per cent. of five, six and seven-year-olds in Bury will be taught in classes of 30 and under?

Mr. Byers: I offer my congratulations to those schools in Bury and the teachers responsible for the good standards that are now being achieved. I compliment my hon. Friend and his colleague my hon. Friend the Member for Bury, North (Mr. Chaytor), who have been great champions of the school system there. I am delighted to confirm that we pledged that, by the end of this Parliament, there would be no five, six or seven-year-olds in a class of 30 or more. I am delighted that, in September of this year, 3,500 fewer five, six and seven-year-olds in Bury will be in classes of more than 30. I am confident that, with that targeted support, Bury will be able to do even better for its children than it is doing now.

School Exclusions

6. Mr. Chris Mullin (Sunderland, South): What advice he has given to local education authorities regarding school exclusions and the making of alternative arrangements for the education of children who are excluded; and if he will make a statement. [43757]

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Education and Employment (Ms Estelle Morris): We have recently issued brief interim guidance on the changes to the law that come into force in September 1998. We are also preparing a new package of guidance on a range of exclusion issues that will reflect the recommendations of the truancy and school exclusion report.

Mr. Mullin: Is my hon. Friend aware that, in many parts of the country, there is little or no provision for excluded school children? I am aware of a couple of cases in my constituency where children as young as 10 or 11 are left hanging around the streets for much of the day. Does my hon. Friend agree that if we allow the problem to continue, we will store up a big difficulty for ourselves in future? Will she tell us what plans we have to address this problem?

Ms Morris: My hon. Friend is right: sadly, children who are excluded from school are often those who need the most help and more education to raise standards, but they are excluded from any educational provision. It is not only in my hon. Friend's constituency that excluded children receive no education; it is a pattern that we found throughout the country when we took office a year ago. That is why we have already made a firm commitment, coming out of the school exclusion report, that children excluded for more than three weeks will have a right to full-time and appropriate education. That will be phased in when resources allow; the resources will be there and we intend that implementation should take no longer than three years in every local education authority throughout the country.

Mr. Tony Baldry (Banbury): Most parents, teachers and governors are concerned not about school exclusions but about when the Labour Government are going to deliver on the pledge they made at the general election to reduce class sizes. Class sizes in Bury might be going down, simply because there is substantially—

Madam Speaker: Order. The question is not about class sizes.

Mr. Baldry: No, Madam Speaker; it is about school exclusions. The Government are making a lot of what they are doing about exclusions, but my point is that people in Oxfordshire are not coming up to me and expressing their concern about exclusions of children in Oxfordshire. They are concerned about when the Government are going to deliver on their policy and pledge to reduce class sizes—

Madam Speaker: Order. Thank you very much.

Universities (Access)

7. Mr. Barry Sheerman (Huddersfield): What assistance he proposes to give to those universities that wish to increase the numbers of students from mainstream comprehensives. [43760]

The Secretary of State for Education and Employment (Mr. David Blunkett): From this autumn, we are doubling access funds and, from September, universities will be able to use a proportion of those funds to provide support and help for new access, and not merely for hardship among those who are already at university. We are also working with the university sector as a whole to link individual universities with schools and their communities, so that pupils can experience university life well in advance of deciding from the options available.

Mr. Sheerman: That is quite a good answer, but my right hon. Friend could do better. We need to acknowledge the seriousness of the fact that the best universities for teaching and research are dominated by entrants from the private sector, from the best grammar schools, from comprehensives in affluent areas of the country and from sixth-form colleges. In the top 40 to 50 universities, the continued exclusion of students from average comprehensives who get three As at A-level is a national tragedy and a scandal. Will my right hon. Friend put the profile on the matter and make it a top priority to get something done about it?

Mr. Blunkett: I shall try to do better, and will do so by following what we are already doing, which is holding detailed meetings with the university sector and the Higher Education Funding Council to achieve precisely what my hon. Friend rightly wants. It is true that in the West Riding of Yorkshire, in which his constituency used to be incorporated, more students from comprehensive schools went to Oxford and Cambridge in the days of Alec Clegg than do so now. The way to achieve a real transformation is not only to increase expectations and get the universities to be more embracing in their admissions policy but to transform the standard of education in schools so that every child has that chance.

Sir Sydney Chapman (Chipping Barnet): Is it the right hon. Gentleman's view that more students will go to university from mainstream comprehensives as a result of the introduction of tuition fees and the abolition of the maintenance grant? On reflection, does he not bitterly regret that it is under a Labour Government that our state education system will become no longer free at the point of access?

Mr. Blunkett: I bitterly regret the fact that the Conservatives put a cap on entry to higher education; that they cut the unit cost by 40 per cent. and reduced quality; and that they did not concentrate on lifting standards for all children in our schools to get them into university. I am pleased that, from this autumn, an extra 1 per cent. of those leaving school—comprehensive or otherwise—are taking up higher education. We have every intention of extending that in future.

Mrs. Anne Campbell (Cambridge): Will my right hon. Friend join me in congratulating King's college, Cambridge, which admits more than 90 per cent. of its students from the state sector? Does he welcome Cambridge university's advertising campaign to encourage more students from the state sector to apply?

Mr. Blunkett: Yes, I applaud what is being done by King's college and by students at Cambridge, who are reaching out—visiting, linking with and mentoring students in schools across the country. I just wish that it were happening in all colleges and all universities.

Mr. David Willetts (Havant): May I tell the Secretary of State that my book, "Why Vote Conservative?" has a companion volume, "Why Vote Labour?", which has much less to say about raising educational standards? Following his letter to me yesterday about university applications, will he confirm that, during the debate on the Teaching and Higher Education Bill, Ministers deployed statistics that were embargoed by the Universities and Colleges Admissions Service and showed that the proposed introduction of tuition fees is having a significant impact in reducing applications to Scottish universities from English students?

Mr. Blunkett: I am inclined to read from another of the hon. Gentleman's books, "Is Conservatism Dead?"—the answer to which is yes. The answer to his question is no. Ministers did not use embargoed information. As I told him in the letter, the information was not made available until 4.30 pm on Tuesday, so Ministers could not have used it.

Teacher Shortages

8. Mr. Tim Boswell (Daventry): What plans he has to modify teacher qualifications to take account of shortages. [43761]

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Education and Employment (Ms Estelle Morris): Ensuring that there are sufficient, well-trained, high-quality teachers is central to our aim to raise standards. We have no plans to boost recruitment by lowering the entry requirements to the profession.

Mr. Boswell: The hon. Lady will be aware from correspondence between us of some hard cases concerning the transition between the licensed and the registered teachers schemes, and difficulties when somebody wishes to teach at primary level but does not have a degree in one of the national curriculum subjects. Nobody in the House would wish in any way to devalue the qualified teacher status or to reduce standards, but, given the growing teacher shortage, does she agree that is essential that the rules are interpreted as flexibly as possible to ensure that willing teachers are not deterred from the profession of their choice?

Ms Morris: For once, I am in total agreement with the hon. Gentleman. I assure him that his constituent, Miss Morgan, who, if my memory serves me correctly, is seeking a place on a bachelor of education course, is fully entitled to do so given her degree. I am happy to reassure the House and those beyond it that nothing in the entry requirements to initial teacher training demands that one must have a degree in a national curriculum subject. Of course, by the end of the training course, one must have the necessary subject knowledge in order to teach effectively, but there is no bar to ITT if one does not have a degree in a national curriculum subject. If any hon. Member knows of any constituent who finds such a difficulty when they apply for teacher training, I would be most grateful to hear of it and would make the Government's views known directly to the initial teacher training institute concerned.

Mr. Gerry Sutcliffe (Bradford, South): Will my hon. Friend look at the process of postgraduate certificates of education and of the clearing house through the graduate teacher training regime, as some things do not seem to match in that area? The entire process seems to be becoming disreputable.

Ms Morris: My hon. Friend is right; the subject needs looking at. There is a problem about the timing of applications and the way in which different institutions deal with them. We are determined that those who wish to apply for teacher training are able to do so as easily as possible and that institutions providing courses can choose the best and most suitable candidates. I am not entirely convinced that that is happening at the moment; we have the matter under review.

Mrs. Theresa May (Maidenhead): Does the Minister accept that the problem of teacher shortages is creating a growing crisis in our schools? Yesterday, it was reported that the chief inspector of schools, Chris Woodhead, called on the Government to take action to redress the problem. So far, the Government have produced a cinema advertisement and a plan for what the Minister for School Standards describes today in The Sun as a "super teacher grade", which is creating much concern in staff rooms. Will the Minister guarantee that, during this Parliament, there will not only be sufficient teachers to stand up in front of pupils in schools across the country but every child in a secondary school will be taught in every subject by a teacher who is a specialist in that subject?

Ms Morris: I welcome the hon. Lady to her position on the Front Bench. This is the first opportunity that I have had to do so, although we have spent many months in Committee together, and I feel that we already know each other reasonably well. I remind her that being new to the Front Bench does not mean that she can wipe away

18 years of Conservative Government. Her comments were amazing coming from somebody whose Government left a crisis in teacher recruitment. Year after year, we saw the number of people applying for teacher training courses decreasing, and the previous Government took no action.

We inherited that situation, and, in the past 12 months, we have taken action and we shall continue to do so. We have provided £10 million for secondary subject shortage schemes; there are two new employment-based routes; we have established the General Teaching Council; we have set standards in initial teacher training; we have run taster courses for shortage subjects and targeted particular groups. The hon. Lady referred to the advertising campaign. That has led to about 1,000 new inquiries every week from people who might be interested in teacher training. Our record over 12 months of trying to improve teacher recruitment stands up very well compared with the inaction of the previous 18 years.

Ethnic Minorities

9. Ms Karen Buck (Regent's Park and Kensington, North): What plans he has to promote equal opportunities for ethnic minorities in training and employment. [43762]

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Education and Employment (Mr. Alan Howarth): We attach great importance to ensuring that people from ethnic minorities are not disadvantaged in training and employment. The Department for Education and Employment is committed to mainstreaming race equality in all our policies, programmes and services. That is part of our strategy across Government to build an inclusive society.

Ms Buck: Does the Minister agree that it is unacceptable that half of London's young black men are unemployed? Is he aware that there is genuine concern that the training and enterprise councils are not tailoring all their employment and training programmes to meet the skills deficit of young black men? Will he give us an assurance that he will review the TECs' performance in that respect, in consultation with representatives of black and ethnic minority groups?

Mr. Howarth: I share my hon. Friend's deep concern about the problem she describes, which is particularly severe in London. The rates of unemployment among people from ethnic minorities are twice as high as those for white people. Across the country, the position deteriorated during the last 10 years of Conservative Government, but it is particularly concerning among young black people, for whom, as my hon. Friend says, the figure is vastly higher. I congratulate her on her strong personal commitment to improving equal opportunities in the part of London that she represents and to supporting our strategy across the country.

We share my hon. Friend's concern about the unequal opportunities that members of ethnic minorities appear to have had in TEC-delivered training programmes. We have introduced a national minimum standard and required TECs to set demanding targets to deal with the problem.

Mr. Michael Fabricant (Lichfield): I remind the Minister that he was a Minister in the very Government to whom he referred. Will he confirm that the way to improve job opportunities for black people and other ethnic minorities in London and elsewhere is to instil in them a work ethic and improve their job and training opportunities, not to introduce a quota system for employers?

Mr. Howarth: I should be sad to think that the hon. Gentleman was complacent about the position that the previous Conservative Government allowed to develop; I was not, as he knows. There is no question of imposing quotas. We are determined to ensure equal opportunities because Labour Members find racial discrimination abhorrent.

Given that there is no significant disparity in advanced level and other adult qualifications between members of ethnic minorities and others and yet there is a disturbing gap in employment levels, part of the explanation must lie in employers' attitudes. We have to find the most constructive and effective ways to ensure that culture and attitudes change so that members of ethnic minorities get the opportunities which the hon. Gentleman, like all hon. Members, surely wants them to have.

Mr. Derek Foster (Bishop Auckland): Does my hon. Friend agree that, if we are to keep faith with black and Asian communities, we must give the matter the highest priority? Will he look again at the modern apprenticeship scheme, where only 2 per cent. of the participants are black and Asian young people?

Mr. Howarth: My right hon. Friend is right: we must do very much better in a range of Government-funded and training and enterprise council-delivered programmes. I accept the anxiety that he expresses about the poor performance of members of ethnic minorities in modern apprenticeships.

Student Loans

10. Mr. Phil Willis (Harrogate and Knaresborough): What plans he has to allow part-time further education and higher education students to have access to income-contingent loans. [43765]

The Minister for School Standards (Mr. Stephen Byers): The Teaching and Higher Education Bill contains provisions that will give the Government the power to make support available to part-time students by way of income-contingent loans.

Mr. Willis: On 21 April, the Under-Secretary of State for Education and Employment, the hon. Member for Pontypridd (Dr. Howells), said in the Standing Committee on the Teaching and Higher Education Bill that the Government intended to move to resource accounting in 2001-02 and to use the student loan debt as a "balance sheet asset". Can the Minister confirm that? In those circumstances, what earthly reason is there for not allowing part-time students to have access to income-contingent loans from 2001?

Mr. Byers: The year 2001 will take care of itself when it arrives. We must give the Government the power to provide part-time students with access to income-contingent loans. The Bill enables us to do that. In 2001, we may be able to make the finances available to secure access to those loans.

We are putting measures in place before then, because current part-time students need support. That is why my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State announced on Monday access to a fund for part-timers who are at present in work and who might become unemployed. He also announced that, for the first time, part-time students would have access to the access fund, and the money for the access fund was doubled. Practical steps are being taken now to offer new opportunities to part-time students—we are not waiting until 2001.

Mr. Derek Wyatt (Sittingbourne and Sheppey): One of the great things that we did this century was to create the Open university. Will Open university students qualify for part-time funding?

Mr. Byers: Open university students will be in the position of other part-time students. The year 2001 may well be the time when they will have access to income-contingent loans. They will have access to the new measures announced by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State on Monday, and that will make a real difference to many of them.

The Government are seized of the fact that Open university students are one of the categories of students for whom education has not been free. People speak of free access to education, but that is simply not the case. We believe that the status quo is not an option. Change must and will take place to extend opportunities and to provide higher education institutions with the money that they need.

Standard Spending Assessment (Worcestershire)

11. Mr. Peter Luff (Mid–Worcestershire): What was the real-terms percentage change per pupil in the education standard spending assessment of Worcestershire for 1998–99 compared to 1997–98. [43766]

The Minister for School Standards (Mr. Stephen Byers): The real-terms increase was 1.85 per cent. per primary pupil and 1.21 per cent. per secondary pupil. That amounts to an extra £94 for every primary pupil and an extra £106 for every secondary pupil.

Mr. Luff: Does the Minister understand that, notwithstanding those figures, school budgets are being cut? Most parents, teachers and governors in Worcestershire think that, when the Prime Minister spoke of "education, education, education", he meant "education cut, education cut, education cut". Will the Minister give an early—preferably urgent—pledge that, next year, Worcestershire will have an increase at least equal to that of other education authorities, and preferably more, to make up for this year's frankly shocking settlement?

Mr. Byers: The hon. Gentleman is letting his prejudices get in the way of fact. The reality is that an extra £106 will be provided for every secondary pupil in Worcestershire this year. That stands in stark contrast to what occurred in the five years between 1992 and 1997—a period in which the hon. Gentleman was a Conservative Member of Parliament for Worcestershire—when there was a real-terms cut of £177 for every secondary school pupil in Worcestershire. The facts are simple: in the last five years of the Conservative Government, there was a real-terms cut of £177 for secondary pupils in Worcestershire, and, one year into a Labour Government, there has been an increase of £106 for every secondary age pupil in Worcestershire. Those are the facts—not the prejudice of Opposition Members.

New Deal

12. Laura Moffatt (Crawley): What plans he has to help unemployed people over the age of 25 years move from benefits into work. [43767]

The Minister for Employment, Welfare to Work and Equal Opportunities (Mr. Andrew Smith): On 29 June, the new deal for those aged 25 and over who have been out of work for more than two years will get under way across the country. That will be another manifesto promise kept. In addition, in November we shall start pilot programmes bringing more intensive help to those who have been out of work for 18 months or a year. We have also introduced five prototype employment zones, which began in February.

Laura Moffatt: Does the Minister agree that the extra £100 million for the long-term unemployed will help my constituent Maureen Wells? She has been a carer since she was a newly wed and now wishes to take her place in the work force, but she must have her self-esteem and employability improved. Will the new deal partnership help her and give her the time to sort herself out so that she may take her rightful place in full employment?

Mr. Smith: Yes, indeed. A very important feature—and, according to the evidence so far, a very effective feature—of the new deal is that unemployed people are receiving personal counselling with the continuity of support that a dedicated personal adviser can provide, coupled with access to a range of specialist advice and help, including training courses. That support will be available for the long-term unemployed under the new deal which starts on 29 June and under the pilots, which have been announced for November and to which my hon. Friend referred.

Mr. Nigel Evans (Ribble Valley): Will the Minister do two things for unemployed people over 25 who live in the Ribble Valley? First, will he congratulate Skillshare—an organisation of volunteers and others who provide education for the over-25s, among others, and allows people to share their skills with the unemployed so that they have a better chance of education or employment? Secondly, will he contact Lancashire county council, because that Labour-controlled authority is stopping the £26,000 in funding for Skillshare? The organisation will close at the end of the month unless the county council continues that funding, which is essential for the unemployed in my area.

Mr. Smith: I join the hon. Gentleman in congratulating organisations such as Skillshare and other voluntary and community bodies that are dedicated to the education and training needs of the unemployed. They certainly need support, and they are getting it through the new deal.

As to the hon. Gentleman's second point, I shall ensure that the new deal partnership in his area—which is almost certainly already in contact with Skillshare—investigates what means might be found to make sure that the invaluable services that Skillshare provides will continue to be available to local unemployed people.

Mr. Mike Gapes (Ilford, South): The Minister referred to pilot schemes for those who have been unemployed for a long time. Is he aware that many people who have suffered long-term unemployment have complex personal problems and difficulties? For example, many of them do not have great levels of literacy. Will the Minister ensure that assistance is given to people with literacy difficulties to help them enter a technological and increasingly information-based employment market?

Mr. Smith: Yes. The assessment of the basic skills help that people need is an important feature of the gateway in the pilots which will begin in November. It is crucial that appropriate, effective and high-quality courses are available for the older and long-term unemployed as well as for the young unemployed so that they may achieve those skills that are a key component of employability and can do so much to enhance their prospects of gaining rewarding work.

Mr. Damian Green (Ashford): Why are the Government providing relatively less help for the unemployed who are over 25, when all the evidence shows that they are much more likely to need help to find work? Does that not suggest a gap between pious rhetoric of the policy and policy itself, which is dictated largely by short-term presentational gimmicks?

Mr. Smith: First, I congratulate the hon. Gentleman on his appointment to the Front Bench.

The priorities that we set out in introducing the new deal for the young unemployed and the new deal for the long-term unemployed reflect what we said and, indeed, go beyond what we promised in our manifesto. We cannot forget that youth unemployment runs at well over twice the level of unemployment across the rest of the work force.

Everyone knows the particular damage to young people and to the community at large that is inflicted by exclusion from the opportunities and the responsibilities of work at an older age, but our new deal programmes are designed to provide the right assistance, right across the age range. As well as offering counselling and continuity of support from a personal adviser, the new deal for the long-term unemployed offers a £75 a week subsidy for the first six months of employment for someone who has been out of work for more than two years, and the opportunity to be educated or to train for up to a year. It really is a new deal for the long-term unemployed. The public will ask the hon. Gentleman why the previous Government did nothing about that.

School Transport

13. Mr. David Heath (Somerton and Frome): What plans he has to review arrangements for home-to-school transport. [43768]

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Education and Employment (Ms Estelle Morris): My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has no plans to review the arrangements for the provision of home-to-school transport.

Mr. Heath: Given the large amount of money that some local authorities are forced to spend on school transport—Somerset, for example, has to spend £5.3 million, which is £26,000 a day, on bussing children around—and, given that the precise distances involved, such as the two-mile and three-mile limits, and the appropriateness of particular routes are major bones of contention between local authorities and families with children, does the Minister agree that it is time that the Education Act 1944 was thoroughly reviewed to consider the provision of a comprehensive and fairer system of school transport?

Ms Morris: I appreciate that school transport is an important issue for local authorities in constituencies such as the hon. Gentleman's. It is one of the issues to which they must give careful consideration when allocating resources.

The key point is that it is up to the local authority to make decisions about school transport, as long as it is acting within the law. The law says that transport is necessary for a pupil of a compulsory school age to attend the nearest suitable school if it is beyond statutory walking distance. Above and beyond that, his local authority, as well as many others, has flexibility to offer financial assistance where it thinks that is appropriate. It is up to local authorities to respond to local situations.

Mrs. Gwyneth Dunwoody (Crewe and Nantwich): None the less, my hon. Friend might have a gentle word with some local authorities about the quality of school transport. Although some counties are working hard to ensure that no contracts are handed out to substandard firms, does she agree that some buses that are on the road carrying school children need to be put off it as soon possible?

Ms Morris: My hon. Friend is right. She has a long-standing interest in the issue. The Department keeps it under review, and will continue to do so.

Mr. Jonathan Sayeed (Mid-Bedfordshire): But this Labour Government cut a £4.3 million grant to Bedfordshire county council which the previous Conservative Government gave to it. It is likely that school transport will be cut in Bedfordshire, because the Government have cut the money to it. Will the hon. Lady consider the money that rural parts of Britain are receiving from the Government, and do better? Rural parts of Bedfordshire need help, which the previous Conservative Government gave but which this Labour Government have denied.

Ms Morris: The hon. Gentleman has a bit of a cheek. One reason why school transport was cut year after year was that, year after year, local authorities had to manage with a diminishing budget from the Conservative Government. Local authorities now have more money to spend on education—an extra £850 million this year, which means that they will be able to decide to put money into school transport, as well as into school standards.

Mr. Cynog Dafis (Ceredigion): Does the Minister agree that it is important not just to provide transport for school children, but to enable them to walk and cycle to school? Is the Department working closely with the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions to develop the safe routes to schools scheme that would enable children to arrive safely at school, and also make an important contribution to reducing the amount of road traffic?

Ms Morris: The hon. Gentleman is right to ask that question. My Department has been working closely with Transport Ministers on the forthcoming White Paper. Making it safe for children to walk to school is crucial. There has been a massive increase in the number of children who are being driven to school, often for very short distances and to destinations that are not on their parents' way to work. We want to encourage children to walk to school, but we know that we cannot do that unless we can ensure that conditions are as safe as possible. That is what parents want and have a right to expect.

This is an important agenda, and I am sure that, like me, the hon. Gentleman looks forward to the publication of the White Paper.

New Deal (North-east Lincolnshire)

14. Mr. Austin Mitchell (Great Grimsby): When he plans to extend the new deal to older workers in north-east Lincolnshire. [43769]

The Minister for Employment, Welfare to Work and Equal Opportunities (Mr. Andrew Smith): The new deal for people aged 25 and over will start on 29 June. In addition, the area will benefit from the November new deal pilots, as South Humber is one of the districts in which the private sector has been invited to tender. We are consulting on the content of that programme.

Mr. Mitchell: This is mildly sycophantic on the Mackinlay scale, but I am delighted with my right hon. Friend's answer. I know that he is determined to extend the benefits of the new deal to older workers who need and deserve the boost—the help and support—that he has been giving to the young unemployed.

I hope that my right hon. Friend will continue to bear in mind the urgent needs of north-east Lincolnshire. We have not only higher unemployment, while unemployment in the rest of the country is still falling, but—on a new basis of calculation—one of the highest unemployment levels, if not the highest, in the whole of Yorkshire and Humberside. The need is urgent in north-east Lincolnshire.

Mr. Smith: I agree with, and welcome, my hon. Friend's commendation of the programme, and its relevance to the needs of his constituents. I assure him that, whatever is the private sector lead, it will—together with the new deal partnership—engage in close consultation with the local community and local business to ensure that the particular needs of those older long-term unemployed people are dealt with effectively, and in a way that conforms to the high-quality standards that are the hallmark of the new deal.

Miss Anne McIntosh (Vale of York): Does the Minister agree that, in north-east Lincolnshire, as elsewhere—

Madam Speaker: Order. Not "as elsewhere". The question applies specifically to north-east Lincolnshire.

Mr. Edward Leigh (Gainsborough) rose—

Madam Speaker: I call the hon. Member for Gainsborough (Mr. Leigh). He represents Lincolnshire.

Mr. Leigh: In view of the particularly helpful question put to him by the hon. Member for Great Grimsby (Mr. Mitchell), will the Minister consider extending the new deal to him in the forthcoming Government reshuffle? Some of us admire the hon. Gentleman.

The Minister ought to remember that unemployment is very high in Lincolnshire, especially in rural areas. I hope that he will not forget our problems, rather than directing his attention entirely to north-east Lincolnshire.

Mr. Smith: We all admire my hon. Friend the Member for Great Grimsby. As for the needs of the part of Lincolnshire to which the hon. Member for Gainsborough has referred, partnerships in the new deal across the country have been invited to bid to have the opportunity to be one of the 20 pilots alongside the private sector pilots to which I referred. We shall evaluate those bids against the effectiveness and quality of what they offer the local community, and how much innovation they show in working with local authorities, training and enterprise councils and local private business.

University Students

16. Mr. Howard Flight (Arundel and South Downs): If he will make a statement on the number of new students at British universities (a) starting in autumn 1998 and (b) who started in autumn 1997. [43771]

The Minister for School Standards (Mr. Stephen Byers): Some 507,000 students domiciled in England started either full or part-time courses in 1997. It is too early to say how many students will start in autumn 1998, but I am sure that the House will be delighted to know that, so far, applications from 18 to 21-year-olds have increased this year compared with last year.

Mr. Flight: It is pretty poor that the Government do not know how many students will be going to university this autumn. Given the need for overall planning and budgeting, I see no reason why the figures should not be available. If, as I suspect, there is no increase, does the Minister attribute the outcome to the unwise changes that the Government have made, such as the introduction of tuition fees and those made as a result of the Government's particular interpretation of the Dearing report?

Mr. Byers: There are two principal reasons why I cannot give the hon. Gentleman the figures for this autumn. First, the A-level results are not yet known, which is a significant factor for entry into university. Secondly, mature students are applying ever later in the cycle. This year, as in previous years, mature students are applying far closer to the start date than they did a few years ago. It ill becomes a Conservative Member to talk about access to higher education when his party not only starved the sector of resources, but put a 30 per cent. cap on the number of young people who could enter higher education. That was not merely a bureaucratic cap; it was a cap on the aspirations of tens of thousands of young people who had the qualifications but who, under a Conservative Government, never had the opportunity of going on to higher education, which their talents and abilities merited. No more of that under this Government: we shall extend and expand higher education. No more caps on aspirations: we shall meet the needs and desires of young people.

Mr. Derek Twigg (Halton): On Monday evening, during the debate on the Teaching and Higher Education Bill, in response to a question from my hon. Friend the Member for Cambridge (Mrs. Campbell), the shadow Secretary of State said that the Conservative party would introduce top-up fees. To be fair to him, he said that it would not be widespread. When challenged to say what areas would be included, he would not answer. Would not top-up fees have a detrimental effect and prevent wider access to higher education?

Mr. Byers: My hon. Friend is absolutely right. The hon. Member who now speaks for the Conservative party on education matters wants to create an Ivy League of university establishments, which would divide the sector. As a result, many young people would not be able to go to the university of their choice. That is a good example of the policies pursued by the Conservative party, and it shows why the Conservatives will not be returned to office until they recognise the plot, which for education is quality provision in schools, further education colleges and universities for all our young people, not just for a few.

EU Tobacco Advertising Directive

17. Mr. Graham Brady (Altrincham and Sale, West): When he plans to publish an employment impact assessment of the effect of the EU tobacco advertising directive on UK employment. [43772]

The Minister for Employment, Welfare to Work and Equal Opportunities (Mr. Andrew Smith): A preliminary regulatory appraisal was produced as part of the parliamentary scrutiny of the EU proposals and was deposited in the Library on 2 December. An updated assessment, including any employment effects, will be included in the White Paper, which my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Health will publish later this year.

Mr. Brady: I thank the Minister for that response. Does he share my concern that an employment impact assessment after the Government decided to support the directive is of questionable value? Does he further share my concern that the Employment Commissioner, Mr. Padraig Flynn, has explicitly ruled out conducting an employment impact assessment across the European Union? If the Government think that such an assessment is worth doing, why does not the Commission?

Mr. Smith: As I think the hon. Gentleman should know, when the Select Committee on European Legislation and Standing Committee B examined this proposal, they debated these matters in great detail and decided that the proper procedure had been complied with throughout. The hon. Gentleman and his hon. Friends should take note of the fact that 61 per cent. of respondents to the 1996 Office for National Statistics attitudes survey said that they did not think tobacco advertising should be allowed. The Government are not only implementing an important manifesto commitment, but going with the will of the people and implementing proposals that will be good for the public's health.

Mr. Peter L. Pike (Burnley): We cannot disregard the employment implications altogether, but is it not somewhat sad that Conservative Members still do not believe that tobacco advertising has implications for the health of our constituents. We only have to look at what is happening in our hospitals—the deaths, amputations and other operations—to realise that the directive is right and should be fully supported by hon. Members on both sides of the House.

Mr. Smith: My hon. Friend is right. This is a manifesto commitment. It will save lives and it is good for health. It makes sense to get on with it.

Postgraduate Researchers

18. Mr. Tam Dalyell (Linlithgow): If he will meet the Committee of Vice-Chancellors and Principals to discuss problems faced by postgraduate researchers on temporary contracts. [43773]

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Education and Employment (Mr. Alan Howarth): My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has not been approached by the Committee of Vice-Chancellors and Principals on this issue. He would, of course, consider carefully any representation that it wished to make.

Mr. Dalyell: Are temporary contracts a satisfactory way in which to reward researchers, who may be in their 40s and 50s and who have depended on this form of remuneration all their lives?

Mr. Howarth: My hon. Friend is well aware that this is a long-standing, very difficult and important problem. He will, I hope, at least share my pleasure that a concordat relating to contract researchers has been agreed between the CVCP, other bodies representing universities and colleges, the research councils, the British Academy and the Royal Society. The signatories are committed to improving the terms and conditions of employment of contract staff, to training and careers guidance, to appraising and reviewing their development and to the provision of maternity and long-term sickness benefit. A group has been established to monitor the concordat's implementation and to identify and encourage practice. It is chaired by Sir Gareth Roberts, whom my hon. Friend knows well. The group hopes to report in the autumn.

Economic and Fiscal Strategy

3.30 pm

The Chancellor of the Exchequer (Mr. Gordon Brown): With permission, Madam Speaker, I should like to make a statement. The comprehensive spending review has been the most comprehensive and in-depth examination of Government spending and priorities for many years. The results of it will be announced in two stages. Today, I will announce an entirely new regime to apply to public spending control: a fundamental reform of the rules that govern our public finances. Later next month, I will set out the results of a wholesale revision of our spending priorities and the purposes of Government support in each Department.

The central challenge is to combine prudence and stability in public finance with investment and reform in public services. There are four key elements to our approach. First, the new regime must be consistently prudent and responsible. Strong public services cannot be sustained on weak public finances. The spending plans that we set must ensure sustainable finances over the whole economic cycle—rigorous financial discipline that, together with monetary stability, ends once and for all the boom and bust that for 30 years has undermined stability, hindered long-term investment in our public services and prevented this country from achieving its potential.

That is why we will enforce two fiscal rules: the golden rule that, over the cycle, current spending is covered by revenues, and the sustainable investment rule that there must be a prudent debt-to-gross domestic product ratio.

Secondly, in each Department, we are assessing radically what Government do and how and where they spend their money. The comprehensive spending review results, when published, will not only show changes in priorities within and between Departments, but must redefine the role of Government, so that they are enabling and empowering, not centralising and controlling. Where Government should be acting, we will do more. Where Government is unnecessary or restrictive, we should not act at all. The results of the spending review will mean reform and modernisation.

Thirdly, in respect of publicly owned assets, the essential test should be how best to meet the public interest, and we will, therefore, propose a radical change in Government policy towards investment and the assets that Government hold. Finally, where Government spend on public services, they should link spending explicitly to modernisation and reform for each Government Department. Where there is extra money, it will be tied to specific outputs. It will be investment, but only in return for reform.

First, therefore, the framework that follows for the future. For 30 years, British public spending has been characterised by the annual spending round rather than long-term planning; by the year-to-year bidding culture, with all the problems of hurried end-of-year corrections, instead of the strategic planning of resources; by incremental bids that are not tied to outcomes, rather than spending to achieve defined results. Too much attention has been given to current spending and muddling through, too little attention to long-term investment and reform. There has been too much focus on the public sector acting in isolation from the private sector and not enough long-term partnership with it.

To break decisively with this old-fashioned and short-termist culture, we will first abolish the annual spending round. We will now set Departments firm plans and fixed budgets for three years at a time. Secondly, to ensure that our fiscal rules are met and to make possible long-term investment in our infrastructure, there will now be a separate capital budget and a separate current budget for each Department. Thirdly, in place of incremental budgeting, we will lay down new targets for efficiency and performance for every Department. Fourthly, instead of the old, sterile conflict between public and private sectors, we will now promote new partnerships between public and private sectors. Fifthly, for the first time, the Government are legislating for a Code of Fiscal Stability which requires more open and comprehensive reporting of the public accounts. The key assumptions have been and will continue to be audited by the independent National Audit Office.

My right hon. Friend the Chief Secretary to the Treasury, whom I thank for all his work in the review, and I are today publishing detailed figures both for the current balance and for capital spending. We will set out in these documents not only the public sector's net cash requirement—the PSBR—but the internationally accepted accruals measure of public sector net borrowing, which will provide a better guide to the underlying state of public finances—that is the public sector net borrowing. Copies of the Economic and Fiscal Strategy Report will be available in the Vote Office.

All these changes—the end of the annual spending round, a long-overdue distinction between investment and current spending, a new emphasis on outputs, more effective partnership between public and private sectors and proper public scrutiny of how Governments are meeting their fiscal rules—make clear the importance that the Government attach to reform and modernisation as the foundation for both sound finance and good public services.

I turn now to the public finance plans that follow from the fiscal rules. The Government inherited a national debt which doubled in the early 1990s. In the last economic cycle, debt as a proportion of national income rose by 18 percentage points and is now around £15,000 for every family in the country. As a result, we are paying more in interest payments than we spend on schools, or on housing and law and order put together.

In addition, we inherited an annual level of public borrowing that was unacceptably high. In the final year of the previous Government, the public sector net cash requirement was £23 billion, and public sector net borrowing was £27 billion. In the first year of the Labour Government, with the tough decisions that we took in our first Budget in July, public sector net borrowing fell last year from £27 billion to £6 billion. We kept within the spending ceilings that we inherited. In addition to a £400 million increase in the Budget for pensioners, we were also able to put £2 billion more into the health service and £2½ billion more into education.

Those who said that we would fail to meet our targets and would fail to show the discipline necessary have been proved entirely wrong. Indeed, over the first two years of the present Government, through setting tough departmental limits, spending is within budget as promised. But Britain must have sustainable public finances, not just for one year or two, but throughout the economic cycle. British public spending, which, for decades, has been denied a long period of consistency and stability, must now be subject not only to the framework for the future that is prudent, but to clearly defined limits.

As a result of the plans that I am announcing today, we will lock in the fiscal tightening that I announced in the March Budget, not just for this financial year, but for the next financial year as well. Over the three years from the time we came into Government—that is to 1999–2000—the fiscal tightening amounts to 2¾ per cent. of national income, measured by the public sector net cash requirement, and 3½ per cent. of GDP measured by public sector net borrowing. That is more than £25 billion since 1996-97. This is the fiscal tightening from 1996-97 to 1999-2000 that we promised in the Budget.

To meet our first rule—the golden rule—the Government will plan for balance on the current budget over the economic cycle as a whole. For 35 years, current spending has grown by an average of nearly 3 per cent. a year in real terms. Within that average, annual changes have ranged from plus 11 per cent. to minus 3 per cent. From 1989 to 1994, a surplus on the current budget of over £10 billion was transformed into a deficit on the current budget of £38 billion. So, in the same way as our economy has suffered from the instability of boom and bust, public spending has suffered from the instability of stop and go. The uncertainties caused by that short-termist approach have frustrated the long-term planning of decent public services.

Let us be clear about who has suffered first and who has suffered worst: the vulnerable who depend most on our public services. Imprudence in public spending is of no help to those who rely on public services being there when they need them.

In the previous economic cycle, Britain ran an average deficit on the current budget of 1½ per cent. of GDP—the equivalent of an annual deficit of £12 billion. By contrast, the plans that we publish today will ensure that, over the full economic cycle, Britain will have a current budget balance—current expenditure covered by revenues over the cycle—which other Governments have promised but not achieved.

So that we can deliver sustainable public finances—and, thus, sustainable public services—over the whole cycle, the plans that I am announcing today deliberately take a more cautious approach than previous plans in meeting the fiscal rules. That is why we need to plan for a surplus on the current budget over the next three years. The plans that we publish today are for a surplus on the current budget, next year, of £7 billion; in 2000-01, of £10 billion; and, in 2001-02, of £13 billion.

Within that new framework, I can confirm that current spending will grow in line with our cautious estimate of the trend rate of growth of the economy, which is 2¼ per cent. in real terms each year over the next three years. Current spending is now planned to be 39¼ per cent. of GDP every year for the rest of the Parliament.

It is because we are showing that prudence in public finance and because we are prepared to modernise in choosing our priorities that we will be able to invest in long-term improvements in our key public services—education and health—and also fulfil our commitments to those such as the elderly, who depend on public services.

As everyone knows, the public will be better served if we also ensure the best value for money and the most efficient possible use of resources. Inefficiency in the public sector is a cost which could be afforded by a Government who had a vested interest in proving that the public service could not work and believed in a philosophy of private, good; public, bad.

Inefficiency will not be tolerated by a Government who will modernise the public sector so that this country is properly equipped for the future. That is why, in our spending review, there will be no place for new spending unless there is reform through clear targets, new standards and rigour in the use of money. I can confirm that each Department will set efficiency targets as a result of our review. Each Department will also be set new quality standards. I can confirm that, as part of best value, we will introduce an inspectorate for housing that will help to improve management of council housing, set new standards for performance and guarantee the high quality of investment.

Before allocations are made from the comprehensive spending review, Departments will have to demonstrate how they propose to root out unjustified subsidies. Therefore, not only will we set ourselves fixed budgets for three years, but we are building in new disciplines to ensure that investment is conditional on reform. Just as those new disciplines will apply to current spending, they will be applied also to capital investment.

Our second fiscal rule is to ensure a stable and prudent ratio of debt to national income—the sustainable investment rule—which is essential if we are to contain interest payments on the national debt. If the Government simply left the debt-to-GDP ratio at the level that we inherited from the previous Government, we would be making interest payments of £25 billion more over the Parliament, at a cost to public services.

In the interests of greater stability, I propose to bear down on the debt-to-GDP ratio. The plans that we are publishing today show that the debt ratio falls from 45 per cent., when we came into government, to 40½ per cent. next year; and, in the following years, down again, to 39½ per cent., and to 38¼ per cent. The comparable figure in the European Union is 78 per cent.

Britain will now plan on the basis that our debt-to-GDP ratio will be 40 per cent. or lower. For the first time for decades, we are set, over the cycle, to have both a current budget in balance and a prudent debt-to-GDP ratio. As a result of our two fiscal rules, public sector net borrowing, which was more than 3 per cent. of national income in the most recent economic cycle, will average 0.2 per cent. for this Parliament, 0.2 per cent. for next year, 0 per cent. for the following two years and 0.1 per cent. for the year after that. We will meet the fiscal rules that are laid down in the Maastricht treaty.

It is only because we have set this tough framework—based on strict control of public spending, a prudent debt-to-GDP ratio and a fiscal tightening—that it is possible to take the necessary action to reverse the chronic underinvestment in our country's education, health, transport and housing infrastructure and to re-equip Britain as a modern nation. In recent years, total investment, public and private, in Britain has fallen as a share of national income—it is far behind the rates of our competitors and those that we achieved in the 30 years after the war.

If Britain is to renew its infrastructure, as it should, we must be prepared to break with old dogmas. We will not succeed simply by throwing money at problems or by privatising the responsibility for them, so we must be prepared to look at new ways in which to manage our assets and, if necessary, to redeploy them so that they serve the future rather than reflect the past.

[Mr. Gordon Brown]

The British Government have property, land and other assets worth hundreds of billions of pounds. As we discovered in the first register of national assets, Britain has an accumulation of unused and underused properties and holdings. We can no longer afford a surplus of holdings when we have such a deficit in investment. There is no benefit to us in hoarding assets that do nothing to equip us for the future when we need to build a 21st century infrastructure. No public interest is served by continuing to hold surplus land and buildings that we know are not needed.

The fiscal projections set a new target for central Government to realise for investment around £1 billion a year for each of the three coming years from the sale of surplus holdings that we no longer need. In the next financial year, we will go ahead with the sale of all remaining debt held in British energy. We will realise the value of what we do not need, to invest in what we do need.

My right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister and I will propose a new long-term framework for investment by local authorities to release resources for new investment and to co-ordinate the use of existing assets. Local authorities are now expected to realise at least £2¾ billion a year from property sales—again, that is a sale of what we do not need, to pay for investment in what we do need.

To maximise investment in the renewal of our infrastructure, public and private sectors must work together in a more effective and modern partnership. In the past, the private finance initiative was a means of substituting private investment for public investment—it was an excuse for abdicating responsibility for public investment, so there was no net gain to investment in our country.

As we have shown in our new deal for schools, public-private partnerships work best when public investment succeeds in levering in additional finance from the private sector. Moreover, as the Deputy Prime Minister has shown in the planned investment in the channel tunnel rail link and in London underground, private investment can be mobilised to serve the public interest.

The Government will apply a public interest test. What is the best means—whether through private or public investment—to secure the highest levels of investment in Britain's future, so ensuring the best public services? It is not to demand private ownership as a matter of dogma when it does not serve the public interest, and it is not to maintain state ownership when private and public partnership is the best way in which to advance the public interest.

It is obvious to the Deputy Prime Minister and me—[Interruption.] It is obvious that the levels of investment and efficiency that we need in National Air Traffic Services can be best achieved by a partnership between the public and private sectors, which will give NATS the ability to plan and finance the forward investment that they want to make.

Safety is paramount: the Government's proposals will ensure that air safety regulation is conducted independently from National Air Traffic Services and is open and transparent. The regulator's remit will be to enforce the toughest safety standards in the world.

My right hon. Friend the Minister of Transport is to make a separate announcement today on the future of air traffic control services. Our preference is for 49 per cent. of the shares, and a golden share, to be held by the Government, and 51 per cent. by private investors, including employees. We will hold consultations on the details of the implementation of the proposals.

The realisation of assets will enable us to invest more in our transport infrastructure, as will our proposals for greater commercial freedom for financially sound regional airports such as Manchester, Newcastle, Leeds-Bradford and Norwich. [Interruption.]

Madam Speaker: Order.

Mr. Brown: I thought that Conservative Members would be interested in plans for new investment in our airports.

The same partnership approach is appropriate for the Commonwealth Development Corporation, which needs new finance for higher investment in developing countries. The Secretary of State for International Development will introduce proposals to sell a majority holding.

We will consider how to extend the existing public-private partnership in the Tote into a broader partnership with the private sector. We are also agreed in principle that a new public-private partnership is the best way for the Royal Mint to take advantage of new commercial opportunities.

Those are four examples of new partnerships being evolved that show that we can make the long-term investment that we need while protecting and safeguarding the public interest. Public investment in reform and modernisation is also a means by which the Government can help to renew the infrastructure.

Under the previous Government, public investment fell below 1 per cent. of national income—to 0.8 per cent.—and we now invest less than our major European partners. The present Government recognise that we must invest properly in our economic and social infrastructure to equip us for the future.

We must invest in our schools and hospitals; our transport infrastructure; our science and technology base; and in building better housing and safer and stronger communities. To meet those challenges for the future, we are setting up a new programme: investing in Britain's future.

Over this Parliament, we will double the level of net public investment as a share of national income, raising it from ¾ per cent. to 1½ per cent. Through realising unused and underused assets and being prepared to take tough decisions, we will plan to invest £29 billion a year in our economic and social infrastructure by the end of this Parliament.

In place of two decades of rundown in investment, Britain is now ready to invest in its own future. Our long-term aim will be to maintain the share of investment in national income at this sustainable and prudent level.

For years, we were told that prudence in public finances could be achieved only at the cost of running down public investment and neglecting public services. Those Conservative years ended with neither good public services nor prudence in public finances.

The framework that I am announcing today means that, with sensible and tough decisions about priorities in every Department in our spending review, this country will be able to ensure that the necessary resources are available for health, education and essential public services. Because of our toughness to modernise, our discipline and reform, our prudence today provides the solid foundation to invest in better schools, hospitals and public services today and tomorrow.

In place of short-termism and neglect of public services, we have a new long-term direction for renewal of our public services and of our country. Prudence and investment in reform are the way forward to creating a Britain that is modern, strong and fair. I commend the statement to the House.

Mr. Francis Maude (Horsham): So far, the Chancellor of the Exchequer has had a Budget in July last year, a pre-Budget in November, another Budget in March and a mini-Budget in June. Now there is a comprehensive spending review in July. Four Budgets in 12 months is not bad going for a self-proclaimed devotee of long-term planning and consistency.

In today's Financial Times we can read why he has been forced to do all that. It states:

"The announcement is expected to 'focus ministers minds' in the final stage of spending negotiations, says a government member."

We know where that came from—not from the Red Lion, but from the horse's mouth. The statement effectively announces the failure of the Chancellor's comprehensive spending review. It was designed to save money, but it has saved nothing.

We support the reduction in national debt—[Interruption.] We certainly support it, but we should like to know whether all Labour Members support it. If the Chancellor reads the papers, he will find that the reduction in national debt to which he has referred was due to be exceeded under the plans of the past Conservative Government. For him to claim the credit is quite cheeky.

I pay tribute to the Chancellor's courage in adopting a programme of modernisation of the public sector. I assure him that we shall give firm support to his plans to privatise a number of entities. We remember the comments that he and his colleagues made when those issues were debated in the past, and we shall do our best in the coming days to reconcile those remarks with his fulsomely enthusiastic remarks of today. No doubt such a reconciliation can be achieved; we are charitable folk and we shall do our best to seek one, and to give him the support that he deserves for his programme of public sector reform.

It is just a pity that whenever—[Interruption.] The Deputy Prime Minister should listen with enthusiasm because we are the only people who are supporting him; he will not find much support behind him.

The Chancellor's statement is of some importance. We always said that the Government would be a tax and spend Administration. We have already seen the taxes—the equivalent of 5p added to the basic rate of income tax in only 13 short months. Today, goaded by broken promises on waiting lists and class sizes, he has gone soft on spending. No one should doubt that today's statement amounts to a fundamental reversal of the Government's economic policy. It is not surprising that press stories over recent days have veered widely between—[Interruption.]

Madam Speaker: Order. The House must settle down and listen.

Mr. Maude: Press stories have veered widely between promoting Brown the Iron Chancellor and Gordon the giveaway spender. Today, it is goodbye Iron Chancellor; may he rust in peace.

Can the Chancellor confirm that the Bank of England's Monetary Policy Committee knew of his spending plans last week when it decided to put up interest rates again? If it did not know, how can it be expected to do its job when the monetary right hand does not know what the fiscal left hand is doing? If it knew, was not its immediate decision to raise interest rates a damning indictment of his change of policy? Once again, are not hard-working people paying the price for the Chancellor's mistakes?

On the Chancellor's claim to be abolishing the spending round, what will be the size of the contingency reserve for these three years? If it is substantial, does he understand that there will be a spending round? All his colleagues will wrangle about how it is divided up. If it is not substantial, how will he cope with the unexpected demands for public spending that arise, the necessities that cannot be avoided? Does he really think that the Secretaries of State for Health and for Education and Employment will sit quietly, accept it as it is and not wolf all their dinner at once and come back for more?

Before the general election, Labour made a string of incompatible pledges. It pledged not to raise taxes, to spend more on health and education while cutting spending on welfare, and to end boom and bust. If we had to count the number of times that we have heard the Chancellor and the Prime Minister use the words "boom and bust", we would run out of calculators. On promise after promise, the Chancellor is failing to deliver. He has delivered boom and bust at the same time. Manufacturing is in recession while inflation is rising. He has put taxes up 17 times, the equivalent of 5p on the basic rate of income tax. It is easy to be an Iron Chancellor when all it involves is putting his hand in other people's pockets.

Today, the Chancellor has had to announce that he has lost the battle with his Cabinet colleagues to keep spending down. Will he confirm that in his last set of Budget forecasts, he set three growth options for public spending: $\frac{3}{4}$ per cent., $1\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. and $2\frac{1}{4}$ per cent? Having failed to get savings from his colleagues has he not he been forced into the slackest, least prudent, least disciplined choice? Is not his central problem his failure to control welfare spending? He promised to cut it, yet every welfare reform so far has cost more, not less. The basic objective of the comprehensive spending review has failed.

Is not the baseline figure fiddled to begin with? Can the Chancellor say how much higher the control total would be without the fiddles to hide billions of pounds of public spending? Has he not changed the rules of the private finance initiative to get debt off the Government's balance sheet without the transfer of risk, which is essential? Can he confirm that the Accounting Standards Board is resisting his attempts to fiddle the books in that way? Is not the extraordinary treatment of the channel tunnel rail link, about which he boasted, the most brazen of those fiddles? How does he justify taking the cost of the new deal outside public spending altogether, as if, in some mysterious way, it is not public spending at all?

[Mr. Maude]

Will the Chancellor confirm what is said in one of the newspaper reports that mysteriously appeared this morning—that school repairs will in future count as capital spending? Is not the fudging of the difference between capital and current spending at the core of his great boast to be increasing investment? It is a good job that he is increasing public investment because his Red Book shows that private investment in business is scheduled to fall sharply in future years. That is directly because of the economic policies that he has pursued. Will the Chancellor persist, as one of the fiddles, in raiding the lottery for yet another slab of public spending? This is new Labour, new accountancy. It is the Chancellor's contribution to creative Britain.

The reality is that Labour was elected to office on incompatible pledges. To the City, it was an end to tax and spend; to the spending lobbies, it was jam today. The comprehensive spending review was designed to square that circle. The Chancellor has told us today that he has failed comprehensively. The Government made clear promises before the general election that they would not raise taxes but they have. They were going to control inflation, but the Chancellor has missed his target 11 months out of 12. Labour was going to support home owners, but they are all paying more now. It has all gone now. Prudence has been dumped. She was just another photo opportunity.

Mr. Brown: I should start by welcoming the shadow Chancellor of the Exchequer to his new position. I hope that he will enjoy his period in the office. Conservative Members should have some pride in the fact that the new spokesman on financial matters was the Minister who in 1991 personally signed the Maastricht treaty.

The right hon. Gentleman started by saying that he supported us. Then he said that he opposed us. Then he said that he supported us. Then he opposed us. What he revealed as he went on is the extreme right-wing agenda that is now dominant in the Conservative party. He lectures us on debt, but it was his Government who ran up the national debt and doubled it. He lectures us on stop-go, but the worst two economic cycles happened under the Conservative Government when they caused two of the most difficult recessions for our industry. He lectures us on social security, but his Government, by their failure and by causing unemployment, massively pushed up social security spending simply to keep people out of work. He lectures us on tax, but his Government were responsible for 22 tax rises and for raising the amount of tax, against all promises that they made in their election manifesto. He even tried to lecture us on the channel tunnel rail link, but it was his Government's failure which caused all the problems that my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister had to intervene to solve.

In all those areas, the shadow Chancellor has nothing to offer to the debate, except for one thing—that we should cut spending more. He says that we should cut spending and the share of spending. Over the next few months and years, he will have to explain to the British people through debates in the House which hospitals, schools, transport investment and housing expenditure he wishes to cut. We will relentlessly pursue the Conservative party over its real aims for the future of the welfare state.

It is wrong to say that there is any problem with the Accounting Standards Board.

The Monetary Policy Committee makes the decisions. It is independent and able to do so.

The right hon. Gentleman mentioned public spending as a share of national income. It will fall to 39 per cent. during the next three years, as I said in my statement.

Debt interest payments over the next few years will be at a prudent level because we are reducing the share of debt in national income.

We have a programme of investment and reform combined with prudence. During the Conservative years, we had neglect of investment, the run down of our public services, and imprudence and boom-bust in the economic management of this country. We offer the only way forward. The shadow Chancellor will have to go home and think again. The Conservative party is unfit not only for Government, but for Opposition.

Mr. Giles Radice (North Durham): The Treasury Select Committee will want to look carefully at the Chancellor's statement and at the comprehensive spending review when it is announced later. Is my right hon. Friend aware that abolishing the annual spending round in favour of a three-year planning period will not only build in fiscal prudence, but will provide Departments with a long-term planning perspective which is so badly needed? Is he further aware that the public spending plans announced today will provide extra resources for badly strapped public services, especially education and health, and will promote badly needed capital investment and capital projects?

Mr. Brown: I am grateful to my hon. Friend, who is the Chairman of the Treasury Select Committee. I shall be happy to work with it in reviewing the proposals, as will the Chief Secretary. My hon. Friend rightly points to the big change that we are announcing today, from an annual spending round to a three-year plan of spending, within which each Department will have far greater flexibility and the ability to plan over that period. I was surprised when I heard the shadow Chancellor say at lunchtime that the annual spending round was a tried and tested way of doing things properly. If it is the first commitment of the Conservative Opposition to restore the annual spending round, I hesitate to think what other proposals they will come forward with later.

My hon. Friend is absolutely right to say that the purpose of the spending review is to ensure that we can get the money that is necessary to the priorities that we have. Education and health are two of the greatest priorities for this country, but they were neglected under the previous Government. We are determined to make sure that those priorities have the resources they deserve. We are prepared to take tough decisions to make that possible. When I come back to the House in a month's time, we shall be able to announce the allocations for health and education over the coming years.

Mr. Malcolm Bruce (Gordon): Does the Chancellor accept that the Liberal Democrats welcome the timing of today's statement and, like the Chairman of the Treasury Select Committee, the hon. Member for North Durham (Mr. Radice), the signs of greater long-termism in the Government's fiscal policy? The Chancellor may agree that, under the Tories, the short-term approach to budgeting and, in particular, to capital investment was extreme. To the extent that that is clearly going to change, his statement is immensely welcome.

The Liberal Democrats also welcome the Chancellor's greater emphasis within Government on outputs as a determinant of funding. However, if budgets for three years are to be set in one go, should not the Government open up the debate to wider public consultation, in line with the spirit of the pre-Budget report, rather than keep it so tightly under wraps that we have little opportunity to contribute? With budgets fixed for three years, will the Chancellor assure us that there will be a sufficiently funded contingency reserve to meet variations over that period?

Is not there a danger that the Chancellor is trying to satisfy two audiences at once? Would it not be better to choose more decisively than he has done between bigger public surpluses and better public services? Today's Financial Times was right to conclude:

"The question . . . is whether the increases he"—

that is, the Chancellor—

"will feel able to permit can meet the objectives for improved services the government has set."

Liberal Democrats welcome the boost to investment that the statement provides, but does the Chancellor not understand that quality education and quality health rely just as much on first-class teachers and nurses as on first-class buildings?

Will the Chancellor confirm that, even if control spending grows at 2.5 per cent. in real terms over the next three years, it will still have grown by only 1.5 per cent. per year over the life of this Parliament—less than the 1.8 per cent. achieved by the Tories over the past 18 years? Does the Chancellor accept that, even if spending growth was 3.75 per cent. per year over the remainder of the Parliament, it would still be no higher as a share of national income than it was under the Tories?

What will the extra money deliver in terms of services? That is the question people need to have answered. No doubt, the modest early years pledges are now deliverable by the later years of this Parliament, but can the Chancellor say whether average hospital waiting lists will be lower in this Parliament than in the last? Will primary school pupils of all ages be removed from oversized classes? Will nursery education be extended to all three-year-olds whose parents want it?

During the election campaign, the Liberal Democrats warned that keeping to Tory spending plans would mean worse education and health services. Sadly, so far, we have been proved right. Is not the reality that, although the Chancellor might have done enough today to stop things getting worse, he has done far too little to deliver the sort of radical improvement in our education and health services for which the British people thought they had voted and which they are now entitled to expect?

Mr. Brown: First, let me tell the hon. Gentleman where I agree with him. I agree with him when he says that we should concentrate on outputs and on the effectiveness of services and not simply on the size of the budget. I agree with him when he says that we should have three-year plans; indeed, that is what we shall do. I agree with him when he says that he wants to have a discussion on what level of public spending is necessary; no doubt, through the Treasury Select Committee, of which he is a member, he will involve himself in that debate. I agree with him that it is important that resources go to education and health, which are the two priorities.

However, the hon. Gentleman should congratulate the Government on what we are doing and what we plan to do. On education, he asked for £500 million to be invested in capital re-equipping of our schools. We are investing £2½ billion already and, of course, today's announcement makes more investment in the long term possible. He said at the election that we should invest £1¼ billion in the health service. We have already put £2 billion more into the national health service—£300 million last year and £1.7 billion this year. Of course, it is our aim to get resources to help. He should congratulate us on what we have done and on what we are doing.

The hon. Gentleman read out a list of items which, no doubt, the Liberal Democrat party has carefully costed. We will not make spending commitments in every single area, as he has been doing. The Liberal Democrats will not face up to difficult decisions about taxation in the Finance Bill; on public spending, their amendments to student loans legislation alone would have cost 1p on income tax. We do not know what they favour.

I should remind the hon. Gentleman that, in the first speech of this Parliament by the leader of his party, the right hon. Member for Yeovil (Mr. Ashdown) said:

"If we tighten our belts now, we have a real opportunity to get to grips with the huge hangover of debt left behind by the Conservatives."—[Official Report, 14 May 1997; Vol. 294, c. 74.]

That is the real world that we inherited; that is what we are tackling. In the spirit of the statement of the leader of his party, the hon. Gentleman should be supporting us.

Several hon. Members rose—

Madam Speaker: Order. I appeal for co-operation from hon. Members in asking brisk questions, and ask the Chancellor to give brisk answers, as so many hon. Members are seeking to put questions.

Mr. Robert Sheldon (Ashton-under-Lyne): The Chancellor is obviously right to draw the clear distinction between capital and current expenditure in a new form, which will be widely welcomed. He will be judged by how far that leads to the very large increase in capital investment that many of us want. Ending the annual spending round will be welcomed not least by spending Ministers, who will find themselves short of the annual misery, and by Treasury Ministers, who have the worst of it. Is my right hon. Friend aware that, over a long period such as three years, there will be a change in priorities and in their perception? How does he intend to ensure flexibility, other than, perhaps, by increasing the contingency reserve?

[Mr. Robert Sheldon]

Mr. Brown: I am grateful to my right hon. Friend. I very much appreciate his guidance and advice—first as Chairman of the Public Accounts Committee, and since then. He is right to draw attention to the importance of capital investment in the modernisation of the country. We shall insist on the toughest efficiency standards in the use of resources. Some of the measures that we are bringing forward this afternoon are designed to achieve exactly that. We can prove that public investment and prudence can go hand in hand.

My right hon. Friend also raised the abolition of the annual spending round. As he knows, under its old form, end-of-year allocations were made simply to use up the budget. There was not the necessary flexibility to put the money forward for the best available purpose, and Departments were not able to plan ahead strategically, as we are now able to do. Of course, within their budgets, Departments will be able to examine their priorities and regularly assess them. It is one of the fundamentals of the review that standards and efficiency targets must be met. His fears about an inability to change when new priorities develop are not founded, because there are flexibilities in the budgets.

Mr. Stephen Dorrell (Charnwood): I enjoyed the Chancellor's description of his medium-term financial strategy almost as much as I enjoyed his description of his privatisation programme. If he is really going to set before the House detailed three-year programmes, Department by Department, without the safety valve of an annual spending review, how will he accommodate, as the right hon. Member for Ashton-under-Lyne (Mr. Sheldon) asked, not just shifts of priority in a Department's programme, but shifts in the Government priorities between departmental programmes? How will he deal with the inevitable unexpected event that will arise during this Parliament?

By setting firm programmes three years ahead, is not the Chancellor lining himself up for a spending crunch some time in this Parliament, or are we seeing the beginnings of a process that will lead to excuses for another round of tax increases later in the Parliament?

Mr. Brown: I welcome the sight of the right hon. Gentleman on the Back Benches. I hope that he will be able to speak his mind in the way in which he promised. Unfortunately, his first statement was to agree with the shadow Chancellor that the annual spending round is somehow of great merit. Perhaps its repeal should be the first item in the Conservatives' manifesto at the next election on which they can agree.

The problem in British public spending is not too much long-termism or that people have made decisions in advance and have not been able to change them, but too much short-termism and an inability to plan ahead. Of course, individual Departments will be able to consider priorities within their budgets, but the comprehensive spending review is considering priorities for the next three years. When I report, with the Chief Secretary, to the House next month, we shall be able to say not only what those priorities are, but how the modernisation and reform necessary to achieve them is working. I hope that the right hon. Gentleman will be able to welcome our proposals.

If the right hon. Gentleman thinks about his experience at the Treasury and as a departmental Minister, he will realise that it is the short-termism of Government that has made us unable to invest in our future. Public expenditure on investment is so low because it was very easy for Governments to transfer money from investment to consumption and not face up to difficult decisions. The result is a run-down Britain in terms of transport and other amenities that are vital for the future. We shall tackle that problem and take the necessary action. The right hon. Gentleman's perspective, and his writings—which I have read—mean that he should be in a position to support us.

Mr. Ken Livingstone (Brent, East): Could the Chancellor assure the House that the spending totals that he is setting will be sustained in real terms even if lower than expected GDP growth means that those totals would go beyond 40 per cent. of GDP?

Mr. Brown: The whole point of the spending figures that we are announcing is that we are working on a three-year basis. In other words, individual Departments will be able to consider their position over time and make the necessary adjustments. I want them to have flexibility, which we are introducing in other areas. Conservative Members were shouting when I announced our proposals to enable local authority airports to have greater commercial freedom to make investments.

On public spending as a whole, we shall not promise to allocate money that we do not have simply because decisions are not made by others. We shall set targets, which must be met. They will be sufficiently good to enable our health and education services to invest in the future. The three-year programme offers the flexibility necessary to deal with any problems that arise.

Mr. David Davis (Haltemprice and Howden): The Chancellor will be aware that I was among those who welcomed his commitment to eradicate the deficit in all the years of this Parliament. I certainly welcome his commitment today to output and the associated realisation of under-utilised assets, which will help towards that end.

However, does not the Chancellor accept that it will be a tragedy if that commitment is viewed by the financial communities as an exercise in creative accounting? Earlier, he brushed aside the question of the independent Accounting Standards Board's concerns about his treatment of private finance as off balance sheet. That is not simply a technical issue; it means that the Government may conceal from the public the shouldering of large liabilities for the future. Will he tell the House how he will deal with that serious concern of the Accounting Standards Board?

Mr. Brown: I am happy at all times to discuss these measures, but the right hon. Gentleman is referring to a discussion within the accounting community about the specific treatment of items related to the private finance initiative. He referred to creative accounting. We shall not do as the previous Conservative Government did, which is why we have introduced public sector net borrowing as a better measure of the underlying state of public finances. The old public sector borrowing requirement figures did not reflect the true underlying state of public finances. If the right hon. Gentleman considers the public sector net borrowing figure, he will find that it is a better estimate of that state. I am happy to discuss these matters with the Accounting Standards Board, but PFI projects are a precise issue, which we and the board are dealing with.

Mr. Geraint Davies (Croydon, Central): I welcome my right hon. Friend's statement, particularly on the public-private partnership in National Air Traffic Services. Will he reiterate that its employees can now look forward—perhaps through having their own shares—to having a real share in the success of the services; that safety, while independent of NATS, will remain paramount; and that, taken with new commercial freedoms for regional airports, his statement is good news for investment in Britain's transport infrastructure and, therefore, for prosperity and success up and down the land?

Mr. Brown: A high level of investment in the air traffic control service will be necessary in future years. We have proved in other initiatives in which we have been involved that private finance can be levered in to support the public investment that is being made. Our preferred option for National Air Traffic Services will do exactly that. As a result, both the employees and the users of the service will see enhanced investment in the future service. Our proposal for the independent, wholly publicly controlled regulatory body is designed to ensure that we have the safest air standards in the world. I believe that when people study the proposals as they come forward, they will find them worthy of support.

Mr. Peter Brooke (Cities of London and Westminster): I congratulate the Chancellor on keeping a straight face for most of his statement. What effect does he expect today's announcement to have for the balance of the year on the value of sterling?

Mr. Brown: The right hon. Gentleman, who is a former Treasury Minister, knows that it is not for me to comment on the day-to-day movement of sterling. I have already said that I share the worries of exporters about the level of sterling. Most of the questions to me were tabled when sterling was at DM3.10. It is now substantially lower than that. Indeed, it is only 2 to 3 per cent.—if I am right today—higher than it was when the Labour Government came to power last May. The big rise in sterling took place in the years and months before the general election. The sterling rate in relation to the dollar is virtually unchanged over the past two years.

As I said, I share the worries of exporters about the pound, but what they fear most of all is what we are taking steps today to eliminate: the stop-go in our public economy and our national finances. By taking steps to ensure stability, we are doing the best service to exporters.

Mr. Tam Dalyell (Linlithgow): Rather differently from my hon. Friend the Member for Croydon, Central (Mr. Davies), may I express concern about the air traffic controllers? Has there been discussion with the representatives of their unions? What technical advice has the Treasury received on safety? As I understand it, we are proposing something which no other country in the world has done. Every other country has a public air traffic control system. The temptations in certain circumstances to take short cuts could imperil safety.

Mr. Brown: I am grateful to my hon. Friend for raising the question. A statement is being made this afternoon by the Minister of Transport. In time, he will also publish his reply to the Select Committee report that examined all the issues in relation to air traffic control. The proposed independent regulator will ensure that the air safety standards are the best in the world.

My hon. Friend might consider that we need new investment at the highest possible levels in our air traffic control services, and if, as a result of the partnership that we propose, we can lever in private investment in addition to the existing public investment, that will ensure a better future for both the employees and the customers of National Air Traffic Services. I give my hon. Friend a guarantee that the best safety standards in the world are our objective.

Mr. John MacGregor (South Norfolk): I welcome the Chancellor's total reversal of his previous position and his conversion to the privatisation of National Air Traffic Services, but why the delay? Why did he not do that a year ago, as he could have done, as we urged him, and as the Civil Aviation Authority wanted, to avoid delaying its investment plans for a whole year?

Will the Chancellor answer the question on the private finance initiative that he has so far failed to answer? Will he give a guarantee that the Government will not engage in off-balance-sheet creative accounting on the new and substantial Government guarantees on private sector finance, such as the channel tunnel rail link, and will he include them in his public expenditure figure?

Mr. Brown: There is no question of that in the channel tunnel rail link proposals. The Deputy Prime Minister made clear the arrangements that we had agreed, which were put to independent authorities.

On air traffic control, we are determined to ensure the highest levels of investment that are necessary. When we came into government, the plans that the right hon. Gentleman suggests were well advanced were not well advanced at all. We have had to examine these matters in detail, and will continue to do so. I guarantee that we will want the highest standards of safety, and a public sector independent regulator will ensure that. Air traffic control will benefit, as will transport as a whole, from levering in more private investment. It is a private-public partnership in which the Government, under the preferred option, have 49 per cent. of the shares.

Mr. Alan Williams (Swansea, West): May I congratulate my right hon. Friend on his good luck in the choice of shadow Chancellor, whose performance today almost made his predecessor appear competent? May we assume that the proceeds from the sale of council assets will be invested by those same councils? If so, how will my right hon. Friend ensure that the asset-poor councils do not slip inexorably further and further behind the asset-rich councils?

Mr. Brown: I said in my statement that the Deputy Prime Minister and I were considering a new framework for investment by local authorities. We aim to raise the levels of investment in our vital assets. That new framework with local authorities will be discussed by the Deputy Prime Minister, in the case of England, and by the Secretaries of State for Wales, Northern Ireland and Scotland. Those discussions will take place in order to ensure that we secure the best use of our assets. I assure my right hon. Friend that the distribution will be fair.

[Mr. Brown]

Mr. Alex Salmond (Banff and Buchan): Does the Chancellor recall the phrase "selling the family silver" and the political criticisms that he once shared about the folly of basing an economic strategy on the wholesale disposal of public assets? Was it not the Labour party's position hitherto that privatisation of air traffic control would jeopardise the new air traffic investment promised to Prestwick? What assurances can the Chancellor give Prestwick workers that that new investment will be delivered under the new privatised arrangement?

Mr. Brown: It will not prejudice the new investment. We are talking about higher levels of investment after years of uncertainty. I hope that the Scottish National party will not start the sort of scaremongering that it indulged in on many other issues, only to be proved wrong. I made it absolutely clear at the general election that we were prepared to consider this issue, and we have done so.

As to the hon. Gentleman's point about the use of resources from privatisation, I remember reading that the shadow Chancellor had said that the great thing about privatisation is that it can be used for tax cuts. We are releasing resources that we do not need, in order to fund investments that we do need. In view of this country's infrastructure and what needs to be done in the health service, in education and in transport, we must take a modern view of how we shall equip ourselves for the future and be prepared to release assets that we do not need in order, to make the investments that we do need. I am sorry to say that, once again, the Scottish National party—with its extreme and old-fashioned views—opposes us.

Mr. Alan Simpson (Nottingham, South): May I congratulate the Chancellor on recognising that having a medium-term economic plan is better than not having one? It has been a long time since the House was in such a position.

I have two specific questions. First, I am sure that the Chancellor is aware of the considerable economic arguments, particularly in the private sector, regarding whether it is better to use one's asset base to borrow against for investment purposes or to sell parts of it in order to use the capital for investment purposes. Will he put in the Library the comparative analysis that led him to the conclusion that it was better to sell assets than to borrow against them?

Secondly, the Chancellor will know also that the distribution of assets among local authorities is as inconsistent and uneven as the distribution of capital receipts. Would he consider it acceptable if local authorities that do not have surplus lands were to advance proposals to sell the properties in which their tenants live or the school buildings in which children are educated and the lands on which those buildings stand?

Mr. Brown: The discussions that the Deputy Prime Minister is having with local authorities and other Secretaries of State will consider issues in relation to the use of resources.

I hope that my hon. Friend the Member for Nottingham, South (Mr. Simpson) will not raise groundless fears regarding particular assets that are important to individuals. His main question was about whether we would be prepared to relinquish some of our assets or to fund new investments by borrowing. I remind him that we inherited borrowing levels of £25 billion and that we are paying more in interest payments than we are paying to fund our schools. As a result of the previous Government's mismanagement, we are paying more in interest payments than we are spending on housing and law and order combined.

I want to create a situation where, instead of paying interest, we use the funds that we have to invest in our future. As I said in my statement, if we had continued with the debt-to-GDP ratio that we inherited from the previous Government, we would have been funding an additional cumulative total of £25 billion in interest payments over this Parliament. I am not prepared to use public money to do that when we want to be able to put it directly into houses, hospitals, schools and transport infrastructure.

My hon. Friend asked whether we are prepared to borrow. The answer is yes, but within limits. We are not, however, prepared to borrow in a way that would amass huge interest payments—that money could be better used for other things. I hope that he will now agree with me.

Sir Michael Spicer (West Worcestershire): Having given up control of monetary policy, the Chancellor of the Exchequer apparently intends to give up year-on-year control of fiscal policy, so what will be the point of his job? Perhaps he should consider adding the Treasury to the excellent list of sales that he announced today.

Mr. Brown: The hon. Gentleman spends most of his time criticising me for measures that I have taken, so I presume that he thinks that some of my decisions are sufficiently controversial not to be written off as irrelevant.

At the Treasury, we have inherited a situation in terms of debt and borrowing levels that has to be dealt with. We must reform the public finances, and the Chief Secretary and Ministers are doing that. I hope that, by the end of that process, the hon. Gentleman will agree that we have done things that should have been done a long time ago.

Mr. Barry Sheerman (Huddersfield): May I congratulate my right hon. Friend on his radicalism and his pragmatism in his statement? He has been radical; we all know that longer-term planning makes sense and that some of the ideological baggage on this side needed to be buried, and buried now. Will he ensure that his radicalism carries through to the sort of investment that we need in this country? We must prioritise investment that leads to value added wealth creation in enterprise, innovation and intellectual property.

Mr. Brown: I agree entirely with my hon. Friend, and he rightly points to the wholly unacceptable neglect of investment over recent years. When hon. Members absorb the fact that, under our proposals, it will be possible to invest £31 billion in the last year of this Parliament to improve the infrastructure of this country as a result of the tough decisions that they are taking, they will begin to see the difference that we can make to public services and infrastructure.

We shall, of course, do that in a way that gives us a long-term plan for the future. The public-private partnerships that we propose are a means to realise resources for investments elsewhere and, at the same time, to lever in private finance to enhance the public investments that we are making. The policy of long-termism—planning for the long term—is one which we shall continue to pursue.

My hon. Friend mentioned investment in innovation and science. I can tell him that that is one of the priorities that we have identified. Hospitals, schools and transport are priorities, as are housing and building stronger communities, but I also mentioned the science and technology base. I hope that we will be able to show results in that area when we come to the end of the spending review. The rundown of science and technology under the previous Government is something which no Government should have allowed, and something which we are not prepared to tolerate.

Rev. Martin Smyth (Belfast, South): I welcome the general thrust of the statement, especially the long-term view. About 13 years ago in the Northern Ireland assembly, we had carry-over from Departments so that we did not have mad spending at the end of a period.

May I press the Chancellor on the concept of the continual review to update matters? Will we have open accountancy so that we can see where the money is going? It is amazing how money is missed time and again in normal business practices, and we must admit that, even in Government circles, it is hard to understand some of the accountancy.

Mr. Brown: I hope that the hon. Gentleman agrees that some of the announcements that we have already been able to make in Northern Ireland have allowed us to begin to make provision for enhancing the infrastructure of the country in roads and railways, and in new investment in airports. That is an important means by which we can help to create new job opportunities and encourage businesses in the area. We shall continue to do that as a contribution to matching prosperity with peace in Northern Ireland.

As for the hon. Gentleman's point about openness of access, I entirely agree with him that independent audit and public scrutiny are needed. That is why the National Audit Office has been called on to scrutinise our figures and some of our assumptions—as it will continue to do—and why we are prepared to be judged on the basis of the fiscal rules that we set down. The fiscal responsibility clause in the Finance Bill shows that we are prepared to be judged on the basis of regular reporting to Parliament on these issues.

I hope that the hon. Gentleman will agree that that system is far preferable to the one that we had before. It means long-termism, which he has supported, along with openness and proper scrutiny. That is right for Parliament.

Mr. Paul Goggins (Wythenshawe and Sale, East): I thank my right hon. Friend for his statement. Will he spell out in more detail its implications for Manchester airport? Sixteen million passengers travel through the airport each year, and 15,000 people work there. It is estimated that that figure could be doubled by 2005, with proper investment. Can my right hon. Friend confirm that greater commercial freedom for Manchester airport will mean greater freedom to invest, bringing jobs to my constituency and to the north-west as a whole?

Mr. Brown: It is exactly because we want further investment, and want to give greater commercial freedom to enable it to take place, that we are making this provision as part of our comprehensive spending review. Manchester airport, which I have visited, has expanded enormously in recent years, and is set to expand again. We want to give that profitable airport the commercial freedom in key areas that will enable it to make the investments that will be necessary for the future. I hope that in Manchester, as well as in other areas where the same will happen, the move will be welcome. It is a contribution to a modern airports policy.

Mr. Nicholas Winterton (Macclesfield): If the Chancellor is genuinely determined to adopt long-termism as against short-termism, and to facilitate greater capital investment publicly, privately and in partnerships with, for instance, Manchester international airport—a magnificent airport, serving the north-west—he has my support.

Wearing my hat as Chairman of the Procedure Committee, however, and describing the right hon. Gentleman as a modernising Chancellor, may I ask whether he backs the Committee in its desire to ensure that the House can scrutinise the estimates and public expenditure more effectively than it does at present? The current structure and system are outdated.

Mr. Brown: I am grateful to the hon. Gentleman for his initial remarks. I think that he speaks more for mainstream opinion than many Conservative Members, although they know that further investment—indeed, the modernisation of our infrastructure—must take place, and that we are making the tough decisions that are necessary to achieve that. I hope that the hon. Gentleman will continue to speak out boldly on the issues that matter.

As for what the hon. Gentleman said about the Procedure Committee, I have talked to my right hon. Friend the Leader of the House, who is sitting beside me. We will consider the matter, but I cannot give the hon. Gentleman a final answer now.

Mr. Stephen Timms (East Ham): Will the Chancellor ensure that the welcome increase in public investment that he has announced is targeted where it is most needed, so that we can tackle effectively the legacy of social exclusion and unequal public services left by the last Government?

Mr. Brown: I thank my hon. Friend for drawing attention to one part of my statement—the announcement of public investment to enable us to build stronger and safer communities.

Historically in this country, money invested in our communities has not been invested in a way that has tackled the causes of poverty, deprivation and unemployment. As part of the new deal for the communities in which my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister is involved, I want us to look at problems of social exclusion—in particular, at the causes of social exclusion—and to establish how, by investing in education or by providing new business opportunities, we can create the jobs that will enable people to move out of poverty.

[Mr. Brown]

I assure my hon. Friend that tackling social exclusion is a major priority of this Government. I want a country in which there is opportunity for all, and in which everyone knows that he or she has a contribution to make.

Mr. Dafydd Wigley (Caernarfon): Does the Chancellor accept that the broad welcome given to his statement by Conservative Back Benchers reflects the fact that he has today set in concrete Tory spending levels for the rest of the current Parliament? How on earth will he be able to adjust his policy to the reality of life year on year and the state of the economic cycle, when he plans to have precisely 39.25 per cent. of gross national product as current expenditure in each year?

Mr. Brown: In one sense, I am grateful to the right hon. Gentleman, who has drawn attention to the problems of investment. He does not, however, follow me down the road in understanding what we must do about those problems. I propose that we invest in our future, and release funds with which to do so. The right hon. Gentleman should support me in that.

The funds to which I refer owe nothing to Conservative underinvestment in our future. The Conservatives refused to invest. Investment as a share of gross domestic product fell to 0.8 per cent; we inherited that problem, and are trying to deal with it. The right hon. Gentleman should support us when we are trying to secure more hospitals and schools, and a better transport infrastructure—but is this not typical of the nationalist parties, which are so extreme that they will not see the need for investment in our future?

Several hon. Members rose—

Madam Speaker: Order. We must move on. [Interruption.] I know that hon. Members are disappointed and are heaving sighs, but I have the names of those who have not been called, and I shall try to call them on another occasion. Forty-nine Members were rising to question the Chancellor, and they could not all be called in the space of an hour and a quarter.

Business of the House

4.45 pm

The President of the Council and Leader of the House of Commons (Mrs. Ann Taylor): I should like to make a statement about the business for next week.

MONDAY 15 JUNE—Consideration in Committee of the Northern Ireland (Sentences) Bill.

TUESDAY 16 JUNE—Opposition Day (13th allotted day).

Until about 7 pm, there will be a debate on NHS waiting lists, followed by a debate entitled "The crisis in Scottish local government". Both debates will arise on Opposition motions.

Motion on the Council Tax Limitation (Derbyshire County Council) (Maximum Amount) Order.

WEDNESDAY 17 JUNE—Until 12.30 pm, debate on the fourth report from the Social Security Committee on disability living allowance, followed by a debate on the first report from the Defence Committee on peace support operations in Bosnia and Herzegovina, followed by debates on the motion for the Adjournment of the House.

For three hours, consideration in Committee of the Human Rights Bill [Lords] (second allotted day).

For three hours, conclusion of consideration in Committee of the Northern Ireland (Sentences) Bill.

THURSDAY 18 JUNE—For three hours, remaining stages of the Northern Ireland (Sentences) Bill.

Motion on the Church of England National Institutions Measure.

FRIDAY 19 JUNE—Debate entitled "Enterprising UK—the small business agenda" on a motion for the Adjournment of the House.

The provisional business for the following week will be as follows.

MONDAY 22 JUNE—Progress on remaining stages of the Crime and Disorder Bill [Lords].

TUESDAY 23 JUNE—Conclusion of remaining stages of the Crime and Disorder Bill [Lords].

WEDNESDAY 24 JUNE—Until 2 pm, there will be debates on the motion for the Adjournment of the House.

Consideration in Committee of the Human Rights Bill [Lords] (third allotted day).

THURSDAY 25 JUNE—Opposition Day (14th allotted day).

There will be a debate on an Opposition motion in the name of the minority parties. Subject to be announced.

FRIDAY 26 JUNE—The House will not be sitting.

Sir George Young (North-West Hampshire): We are grateful to the right hon. Lady for giving us details of next week's business and an indication of the business for the following week.

We are particularly pleased to learn that there will be a debate on the Floor of the House on the Derbyshire rate-capping order. Can the right hon. Lady confirm that her Government will follow the practice that has existed up until now—that if central Government want to control the expenditure of local government, that raises issues of sufficient importance for them to be debated on the Floor of the House rather than in a Standing Committee?

We have just heard a very important statement from the Chancellor of the Exchequer, which will be followed by another statement next month on the comprehensive expenditure review, setting the financial parameters for spending for the rest of this Parliament. Does the right hon. Lady agree that that raises issues of such importance that the House must debate them before we rise for the summer recess?

Can the right hon. Lady confirm that, contrary to what we had been led to believe, there will not be a statement next week or the week after on the transport White Paper? The reason that has now been given—that it has to follow the comprehensive expenditure review—goes clean against what the Government had said until a few days ago, which was that the White Paper would come first. Will she confirm that the real reason for the delay in the transport White Paper is the serious disagreement between the Prime Minister and the Deputy Prime Minister?

Can the right hon. Lady confirm that a statement will be made to the House on the outcome of the strategic defence review when that has been completed? Is she aware of the growing uncertainty in the armed forces caused by the delay in the completion of that exercise?

May I revert to a question that I posed last week about the Select Committee on Foreign Affairs and its request for a debate? The right hon. Lady said that the matter had been "overtaken by events". Does she, on reflection, agree that that is not the case? The request remains outstanding, and the Foreign Affairs Committee has rejected the offer by the Foreign Secretary.

As the Modernisation Committee addresses itself to the future of the parliamentary calendar, will the right hon. Lady turn her mind to the future of the summer recess and let us know whether she plans to invite the House to sit in August?

Mrs. Taylor: I shall deal with the right hon. Gentleman's points individually. I hope that he will accept that the usual channels work well on occasions. We are willing to be reasonable and to listen to representations. It is right that requests should be dealt with case by case. I am glad that we were able to reach an accommodation to enable the order relating to Derbyshire county council to be taken on the Floor of the House.

The right hon. Gentleman asked whether it would be possible to have a debate on today's statement from the Chancellor and next month's statement on the comprehensive spending review. I think that it will be possible to have such a debate before the summer recess. We should perhaps have further discussions through the usual channels about the exact timing and nature of that debate.

The right hon. Gentleman asked for a statement on transport. I hope that that will be made after the comprehensive spending review, but before the summer recess. That shows that we shall be extremely busy at that time, because he also asked for a statement on the strategic defence review. He should not complain about the fact that that review is taking some time. Given his previous interest in that matter, he will no doubt agree that such consideration should be extremely thorough.

The right hon. Gentleman referred to the Foreign Affairs Committee. I said last week that discussions were taking place. I understand that the Committee is still considering what it wants to happen, and the subject is with it at the moment.

The right hon. Gentleman asked about the Modernisation Committee and the summer recess. We would all like as much notice as possible of the summer recess, but I am afraid that I cannot give details at this stage.

Mr. Paddy Tipping (Sherwood): Could we have a statement next week about the Government's energy policy and the consequences for the deep-mined coal industry? The Leader of the House will be aware that the current agreements run out on 30 June. In coalfield communities, not just in Nottinghamshire but all over the country, coal miners are asking for fairness, not favours. There is an urgency about the matter now.

Mrs. Taylor: I am aware of the deadlines surrounding the issue, and I hope that a statement can be made about it shortly.

Mr. Paul Tyler (North Cornwall): May I put two questions to the Leader of the House on matters that concern the role and the perception of the role of Parliament, and the way in which we conduct our business?

First, will the right hon. Lady give us some guidance on the status of the consultants' report that has come into my hands, on the issue of the Line of Route visitors to both Houses? It would appear that consultants are investigating the possibility of charging our constituents who visit the House perhaps £9.50, which is comparable with the charge to visit Buckingham palace, or £5, which Westminster abbey charges. Will she give us an assurance that those proposals will be considered carefully? Who in the House has seen the proposals, and on what basis was the consultancy report prepared? Will she assure us that she will defend the rights of our constituents to come free of charge to the House, to see how the people's Parliament operates?

Secondly, does the right hon. Lady feel that we can draw lessons from the success or otherwise of the experiment with programme Committees? Will she pay particular attention to what happened in the House on Monday evening, when, sadly, we did not have a proper opportunity either to debate or to divide on the vital issue of tuition fees, which I think she will acknowledge is one of the central proposals in the Teaching and Higher Education Bill? If the House is not able to scrutinise such proposals and give a view on them, the other place must have the opportunity to spend a considerable time doing so. Is not the lesson from what happened on Monday night that programme Committees should be a great deal more scrupulous in recognising the needs of both sides of the House, particularly Opposition parties, and should not simply do the bidding of the Government party? I hope that the right hon. Lady will acknowledge that there are lessons to be learned, and that the Modernisation Committee will shortly be given an opportunity to see what can be learned from our experience so far.

Mrs. Taylor: I am aware of the report about the Line of Route visitors, although I have not yet seen it. I shall put the report in context. There is no proposal to charge constituents for coming to see Members of Parliament or how Parliament works. At present, this building is not open to the public during the summer recess or at weekends. A study has rightly been carried out to see whether it would be possible to provide greater access to this historic building. Many tourists would want to visit the building if it were open at those times. It is right to consider charging in that context, but only in that context. We are still some way from any decision on the matter.

[Mrs. Taylor]

Programme motions and the Business Committee allocate the time that it is agreed should be devoted to any Bill. It is an all-party process: that is the essence of the agreement reached. I understand that an agreement was reached among all parties for the Bill that was debated on Monday. Decisions sometimes depend on which amendments are selected or are selectable. I refute the hon. Gentleman's claim that those Committees do the Government's bidding. All parties are represented, and there has always been agreement among the parties on the allocation of time within the overall limits. If there are lessons to be learned, it is right that we should learn them. This is an experimental process, and if anything can be done to improve the way in which we work, we should look into it.

Mr. Tam Dalyell (Linlithgow): On the understandably timetabled business for Monday, would the Government look kindly on an amendment that would allow us to discuss the problems of the case of Guardsmen Fisher and Wright, with a view to clarifying their position? That case can now be discussed in the House of Commons only under privilege, as Mr. Ernest Telford, lawyer of Belfast, has taken legal action that makes it very difficult for papers such as The Spectator, the Daily Mail and others to have a serious discussion of the case, which is of deep public interest and concern. As it is only under privilege that the country can have a proper discussion of the case, will there be an opportunity for that amendment to be selected?

Mrs. Taylor: I am aware that my hon. Friend has tabled an amendment on that subject. It is not for me but for the Chair to decide whether such an amendment should be selected. If it is, I am sure that my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland will be as informative as she can in her response to a debate on that topic.

Mr. Philip Hammond (Runnymede and Weybridge): Is the right hon. Lady aware of the damning report by Sir Herbert Laming on the crisis in child protection in the Labour-controlled London borough of Ealing, which is to be published by the Department of Health this evening? It says that in Ealing

"children in public care and on the child protection register cannot be considered to be adequately safeguarded."

Is she further aware that the Under-Secretary of State for Health, who has responsibility for children's issues, has already issued a press statement saying how deeply concerned he is by that matter, and that he will call in the London borough of Ealing for consultation with him? Will she arrange for a statement by the Minister next week?

Mrs. Taylor: The hon. Gentleman raises what is obviously a serious problem that will concern hon. Members on both sides of the House. He mentioned that my hon. Friend the Minister has expressed his concern about that matter and is talking to the local authority involved. I shall ensure that the hon. Gentleman's comments are brought to my hon. Friend's attention, and I am sure that my hon. Friend will respond directly to him.

Mr. Michael Clapham (Barnsley, West and Penistone): Will my right hon. Friend consider allowing time to debate the latest report by the Select Committee on Trade and Industry on energy policy? In that debate, we may be able to ascertain whether Lord Wakeham, who made a declaration in the House of Lords on 4 June that he was a director of Enron, the largest gas corporation in the world, knew that he would become a director of that company when, as a Minister in this House, he implemented privatisation plans for electricity. Those plans rigged the market against coal and pushed coal over the cliff.

Mrs. Taylor: The Government have welcomed the Select Committee's report and its contribution to the important debate on energy policy. My hon. Friend specifically refers to certain aspects of that report, and he may want to pursue them further either in an Adjournment debate or at Question Time next Thursday.

Sir David Madel (South-West Bedfordshire): Will the right hon. Lady think again about her answer to the hon. Member for North Cornwall (Mr. Tyler)? There was an agreement on the Teaching and Higher Education Bill as to the amount of time that should be spent on it—nine hours—but surely, when the Opposition parties agree to the total amount of time, they should have the right to slice up that time as they see fit. We should be allowed to discuss the amendments that we want. The Government should not be so greedy in wanting everything.

Will the right hon. Lady please arrange for the Deputy Prime Minister to come to the Dispatch Box on Monday to make a statement? There will be a two-day strike on the tube, which will cause great inconvenience. We should like to know how the Labour Government will sort that matter out. After all, a year ago, they said that left can talk to left. Why do we not find out what has happened?

Mrs. Taylor: I have little to add to what I said about programme motions. I agree with the hon. Gentleman's comment that no one should be greedy. All views have to be taken into consideration; that, of course, includes the views of the Government, as well as those of others who might table amendments. The agreement on that programme motion encompassed all parties.

Industrial action on the tube would, of course, be regrettable. We hope that all those involved in these potential disputes will make every effort to achieve a quick resolution. None of us wants passengers to be inconvenienced. It is important that all the ramifications are taken into account by those involved.

Mr. Gordon Prentice (Pendle): Is it possible to have an early debate, before the debate on the White Paper on integrated transport strategy, on the Government's policy on clean vehicle technology? I say that in the context of today's deputation at Westminster, by Lucas Aerospace. My right hon. Friend may know that it has served redundancy notices on 70 employees. If that goes through, it will mean the end of the only UK plant manufacturing cylinders for natural gas to power clean vehicles. That is of immense importance not just to Burnley—my hon. Friend the Member for Burnley (Mr. Pike) is with the deputation at the moment and cannot be with me—but to my constituency. In a wider sense, it is of immense importance to the UK.

Mrs. Taylor: I agree that clean vehicle technology is of immense importance. My hon. Friend will be aware of the work that my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister has been doing in that sector. I cannot promise my hon. Friend the debate that he and my hon. Friend the Member for Burnley (Mr. Pike) wish to have in Government time in the near future, but one of them may wish to apply for an Adjournment debate.

Mr. Patrick McLoughlin (West Derbyshire): May I thank the Leader of the House for arranging for the debate on the capping of Derbyshire county council finally to be taken on the Floor of the House? Was it not disgraceful that the Government attempted to debate that in Committee, which has never happened to any previous capping order? As a senior member of the Government and as an upholder of the rights of Members of Parliament, will she comment on the fact that the Government's original plans were to ensure that no Derbyshire Labour Members were appointed to the Committee to discuss the measure? Following strong representations from the Opposition, Derbyshire Labour Members will be fully able to support the Government next Tuesday, if they so wish, on that capping measure.

Mrs. Taylor: I should have thought that the hon. Gentleman would have been partly wearing his new hat and accepting that, on this occasion, the usual channels worked well.

Mr. John Cryer (Hornchurch): Can the Leader of the House find time for a debate on the past 10 years of British foreign policy? It would allow the House to consider the contrast between the open and straightforward way in which this Government have dealt with the Sierra Leone question, and the way in which the scandalous and seedy manipulations of the previous Government led to the Pergau dam scandal, arms to Iraq and the Scott inquiry, during which they tried to manipulate the situation, so that the then shadow Foreign Secretary had only three hours to read five volumes before the statement. It is a scandalous and sorry story, which continues with the apparent machinations of Secret Agent Aitken.

Mrs. Taylor: I am in a slightly dangerous position because the Foreign Secretary is here echoing the demands of my hon. Friend. I have to tell them both that I do not see the prospect of that specific debate in the near future, but I understand its attraction.

Sir Sydney Chapman (Chipping Barnet): May I join my right hon. Friend the Member for North-West Hampshire (Sir G. Young), the shadow Leader of the House, in asking the right hon. Lady to look favourably on the need to find time for a debate on the statement that has just been made by the Chancellor, but may I differ with my right hon. Friend in one respect: we need that debate to take place ahead of the comprehensive spending review statement that the Chancellor will make next month? In the meantime, does she recognise that what the Chancellor said in relation to air traffic control, the Commonwealth Development Corporation and the Royal Mint presented an unassailable case for the privatisation of London Transport and the Post Office, among other public businesses, even if she and he prefer to call privatisation by any other name?

Mrs. Taylor: On this matter, I agree with the shadow Leader of the House that it would be appropriate to have a debate after the comprehensive spending review, and I think that I made my position clear on that. On London Underground or, indeed, the channel tunnel rail link, we should congratulate the Deputy Prime Minister on the new approach that he has adopted and the successful partnerships that he has been negotiating. The whole House should wish them well.

Mr. Tony McNulty (Harrow, East): My right hon. Friend will know that, in recent weeks, the London crime statistics have been published and that, in many national newspapers today, there is extreme concern about corruption among a small core of those in the Metropolitan police. It is usually at about this time of year that we have the annual Adjournment debate on policing in London. Would it be possible to squeeze it in this side of the recess, or may I have an assurance that it will take place as soon as possible after we return?

Mrs. Taylor: My hon. Friend is right to say that there is usually a debate on crime in London at this time, but it is not that long since we had one, and it is more likely that the debate will take place later in the year, rather than in the next few weeks.

Mr. David Tredinnick (Bosworth): The Leader of the House will be aware that there are now three early-day motions on the Order Paper expressing concern about the Government's proposals to restrict the sale of vitamin B6; there are 177 signatures on one of the motions. Indeed, the Select Committee on Agriculture has examined the matter. Is she aware that many scientists in Britain believe that the report that the Government have used is fundamentally flawed, and that that view is backed up by the United States national academy of science, which suggests that the Government have got this completely wrong? Given the huge concern in the House and in the country—I speak having served for 10 years as an officer of the parliamentary group for alternative and complementary medicine; I have never seen as much concern on any other issue—does she not think that it is time for the Government to provide Government time to debate that matter? Restricting the sale of vitamin B6, if it goes ahead, will seriously affect ladies suffering from PMT, elderly people with Alzheimer's disease and a range of people who rely on vitamin supplements, particularly vitamin B6, to alleviate their afflictions.

Mrs. Taylor: I think that we all have received representations from constituents about vitamin B6. The hon. Gentleman specifically mentioned the report produced in the United States. The Government have seen that report and Ministers have announced that they will take account of it in considering their responses to the consultation exercise. My hon. Friend the Minister of State, Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food has been considering the matter carefully. I can assure the hon. Gentleman that all representations have been taken into account.

[Mrs. Taylor]

Judy Mallaber (Amber Valley): Does my right hon. Friend accept that Labour Members representing Derbyshire constituencies look forward to the opportunity on Tuesday to promote our beautiful county, welcome the opportunity to discuss the council's successes in view of the Conservatives' intransigence towards our county over the past 18 years and are pleased that the Government have recognised our financial difficulties and allowed us to raise the spending limits? Does she agree that it promises to be an interesting debate as Conservative Members are now asking why the Government have not given Derbyshire everything it wants, when, previously, Conservative Members and local councillors were saying that the council should not ask for anything at all?

Mrs. Taylor: It will be an extremely interesting debate. The cap on Derbyshire has been increased by £2.9 million. Such debates often do not turn out in the way that some hon. Members expect. My hon. Friend's analysis is probably nearer to what is likely to happen than that of some Conservative Members.

Mr. Norman Baker (Lewes): May I ask the Leader of the House for a debate on the important subject of genetic engineering? Is she aware that genetically modified crops are being planted in Britain, genetically modified food is on sale and experiments are being conducted in which animals are being genetically manipulated? Is she further aware that it is a matter of great concern to many people, including one who I understand I am not allowed to name in the House? Does she understand that the Government's ability to respond to the issue is being fatally undermined by the fact that the responsibility is split across so many Government Departments? Will she draw that fact to the attention of the Prime Minister?

Mrs. Taylor: The Government are determined to ensure that the use of genetic modifications to produce new crops and foods does not threaten public health or environmental safety. We are aware of all the issues that are involved and have campaigned in the European Union for better labelling, so that the public are properly informed. Full public consultations on the matter will take place in the next few months. The hon. Gentleman's point about proper co-ordination among Government Departments has been taken on board and, taking the wider issues into account, that is one reason why we have proposed a Food Standards Agency.

Mr. Barry Sheerman (Huddersfield): Does my right hon. Friend agree that the essence of democracy is the ability of the legislature to check the Executive? Is it not the case that it is difficult to check the Executive when they perform their role collectively in Europe? May we have an early debate on that complicated issue? Many of us feel that legislatures across Europe are very weak vis-a-vis the ever-powerful and growing Executive tiger. Will she accept my invitation to join a group of parliamentarians from across Europe who are meeting tomorrow in Church house to discuss ways in which we can set up a virtual assembly, whereby nearly 5,000 parliamentarians will communicate using modern technology, so that we can start plotting and planning the downfall, or at least the curbing, of the European Executive?

Mrs. Taylor: I do not know whether my hon. Friend was planning to speak in this afternoon's debate, but I should have thought that he could make a significant contribution were he minded to do so and fortunate enough to catch your eye, Madam Speaker. I should also draw his attention to a report that the Modernisation Committee hopes to publish next week, on how the House deals with European legislation. It proposes some important alterations to the way in which we consider European legislation, which would benefit all concerned. I hope that my hon. Friend will welcome that report. He could develop his other points further this afternoon.

Mr. Nigel Evans (Ribble Valley): Has the Leader of the House seen early-day motion 266?

[That this House welcomes Scope's report, Polls Apart 2—Disabled People and the 1997 General Election, which shows that 94 per cent. of polling stations surveyed on 1st May were inaccessible to disabled people voting independently, and that some disabled people were either unable to vote or were injured trying to get into their polling stations, the majority of which were located in public buildings; recognises that the majority of disabled people interviewed by Scope wanted to vote in person on election day and rejected postal votes as a suitable alternative; and calls on the Government to review the Disability Discrimination Act 1995 and Home Office guidance to returning officers with a view to removing the barriers that currently prevent disabled people from exercising their right to vote.]

The motion deals with "Polls Apart 2", Scope's survey of the inaccessibility of polling stations during elections. I understand that a House of Commons Committee is looking at electoral reform. Can the right hon. Lady ensure that it looks carefully at the accessibility of polling stations, so that disabled people can vote in person, and the possibility of extending the time limits for postal votes? The new technology that was just mentioned by the hon. Member for Huddersfield (Mr. Sheerman) should mean that more people would have access to postal votes.

Mrs. Taylor: The hon. Gentleman again raises an issue that should be of concern to us all, as we are elected through a democratic process. We should all want to make it easier for everyone to vote in person, wherever possible. We welcome the report that has been published and we are committed to establishing comprehensive and enforceable civil rights for disabled people. At present, we are considering how best to take forward that commitment and how advice and guidance to acting returning officers can be improved. We all have examples of such problems; before the general election, many hon. Members contacted returning officers in an effort to improve matters. I hope that we can build on that good work.

Mr. Patrick Nicholls (Teignbridge): May I ask the right hon. Lady to consider—if not next week, in the fairly near future—a full-day debate on the crisis in British agriculture? When the matter was last discussed in the House on 21 May, there was a three-hour debate in which the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food spoke for three-quarters of an hour. He glazed over Agenda 2000, barely mentioned agrimonetary policy and neglected to address the catastrophic fall in farm incomes. British agriculture needs a proper airing in the House, and the way in which the time was divided up on that day simply did not give it due credit. Will the right hon. Lady consider providing a full-day debate, so that all the issues can be discussed properly?

Mrs. Taylor: Ministers have made it clear, as has my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister, that the Government are aware of the problems faced by many people in agriculture. I would have hoped that the hon. Gentleman might have included in his reasons for a debate the excellent news that the European Commission has agreed a proposal for a date-based export scheme. Although there is a long way to go on that, perhaps he could put his comments in that context, too.

I cannot promise a debate in the near future, but I understand the concerns that were expressed by hon. Members on both sides of the House at the time taken by Front Benchers in that and other debates on similar topics. It is important that those of us who speak from the Front Bench understand the pressures on the time of the House and do our best to make sure that as many hon. Members as possible have the opportunity to speak.

Sir Patrick Cormack (South Staffordshire): Would the right hon. Lady be kind enough to look again at the answer that she gave my right hon. Friend the Member for North–West Hampshire (Sir G. Young) on the special report of the Foreign Affairs Committee? We are asking essentially a very simple question. The Committee said that it wished to gauge the feelings of the House. Will she please provide an opportunity for the House to express its views in the very near future?

Mrs. Taylor: As I said earlier, the Select Committee is still considering the matter. My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has heard that the Select Committee will be writing to him, but he has not yet received a letter on that point. At the moment, I do not think that it will serve any useful purpose to take it further in the House.

Sir George Young: On a point of order, Madam Speaker. It concerns a matter on which I have written to you—the treatment by Ministers of questions from hon. Members. In respect of oral questions, you were good enough to say on 11 May:

> "I certainly expect Ministers to tackle them and to give a proper answer."—[Official Report, 11 May 1998; Vol. 312, c. 22.]

As for written questions, a number of my colleagues have tabled specific and factual written parliamentary questions, which were accepted by the Table Office. They have received replies from Ministers that refer them to previous ministerial statements or to other documents. However, nowhere in those statements or documents can the answer to the questions be found. Madam Speaker, are you prepared to give on the record a ruling on written replies that is similar to the one that you gave on oral replies?

Madam Speaker: I am grateful to the right hon. Gentleman for giving me some indication earlier of his point of order. My advice to Ministers on answering written questions is exactly the same as the advice that I recently gave on answering supplementary questions to oral questions. As the right hon. Gentleman will be the first to appreciate, the satisfaction of the questioner cannot always be guaranteed. However, for all that, I expect Ministers to tackle all questions asked of them and to give a proper answer. In view of the right hon. Gentleman's comments on questions and answers, I wonder whether it might be a good suggestion if I were to ask him to give some specific examples to the Leader of the House, who is in the Chamber. I am sure that she would be interested to see those examples.

Cardiff European Council

[Relevant documents: Minutes of Evidence taken by the Foreign Affairs Committee on 2nd June (HC 387-ii); White Paper on Developments in the European Union July-December 1997 (Cm 3961); and Proposals for Council Decisions on the Principles, Priorities, Intermediate Objectives and Conditions contained in the Accession Partnerships (presented by the Commission)—ten unnumbered Explanatory Memoranda submitted by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office on 25th February 1998 (Bulgaria, Czech Republic, Estonia, Hungary, Latvia, Lithuania, Poland, Romania, Slovakia, Slovenia) Council Number 6637/98 COM (98)53 final.]

Motion made, and Question proposed, That this House do now adjourn.—[Mr. Kevin Hughes.]

5.20 pm

The Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (Mr. Robin Cook): I am pleased to announce at the outset of this debate that, today, the House of Lords has not insisted on its amendment to the European Communities (Amendment) Bill. The Bill's parliamentary stages are now complete. We hope that Royal Assent will be granted very shortly, opening the way for the United Kingdom to ratify the treaty of Amsterdam in the near future. We shall be among the first three countries in Europe to do so. Under the previous Administration, the United Kingdom was one of the last two countries to ratify the Maastricht treaty. That contrast underlines the new priority and commitment that this Administration have given to Europe, and provides an excellent basis on which, on Sunday, we can welcome to Cardiff the leaders of the 15 member states of the European Union.

The leaders' agenda will be wide ranging. On Monday, they will meet Finance Ministers to discuss economic reform. At lunchtime, my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister will lead a discussion on the future direction of Europe. On Monday afternoon, they will discuss progress on enlarging the European Union, and the Agenda 2000 issues, such as reforming the common agricultural policy, simplifying the structural funds and securing budget discipline.

On Tuesday morning, the leaders will debate the summit's conclusions, including proposals from Foreign Ministers on current issues in foreign policy. It is with those foreign policy issues that I wish to start my speech.

On Monday, I chaired the preparatory meeting for Cardiff of Foreign Ministers, at which our discussion on the crisis in Kosovo was the most grave and sombre of our presidency. At the start of last week, Serbian security forces mounted a major military operation, with support from the Yugoslav army. Heavy machine guns and anti-tank weapons were used against villages and towns in Kosovo, particularly along the border area with Albania. The clear objective of the offensive was to empty those towns and villages of their civilian population. It is our belief that, last week, about 50,000 people were rendered homeless. Most of them were women and children; few could ever have been members of the Kosovo Liberation Army.

Monday's meeting of Foreign Ministers strongly condemned the ratcheting up of military violence, and expressed our firm belief that

"these attacks are beginning to constitute a new wave of ethnic cleansing."

In our statement, we specifically reaffirmed that the remit of the war crimes tribunal on Yugoslavia applies to all parts of the former Yugoslavia, including Kosovo. Those who carry out extra-judicial killings or crimes against humanitarian law should not do so in the hope that they will escape justice.

In the meantime, the urgent task is to halt the violence. At the United Nations, Britain has taken the lead in the Security Council to seek a resolution, under chapter VII, that will provide a mandate for all necessary action to halt the conflict. I am pleased to report to the House that, on Monday, the Foreign Ministers of European countries unanimously expressed their support for such a resolution. As we speak, NATO Defence Ministers are meeting to hear reports from their military advisers, who are considering all options that might be taken under that mandate.

Tomorrow, I shall host a meeting in London of the Group of Eight Foreign Ministers, which was originally called to discuss nuclear escalation in India and Pakistan. All members of the contact group on the former Yugoslavia are represented on the G8. We will, therefore, take the opportunity of our gathering tomorrow to hold a special meeting of the contact group, to send a clear signal of our resolve to Belgrade.

President Milosevic must bear personal responsibility for the crisis in Kosovo. Last week, he authorised violence on a scale that has not been seen in the former Yugoslavia since the truce in Bosnia three years ago. He should not make the heavy mistake of assuming that, this time, the international community will be as slow to react as it was in the early years of the crisis in Bosnia. Nor can he hope to find a place for his country in the modern Europe unless he starts to abide by the democratic standards of modern Europe.

In the past fortnight, President Milosevic has removed the broadcasting licences of 33 independent radio stations. At the same time, he has given separate broadcasting licences to his wife, to his son and to his daughter. No one can be fooled that that outcome reflects an impartial assessment of the respective merits of those applications.

Finally, before leaving the subject of Kosovo, I should emphasise that Europe condemns the use of violence for political ends by either side. The violent repression by President Milosevic has been totally counter-productive: it has strengthened the Kosovo Liberation Army. However, the Kosovo Liberation Army's activities will not liberate the people of Kosovo, but will only ensure the continuation of their suffering. Our support in Kosovo is for the elected leadership of the Kosovar people, who, to their credit, have consistently pursued a peaceful path towards their goal of autonomy.

For that reason, as we hold the presidency of the European Union, I shall this evening receive Dr. Rugova, the elected leader of the Kosovar people, to demonstrate our support for those among the Kosovars who seek a negotiated, not a violent, means of achieving their aspirations. I am confident that both sides of the House will wish me today to convey to Dr. Rugova our united respect for his support for peace, and our resolve to halt the violence.

Mr. Tam Dalyell (Linlithgow) rose—

Mr. Menzies Campbell (North–East Fife): I would not disagree with anything that the Foreign Secretary has said in the past moment or two, and I welcome his comments on his intention of receiving Mr. Rugova later today. However, the Foreign Secretary will be aware that the possibility of obtaining a resolution on suitable terms from the Security Council of the United Nations will depend on Russia's attitude. Is he able—consistent with the usual diplomatic niceties—to give us some indication of what exchanges he has had with Mr. Primakov, his opposite number in Russia? What prediction can he make about the extent to which Russia will share the sentiments that he has just expressed to the House?

Mr. Cook: We have not, as yet, had any indication that Russia could support such a resolution. I very much hope that Russia would not choose to block such a resolution. It is worth recalling that Russia has now not vetoed a Security Council resolution for some half dozen years. I do not think that either Mr. Primakov or President Yeltsin would wish to break that very helpful moratorium on the veto by now using it to protect President Milosevic. One of the advantages of our meeting tomorrow is that Mr. Primakov will be present at the contact group, which will give us an opportunity of dialogue—in the hope that peer group pressure will get Russia to understand the strength of feeling in the rest of the international community.

Did my hon. Friend the Member for Linlithgow (Mr. Dalyell) wish to intervene?

Mr. Dalyell: I had the same question, and the Foreign Secretary has given as much of a reply to it as he can.

Mr. Cook: My hon. Friend is one of the few hon. Members who is honest enough to say that a question has been answered. I am grateful to him.

The ethnic confrontation and violence in Kosovo provide a stark contrast to the security and peace enjoyed by the peoples in the European Union. It is because all the countries of central Europe hunger for the security and stability that we enjoy that they now seek membership of the European Union.

As I look back over the months of our presidency, I believe that the achievement of greatest strategic significance was the successful launch that we gave to the enlargement process. We were able to develop a process in which all 11 countries were in the same pipeline, moving towards the same destination—the speed at which they arrive at the finish will depend entirely on the urgency with which they make the necessary reforms. We were also successful in negotiating a formula that dissuaded France from blocking the start of negotiations with Cyprus, which could have provoked Greece to block negotiations with any country.

In January, I made giving enlargement a flying start one of the objectives of our presidency—we have done that, which will be of long-term credit to Britain. Over the next decade, all the countries involved will become member states with full voting powers at the Councils of Ministers. It is important to our interests that they should remember the United Kingdom presidency as a time when we proved ourselves advocates and friends of their membership and competent managers of the process of enlargement.

It is equally important that the peoples of those countries should associate Britain with the benefits that they will enjoy as consumers as they lower the barriers to trade. When I addressed the House in the European debate in December, I mentioned the strong enthusiasm that I found in Warsaw for my insistence that membership of the European Union would require Poland to abolish the unfair, discriminatory and punitive taxes on whisky. I am delighted to report to the House that, last week, I received a message from the Foreign Minister of Poland informing me that the Cabinet had approved a reduction in the duty on whisky, to give it parity with brandy. I am confident that that news will be as welcome to drinkers of whisky in Warsaw as it will be to distillers of whisky on Speyside.

Enlargement is not the only historic step that is being taken under our presidency. Last month, the Heads of Government agreed that 11 member states could proceed to the final stage of economic and monetary union. Britain has not joined that first wave. We will judge whether we are ready to join on the basis of a hard-headed assessment of the economic interests of the British people; the Government are united in their view that the decision on the single currency must be determined on that basis.

Mr. Dafydd Wigley (Caernarfon): Will the right hon. Gentleman give way?

Mr. Cook: I was hoping that I would get a Tory Euro-sceptic, but the right hon. Gentleman will do.

Mr. Wigley: I am sorry that I cannot fit either bill. The right hon. Gentleman regards the well-being of the economy as the paramount consideration in deciding the timing for entry to the euro, but if the well-being of the economy so dictates, will the Government consider entry sooner than 12 months after the next general election—assuming that this Parliament goes to its full term—or does the well-being of the economy take second place to the commitment to wait until a referendum after the general election?

Mr. Cook: We do not expect any tension between the two commitments. We came to our conclusion because Britain and the continent are at very different points in the economic cycle. That substantial difference will not be lessened in the short term—it will take some years for true convergence to come about. I assure the right hon. Gentleman that we have no intention of joining before we are confident that it would be to the economic advantage of the British people.

Our unity of view on the single currency contrasts with the division among Conservative Members, who are united only in the strength of their contempt for one another's views on the matter. When the European Parliament voted last month on the single currency, half the Tory MEPs abstained and the other half voted in three different ways—a multiple split that makes the Tory MEPs much more representative of the Tory party than many of the Tory Euro-sceptics would admit.

[Mr. Cook]

Europe faces many other challenges as a result of the two historic changes that I have outlined. A European Union in which Finns to Italians are paid in a common currency, and whose borders stretch from Poland to Portugal and from Scotland to Cyprus, will be a Europe that gives rise to new challenges as well as to new opportunities. We must ensure that we strike the right balance between the unity and cohesion of the Union and a flexibility that can reflect the diversity of its increased number of member states. That is why it is right that a centrepiece of the Cardiff summit will be a discussion by the leaders on the future of Europe.

In his Paris speech two months ago, my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister set out his vision for Europe. He stressed the importance of reconnecting Europe with its citizens and of striking a better balance to respect not only the advantage of Europe acting in unity, but the individual identity of each member state.

The letter from Chancellor Kohl and President Chirac, which was released earlier this week, demonstrates that those arguments are winning the debate on the future of Europe. It represents a powerful statement of the case for subsidiarity, which the two leaders demand must be "strictly respected and applied" even more rigorously, and which rightly recognises that

"the citizen will not accept decisions at the European level unless it is clear that . . . such rules cannot be adopted at a satisfactory manner at the local, regional or national level."

That statement is unequivocal. It exposes the Euro-sceptics' fears of a centralised, federalised European state for the fantasies that they are—nightmares that have something of the night about them, but nothing of reality. If the Euro-sceptics will not listen to me, perhaps they will listen to the Conservative party's nominee on the European Commission, Sir Leon Brittan, who said the other week:

"Europe has changed and Britain has played a big part in changing it."

There could be no better place for Britain to demonstrate the leading role that it has played in promoting subsidiarity than Cardiff.

Mr. Wigley: Hear, hear.

Mr. Cook: I am grateful for the right hon. Gentleman's support. As a result of the Government's policies—which the right hon. Gentleman is also welcome to support—Cardiff will become the centre of a democratically elected assembly which will make political decisions in Wales accountable to the people of Wales. That is a visible reminder that the Government not only preach subsidiarity in Brussels, but practise it in Britain.

We also welcome the strong recognition in the letter from Chancellor Kohl and President Chirac that decisions within Europe should be open and transparent. During the UK presidency, we have made making proceedings more transparent a priority. I am pleased to tell the House that more members of the public and representatives of non-governmental organisations have attended open Council meetings during our presidency than in any previous presidency. Indeed, we had broken all previous records before our presidency reached halfway.

The more that Europe opens up its proceedings to the public, the more important it becomes that the public see that those proceedings focus on the issues that are of concern and relevance to them. When we launched the UK presidency, we stressed that its theme would be to make Europe work for the people and that we would focus on issues of popular concern, such as jobs, crime and the environment. Over the past six months, we have made solid progress on all three fronts.

On jobs, we were the first member state to produce a national action plan on employment, and Cardiff will be the first European summit at which the action plans, which have now been developed by every member state, will be reviewed. An unusual feature of the summit will be the morning discussion, with Finance Ministers, on economic reform to make Europe more competitive and to encourage employment.

We will also discuss reports from the Commission and from the business test panels on how we can encourage small and medium enterprises by reducing the complexity of European regulations. The objective is well expressed in the title of the Commission document—"Doing Less, but Doing it Better".

We have negotiated a pact on organised crime with all the countries that are candidates for membership of the European Union, to enable us to achieve greater co-operation in fighting the criminals who run major rackets in the drugs trade, money laundering and the sordid exploitation of the traffic in illegal immigrants.

Mr. Dalyell: Before my right hon. Friend leaves the subject of crime, he will not be entirely surprised when I ask him whether there will be any discussion of the Lockerbie crime and relations with Libya, especially in the context of his meeting with Dr. Mudenge and others from Uganda, Cameroon and other African states, and of the possibility of a resolution of a crime that will be 10 years old at Christmas 1998.

Mr. Cook: I congratulate my hon. Friend on the skill with which he has worked in a question which I know concerns him closely. I am happy to say that I had a very good meeting with the representatives of the Organisation of African Unity and the Arab League, at which I explained why we have full confidence in the standards of Scottish justice. I expressed regret at the fact that those two organisations did not respond positively to our invitation to them and the United Nations to send observers to study our legal system, and I repeated that offer to them.

I think that it is fair to say that Stan Mudenge and his colleagues left with the impression that they had had a fair hearing, and that I had explained exactly why we are robust in our faith in Scottish justice and why we are determined to ensure that the mass murder of 270 people is not allowed to pass without those who have been charged being brought to justice.

We have acted to implement the commitment in the Amsterdam treaty to integrate the protection of the environment across the broad range of European policies. Our presidency has witnessed the first ever joint meeting of the Transport and Environment Councils. As a result of that joint work on the environment and transport, we have been able to adopt tougher standards on vehicle emissions, which will produce cleaner air for our citizens.

The decision last week to ban the drift nets that drown dolphins has been broadly welcomed by the many people in Britain who support the campaigns to protect wildlife.

As we deliver on our commitments in our presidency of the European Union, we are constantly aware that Britain is a country with major ties of history and culture, and alliances around the globe, and not only in Europe. In particular, we have forged an excellent working relationship with Washington, and an effective partnership with both the White House and the State Department.

Britain's current high standing in Washington has been of direct benefit to Europe. At last month's United States-European Union summit, we secured an agreement that will protect European companies from US sanctions and commits the United States Government to resist any legislation that will result in extra-territorial penalties on European companies that are breaking no national or international law.

We have averted what could have been division between Europe and the United States over trade, and replaced it with unity in our approach towards countries such as Iran. I believe that the successful outcome of the summit, which is good for both sides of the Atlantic, was largely due to the fact that it was Britain in its presidency that represented Europe there.

In our presidency, it has been our job to speak for all the member states. I am happy to say that that does not prevent us, and has not prevented us, from also speaking for Britain. I noticed last Sunday that the Minister for Europe in the previous Conservative Government, the right hon. Member for Haltemprice and Howden (Mr. Davis), complained that we had not given enough priority to tackling the ban on British beef. That was a compelling example of how out of touch Conservative Members can be with what is going on in Europe.

On 1 June, only a fortnight ago, the ban was lifted on exports of cattle from Northern Ireland under the certified herds scheme, and yesterday, the Commission agreed to propose to lift the ban on the export of beef under the date-based scheme for cattle born after August 1996.

We are not over the obstacle course yet: there are further hoops through which that proposal must go before it gets Council approval and comes into effect, and there appear to be elements in the Commission's proposals that we regard as unnecessary and unduly restrictive, but the fact remains that we now have in sight an end to the beef ban for the British mainland, as well as for Northern Ireland.

The fact that we have got this far is a striking illustration of how much better the Labour Government have been able to promote British interests through their constructive and positive approach to Europe. By contrast, the policy of confrontation pursued by the previous Government left Britain on the sidelines of Europe, with neither influence nor respect, and did nothing to further Britain's interests on beef or anything else.

I noticed last month that, one year on from the general election, The Times had discovered that Labour led the Conservatives as the party with the most popular policy on Europe by a margin of almost two to one. I freely admit that it was not always like this: at the previous general election, the same pollsters found the Conservatives leading on Europe by exactly the same margin.

The dramatic turnaround has happened because the public have had a year in which they have seen how much more can be delivered by a Government who have respect throughout the capitals of Europe and are taken seriously because the Europeans know that we are serious about doing business with Europe. In a spirit of fairness, I acknowledge the strong contribution made to our public support over Europe by Conservative Members, who have spent the past year unable to convince each other, never mind the public, what is the right policy for them on Europe.

The British public are much more sensible than many Conservative Members. They know that, in the modern world, we can make our way only by the health of our alliances and our trading links with the rest of the world. They know, too, that we shall not achieve security or prosperity in a global economy by being as rude as possible to our nearest neighbours.

The British public know that, if the Conservative party had, by some miracle, remained in power at the general election, the past six months of the UK presidency would have been squandered in the sterile and hostile confrontation that marked its last years in office. By contrast, we can look back with satisfaction on six months of steady achievement.

We have given a successful launch to an historic process of enlargement that will change the face of Europe; delivered real progress on our people's agenda of jobs, the environment and the fight against crime and drugs; developed a clear sense of direction for reform of the common agricultural policy; and injected momentum into the Agenda 2000 negotiations. Furthermore, we are winning the debate in Europe on subsidiarity, with the result that at Cardiff, we can launch a discussion that will confirm Europe's future as a union of sovereign states, not as one single, centralised state.

That is a record of achievement in which the whole of Britain is welcome to share our pride, including even the Conservative party, if it chooses to come out of the bunker, blinking into the light of the modern Europe. It is against that solid record of achievement through our presidency that we go to Cardiff, confident that we have set the right agenda for a constructive exchange and that it is we, not the Conservative party, who represent Britain at Cardiff, because it is we who represent the views of the people of Britain on Europe.

5.48 pm

Mr. Michael Howard (Folkestone and Hythe): May I begin with one of the few points on which I agree with the Foreign Secretary? I welcome the fact that the European Council is taking place in Cardiff, in my native land, and I place on record the fact that it is taking place there largely because of the influence exerted by my right hon. Friend the Leader of the Opposition when he was Secretary of State for Wales. Apart from that, I fear that there will not be a great deal on which I can agree with the right hon. Gentleman.

No one has ever accused the Foreign Secretary of false modesty, but the speech that we have just heard was one of insufferable complacency and self-congratulation, born more of his fantasies than of the real world. Let us now return to the real world.

A couple of weeks ago, he addressed the European Parliament. I, alas, was not present, but it was not necessary to be present to judge the impact of the speech.

[Mr. Michael Howard]

The very next day, Members of the European Parliament voted on a motion that congratulated the United Kingdom presidency on its achievements, a motion tabled by Labour Members of the Parliament, who form the largest group of the party of European Socialists. That party, and its allies, has an overall majority in the Parliament, so the prospects for the motion must have seemed auspicious. Yet such was the impact of the Foreign Secretary's speech that the motion was lost. The European Parliament declined to offer the UK presidency its congratulations.

The Foreign Secretary had done it again. The man who single-handedly bungled the royal visit to India, who caused grave offence during his visit to Israel and who has done more than anyone to bring the concept of ethics into disrepute had once more snatched defeat from the jaws of victory.

Mr. Roger Casale (Wimbledon): Can the right hon. Gentleman say what sort of approval rating he might have had from the European Parliament if he had been Foreign Secretary over the past six months?

Mr. Howard: I cannot answer that, because I have never had the great privilege of holding that office, but I can approach an answer.

The Foreign Secretary is fond of comparing the Government's attitude to and record on Europe to the attitude and record of their predecessor. An instructive comparison is, indeed, to be made. This was not the first time that the European Parliament voted on a British presidency. The European Parliament was addressed by a Foreign Secretary—Lord Hurd of Westwell—during our last presidency in 1992. Then, too, there was a vote on the UK presidency on the day after the Foreign Secretary addressed the Parliament. Once again, the motion was tabled by Labour MEPs, and it criticised the UK presidency. On that occasion, too, the motion was lost. The European Parliament took a more favourable view of that Conservative presidency than of the current Labour one. I hope that the Foreign Secretary will add that comparison to the list of which he is so proud.

Mr. Donald Anderson (Swansea, East): The right hon. and learned Gentleman is labouring his point. Perhaps he does not speak, for some reason, to Conservative Members of the European Parliament, but had he gone beyond the press reports he might have learnt that part of the reason for that vote was the view of many MEPs that the motion, a month before the end of the presidency, was premature. There was also concern about the European central bank fracas, which had nothing to do with my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary.

Mr. Howard: I shall have a word to say about what the hon. Gentleman describes as the European central bank fracas. His view that it had nothing to do with the UK presidency is by no means shared in the European Parliament or elsewhere in the councils of Europe.

The vote of the European Parliament two weeks ago was a humiliation for the Foreign Secretary. Behind that humiliation lies another truth: the presidency has been a flop. What a contrast with the high hopes set out six months ago. The Prime Minister and the Foreign Secretary were going to transform the continent. The Foreign Secretary told us that the presidency would provide

"a clear opportunity to demonstrate that Europe can deliver on the concerns of our people."

The Government, he said, were to offer

"active leadership in the world."—[Official Report, 4 December 1997; Vol. 302, c. 521-22.]

The Foreign Secretary was so full of the prospects for the presidency that he quoted from the European press, telling us that we should read what the European papers said about the new Labour Government. I am always keen to take the Foreign Secretary's advice, and I have been reading the foreign press. The French journalist Pierre Beglau, writing for the magazine Le Point, said:

"The British Presidency of the European Union is . . . one of the most timid and poor in recent years."

The Italian newspaper Il Sole Venti Quatre Ore discovered what we have long known. There seemed, it said,

"to be a growing disparity between proclaimed intentions and reality."

Nowhere was that disparity more marked than in the half-term report that the Government published in March. I am not surprised that the Foreign Secretary did not refer to that half-term report. The House will understand why in a moment. The report was a British innovation. There is no tradition of half-term reports, but the Foreign Secretary was so keen to trumpet his achievements that he was determined to break new ground. The report was introduced by the Prime Minister in typical fashion. Great progress was being made, he said, on a number of policy issues. He added:

"Robin Cook has done a brilliant job in bringing together Ministers quickly and reaching agreement to help sort things out rapidly."

What were the 45 successes attributed to the British presidency in that report? The Secretary of State for Education and Employment had chaired a meeting about life-long learning. The need for measures to lower telephone bills was highlighted. A seminar of Government press officers was held, at which agreement was reached to disseminate more information on the EU via the internet. And what of the Foreign Secretary? Well, he was praised for "injecting new impetus" into the middle east peace process. Not a lot of people saw it that way at the time.

The whole ludicrous, self-serving exercise was viewed with incredulity by our European partners. One German diplomat said:

"It's funny, we always thought the British style was understated."

It is little wonder that we are now told, and perhaps the Foreign Secretary will confirm it, that the Government have abandoned their intention to follow up the ludicrous half-time report with a full-time assessment of their performance. There is not going to be a full-time report. The Government have at last recognised the only appropriate verdict on their presidency—the least said, the better. That did not stop the Foreign Secretary producing a half-time report, but he is not producing a full-time report because there is very little to say.

It is little wonder that, instead of dwelling on the achievements of the UK presidency—only three weeks from its end—the Foreign Secretary chose to spend much of his time today on the problems of Kosovo. Those problems are, of course, acute, and I do not underestimate them for one moment. The whole House will want to join him in expressing our dismay at the emergence once more of violence, murder and rape in the Balkans.

However, the Foreign Secretary should have made a separate statement on Kosovo so that hon. Members could question him. I hope that he will do so next week. Meanwhile, I hope that the Minister of State will tell the House why, when we have known about that problem for so long, the military options for NATO have even now not been prepared. The Secretary of State for Defence talked on the radio this morning about the need for quick action, but it was known months ago that difficulties were likely to arise in Kosovo. Why was work not put in hand then to prepare options for action? When do the Government intend to approach the Security Council for authority to take action? What action do they have in mind? Will the Minister of State assure us that any such action will have clear objectives, and that the Foreign Secretary will return to the House to make a proper statement before action is taken?

Mr. Mike Gapes (Ilford, South): Will the right hon. and learned Gentleman confirm that the situation in Kosovo dates back at least 10 years, and that there have been growing problems? It has until now been a peaceful conflict, without the kind of military intervention that we have seen in the past few weeks. There has been no fighting or incursions in the border area. The current situation is far more serious than when the right hon. and learned Gentleman was in government.

Mr. Howard: I thought that one of the tasks of the Foreign Office and the Foreign Secretary was to anticipate what might happen in the world. It has not taken genius to anticipate that, for a very long time, the problem in Kosovo could have burst into the kind of violence that we have seen in recent weeks. NATO should have been asked some time ago to prepare options for action. It is astonishing that we were told only a week ago that NATO might have options ready for those who need to take these most serious decisions by the end of this month. Given that the seriousness of the position in Kosovo has been known, and raised in the House, for months, it is astonishing that NATO was not asked earlier to put the work on options in hand.

Mr. Alan W. Williams (East Carmarthen and Dinefwr): Will the right hon. and learned Gentleman contrast the situation in Kosovo and the meetings and preparations involved with those made by his Government two years ago, when there was civil war in Bosnia? For years, while tens of thousands of people were being killed, his Government remained inactive on the sidelines.

Mr. Howard: I do not recall the Labour party when in opposition calling for military action in Bosnia at an earlier date than that at which it occurred. I do not think that there was much dispute between the parties then about what should be done.

Mr. Robin Cook: I understand that the right hon. and learned Gentleman was busy running the Home Office and was not present in foreign affairs debates, but I assure him that, for two years, we persisted in demanding more robust action in Bosnia. Preparations on the options available for NATO have been made for some time. We have no intention of publicly announcing in advance what those options might be to prepare President Milosevic, but we have been preparing them. That is in stark contrast to the way in which the previous Government spent years before they finally geared themselves up to intervening in Bosnia.

Mr. Howard: I do not think that we want to turn this into a debate on Bosnia, although I am happy to do so. I am talking about Kosovo, which is a serious problem. It was mentioned by the Foreign Secretary in this debate. It is astonishing that we were told at the end of last week that NATO might have its options on military action ready by the end of this month. Given the time that we have had to anticipate the difficulties that have arisen in Kosovo, that is an extraordinary state of affairs, and those who are responsible for it have a good deal to explain.

Mr. Menzies Campbell: I congratulate the right hon. and learned Gentleman on the elegance of his language, but we should not allow our admiration for that to conceal the fact that he has not shared with the House his proposals on Kosovo.

Mr. Howard: I would dearly like to see the NATO options, as I am sure would the hon. and learned Gentleman. Alas, I have not seen them. Clearly, several steps could be taken. I hope that we will have a proper opportunity to discuss the matter and that the Foreign Secretary will come to the House to make a statement on it. We can then have an informed discussion. I hope that we will be told a little more about how he intends to proceed.

Let consider how the achievements of the presidency match up to its promises and examine the key areas, the themes set out by the Prime Minister six months ago. First, there is economic reform. Has a single job been created as a result of action taken by the UK presidency? Has even one of the 18 million people unemployed across the European Union benefited from the rhetoric of the Prime Minister and the Foreign Secretary? Unemployment in the UK is 6.4 per cent. That is still too high, but in Germany it stands at 11.4 per cent., in Belgium and France at 11.9 per cent., in Italy at 12 per cent. and in Spain at 19.6 per cent.

Even the Minister without Portfolio, speaking in Florence on one of his many forays into the Foreign Secretary's territory, recognised that job creation is the most difficult of all the issues that Europe faces. How can Labour speak with any authority on the subject when it embraces the job-destroying social chapter of the Maastricht treaty and when one of its close socialist allies in France sees the answer to the crippling unemployment from which it suffers in a 35-hour week?

What of the

"cost and waste of the Common Agricultural Policy"

which

"continue to grow year by year?"

Those were the words used by the Prime Minister when he launched the UK presidency in December. Not a word passed the Foreign Secretary's lips this evening about the CAP. There is no progress to report on the CAP, but the Foreign Secretary promised that its reform would be one of the key themes of the presidency. He said:

[Mr. Howard]

"We need a reformed CAP which gives a better deal all round—fair prices for consumers, flexibility for farmers, protection for the environment."

We all agree, but the CAP collapsed after the first meeting and member states have so far failed to find a common position to negotiate. Even the Foreign Secretary could not bring himself to claim that as one of the achievements of his presidency. CAP reform is buried in the small print of the half-term report.

What of enlargement? Labour's general election manifesto called it "a high priority". The Foreign Secretary said that getting it off to a good start was

"the step that will have the biggest impact on the shape of the European Union into the next century."

I agree. We regard enlargement of the European Union as the historic mission of our generation, but what evidence is there of progress?

The Prime Minister of Finland said that enlargement is

"looking more problematic than it did a year ago."

The truth is that we are going backwards, not forwards, in terms of progress on enlargement. Relations between the European Union and Turkey are at an all-time low. The Foreign Secretary completely failed in his efforts to persuade Turkey to attend the annual European Union-Turkey association meeting, yet he says that he is not disappointed. One shudders to imagine what would have to happen before he confessed himself discouraged.

The Cardiff summit will not be first European Union summit over which the Prime Minister has presided. He presided over the summit on economic and monetary union at the beginning of May, to which the hon. Member for Swansea, East (Mr. Anderson) referred. The Prime Minister's performance there did not receive rave notices. The Prime Minister of Luxembourg concluded that the summit proceedings were "absolutely shameful". The Italian Prime Minister, an ally in the Party of European Socialists, said that the Prime Minister was "ill prepared for the negotiations".

The Austrian Chancellor, another ally in the Party of European Socialists, said that there were people much more experienced than he who said they had never seen anything like it. He added:

"We have now learnt how not to organise a summit."

That is the reality of the performance of the UK presidency, not the fantasy world into which the Foreign Secretary took us in his speech.

Nowhere has the gap between the Government's rhetoric and reality been greater than in the humiliation of the Chancellor of the Exchequer over the Euro X committee only a few days ago.

Mr. Alan W. Williams: Does the right hon. and learned Gentleman concede that, at the end of the day, a successful euro will be launched on 1 January next year with 11 member countries? One shudders to think what would have happened if the right hon. Member for Huntingdon (Mr. Major) had been president at the Brussels summit.

Mr. Howard: I do not agree. The truth is that the Prime Minister went to that summit pledged to ensure that there was no fudge and no fiddle. What happened was fudge and fiddle on a grand scale. It was fudge and fiddle not only in allowing member states that did not begin to comply with the criteria set out at Maastricht to join the single currency but in what was described by the hon. Member for Swansea, East as the fracas over the presidency of the central bank. To claim that summit as a success is to fly in the face of the facts, and it will convince no one.

Mr. Bill Rammell (Harlow): The right hon. and learned Gentleman and his party have made much about the convergence of Belgium and Italy on the key criteria. I think that that is a fig leaf for attacking the single currency in principle. Had the Conservative party won the general election, and had you been in power at the summit, would you—

Mr. Deputy Speaker (Mr. Michael Lord): Order. The hon. Gentleman must try to use the correct parliamentary language.

Mr. Rammell: My apologies, Mr. Deputy Speaker.

Had the Conservative party been in government at that summit and succeeded in negotiating the exclusion of Belgium and Italy, would the right hon. and learned Gentleman have been satisfied to proceed with the single currency on the basis of nine nations?

Mr. Howard: Of course. It has never been the view of my party that, if other member states wish to proceed with the single currency in accordance with the criteria set out in the Maastricht treaty, they should not do so. Of course they are perfectly entitled to do so. All that we would have insisted on would have been a firm application of the Maastricht criteria. They were set out in that treaty and they should have been observed. The Prime Minister said that he would ensure that they were observed, yet he did not. That is not likely to be conducive to the success of the single currency.

Mr. Robin Cook: I would not dream of pressing the right hon. and learned Gentleman to tell us the circumstances in which he would join. My question is much more modest. He chides the Government for having taken too long at that particular summit meeting. Will he give the House some estimate of how long the meeting would have been had he been chairing it and telling a number of those countries that qualified that they could not take part?

Mr. Howard: The Foreign Secretary is entirely wrong. I never mentioned the length of the meeting. The criticisms of the way in which the meeting was conducted go far deeper than its length. That is made perfectly clear in the quotations that I have cited. The right hon. Gentleman does not need to take it from me. If the Austrian Chancellor says that this was an example of how a summit should not be run, he should be listened to with some respect.

I understand why that little flurry of interventions was designed to divert the attention of the House from the Euro X committee. It was the committee over which the Prime Minister fought such a public battle last year. As usual, he claimed a great victory. He said that he had got exactly what he wanted, that we would not be excluded from the committee's meetings and that all his aims had been achieved. What happened? When the Chancellor of the Exchequer turned up to chair the meeting, he was allowed to stay for an hour and then he was asked to leave. He was not even invited to dinner. Officials of the European Commission referred to him as a "gatecrasher".

That humiliation is the reality behind all the Government's claims to be leading in Europe. That is the reward for all those sacrifices of our sovereignty at Amsterdam. That is the background against which the Cardiff summit will take place.

In the past couple of days, we have witnessed an attempt by Chancellor Kohl and President Chirac to hijack the agenda for the summit. We have seen the patronising text of their letter to the boy Blair. We have seen how, under cover of lip service to subsidiarity, they make calls for further moves towards political union.

Mr. Gapes: Does the right hon. and learned Gentleman recall that, regularly over the past 10 years, the Christian Democrat leaders in Germany and the Socialist or Gaullist leaders in France have issued joint communiques prior to virtually every European summit, whether it was held in this or in another country? For example, President Mitterrand issued joint communiques with Chancellor Kohl. Will the right hon. and learned Gentleman confirm that that is a regular occurrence?

Mr. Howard: It is a regular occurrence, but if the hon. Gentleman looks back under previous documents of this kind, he will find that the tone is somewhat different. I want to draw attention to the way in which in this document, under cover of lip service to subsidiarity, those leaders make calls for further moves towards political union.

May we have an assurance from the Minister of State when he winds up the debate that any such calls at Cardiff for further political integration and union will be resisted? May we have an assurance that one last attempt will be made to achieve the goals of the presidency with which, as I said when we last debated these issues six months ago, we substantially agree? May we have an assurance that, this time, the Prime Minister will make a real effort to rescue the United Kingdom presidency from the ignominy into which it has fallen?

The Cardiff summit should be the crowning glory of the UK presidency. Instead, it is likely to be its farewell whimper. I hope that my forebodings are misplaced. I suspect that they will be amply justified.

ROYAL ASSENT

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I have to notify the House, in accordance with the Royal Assent Act 1967, that the Queen has signified Her Royal Assent to the following Acts:

Petroleum Act 1998

Audit Commission Act 1998

Community Care (Residential Accommodation) Act 1998

Late Payment of Commercial Debts (Interest) Act 1998

European Communities (Amendment) Act 1998

Cardiff European Council

Question again proposed, That this House do now adjourn.

6.14 pm

Mr. Donald Anderson (Swansea, East): I join the right hon. and learned Member for Folkestone and Hythe (Mr. Howard) at least in this: I welcome the fact that the Council is being held in Cardiff. I should have preferred it to be held in Swansea, but I concede that there is a stronger case for the Council to be held in Cardiff than there is for Cardiff to be the site of the assembly.

The right hon. and learned Gentleman made a number of points, most of which were rather petty. Clearly, he had trawled through a series of newspapers in Europe in the hope of finding some criticism of the Prime Minister. He emerged with one quotation from a right-wing French journal—hardly surprising—and one from an Italian journal which is very close to the Northern League—again, a rather right-wing journal. That is hardly an impressive result from what must have been an assiduous trawl by Conservative central office.

The right hon. and learned Gentleman criticised the Government for inaction over Kosovo. He hardly remembers that the real crisis there stems from 1989 when President Milosevic reduced the autonomy of both Kosovo and Vojvodina. The Government can hardly be criticised for the crisis or, indeed, for delays that come, understandably, from the hesitation of some of those in the contact group, such as Russia because of its close links with the Serbs.

The right hon. and learned Gentleman said that nothing was being done on the jobs front. Surely he recognises that the guidelines set out in the jobs summit in Luxembourg last November have been carried forward and that, for the first time, member states have produced action plans setting out how they are implementing those guidelines. In addition, a series of remarkable and new practical steps have been taken. There has been agreement on a package of venture capital support for small and medium enterprises, progress on setting priorities for the next generation of EU education, training and youth programmes, acknowledgement that the EU social fund should support national employment and lifelong learning strategies, demonstration projects and a series of meetings, including the Belfast meeting of Ministers, relating to the employability of women and issues such as child care, and a conference in Glasgow on work organisation. That is rather an impressive roll-call of initiatives on jobs.

My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has set out a remarkable feast of achievements. However, a number of spectres were at the feast, and I intend to refer to some of them. Over the period of our presidency, there has been considerable success in terms of technical organisation. From a number of my European contacts, I have heard high praise for the quality of civil service support. The period from 1 January has been one of the busiest for foreign affairs in our peacetime history. That has imposed enormous burdens on Foreign Office Ministers, and Ministers in other related Departments. As my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary and the right hon. and learned Member for Folkestone and Hythe mentioned, there has been a record number of summits—relating to

[Mr. Donald Anderson]

EU enlargement, the first Europe-China meeting, the Europe-Russia meeting, the second Asia-Europe meeting, and preparation for Lomé—which must have imposed enormous burdens on both the machinery and the personnel, not least my right hon. Friend himself.

The presidency must be seen in the context of far greater warmth towards the United Kingdom among our European colleagues. I found significant the comment made on Wednesday morning by the National Farmers Union spokesman, who said that, had an attempt been made at diktat rather than negotiation, as had been made in the past—clearly, he meant by the previous Government—there would have been no progress in respect of BSE. Like my right hon. Friend, I cannot help but wonder what would have happened during the UK presidency had it been presided over by the Conservative party, which, as was shown by the shadow Cabinet reshuffle, is being pushed further in an unrealistic Euro-sceptic direction. Our European partners, at least for the time being, are prepared to give us the benefit of the doubt, in spite of our absence—temporary, I hope—from the euro.

It is clear that several of the objectives set by the Government at the start of the UK presidency have been met. I was especially impressed that my right hon. Friend achieved an unprecedented agreement on an EU code of conduct on arms exports. The ethical dimension of the foreign policy is often derided by its critics, but that code of conduct marks a serious change.

There is increasing Euro-realism among many of the leaders in Europe. I used to deride the previous Government's claims that Europe was adopting our agenda, at a time when there was clearly increasing divergence; but, in the tone of the joint letter by Chancellor Kohl and President Chirac, we see a greater willingness to accept subsidiarity, which is a theme of the Labour party. That is a highly significant acknowledgement. It was seen towards the end of last year during the Amsterdam debate in the Federal Republic of Germany, when the lander asserted their own views. It was Minister-President Biedenkopf of Saxony and the leaders of Bavaria who ensured, through the lander, that there was greater constraint on the federal Chancellor. If, as is predicted, the Social Democrats win the federal elections in September, there may well be a further move by the German federal Government in a direction that is favoured by this country.

In the past, there have been attempts to put an obstacle between France and Germany and to attract either France or Germany into the British orbit, but those attempts were misguided, because there is a clear foundation, from the Adenauer-de Gaulle era, for Franco-German friendship. I believe that Britain now has a real opportunity to enter that dialogue, not only because of the warmth towards and the acceptance of this country, but because of the direction in which the European agenda is moving and the practical vision of my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister.

I was intrigued by what my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary said about the discussion to be held in Cardiff on the future of Europe. I understand that that is to be a lunchtime exchange of views, so it might have been a little overblown to speak of the future vision of Europe being decided between courses. Nevertheless, the discussion will be worth while and it will be interesting to see what political vision my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister will feed into that lunch.

We cannot claim overmuch for our presidency, because any presidency is part of a continuum. The baton on the jobs agenda was taken up and carried forward by the UK Government after the jobs summit in Luxembourg last November. In exactly the same way, the themes that we have moulded and adapted will be taken up by our Austrian colleagues on 1 July. In my contact with the Austrians, I have been impressed by the way in which there is now a seamless gliding move from one presidency to the next, as themes are accepted and developed.

Whether the theme is jobs, the environment, crime, fraud or drugs, the overall agenda is now a people's agenda. There is a greater acceptance in the EU of the lesson taught by the first Danish referendum, which showed that the European elites had moved away from an agenda that had relevance to the people. I am glad that our Government are bringing us back to an agenda that our own people regard as relevant to their lives.

I see the importance of the scoreboard of performance in respect of the single market, which shows the greater strength of implementation, even among our Italian colleagues. The UK presidency would have been seen as an historic one in any case, because of the major decisions that had to be made on enlargement and on the European currency, but the success with which both those major advances have been completed is worthy of note; for example, on enlargement, the pre-accession strategies and dossiers have been agreed.

I was disappointed that my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary did not dwell on the subject of Turkey. Although the snub to Turkey did not come during the UK presidency but in Luxembourg in December last year, Turkey had reasonable cause for dissatisfaction, and my right hon. Friend has tried hard to build bridges with Turkey. I hope that my hon. Friend the Minister of State, who is to reply to the debate, will say something about whether Turkey has so far indicated that it is prepared to enter a dialogue on the Commission suggestions on building bridges.

I also hope that something will be said about the meeting in Glasgow on Monday, in which a number of threats were made about delaying enlargement because of concerns about regional funds among those who benefit so substantially from them and who fear their loss, especially the Iberian countries, Greece and Ireland. Because of the German elections, I suspect that there will not be as much progress made in Wales as we might want on revision and agreement of regional aid.

It is fair to say that the euro was launched well, in spite of the fracas. The markets have spoken more eloquently than the politicians by responding favourably, then and now.

A month or two ago, it was assumed that the Cardiff Council would be one of consolidation and continued preparation for the Austrian and, subsequently, the German presidencies. Since then, an amendment has been moved in terms of the major foreign policy crises that have overcome the smooth functioning of the presidency. I recall a distinguished former Labour Foreign Secretary, Michael Stewart, telling me that his nightmare as Foreign Secretary was that, at any one point in the day, two thirds of the world was awake and capable of causing mischief. I fear that the Foreign Secretary must share that same nightmare.

There have been several crises over the past six months in respect of Iraq, Algeria and Indonesia, and I compliment the Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Office, my hon. Friend the Member for Leeds, Central (Mr. Fatchett), on acting consummately and very sure-footedly in respect of each. Now, we must face the situation in Kosovo, nuclear tests and the middle east crisis—as well as, perhaps, the fact that Germany is raising questions over its financial contributions to the EU. The common theme is surely the absence of decisive leadership from the United States of America, whether on Kosovo, the middle east or elsewhere.

The challenge for Europe, particularly in respect of the Balkans, which is on our doorstep, is what we will do. If Europe is to be taken seriously in foreign affairs, as the common foreign and security policy apparatus is put in place following the Amsterdam treaty, we must ask ourselves whether the troika arrangement—in this case Luxembourg, United Kingdom and Austria—raises Europe's credibility and provides essential leadership.

In spite of the difficulties, the Government can take some considerable satisfaction from the way in which they have handled the presidency. They have ensured a smooth glide into the Austrian presidency. Lasting foundations for a stronger Europe have been laid.

6.31 pm

Mr. David Heath (Somerton and Frome): It is curious that, despite being told that Europe is such a vibrant issue in this place, fewer than 20 hon. Members are present for this essential debate on the eve of the Cardiff Council. It is extraordinary that it attracts so little interest. Nevertheless, this is a very important and interesting debate.

I listened with care, as I always do, to the right hon. and learned Member for Folkestone and Hythe (Mr. Howard). I am in some difficulty because I share some of his elegantly phrased analysis of the British presidency, but, of course, I disagree with some of his conclusions. I find it extremely curious to suggest that the Conservatives, had they been in a position to do so, would have done better than the present Government. All recent history defies that proposition.

The right hon. and learned Member was right to draw attention to the start of the British presidency. The Government came in like a lion, but are going out rather like a lamb. There was the overblown hoo-hah, as the expression goes, of the advent of the British presidency. There were loud fanfares, loud assertions and even louder ties. Indeed, I see that the Minister with responsibility for Europe is sporting one.

It was probable that the rhetoric could never have matched the actions during the presidency, however successful Ministers were. That expectation has been justified by events. The British presidency has not achieved all the objectives set, and probably could never have done so. The rather offensive proposition—to many of our partner nations in Europe—that a newly elected Government would suddenly lead Europe has not been borne out by events.

The hon. Member for Swansea, East (Mr. Anderson), the Chairman of the Foreign Affairs Committee, suggested that there was a feast of achievement to celebrate. I must say that it is rather a jejune feast, although there have been successes, and it is right that we should pay tribute to them. The accession talks, for instance, were well managed. I am pleased that progress has been made.

It is probably unfashionable to do so, but I congratulate the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food on his activities in Europe. He has made a complete mess of agriculture at home, but in discussions in Europe to promote such matters as the lifting of the beef ban, he has done a fair amount of good work.

The European Union code of conduct on arms sales, which the hon. Member for Swansea, East mentioned, will be seen as the single most important achievement of the presidency. We were disappointed by the code's final form; it could and should have gone further and been a more transparent arrangement. Nevertheless, it is a signal achievement to have got so far—which makes it even more surprising that it was not mentioned in the Prime Minister's half-term report, which, as the right hon. and learned Member for Folkestone and Hythe said, was more of a half-baked report. It laid claims to great successes that amounted to no more than holding a meeting or having a half-formed idea of something that might be good in the short term.

The Government have some cause for celebration.

Mr. Donald Anderson: I hope that the hon. Gentleman would fairly agree that any criticisms about the inadequacies of the code of conduct should be laid at the feet not of the Government but of the attempts to gain consensus among more reluctant partner countries.

Mr. Heath: The hon. Gentleman is, of course, right in part; it was a process of negotiation. I believe that that process could have been taken forward had it been more open. Certain partner nations might have put rather more pressure on those more reluctant nations—let us not be mealy-mouthed—such as a particular one just across the English channel, which it might be said took a slightly different view. Nevertheless, let us simply accept that something has been done which should have been done, and a start has been made.

I agree with the Foreign Secretary that there is a record of environmental achievements; there have been tangible successes. There have also been moves towards more openness and accountability in EU structures—although not as quick as I would have liked. The baton of the Amsterdam treaty should have been picked up—without waiting for ratification—and taken forward on some suggestions which, under the treaty, require two years to be achieved. Nevertheless, some progress has been made.

Set against that background, there are the failures. The negotiations on European monetary union were a mess—by the Prime Minister's own admission. They did very little to promote the idea of a strong and stable arrangement which is consistent with the independence that is so crucial to the success of monetary union.

As far as I know, there has not been any success in cutting the costs of the EU. None of the range of options that we and others have put forward for cutting costs has been promoted or proceeded with. For example, it is a monstrosity that £700 million a year is spent on promoting the growth of tobacco—a substance which every member state's health department is actively trying to discourage people using. That needs to be addressed in double-quick time.

[Mr. Heath]

We have made very little progress on reform of the common agricultural policy and the common fisheries policy. The Agenda 2000 proposals are on the table, but no more than that. The most important thing that Ministers can achieve at the Cardiff summit is the establishment of a firm timetable for progress on talks concerning not just reform of the CAP and the CFP but of the structural cohesion fund and the institutions. Talks on each of those matters needs a firm timetable. Europe does not work without deadlines to meet. Those deadlines must be set if there is any hope of success.

I do not believe that we have seen a strengthening of common foreign and security policy across Europe. Indeed, some of the Government's actions over recent months have been retrograde in that respect. It cannot have been good for European cohesion for Britain to act on the difficult subject of Iraq as if it were a member of the permanent two rather than the President of the EU. Algeria is another example of the European Union signally failing to make the impact that it should have done on a significant problem on its doorstep.

We can set against that the position in Kosovo, on which the Foreign Secretary spoke at length. Liberal Democrat Members will give him every support in his proposals. I make two pleas to him: first, that he makes every possible effort to involve Mr. Primakov and the Russian Government in any demarche that is available to him. It is essential that the Russians use their influence on Mr. Milosevic, because no one else has the same reach. Secondly, he should consider carefully the position in the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, which is in grave peril from an overspill of the problems in Kosovo, and the position in Montenegro, because there could be a serious destabilising effect on that country. We could witness further inflammation in the Balkans.

The right hon. and learned Member for Folkestone and Hythe was clear in his criticism about NATO's lack of preparation. I do not recall—he may correct me because he remembers his words better than I—his mentioning that point when we heard a statement on Kosovo a few weeks ago. I do not remember the right hon. and learned Gentleman making an explicit request—perhaps he did, or perhaps he has thought it up since then.

Mr. Howard: I made certain suggestions at that time—for example, concerning the stationing and reinforcement of United Nations troops in Macedonia—some of which have now been implemented. However, it never occurred to me that NATO had not prepared its options. There was no suggestion at that stage that it had not done so, and I assumed that it had. It was only when I read newspaper reports about a week ago that I had the first inkling that those options were, astonishingly, still under preparation.

Mr. Heath: Of course, I take it at face value that the right hon. and learned Gentleman made those implicit assumptions.

The Government have further failed in the parliamentary scrutiny of European Union matters within the United Kingdom. We heard from the Leader of the House earlier that proposals on that may be made shortly. I hope that they are, because it is essential that Britain has more effective parliamentary scrutiny of European affairs. There is a series of measures that would achieve that higher level of scrutiny.

The real opportunity in Cardiff, which has already been mentioned by several Members, is for the new start to the European institutions offered by the letter from Chancellor Kohl and President Chirac. It lays out important positions that the Government, by the happenstance of the UK presidency, have the opportunity to achieve. I am astonished by the language used in the letter, because some of it could have been written by members of my party's policy division. I see no difference between the subsidiarity proposals in the letter and the proposals that we have repeatedly made. It is interesting that the letter begins with the suggestion of "an open and sober discussion at the European Council", for which the lunchtime venue does not bode well.

The letter goes on categorically to state:

"It cannot be the goal of European policy to establish a European central state".

Hear, hear. It adds that

"some European institutions are becoming increasingly remote from the citizens and their day-to-day problems", which is absolutely right. The letter also says that decisions should be "taken as closely as possible to the citizen. Citizens will only become more strongly committed to the common Europe if decision-making processes are clearly understandable and transparent".

We have made precisely that point on many occasions. There is a need to reform Europe's institutions.

Perhaps it is now time to look beyond the rather flimsy protocol on subsidiarity that was appended to the Amsterdam treaty. I have criticisms of that: it was essentially a good thing, but it does not go far enough. We should consider a far more fundamental review of the levels at which decisions are made and, perhaps, try to achieve a concordat or protocol—call it what one will—that will establish once and for all where power is appropriately exercised in the different tiers of European Government, whether it is at the national tier or the regional and local tier.

We need a clear mechanism for ensuring that power does not gravitate to the centre, but is deployed at the lowest possible level. That is now a prerequisite for the development of a European Union that works for the citizens of Europe.

My criticism of the protocol in the Amsterdam treaty is that it is not an acquis communautaire; it leaves in place everything that has already been decided. We are talking about a new Europe with new problems and challenges. It is right that we consider whether what was decided in the past is necessarily right for the new Europe. The principle that Europe should do less, but do it better should commend itself to the House.

Finally, one outcome of the Cardiff Council must be a clear understanding on the timetable for the series of reforms that I have mentioned and a continuity beyond the British presidency into the Austrian, German and Finnish presidencies so that there is a continuum of reform that makes Europe a better place for its citizens. If Ministers can achieve that at the Cardiff summit, they will have served this country and Europe well.

6.46 pm

Mr. Alan W. Williams (East Carmarthen and Dinefwr): I am glad to have the opportunity to take part in this debate on the eve of the European Council in Cardiff, and to add a Welsh voice to the proceedings.

I am delighted that we had the news yesterday from the European Commission that there are strong moves towards lifting the beef ban. Naturally, for my constituents in the very rural area that I represent, the beef ban has been a severe problem over the past two years. I follow these issues carefully and I know that, over the past months, the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food and his officials have worked hard in Brussels with the Commission to develop, first, the certified herd scheme and, now, the date-based scheme. If that scheme is passed by the veterinary committee and, eventually, the Council of Ministers, it will mean a lifting of the ban over the next few weeks and months. It may take years rather than months, but we expect to recapture the export markets that were once held by British beef. That will help to raise prices. I am pleased that that announcement was made yesterday. It forms an optimistic backdrop to the weekend's proceedings.

More generally on agriculture, there is progress—it is always very slow—on reform of the common agricultural policy. That is now driven by Agenda 2000 and the need, with enlargement, to devote relatively fewer resources to agriculture in those structural reforms. It is important that we move away from production-based subsidies. In the past few months, one of the problems in the disbursal of the £85 million that came from the Government last Christmas is that the small farmers, who needed most help, were receiving the least. Those with large stocks of animals received the most help, but needed the least. There is a perversion in the CAP, in that 80 per cent. of the money goes to the richest 20 per cent. of farmers. We need to move away from such production-based support to a system that is based rather on people or units of labour and the environment. Our farmers, especially in the upland areas, do an enormous amount of work to maintain the environment and to make the countryside attractive to tourists. The support structures must take account of that.

My hon. Friend the Member for Swansea, East (Mr. Anderson) referred to the importance of structural funds in the Agenda 2000 discussions. West Wales and the valleys are impoverished. The cases of Merseyside and South Yorkshire for objective 1 status have been accepted by the Commission. I hope that my hon. Friend the Minister will press hard for west Wales and the valleys to be recognised as eligible for objective 1 funding. Our gross domestic product per capita is below 75 per cent. of the European average, so we qualify and we need that support.

Mr. Wigley: Does the hon. Gentleman accept that the gross domestic product per capita of his county, Dyfed, at 68 per cent. of the European average, and of Mid-Glamorgan at 62 per cent. and Gwynedd at 72 per cent. of the European average, are all below the GDP per capita of South Yorkshire and Merseyside, and therefore should certainly be granted objective 1 status?

Mr. Williams: I am grateful to my colleague, the right hon. Member for Caernarfon (Mr. Wigley), for giving the latest statistics on our inheritance after 18 years of Conservative rule. We have lost much of our heavy industry in the industrialised parts of Wales, and west Wales has more difficulty in attracting inward investment such as Clwyd and south-east Wales have successfully attracted. Our case for European funding is strong, and I hope that it will be strongly argued by the Government.

When the history of the United Kingdom presidency is written, the most important single issue of the past six months—despite the difficulties of that weekend in Brussels—will have been the establishment of the single currency. It will start on 1 January 1999, with 11 countries signed up to it. I am disappointed, of course, that Britain is not a member. We could not join, because of our inheritance. In the discussions on the Maastricht treaty, the right hon. Member for Huntingdon (Mr. Major) achieved the opt-out from the social chapter and from economic and monetary union. A new Labour Government could not quickly join the single currency.

The Government are setting out the pathway. We are working with the public, the trade unions and business towards eventual membership of the single currency, which I hope will come early in the next Parliament. From the sidelines, we wish it well. Whether we are in or out, it is important for economic prosperity that the euro is a success. I note that, despite high unemployment, growth is returning to the economies of France and Germany. The latest figures are 3.5 per cent. growth in GDP in France and 3.8 per cent. in Germany. I hope that unemployment will soon start to fall in both countries.

In Britain, we must plan and work diligently for membership on 1 January 2002, pending a referendum. On that date, euro coins and notes go into circulation. That would be a reasonable time scale for us to join. If, as I am confident they will, our Government win the general election in 2001 or early 2002, we can hold the referendum to join by that date.

A major national debate is needed on the optimum value of the pound for joining the single currency. The pound is substantially overvalued. At DM3.10, it caused serious problems to farmers and manufacturing industry. The rate is now down to about DM2.92, but I do not believe that that is sustainable. If we joined at anything like that level, we should merely be repeating the sad experience of the exchange rate mechanism.

I do not know what the right figure is. I read all the economic commentators. I should be happy with DM2.70 or DM2.60. Some in the City favour DM2.50 or even as far down as DM2.30. There is a range of views. The Chancellor cannot give us his figure, because it is not conventional for the Chancellor to intervene in a matter that is so market-sensitive. The Confederation of British Industry, our leading businesses, trade unions, employers, chambers of trade and we as citizens should engage in a detailed debate to decide on a long-term sustainable value. For my part, it is below DM2.70. It is a critical decision, which we must get right over the next four to five years.

A further concern is the absence of any strategy to get our interest rates in line with those of France and Germany and those that will be set by the European central bank. The current interest rate of France and Germany is 3.5 per cent. Ours is 7.5 per cent. The Bank of England or the Treasury must develop a grand strategy over the next four or five years that would allow our interest rate to move from 7.5 to 3.5 per cent. without creating a boom. If there was a rapid drop, there would be the danger of a house price explosion and of land values getting out of control.

[Mr. Williams]

We need a euro membership plan for 1999-2002, rather like the Chancellor's statement this afternoon on his fiscal strategy over the next three years, and the comprehensive spending review that will be published in July. Those critical background decisions are the Treasury's domain, but we must work on a larger national strategy for gearing ourselves to join the single currency.

We could be overtaken by events in the next year. Industrial corporations that do most of their trade on the continent will open accounts in euros. Banks will make it possible for farmers to have euro accounts. Ordinary citizens like us could open accounts in euros, instead of putting our money into building societies, for example. Indeed, there is the possibility next year of British citizens speculating against the pound by opening euro accounts, in the expectation that the pound will devalue as we approach membership.

I do not rule out the possibility of joining the exchange rate mechanism. We may need to consider that next year, if there is instability in the value of the pound. Perhaps we should join the exchange rate mechanism on 1 January 2000 at a negotiated rate. We would then be able to demonstrate stability for the two years before membership of the single currency.

Those are my thoughts on our relations with Europe. I am delighted that, despite last weekend's difficulties, the single currency will be launched on target on 1 January next year. I am convinced that it will be a great success and that we should join it. As the Foreign Secretary and the Chairman of the Foreign Affairs Committee, my hon. Friend the Member for Swansea, East (Mr. Anderson), said earlier, when we look back on our presidency, we can be proud of many achievements in the past six months. It was never going to be an easy task because of our inheritance of Euro-scepticism from the previous Government. Relations with our European partners were badly damaged during the period of non-co-operation over the beef ban, and we have tried to repair that damage in the past 12 or 18 months.

Let us look forward three, five or 10 years. I hope that there will be a change of Government in Germany and that the new Administration will be more centrist or centre left. The days of President Chirac in France are numbered, and I hope that we shall see a new social democratic or centre-left Government. In three or five years' time, I hope that the European Union will lean more to the centre left and will be very much in tune with the philosophy of the new Labour party. I believe that our influence will become stronger over the years and that we shall pull Britain back into the heart of Europe.

7.1 pm

Mr. Bowen Wells (Hertford and Stortford): In preparing my remarks for today's debate, I sought not to offend the Government because I want them to work enthusiastically towards achieving some objectives—particularly in development and including the renegotiation of the Lomé convention—before our presidency ends at the end of June. The Government set themselves the objective of agreeing the European Union's negotiating mandate for the renewal of the Lomé convention, which expires at the end of 2000. I understand that a ministerial meeting took place on Monday in an attempt to settle the matter, but I have not heard that real progress has been made. If it has, I hope that the Minister will inform the House what has been achieved. That is one item that I wish to highlight.

I was provoked by the speech of the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs. I have rarely heard in the House such a self-satisfied and smug speech about the Government's achievements during our presidency. There has clearly been modest progress in some areas, but it is very modest. Let us take the issue of arms exports, about which we are all concerned. The Foreign Secretary heralded the agreement on the European Union's conduct of arms sales as a great achievement, but he over-egged the pudding. I suppose that we should be used to that from the Labour party, which trumpets the most modest progress to the press and the media as a great triumph.

I do not wish to upset the Government: they have tried, but they have made only a modest achievement. The Foreign Secretary did not give any details of that achievement. It has been agreed that, if any European nation refuses a licence to export arms, it must inform the other member states. That is progress—and we hope to build upon it—but it is very slight progress; we cannot claim that it is a huge advance. Let us be modest about it: we have a huge way to go in controlling arms sales and ensuring that arms are not sold to people with genocidal intentions or to countries that wish to control their populations by military means, such as Sierra Leone, Nigeria, Indonesia or anywhere else. We have a long way to go before we secure agreement on that matter, but some progress has been made.

The Foreign Secretary trumpeted the achievement of the subsidiarity letter of Kohl and Chirac. It is mind-boggling that we are asked to believe that that represents progress. The hon. Member for East Carmarthen and Dinefwr (Mr. Williams) and the Foreign Secretary extolled the virtues of economic and monetary union, but there is no more centralising policy adopted by the European Union than the decision to form a single currency. West Wales will rue the day that it had an advocate such as the hon. Member for East Carmarthen and Dinefwr, who believes in the single currency. If the people of west Wales think that they are isolated from economic decision making in Britain, they will be even more isolated in Europe.

The hon. Member for Somerton and Frome (Mr. Heath) and I are in passionate agreement about subsidiarity: we welcome it. However, the Amsterdam treaty allows the European Commission to veto the appointment of Commissioners. That is a huge accretion of power to the centralised bureaucracy and to the President of the European Union. Let us see these great declarations for what they are: a mechanism for controlling political activity in Europe that is hostile to the increasing accretion of power in Brussels. In France and in Germany, they say, "Don't worry, old chaps, we believe that decisions should be taken as near to the people as possible, but we won't do anything about it. We shall do the reverse." We should not be fooled by the great declarations.

I return to the question of the management of aid under the Lomé convention, the renegotiation of that convention and the mandate that we must give to our European Union negotiators. I share the Government's ambition to achieve agreement during the United Kingdom presidency. That aim has not yet been realised, but there is still time. The International Development Committee has published a report on the matter—which I commend strongly to the House—which suggests that the European Union's approach to the issue is seriously flawed. I hope that I am right in assuming that the Government have not made progress because there is serious disagreement about the way in which the European Union should negotiate with the African, Caribbean and Pacific nations, which are the other parties to the Lomé convention.

The trade proposals are particularly damaging. The European Union proposes to enter into trade agreements with some of the poorest countries—which are African, Caribbean and Pacific nations—only if it can enter reciprocal free trade areas. The Lomé convention gives European Union countries free trade access to the European market, but they are now demanding free access to other markets. It has been calculated that, if that occurs, the value of 40 per cent. of European Union aid to vulnerable countries will disappear.

Under the agreement, which it has proposed, the EU will achieve huge trade advantages in respect of those small countries. What will that do to those vulnerable countries? South Africa is not as vulnerable in trade terms as countries such as Mozambique and Rwanda, but we should consider the EU's negotiations with it. At present, they have taken three years, and there is still no agreement. The EU is to give only five years for all those countries to enter into free trade agreements, yet it has not reached agreement with South Africa in three years.

Let us consider a little homespun story: the EU subsidises the production of tinned tomatoes, which it over-produces. Subsidised tinned tomatoes are exported to South Africa, now that it has opened up its markets at the request of the EU. What has that done to the tinned tomato factories of South Africa, which have traditionally exported to this country, to Europe and around the world? It has closed one factory and put more than 400 people out of work. That is an example of what the EU is trying to negotiate, not only with middle-income countries such as South Africa, but with the poorest countries of this world.

There has been a serious reversal of the trade policy that this country has offered to certain countries, some of which have been associated with us for 450 to 500 years. The EU wants us to abandon them and wants to force them into integrated free trade areas. We would then negotiate from the position of what I would characterise as the EU's seriously imperial ambitions in such areas, turning them into dependent countries and reducing them to producing only primary products at prices dictated by the hugely powerful EU.

That is not the right way to negotiate with such vulnerable countries, and the report of the International Development Committee makes that clear. I commend the report to the House and to the Government, because if the mandate is allowed to be settled on such a basis, we shall have a settlement that will be damaging to the countries about which we should be most concerned—the poorest countries.

I particularly want to discuss the banana protocol. Agriculture Ministers and Foreign Ministers have said to the Select Committee that they want the completion of a new agreement safeguarding the small farmers of the Windward Islands from being overrun by the big companies in the banana world, such as Chiquita and Dole. Few people are involved in comparison with the number at Chiquita, Dole and Del Monte, the huge companies which dominate the world banana trade. We are dealing with a tiny number of people—in St. Lucia, St. Vincent and Dominica—whose livelihoods are based on the industry. The sale of relatively few bananas accounts for 70 per cent. of Dominica's export earnings.

We must safeguard that trade. It is no good calling on such countries to diversify—diversify into what? Drugs? No. Into other agricultural crops? No, because the competitors are much more efficient. It would be much more sensible and practical to find a way to produce a formula. I believe that Ministers had the ambition to do so and that EU officials think that they can achieve one, but none has been forthcoming so far. Therefore, I ask Ministers to make another effort in the next six weeks. In particular, I ask them not to accept the advice that they are receiving from their civil servants, who are saying that the agreement has to be compatible with World Trade Organisation criteria. It does not. If Ministers decided so to do as a matter of policy, they could apply to the WTO to be absolved from its general rules. That evidence was given to the International Development Committee by WTO officials in charge of trade with developing countries and is spelled out in the report.

The EU has it in its power to get a waiver from the WTO, if, politically, it wants to do so. In European Standing Committee B, the Minister of State was unable to answer a question on the waiver, about which I have had correspondence with him. He revealed in a letter that he is under advice from civil servants—not only from this country, but from Europe—that they do not want to go down the policy route of seeking a waiver, to safeguard banana producers in the Windward Islands. That policy is wrong, unless an agreement can be produced to safeguard those producers by other means. The current proposals would simply benefit large producers—Del Monte, in particular—on the west African coast and would exclude and eventually eliminate the banana trade from the West Indies. I beg the Government to consider that seriously.

In respect of the report on Lomé, we must ensure that the management of European aid is improved vastly. It is constantly the subject of adverse Court of Auditors reports, and delivery of aid is slow—way behind the Lomé IV target. Aid that we are supposed to be disbursing now has not even begun to be disbursed, because we have not fully signed up to Lomé IV. European offices in recipient countries are short of staff and have to refer every decision to Brussels, because ministerial meetings must decide every nuance of policy. That must be decentralised, and there should be more competent staff in the field.

The report also suggests that EU nation states' bilateral aid programmes should be co-ordinated and should work together with EU efforts. Tomorrow, we are meeting at Westminster the chairmen of the equivalents of the International Development Committee from 11 of the 15 nation states to discuss how we can do that. Mr. Rocard, the chairman of the European Parliament Development Committee, is also attending, so we hope to contribute to the co-ordination of aid policy and its efficient delivery. I ask Ministers to redouble their efforts to reach agreement on the negotiating mandate for the Lomé convention before the end of our presidency.

7.17 pm

Mr. Mike Gapes (Ilford, South): It is a pleasure to speak after the hon. Member for Hertford and Stortford (Mr. Wells), who made an interesting reference to the World Trade Organisation. Although my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary did not refer to it in his speech, the European Union, under the British presidency, has moved to resolve the long-standing dispute with the United States about the Helms-Burton provisions, extra-territoriality and attempts, through American domestic legislation, to penalise European companies for trading with Cuba, Libya and Iran. Alone, this country or any other European country would not be able to achieve anything on that issue. We have made progress only through the strength of the EU, under the leadership of our Labour Government.

I shall refer to several matters that my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary mentioned. First, I draw attention to the prodigious efforts of Ministers over the past six months. This week, our Prime Minister has done a massive amount of Henry Kissinger-style shuttle diplomacy around Europe. He was in three Scandinavian capitals in one day. Yesterday, I met a senior figure from the Swedish Social Democratic party, who was in London and had been in Stockholm when the Prime Minister was there. That person said that, although the Nordic model had always strongly emphasised partnership between the private and the public sector, and although the Nordic model had many similarities with policies that we were pursuing, our Prime Minister's visit received enormous coverage. The visit was regarded as significant in the context of building a new alliance between the British Government and Sweden, Finland and Denmark—the three countries which were visited during one part of the tour that has taken the Prime Minister all over Europe during the past week or so.

The Kohl-Chirac letter has already been mentioned, but I want to emphasise its importance. Earlier, in an intervention on the shadow Foreign Secretary, I said that such letters were nothing new. When they had leaders in different countries, the Christian Democrats often organised joint initiatives before European summits. President Mitterrand organised joint initiatives with Chancellor Kohl before a number of such summits, including Maastricht in 1991. What is significant about this initiative is the presence of so many themes that are similar to the policies being pursued in this country under the British presidency, which will be submitted to the meeting of Heads of Government at the end of next week.

Under a Conservative Government, we were pleased to be the odd one out—because we had "Madame No" as Prime Minister, or because, as happened in March 1997 in the last Parliament, our then Foreign Secretary told the Foreign Affairs Select Committee that the British Government had a list of so-called show stoppers. That seemed to be a growing list: every time the Foreign Secretary answered a question, something was added to that list of show stoppers, designed to prevent any agreement at the Amsterdam summit. Those days seem very long ago.

I look around the Chamber—particularly at the Conservative Benches—and ask: where are the Euro-sceptics? I recognise the Opposition Whip, but I am not sure where the rest of them are. I have regularly participated in European debates during the past six years, and I do not think that I have missed many: I was present for the Committee stage of the Bill dealing with the ratification of the Maastricht treaty, and for our debates on the Amsterdam treaty. I remember speaking at midnight, and being berated by nine or 10 hon. Members who harangued me with intervention after intervention. Where are they today? I am waiting for them, but they are not here.

The fact is that the debate has changed. It has moved on. [Interruption.] The Opposition Whip should understand that the debate has moved on. The Euro-sceptics were partly routed at the last general election. I see that a Europhile has joined us: I am pleased that Conservative Europhiles are coming into the Chamber.

Euro-sceptics not only lost a number of seats; they no longer seem to have the arguments. The truth is that Europhobia and xenophobia are not popular policies with the British people. The British people want a pragmatic Government who get things done—a Government who co-operate with our European neighbours. That is what they have, and that means that, as the Austrian presidency takes over from the British presidency, there will be a very good period of co-operation between the two Governments during the transition. The Austrian presidency will continue to pursue many of the aims that we have pursued during the past few months, especially preparation for enlargement.

There is a lengthy agenda for the European summit. Many items on that agenda are very complex, and some, inevitably, are for the long term. It is ridiculous to think that any six-month presidency of an organisation such as the European Union, comprising 15 states, can make a massive difference to the process. With a bad presidency, things can go badly wrong; with a good presidency, things can be dealt with efficiently. What needs to be done can be done, and the agenda can be taken forward—which is what the British presidency has done, in a number of important ways.

I agree with my hon. Friend the Member for East Carmarthen and Dinefwr (Mr. Williams), who said that the country would incur costs by remaining outside the single European currency. I was pleased that, in his interesting statement today, my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer specifically said that the Government would "meet the fiscal criteria laid down in the Maastricht Treaty."

That is important: it means that, when the time is right, there should be no arguments about unnecessary delays in regard to British engagement in, and membership of, the European single currency. I believe that, when we meet the necessary economic conditions, and have reached a political judgment that the time is appropriate and a popular mandate is there, we should join quickly.

As the letter from Chancellor Kohl and President Chirac points out, the issue that must be discussed—it is one of the issues that they want to be raised in Cardiff—is the further development of political union

"in tandem with the Economic and Monetary Union".

Discussions on that are proceeding now—informally—among a number of European Union countries. If we are not part of the formal process within economic and monetary union, there is a danger that, in the long term, political discussions and developments that may impinge on this country will go ahead, and we shall not be part of them to the extent that we could be if we joined the 11 who are in economic and monetary union, as well as being one of the 15 members of the European Union.

Let me also say something about relationships between European Union countries. The letter from President Chirac and Chancellor Kohl is a sign of the close bonds between Germany and France. Those close bonds have been built up for long-term historical reasons. We need to recall only a few dates—1870, 1914 and 1940—to appreciate the reasons why, after 1945, democratic politicians decided that that relationship had to be built for the future peace and stability of the continent.

It is a mistake—some commentators have referred to this—to think that it is in Britain's and Europe's interests to try to break the relationship between Germany and France. It would be very dangerous and short-sighted for us, as British politicians, to take the view that we should be friendly with either Germany or France. It is essential for Britain to play a full role—alongside Germany and France—at the motor of the European Union, while retaining our historically excellent relationships with other European Union countries such as the Netherlands and Portugal, and our good relationships with countries outside the EU. An example is Norway, which, unfortunately, made the wrong decision in its referendum.

The victory of Gerhard Schröder in September will be a great boost to the new centre-left politics in Europe. Philip Stephens, in the Financial Times, pointed out that a Chancellor Schröder in Germany would take a more Atlanticist and northern approach than the present German Government. That remains to be seen, but it raises an interesting point. There might be less tension if the British Government had excellent relations with the United States and improving relations with the European Union, and the German Government had a similar approach.

Our approach should not be at the expense of our relationship with Lionel Jospin and the socialist party in France. The two countries have a different electoral system, and there are differences in the nature of the majorities. Prime Minister Jospin has a difficult coalition to manage, yet many of his policies are similar—leaving aside the rhetoric—to those that we have been pursuing. Over the next three, four or five years there will be significant cross-fertilisation. We shall learn from each other's experiences and build together coherent and constructive policies to create a new, dynamic, open, effective, efficient and more democratic western European and all-European political structure.

One of the difficult areas that we shall have to consider and which will cause great problems in the enlargement negotiations is the nature of the institutional framework for an enlarged European Union. It is absurd to think that we could continue the present structure and have an efficient decision-making process in a European Union of 25 or 27 member states. Therefore, there must be serious change. Everyone is agreeable in principle to change, except when it affects what they perceive to be their own vital national interests.

At the moment, we have two Commissioners, because we are a large country. It has been argued that the weighted vote of larger countries should be increased, because the present undemocratic system gives Luxembourg a large vote in European Union institutions. The voting system bears no relationship to the population distribution in the European Union. If Cyprus, Slovenia, Estonia and Latvia accede to the European Union, the problem will be compounded. However, we shall face difficulties if we move too far down that road.

How can the democratic legitimacy of decision making reflect the diversity of the different nation states in the European Union? We are not creating a single, centralised Euro state. That is also the contention of Kohl and Chirac. They are calling for more subsidiarity, less regulation and decision making that is more sensitive to the needs of particular countries. I thought that that was the agenda of the previous Prime Minister, the right hon. Member for Huntingdon (Mr. Major), or so we were told. The best way to achieve that would be to use the process of enlargement to bring about the required institutional changes.

Mr. Robert Walter (North Dorset): Given that the Prime Minister came back from Amsterdam in great triumph, why was this matter not addressed in that treaty, because enlargement was on the agenda?

Mr. Gapes: I am grateful that at least one Euro-sceptic is present.

Mr. Denis MacShane (Rotherham): The hon. Gentleman is one of us.

Mr. Gapes: I apologise to the hon. Member for North Dorset (Mr. Walter). I have embarrassed him. I assumed that he followed his party's official policy. I am sorry if I have slurred him, and I withdraw that remark.

The previous Government were in office until 1 May 1997. The Amsterdam negotiations were to come to a conclusion some six weeks later. The process had reached an impasse. Amsterdam was designed as an interim development before the discussions on enlargement. The Amsterdam agreement stated that negotiations would open six months after the signing of the treaty. It was important to get an agreement at Amsterdam so as to open up the process for enlargement. If the Conservatives had still been in government, we should have had no agreement at Amsterdam, so enlargement would have been a purely theoretical, hypothetical, distant question for the future.

Difficult decisions will have to be taken in the next few years. There will be arguments about objective 1 status for our regions. Objective 1 money has been important in the highlands and islands, in parts of England and in Northern Ireland. Many people have become more positive about the European Union because they have had the economic benefits of funding from Brussels.

As the EU is enlarged, the funding formula will have to change. As unemployment in this country is falling, it is questionable whether funding for some of our regions will be maintained for the future. It is important to emphasise not just the economic arguments for European Union membership, but the vital arguments about stability, security, environmental co-operation and the political integrity and democracy that come from having an organisation that gives us such a peaceful continent.

Mention was made of the crisis in Kosovo. I shall not go into that, but I believe that it is vital that the European Union does not allow ethnic and religious conflicts once again to develop across our continent. Extremists and fanatics in various communities want to foster hatred and animosity. The Balkan region—from Kosovo to Macedonia and involving Turkey, Greece and Bulgaria—could become another cauldron leading to a generalised regional conflict. It is vital that we act economically, politically and, if necessary, militarily to contain, control and prevent such regional conflict. The European Union has a vital role in such developments, and I am pleased that our Government are playing such a positive role to strengthen the European Union over the coming years.

[Mr. Gapes]

7.39 pm

Mr. Dafydd Wigley (Caernarfon): I am glad to follow the hon. Member for Ilford, South (Mr. Gapes) and to pick up on his point about the importance of the European Union as a vehicle for peace. Twice in this century, this continent has torn itself apart in two bloody wars. The basic reason for the EU's existence is to ensure that that never happens again. There are, of course, important economic arguments, but the political imperative brought that vision about. That is what we must always retain in our minds.

I welcome this opportunity to speak briefly in a debate before the European Council meeting in Cardiff, the capital city of Wales. I would rather, of course, that it was coming to Wales in its own right—that Wales was inviting the European Council and had the presidency. I may have to wait a little longer for that. In the meantime, the meeting is well worth having and I am glad, as are the overwhelming majority of the people of Wales, that it is happening now, at an important time in the EU's development.

In listening to the Foreign Secretary, what came home to me was that six months is a very short period and that one cannot expect miracles to happen. Perhaps he was dressing up many of the things that have happened to create a background of achievement by the Government, but no Government or presidency can be expected to change things overnight. Progress has been made on some issues. The most important issue has been brought out in this debate—indeed; it is brought out when we consider the hon. Members who are present. There has been a change in attitude towards the European Union and that can be only for the good.

There is no doubt that, in working with the grain of Europe, we have a greater chance of finding solutions to our problems—or at least acceptable compromises with which we can live—than we would if we just took Europe on, issue after issue. Whatever may have been the arguments in the 1980s for making a stand on certain issues, certain lessons must be learned.

In the opening comments of the debate, reference was made to the expansion of Europe. I am glad that we are considering the possibility of countries from the east coming in. I am glad that some of the small countries are coming in. Yes, there will be problems when Slovenia and Estonia come in, but they are part of Europe, and we have to adapt the structures to ensure that they have a proper place, while not disrupting the balance of current structures.

I hoped that progress might have been made with one or two of the other states that wish to come in, particularly Lithuania. I am sad that it is not in the tranche that is being considered. I should like to have seen Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia knocking on the door together. I hope that progress can be made in that direction as we look towards expansion.

The point about the dangers in Kosovo has been made. Surely we have learnt some lessons from the experience of Bosnia. There is a will in Europe to try to avoid an escalation of those conflicts. We should, if we have to, make a stand to try to ensure that no inch is given to undemocratic, totalitarian and fascist forces that may be using racist arguments to fan debates that would be better not heard. I hope that the European Union can take a positive lead in that direction—a more positive lead than was the case with Bosnia.

A little progress, which we welcome, has been made this week on an issue that has dominated the economic argument in large parts of Wales: the bovine spongiform encephalopathy crisis, which has led to a rural crisis, with a real-terms drop in farming incomes per head of 45 per cent; the actual figures have been quoted as over 90 per cent. Farms in Wales are small and family run. Farmers there are not barley barons who pull in hundreds of thousands of pounds; there is subsistence farming. Experiences such as those over the past couple of years can undermine the viability of those farms. A solution is desperately needed to the BSE crisis.

Good progress is being made on the date-based scheme. I hope that the veterinary committee that considers the matter next will support the moves, that support will then be found in the Council of Ministers, and that assurances to those in Germany and in other countries who are fearful about the quality of the food—one accepts those fears entirely—will be enough to ensure not only that we have the right to export, but that those other markets will have the confidence to want to buy our products.

In the meantime, not only beef farmers but dairy farmers need to take advantage of the resources that are available from the European Union for this financial year to compensate for the effect of the value of the pound against the green pound. There is no doubt that the agriculture sector is suffering enormously because of the pound's high level. It is suffering in terms of the value of aid coming through from Europe in subsidies. It is also suffering because countries such as the Republic of Ireland are selling their dairy produce to the United Kingdom, including Wales, and undercutting our produce with the benefit of assistance from the European Union, benefit that is available to our farmers, but which we have not taken up fully yet; it has certainly not been taken up in the dairy sector. I hope that the Minister and his colleagues will give thought to that as discussions take place in Cardiff.

The parity of the pound has been of concern not only to farmers but to manufacturers. In my constituency, some 30 or 40 jobs are in danger of being lost this week at the old Ferodo factory, the Dynamex factory as it is now known, which depends largely on exports. It is finding that its markets have been undercut because of the value of the pound. That underlines the need for us to move towards the European single currency. Unless we do so, this problem will continue and possibly be exacerbated in the coming period.

Large companies in Wales are already preparing to deal in euros. Companies such as British Steel, Sony, Toyota, Nissan and Pilkington are already preparing to do so. We shall find ourselves with parallel currencies. As they do that—for good reasons—they will want transparency in their dealings and all the rest of it, and they will put pressure on their suppliers to deal in euros as well. Therefore, companies that want to sell products, components and other items to the large companies will be under pressure to deal in euros. It is likely that parallel currencies will operate in the UK, as they do in central America, where large companies deal in dollars and small companies in the local currency.

There are dangers that, when the euro has started up and there is a lot of international money moving around, some dealers will want to hedge their bets and come into sterling because they are not too sure about euros. Sterling's value could go up in that period again, causing even greater problems for our agriculture sector and manufacturing industry.

Of course, I am conscious of the fact that, in areas such as Wales, where we have severe economic problems in the old coal-mining areas and where, recently, those problems have arisen in some agricultural areas in particular, the advent of the euro will restrict some of the tools that have traditionally been available to Government to help depressed areas, where economic performance has not been so good. There will not be the option of devaluation, of playing around with interest rates, of deficit budgeting and of some of the Keynesian approach that we have had in the past. That is what makes objective 1 funding so important, to follow up the point that has been made by the hon. Members for East Carmarthen and Dinefwr (Mr. Williams) and for Swansea, East (Mr. Anderson).

No part of Wales has ever been designated for objective 1 purposes despite the fact that the only criterion for objective 1 eligibility is to be below 75 per cent. of the average European GDP per head. Unemployment is not a criterion for objective 1 status. We need areas of national statistics—nomenclature of units of territorial statistics, or NUTS 2 areas—that fall below the 75 per cent threshold. As we have had a rather stupid map—a north-south map—in NUTS 2 areas in Wales, neither the north nor the south has qualified, although there are large areas in both that would qualify. The east-west analysis in Wales is much more meaningful in terms of economic problems and development. If a NUTS 2 map were accepted that was based on the two old counties of Gwynedd and Dyfed through the coalfields of west Glamorgan and Mid-Glamorgan to Gwent—areas that have common problems—that area would have 72 per cent. of average European GDP and would qualify for objective 1 funding.

Northern Ireland, the highlands and islands of Scotland, Merseyside and South Yorkshire have had objective 1 funding, and I wish them the best of luck, but areas in Wales that have a low income per head desperately need assistance.

Mr. Quentin Davies (Grantham and Stamford): The right hon. Gentleman should think carefully about his suggestion that the criteria for eligibility for objective 1 funding should include unemployment, rather than being based on GDP per capita. If such a criterion were imposed on the system, it would end up subsidising people and regions who might have priced themselves out of employment by demanding too high and unrealistic wages and penalising parts of the Union where labour markets were more flexible and people were prepared to work for more realistic levels of income.

Mr. Wigley: The hon. Gentleman has misunderstood me. I was referring to the current rules, and we have to work within the rules unless they are changed. The only relevant factor is GDP per capita. I am not advocating that unemployment should be a factor; I am saying that there is high unemployment in many areas, but the only criterion is GDP per head.

In the old county areas, three of the five counties with the lowest GDP per head in the United Kingdom are in Wales—Mid-Glamorgan, Dyfed and Gwynedd. Wales has the lowest GDP per head of any country or region in Britain, yet no part of Wales has ever qualified for objective 1 benefit which depends on the factor of GDP per head. Surely there must be something wrong.

I urge the Government, in their negotiations with our European partners and the agencies of government—from the Office for National Statistics, through to Eurostat in Brussels—to turn every stone to get it right. It is not that we have a begging bowl mentality. I hope that the economy of Wales develops in the same way as the economy of Ireland to a point at which we do not need assistance, but, at the moment, we most certainly do in order to overcome our problems. That is one of the themes that will come through from the people of Wales to our friends from various parts of Europe who meet in Cardiff. They will get a strong message that we need that assistance to overcome our problems.

I hope that everyone who comes to Wales has a constructive and happy time and leaves with a feeling of greater cohesion, a vision for the future of Europe, ready to deal with the difficult problems ahead in a positive and co-operative manner that will give greater hope to our continent.

7.52 pm

Mr. Alan Simpson (Nottingham, South): Earlier this week, I took part in a Radio 4 round-table debate about a publication by DEMOS. This trailed a series of extensive surveys into public attitudes towards the European project and attempted to explain why there has been falling interest in or support for that project in recent years.

The panel comprised a representative from DEMOS, the former European Union ambassador to the United States and myself. We all took different views. The DEMOS line was that Europe's leaders had lost touch with their populations about the European ideal, or the European dream, and had pursued priorities that appeared to be bureaucratic and remote from people's lives. It suggested that a new agenda was emerging, embracing concerns such as crime and the environment. The only thing lacking was a bit more enthusiasm and leadership in Europe. If leaders would lead, the public would follow.

The European ambassadors' line was that the European project's fall in popularity was really no more than a press conspiracy—that a sustained attack on everything European had resulted in the growth of scepticism and hostility. My response is that it is difficult to describe 18 million people out of work in Europe as a press conspiracy. It could be described as a tragedy or a scandal. It ought not be described as something marginal to the lives of people in the United Kingdom or any other part of Europe.

[Mr. Alan Simpson]

I believe that the fall in enthusiasm was caused by a quite healthy doubt about the credibility and accountability of European institutions, and a legitimate concern that its economics do not work. I am looking forward to going to Cardiff as part of the alternative summit that has been organised on a broad, pan-European basis, bringing together trade unions, environmentalists and various non-governmental organisations. These all seek to take issue with what may be the agenda of the summit the leaders are addressing, and seek to define a different European agenda that is not narrowly nationalistic, xenophobic or anti-European. The alternative summit simply opposes the monetarism currently driving the European project and is anti-Maastricht in character.

Hon. Members have already warned about the dangers of unleashing new tides of xenophobia and, in that sense, the alternative summit is anti-xenophobic. This in itself is a minor tragedy as it echoes what happened last year around the Amsterdam summit, when I took part in organising marches from every part of Europe, including eastern Europe. We wanted to say that we were not at odds with each other; we are not each other's enemies. The real enemies of the European project are unemployment, social exclusion, job insecurity and environmental instability. The alternative summit in Amsterdam was structured around those key themes, and the alternative Cardiff summit will have the same agenda.

I should like to flag up four key issues that will be discussed in a pan-European context outside the main summit. The first is the presumption that the economics that are currently driving the European project are wrong. The single currency will either be inadequately underpinned or divisive and inherently unstable. The democratic deficit is rapidly turning into a democratic deceit, and the agenda for jobs, the environment and sustainability will be sacrificed on the altar of international competitiveness.

Many of us argue that Europe's economics are wrong because, although many of our debates, both on Europe and generally, are still being conducted on the presumption that inflation is the big threat to our economy, the world teeters dangerously on the edge of a global recession. Events in south-east Asia and the collapse in eastern Europe show a series of economies in deep crisis. Moreover, many aspects of the crisis in other parts the world will make their way to Europe and to the United Kingdom. This is the same crisis that has affected the strength of the pound, and damaged United Kingdom manufacturing and exports. As manufacturing and exports are hit, so, too, are people's jobs, earnings, sense of inclusion and confidence about the future.

In response to the crisis, around the world, many major political and economic thinkers have been saying that we have to begin to deal with the economics of reflation—that we should not be obsessed with convergence terms established in the Maastricht treaty. This will require a shift in thinking that parallels the tragic misjudgments made at the end of the first world war.

France provides an important lesson to us all. At the end of the first world war, France decided that it would never again be invaded by Germany. It would protect its land frontiers so that no similar invasion would ever again be possible. It invested in an enormous project. The Maginot line had reinforced concrete that was tougher than anything Europe had ever seen, and a services and communications infrastructure that was unparalleled in many of France's cities. However, at the beginning of the second world war, German aeroplanes flew over the line, and German troops went round it.

My fear is that monetarism will be the Maginot line of the end of the 20th century and the beginning of the 21st century. To squeeze ourselves into an economics of absurdity, we are putting at risk the whole sense of positive Europeanism. Rather than pursuing monetarist obsessions, we should go back and question whether those obsessions are leading us down sensible paths.

Monetarism is changing the way in which we perceive culture, society and economics. We have had many debates in this Chamber about the nature of public debt. Today's statement made it clear that the reconstruction of local government and changes in public spending and public debt are being undertaken to fit in with our Maastricht obligations. We have somehow blandly accepted that public debt is bad debt, that private debt is good debt, and that the private finance initiative is a way of taking spending off the books. We seem to accept that partnerships, which may leave the public sector with long-term financial obligations, will somehow be better if the debt is private rather than public.

I have to confess that I have never understood why having 40 or 50 per cent. of the economy in public debt—and thereby publicly accountable—should be a problem. I have always worried that more of the economy was not held to public account. The real risk arises when we push responsibility and accountability beyond public reach—which, under the terms of the Maastricht treaty, will happen when we are all left in hock to the private sector, and will cost us more.

It has never been cheaper to borrow personally and privately than to borrow collectively and publicly. Nevertheless, that is the ideology which is driving our view of the economy and society. We are all, therefore, part of the sacrifices demanded by Maastricht. The sacrifices have been called for on the presumption that—no matter how unpleasant the medicine—they will make everything better.

Before I was elected to the House, one of the last pieces of research I was involved in was on the sequence of invitations, expectations and deliveries in successive waves of the European jobs project. Beginning with the 1992 Ceccini report on the single European legislation, 1.8 million jobs were promised as part of the first wave of changes after the passage of that legislation. Although much fuss and publicity was given to Ceccini, two or three years later, the Neuberger report pointed out that rationalisation of European industry had caused massive job losses in smaller and medium-sized firms. We then realised that almost exactly the number of jobs promised by Ceccini were lost with passage of the Single European Act 1985.

We are now being promised that, if we can all pull together under the terms of Maastricht, Europe's 18 million unemployed people will disappear or be absorbed within the system. It is a wish, but it is not based on practical economics that will deliver jobs paying a living wage and offering secure prospects for the future.

I am, therefore, deeply worried about the single currency—although I accept the good faith in which hon. Members on both sides of the House believe that the single currency will be the answer to European instability. It is, of course, possible for a single currency to work. A single currency works in America, and one works in Germany—where the former West Germany's amazing commitment to reinvesting in reunification has been underpinned by a massive solidarity tax of 7 per cent. The tax is raised in the west and transferred to the east, and will probably continue for another generation. It is an enormous tribute to Germany's commitment to that process.

If we are to make Europe work, we shall require a similar fiscal transfer system. In 1977, in the MacDougall report, the European Parliament made its first and only attempt to spell out what such a system would mean in the European context. The report set out the different stages Europe would have to undergo to reach a stable and integrated European theatre in which we all felt that we had a place.

I should like to deal with two aspects of the MacDougall report. The MacDougall committee's conclusions on the nature of an integrated Europe described two possible scenarios—one in which Europe had a small public sector, and another in which it had a more substantial and integrated public sector. The committee pointed out that the Community budget necessary for a small public sector on the Community level would be about 5 to 7 per cent. of Europe's gross domestic product. I should say at this point that the United Kingdom's current contribution to the Union is 1.27 per cent. of GDP.

The Macdougall committee stated that spending of about 20 to 25 per cent. of Europe's GDP would have to be spent to create a more integrated approach in Community provision, to deal with external shock or internal inequalities of economic impact. Although I do not object to those who wish such a scenario to be realised, I have yet to find a politician of any persuasion who will knock on his or her constituents' doors and say, "To create the single currency, we would like you to pay an amount that is a four-fold increase in Britain's tax contributions to the European Union. But that is the good news. If you want more provision from the European Union, you might have to pay a 12 or 20-fold increase in contributions."

If people want to pay for that, that is fine, but we should be honest about how we would have to fund the process. If we are not honest, we shall set people against one another because of the deficits that we build into the process. We cannot make something work on an economics that is based on a fraud. What terrifies me is that people who are not hostile to one another may end up saying, "If insufficiency is built into the common European pot, why the hell should we in Merseyside pay taxes so that jobs can be transferred to southern Spain?" People will see themselves stealing jobs from one another. Those who want to embrace a European ideal quickly have to be honest enough to say not only how they would achieve the ends, but how they would will the means of delivering those ends.

I am worried that that problem exists in the European Union even before it is expanded. Moreover, this applies against a backcloth of Germany having declared a desire to reduce its contributions to the European budget. My fear is that European states will end up locked in a fixed exchange rate mechanism, on the most suitable possible terms for the deutschmark, with fewer resources for fiscal transfers and a magnet effect that will suck resources into those areas that already have the greatest reserves.

That would be massively destabilising for a single currency zone. We must address the mechanisms of redistribution if the single currency is to have any prospect of working. Personally, I do not believe that it will be possible, given the different cultures and economies in Europe. There are, though, other very exciting ways in which these can be made compatible, just as a car has a clutch system that enables the gears to change. However, such compatibility will not be achieved in the context of a lumpen project that drives together and squeezes ideas in an assumption that if they can all somehow be put in the box, they will stay there for ever.

European institutions have been the central architects of the current proposals. When I was researching the resurgence of European racism and fascism, I spent some time in Brussels going through the commentaries on the re-emergence of far right organisations both within and outside the political system. The most interesting part of that experience was being inside the European Commission. Many people have spoken about the democratic deficit, but I was astonished by the fleet of corporate lobbyists who lay permanent siege to the European Union institutions. On one occasion during my time there, some trade unionists turned up. It was such a rare event that MEPs from the different parties of the left were really pleased. They rang one another up to say, "This is wonderful. Some trade unions are here; come and meet them."

We sometimes think that the House of Commons is inaccessible to the public, but the European institutions—the Commission and the Parliament—may as well be on another planet. That does not apply for corporate Europe, however, whose agenda is, I believe, putting at risk the agenda of civic Europe.

There are some interesting divisions of opinion on this. I pay a back-handed tribute to the work done by the European Round Table, an organisation pulled together by Agnelli of Fiat in the early 1980s. It comprises the chief executives of Europe's 45 biggest multinationals. The organisation has been engaged in a project systematically and insidiously to inveigle itself into the policy-making frameworks and decision-making structures of the European Union and of every Government in Europe. It has been incredibly successful in its aim. But what suits corporate Europe may be far removed from what suits civic and democratic Europe.

Divisions are opening up—I doubt whether the Cardiff summit will address them—between business and big business. Corporate demands are often in conflict with the interest of small and medium businesses, which underpin almost all our communities. Big business is becoming less and less interested in loyalty or obligation to the nation states in which they happen to reside. They are more interested in the subsidies they can secure from national Governments. When they receive a better offer, they hot-foot it to another country to pursue the cash waved in front of them.

Similar conflicts can be seen in agriculture. I am probably as non-rural as anyone can be, but in my discussions with farmers, many of whom have been committed to traditional farming practices, I have been told of the despair at the weighting of European policy in favour of big farming—agribusiness rather than agriculture—and at the incentives to overproduce and to overuse fertilisers, growth hormones and antibiotics, which increase the risks to all sections of our societies. That is part of the conflict that we are trying to address in the alternative summit.

[Mr. Alan Simpson]

On jobs and environmental sustainability, although I congratulate my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary and his European colleagues on banning the wall-of-death netting, I should point out that that is not the only big environmental issue that Europe has to address. In many ways, the real pressure is shown in the absence of a European challenge to the rise of companies such as Monsanto, which want to dump genetically modified crops in Britain and other parts of Europe. I congratulate Austria on being the one country so far to have adopted the precautionary principle and to have banned the import of genetically modified products. It is somewhat rare for me to occupy the same intellectual space as Britain's most famous organic gardener—the Prince of Wales—but his newspaper article has set the tone for the debate on the subject. The House should follow suit in recognising the dangers to European agriculture of being driven by a big business, rather than an agricultural, agenda.

We have an opportunity to create a different, inclusive Europe. We cannot do so without central reference to the 18 million people in Europe who are out of work. If we are to set an agenda through which they can find sustainable jobs, we shall have to challenge the pillars of free-market assumptions that are driving not only the Maastricht agenda, but the dialogue between Europe and the World Trade Organisation. If we are really serious about sustainability, we can find ways in which to create full employment in all our localities, and in all the European Union countries, without having to steal jobs from one another.

We need to create a politics and an economics of redistribution, not to remove the barriers to the private sector, to deregulate Europe's economies or to pursue international competitiveness so as to risk employment and environmental sustainability. I do not expect the Foreign Secretary to address that agenda, but I ask him to use his intellectual power and courage at least to remind the leaders in Cardiff this weekend of the people's Europe debate, which is taking place outside the summit. It is a debate waiting to be let inside.

8.19 pm

Mr. Robert Walter (North Dorset): I am delighted that at least one Euro-sceptic Back Bencher managed to catch your eye, Mr. Deputy Speaker, albeit from the Government Benches.

Mr. Simpson: I am not a Euro-sceptic, but a monetarist-sceptic and a Maastricht-sceptic. I am sceptic about—no, an opponent of—capitalism, but I am not a sceptic about Europe.

Mr. Walter: I stand corrected.

At several stages, I got the impression that this would be a Welsh debate. I strongly share the emotion of my right hon. and learned Friend the Member for Folkestone and Hythe (Mr. Howard), who expressed pleasure at the summit being held in the capital city of our country of birth, but I also echo the thoughts of the hon. Member for Swansea, East (Mr. Anderson), who expressed regret at its not being held in the city of my birth.

With 15 members of the European Union, the presidency does not come around that often. If nothing changed, it would be another seven and a half years before we occupied that position again. If, as I sincerely hope, we enlarge before then, it will be somewhat longer. What a disappointment, then, that so little has been achieved in the six months in which Britain has been able to set the European agenda.

There was much fanfare at the beginning of our presidency, with funny stars made of pizza, and ties for all those who wanted to be on message, but so determined were the Government to demonstrate the break with the past that they played down the 25th anniversary of our membership of the European Union, which fell just as we assumed the presidency. The failure to celebrate the silver jubilee of the great achievement of my right hon. Friend the Member for Old Bexley and Sidcup (Sir E. Heath) in any meaningful way signified a break not with the past but with reality and with the realpolitik of today's Europe.

As we approach the summit, there is much shuttling between capitals, but the reality, which Cardiff will not address, is of a missed opportunity and the failure of Europe, led for the past six months by the Government, to address the great challenges of today: the consequences of enlargement; the reform of the common agricultural policy; and, for Britain itself, a response to monetary union and the single currency.

On enlargement, we all welcome progress in opening negotiations with the applicant states, but one has to regret the somewhat cynical assumption in some quarters that the negotiations will take so long that the consequences for the existing members need not yet be addressed. At Amsterdam, all the European Governments failed to address the institutional consequences of enlargement. Changes in the size of the Commission, voting rights and the Council of Ministers will all require another intergovernmental conference if we take the enlarged membership beyond a further five states.

The position of Turkey remains largely unresolved and must be linked with the negotiations with Cyprus. It would be totally unacceptable to negotiate with the people of only one side of the green line.

The greatest unresolved obstacle to enlargement is the common agricultural policy. Agenda 2000 fails to address the key reforms that are needed. I declare an interest as a farmer and a beneficiary of the CAP, but I echo what my right hon. and learned Friend the Member for Folkestone and Hythe said earlier: at the launch of the UK presidency in December, the Prime Minister criticised the

"cost and waste of the Common Agricultural Policy"

which

"continue to grow year by year".

My right hon. and learned Friend also quoted the Foreign Secretary, who, in Warsaw last November, said:

"We need a reformed CAP which gives a better deal all round—fair prices for consumers, flexibility for farmers, protection for the environment".

Agenda 2000, in either its original or its revised form, fails to cut the cost to the taxpayer. In fact, on the Commission's own figures, it ends up costing the taxpayer more. It fails to take into account the pressures on us in the next world trade round. The Foreign Secretary failed today even to mention that next round and what position the European Union will take in it. Agenda 2000 will be a building block, but I am not sure whether it will be one that is acceptable to those with whom we are negotiating.

If the Cardiff summit agenda were to tackle the key targets that the Government have set themselves, we could look forward to reading next week of a Europe genuinely making progress toward a realistic agricultural policy for the next century. Instead, we have a deceitful fudge: Agenda 2000 does not address enlargement, because there is a hope that, at best, the negotiations will last so long that the new states will not enter before 2006 or, at worst, a transitional arrangement will delay their accession to the common agricultural policy at least until after that date.

Agenda 2000 envisages a common agricultural policy costing more rather than less, because the Government, in setting their agenda, failed to convince the other member states that expenditure on agriculture has to be reduced. It may be that the forthcoming elections in Germany have made the subject sensitive. Well, so be it—with 15 democracies in the Union, tough decisions will always be inconvenient to one member state or another.

Those are internal matters. We must all wish for success in the next world trade round, but there can be no successful outcome with the kind of subsidised agriculture still envisaged in Agenda 2000. Over-subsidised agriculture serves no one well, least of all the efficient British farmer, who merely wants a level playing field.

The UK presidency and the Government have failed to deal with the consequences of the single currency for the United Kingdom. It has been said before that economic and monetary union is a reality. It will happen on 1 January next year: 11 member states of the European Union will merge their currencies and operate a single zone of monetary stability.

Those countries constitute our largest market, and the effect of the scheme will be the most significant monetary event since Bretton Woods. There are those in Britain who wish that it would go away, and those who are convinced that it will not work and that the original European Community Six, with some of the fastest-growing and richest smaller states of Europe, are rushing over the precipice.

There are those who so totally misunderstand the project that they do not believe that it starts until Frau Schmidt collects her pension from the post office in euros in 2002. The effect on Britain and British monetary policy will be greater than any of the post-war monetary shocks.

I am not advocating our joining on day one. I am warning that the effect of the monetary bloc on our nearest continent will give the lie to any concept of monetary sovereignty. That may seem to be the same old argument about Britain always getting on the train after it has left the station, and that is probably as true of monetary union as it was of many aspects of our post-war European adventure. However, that argument is not good enough for an intelligent electorate. Our press has failed to give the British people any guidance, save for rubbishing the whole project.

The Government must begin to rehearse for the electorate the arguments about why a single currency is a good or bad thing for Britain and for international trade, and for why economic and monetary union is the solution. I may differ from some of my right hon. and hon. Friends on the matter, but I approach it from a monetarist standpoint. What is money? More specifically in this context, what should money be? It should be a means of exchange and a store of value. The value of sterling since Bretton Woods broke down in the 1960s was a one-way bet until the late 1980s. We then manipulated the currency to an unsustainable level, and we joined the exchange rate mechanism at the wrong rate at the wrong time. The policy was not without benefits—inflation halved, and interest rates dropped from 15 to 10 per cent.—but the ERM ended in failure.

Today, we are back at an exchange rate that is unsustainable—perhaps, I should say unstable—against those of our major competitors, the problem being compounded by a not unrelated uncompetitive interest rate. I part company with those monetarists who believe that effective monetary policy and parliamentary democracy are somehow indissoluble, for the same reasons that I believe in an independent judiciary and would not want politicians to make clinical judgments in the national health service. In central banks that are independent of day-to-day political control, the central bankers should be accountable, but the experience of Germany and the United States shows that, when they are left to get on with the job, they have a much better effect than any succession of Chancellors of the Exchequer.

Why would the euro deliver the objective of independent monetary policy? Why not have a British solution? The Chancellor has attempted to answer that with the Bank of England's Monetary Policy Committee, but that solution is not sustainable. British industry lives by international trade. The firms that make things and sell them on the world market—unlike the retailers who import cheap goods from the far east, and who finance Labour party campaigns—demand monetary stability. The chief executive of a United Kingdom-based multinational said to me the other day that he has eight manufacturing plants in the European Union in five countries for 15 markets. Which currency should he use next year? He will be pricing and accounting in the euro. His case is replicated across British industry. The Confederation of British Industry admits that the most enthusiastic supporters of early entry are medium-sized manufacturing exporters.

Who cares if British industry uses the euro? Manufacturers, the City and agriculture are, by the nature of their business, already committed to using it. However, it is an odd kind of sovereignty to abdicate monetary policy that determines the activities of major sectors of the economy to foreign central bankers. Such an abdication did us no harm during the period of our greatest imperial and industrial glory, when we all used gold. However, the experience of the gold standard during the inter-war years should tell us that a successful economy must work within a sensitive monetary framework. An independent European central bank could provide such a framework at some time in future.

The Government have a duty to prepare the industry and the people of Britain for the consequences of EMU. There is still no serious, informed debate on British membership. The promise of the razzmatazz around the UK presidency has fallen very flat. I still hope—a little—that the Government will address some real issues facing Europe and Britain in the dying days of our presidency. I hope that they will place the consequences of enlargement high on the agenda, along with a real discussion of genuine reform of the common agricultural policy that will go further than anything envisaged in Agenda 2000. I hope that they will encourage a domestic debate on monetary union.

[Mr. Walter]

8.34 pm

Mr. Tam Dalyell (Linlithgow): In the bygone world when I was a new Member of Parliament and the father of the Opposition winder up—the hon. Member for Windsor (Mr. Trend)—was a distinguished Cabinet Secretary, a debate such as this would have been absolutely packed. I want to register, as did the right hon. Member for Wales—I mean the right hon. Member for Caernarfon (Mr. Wigley)—that it is good to have a pre-summit debate. However, there was a time when Members of the House of Commons would have tumbled over each other to have some input to such a debate.

I understand well that the pressures of the presidency are such that the Foreign Secretary, who has Kosovo and other problems on his hands, cannot be here. However, I lay down a marker to the effect that, if there are further debates after we have given up our presidency, it will behove the Foreign Secretary and senior Foreign Office Ministers to listen to what the House of Commons has to say on such important matters. If they do not, they will dig at the root of the whole set-up of parliamentary democracy. That said, it is good that we are having the debate, which gives us an opportunity to ask a number of questions about what will be raised in Cardiff.

I listened carefully to the hon. Member for North Dorset (Mr. Walter), who raised matters of great importance on the world trade round and agricultural prices. The farmers in my constituency wonder about milk prices, and hill farmers wonder how the price of tups—sheep meat—which was £58 last year, has fallen to £32 this year. My question is general. What will happen to hill farmers and milk producers when the Community expands and we take on possibly massive obligations to the farmers of Poland and Lithuania? Has that been discussed and worked out? After Cardiff, some of us will ask what was said there about the strain on the agricultural kitty caused by expansion of the Community. We should start thinking about that now rather than later.

I do not often agree with nationalists, but what the right hon. Member for Caernarfon said about firms in Wales being already involved in the ecu also applies to firms in my constituency, including Motorola, Hewlett Packard, Sun Electronics, Nippon Electric and Quintiles, where my constituents and those of my parliamentary neighbour the Foreign Secretary work. The Foreign Secretary says that the decision will be made in the hard-headed economic interests of the British people, if I have quoted him correctly. I make no bones about being one of those who would, even now, go in at the first opportunity.

I want to ask a factual question about a most succinct report on page 16 of The Independent on 5 June, referring to 4 June, under the byline of Katherine Butler in Luxembourg. The headline was "Euro club shows Brown the door".

I do not know whether it is true. If it is, it is very serious. If it is not true, we should be told in no uncertain terms that it is a load of rubbish.

The report states:

"Gordon Brown, the Chancellor, subjected himself to formal humiliation last night as ministers from the 11 euro-zone countries gathered at a chateau in Luxembourg for the inaugural meeting of their single currency inner circle, Euro-XI."

I am very interested in the whole question of the crucial Euro X. The report continues:

"As representative of Britain's European Union presidency Mr. Brown was insisting on his right to attend the opening formalities at Senningen castle, but was told he would have to leave the room almost immediately. He was not allowed to attend a dinner that followed the first meeting of the new G8-style body which will co-ordinate economic policy in the euro-area."

Was he told to leave a dinner?

The report continues:

"Senior officials of the euro-zone countries expressed amazement at his decision to muscle in on the informal meeting in the light of Britain's decision to opt out of the single currency. It merely highlighted Britain's political marginalisation, they said."

Katherine Butler goes on: "'He"— that is the Chancellor—

"is a gatecrasher', said a Bonn source, 'he is bringing himself down to a level even ambassadors would not accept.'"

Was that said? The report continues:

"Another senior EU diplomat described British strategy as 'naive' and said it reflected the difficulty London has had in understanding"—

Mr. Deputy Speaker (Mr. Michael J. Martin): Order. The hon. Gentleman and I have had discussions before about reading full articles into the record. That is not what is required. He could perhaps give us an abridged version.

Mr. Dalyell: You are quite right, Mr. Deputy Speaker. I have said enough on that. Is there any question of British marginalisation? If there is, should not the matter be frankly addressed at Cardiff next week? It is not merely a question of going or not going in, but a decision whereby the world will be altered by what is happening in Europe.

I return to the fact that, in all our constituencies, firms are taking it into their own hands to trade in ecus. We are in a different position. This is a matter of enormous importance to jobs and prosperity. Part of the reason for my concern is that I was exiled for four years from this House to the European Parliament. I was a member of the budget committee and the budget sub-committee with colleagues such as Martin Bangemann, Erwin Langer and others, and I know how they react. If we are not going to be in the club, they will make sure that we do not attend its meetings. I want to know what exactly the position is at Cardiff. If the article that I quoted is factually wrong, no doubt the Minister will say so.

I should like to raise a third question. In November, a delegation concerned with the environment will go to Buenos Aires. I understand that we go as the immediate past-President and that the delegation will be led by the Austrians, who are very anti-nuclear. I am open about the fact that I am totally pro-nuclear. I am dismayed by what has happened on the north coast of Scotland. The press has been wicked in its descriptions of Dounreay, which is a whipping boy for everything. In fact, technically, the position is not nearly as bad as is being made out widely in Britain. Leaving that aside, nuclear energy is the only way to produce energy without large quantities of CO_2 being put into the atmosphere.

Is policy for Buenos Aires going to be discussed at Cardiff? Unlike Kyoto, are representatives of the Department of Trade and Industry, who, it might be hoped, would put the nuclear side of the argument, going to go to Buenos Aires? When I first knew the Minister, he was an effective official of the GMB union, and many of his members are much concerned because they work in the nuclear industry. I should like a comment in his reply or by letter on Buenos Aires.

My fourth question concerns Kosovo. I listened carefully to the Foreign Secretary and agreed with what the hon. and learned Member for North-East Fife (Mr. Campbell) said about consulting the Russians. However, I do not think that I am wrong in saying that the military option was not ruled out because of the appalling things that are happening. Last May, I stayed with my former national service regiment, now the Royal Scots Dragoon Guards, in Bosnia. It was the tank regiment in Bosnia at the time. As one who never wanted us to go into Bosnia in the first place, I must say, having seen the situation, that we cannot possibly withdraw from Bosnia in the foreseeable future. I am not prepared to sit on green Benches and be involved in the former Yugoslavia without our having heavy armour there. Without it, there will be a repeat of what happened to the sappers who were taken hostage. Unless heavy armour is present, one does not have the perceived authority to carry out the job.

In the discussions in Cardiff, I hope that no one will think that air strikes will be at all effective. Air strikes are counterproductive. They simply unite those who are hit against those who are doing the striking. In Cardiff, will there be discussions, if action is to be taken in Kosovo, on sending armour? For Britain, that means sending what I understand from those who have to drive them in the way that I did 40 years ago, excellent Challenger tanks. I am told that driving the great, heavy Challenger tank is much easier than driving the Centurion, which some of us had to do, with mixed success.

Fifthly, there may be discussions of European policy on Iran. As one who was in Iran on holiday last October, I strongly hope that the Minister of State, my hon. Friend the Member for Leeds, Central (Mr. Fatchett), representing the European presidency, will go, if only to show support for the mayor of Tehran and the many other enlightened people in that country.

Sixthly, will there be a discussion of European policy towards the former Soviet republics of central Asia? My hon. Friend came to give an excellent speech to the Kyrgyzi delegation that was over here. He knows a lot about this and clearly takes an interest in this aspect of affairs. He will know how important it is that Europe has some policy towards the emerging republics, such as Kyrgyzstan, if I may put it that way.

Will there be a discussion of NATO expansion? I will not pursue the matter further if the Minister stands up and says that that is not on the agenda. Some of us think that it should be on the agenda, given the letter to the Prime Minister signed by Sir Hugh Beach, Dr. Helga Graham, Sir John Killick, Sir Michael Atiyah, Sir Michael Beetham, Frank Blackaby, Field Marshal the Lord Bramall, Field Marshal the Lord Carver, Sir Frank Cooper and many others—I have only reached the Cs—who are expressing extreme concern about the expansion of NATO to the Russian borders. Did I interpret the Minister as saying that that will not be discussed? I am not sure what the signals mean. The European Community must discuss the matter in relation to its own problems with the Soviet Union.

I warned the Foreign Secretary and others that I wished to raise the matter of European relations with Libya. I have had 14 Adjournment debates on the subject. It is not just a matter of obligations to the relatives; it is a matter of our whole relationship with the Arab world. This will be known to the Foreign Secretary because he has recently had meetings with Dr. Mudenge representing the Organisation of African Unity and, indeed, the African states.

On 21 December it will be 10 long years since that airliner went down over Lockerbie—10 long years of agony for the relatives and of increasingly festering relations not only with Libya but with many Arab countries. In these circumstances, should there not be a discussion, particularly with the Italians who have ceased to have any inhibitions about breaking sanctions? Italian Ministers have trade relations with Libya. Should not Europe discuss the whole position of the United States in relation to Lockerbie? After all, it is the United States that is driving the policy.

There is a growing belief among the relatives that certain leading Americans—Vincent Cannistraro, Buck Revell and Oliver North—had a kind of Faustian agreement with some unpleasant elements after the Vincennes shot down the Iranian airliner carrying pilgrims to Mecca. It may be most serious to say this in the House of Commons, but serious people believe that when Ali Akbar Mohtashemi, the Iranian Minister of the Interior at the time, raised the spectre of half a dozen, 10 or a dozen airliners being blown up in revenge for what the Vincennes had done, there was a tacit agreement that if one American airliner went down that would be tit for tat—the end of the matter. It would not be right to go in to all the details now and one has to be a professor of Lockerbie studies, but I would argue a case for this being taken seriously with any Foreign Office official.

Tonight, I ask that there be a frank discussion over lunch at Cardiff about how on earth the situation with Libya is to be resolved. It can be resolved, as Dr. Swire and Professor Black found out, by the Libyans sending those two alleged criminals—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order. It is one matter to say that European allies can try to help with Lockerbie, but to go into great detail about Lockerbie now is to go outwith the scope of the debate.

Mr. Dalyell: I do not wish to abuse the debate.

My final crisp point is this: at Cardiff I hope that this whole Lockerbie saga will be discussed with a view to resolving it.

8.55 pm

Mr. Michael Trend (Windsor): I join those who paid tribute to Cardiff, especially the hon. Members for Swansea, East (Mr. Anderson) and for East Carmarthen and Dinefwr (Mr. Williams) and the right hon. Member for Caernarfon (Mr. Wigley), and I congratulate Cardiff on hosting this important event at the weekend and next week.

This evening's speeches have covered a wide variety of areas; I want to concentrate particularly on the road that the Government have taken to Cardiff. My hon. Friend the

[Mr. Michael Trend]

Member for Hertford and Stortford (Mr. Wells) made a splendid contribution and put a convincing case on the review of the Lomé convention and, in particular, economic relations with the West Indies. He is the House's expert on the banana regime and it was good to hear the subject raised again tonight. We have just heard a characteristically thoughtful contribution from the hon. Member for Linlithgow (Mr. Dalyell).

My right hon. and learned Friend the Member for Folkestone and Hythe (Mr. Howard) struck the right tone in his comprehensive and highly effective attack on what he rightly described as a flop of a presidency. He was spot-on in underlining several specific areas in which the Government have achieved little or nothing during their tenure of the presidency of the Council of the European Union.

On jobs, enlargement, human rights and reform of the common agricultural policy—the areas that matter for Cardiff—we remain at the same square one as when the Prime Minister embarked on his radiant, starry-eyed launch of the British presidency.

The road to Cardiff began at the PR launch for the British presidency. That was, we have heard, at Waterloo station. It was our first glimpse of the style-without-substance presidency. How many times have we heard the overworked metaphor about the necessity of being on the Euro train and not being left behind at the station, in the sidings or on the slow track? At Waterloo that day, the train finally turned up and it was a PR special. Two things hugely amused the Journalists that day: when the train turned up, it was empty; and when it left, it went nowhere. There was some powerful symbolism in that, so perhaps that was the last we shall hear of the wretched train.

The House will recall the rhetoric of that launch. The Prime Minister, ever mindful of the improvement that a group of children make to a photo call, was surrounded by the children who had painted the logo for the presidency. He told us:

"The children who produced the stars worked in teams. We want a Europe that works together as a team."

A new metaphor, one to replace the train, was born—the team. However, judged by that, the Prime Minister has not done well with his European partners in the six months of the presidency. According to the French Finance Minister, Britain—our team—has now been relegated to the second division. On another occasion, one of the Commissioners told the Prime Minister that he was no longer even in the game; he was on the touchline, and

"You cannot lead the game from the touchline."

During our debates, we have heard about the reception given to the Chancellor of the Exchequer at Senningen. He was deliberately left out of the team photograph, as the hon. Member for Linlithgow pointed out.

What has happened in the past six months is that reality has caught up with rhetoric, and the Government will pay a high price for a problem that is entirely of their own making. By exciting high expectations, but falling well below them, the Government have made a rod for Britain's back. It was not necessary to do that. More realistic ambitions and more tempered language would have served British interests much better.

Let us return, for the last time, to those heady days, early in the new Government, when the Prime Minister said that he wanted to shape a new Europe. He told us that we were heading for a new era, a new millennium, a new Europe; Government insiders told the press that the children's logo was "very cool"; a think-tank was commissioned to "rebrand" Europe using focus groups. The message was: new Labour, new Britain, new Europe—next stop, new Jerusalem. That almost Messianic fervour inspired one Italian newspaper to declare the Prime Minister to be "Tony Blair Superstar"—perhaps Lord Lloyd-Webber is working on the musical.

Those were heady days—the days before the Prime Minister encountered the big players in Europe. The big players have cut him and the Government of this country down to size. The agenda was overblown; as the hon. Member for Swansea, East rightly said, any presidency is part of a continuum, which is why the Government made a mistake in making such claims in the first place. It was all part of the propaganda effort that is so characteristic of the Labour Government in all areas of activity.

I am glad to say that the spin doctors were also put in their place in Europe: The Sunday Times tells us that one Austrian journalist described Mr. Alastair Campbell as

"the tall, arrogant Brit with the coarse tone."

The overblown expectations encouraged by the Government's spin doctors and the arrogance with which they have approached their task in Europe were neatly summed up this week by Martin Walker in The Guardian, who wrote:

"Fair Europeans . . . conclude that the main problem was the inflation of expectations."

Marc Champion of The European said that, in his view, the UK presidency emerges from its six months

"bruised by a mix of hubris and political naivety."

We could not have put it better ourselves.

Another verdict on the presidency should not go unnoticed. Less than a month ago, at a conference in Brussels of the European Movement, the Minister without Portfolio, on another of his excursions to Europe, told his listeners:

"Europe lacks leadership and a sense of mission and too many people don't feel part of it."

Is that the Europe being led by his right hon. Friend the Prime Minister? Is that the view of a politician who plays a central role in the propaganda surrounding the Government? There was an opportunity for the Government to do something about leading opinion in Europe. There was an opportunity to bring forward policies that would force down the people's unemployment that so bedevils Europe. That opportunity is about to pass away at Cardiff and it is no use complaining or blaming others at precisely the moment when the Government have had a chance to do something—a chance to put forward or fight for a concrete idea.

Presidencies and Governments can have big ideas and two of the biggest in recent years came from Britain: the single market and subsidiarity, both of which came from and were driven by the Conservatives. Both are now taken for granted—indeed, they are trumpeted by the Labour Government and even by Chancellor Kohl, who has an appointment with the voters—but those ideas had to be fought for. That shows that real achievements are possible and that big ideas—real ideas—can be pursued. What a marked contrast with the current presidency.

Only today, the Foreign Secretary told the Daily Express that, at Cardiff,

"We are going to look at the future of Europe and address the big questions"— about time too, we on the Conservative Benches say. That is what the Government should have been doing over the past six months.

I shall go into the lion's den on one issue, about which we heard earlier: the common agricultural policy. I should like to set the context. The Foreign Secretary, on numerous occasions—particularly in a speech at Warsaw, as my hon. Friend the Member for North Dorset (Mr. Walter) mentioned in his excellent speech—the Deputy Prime Minister, during the Queen's Speech, and the Prime Minister himself, in a speech at the Mansion House, all made considerable reference to reforming the common agricultural policy. They said that it would be a central aim of their presidency. What happened? On 1 April, The Daily Telegraph told the story:

"EU throws out farm reform plans".

Perhaps it is understandable that my right hon. and learned Friend the Member for Folkestone and Hythe and I missed the Foreign Secretary's reference to the CAP today. As it was such an important issue for the Government, we assumed that somebody in the Foreign Office would have written a section, a couple of paragraphs or a brief on CAP reform during our presidency. In fact, we heard less than a sentence—11 words—on the subject. I am told that the Foreign Secretary said that the Government have a "clear sense of direction for reform of the common agricultural policy".

There are two things wrong with that. First, it is wrong, and secondly, does it really cover the importance of the Government's top priority? Is the throwing away of a handful of words in the middle of a speech the right response at the end of a presidency to a matter that was thought to be at the top of the agenda at the beginning of it?

Let us go to another matter: the appointment of the president of the European central bank. My right hon. and learned Friend cited a vast array of criticisms that were levelled at the British presidency at that time. It is astonishing that Britain's Government and Prime Minister were criticised by, among others, the President of the European Parliament, the Prime Ministers of Luxembourg and Italy and the Austrian Chancellor, who said:

"We have now learnt . . . how not to organise a summit".

That phrase will haunt the Government throughout their tenure of office.

The Government have fared little better in the press. As the Foreign Secretary will know, he had a very hard time when he visited Turkey and Italy—and when he went to Strasbourg, as well as when he did not go to Strasbourg, even though he was expected there in February. When he did go to Strasbourg, as we have heard, the fawning motion put before the Parliament was too clever by half, and it was lost. It was a spin too far for Members of the European Parliament.

I am sure that the Foreign Secretary will pack his bags for Cardiff with a huge sense of relief that the ordeal is almost over. I hope that he enjoys his brainstorming lunch, which appears to be the major feature of the occasion, for when the Government as a whole get to Wales this weekend, they will have very little to show for their presidency of the Council. I am sure that there will be many photo opportunities; it is always good to welcome President Mandela to our country. I am sure that it will not be unhelpful to the Prime Minister for the President of South Africa to join the President of the European Council for the cameras. It is probably a matter of great relief for the Government that they can hold the presidency only once in the lifetime of a Parliament, on a rota basis, rather as we get tickets for the Gallery.

The summit in Cardiff will be the last opportunity for the Euro-President Prime Minister to be centre stage. I am sure that the occasion will be made to work for all its worth. Many of the important issues that hon. Members have aired in this debate will not be touched on; many important concerns about the development of Europe will not be touched on. It will be a gigantic photo opportunity for the Prime Minister, and an attempt to paper over the cracks of the presidency.

We may well see a Welsh walkabout, which will, perhaps, be better organised than the visit by the Chancellor of the Exchequer and his partners to the great city of York, where he marched them up and down the street to the accompaniment not of the cheers, but of the jeers of the burghers of York, who know that many of the great figures of Europe are not exactly marching in tune with the peoples of Europe.

The Government's gigantic public relations exercise and their attempt to spin-manage Europe are getting Britain into serious trouble with our friends, partners and colleagues in Europe. That trouble is entirely of the Government's making. If that is how much influence Britain can wield and how much respect we can command in Europe while we hold the presidency, heaven help us when we are no longer in that potentially powerful position.

Whatever happens at Cardiff, it can only be a matter of time before the lessons learned about this Government in the past six months by the political leaders of Europe filter down to the people who matter most to us in this House—our constituents. Politicians cannot live by style alone. A realisation of the Government's failure in their presidency of the European Council, which mirrors a lack of achievement in so many aspects of their performance, will soon break through to the public at large.

9.10 pm

The Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Office (Mr. Doug Henderson): I welcome the hon. Member for Windsor (Mr. Trend) to his post and congratulate him on his appointment. I am not one of those politicians who like to give advice to other politicians, but if the hon. Gentleman is to stay in his job, he was misplaced in criticising Eurostar, because he may find that he has to avail himself of its services from time to time, as I shall tomorrow morning at 6.14 on my way to Brussels.

We have had a thoughtful debate, which is different from past debates on Europe in which I have taken part, both in this capacity and when in opposition. Previous debates were characterised by ideology and zealotry. I am pleased to say that today's debate heralds a new approach, and there have been many thoughtful contributions from hon. Members on both sides of the House. The absence of ideology on the Opposition Front Bench has not been too obvious, but several contributions from Conservative Back Benchers have examined the issues that we face in Europe. I find it interesting that the Opposition, of all people, should be fond of quoting the press in their defence. That is a strange reversal of a role that I have known some Conservative Members to adopt in the past.

[Mr. Doug Henderson]

My hon. Friend the Member for Swansea, East (Mr. Anderson) said that he believed that the presidency would be the busiest period for British foreign policy in peacetime. I do not know whether that is true, but it certainly feels as if it is. We have had an active and productive six months during our presidency, which has one or two weeks to run.

My hon. Friend the Member for Ilford, South (Mr. Gapes) said that my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister has been deeply involved in European issues, which is the protocol for European matters when there is a summit at the end of the six-month presidency. My right hon. Friend has visited all the countries in the European Union over the past two weeks to examine the issues relating to the development of the European Union that are considered important not only by the presidency, but by other partner states.

My hon. Friend the Member for Swansea, East said that he had detected more warmth in Europe towards the Government. I cannot resist saying that that is not a difficult achievement when one considers the temperatures that existed before 1 May last year. There is a new warmth and a feeling that everyone in Europe is in a family. That does not mean that everyone always agrees on every issue or that one does not fight one's corner hard, but there are many issues on which we must look beyond Europe and decide how we can best co-operate. That has been a strong theme during the past six months.

Mr. Howard: Is that why the Chancellor of the Exchequer was treated as he was, just a few days ago?

Mr. Henderson: The right hon. and learned Gentleman, like one of my hon. Friends, reads too much into newspaper reports. The rules on the relationship of the various nations to ECOFIN and Euro X were clearly defined at the Luxembourg summit, when there was no doubt that the major issues of macro-economic policy in Europe are determined by ECOFIN, and that the Euro X committee deals with the details of the currency and its relationship to other currencies. There are occasions when it is appropriate for the four non-members of the currency to be present, and other occasions when it would be inappropriate. The right hon. and learned Gentleman refers to a situation when it was recognised that the 11 members wished to discuss matters specific to the currency.

The main focus of the presidency, and a topic that will feature prominently in Cardiff, is the enlargement of the European Union. An historic decision was taken in Luxembourg and has been driven hard by the British presidency over the past six months. It will change the future shape of Europe, uniting a Europe that was previously divided.

There are different views on the issue. In his introductory remarks, the right hon. and learned Member for Folkestone and Hythe (Mr. Howard) expressed the view that we had gone backwards over the past 12 months. The hon. Member for Somerton and Frome (Mr. Heath) thought that the session had been well managed. Any objective person would recognise that the mandate that was given to the presidency by the Luxembourg summit has been fulfilled in its entirety.

That is the strong view of the states that want to join the EU. The Romanian European Minister said that it was an historic day and that the European conference had further added to that process. Indeed, some of the negotiators for countries that want to accede to the EU criticised me six or eight weeks ago because we had brought forward the screening process too quickly and they could not meet some of the detailed requirements set by the Commission officials. I pleaded guilty, because that is what they had asked for. They have worked hard, and I think that they are pleased now that considerable progress has been made on the screening process.

Mr. David Heath: When I said that the process was well managed, I meant that as a compliment. I hope that the Minister will agree that to start the accession process without a clear timetable for CAP reform, institutional reform and structural and cohesion fund reform is to invite the applicant countries to apply on the basis of a false prospectus. It is essential for the timetable to be in place.

Mr. Henderson: I am pleased that the hon. Gentleman is not retracting his support for the accession process. I agree that it is essential to recognise that the enlargement of the EU entails not just the changes that those countries must make if they want to accede to the EU; it also involves the changes that the existing members of the EU must make to respond to that challenge. That has been one of the important aspects of our presidency and will be discussed at Cardiff on Monday afternoon, when the leaders of the nations of Europe will seek a formula that will allow that process to go forward.

From a presidency position, we shall push forward the reform of the common agricultural policy, a key issue which several hon. Members raised. After the German elections in September, we shall be able to address the paper issued by the Commission for reform initially in cereals and beef. If carried through, that alone would save British consumers about £1 billion a year, so it is worth while. There is support for some of the proposals in the farming industry.

On structural funds, there is a need for reform if funding is to be available to assist the countries that want to accede to the EU. In the future, from the total pool of structural funds, there will be fewer resources available proportionally to be distributed to existing members of the EU. That is also recognised.

I shall return to the specifics of the structural funds, to which hon. Members on both sides of the House have referred. At Cardiff, we hope to make a commitment to work hard to try to bring those issues to a conclusion by March next year. The European Parliament, through its procedures, can then give assent to the aspects of any deal to which it is required by treaty to agree before the European elections next June. If the matter is not resolved by April, there will be no time to consider it until October or November—which is nearing the end of the existing structural funds regime. There are many reasons why we want to put the timetable in place, and we shall strive hard to do that in Cardiff.

My hon. Friend the Member for East Carmarthen and Dinefwr (Mr. Williams) and the right hon. Member for Dyfed asked what reforms are taking place in structural fund procedures. There must be a fair system if there is to be acceptance and understanding on the part of the 15 nations that wish to accede to the European Union. Areas in Europe that have the same characteristics should receive the same sort of support, regardless of their location. As the right hon. Member for Dyfed—

Mr. Wigley: Caernarfon.

Mr. Henderson: I apologise. My geography of Wales tends to be a bit anglicised. I must do some homework, lest I get into trouble with the right hon. Gentleman and others.

As the right hon. Member for Caernarfon (Mr. Wigley) said, it is not simply a matter of the new structural funds regime—although that is important to the whole United Kingdom. In some places in Wales, England and Scotland, the description of the area is a key factor. The right hon. Gentleman explained how one can calculate different GDP per capita definitions depending on whether Wales is divided north-south or east-west. The statisticians at Eurostat and the Commission must deal with that matter on the basis of what is fair and reasonably objective.

We have given our people a mandate to negotiate, and we are seeking a fair system. We must be able to say that areas that are classified as objective 1 in the United Kingdom are, broadly speaking, comparable to similar classifications made in other European Union countries. If that is achieved, it will be a fair settlement. I do not wish to comment on the specifics of any areas while the negotiating process is continuing—I am sure that hon. Members will understand why. The Government take a firm view and will try to advance the process.

We have been active on many other issues during our presidency.

Mr. Donald Anderson: Before my hon. Friend moves on, will he refer to the proposals for institutional reform? Have the Government made specific proposals in respect of a conference concerning institutional reform? What are the prospects of that occurring?

Mr. Henderson: My hon. Friend is moving ahead of me. I shall turn to that issue. There will be a discussion over lunch involving the Heads of Government—[Interruption.] I assure hon. Members that lunches are not perks in a European context. It means that one gets indigestion while eating at a meeting—and the Heads of Government are no more exempt than my right hon. Friend or I.

There will be an open discussion during which any contributor may lay any issue on the table. There is a desire to explore to what extent further integration is necessary if there is to be effective decision making and to what extent subsidiarity must be redefined and worked out in a way that is acceptable to member nations and will serve us well in the future. Those are the philosophical parameters of the discussion. It may go into institutional issues such as the role of national Governments, of the European Parliament and of the Commission, the size of the Commission, the scrutiny process and many others.

There is a wide agenda, and we shall aim to take it forward to the Vienna summit in December, where it could be progressed a little further along the line. Hon. Members on both sides of the House understand that there is no magic formula for reforming an organisation as complicated as the EU, and that reform does not happen quickly, because consent is essential for lasting agreement.

We have been active in many other areas, such as improving action against crime at an international level. On the environment, we have achieved discussion of the Kyoto obligations at the EU and practical decisions on new regulations on landfill and on drift nets. On the single market, there have been agreements on a research and development framework, which is important for British scientific institutes and universities, on mobile phones and on the introduction of a scoreboard system, so that we are not only saying that we are committed to the single market, but making everyone else aware of what we have done to achieve that. National obstacles to the single market will become transparent under the system, which is an important development.

Hon. Members will be pleased that there has been progress on beef this week, as was acknowledged in some of the speeches tonight. The Government will be pushing the Commission proposal through the various channels to achieve acceptance at the earliest stage.

The new arms code is a major achievement. The hon. Member for Somerton and Frome asked why it was not announced in the March half-time report. It was not agreed then, but only three or four weeks ago. I believe that it is a significant achievement and puts huge pressure on member states to play the game, not to act unreasonably and not to undercut foreign policy positions on those matters. That is an important move forward, which has been acknowledged by hon. Members on both sides of the House.

Mr. Dalyell: Is this a convenient point to ask my hon. Friend about Kosovo, or will he come to it later? If not, may I repeat my question about air strikes? Some of us feel strongly that if there is to be a military option, which has not been ruled out, it should not be air strikes, but infantry supported by armour, which is totally different from counter-productive air strikes. Can he say anything about the thinking on air strikes?

Mr. Henderson: I had hoped that hon. Members were satisfied with the response of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State, who intervened on the right hon. and learned Member for Folkestone and Hythe to answer his points relating to those matters. Nothing is ruled out. We are considering the situation, and, as my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary said, there is a G8 Foreign Ministers meeting tomorrow and there has been a Defence Ministers meeting today. European Foreign Ministers will have an opportunity to discuss those matters at their lunch on Monday. There is a build up in the United Nations for seeking as much consensus as can be achieved to get the necessary resolution through.

Mr. Howard: May I bring the Minister back to the code of conduct on arms sales, which he was dealing with before he gave way to the hon. Member for Linlithgow (Mr. Dalyell)? Is not the most significant new feature that the EU code will introduce the obligation on a country to notify other countries when it has refused to grant a licence for the export of particular arms? Will that not present such an order, on a plate, to any other country that chooses to adopt a different interpretation of the code? For the first time, if a country refuses to grant a licence for an order, it will have to notify everyone else, and any other country could notify its industry to take advantage of the order.

[Mr. Howard]

Mr. Henderson: I understand why the right hon. and learned Gentleman is worried about that, but, given my understanding of the defence industry—I have been involved in it a bit; in fact, I once worked for Rolls-Royce—I can say that the main contractors are large-scale operators, who generally know who seeks what kind of purchase and the type of offer that will be made. I believe that they already have access to such information.

What the code of conduct does is inform those people and others that there is a reason why a sale has been rejected by one country, and that, if they are then going to undercut the politics of that decision, they will have to do so publicly, and justify their stance. I believe that that will have a major impact, in that, when there is a need to stop the sale of a particular weapon for a particular political reason, that reason will—hopefully—be upheld by those who were potentially alternative suppliers.

Mr. David Heath: At what point does the hon. Gentleman consider that it would be appropriate to return to the European Union negotiating table to strengthen the code of conduct, making it into something nearer what was originally envisaged?

Does the hon. Gentleman envisage any discussions with the United States about the code, with a view to reaching some agreement with the US about American arms manufacturers?

Mr. Henderson: I think common sense will suggest to the hon. Gentleman that we need to see how the code works. There is a commitment to review its procedures every 12 months.

It clearly makes sense to secure as much agreement as possible with the United States, so that the same policies are adopted by defence industries throughout the part of the world where there is the capacity to make the goods that we are normally discussing. We want to achieve that.

The hon. Member for Hertford and Stortford (Mr. Wells) referred to the Lomé mandate, which was discussed at this week's General Affairs Council. Considerable progress was made, and officials are now looking at some of the detail. The principles of the British position are as I described them to the hon. Gentleman when I gave evidence to the Select Committee, and we are pushing hard on them. The banana issue has been taken on board, but I must tell the hon. Gentleman that any decision must be consistent with World Trade Organisation rules. Otherwise, in the long term, it will not stick, and there will be problems. We shall return to that issue on 29 June, at the next meeting of the General Affairs Council. I hope that we shall be able to conclude the mandate then.

Much is expected of the weekend's proceedings in Wales. We are all looking forward to going to Cardiff. I always enjoy my visits to Wales, to see some of my old friends and some of my new friends. I believe that this will be a busy and productive summit. Important improvements will be made, and important progress will be made on economic reform, on enlargement and on Agenda 2000. There will be an important dialogue on the future of the European Union, and that that dialogue will concentrate on making the EU relevant to what people feel and to issues that they know are crucial to them. I believe that, at Cardiff, there will be a desire to provide continuity through to the Austrian presidency.

I must say that I think it was a little unworthy of the hon. Member for Windsor to demean the meeting between President Mandela and the Heads of Government. I think it very fitting that that meeting is taking place.

Mr. Trend: I am delighted that President Mandela is coming to the country: he is a hugely distinguished international politician. I merely sought to make the point that it was unlikely that he would not take advantage of a photo opportunity with the Prime Minister. I cannot help feeling that there may just be a slight amount of contrivance in this matter—but, as I have said, we shall be delighted to see President Mandela.

Mr. Henderson: I am grateful that we have managed to draw the tooth from the hon. Gentleman on that issue. It is fitting that President Mandela is meeting the 15 leaders of Europe. That is an important dialogue and an occasion to celebrate President Mandela's great contribution to democracy and freedom in the 20th century. The values that he felt were important to fight for over his years of political life are the principles and values that will set the European Union in good stead for the future. I look forward to that occasion in Cardiff on Tuesday.

Ms Bridget Prentice (Lewisham, East): I beg to ask leave to withdraw the motion.

Motion, by leave, withdrawn.

NORTHERN IRELAND (SENTENCES) BILL (PROGRAMME)

Ordered,

That the following provisions shall apply to proceedings on the Northern Ireland (Sentences) Bill.

Committee of the whole House

1.—(1) Proceedings in Committee of the whole House shall be completed at two sittings.

(2) The following proceedings shall be brought to a conclusion, unless previously concluded, in accordance with the following table:

Proceedings	Time, after commencement of proceedings in Committee at the first sitting, at which proceedings to be concluded.
Amendments up to page 2, line 22.	2 hours
Amendments up to page 2, line 47, other than amendments inserting words at the end of line 47.	4 hours
Amendments inserting words at end of line 47.	5 hours
Remaining proceedings on Clause 3 and proceedings on Clauses 4 to 7.	6½ hours

(3) Proceedings in Committee shall be brought to a conclusion, unless previously concluded, 3 hours after the commencement of proceedings in Committee at the second sitting.

(4) Standing Order No. 15(1) (Exempted business) shall apply to proceedings in Committee for any part of the periods of—

(a) 6½ hours, at the first sitting, and

(b) 3 hours, at the second sitting,

which fall after Ten o'clock.

Report and Third Reading

2.—(1) Proceedings on consideration and Third Reading shall be completed at one sitting and shall, unless previously concluded, be brought to a conclusion three hours after commencement.

(2) Standing Order No. 15(1) (Exempted business) shall apply to those proceedings for any part of the period of three hours after commencement which falls after Ten o'clock.

Conclusion of proceedings

3.—(1) For the purpose of concluding any proceedings which are to be brought to a conclusion at a time appointed by this Order, the Chairman or Speaker shall forthwith put the following Questions (but no others):—

(a) any Question already proposed from the Chair;

(b) any Question necessary to bring to a decision a Question so proposed;

(c) the Question on any amendment moved or Motion made by a Minister of the Crown;

(d) any other Question necessary for the disposal of the business to be concluded.

(2) Proceedings under sub-paragraph (1) shall not be interrupted under any Standing Order relating to sittings of the House and may be decided, though opposed, at any hour.

(3) On a Motion made for a new Clause or a new Schedule, the Chairman or Speaker shall put only the Question that the Clause or Schedule be added to the Bill.

(4) If two or more Questions would fall to be put under sub-paragraph (1)(c) on amendments moved or Motions made by a Minister of the Crown, or under sub-paragraph (1)(d) in relation to successive provisions of the Bill, the Chairman or Speaker shall instead put a single question in relation to those amendments, Motions or provisions.

Miscellaneous

4. Standing Order No. 82 (Business Committee) shall not apply to proceedings on the Bill.

5. No Motion shall be made, except by a Minister of the Crown, to alter the order in which proceedings on the Bill are taken.

6. If on an allotted day a Motion for the adjournment of the House under Standing Order No. 24 (Adjournment on specific and important matters that should have urgent consideration) stands over from an earlier day or to Seven o'clock—

(a) the bringing to a conclusion of any proceedings on the Bill which under or by virtue of this Order are to be brought to a conclusion after that time shall be postponed for a period equal to the duration of the proceedings on the Motion, and

(b) Standing Order No. 15(1) (Exempted business) shall apply to proceedings on the Bill for the period after Ten o'clock for which sub-paragraph (a) permits them to continue.

7.—(1) If a Motion is made by a Minister of the Crown to amend this Order and an effect of the Motion would be to provide a greater amount of time for proceedings on the Bill, the Question on the Motion shall be put forthwith and may be decided, though opposed, at any hour.

(2) If a Motion is made by a Minister of the Crown to supplement the provisions of this Order in respect of further proceedings on the Bill, the Motion may be proceeded with, though opposed, at any hour and the proceedings, if not previously concluded, shall be brought to a conclusion three-quarters of an hour after they have been commenced.

—[Ms Bridget Prentice.]

Professor David Lowery

Motion made, and Question proposed, That this House do now adjourn.—[Ms Bridget Prentice.]

9.35 pm

Mr. Michael Clapham (Barnsley, West and Penistone): I am aware that some hon. Members have already had meetings about this case with the Minister of State, my hon. Friend the Member for Newcastle upon Tyne, North (Mr. Henderson). I have become involved because it transpires that Professor Lowery has a home in my constituency; if he were living in the United Kingdom, he would be in my constituency. Consequently, to all intents and purposes he is my constituent.

I discussed the matter with the Minister of State, my hon. Friend the Member for Leeds, Central (Mr. Fatchett) two or three weeks ago before his visit to Portugal. He was kind enough to tell me that he would try to ensure that the case was on the agenda, and that he would raise the matter if he got the opportunity. Unfortunately, in his discussions, he was unable to get to that item on the agenda, so the matter was not raised. I appreciate the fact that he tried to raise it.

I shall describe Professor Lowery's character by referring to his background. He is an academic; he graduated from Queen's university in Belfast in 1969. Since then, he has worked at a number of colleges in the United Kingdom, lastly at Warwick university where he worked with my hon. Friend the Member for Dudley, North (Mr. Cranston). After that, he left for America, and, while working at colleges and universities there, he was awarded a professorship. Since then, he has moved to work in Portugal.

I contend that my constituent is being treated unfairly by the Portuguese authorities, who have refused him bail on several occasions. They have even refused to contemplate house arrest. It is clear that he is being treated much worse than a Portuguese national would be treated; it seems that he is being discriminated against because he is a foreigner. I say that because we can make comparisons with similar cases in which Portuguese nationals have been treated differently.

I should like to bring to the House's attention the case of Pedro Caldeira, who was charged with white collar crime; it was a similar charge to the one that Professor Lowery faces. That man was given bail despite the fact that there was evidence that he might flee the jurisdiction, as he had previously absconded. I am told that the man even confessed to his crime on a national television programme. The Portuguese authorities saw fit to give him bail, whereas my constituent has been refused bail. Therefore, it appears that my constituent is being refused bail simply because he is a foreigner. From what I have been told by his legal advisers, there is a strong indication that he has not been treated as innocent until proven guilty, the concept that is supposed to underlie the Portuguese legal system.

My constituent was arrested in April 1997 and held for a year before charges were made. That is in accord with the Portuguese legal code; a person can be held for 12 months before charges are made. In this case, my constituent was charged on the 365th day. In such a situation, it becomes very difficult for defence lawyers because they are not able in that 12-month period to see prosecution evidence. Therefore, they are unable to mount—this was true of the lawyers in this case—a substantial challenge against a refusal of bail.

[Mr. Michael Clapham]

In this case, there have been five applications for bail, and five appeals have been rejected. My constituent's applications were accompanied on each occasion, I understand, by a statement from his doctors pointing out that he should be released on bail or on house arrest for health reasons. The prison doctor service has rejected that evidence. I am told by my constituent's legal advisers that it did so without even giving him a cursory medical examination. The medical evidence has just been disregarded.

No evidence has been provided by the Portuguese authorities that my constituent is violent, that he would be likely to flee the country if given bail or that he would interfere with the investigation. Those tend to be the reasons why a judge would decide against giving bail, but my constituent is not of that nature. It would seem, therefore, that there is no good reason to refuse him bail.

My constituent has already surrendered his passport, I am told. He has offered sureties and agreed to report frequently to a police station if given bail. Additionally, he has a genuine, long-standing relationship with a Portuguese woman, so he has every reason to remain behind to see this thing through. Therefore, there is no reason why he should have been refused bail.

As a result of the difficult situation that my constituent has been put in, he has become so frustrated that he has started the process of making a complaint to the European Commission of Human Rights, with the help of his legal advisers, Gudrun Parasie of the European legal advice service and Edward Fitzgerald QC. Those violations of my constituent's basic human rights seem to be legal in Portugal because, according to its penal code, a person can be held for a year, with no charges made until the 365th day, and there is no way in which his defence can have sight of prosecution documents. That tends to suggest a violation of human rights. I understand that it is on that aspect that the complaint will be made.

It seems that the contradiction within the Portuguese legal code comes about because of an outdated system, which needs to be thoroughly reviewed. I understand that it has been in place since the days of Salazar. One can understand why such a legal system operated in the days of that dictatorship, but it needs to be reviewed and brought into accord with the rest of Europe.

I am told that, although the Portuguese authorities have had a year to prepare their case, the documentation that has now become available has been shabbily put together, and there appears to have been a complete mix up. The prosecution evidence refers to no fewer than three individuals called David Lowery. What appears to have happened is that the Portuguese police asked Interpol and other police services for information on David Lowery without providing a date of birth. Consequently, the documents refer to three separate individuals. That does not inspire confidence that justice will be done.

I reiterate that, based on the information available, it appears that Professor Lowery is being discriminated against and that bail is being disallowed simply because he is a foreigner. When one bears in mind the mix up in the prosecution documentation, one fears that justice will not be done. It is all the worse for Professor Lowery because his health is failing. He is 54 years of age and the conditions in Portuguese prisons are notoriously bad. His family went out to visit him at the bank holiday and they are most concerned about him, although he has been seen by a doctor. They feel that his health is beginning to fail.

I am advised that the death rate in Portuguese prisons is 125 times the national average. The average age of prisoners is 30 and Professor Lowery is 54. Bearing in mind the conditions and the death rate in Portuguese prisons, and the age of Professor Lowery and the fact that he has a health problem, it is obvious why his family are extremely concerned.

Recently, the Portuguese newspaper Público likened a prison sentence in Portugal to a death sentence. That gives some indication of the severe and harsh conditions in Portuguese prisons. The case has attracted a great deal of attention because of the human rights violations that seem to be built into the Portuguese penal code, such as the right to hold a person for a year without bringing charges. A prominent English QC has written a 17-page report listing the human rights violations in this case alone.

In conclusion, Professor Lowery is 54 years of age. He is not very robust and his family feel that if he has to wait more years in prison, his health may fail. Therefore, I should be pleased if my hon. Friend did his utmost to raise the case of my constituent as a matter of urgency with his Portuguese counterpart, with a view to pressing for either bail or house arrest. Although house arrest would confine him to his home, he would be in an environment in which his health was not in jeopardy, as it is now. He could remain there until his case was dealt with.

9.49 pm

The Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Office (Mr. Derek Fatchett): I thank my hon. Friend the Member for Barnsley, West and Penistone (Mr. Clapham) for bringing Professor Lowery's case to the attention of the House. I should like to respond by explaining some of the background detail in the case, the way in which the Foreign Office has supported Professor Lowery, and, specifically, the role in it played by our embassy and consular staff.

I tell my hon. Friend that the Government are committed—as any United Kingdom Government would be—to supporting and helping all British nationals who are detained in overseas prisons. We shall ensure that we meet that broad commitment in the case of my hon. Friend's constituent, Professor Lowery.

The House might find it useful if I were to give some of the background to Professor Lowery's case. Although my hon. Friend briefly mentioned some of the points, hon. Members may gain a greater understanding of the case if I provide that background.

Professor Lowery was working in Portugal as the director of a company involved in buying and selling stocks and shares, collecting commercial information and conducting telemarketing. The company was called Paramount Portugal Consultadoria Commercial Limitada, and was established with the majority of the initial capital provided by Paramount Securities and Trust SA, of Switzerland, and the remainder by Professor Lowery himself.

As my hon. Friend said, Professor Lowery was arrested on 22 April 1997, following complaints received by the Portuguese authorities from one or more investors in Ireland that share certificates marketed by Professor Lowery's company had been forged and were valueless. Professor Lowery was then detained in Caxias prison, pending police investigations into the complaints against him and the company.

Remand custody may be applied only if bail is considered inadequate, if there is a strong indication that a crime punishable with a maximum term of imprisonment of more than three years has been committed, and if the court considers that there is a danger that the defendant might flee. My hon. Friend has made some points on those criteria, but the court decided that, in this case, Professor Lowery came within some of those criteria. He was consequently held in detention without bail.

It might be useful if I were to explain some of the aspects of the Portuguese criminal procedural code. The code limits the length of custody on remand to six months, to allow the authorities to investigate accusations. The term can be increased to 12 months when the process is exceptionally complex because of the number of defendants, the number of plaintiffs or the highly organised nature of the alleged crime. The period can be lengthened also if crimes such as forgery of currency or credit instruments fraud are involved.

As my hon. Friend said, Professor Lowery was formally charged, in accordance with Portuguese law, on 21 April 1998. He was charged with criminal association, falsification of titles of credit, aggravated fraud and misuse of computerised data.

My hon. Friend may wish to know that the British embassy in Lisbon became aware of Professor Lowery's detention on 9 May 1997. The Portuguese authorities confirmed his arrest with the embassy on the same day. I am happy to report that consular staff sought immediate access, and visited Professor Lowery on 13 May. I can therefore tell my hon. Friend that—despite the points that he has made on legal procedures in Portugal and the nature of Portuguese law—consular staff were quick to respond as soon as they had information that Professor Lowery had been detained.

As my hon. Friend rightly said, it is now the responsibility of the Portuguese authorities to set a date for Professor Lowery's trial. Under Portuguese law, the maximum time that any prisoner can be held on remand is four years in total. In this case, that will include the time that Professor Lowery spent on remand before being charged.

That is the some of the background to the case. I am sure that hon. Members who are familiar with our consular role will be interested to know how we have responded to Professor Lowery's case. The job of our consular staff is to ensure that British prisoners overseas receive the same treatment as other prisoners, that they have proper and full access to a lawyer, that they have information about the legal and prison systems and that any medical problems are dealt with quickly. Moreover, if we learn of a justified and serious complaint about ill treatment, we take it up vigorously with the police or prison authorities. We are concerned that all British nationals who are detained overseas are dealt with in accordance with local laws; we take appropriate measures to ensure that they are.

As I have now answered a number of Adjournment debates on consular cases, I can tell my hon. Friend that we have responsibility—which we carry out—for looking after the well-being of British citizens in prison overseas and for ensuring that they receive their full rights in the context of the local law. However, as the UK Government, we cannot interfere with a country's legal system—in this case, the country is another member of the European Union.

It is crucial that we understand that the role of the consular service is to safeguard the welfare of British prisoners overseas. Our consular staff in Portugal aim to visit British prisoners on a regular basis. Consular staff in Lisbon have visited Professor Lowery four times since his arrest on 22 April 1997, most recently on 14 April this year. The ambassador in Lisbon has also agreed to visit Professor Lowery in prison; he will be in contact with him in the very near future about the proposed timing.

My hon. Friend referred to my recent visit to Lisbon. Unfortunately, because of the programme—I was there to visit Expo 98—I was unable to arrange to meet the Portuguese Foreign Minister, but I took the opportunity to express again to our ambassador in Lisbon the interest of my hon. Friend and other hon. Members in Professor Lowery's case. I know that the ambassador is keeping a close eye on the case, as is shown by the fact that he will visit Professor Lowery in prison, largely as a result of the excellent representation that my hon. Friend has made for his constituent; the embassy's commitment and interest are demonstrated by the fact that it is rare for an ambassador to pay a prison visit.

Since Professor Lowery's arrest, our consular staff in Lisbon have maintained close contact with the prison authorities and with Professor Lowery's legal representatives. I understand that Professor Lowery is in close contact with his family and is visited regularly by his friends. If he wants our consular staff at any time to pass on any information to his family, they will be glad to do so.

My hon. Friend talked about Professor Lowery's health, and we fully understand the problems. We know that Professor Lowery suffers from high blood pressure; he told our consular staff when they visited him on 20 January this year that he had developed two lumps in his throat and had seen a private doctor. Since being informed of that development, our consular staff in Lisbon have pressed the prison authorities vigorously to ensure that Professor Lowery receives the medical attention that he needs and deserves.

The ambassador in Lisbon has written to the Minister of Justice on three occasions about Professor Lowery's health. Professor Lowery has now been seen by a specialist; he has also undergone tests in a private clinic outside the prison. He has been seen at the prison on a number of occasions by his own doctor, and he has also been seen by a dentist. The ambassador also wrote to the Minister of Justice on 17 February—on a humanitarian, rather than a legal, basis—to express concern at the length of time that Professor Lowery had been detained without charge.

[Mr. Derek Fatchett]

I hope that all those points will convey to my hon. Friend that the consular staff and the ambassador have been extremely busy and fully involved. The consular staff will continue to monitor Professor Lowery's case and to do all that they appropriately can to help.

Professor Lowery's case has to remain a matter for the Portuguese legal system. That is how such cases are dealt with. It is not right or proper for us to try to interfere in that process, as I am sure my hon. Friend will understand. The legal system is independent of the Government in the Portuguese system, so the question of bail or release is for that system. The role of the Foreign Office and our consular staff is to ensure that Professor Lowery gets all his rights.

It being Ten o'clock, the motion for the Adjournment of the House lapsed, without Question put.

Motion made, and Question proposed, That this House do now adjourn.—[Ms Bridget Prentice.]

Mr. Fatchett: We will ensure that Professor Lowery receives all the support that he can from consular staff. If my hon. Friend feels that the professor's rights are being violated and that the embassy could help him, will he please let us know?

We heard what my hon. Friend said about possible legal action under human rights charters of the European Union, and we will be interested to see how that proceeds. We understand his concern, and will continue to take an interest in the case and do what we can to assist his constituent. We understand in particular the concerns about Professor Lowery's health and the prison conditions, and I assure my hon. Friend that the Foreign Office and our consular staff in Lisbon will be vigilant.

Question put and agreed to.

Adjourned accordingly at one minute past Ten o'clock.

Written Answers to Questions

Monday 1 June 1998

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Better Regulation Task Force

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many civil servants work in the Better Regulation Department; and how many of them previously worked in the Deregulation Unit. [43732]

Dr. David Clark: Currently, 40 civil servants work in the Better Regulation Unit. This number includes 17 civil servants who previously worked in the Deregulation Unit.

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many members of the Better Regulation Task Force are representatives of (a) business, (b) enforcement agencies and (c) consumer and other non-Government organisations; and if he will publish a comparable breakdown for the composition of the Deregulation Task Force in April 1997. [43625]

Dr. David Clark: I appointed 15 members of the Better Regulation Task Force in September 1997 and one further member in February 1998.

Members of the Task Force are appointed for their experience in different areas of regulation. They should not be categorised as business, enforcement or consumer representatives. A number of those with business backgrounds are active in the voluntary sector or with non-government organisations. Ten members come from a business background, and in line with our manifesto commitment, eight of these are drawn from the small business community. Two members come from the enforcement community and four have a consumer or a non-governmental organisation background.

The Deregulation Task Force had 11 members in April 1997. Of those all came from a business background except one from the voluntary sector.

Standards in Public Life

Fiona Mactaggart: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make a statement on the Government's response to the fourth report of the Committee on Standards in Public Life. [44072]

Dr. David Clark: The Government welcomed the Committee on Standards' Fourth Report, which reviewed progress on the implementation of the Committee's First and Second Reports. Government have prepared an Action Plan setting out the work to take forward the observations made by the Committee. My right hon. Friend, the Prime Minister, has sent this to Lord Neill, and copies have been placed in the libraries of the House. The Action Plan is also available on the Cabinet Office website, on www.open.gov.uk/co/cohome.htm.

Consultation Papers

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will list the consultation papers published since 1 May 1997 giving the date of publication, closing date for submissions and the number of respondents. [42247]

Mr. Kilfoyle: The table gives the details for all consultation papers published to the private sector or members of the public since 1 May 1997 by the Office of Public Service and its agencies, and the Central Office for Information.

Consultation paper title	Publication date	Closing date for submissions	Number of respondents
The Citizen's Charter—A Consultation Exercise	16 September 1997	21 November 1997	274
Local Charter Guide: A Consultation Exercise	20 October 1997	30 January 1998	116
Opening Up Quangos—A Consultation Paper	11 November 1997	31 December 1997	405
Your Right to Know—Freedom of Information (White Paper—Cm 3818)	11 December 1997	28 February 1998	557
Crown Copyright in the Information Age: A Consultation Paper on Access to Public Sector Information (Cm 3819)	19 January 1998	31 March 1998	70

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Marine Conservation

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what arrangements are being made to ensure that the management groups for candidate marine special areas of conservation incorporate the views of the advisory groups in developing their conservation objectives and management schemes. [42617]

Angela Eagle: The nature conservation agencies are responsible for advising relevant authorities as to the conservation objectives of such sites. Relevant authorities have the statutory responsibility for establishing management schemes. The Government consider that it is essential that owners and occupiers, rightholders, local interests, user groups and conservation groups, in the form of an advisory group, should all be encouraged to participate in the process of implementing the objectives and developing the scheme at the earliest opportunity. Relevant authorities should consult widely and regular cycles of meetings should be established, the frequency of which would be dependent on the particular needs of each site. This advice will be contained in a guidance document to be published very shortly. The formation of advisory groups is at various stages among the marine sites.

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many and which of the United Kingdom's candidate marine special areas of conservation have begun to draft (i) conservation objectives and (ii) management schemes. [42618]

Angela Eagle: The Government's nature conservation bodies, whose duty is to advise relevant authorities of an SAC's nature conservation objectives, have undertaken a considerable amount of work in preparing the way for drafting objectives, and some sites have a draft in preparation. The statutory requirement for a management scheme does not arise until sites are agreed as Sites of Community Interest. However, we are encouraging relevant authorities to establish shadow schemes in anticipation of the formal requirement. I will write to my hon. Friend shortly explaining more fully the position on each of the sites in the UK.

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many and which of the United Kingdom's candidate marine special areas of conservation have established management and advisory groups. [42622]

Angela Eagle: Establishing advisory groups is dependent on having a management group in place so, while many of the sites now have a management group established, the advisory groups are at different stages of formation. I will write to my hon. Friend shortly, setting out the position on each of the marine sites.

Public Appointments

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when his Department's action plan for increasing the number of women holding public appointments will be published; and if he will place a copy in the Library. [42837]

Angela Eagle: My Department's action plan will be published as soon as possible. Copies will be placed in the Library of the House at that time.

Public Bodies

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) what is the average attendance fee of (a) male and (b) female members of boards of non-departmental public bodies responsible to his Department; [42836]

(2) what is the average salary of (a) male and (b) female members of boards of non-departmental public bodies responsible to his Department. [42835]

Angela Eagle: Some board members of non-departmental public bodies give their time and services voluntarily and receive no payment other than normal travel and subsistence expenses. Where members do receive remuneration, this can be an annual salary or an attendance fee. Individuals' remuneration therefore is not directly comparable. Full details of all payments to board members of non-departmental bodies, by gender, are given in the Cabinet Office publication "Public Bodies". Copies of "Public Bodies 1997" are available in the Library of the House.

Deaf and Blind Pedestrians

Mr. Levitt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) if he will support proposals to inform each person who passes the driving test that pedestrians carrying red and white striped canes are both deaf and blind; [42802]

(2) if he will take steps to promote awareness amongst drivers of motor vehicles that a pedestrian carrying a red and white striped cane is both deaf and blind. [42801]

Ms Glenda Jackson: General guidance on consideration for vulnerable road users is published in the Highway Code and driving test manuals. Rule 64 of the Highway Code advises drivers to be aware of blind and partially sighted people. Particular attention is drawn to deafblind people who may be using red and white striped canes.

Structural Funds

Mr. Gareth Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the scope and nature of his responsibilities in relation to the review of European structural funds in respect of Wales, indicating the timetable for action by his Department. [42472]

Angela Eagle: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given to him by my hon. Friend, the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Trade and Industry on 21 May 1998, Official Report, columns 543–44.

Accident Inquiries

Maria Eagle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) what percentage of public money disbursed to assist families and relatives of victims was provided (a) to individual victims and families, (b) to family support groups and (c) collectively in respect of the (i) Piper Alpha disaster, (ii) King's Cross fire, (iii) Marchioness disaster, (iv) Clapham rail crash and (v) MV Derbyshire, (first public inquiry); and by what method the allocations were determined; [42982]

(2) what provisions were made out of public funds in respect of costs to (a) commission expert evidence and (b) challenge expert evidence put by another party at the public inquiries into the (i) Piper Alpha disaster, (ii) King's Cross fire, (iii) 'Marchioness' disaster, (iv) Clapham rail crash and (v) loss of the MV 'Derbyshire' (first inquiry); what was the outturn cost to public funds of such assistance for each inquiry; and how were costs agreed, verified and disbursed. [42980]

Ms Glenda Jackson: I regret that the information requested is not obtainable except at disproportionate cost.

Millennium Compliance

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions to what extent the additional costs to local authorities of millennium compliance were built into the 1998–99 local government finance system. [43084]

Angela Eagle: The 1998–99 local government finance settlement took into account the Local Government Association's estimate of a spending pressure on English local authorities in the current financial year of £100 million for the costs of preparing for millennium computer compliance. The preliminary indication of the amount councils have budgeted in 1998–99 on millennium compliance, based on budget returns submitted to the Department by local authorities, is between £60 million and £70 million.

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what estimate he has made of the additional costs to local authorities of ensuring that IT and embedded systems are millennium compliant. [43085]

Angela Eagle: The Local Government Association estimated the total additional costs to local authorities in preparing for millennium compliance in its paper for the Department on cost pressures facing local authorities in England ih 1998–99. Their estimate of £100 million for the current financial year was taken into account in the 1998–99 local government finance settlement. The Association has again highlighted the cost pressures faced by councils during preliminary discussions between officials on pressures in 1999–2000, and we will again be taking its estimate into account in the settlement for the coming financial year.

Advisory Committee on Releases to the Environment

Mr. Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will review the (a) membership, (b) remit, (c) scope and (d) operation of the Advisory Committee on Releases to the Environment. [42988]

Angela Eagle: A five-yearly Finance, Management and Policy Review of ACRE is currently under way and will be reporting shortly. The term of office of current ACRE members expires in June 1999. The process for reviewing membership, remit, scope and operation of the Advisory Committee on Releases to the Environment is set out in the DETR Non-Departmental Public Bodies Sponsorship Handbook, a copy of which is in the House of Commons Library.

Mr. Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the procedure for appointing members to the Advisory Committee on Releases to the Environment. [42987]

Angela Eagle: The procedures for appointing ACRE or any other Non-Departmental Public Body are set out in the DETR Non-Departmental Public Bodies Sponsorship Handbook, a copy of which is in the House of Commons Library. Members of ACRE are appointed by the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions following agreement by the Secretary of State for Scotland, the Secretary of State for Wales and the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food.

Genetically Modified Organisms

Mr. Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to the answer of 30 April 1998, Official Report, column 179, how many of the consents for the release of the GMOs were under (a) standard, (b) stream-lined, (c) fast-track and (d) any other procedures. [42990]

Angela Eagle: The 147 consents issued to date comprised of 56 Standard, 36 Stream-lined and 55 Fast-track applications. The terms 'Standard', 'Stream-lined' and 'Fast track' refer to different administrative procedures used to process consent applications under the Genetically Modified Organisms (Deliberate Release) Regulations 1992 (amended 1995 and 1997). The amount of information required to consider an application is the same in each case. The stream-lined procedure has not been used since 1995, but when operational it allowed the Advisory Committee on Releases to the Environment to provide expert advice by post rather than at a meeting.

Of the Standard and Fast-track applications, since 8 March 1995, 41 were dealt with under the First-Simplified Procedure. The First Simplified Procedure takes account of European Commission Decision 94/730/EC which enables a single release consent to cover a programme of work over a number of years. The provisions of the First Simplified Procedure, the criteria for qualification and the duty of the consent holder are published in DOE/ACRE Guidance Note 7 Guidance to the Genetically Modified Organisms (Deliberate Release) Regulations 1995. A copy of this has been placed in the House of Commons Library.

Mr. Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions under which procedure GMO release consent 95/R13/6 was granted. [42991]

Angela Eagle: The application was processed as a standard application and granted a consent under the procedure laid down in Commission Decision 94/730/EC (the First Simplified Procedure).

The provisions of the First Simplified Procedure, the criteria for qualification and the duty of the consent holder are published in DOE/ACRE Guidance Note 7 "Guidance to the Genetically Modified Organisms (Deliberate Release) Regulations 1995". This has been placed in the House of Commons Library.

Mr. Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions for what reasons his Department does not require the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food and its contractors to apply for release consents under Part VI of the Environmental Protection Act 1990 in respect of national list trials of genetically-modified seeds. [42992]

Angela Eagle: The holder of a consent to conduct experimental trials under our deliberate release regulations may delegate third parties to conduct releases on their behalf. In all cases, the consent holder is legally responsible for ensuring that the trial is carried out in accordance with the conditions and limitations of their consent.

MAFF-PVRO (Plant Variety Rights Office) undertake statutory tests and trials on plant varieties in respect of applications for plant breeder's rights or addition to the National List. MAFF-PVRO will not allow genetically modified plant material to enter trials unless the material is covered by a consent issued to the plant breeder by the Secretary of State under the Genetically Modified Organisms (Deliberate Release) Regulations 1992 (as amended in 1995 and 1997) and the trials can comply with any conditions attached to the consent.

When an application for release is made, the applicant is required to supply information on the name, qualifications and experience of the scientist and every other person who will be responsible for planning and carrying out the release of the genetically modified organism and for supervision and safety of the release. This includes applications for consent to release material into National List trials.

Energy Efficiency (Domestic Appliances)

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what steps he is taking to encourage the purchase of energy-efficient domestic appliances; and what contribution he estimates this encouragement will make to reducing carbon dioxide emissions. [43038]

Angela Eagle: My Department supports and is developing a range of measures at European and national levels, including mandatory energy labelling, promotional initiatives, negotiated agreements with manufacturers to encourage the increased availability and purchase of energy efficient domestic appliances and lighting. Estimating the impact of such measures is complicated but some experts put the potential UK savings from an integrated programme of measures to be as high as 2 million tonnes of carbon emissions. In April my Department launched a series of published discussion papers and formal consultation rounds, starting with the lighting sector, as part of a market transformation strategy to build a consensus on what practical and acceptable measures could deliver those savings.

My Department also promotes the installation of energy saving measures by means of grants provided under the Home Energy Efficiency Scheme and "cashbacks" under the range of schemes developed and managed by the Energy Saving Trust.

My Department has also contributed to and supported promotional campaigns aimed at encouraging consumers to purchase energy efficient appliances, including, most recently, the Energy Saving Trust's "Energy Efficiency" programme.

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will introduce legislation to require minimum standards of energy efficiency for domestic appliances. [43037]

Angela Eagle: Legislation has already been introduced to set minimum standards of energy efficiency for central heating boilers, which came fully into effect on 1 January 1998, and for domestic refrigeration appliances, which will come into force on 3 September 1999, to enforce European Directives applying to these products. There are no immediate plans for further legislation. However, my Department is pressing the Commission to develop an action plan of common and co-ordinated measures, as part of its response to the legally binding Kyoto climate change targets, which could include measures to require manufacturers of domestic appliances to improve the energy efficiency of their products.

Heathrow Airport

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what representations he has received on plans for a sixth terminal at Heathrow Airport. [43144]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Government are not aware of any plans for a sixth terminal at Heathrow Airport. Nor have we received any representations on plans for a sixth terminal.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how the costs of the Terminal 5 inquiry incurred by BAA are being treated (a) for tax purposes and (b) under the Civil Aviation Authority's regulatory regime. [43145]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The treatment for tax purposes of the costs of the Heathrow Terminal 5 Inquiry is a matter for BAA plc. Under the CAA's regulatory regime, the costs estimated as being incurred during the current quinquennium (1997–98 to 2001–02) are included in the total allowable investment costs which are taken into account in calculating the cap imposed by the CAA on the charges to airlines levied by BAA. The cap will however be reviewed by the CAA before the end of the quinquennium if Terminal 5 does not go ahead, or if, for reasons connected to the planning permission granted, it proceeds on a significantly different scale.

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will review the Monopolies and Mergers Commission decision to accept BAA's figures on expenditure on Terminal 5 at Heathrow, allowing BAA to keep profits to pay for Terminal 5; and if he will make a statement. [43442]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Civil Aviation Authority determined, on the basis of recommendations from the Monopolies and Mergers Commission, that the calculation of the price cap to be applied to BAA plc's London Airports for the period 1997–98 to 2001–02 should take into account the costs estimated as being incurred in the planning of Terminal 5 at Heathrow. The Government have no power to instruct the CAA to reopen its decision, nor has the CAA the power to do so unilaterally. However, with BAA's agreement, the price cap is to be reviewed by the CAA before the end of the five-year period if Terminal 5 does not go ahead, or if, for reasons connected to the planning permission granted, it proceeds on a significantly different scale.

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will ensure that the consortium of local authorities opposing Terminal 5 at Heathrow are able to make closing submissions to the inquiry. [43455]

Mr. Caborn: It has been a long established feature of planning inquiries that the main parties make closing submissions and meet their own costs. It is for the Local Authorities Against Heathrow Terminal 5 (LAHT5) Group to decide how much they wish to allocate for this purpose.

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions which employees of his Department appeared as expert witnesses for BAA at the public inquiry into Terminal 5 at Heathrow. [43452]

Ms Glenda Jackson: None. However, I understand that a number of independent consultants and National Air Traffic Service (NATS) Ltd. employees have appeared as expert witnesses for both the Department and BAA on various matters.

Housebuilding (West Sussex)

Mr. Flight: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Worthing, East and Shoreham (Mr. Loughton) of 5 May 1998, Official Report, column 311, if he will list the petitions he has received objecting to new house building in West Sussex, indicating the number of signatures on each petition. [43147]

Mr. Raynsford: Two petitions have been received. One from residents of Mid Sussex district with about 9,700 signatures and the other from residents of the Horsham district area with some 14,000 signatures.

Mr. Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 5 May 1998, Official Report, column 311, if the number of 3,000 objections includes (a) petitions and (b) multiple signature letters; and if he will publish the number of individuals who have raised objections with him. [43616]

Mr. Raynsford: The number of 3,000 objections includes: (a) 718 postcards in response to a campaign sponsored by the CPRE Sussex Branch and about 1,100 responses to a campaign organised by a local newspaper; and (b) about 1,100 letters some of which are signed by more than one member of a household.

Microbiological Contamination

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to issue guidelines to those authorities seeking to remove microbiological contamination from brownfield sites on which micro-organisms have been identified as contaminated. [43139]

Angela Eagle: The Department has no plans to issue guidelines on microbiological contamination.

Chemical Pollution

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what research he has commissioned to determine the effects of low levels of (a) PCBs, (b) organic chemicals, (c) dioxins and (d) radon on the health of communities. [43136]

Angela Eagle:

(a) PCBs and (c) Dioxins

The toxicity of both dioxins and PCBs has been reviewed by the Department of Health's advisory Committee on the Toxicity of Chemicals in Food, Consumer Products and the Environment (COT). COT has recommended that a tolerable daily intake (TDI) of 10 picograms per kilogram of body weight should be employed to assess the health risks of combinations of dioxins and dioxin-like PCBs. A recent MAFF survey showed that for UK adults dietary intakes of dioxins and PCBs are declining and are below the TDI recommended by COT. My Department, together with MAFF, Department of Health and HSE are supporting further research on infant exposure to dioxins, PCBs and other organic chemicals via human milk.

Research on potential health effects of exposure to a wider range of environmental chemicals is funded through several joint programmes by Government Departments, Agencies and industry. Plans are already underway to look at the health effects of chemicals in the environment and to investigate the effects of potential endocrine disrupting chemicals on male reproductive health. The Government also support the work of the Small Area Health Statistics Unit, based at Imperial College of Science and Technology in London, which examines the possible relationship between human health and environmental contamination from point and small area sources.

(d) Radon

A study of lung cancer and radon gas in the home has been carried out by the Imperial Cancer Research Fund (ICRF). The study was partly funded by my Department, the Department of Health, the National Radiological Protection Board and ICRF. The results of the study were announced on 19 May 1998, and will be published in the July edition of the British Journal of Cancer.

(b) Organic Chemicals

The Expert Panel on Air Quality Standards (EPAQs) has recommended air quality standards for benzene and 1,3 butadiene. These standards, of 5 parts per billion for benzene and 1 part per billion for 1,3 butadiene, both as a running annual averages, have been adopted in the Government's National Air Quality Strategy. Last year the Government prescribed a national objective for these standards to be achieved by the end of 2005.

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will introduce universal standards for the assessment of organic chemical and gas pollution levels before building permission is granted on brownfield sites. [43135]

Angela Eagle: The potential risks arising from contamination of land can be fully assessed only on a site-specific basis. The risks which might be caused by any given level of contamination will vary greatly from site to site, depending on the proposed land use, the details of design and construction of any proposed buildings, and variability in the underlying soil and geology of the site. This means that it is not practical to create universal standards, expressed in terms of mandatory limit values for different contaminants.

However, my Department is developing a new framework for indicative soil guideline values to assist in the site-specific assessment of potential risks to human health. I expect to be able to publish the first output from this programme in the Autumn.

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to inform potential home buyers of local levels of (a) radon, (b) PCBs, (c) organic chemicals and (d) dioxin levels. [43134]

Angela Eagle: The information is as follows.

(a) Radon

The maps published by the National Radiological Protection Board in 1996, based on 5 km ordnance survey grid squares, showing the percentage probability of homes being above the radon "Action Level" (the level above which we recommend that remedial action should be taken) allow householders and their advisers to identify the areas where radon is most likely to be found.

(b) PCBs and (d) Dioxins

There are no plans to specifically inform home buyers of local levels of dioxins and PCBs since all monitoring data is in the public domain. Most of the processes with the potential to produce dioxins are controlled under the Environmental Protection Act (1990) and are regulated by the Environment Agency and Local Authorities. Information on authorisations and the associated monitoring data are maintained on public registers and are available for public scrutiny. Information on airborne concentrations of PCBs measured in the national network is published in periodic reports and is on the Department's Internet site.

(c) Organic Chemicals

Real time information on airborne concentrations of benzene and 1,3 butadiene are available on television text services, the Internet and a freephone. Information on other organic chemicals monitored in the national network are published annually and are available on the Department's Internet site:
http://www.environment.detr.gov.uk/airq/aqinfo.htm

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has made to identify the location of areas with high levels of (a) dioxins, (b) PCBs, (c) radon and (d) organic chemicals. [43133]

Angela Eagle: The information is as follows.

(a) Dioxins and (b) PCBs

Dioxins and PCBs are ubiquitous pollutants which are found at low levels in the environment across the country. Small areas of elevated dioxin levels may be detected in the vicinity of processes which produce these chemicals as unwanted by-products. The Environment Agency (and formerly Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Pollution) have identified those processes with the potential to produce dioxins in order to regulate their emissions. The Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (MAFF) has, since 1993, analysed for dioxins in samples of cows' milk collected from individual farms in the vicinity of potential industrial sources of these chemicals. Samples collected since 1994 have also been analysed for polychlorinated biphenyls (PCBs); all results have been published.

Polychlorinated biphenyls (PCBs) have not been manufactured in the UK since the late 1970s and their sole remaining use is sealed inside some electrical equipment. Their presence in the environment is likely to be due to historical uses. However, my Department and the Environment Agency are supporting research to identify the main sources of PCBs for human exposure.

(c) Radon

Since 1987 my Department has funded a programme to identify the areas of England affected by radon, and to offer free radon measurements to householders in the most affected areas. Similar programmes are undertaken in Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland, and are the responsibilities of the respective Secretaries of State. In 1996, as a result of this programme, the National Radiological Protection Board (NRPB) published maps of England, based on 5 km ordnance survey grid squares, showing the percentage probability of homes being above the radon "Action Level" (the level above which we recommend that remedial action should be taken). In January of this year, invitations for free measurement were issued in order to complete a two-year programme to offer such measurements to every home in England with a greater than 5 per cent. probability of being above the Action Level.

(d) Organic Chemicals

My Department has funded the continuous real time measurement of 25 organic chemicals in the air since 1993. The compounds measured have been selected because of their photochemical oxidant formation potential and possible health impacts. There are 13 sites in the network, including roadside, urban background and rural locations. Results of the monitoring are published annually in the Department's Digest of Environmental Statistics, and are available on the Department's Internet site. In addition my Department has recently begun work to investigate the levels of benzene in the vicinity of petrol stations.

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what steps he is taking to detect background levels of (a) PCBs, (b) radon, (c) organic chemicals and (d) dioxins; and if he will publish them. [43138]

Angela Eagle: The information is as follows.

(a) PCBs and (d) Dioxins

Work is already underway to establish background levels of dioxins and PCBs in air, soil and foods. The Environment Agency is continually reviewing levels of these chemicals in the environment and reports findings to the public. The last comprehensive survey of dioxins in UK soils was published by HM Inspectorate of Pollution in 1989. PCBs were not included in this survey. The Environment Agency is planning to carry out further background work on soils. Monitoring for dioxins and PCBs in UK air is carried out through the Toxic Organic MicroPollutants (TOMPs) network. The network has been in operation since 1991 and currently collects samples from 3 urban and 3 rural sites. Results of these monitoring programmes are published annually in the Department's Digest of Environmental Statistics, and are available on the Department's Internet site. MAFF also monitors the levels of dioxins, PCBs and other organic chemicals in foodstuffs; all results are published.

(b) Radon

Since 1987 my Department has funded a programme to identify the areas of England affected by radon, and to offer free radon measurements to householders in the most affected areas. Similar programmes are undertaken in Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland, and are the responsibilities of the respective Secretaries of State. In 1996, as a result of this programme, the National Radiological Protection Board (NRPB) published maps of England, based on 5 km ordnance survey grid squares, showing the percentage probability of homes being above the radon "Action Level" (the level above which we recommend that remedial action should be taken). In January of this year, invitations for free measurement were issued in order to complete a two-year programme to offer such measurements to every home in England with a greater than 5 per cent. probability of being above the Action Level.

(c) Organic Chemicals

My Department has funded the continuous real time measurement of 25 organic chemicals in the air since 1993. The compounds measured have been selected because of their photochemical oxidant formation potential and possible health impacts. There are 13 sites in the network, including roadside, urban background and rural locations. Results of the monitoring are published annually in the Department's Digest of Environmental Statistics, and are available on the Department's Internet site. In addition my Department has recently begun work to investigate the levels of benzene in the vicinity of petrol stations.

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what steps he is taking to inform local authorities of various procedures and techniques available for brownfield site clean-up. [43137]

Angela Eagle: The Department has carried out research on remedial treatment for contaminated land in collaboration with various bodies and organisations and the results have been published for the use not only of local authorities but also developers and others interested in the subject. Partners in producing work have included the Construction Industry Research and Information Association, AEA Technology plc and BRE.

Channel Tunnel Rail Link

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what proposals his Department is evaluating for a high-speed direct rail link from the North West of England to Europe. [43146]

Ms Glenda Jackson: On 21 May my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister said that he had received revised proposals from London and Continental Railways on the Channel Tunnel Rail Link which are being discussed with the company. He will make a statement in due course.

Mediation UK

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions for what reasons his Department has decided to terminate its financial support for Mediation UK. [43195]

Angela Eagle: My Department made grants to Mediation UK amounting to £99,900 from the Environmental Action Fund (EAF) between April 1994 and March 1998. These grants helped Mediation UK establish, accredit and develop local mediation centres. In 1997 Mediation UK made an application for three more years of core support from the EAF. My Ministerial colleagues and I carefully considered this, along with all other applications. However there were vastly more high quality applications than we could possibly support, given the resources available for the Fund. Regretfully Mediation UK was one organisation to which we were not able to offer further assistance through the EAF in 1998–99.

Social Housing

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the investment needs of social housing providers over the next three years for (a) repair and refurbishment and (b) new build. [43197]

Mr. Raynsford: The Department makes annual assessments of local authorities' relative needs for investment through the Housing Investment Programme and the Housing Revenue Account Subsidy system. The need for investment in repair and refurbishment by Registered Social Landlords is a matter for the individual landlords who are largely responsible for meeting these costs from internal resources.

Future investment levels for social housing and the need for new build for social housing providers are being considered as part of the Comprehensive Spending Review (CSR). The Government's spending plans arising from the CSR will be announced later in the summer.

South Downs

Mr. Lepper: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he expects to receive the Countryside Commission's recommendations on the future management of the South Downs; and when he expects to make a decision on those recommendations. [42900]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 21 May 1998]: The Countryside Commission intends to present its formal advice to Ministers on its work on the designated landscape areas, including the South Downs, by mid June. We will need to look at the Commission's recommendations very carefully, together with all the information available, before taking any final decisions. We hope to be able to announce our conclusions in the autumn.

Bicycles

Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make it a legal requirement for the manufacturers and retailers of bicycles to provide machines with (a) fitted rear and front lights and (b) a bell or other audible warning device. [43312]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Issues concerning the fitment of bells and lights to pedal cycles were the subject of a recent public consultation exercise carried out by the Department. Various proposals were presented, including the mandatory fitment of bells and lights to new bicycles at the point of sale.

The views received are currently being analysed. When this process is complete, the Government will be in a better position to consider whether any change to the legislation in this area is necessary.

Refrigerants

Dr. Whitehead: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) what research he has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated into the environmental benefits of adopting HCs as the standard refrigerants; [43173]

(2) what alternative refrigerants to HFCs which produce lower greenhouse gas emissions and do not deplete the ozone layer his Department is currently evaluating. [43168]

Angela Eagle: Hydrocarbons (Hcs) are one of a number of refrigerants which can be used in some refrigeration systems as an alternative to ozone depleting substances and HFCs. The Government do not promote one refrigerant over another but encourage users to choose the safest, most environmentally acceptable and energy efficient system for each particular refrigerant application.

The DETR through its Energy Efficiency Best Practice Programme has carried out a small project investigating the energy efficiency benefits of HC refrigerants compared to HFCs and is also producing a guide on absorption refrigeration (refrigeration that is powered by waste heat). The programme also keeps abreast of developments in international collaborative research.

In addition there are a number of projects being looked at under DETR's Partners in Technology scheme and at the Buildings Research Establishment aimed at encouraging the use of natural ventilation, as opposed to use of refrigerant based air-conditioning systems. The main thrust of this work is improved energy efficiency, but the spin-off benefit is less use of refrigerants.

Dr. Whitehead: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what estimates he has made of the amount of CFCs released into the atmosphere annually as a result of the dumping of refrigerators in the United Kingdom. [43172]

Angela Eagle: Based on a study being carried out for my Department, the Government estimate that domestic refrigerators containing about 450 tonnes of CFC refrigerant are taken out of use each year. Around 300 tonnes of this may be emitted to the atmosphere, either from refrigerators that are not returned for recycling or from the residue of CFCs that remain in the refrigerator after the refrigerant has been recovered.

Dr. Whitehead: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to review the environmental impact of the use of HFC as substitutes for ozone-depleting gases in refrigeration equipment. [43171]

Angela Eagle: The Government are currently planning to fund some research this year to update our estimates of current and likely future emissions of HFCs from the UK. This work will include consideration of the use of HFCs in all sectors including the refrigeration sector.

Dr. Whitehead: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what percentage of the United Kingdom's greenhouse gas emissions he estimates HFCs will contribute in the year 2010. [43167]

Angela Eagle: The Government estimate that HFCs will contribute approximately 1% of total UK greenhouse gas emissions calculated in terms of the global warming contribution in 2010.

Unleaded Petrol

Ms Rosie Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is his estimate of the number of motor vehicles running on (a) leaded and (b) unleaded petrol in (i) 1997–98 and (ii) 1998–99. [43190]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The estimated number of vehicles (millions) is as follows:

	Year ending
	1997	1998	1999
Total using leaded petrol	7.7	6.5	5.3
Requiring leaded petrol[1]	3.8	3.0	2.6
Total using unleaded petrol	14.2	15.4	16.5

[1] Number of vehicles included in the total using leaded petrol which require it for valve seat protection

Cleaner Vehicles Task Force

Ms Rosie Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will publish the terms of reference for the Cleaner Vehicles Task Force. [43191]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The aims of the Cleaner Vehicles Task Force were announced on 14 November 1997 in DETR Press Notice 274/Transport. Its overall aim is to create a new partnership between Government and the private sector to promote environmentally friendly vehicles people actually want to drive and buy. It specifically aims to:

- promote research and development that will keep Britain at the leading edge of cleaner vehicle technology;
- encourage people and business to buy greener vehicles and use them efficiently;
- consider the contribution that cleaner vehicle technology can make to meeting local air quality objectives, reducing noise and cutting carbon dioxide emissions to avoid global warming;
- increase the proportion of components that are reused or recycled; and
- focus on European action during Britain's Presidency of the Council of the EU.

Motor Vehicle Fraud

Ms Rosie Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to give the DVLA responsibilities in respect of combating motor vehicle fraud. [43192]

Ms Glenda Jackson: DVLA works closely with the police and the insurance and salvage industries to help combat motor vehicle theft and fraud. The Agency is currently investigating a range of further measures to improve its contribution to consumer protection.

Land Spreading

Ms Atherton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he expects the results of the Environment Agency's review of land spreading to be published. [43467]

Angela Eagle: The research project on "Investigation Of The Criteria For, And Guidance On, The Landspreading Of Industrial Waste" was completed on 30 April and copies of the report have been placed in the Library of the House. The report's findings are now under consideration by my Department and the Environment Agency and our conclusions will be announced in due course.

Sewage Treatment

Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on Government policy on sewage treatment of water released into inland waters. [43547]

Angela Eagle: The Government require sewage discharges to inland waters to meet the requirements of the Urban Waste Water Treatment Directive. This means that all relevant discharges to inland waters serving a population equivalent of 15,000 or more must receive at least secondary treatment by 2000. Those serving between 2000 and 15,000 population equivalent must reach this standard by 2005. Discharges below 2000 population equivalent must receive "appropriate treatment" by 2005. In fact the vast majority of discharges of all sizes to inland waters already receive at least secondary treatment.

Discharges to sensitive areas designated under the Directive must receive more stringent treatment, typically tertiary treatment to remove nutrients, by the end of 1998. The Government intend to set out more fully its policy on this and related matters, first in its response to the second report of the Environment sub-committee of the House of Commons Environment, Transport and Regional Affairs Committee, due shortly and, later in the summer, in guidance to the Director General of OFWAT on priorities for investment in environmental improvement within the current Periodic Review of water company price limits.

Domestic Water

Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the role of recycled domestic waste water from baths and sinks in reducing water consumption. [43549]

Angela Eagle: A number of commercial systems are available which allow the re-use of rainwater and waste water from baths and sinks for WC flushing and external use. The Government continue to monitor the development of such systems and customer acceptability, but are supportive of the more widespread use of recycled water where it poses no threat to public health.

Older People

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what response he has made to the recommendations of Age Concern's report, "Disability Facilities, Grants and Older People". [43162]

Mr. Raynsford: We have assured Age Concern that the points raised in their report will be fully taken into account as we develop our policies on disabled facilities grants.

International Programme of Chemical Safety

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions for what reasons the report of July 1996 produced by international experts within the framework of the International Programme of Chemical Safety has remained confidential; if he will (a) publish it and (b) place it in the Library; and if he will make a statement on its conclusions in respect of the impact on public health of chrysolite. [43606]

Angela Eagle: The Government do not control, or have responsibility for, the publications of the International Programme for Chemical Safety (IPCS). IPCS is a joint venture of the United Nations Environment Programme, the International Labour Organisation and the World Health Organisation. It produced a draft Environmental Health Criteria document on chrysotile following a meeting of its Task Group held in July 1996. The final report is due to be published in Autumn 1998, following revisions and translations. It is not confidential, and details of the Health Evaluation, the Conclusions and the Recommendations are available either from the IPCS in Geneva or on the Internet. I shall arrange for the Library to obtain details of the draft report and to obtain a copy of the final report once it is published.

The draft report contains a number of conclusions which are consistent with current Government policy on asbestos.

Merchant Shipping

Mr. Cotter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what action he plans to take to support the British merchant shipping industry, with particular reference to (a) encouraging investment and (b) increasing training. [43975]

Ms Glenda Jackson: My right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister established a Shipping Working Group late last year to examine ways to promote the interests of British shipping and British seafarers. The Deputy Prime Minister is currently considering the recommendations of the Shipping Working Group. We have also introduced a new seafarer training support scheme—SMarT—which consolidates and expands on the previous training support schemes.

Trunk Roads (Greater London)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what trunk road construction is scheduled to commence in the Greater London area during 1998; and what is the total cost of the work. [43654]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Three construction schemes are planned to commence in 1998 in the Greater London area. These are as follows: the first two phases of the London Primary Route Signing scheme to replace some 4,800 primary route direction signs; the Greenwich Peninsula A102 (M) Access Improvements to the Millennium site; the M41 White City new access road for the shopping centre. The total cost of these works is £42 million, of which £19 million will be funded by developers.

Red Routes

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many miles of red route there are in the Greater London area. [43655]

Ms Glenda Jackson: I refer to the answer I gave my hon. Friend on 4 December 1997, Official Report, column 286.

Disused Railway Land

Mrs. Ann Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to improve the consultative process conducted by British Railways Board prior to the selling off of disused railway land, including track bed and goods yards. [43614]

Ms Glenda Jackson: This is primarily a matter for the British Railways Board (BRB), which has held discussions with Railtrack, EWS and others about general sales and individual sites. BRB also routinely sends out auction brochures in advance to Railtrack, EWS, Freightliner, local authorities and a wide range of other interested parties.

BRB has held discussions with Railtrack about the disposal of former railway lines, as a result of which negotiations to transfer another six lengths have begun. Other closed lines are the subject of discussions about transfer to local authorities or railway preservation societies, or have been leased to Sustrans, the cycling charity, for the National Cycle Network (with the potential for future rail use preserved). That leaves BRB with about 70 miles of trackbed in more than 100 separate sites.

BRB welcomes approaches from railway businesses or other interested parties who wish to discuss general sales or individual sites.

National Cycle Network

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what progress is being made with regard to the proposed national cycle network; and what proposals he has for 1998–99 for the extension of cycle routes in the West Midlands Region. [43016]

Ms Glenda Jackson: My Department welcomes the initiative to develop the National Cycle Network being promoted by Sustrans. The Network is making good progress and now embraces about 600 miles. The first 3,000 miles are due for completion by the year 2000, well ahead of the original target of 2,500 miles.

In the West Midlands, the Millennium route runs from Stratford-on-Avon through Redditch, Bromsgrove, Birmingham, Sandwell, Walsall and on to Lichfield. This is due to be completed by Easter 2000.

Coventry City Council has been actively involved with the provision of routes for cyclists, in particular a north-south route which links the University of Warwick to the city centre. A number of transport packages in the region, including those for the metropolitan area, North Staffordshire, Worcester, Stafford and Warwick/Leamington/Kenilworth also incorporate a range of measures to encourage cycle use, including cycle routes.

Rough Sleepers Initiative

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how much has been allocated to tackling homelessness in the West Midlands under the Rough Sleepers Initiative since 1990. [43014]

Mr. Raynsford: Since 1996 the Rough Sleepers Initiative has been extended to 27 areas outside London. Following guidance issued by my Department three local authorities in the West Midlands carried out single night street counts of rough sleepers and found a significant problem. As a result, strategies to tackle rough sleeping were drawn up by the authorities in consultation with the voluntary sector and bids for funding were made to my Department. We have offered almost £200,000 in pump-priming funding in 1998–99 for outreach and resettlement services to four voluntary sector organisations working in Birmingham, Stoke on Trent, and Newcastle-under-Lyme.

Drink-driving

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many drink-driving accidents occurred in (i) 1994, (ii) 1995, (iii) 1996 and (iv) 1997. [43483]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The estimated number of accidents resulting in injury which involved illegal alcohol levels was:

1994: 9,900

1995: 10,180

1996: 10,850[1]

[1] Provisional data. 1997 figures are not yet available. All estimates are shown rounded to the nearest 10.

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many drink-driving related deaths occurred in (i) 1994, (ii) 1995, (iii) 1996 and (iv) 1997. [43484]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The estimated number of fatalities in accidents which involved illegal alcohol levels was:

1994: 540

1995: 540

1996: 540[1]

[1] Provisional data. 1997 figures are not yet available. All estimates are shown rounded to the nearest 10.

Drug-related Road Accidents

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many non-alcohol-related road accidents involving drugs occurred in (a) 1994, (b) 1995, (c) 1996 and (d) 1997. [43479]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Data on non-alcohol-related accidents involving drugs are not routinely collected and the information requested is not available.

Town Centre Management

Mr. Michael J. Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will initiate a consultation exercise on town centre management. [43731]

Mr. Raynsford: Town Centre Management is essentially about creating local partnerships which involve all the key stakeholders. The Government support and encourage town centre management through advice in planning policy guidance, a guide on vital and viable town centres and by publishing and distributing good practice guidance. We also support initiatives by the Association of Town Centre Management and the Civic Trust.

We have no proposal to initiate a consultation exercise.

Car Rear Lamps

Mr. Michael J. Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will amend the road vehicle lighting regulations to allow the use of red, rear LED lamps emitting a flashing light. [43679]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Road Vehicles Lighting Regulations 1989 as amended, prohibit vehicle lamps (apart from certain specified lamps) from automatically emitting a flashing light. LED lamps may be fitted to vehicles provided they show a steady light.

Research is being carried out to try to identify potential safety benefits associated with the use of flashing rear lamps, solely with regard to pedal cycles. This work is due to be completed in the first half of next year. In the light of the findings of this research programme the Department will consider whether any change to the Regulations is appropriate.

School Crossing Patrols

Mr. Michael J. Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what representations he has received on amending the Road Traffic Regulation Act 1984, with particular reference to school crossing patrols. [43678]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The then Department of Transport issued a consultation document on review of road traffic regulation law in 1996. This contained a wide range of proposals for amending the 1984 Act. Over 400 responses were received. The Government are considering how to take matters forward in the various areas covered.

One of the subjects discussed in the consultation was school crossing patrols. In the light of the responses received, my right hon. Friend the Minister for Transport announced on 21 May that the Government propose, when a suitable legislative opportunity arises, to remove the current restrictions on the hours during which these can operate, and to ensure that school crossing patrols can escort any person across the road. They also propose to consult on a further amendment, that would enable crossing patrols to be provided at any location where the local traffic authority considered it desirable to do so in order to help any pedestrians to cross the road.

Duty Free

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) what assessment he has made of the effect on air fares of the abolition of duty free in the first year after abolition; [43363]

(2) what assessment he has made of the effect on the viability of regional airports of the abolition of duty free in the first year after abolition. [43364]

Ms Glenda Jackson: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave on 13 May 1998, Official Report, columns 117–18.

Bear Hide Imports

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what regulations govern the import of the (a) hides and (b) trophies of (i) polar, (ii) brown, (iii) black and (iv) grizzly bears into the United Kingdom. [43211]

Angela Eagle: Import of these species into the United Kingdom is controlled under European Council Regulation No. 338/97, which implements the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species of Wild Fauna and Flora within the Community. The Regulation prohibits commercial imports of all products of the Brown bear, the Grizzly bear and the Asiatic Black bear. Import of personal effects and the commercial import of other bear species is regulated by a system of import and export permits which are subject to strict conservation criteria and may only be issued where certain conditions are met.

Circus Animals

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what regulations govern the use of endangered species in travelling circuses. [43212]

Angela Eagle: Under the terms of Council Regulation EC No. 338/97, which implements the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species of Wild Fauna and Flora (CITES) within the Community, it is an offence to use for commercial gain, or display for commercial purposes, any of the species listed as endangered in Annex A of the Regulation unless this Department has issued a certificate for that purpose. This list includes many animals commonly found in travelling circuses, including tigers and elephants.

Road Accidents

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many motorists in England and Wales were involved in incidents involving fatal, serious and slight injury; and of these how many were found to have been disqualified from driving at the time of the incident, in the last year for which data are available. [43988]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The information requested regarding driver involvement is shown in the table. Data relating to the involvement of disqualified drivers in reported road accidents are not recorded on the national road accident database.

Number of motorists involved in road accidents, by severity in England and Wales: 1996

Drivers

Road user type	Fatal	Serious	Slight
Car drivers	3,411	41,309	265,128
Other motorists[1]	1,466	12,600	52,441

[1] Includes motorcyclists, goods vehicle and other motor vehicle drivers

Dr. Ladyman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many traffic accidents were recorded and in how many cases the driver at fault was found to have blood alcohol levels (a) over 80 mg per 100 ml, (b) between 50 and 80 mg per 100 ml and (c) between 0 and 50 mg per 100 ml, in the last year for which figures are available. [43839]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The present accident reporting system does not identify whether a driver was at fault. However, some information on blood levels of drivers and motor cycle riders killed in road accidents is available from data supplied to the Department by Coroners in England and Wales and the Procurators Fiscal in Scotland. The table shows the percentage of drivers and motor cycle fatalities above given blood alcohol levels for a sample of 963 of the 1,612 riders and drivers who died in road accidents in 1995.

Blood alcohol levels	Percentage of motor vehicle driver or rider fatalities
Over 80 mg per 100 ml	19
Between 50 and 80 mg per 100 ml	2
Below 50 mg[1] per 100 ml	79

[1] Includes none.

Rights of Way

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will introduce measures to simplify the existing procedure for the diverting of rights of way. [43420]

Angela Eagle: We have no immediate plans to do so. The Countryside Commission is considering the operation and effectiveness of rights of way legislation and management, and intends to put recommendations to us in the near future.

Railways

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assistance his Department gives to (a) railway companies, (b) passenger transport executives and (c) local authorities for opening new railway lines and stations. [43419]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Department offers no assistance to train operating companies towards the cost of new railway lines or stations but train operators are free to contribute towards the cost if they wish to do so on a commercial basis. Last November, my right hon. Friend, the Minister of Transport announced new Objectives, Instructions and Guidance for the Franchising Director. These require him to offer local authorities (including Passenger Transport Authorities) and other potential promoters of railway investment, clear and well publicised guidance on securing finance for new projects and on how the benefits of these can be maximised. He also announced the interim criteria that the Franchising Director will use to appraise proposals to support new services which would not be commercially viable. Copies are available in the Library of the House. Capital resources are available to local authorities, including Passenger Transport Authorities, for local rail infrastructure proposals from the Department's local transport budget.

Housing Development

Mr. Tom King: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) if he will list the local planning authorities which have more than 10 years supply of land for new housing development; [43856]

(2) if he will list the local planning authorities which do not have a five-year supply of land for new housing development. [43855]

Mr. Raynsford: The information requested is not held centrally by the Department.

Mr. Tom King: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will estimate the impact of planned new housing development on the demand for construction aggregate during the period for which total numbers of new houses have been specified. [43826]

Mr. Raynsford: Aggregates demand forecasts undertaken to inform aggregates planning guidance issued by this Department cover all areas of demand, including housing. A forecast of demand will be undertaken during the review of this planning guidance which we intend to start later this year.

Mr. Tom King: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many dwellings could be accommodated on land already identified for new housing development in each English region. [43854]

Mr. Raynsford: The information requested is not held centrally by the Department, and could be compiled only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Tom King: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what guidance he has issued to local authorities on how to move away from a predict and provide approach to the planning of new housing development at a regional level. [43853]

Mr. Raynsford: Two pieces of guidance have been published by the Government so far. The first is the policy document, "Planning for the Communities of the Future", which was published in February. The second is an explanatory note, "Transitional Arrangements for Regional Planning Guidance and Development Plans", which was published in March.

Mr. Tom King: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if the guidance in Planning Policy Guidance note 3 Housing permits local planning authorities to make an allowance for windfall sites over one hectare when preparing (a) housing land availability studies and (b) development plans. [43825]

Mr. Raynsford: Since "windfall" sites are unexpected, it is, by definition, difficult to predict future supply levels. The current guidance in PPG3 advises local authorities to assess the future supply of windfall sites of less than 1 hectare on the basis of past trends. The guidance advises that authorities should not make assumptions about sites over 1 hectare. Authorities should strive to identify these sites individually in consultation with developers, who will have a reasonable idea of sites likely to come forward over the plan period. To attempt to make a generalised allowance for larger windfall sites in the forward assessment of land supply is likely to introduce too great an element of uncertainty in the planning process.

As was made clear in the recently published policy document, "Planning for the Communities of the Future", the Government are aware that local planning authorities differ in their approach to the assessment of the potential contribution of windfall sites. They are also aware that in some areas windfall sites can make up a large proportion of the overall land used for housing. The Government will therefore look again at the guidance in PPG3 with a view to reassessing the potential contribution of this source of housing land.

Mr. Tom King: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many houses have been completed on windfall sites of over one hectare in each region since 1991. [43824]

Mr. Raynsford: The information requested is not currently collected centrally by the Department and would involve disproportionate cost to compile. However, the Department's recently announced National Land-Use Database should provide the basis for compiling this sort of information in the future.

Mr. Tom King: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what proportion of new housing completed between 1991 and 1996 in each region has three or more bedrooms. [43823]

Mr. Raynsford: The available figures are shown in the table.

Proportion of new houses and flats completed with three or more bedrooms

Percentage of total completions

Government Office Region	1991	1992	1993	1994	1995	1996
North East	63	60	59	64	67	66
Yorkshire and the Humber	60	59	57	61	63	69
East Midlands	57	61	61	63	64	70
Eastern	48	47	51	54	58	61
London	26	24	23	29	28	36
South East	44	47	47	54	59	62
South West	45	51	53	58	59	64
West Midlands	53	51	49	54	57	60
North West	62	63	58	65	63	64
Merseyside	60	64	66	68	72	67
England	49	51	51	56	57	61

Source:
"Housing and Construction Statistics 1986–1996"

Mr. Tom King: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the local planning authorities where the number of new houses constructed has exceeded that in adopted development plans in the last 10 years. [43857]

Mr. Raynsford: Such information is not held centrally and would involve disproportionate cost to compile.

Mr. Tom King: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the organisations which have been sent a copy of the statement, "Planning for the Communities of the Future: Transitional Arrangements for Regional Planning Guidance and Development Plans", issued on 1 April. [43827]

Mr. Raynsford: A new system to assess and cascade housing provision figures was set out in "Planning for the Communities of the Future" (Command 3885). The transitional arrangements which will apply where RPG is already being revised or where development plans are being replaced or altered before Regional Planning Guidance is revised are set out in paragraphs 33 and 34 of that document. The more detailed note, issued on 1 April, was sent to the following organisations:

The Local Government Association

The Planning Officers Society

Secretaries of the English Regional Associations

The Panel of Chairmen of Examinations in Public

Government Offices for the Regions

Copies were placed in the Library of the House of Commons. It has also been sent to individuals, local authorities and other organisations on request.

Structure Plans

Mr. Tom King: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) if he will list the criteria used to select the chairmen of structure plan examinations-in-public; [43851]

(2) what plans he has for changes in the way in which chairmen for structure plan examinations-in-public are selected. [43852]

Mr. Raynsford: Chairs of individual Structure Plan Examinations in Public (EIPs) are appointed, subject to availability, from a central list held by the Department. Chairs will not be appointed for an EIP where they either live or work in the area for which an EIP is being held, nor if they have worked in the past for the County Council holding the EIP.

This Department is currently recruiting a new panel of chairs through a process of open competition. The criteria for selection include an excellent knowledge of the planning system and current planning issues, and recent experience of strategic planning at a senior level, either in local or central Government or in a consultancy context. Successful applicants will also be required to demonstrate good analytical, communication and inter-personal skills.

Mr. Tom King: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will provide the names, ages, career background and qualifications of the chairmen of structure plan examinations-in-public and of other panel members whom he and his predecessors have appointed in the last five years. [43850]

Mr. Raynsford: The Secretary of State has a general duty of confidentiality in relation to his appointees and is not able to disclose personal information in respect of EIP Chairmen. However, the following information is that normally made public by the chairmen themselves at the commencement of individual EIPs:

Name	Position prior to EIP chair appointment	EIPs chaired in last five years
W. E. Barnett	Former County Planning Officer, Somerset County Council	North Yorkshire Structure Plan

Name	Position prior to EIP chair appointment	EIPs chaired in last five years
	Deputy County Planning Officer Suffolk County Council	Cleveland Structure Plan
	Deputy County Planning Officer, East Sussex County Council	West Sussex Structure Plan
W. J. S. Batho	Former Grade 3, Regional Director for DOE Eastern Region Office	Kent Structure Plan
A. G. Booth	Consultant in private practice	Northumberland Structure Plan
	Former Chief Planning Officer Essex County Council and President of RTPI	Wiltshire Structure Plan
G. Bowden	Barrister and former MP for Dulwich	Suffolk Structure Plan
Philip Critchley CB	Former Grade 3, Department of the Environment/Transport	Lancashire Structure Plan
		Hertfordshire Structure Plan
D. R. G. Hands QC	Queens Counsel	Somerset Structure Plan 1998
T. Hardy	Former Chief Executive Cambridge District Council	Bedfordshire Structure Plan
		Cheshire Structure Plan
T. L. Jones	Former Grade 3, Department of the Environment/Transport	Dorset Structure Plan
H. W. Marshall	Former Grade 3, Department of the Environment/Transport	Peak National Park Replacement Structure Plan
		Nottingham Replacement Structure Plan
		Cornwall Structure Plan
		Oxfordshire Structure Plan
		East Sussex Structure Plan
R. W. Phelps	Former General Manager Central Lancashire New Town Development Corporation	Cambridgeshire Structure Plan
		Hampshire Structure Plan
		Berkshire Structure Plan
Professor G. Shaylor	Visiting Professor of Town Planning UCE	Durham County Structure Plan
	Former Director of Development and Deputy Chief Executive Birmingham City Council, former City Planning Officer Birmingham City Council	Devon County Structure Plan
	Former Director of Planning Hillingdon London Borough

Other Panel members are all members of the Planning Inspectorate.

Local Government Act 1988

Mr. Lepper: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on a timetable for repeal of section 28 of the Local Government Act 1988. [43742]

Mr. Raynsford: It is the Government's intention to repeal Section 28 of the Local Government Act 1988 as soon as a suitable legislative opportunity arises.

Paper Pulp Disposal

Mr. Levitt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) if he will make a statement on the disposal of paper pulp on agricultural land; [43638]

(2) how many breaches of regulations in respect of the disposal of paper pulp on agricultural land there have been in the last three years; and what action was taken against those responsible; [43640]

(3) what assessment he has made of the environmental risks associated with the disposal of paper pulp on agricultural land. [43639]

Angela Eagle: A statement of our views on the landspreading of waste paper pulp was made during an Adjournment Debate on 13 March 1998, Official Report, columns 926–930.

Most landspreading of waste is carried out under the terms of the exemption from waste management licensing in paragraph 7 of schedule 3 to the Waste Management Licensing Regulations 1994. We have given a commitment to review this exemption in the light of the findings of the research project to which I referred on 13 March. That research project was completed on 30 April and copies of the report on the "Investigation Of The Criteria For, And Guidance On, The Landspreading Of Industrial Waste" have been placed in the Library of the House. The report's findings are now under consideration by my Department and the Environment Agency. On conclusion of this consideration, our proposals to revise the current exemption will be the subject of a public consultation exercise.

Motor Cycles

Mr. McWalter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) what measures he plans to use to ensure that within the Integrated Transport Strategy a proportion of journeys undertaken currently by motor cars will be undertaken by powered two-wheelers in future; [42332]

(2) if he will take steps to encourage young people to learn to use small-powered two-wheel vehicles, including power-assisted cycles, rather than motor cars; and if he will incorporate in the Integrated Policy for Transport mechanisms to enable young people to gain access to personal transport in this way. [42333]

Ms Glenda Jackson: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given on 20 May 1998, Official Report, column 365.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will change the formulae for local government financial settlements for 1999–2000 to incorporate a sparsity factor for rural county councils. [43384]

Mr. Raynsford: The existing standard spending assessment (SSA) formulae include a sparsity factor in the Education, Police and 'All Other Services' blocks for all relevant local authorities.

As part of our regular discussions of the SSA formulae with local government, we understand that the County Councils Network will present a paper proposing changes to the Personal Social Services block of the SSAs to include an indicator of sparsity of population. We shall consider with local government the arguments put forward.

Motorway Service Area (M4)

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he expects to publish the result of the recent public inquiry into the planning application to develop a motorway service area at junction 8/9 on the M4. [43214]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Inspector's Report has not yet been received in my Department. At this stage, therefore, I am not in a position to anticipate when the decision will be issued.

Rail Vehicle Accessibility

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he will announce the timetable for publication of the consultation document containing draft Rail Vehicle Accessibility Regulations; and when he will publish the regulations. [43554]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The consultation document was published on 15 May. Copies have been placed in the Library. We hope to lay the final regulations this summer.

Small Businesses

Mr. Page: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the regulations that have been removed or amended to help small businesses since 1 May 1997. [42776]

Angela Eagle: Regulations to modernise the regulatory regime for business are not necessarily targeted on businesses of a particular size. The regulations set out in the table will apply to business irrespective of size.

Regulations	Date
The Oil Pollution (Compulsory Insurance) Regulations 1997	July 1997
The Motor Cycle (EC Type Approval) (Amendment) Regulations 1997	September 1997

Central Railway

Mr. Pound: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of plans by Central Railway to increase the amount of freight carried through Ealing, North and adjoining constituencies. [43595]

Ms Glenda Jackson: An application by Central Railway plc for an Order under the Transport and Works Act 1972 was rejected by this House in 1996. We have not received any subsequent proposals from the company.

Endangered Birds

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to extend the current bird registration scheme operated under the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981 to include critically endangered species listed under CITES. [43354]

Angela Eagle: There are no plans to extend the bird registration scheme at present, although we are considering whether to undertake a wider review of the registration process to see if it can be made more cost effective.

Tewkesbury Borough Council

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will upgrade Tewkesbury Borough Council to total cost indicator band C from band D. [43796]

Mr. Raynsford: Total Cost Indicators are the responsibility of the Housing Corporation. The Corporation groups local authority areas into broad cost bands based on independent evidence of the relative costs of land, construction and house prices in the area. The Corporation reviews Total Cost Indicators annually.

Parish and Town Councils

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if parish and town councils have an automatic right of representation as part of the elected member element of the regional chambers. [43797]

Mr. Caborn: We value the work of parish and town councils in representing and serving local communities, particularly in rural areas. However, regional chambers are not statutory bodies and how their members are selected is a matter for the chambers themselves to decide.

Greenwich Peninsula (Toxic Waste)

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the disposal of toxic waste from the Greenwich peninsula. [42022]

Angela Eagle: The statutory remediation of the Greenwich Peninsula has been undertaken by British Gas as the original polluter. Following the completion of the statutory work English Partnerships, which acquired the site in February 1997, has undertaken the development remediation to restore the site to a condition fit for its intended end use.

The remediation includes the removal or treatment on-site of contaminated soils, to depths of up to 14m in selected areas. Contaminated soil which cannot be reused on site is disposed of at licensed landfill sites. The contractors employed by English Partnerships are responsible for selecting the location of the landfill sites and a number of different sites have been used. All the sites used have been licensed by the relevant authority and are suitable for the material being disposed there.

The procedure for the disposal of soils which cannot be used on-site is part of the overall remediation strategy discussed and approved by both the Environment Agency and the London Borough of Greenwich and is consistent with Government policy.

Prison Site, Middleton Sands

Miss Geraldine Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the effect of the proposal to site a prison at Middleton Sands, Morecambe on the (a) Morecambe and Heysham Local Plan and (b) draft Lancaster District Local Plan. [43662]

Mr. Raynsford: The Secretary of State announced his decision to agree to the proposed change of use of the disused Pontins Holiday Camp on 14 May. A copy of the decision letter, which summarises the Secretary of State's assessment of the proposal, is in the House Library.

Air Traffic Control

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement about problems encountered with the new air traffic control information technology system. [43457]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Environment, Transport and Regional Affairs Committee recently published the report of its inquiry into air traffic control. The Government hope to make their response to the report within the next few weeks—part of the response will be on the subject of the problems encountered by National Air Traffic Services Ltd. (NATS) with the computer system at its new air traffic control centre at Swanwick in Hampshire.

I can inform the hon. Member that since the Committee's report was published, the system at the Swanwick centre has passed its site acceptance tests, and has been handed over to NATS by the contractor, Lockheed Martin.

Water Quality

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what groundwater resources in England are known to be contaminated with enteric bacteria and viruses; and what steps have been taken to identify the sources of that contamination. [43965]

Angela Eagle: Groundwater resources used for potable supply are monitored for microbiological parameters by the water service companies. These data are not held centrally. In general, groundwater is free of microbiological contaminants. Enteric bacteria and viruses are generally filtered out by the passage of water through strata before it reaches an aquifer, and therefore before such groundwater is abstracted. All drinking water is disinfected before being put into supply.

Sewerage

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to provide advice to local authorities on the problems associated with inadequate drains and private sewers. [43967]

Angela Eagle: The Department is currently consulting interested parties on a draft planning circular relating to cesspits and septic tanks. There are no plans at present to issue guidance to local authorities on private drains and sewers. The latter are subject to Building Regulation control to ensure that, when constructed, they meet certain minimum requirements in the interests of health.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when his Department responded to the Water Research Centre draft water industry specification for thermoplastic structured wall pipe systems for sewers; and if the Department's response will be made public. [43962]

Angela Eagle: Such specifications are matters for the water industry, and my Department has not commented on it.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he plans to respond to the second report of the Environment, Transport and Regional Affairs Committee on Sewage Treatment and Disposal (HC266); and if he will make a statement. [43964]

Angela Eagle: The Government are considering the recommendations of this report very carefully and intend to respond shortly.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 30 March 1998, Official Report, column 359. what research studies he has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated to establish whether or not leakage from (i) public and (ii) private sewers, is likely to cause health or pollution problems. [43963]

Angela Eagle: The Department has not commissioned any such studies relating to sewerage leakage. In 1996, a report produced by Construction Industry Research and Information Association (CIRIA) on behalf of various interests, including the National Rivers Authority, found no conclusive evidence that leaking sewers are a common cause of groundwater contamination.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what proposals he has to review the law relating to sewers and drains and the controls relating to their construction, materials and maintenance. [43966]

Angela Eagle: There are no plans at present to review the law relating to sewers and drains. A sewerage undertaker has a duty, to maintain sewers so as to ensure that the area for which it is responsible is and continues to be effectively drained. The specification of materials and the maintenance regime is the responsibility of the sewerage undertaker.

Polegate Bypass

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what figure has been (a) agreed and (b) paid in respect of compensation payments to tenderers for the DBFO project to build the Polegate Bypass. [43202]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The claims from the tenders for the cancelled Weald and Downland DBFO project, which included the Polegate Bypass, raise a number of detailed issues which will inevitably take some time to resolve. In the meantime, we have made interim payments on account totalling £1.3 million (excluding VAT); the final settlement will be published in due course.

Millennium Experience

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is the estimated cost of developing beaches round the Millennium Experience site; how many beaches are to be developed; and what will be their composition. [42984]

Angela Eagle: No new beaches are being developed around the Millennium Experience site.

River flood defences are being replaced by English Partnerships on the Greenwich Peninsula where the existing flood defences have only a limited remaining life.

The new flood defences are, in places, being rebuilt using stepped ecological tidal terraces rather than vertical steel sheet piles. The step terraces are being planted with reeds and other inter-tidal plants.

The cost of these tidal terrace works including the flood defences within the Millennium Experience site is £2.9 million. Part of this cost will be met by the Environment Agency.

There are a number of areas around the Greenwich Peninsula below high water which have naturally occurring sand and gravel banks forming what could be referred to as "beaches". These areas are being retained in their existing natural state but no new sands and gravels are being imported. These "beaches" will be accessible from the new river walkway.

Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the impact of the Millennium Experience at Greenwich on the local transport system. [42016]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Planning permission for the Millennium Experience site in north Greenwich was granted on the clear understanding that general visitors would not be permitted to park cars at the site so as not to exacerbate existing road congestion in the area. This will be reinforced by a large Controlled Parking Zone. By the Millennium there will be additional and improved local transport interchanges and services serving the Exhibition and local area, including a station on the Jubilee Line Extension close to the gates of the Exhibition, a dedicated bus link from Charlton railway station and new river services.

I chair a new co-ordination group on Millennium Access matters which will have its first meeting next week. I will also be giving oral evidence on this subject to the Culture, Media and Sport Select Committee of this House on 16 June.

CHURCH COMMISSIONERS

Charity Taxation

41. Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the hon. Member for Middlesbrough, representing the Church Commissioners, what representations he has received concerning the Government review of charity taxation. [42030]

Mr. Stuart Bell: The Church Commissioners, working with other central bodies of the Church, have made submissions to the Government's ongoing review.

They have in turn received many representations from dioceses, parishes, individual clergy and lay members of the Church, all expressing concern about the effect of advance corporation tax changes and the importance of ensuring that the review is supportive of the charitable status and activities of the Church.

The General Synod of the Church of England has overwhelmingly endorsed a diocesan proposal for a reduction to 5 per cent. VAT on church building repairs.

Parishes (Assets)

42. Mr. Pike: To ask the hon. Member for Middlesbrough, representing the Church Commissioners, what effect the recently announced rise in the value of their assets will have on the parishes. [42031]

Mr. Stuart Bell: The value of our assets has indeed grown strongly in recent years, and follows a change in investment policy away from a high-yielding low growth mix of assets to a fund based more on Stock Exchange investments which offers higher growth prospects over the long-term. The increased value of our assets will enable us to continue to work in partnership with the parishes to ensure stable and sustainable financial support for the Church into the next Millennium.

Millennium Dome (Christian Dimension)

43. Mr. Rowe: To ask the hon. Member for Middlesbrough, representing the Church Commissioners, what steps are being taken to ensure a Christian dimension to the Millennium dome. [42032]

Mr. Stuart Bell: The New Millennium Experience Company, which is responsible for the Dome's contents and funding, is in close touch with the Churches, and indeed members of other faiths, through the Lambeth Group. The detailed design for the "Spirit Zone" is being undertaken in close consultation with the Group and the Archbishops' Officer for the Millennium, and the Minister without Portfolio has made specific assurances that the Christian story will be a central part of the Millennium Experience.

Disestablishment

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the hon. Member for Middlesbrough, representing the Church Commissioners, if he will make an assessment of the financial implications of disestablishment of the Church of England. [42025]

Mr. Stuart Bell: Disestablishment would not lie with the Commissioners to initiate and, without formal instructions and definitions, any estimates of costs are impractical.

However, for the record, the Prime Minister has indicated to me that neither he nor the Government generally have any policy for the disestablishment of the Church.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Debt

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what initiatives her Department is taking to reduce the need for hard currency to service the international debt of countries which are major producers of illicit drugs. [43169]

Clare Short: Such countries are not producing illicit drugs in order to generate the hard currency needed to service international debt. In general we are ready to consider using our bilateral aid programme into finance innovative mechanisms for converting debt into local currency, for example through debt swaps, if we are so requested. But we would need to be convinced that this was the best way of contributing to the reduction of poverty.

We remain strong supporters of the Heavily Indebted Poor Countries (HIPC) Initiative, which by writing off unpayable debt will reduce the total debt of qualifying countries to an affordable level, thus reducing the amount of hard currency needed for debt service. Bolivia should receive $450 million of HIPC debt relief this September.

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will calculate the total amount (a) of aid given to developing countries by the United Kingdom and (b) received from these countries by the United Kingdon in debt service in 1997. [43091]

Clare Short: The latest figures available for development assistance provided from Department for International Development programmes are for 1996–97, when development assistance (excluding administration costs, but including contributions to multilateral organisations) to developing countries amounted to £1,837.8 million. Figures for 1997–98 will not be available until the end of the year, when they will be published in the 1998 edition of "British Aid Statistics".

Debt service received by the Department for International Development in respect of outstanding bilateral aid loans amounted to £43 million in 1996–97: principal repaid is retained for use within the development assistance budget.

Other debt service repayments in respect of other bilateral debt agreements are a matter for the Chancellor of the Exchequer.

Police Services

Sir Alastair Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development in which countries her Department is currently funding projects to help develop a responsible and accountable police service; and at what planned cost. [43124]

Clare Short: I refer the right hon. Gentleman to the answer provided to the hon. Member for Richmond Park (Dr. Tonge) on 5 May 1998, Official Report, columns 276–77, which lists the support currently provided by DFID for police services by country. We do not keep centrally a record of our planned costs for police activities for 1998–99.

Legal Projects

Sir Alastair Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development by what criteria it is decided whether her Department or the FCO should fund projects in overseas countries to develop (a) alternatives to custodial sentences and (b) the rule of law. [43125]

Clare Short: The Department for International Development's aim is to improve access to justice, especially for poor and disadvantaged peoples. We also work to create an enabling environment for economic growth in states committed to poverty elimination. The ability to resolve disputes through the legal system with reasonable speed and without corruption has been shown to be an important factor in stimulating domestic and foreign investment. We support these activities where there is need and commitment and where we have a comparative advantage. We are also increasingly working to strengthen traditional systems and ways of settling disputes which can help provide a cheaper and more accessible justice and strengthen alternatives to custodial sentences.

Rule of law co-operation and prison reform are also among the priorities for the FCO's new Human Rights Project Fund.

Sudan

Sir Alastair Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what representations she has made to her EU counterparts about the need for additional assistance for Sudan; and if she will make a statement. [43121]

Clare Short: The crisis in Sudan was discussed during the EU Development Council meeting which I chaired on 18 May. We reaffirmed our intention to provide further assistance and to call upon the Government of Sudan and the Southern factions to agree a ceasefire and a peace settlement. It is clear that the cause of the crises is the war and without peace there will be continuing crises.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on the present level of British aid to Sudan; to what sectors and categories it is apportioned; and to what jurisdictions and areas it is delivered. [42348]

Clare Short: Since February, we have given over £5 million to United Nations agencies and international NGOs in Sudan for the provision of food, nutrition and health support and survival kits for displaced families; the current crisis in Bahr El Ghazal region has been a key focus for this assistance. I approved a further £5 million on 15 May which will be used over the coming months to meet urgent humanitarian needs in this region and other vulnerable areas in Sudan.

Human Rights

Sir Alastair Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development in which countries her Department is currently funding human rights education teams; and at what planned cost. [43123]

Clare Short: We support education on human rights as part of our support for human rights generally. For example, we support measures to raise awareness through education on the rights of the child. In Russia, we are piloting civic and human rights education in secondary schools. In Guyana, we are promoting a rights-based approach to children's education among AmerIndian populations. We also help to raise knowledge and awareness of democratic rights and responsibilities. In Zimbabwe, we are contributing to a four-year project of civic education, leading to the general election in 2000. As part of this, churches and leading human rights organisations are conducting a programme of education on democratic and electoral rights. We also support measures to educate and raise awareness about international humanitarian law (IHL). In the Commonwealth of Independent States, we provided funds to the ICRC to develop IHL materials, train IHL trainers and establish a lecture series in IHL at key law institutions.

Special Advisers

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many special advisers, political advisers and other political appointees are working in her Department; at what annual cost to the public purse including recruitment costs, salaries, pensions and National Insurance contributions; and what was the position in the last full year of the last Government. [43321]

Clare Short: There are two special advisers working in my Department, but no other political advisers or political appointees. The combined total cost of the two posts for the twelve month period up to 5 May 1998 was approximately £67,000. There were no special advisers, political advisers or political appointees working in the Overseas Development Administration in the last full year of the last government.

UN Agencies

Sir Alastair Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development for which UN agencies her Department's financial contribution will be less in 1998–99 than in 1997–98; and in each case by how much. [43127]

Clare Short: Total contributions, covering both core and extra-budgetary funding, to UN agencies for 1998/99 will not be known until the end of the financial year. Overall, DFID's core contributions to voluntary funded UN agencies have increased in 1998/99 over 1997/98.

Street Children

Sir Alastair Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development in which countries her Department is currently funding non-governmental organisation projects addressing the needs of street children; and at what planned cost. [43122]

Clare Short: The countries in which DFID is currently funding non governmental organisation projects addressing the needs of street children, and the costs of these projects, are as follows:

Country	Partner agency	Support	Amount (£)
Brazil	Jubilee Action	Street girls education, training centre and residence home	61,200
Ecuador	International Childcare Trust	Street children of Guayaquil	81,200—1998–99
Kenya	International Childcare Trust	Street children's project	47,100—1998–99
India	Homeless International	Support for street children	21,700—1998–99
South Africa	Childhope	Twilight children capacity building	21,700—1998–99
South Africa	Childhope	Capacity building at Claremont Children's Centre	23,100—1998–99
Brazil	Childhope	Projecto Ibeji for street children	49,100—1998–99
Brazil	Childhope	Judicial and institutional protection of children and adolescents	33,500—1998–99
Russia	European Network on street children	Conference in St. Petersburg on street children	5,000—1998–99
Bangladesh	Shioshab	Support for child domestic workers, including children from the streets	100,000—1998–99 rising to £800,000 if initial indicators met
Bangladesh	UCEP	Providing education for underprivileged children working in urban areas	900,000—Phase III
India	Don Bosco	Valsalya Project: Sexual health project for street children/youth of Cochin aims to integrate sexual health intervention with ongoing activities of Don Bosco	15,850—(period—1997 April to June 1998—likely to be extended through the substantive phase of the Partnerships for Sexual Health project)
India	Cini-Asha	Cini-Asha: Sexual Health Project for Street Children and working children in Central Calcutta	39,000—(Since August 1995 to date under the West Bengal sexual Health Project—likely to continue at an average of £12,000-£15,000 per annum)

We also support a number of projects for street children with the block grant agencies (SCF, Christian Aid, OXFAM, CAFOD) but do not yet have the exact allocations for this financial year.

Afghanistan

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment she has made of (a) the effectiveness of existing aid programmes, (b) future aid opportunities and (c) the conditions under which aid workers are operating following the visit in April of a European Union delegation to Afghanistan; what response Taliban made to the delegation's outlining of the European Union's Common Position on Afghanistan; and if she will make a statement. [43175]

Clare Short: As a result of the EU mission to Afghanistan and the subsequent Afghan Support Group meeting in London, chaired by the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, my hon. Friend the Member for Carrick, Cumnock and Doon Valley (Mr. Foulkes), donors have concluded that the existing assistance programmes to Afghanistan are in need of revision. While valuable support has been provided to vulnerable groups, past assistance may have made it easier for other resources to be channelled towards the war effort, and certain types of relief programming may be deepening dependency and reducing local incentives for self-reliance.

The present situation poses difficult policy, strategic and operational dilemmas and makes it vital for agencies to adopt a common programming approach with a strong focus on human rights. Participants in the Afghan Support Group meeting agreed that future assistance should be better targeted and co-ordinated, and based on clear principles, with the aim of providing balanced and impartial support for the different ethnic groups and vulnerable populations, especially women and children. The problem of opium poppy production should also be addressed through the common programming approach. The aid and political processes should be in close synergy, and contribute to the common goal of sustainable peace.

Aid workers in Afghanistan continue to face difficult conditions. In the North they have to cope with an unstable security situation, and in some Taliban-controlled areas they have been subjected to harassment—restrictions placed on female staff are a particular problem. These difficulties forced the UN to withdraw international staff from Kandahar earlier this year, and to suspend its programmes in southern Afghanistan. Recent negotiations between the UN and the Taliban have produced an agreement which may improve matters, but some issues (notably the ban on foreign Muslim women from entering Afghanistan unless accompanied by a close male relative) have not been resolved, and it remains to see how effectively the agreement will work in practice.

The EU delegation made clear to the Taliban and other factions that they remained willing to assist Afghanistan but only on the basis of globally accepted principles. The delegation also expressed its full support for the UN. These messages were endorsed by the Afghan Support Group. This demonstration of solidarity helped to bring about the successful conclusion of the negotiations between the UN and the Taliban referred to.

India

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what representations she has made to the Indian Government concerning their nuclear capability. [42880]

Clare Short: I refer the hon. Member to the answer my hon. Friend the Member for Leeds, Central (Mr. Fatchett), the Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, gave her on 20 May 1998, Official Report, column 529.

Birmingham Summit

Sir Alastair Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if the multilateral untying of aid was on the agenda of the G8 Summit in Birmingham; and if she will make a statement. [43634]

Clare Short: The G8 Summit endorsed the important work on multilateral untying of aid being undertaken in the Development Assistance Committee of the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development, in particular a proposal on untying aid to the least developed countries with a view to proposing a text in 1999.

Sir Alastair Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what progress was made at the G8 Summit in Birmingham on (a) the multilateral untying of aid and (b) the phasing out of export subsidies. [43636]

Clare Short: The G8 Summit endorsed the important work on multilateral untying of aid being undertaken in the Development Assistance Committee of the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development, in particular a proposal on untying aid to the least developed countries with a view to proposing a text in 1999. There was no substantive discussion on export subsidies.

Sir Alastair Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will list the meetings which she has had since 1 May at which the multilateral untying of aid was on the agenda. [43637]

Clare Short: On 18 May I chaired the EU Development Council which agreed that Development and Finance Ministers should meet to prepare a note on EC untying to complement the work of the Development Assistance Committee. This will be submitted before the summer break.

Sir Alastair Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what discussions she has had with representatives from other G8 countries concerning the multilateral untying of aid. [43633]

Clare Short: I have had a number of useful discussions on untying of aid with colleagues from G8 countries. At the Birmingham Summit G8 countries pledged to work within the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD) on a recommendation on untying aid to the least developed countries with a view to proposing a text in 1999.

Export Subsidies

Sir Alastair Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on her Department's policy towards the use of export subsidies. [43635]

Clare Short: My Department does not favour export subsidies. The Aid and Trade provision has been ended. The White Paper on International Development makes it clear that we will consider within country programmes whether mixed credits would contribute to our central goal of reducing poverty by encouraging appropriate economic growth and investment in human development.

Eastern Myanmar and Western Thailand

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will list the aid programmes in Eastern Myanmar and Western Thailand supported by her Department. [43864]

Clare Short: In the 1996–97 and 1997–98 financial years DFID has supported a number of NGO projects in Western Thailand and Eastern Myanmar:

	£
Small Grants Scheme—1996/97	12,000	Ecoles Sans Frontieres Shoklo Malaria Research Unit Neo-Humanistic Foundation for Community Development Christ Church Karen Outreach Programme
Small Grants Scheme—1997/98	9,000	Karen Refugee Committee Burmese Border Consortium Open Society Institute Mae Tao Clinic
Humanitarian Assistance—Emergency Response 1996/97	22,000	CAFOD
Humanitarian Assistance—Emergency Response 1997/98	80,000	World Vision
Humanitarian Assistance—Refugees 1996/97	150,000	Burma Border Consortium
Humanitarian Assistance—Refugees 1997/98	267,000	Burma Border Consortium

Assistance includes food and essential items to Burmese refugees in border camps in both Thailand and Burma (Burmese Border Consortium) and reproductive health, education and medical equipment provided through the SGS.

Kosovo

Sir Alastair Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assistance her Department is currently giving to Kosovo. [43148]

Clare Short: My Department has provided assistance to Kosovo through grants to non-governmental organisations such as the International Federation of the Red Cross, Oxfam and the Save the Children Fund. It is currently funding two Oxfam projects worth over £100,000 to promote health education amongst rural women and to provide facilities and change attitudes towards disabled children, and an SCF Childrens Rights project. Officials are working up options for further assistance, including support for civil society and reconciliation.

Heavily Indebted Poor Countries Initiative

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what recent representations she has made to the G8 countries, in respect of the Heavily Indebted Poor Countries Initiative. [43018]

Clare Short: Over the last few months, I have used bilateral contacts with most of the G8 countries, including France, Germany and the United States, as well as fellow European Union countries and the IMF and World Bank, to press the case for faster and more flexible implementation of the Heavily Indebted Poor Countries (HIPC) debt Initiative. At last month's G8 Summit in Birmingham, leaders agreed to support the speedy and determined extension of debt relief to more countries, under the terms of the Initiative. They also recognised the particular difficulties of post conflict countries, and the need to consider debt relief mechanisms to release more and earlier resources for essential rehabilitation.

Ecologically Sensitive Areas

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will publish her Department's guidelines for UK multinationals investing in ecologically-sensitive areas overseas. [42561]

Mrs. Roche: I have been asked to reply.

A copy of the OECD Guidelines for Multinational Enterprises, which call for high standards of corporate behaviour, including in the area of environmental protection, is available in the Library of the House.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Sport (Young People)

13. Mr. McNulty: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how the Government are helping to develop participation in sport by young people. [41999]

Ms Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how the Government are helping to develop participation in sport by young people. [42007]

Mr. Banks: The English Sports Council's National Junior Sports Programme provides a framework through which schools can work with a number of organisations to provide real opportunities in sport. Also, participation rates of young people have risen by up to three times in some areas because of facilities provided by the Lottery Sports Fund.

25. Mr. Gareth R. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what steps he is taking to increase opportunities for young people in London to participate in sport. [42012]

Mr. Banks: The English Sports Council works closely with all London Boroughs to increase opportunities for young people to participate in sport through a number of initiatives. The ESC is also part funding the London Youth Games, the finals of which take place on 11/12 July at Crystal Palace national Sports Centre.

Film Industry

14. Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many films have been made on location in the United Kingdom in the past 12 months; and if he will make a statement. [42000]

Mr. Tom Clarke: In 1997, 112 feature films were wholly or partly filmed in the United Kingdom, with a total production cost of £560 million. The aim of our Film Policy Review "A Bigger Picture" is to sustain the current successes of our production sector and develop better links between production and distribution.

21. Mr. Brooke: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will make a statement on his policy concerning taxation and the film industry. [42008]

Mr. Tom Clarke: In its first Budget the Government showed their recognition of the special needs and potential growth of the film industry by introducing 100 per cent. write-off for films on production and acquisition expenditure for films costing up to £15 million. In March this was extended from three to five years. Further developments are of course a matter for my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer.

National Lottery Grants

16. Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans he has to ensure a more equitable distribution of heritage lottery fund grants between the different parts of the United Kingdom. [42002]

Mr. Chris Smith: The Government are determined to ensure that Lottery money is allocated fairly and equitably across the whole of the United Kingdom and between different groups in society. The National Lottery Bill gives the Heritage Lottery Fund and the other Lottery distributors important new powers in this respect; and later today I will be announcing the confirmation of new directions for the Lottery distributors, designed to achieve precisely this objective.

Press Regulation (Children)

18. Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what discussions he has held with the Press Complaints Commission on press regulation in respect of children. [42004]

Mr. Chris Smith: On 25 September 1997 I welcomed proposals from Lord Wakeham, Chairman of the Press Complaints Commission, for strengthening the newspaper industry's code of practice. His proposals for better protection of children were accepted by the industry and published on 19 December. I have urged the PCC to consider further measures to strengthen the process of self-regulation.

Film Task Force

19. Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what action he is taking to implement proposals made to him by the film task force. [42006]

Mr. Tom Clarke: I have set up an Action Committee, made up of representatives of key sectors of the British film industry, which will oversee the implementations of the recommendations of the Film Policy Review, which met on 12 May.

Public Buildings (Cologne)

22. Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will evaluate the preservation and display of sites of archaeological significance in the vicinity of new public buildings in Cologne. [42009]

Mr. Fisher: No. I am aware that German law requires city authorities to aim to preserve archaeological monuments as much as possible, that there is a lot of public debate in Cologne about the preservation of sites, and that various solutions have been found for incorporating parts of remains into new buildings. In the UK, planning guidance stresses the importance of identifying potential archaeological remains at an early stage and that there should be a presumption in favour of in situ preservation of important remains which as in Cologne, can involve their incorporation in new developments.

Royal Parks

23. Mr. White: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what proposals he has to allow the royal parks to generate more income through staging events. [42010]

Mr. Tom Clarke: I am keen that the parks should attract people who might not normally visit them, and that the Agency should benefit from any extra income. I have asked the Royal Parks Agency to draw up a comprehensive programme of events in the Royal Parks each year.

Creative Industries Task Force

24. Mrs. Ellman: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what measures he will take to ensure that his Department's creative industries task force works with the proposed regional development agencies to develop arts-based businesses. [42011]

Mr. Chris Smith: I am, of course, aware of the importance of the contribution made to the creative economy by artists and innovators in the regions and my hon. Friend the Member for Sheffield, South participates in his capacity as Minister for the Regions on the Creative Industries Task Force, to help ensure that the Government's policies for the creative industries take account of the regional dimension of cultural and creative activities.

Voluntary Sector (National Lottery Grants)

26. Mr. Bill O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when he last met the National Lottery Charities Board to discuss grants to the voluntary sector; and if he will make a statement. [42013]

Mr. Chris Smith: I have not met the National Lottery Charities Board collectively to discuss grants to the voluntary sector, but regularly meet Chairs and Chief Executives of all Lottery distributors to discuss Lottery distribution matters. The most recent of these meetings took place on 21 April.

Tourism

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what measures he has taken to support the British seaside tourist industry. [43869]

Mr. Tom Clarke: Seaside towns are an important part of the domestic tourism market. The Government's strategy for tourism will be effective, comprehensive and will benefit all areas, including seaside towns. One of the Forum Working Groups, which is helping with the development of the strategy for tourism, is looking particularly at issues relevant to resorts.

Mr. Maude: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when his Department's plan for tourism will be published. [43650]

Mr. Chris Smith: We plan to publish our strategy for tourism later this year.

Small Businesses

Mr. Page: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will list the regulations that have been removed or amended to help small businesses since 1 May 1997. [42778]

Mr. Tom Clarke: No such Regulations have been removed or amended by this Department since 1 May 1997.

Broadcasting

Mr. Maude: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when his Department plans to publish a broadcasting consultation document. [43651]

Mr. Chris Smith: The Government are carefully considering future policy towards broadcasting and telecommunications in the light of the changes in technology which have the potential to transform these sectors and to erode current distinctions between them. My Department and the Department of Trade and Industry shall consult widely on these issues later this year, and shall be publishing a document for that purpose as soon as our current initial consideration has been completed.

Mr. Maude: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when he estimates analogue terrestrial broadcasts will cease in the United Kingdom. [43659]

Mr. Chris Smith: The Government's consultation paper "Television: the Digital Future"—published on 12 February 1998, Official Report, column 364—seeks comments on a wide range of issues relating to the transition from analogue to digital broadcasting including the timing of closure of the analogue terrestrial network. Comments are invited by 4 September.

The Government will consider the timing and nature of an announcement on the closure of the analogue network in the light of the responses to that consultation document.

Arts Council

Mr. Maude: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans he has to review the activities of the Arts Council. [43653]

Mr. Chris Smith: The Departmental Spending Review which is currently under way at DCMS is looking at the full range of the Department's responsibilities, including the arts funding system and the role of the Arts Council within it. I expect to announce the conclusions of this review in the summer.

UK Sports Institute

Mr. Maude: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when the UK Sports Institute will open. [43661]

Mr. Chris Smith: The new buildings of the UK Sports Institute are expected to be open at the end of the year 2000. However, we expect to have services on-stream before then and very much hope that there will be benefits for the Sydney 2000 Olympic Games.

The UK Sports Council is already talking to individual sports about how their existing programmes can be enhanced.

Royal Opera House

Mr. Maude: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when the review of the Royal Opera House will be published. [43666]

Mr. Chris Smith: The Eyre report will be published shortly after I receive it from Sir Richard.

Museums

Mr. Maude: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when the results of the review of museum access will be made public. [43652]

Mr. Chris Smith: The access review is continuing in the context of the Departmental Spending Review, which includes a fundamental review of the museums and galleries sector.

This will conclude shortly and an announcement will be made in the Summer.

Sportsmatch

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much money has been granted to Sportsmatch projects in Chorley; and if he will list these projects. [43619]

Mr. Banks: Sportsmatch awarded £1,250 to Chorley Rugby Union Football Club in 1996 for a junior and mini coaching and development scheme. Bolton Wanderers Football in the Community Scheme was awarded £3,500 in March to extend its geographical coverage to benefit schools in the Chorley, Adlington, Anderton and Exuton areas.

Listed Sporting Events

Mr. Michael J. Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what representations he has received regarding the Gordon report on de-listing of sporting events. [43675]

Mr. Chris Smith: Lord Gordon's advisory group proposed various revisions to the arrangements, under Part IV of the Broadcasting Act 1996, for protecting universal broadcast of certain events. I am presently considering the group's recommendations. I have received 776 representations of this subject, including 132 from hon. Members, since the announcement of the group's report on 20 March.

Mr. Maude: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when he will publish his decision on the recommendations of the advisory body on listed sporting events. [43649]

Mr. Chris Smith: I am considering the recommendations of Lord Gordon's advisory group very carefully, taking account of the many representations made to me on the subject of the list of protected events. I shall announce my decisions in the next few weeks.

Employee Travel

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will estimate the cost of employee travel on office business, broken down into (a) fuel allowances, (b) unproductive time during travel, (c) other costs related to car transport and (d) costs related to public transport, for (i) 1994–95, (ii) 1995–96, (iii) 1996–97 and (iv) 1997–98. [32446]

Mr. Tom Clarke [holding answer 3 March 1998]: Information on employee travel is not available in the level of detail requested and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. Neither do records before 1996–97 differentiate between Ministerial and official travel and related subsistence. The available information is given in the table.

£

	Total travel and subsistence	Total official travel and subsistence
1994–95 (actual)	266,092	n/a
1995–96 (actual)	280,104	n/a
1996–97 (actual)	242,031	182,142
1997–98 (provisional outturn)	292,328	245,360

Official Hospitality

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what is his current estimate of the expenditure of his Department, its agencies and non-departmental public bodies on hospitality since 1 May 1997. [27755]

Mr. Tom Clarke [holding answer 5 February 1998]: The available information is given in the following table.

£000

	1 May 1997 to 1 February 1998
Department for Culture, Media and Sport	13
Historic Royal Palaces Agency	23
Royal Parks Agency	18

It is not possible to distinguish, without incurring disproportionate cost, between NDPB's expenditure financed from grant-in-aid and that financed from other sources of income including sponsorships. However the total expenditure by the Department's NDPBs on hospitality from 1 May 1997 to 1 February is £997,000.

Sports Council

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what progress the Government have made in implementing their commitment to ensure that the UK Sports Council becomes the lead strategic body for sport in the UK. [42574]

Mr. Banks: As part of the Departmental Spending Review we have been reviewing the role and structure of the UK Sports Council and Government support for sport at UK level. We hope soon to be able to share our thoughts more widely.

Sport Governing Bodies

Mr. Jim Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport, pursuant to his answer of 26 February, Official Report, column 322, what proportion of the officers serving on the sports governing bodies listed are (a) under 25 years and (b) over 65 years of age; and what proportion are women. [33542]

Mr. Banks: In response to my hon. Friend's question, and following a meeting with me, the Central Council of Physical Recreation has agreed to conduct a survey of their membership to establish a profile of the officers serving on the sports governing bodies. This survey will address the questions raised by my hon. Friend and I have asked the CCPR to speak to him, and with my officials, about how this survey might best be conducted. The Chairman of the CCPR shares with me a desire to see the management of sports organisations fully representing the wide range of people who are keen on sport, and taking the increasingly professional approach which is needed for the management of these organisations as we enter the new century.

Cricket (Racism)

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment he has made of the extent of racism in cricket; what negotiations he has had with the England and Wales Cricket Board in respect of racism in cricket; and what steps he proposes to reduce the incidence of racism in cricket. [42614]

Mr. Banks: The Government are committed to stamping out racism in all areas of sport, and the English Sports Council has established a Racial Equality Advisory Group to work with national governing bodies to encourage racial equality in sport. We support fully the initiatives undertaken by the England and Wales Cricket Board to reduce racism and to promote the widest possible participation in cricket. These include:

- an extensive network of cricket development officers nationwide, whose brief is to promote cricket to all ages, sexes, colours and creeds;
- a proposed Racial Equality Campaign for cricket in conjunction with the English Sports Council and the Commission for Racial Equality; and a co-ordinated national audit of recreational cricket, via the 38 county boards, in order to gain a clearer picture of the level of Asian and black involvement in cricket.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Portcullis House

Mrs. Roe: To ask the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire, representing the House of Commons Commission, if any legal actions are in progress against the Corporate Officer of the House arising out of the construction of Portcullis House; and if he will make a statement. [43883]

Mr. Kirkwood: A legal action is currently in progress, involving a claim for damages by Harmon CFEM Facades (UK) Ltd. (In Liquidation) against the Corporate Officer of the House of Commons. The plaintiff seeks damages arising from the procurement procedures adopted by the Corporate Officer in relation to the fenestration package in respect of the new parliamentary building (Portcullis House). The plaintiff tendered for the package but it was awarded elsewhere. The Corporate Officer is defending the proceedings.

The case is being heard in the High Court of Justice before an Official Referee His Honour Judge Lloyd QC.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Immigration and Nationality Policy

Angela Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement of Government policy on immigration and nationality. [44078]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: We made it clear in our manifesto that Britain, like every country, must have firm control over immigration. However, we are also determined that applications should be dealt with speedily and fairly. All staff applying the Government's immigration and nationality policy will observe these central principles of being fair, fast and firm; and will carry out their duties without regard to the race, colour or religion of any person seeking to enter or remain in the United Kingdom, or applying for citizenship.

The main elements of our policy are to: welcome genuine visitors and students who wish to come to the United Kingdom; support family life by admitting the spouses and minor dependent children of those already settled in the United Kingdom; ensure that asylum decisions are both swift and fair and fully meet the United Kingdom's obligations towards refugees under international law; grant entry to those who qualify for periods of work in the United Kingdom; maintain a fair, fast and effective entry clearance operation at United Kingdom posts overseas; give effect to the "free movement" provisions of European Community law while retaining controls at frontiers, operated by a civilian Immigration Service; detect and remove those entering or remaining in the United Kingdom without authority and take firm action against those profiting from abuse of the immigration laws, including effective preventive measures; and to grant applications for citizenship to those meeting the specified criteria.

This statement is included in the Home Office Immigration and Nationality Directorate Annual Report 1997, which is published today. The Report covers a number of important developments which affect the work of the Directorate, such as the Casework Programme, the Treaty of Amsterdam and other major policy issues; and includes a factual account of events in each element of the immigration control. A copy is being placed in the Library.

Prisoners (Incentives and Earned Privileges Scheme)

Mrs. Fiona Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what new initiatives are planned to increase the effectiveness of the incentives and earned privileges scheme which encourages responsible behaviour by prisoners. [44090]

Ms Quin: The national framework for Incentives and Earned Privileges was introduced in 1995 and has been operating in all prisons since mid 1996. These schemes seek to reward good prisoner behaviour and performance and penalise bad prisoner behaviour and performance. In a few prisons, one of the "Key Earnable Privileges" has been television in-cell and the Government now intend to extend the availability of this as an earned and forfeitable privilege more generally across the Prison Service. This will build on the previous Government's introduction of the privilege in 1991, adding slowly to the approximately 2,500 sets already in place. Prisoners will pay for the privilege themselves. The weekly charge is likely to be about £1 against average weekly prisoner earnings of £7.50.

Prisoners' normal access to television is out of the cell in association with others. Television in cells was introduced in 1991, following a White Paper in response to Lord Justice Woolf's Report on the disturbances at Strangeways prison (Manchester). About 1,000 prisoners in four establishments initially had this privilege; under the previous Government the numbers had risen by 1997 to the current levels of about 2,500 (four per cent. of the prison population), mostly in five establishments of varying types. At present, it is largely a matter of chance whether a prisoner will find him or herself in a prison with the prospect of in-cell television.

Experience of in-cell television in recent years suggests considerable benefits. As an earned privilege it can be a powerful incentive to good behaviour and regime participation, and can help with order and control, reducing tension on the landings. Its loss is feared. It helps prisoners keep in touch with the outside world to which all but a few must eventually return. It has potential as a means of providing information and enhancing prison regimes.

The Government have taken into account the views on this subject expressed in a variety of contexts, including the Learmont Report on Prison Service security following the escape from Parkhurst in 1995, the Home Affairs Committee in March 1997, and in reports by Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Prisons and Boards of Visitors. The Learmont Report recommended the wider introduction of in-cell television and pointed to its potential benefits as an information, as well as a recreational, medium. The Home Affairs Committee recommended it in March 1997

"given the potential of TV in-cell as a means of contributing to good order in a prison; so long as the availability of television in this way is clearly an earned privilege rather than a right".

Successive Chief Inspectors have urged the previous and this Government to make wider use of in-cell television and have reported on its existing successful use, most recently at Garth prison. Boards of Visitors of establishments with in-cell television frequently report favourably on its value. There is already extensive use of in-cell television in other European prison systems and in the United States and Canada.

In-cell television will be liable to be forfeited in a number of ways: when a prisoner is moved to the basic privilege level of the incentives and earned privileges schemes; when an adjudicating governor awards a disciplinary penalty of forfeiture of privileges; if local rules governing the use of in-cell television are broken; and if a judgment is made in a particular case that its availability appears to be damaging a prisoner's treatment or increasing the risk to the public on his or her release.

The Prison Service will be considering further the scope to use internal channels as an additional means of communicating information to prisoners and helping with education and regimes generally. In-cell television can help deliver educational courses, for example through Open University and other relevant programmes. Garth prison—one of the first prisons to have in-cell television—uses an internal information channel to help communication with prisoners and to show videos.

A procurement process for televisions—which will receive terrestrial channels only—is starting with a view to the extension of this privilege from later in 1998. The option of in-cell television will initially be targeted on prisoners on the enhanced privilege level or in other priority groups, such as those who are "drug free". Those on the standard privilege level will not be precluded but the extension of in-cell television will be gradual and monitored closely. This is partly to maximise its benefits as an earned privilege and partly because in-cell electricity is not available in about forty per cent. of accommodation and this is unlikely to change significantly for some time.

Extension of in-cell television will be broadly self-financing, with the costs of Prison Service-owned televisions and their replacement, warranties and wall brackets recovered from prisoners allowed the privilege. At present, licence fees are not payable in respect of prisoners because of Crown exemption. The Government propose to consider the practicability of a licensing arrangement for prisoners later on in the context of licensing arrangements more generally.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Allan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what provision has been made for meeting staff costs over the life of each of the Private Finance Initiative contracts undertaken by (a) his Department and (b) the Prison Service; and if he will make a statement. [43428]

Mr. Straw: In respect of both (a) and (b), staffing costs which are part of the operations of a Private Finance Initiative (PFI) contract are the responsibility of the service operator and are included in the contractual charge for each PFI service.

Feltham Young Offenders Institution

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the (a) current and (b) target ratio of staff to 15 to 16 year old inmates in the juvenile wing, of Feltham Young Offenders' Institution. [43362]

Ms Quin: The target ratio of staff to inmates on the five juvenile wings at Feltham is approximately 5 : 1. Current staffing levels on Swallow, Heron, Jay and Dunlin, and Eagle wings slightly exceeded this ratio as detailed in the table.

Staffing ratios for juveniles at Feltham YOI and RC

Unit/number of juveniles	Current staffing	Target staffing
Swallow 60–65 juveniles	2 senior officers 12 officers	2 senior officers 12 officers
Heron and Jay (combined) 60–68 juveniles	2 senior officers 17 officers	2 senior officers 12 officers
Dunlin and Eagle (combined) 60–68 juveniles	2 senior officers 17 officers	2 senior officers 16 officers

Security Services

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the Data Protection Registrar's proposal that the Security Services should register under the Data Protection Act 1984. [43458]

Mr. George Howarth: We have decided not to depart from the existing policy that the Security Service should not register any of the personal data they hold under the Data Protection Act 1984. I understand similar considerations also apply to the Secret Intelligence Service and GCHQ.

National Police Computer

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department over what period, and at what cost the West Midlands Probation Service and its partners are piloting the PHOENIX system to provide access to the national police computer. [43461]

Mr. Michael: The pilot project commenced live operation in August 1997 and will end in July 1998. The total cost of the pilot project will be approximately £33,350. The costs were shared by the Home Office unit responsible for Co-ordination of Computerisation in the Criminal Justice System (78 per cent.), the West Midlands Probation Service (19 per cent.) and the Police Information Technology Organisation (3 per cent.). The main cost items of the project were equipment, software and communications charges and staff costs associated with the management of the project and the day-to-day operation of the PHOENIX computer terminal.

A formal evaluation report will be produced following the end of the live running period in July. Emerging findings from the pilot are encouraging. Previously, requests to the police for this information often took one to two weeks, whereas probation officers now have access to information on previous convictions within one to two days.

Road Traffic Offences

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many police man hours were involved in enforcing the current speed limits in Lancashire in the years (a) 1994, (b) 1995, (c) 1996 and (d) 1997; and how many convictions resulted from this, [43477]

(2) how many police man hours were involved in enforcing the current drink driving laws in Lancashire in the years (a) 1994, (b) 1995, (c) 1996 and (d) 1997; and how many convictions for drink-related offences resulted from this. [43478]

Mr. Michael: Figures for officer hours dedicated to drink drive and speed enforcement in the years requested are not available. Officers are deployed on many different duties and commonly deal with a wide range of offences on a tour of duty.

Convictions for drink driving in the force area were:

1994: 2,645

1995: 2,828

1996: 3,211.

Convictions for speeding offences were:

1994: 2,223

1995: 2,945

1996: 4,629.

Figures for 1997 convictions are not yet available.

Re-offenders

Mr. Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many criminals convicted abroad and deported back to the United Kingdom in the years 1990 to 1997 have re-offended; [41735]

(2) how many criminals convicted of murder or homicide abroad and deported back to the United Kingdom in the years 1990 to 1997 have re-offended. [41736]

Ms Quin [holding answer 19 May 1998]: The information requested is not available centrally.

Correspondence

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to reply to the letter from the hon. Member for Richmond Park concerning entry clearance officers in Columbo of 8 December 1997. [42889]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: I wrote to the hon. Member on 22 May.

Small Businesses

Mr. Page: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the regulations that have been amended or removed to help small businesses since 1 May 1997. [42785]

Mr. Straw: Regulations to reduce the burdens on business are not necessarily targeted on businesses of a particular size. My Department has made seven amending or repealing regulations (listed below) in the period 1 May 1997 to 15 May 1998 which are expected to reduce burdens on business, irrespective of size:

	Date
1997 Regulations
1. The Gaming Act (Variation of Monetary Limits) Order 1997 (SI No. 1828)	August
2. The Gaming Act (Variation of Monetary Limits) (No. 2) Order 1997 (SI No. 2079)	September
3. The Amusement with Prizes (Variation of Monetary Limits) Order 1997 (SI No. 2080)	September
1998 Regulations
4. The Deregulation (Licence Transfers) Order 1998 (SI No. 114)	January
5. The Video Recordings (Labelling) (Amendment) Regulations 1998 (SI No. 852)	March
6. The Gaming Clubs (Hours and Charges) (Amendment) Regulations 1998 (SI No. 961)	May
7. The Gaming Act (Variation of Monetary Limits) Order 1998 (SI No. 962)	May

Prison Site, Middleton Sands

Miss Geraldine Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the evacuation plans are in the event of a nuclear emergency at either of the nuclear power stations at Heysham for the prisoners who would be housed in the proposed prison at Middleton Sands, Morecambe; and if he will make a statement. [43861]

Ms Quin: Contingency plans for evacuation have been agreed between the Prison Service and the Lancashire Ambulance Service, Lancashire Constabulary and Lancashire Fire Brigade. In his recommendations following the public inquiry, the planning inspector made it a condition that the Emergency, Safety and Evacuation Plan, agreed with the County Emergency Planning Unit, should be operational before the prison opens.

Miss Geraldine Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what research has been carried out by his Department regarding the likely effect on the local tourism industry at Morecambe if the proposal to site a temporary prison there is implemented. [43660]

Ms Quin: No specific research has been undertaken into the effects of the proposed siting of a temporary prison in the Morecambe area.

The planning inspector concluded in his report of the recent public inquiry that the prison would have little if any harmful visual impact on the area. In considering the Prison Service's proposals, together with the views of other interested parties, the inspector thought it unlikely that the prison would materially harm the special attractions of the area or that it would likewise harm the tourist and holiday business in the Morecambe area as a whole.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many appeals are currently outstanding against a refusal of an asylum claim by persons who have been granted exceptional leave to remain in the United Kingdom. [42979]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: As at the end of April 1998, there were estimated to be some 23,815 asylum appeals outstanding with the Immigration Appeals Authority. Of these 21,425 were appeals to the Special Adjudicators and 2,390 to the Tribunal. I regret that it is not possible, from the available information, to differentiate those appellants who were granted exceptional leave.

Channel Islands

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what discussions he has held with the Governments of (a) Jersey and (b) Guernsey about incorporating the European Convention on Human Rights into the law; [42986]

(2) what was the purpose of the visit to Jersey made by the Under-Secretary of State, Lord Williams of Mostyn. [42978]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Lord Williams of Mostyn met the Lieutenant Governor, the Bailiff and other representatives from Jersey on Monday 18 May to discuss with the insular authorities the progress of the Human Rights Bill [Lords] and the action being taken in the Island in response to the Government's decision to incorporate the European Convention on Human Rights into United Kingdom law. He visited Guernsey for a similar discussion on 22 May.

Immigration

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the representations he has received on the case of Mr. Sukhvinder Singh Gill, Ref S474991; if he will meet hon. Members with an interest in the case to discuss those representations; and what action he proposes on the case. [43080]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The most recent representations about Mr. Gill's case were received from my hon. Friend the Member for Leicester, South (Mr. Marshall) in September 1997. I am currently considering Mr. Gill's case and will inform his representatives of my decision in due course.

Mr. Stinchcombe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what maintenance or income level is required in the assessment of entry clearance applications for settlement. [43199]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Each case is considered on its own facts. The maintenance and accommodation criteria set out within the Rules meet the need to ensure that, where people are admitted for settlement, they will have the basic means to support and accommodate themselves and there will be no need for them to seek state assistance.

Prison Officers

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans the Prison Service has to enable the recognition of the Prison Officers Association in private prisons. [42919]

Ms Quin [holding answer 21 May 1998]: The conditions of service, including membership of trades unions, of prisoner custody officers employed at a privately managed prison are a matter for negotiation between them and their employer, the contractor managing the prison, who is of course required to comply with all appropriate legislation.

Prisoners (Health Care)

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 20 January 1998, Official Report, column 518, when he expects the joint working group on the future of prison health care to report. [43045]

Ms Quin [holding answer 21 May 1998]: The joint Prison Service/ Department of Health Working Group on the future organisation of prisoners' health care is expecting to report its findings to Ministers in July, and to publish its conclusions and recommendations in due course.

Deaths in Custody

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to complete his review of the disclosure regulations regarding deaths in custody. [43183]

Ms Quin: My right hon. Friend indicated in his statement to the House on 23 March 1998, Official Report, columns 21–37, in response to the Home Affairs Committee report into police disciplinary and complaints procedures, that he would consider the scope for greater openness in respect of investigation reports into deaths in police custody. This is expected to be completed later this year. A similar situation applies in the Prison Service.

Prisoners (Suicide and Self-harm)

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action was taken as a result of the review of suicide and self-harm in prison, conducted by Judge Tumim in 1990; and if he will make a statement. [43184]

Ms Quin: Judge Tumim's report on suicides and self-harm in prisons in England and Wales made wide-ranging recommendations with implications across prison regimes. The Prison Service's response was shaped through a newly created central unit which was set up to develop suicide awareness strategies. Following detailed examination of the recommendations in the report, a revised strategy on caring for the suicidal was introduced in 1994. A further review by Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Prisons is now underway and will help to refine strategies further.

Coroners

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department in what circumstances a High Court judge can sit as a coroner; and on how many occasions this has happened in the last 10 years. [43182]

Mr. George Howarth: It is open to doubt whether a High Court judge has the jurisdiction to act as a coroner, and none has done so in recent years.

Prisoners

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if the advice contained in Section Two: Board report of Form HDC (4) in the draft guidance to governors on the eligibility of prisoners for early release on home detention curfew applies in the case of prisoners required to register under Part I of the Sex Offenders Act 1997; [42356]

(2) if prisoners required to register under Part I of the Sex Offenders Act 1997 will not be eligible to apply for early release on home detention curfew; [42353]

(3) pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Brigg and Goole (Mr. Cawsey) of 12 May 1998, Official Report, column 70, if he will define the exceptional circumstances in which prisoners who are required to register under Part I of the Sex Offenders Act 1997 would be released on home detention curfew; [42372]

(4) if prisoners who are required to register under Part I of the Sex Offenders Act 1997 and who apply for early release under home detention curfew are to be evaluated by any criteria under the enhanced assessment procedure which are not used in the case of other categories of prisoner required to go through the enhanced assessment procedure before early release under the home detention curfew. [42354]

Ms Quin: Any prisoner serving a sentence of four years or more will not be eligible for home detention curfew. Clause 91 of the Crime and Disorder Bill [Lords] sets out the other categories of prisoner who will be ineligible for home detention curfew, including prisoners who are serving extended sentences for sex offences under clause 55 of the Bill. My right hon. Friend has also decided that prisoners serving between three months and four years who are required to register under Part I of the Sex Offenders Act 1997 should not be tagged on home detention curfew, save in exceptional circumstances.

Specific guidance on the assessment of prisoners required to register under Part I of the Sex Offenders Act 1997 is given in paragraph 3.2 of the draft guidance on the risk assessment for home detention curfew (placed in the Library on 12 May). This states that prisoners who are convicted of an offence to which Part I of the Sex Offenders Act 1997 applies should not be placed on home detention curfew, save where there are exceptional circumstances.

This reflects our overall objective of protecting the public. Each case will be considered on its merits and only where there are exceptional circumstances will release be approved. Factors which will be considered include the circumstances of the offence, the prisoner's risk to the public and the potential supervision arrangements.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners (a) are currently eligible for release on home detention curfew and (b) will be released following (i) a standard assessment and (ii) an enhanced assessment. [42355]

Ms Quin: The latest estimate indicates that, were the scheme in force, around 7,200 prisoners would currently be eligible for home detention curfew, subject to their passing a risk assessment and having a suitable address.

All eligible prisoners will have to be considered under the standard assessment before they can be granted home detention curfew. The number of prisoners referred for further consideration under the enhanced assessment will depend on the judgment of those conducting the risk assessments in the individual cases. It is estimated that around 4,000 prisoners might be on home detention curfew at any one time.

Police (Training)

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the training consultants commissioned by the Metropolitan Police during 1997 and 1998 to date. [42806]

Mr. Michael: The Commissioner tells me that training in the Metropolitan Police is delivered on three levels: centrally; area; and divisional. He tells me that, because of the devolved nature of the Metropolitan Police, the majority of training activities and consultants are arranged at a local level in one of its Divisions or Branches. This is to allow local training or consultation to be bought according to need. As a result, the information requested is not readily available centrally and can be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

However, the Commissioner tells me that contracts for the value of £10,000 and above, and those contracts which may generate particular difficulties, are let in consultation with the Metropolitan Police's Department of Procurement and Commercial Services. He tells me that the formal contracts for training have been placed by the unit over the last year in regard to the following topics:

Public Order Strategic Command Course

Driving Techniques

Finance and Resource Manager Training

Policing Diversity

Specialist Operations Workshops

Resettlement—Outplacement Services.

The Commissioner also tells me that a number of companies have asked that confidentiality clauses be included in their contracts so that they cannot be identified. The reasons given were generally security or commercial grounds, I am told. As the Metropolitan Police have agreed to include such clauses in their contracts, the Commissioner is unable to provide me with the information requested. Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Constabulary is currently undertaking a thematic inspection of training, which will include the Metropolitan Police, and I have asked that contractual arrangements for training be included in that inspection.

Probation Services

Mr. Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department to what extent probation services provided through local authorities have (a) been expanded and (b) diminished between 1996–97 and 1997–98. [42400]

Ms Quin: Home Office cash limited current grant for the years in question, service by service, is shown in the table.

Total £ cash limit

	1996/97	1997/98
Avon	5,657,097	5,568,333
Bedfordshire	3,011,253	2,997,989
Berkshire	4,771,088	4,686,246
Cambridgeshire	3,443,008	3,393,925
Cheshire	5,147,843	5,110,514
Cleveland	4,204,430	4,364,095
Cornwall	2,233,736	2,208,707
Cumbria	3,448,005	3,385,424
Derbyshire	4,388,080	4,556,718
Devon	6,179,943	6,026,040
Dorset	3,697,043	3,593,716
Durham	3,640,662	3,601,976
Essex	7,480,624	7,413,790
Gloucestershire	3,248,583	3,202,508
Hampshire	7,793,274	7,803,939
Hereford and Worcester	3,660,065	3,594,965
Hertfordshire	4,761,433	4,734,267
Humberside	5,251,750	5,258,571
Kent	8,351,281	8,307,578
Lancashire	7,661,145	7,933,492
Leicestershire	4,614,336	4,577,699
Lincolnshire	3,249,156	3,238,827
Greater Manchester	20,456,930	20,422,394
Merseyside	12,860,645	12,585,564
Norfolk	3,508,673	3,516,190
Northamptonshire	2,894,369	2,860,597
Northumbria	10,205,589	10,105,172
Nottinghamshire	7,228,881	7,126,463
Oxfordshire and Buckinghamshire	6,393,411	6,297,623
Shropshire	2,140,708	2,111,436
Somerset	3,308,250	3,201,367
Staffordshire	6,115,628	6,046,105
Suffolk	3,067,983	3,043,987
Surrey	4,791,070	4,679,942
East Sussex	3,561,157	3,547,240
West Sussex	2,766,603	2,751,465
Warwickshire	2,889,135	2,818,192
West Midlands	21,202,578	20,923,624
Wiltshire	2,825,447	2,812,210
North Yorkshire	2,860,695	2,963,504
South Yorkshire	10,182,621	9,971,749
West Yorkshire	16,136,171	15,984,817
Inner London	32,495,559	32,033,478
North East London	7,708,497	7,616,985
South East London	5,122,339	5,061,132
South West London	3,915,125	3,837,747
Middlesex	13,936,761	13,706,116
England	314,468,662	311,584,416
Dyfed	1,766,225	1,759,966
Gwent	2,843,130	3,017,029
North Wales	3,008,587	3,137,235
Powys	650,080	648,208
South Glamorgan	3,306,567	3,259,640
Mid Glamorgan	2,854,057	2,794,663
West Glamorgan	2,741,691	2,698,843
Wales	17,170,338	17,315,584
England and Wales	331,639,000	328,900,000

Mr. Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for what reason the current and capital probation grant and credit approvals to local authorities were reduced between 1996–97 and 1997–98. [42401]

Ms Quin: Probation service budgets for 1997–98 were decided by the previous Government and announced to services before that financial year began. We adhered to those budgets after the General Election in line with our commitment to maintain public spending in 1997–98 and 1998–99 in accordance with the previous Government's spending plans.

MINISTER WITHOUT PORTFOLIO

Expenditure

29. Mr. Green: To ask the Minister without Portfolio how much public money will be spent on the Millennium Experience between the present time and the staging of the event. [42017]

Mr. Mandelson: There is no taxpayers' money allocated to the Millennium Experience project. The budget comprises a grant of £399m (net) from the Millennium Commission and forecast receipts of £359m from private sector sponsorship, visitor income and other commercial revenue. So far £93.6m of the grant from the Millennium Commission has been used.

31. Mr. Bercow: To ask the Minister without Portfolio if he will make a statement on the budget for the Millennium Experience at Greenwich. [42019]

Mr. Mandelson: As I previously informed the hon. Member, the budget for the Millennium Experience comprises a grant of £399m from the Millennium Commission and forecast receipts totalling £359m from the private sector sponsorship, visitor income and other commercial revenue. The project is on time and on budget.

Regional Exhibitions

30. Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Minister without Portfolio what plans he has to enable exhibits in the Millennium Experience to be displayed elsewhere in the United Kingdom. [42018]

Mr. Mandelson: It is too early for final decisions to be made about the future of individual exhibits beyond the year 2000, but the Government, in confirming their determination to ensure a legacy from the Millennium Experience, hope that it might be possible for elements of the exhibits to be displayed elsewhere after 2000.

Serious Play Zone

32. Ann Clwyd: To ask the Minister without Portfolio if he will make a statement on the content of games to be included in the serious play zone. [42020]

Mr. Mandelson: The detailed content of the serious play zone is currently being developed by the New Millennium Experience Company and its designers, Land Design Studios Ltd., working closely with the zone sponsor, BSkyB. The zone will explore the world of sport and leisure in the 21st century.

International Debt

33. Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Minister without Portfolio what representations he has received on linking the Millennium Experience in the UK with the experience of debt reduction or cancellation in other countries of the world. [42021]

Mr. Mandelson: I have received a number of representations on this important issue, as have my colleagues in the Treasury, the Department for International Development and the Department for Culture, Media and Sport. Representations have particularly related to the Jubilee 2000 campaign and the Bondfire project.

The Government are committed to the Heavily Indebted Poor Countries Initiative, which aims to reduce the debt burden of the world's most indebted countries to sustainable levels.

Visitors

34. Mr. Brady: To ask the Minister without Portfolio what estimate he has made of the number of people from Altrincham and Sale, West who will visit the Millennium Experience. [42023]

Mr. Mandelson: The New Millennium Experience Company estimates that 12 million visits will be made to the Millennium Experience. Between 8 and 10 million of those are likely to be from the UK, and I hope that many of those will come from Altrincham and Sale, West. I also hope that as many people as possible from the greater Manchester area and across the country participate in the associated Challenge and Millennium Festival programmes.

WALES

Small Businesses

Mr. Page: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the regulations that have been removed or amended to help small businesses since 1 May 1997. [42780]

Mr. Hain: There is only a limited volume of Wales-only legislation, however, the following regulations have been removed since 1 May 1997 to the advantage of small and other businesses:

The Food Protection (Emergency Prohibitions) (Radioactivity in Sheep) (Wales) (Partial Revocation) Order 1998 withdrew, in relation to specified areas of land in North Wales, restrictions upon the movement and slaughter of sheep.

The restrictions on fishing activities as a result of the Sea Empress disaster were withdrawn in June 1997, by the Food Protection (Emergency Prohibitions) (Oil and Chemical Pollution of Fish and Plants) (Revocation) Order 1997.

National Health Service

Mr. Denzil Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his estimate of the cost of (a) preparing a corporate plan for the NHS in Wales and (b) managing the trust reconfiguration exercise. [42597]

Mr. Win Griffiths: (a) Preliminary estimates of first year costs in preparing a corporate plan for the NHS in Wales are of the order of £250,000 including accommodation, staff and running costs. Budgets for subsequent years will be agreed in the light of progress in year one. (b) The Department's staff and other costs including consultation exercises and external assessment of proposals are estimated to be £870,000 for managing the trust reconfiguration exercise.

Details of costs which will be borne by health authorities, trusts and other bodies are not held centrally.

Sites of Special Scientific Interest

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many sites of special scientific interest there were in Wales on 31 March; and what was their total area in hectares. [42442]

Mr. Win Griffiths: At 31 March 1998 there were 942 SSSIs in Wales, with a total area of 217,807 hectares.

Community Hospitals

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much new funding is available in the current year to (a) build new community hospitals and (b) upgrade existing community hospitals; and if he will make a statement. [42432]

Mr. Win Griffiths: There is no new funding available specifically for community hospitals in 1998–99. However, almost £50 million has been made available for major capital investment in the NHS in Wales for projects ranging from the removal of asbestos at the University of Wales Dental Hospital, to the new Cancer Treatment Centre at Glan Clwyd NHS Trust. Another £47 million discretionary capital has also been made available to NHS Trusts and Health Authorities, to maintain existing facilities, including community based services.

In February this year, we were very pleased to announce a new community hospital for Chepstow, which will be built and serviced by a private company under the Private Finance Initiative (PFI). In addition, several other NHS Trusts are currently negotiating with private partners for the provision of capital services.

Occupational Health

Dr. Stoate: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what steps are being taken to make occupational health services available to staff working in primary care within the National Health Service. [43599]

Mr. Win Griffiths: It is primarily for general practitioners (GPs) as independent contractors to look after their own health and that of their staff. However, the Welsh Office has been involved in discussions with the Welsh Council of the Royal College of General Practitioners (RCGP) and the Welsh General Medical Services Committee (WGMSC) about this issue. We are also aware that some health authorities in Wales are exploring ways of setting up a service on a local basis.

Asthma

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the net ingredient cost for preparations used in the treatment of asthma (a) in total, (b) per health authority and (c) per head of population per health authority, in each of the last five years. [43695]

Mr. Win Griffiths: Information on the net ingredient cost of prescription items dispensed specifically for asthma could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

However most prescription items dispensed for the treatment of asthma fall into one of three therapeutic classes (bronchodilators, corticosteroids and cromoglycate & related therapy) and figures for these are given in the following table. It should be noted, however, that some items dispensed in these classes were not for the treatment of asthma. Prior to the setting up of the five new Health Authorities in Wales on 1 April 1996 these data were collected on the basis of Family Health Service Authorities.

	Net ingredient cost (£000)				Net ingredient cost per person(£)[2]
Family health services authority	1992–93[1]	1993–94	1994–95	1995–96	1992–93	1993–94	1994–95	1995–96
Clwyd	2,854.4	3,395.1	3,823.8	4,247.0	6.71	7.98	8.98	9.92
Dyfed	2,957.2	3,374.8	3,783.6	4,097.5	8.14	9.19	10.41	11.24
Gwent	3,150.5	3,692.8	4,096.4	4,447.6	6.84	8.01	8.87	9.64
Gwynedd	1,763.7	2,114.1	2,372.3	2,635.9	7.07	8.46	9.49	10.55
Mid Glamorgan	4,832.7	5,582.1	6,415.9	7,108.8	8.54	9.86	11.32	12.59
Powys	863.1	981.9	1,067.8	1,177.6	6.68	7.55	8.20	8.99
South Glamorgan	3,215.2	3,659.7	4,006.5	4,336.6	7.45	8.42	9.16	9.87
West Glamorgan	3,132.6	3,671.1	3,984.5	4,291.8	8.17	9.50	10.29	11.1
Wales	22,770.1	26,471.6	29,550.7	32,342.8	7.57	8.76	9.78	10.69

Health Authority	Net ingredient cost (£000) 1996–97	Net ingredient cost per person (£)[2] 1996–97
Bro Taf	8,724.7	11.66
Dyfed Powys	5,685.8	11.47
Gwent	6,369.1	10.83
Morgannwg	6,526.7	12.29
North Wales	7,388.4	10.8
Wales	34,694.8	11.38

[1] The figure for Wales includes net ingredient costs where the Family Health Service Authority was unidentified
[2] Persons on NHS prescribing and dispensing lists at 31 March

Further Education

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what has been the budget for further education in each year since incorporation and what the budget will be for 1998–99; and what percentage change has occurred since incorporation. [42646]

Mr. Hain [pursuant to his reply, 21 May 1998, c. 472]: I regret the information that my hon. Friend was provided was incorrect. The correct answer is as follows:

The annual budgets made available to the Further Education Funding Council for Wales (FEFCW) on a cash basis for the period 1993–99 are set out in the table.

Financial year	FEFCW Budget (£ million)	Percentage change
1993–94	143.3	—
1994–95	160.0	11.7
1995–96	170.6	6.6
1996–97	175.9	3.1
1997–98	178.0	1.2
1998–99	178.5	0.3

NORTHERN IRELAND

Ministerial Visits

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will list in respect of each Northern Ireland Minister the (a) nights which they have spent in Northern Ireland since 1 May 1996, (b) arts events in Northern Ireland attended, (c) education and sports events in Northern Ireland attended, (d) voluntary sector events in Northern Ireland attended and (e) events relating to the tackling of unemployment in Northern Ireland attended. [29850]

Mr. Paul Murphy [holding answer 19 February 1998]: Information for the Northern Ireland Ministers is as follows:

	(a)	(b)	(c)	(d)	(e)
1 May 1996–30 April 1997
Sir Patrick Mayhew	172	4	13	7	3
Sir John Wheeler	47	10	4	0	0
Michael Ancram	88	6	25	4	0
Malcolm Moss	69	0	0	5	0
Baroness Denton	109	8	16	4	32
1 May 1997–18 February 1998
Dr. Marjorie Mowlam	69	1	4	6	1
Paul Murphy	119	1	1	0	0
Adam Ingram	67	0	3	0	19
Tony Worthington	97	11	42	21	15
Lord Dubs	85	9	6	4	10

Consultation Papers

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will list the consultation papers published since 1 May 1997 giving the date of publication, closing date for submissions and the number of respondents. [42254]

Mr. Paul Murphy: The information requested has been placed in the Library.

Employee Travel

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will estimate the cost of employee travel on office business, broken down into (a) fuel allowances, (b) unproductive time during travel, (c) other costs related to car transport and (d) costs related to public transport, for (i) 1994–95, (ii) 1995–96, (iii) 1996–97 and (iv) 1997–98. [32438]

Mr. Paul Murphy [holding answer 3 March 1998]: The information for the Northern Ireland Office and the Northern Ireland Departments is as follows:[1]

£000

Year	Fuel allowances	Other costs[2]	Public transport[2]
1994–95[3,4]	9,215	152	2,830
1995–96[4]	8,786	217	4,206
1996–97[4]	10,299	266	4,366
1997–98	9,644	264	2,372

[1] The information on the cost of unproductive time during travel is not available

[2] The Northern Ireland Office and the Department of Agriculture could not split cost between Other Costs and Public Transport and a total figure is included in figure work at Public Transport

[3] The Department of Finance and Personnel could provide information for 1994–95 in all categories only at disproportionate cost

[4] Prior to 1997–98 the Prisons accounting system could not split travel and subsistence payments

Civil Servants

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will estimate the number and percentage of civil servants in her Department, at each grade including and above higher executive officer who (a) attended university and (b) attended either Oxford or Cambridge University. [33068]

Mr. Paul Murphy [holding answer 9 March 1998]: The information for the Northern Ireland Office and the Northern Ireland Departments is as follows:

Grade	Attended university	Percentage of grade
Senior Civil Service	122	83
Grade 6	56	90
Grade 7	221	60
Deputy Principal (SEO)	254	44
Staff Officer (HEO)	249	28
Professional and Technical Grades	1,113	72

Notes:

1. The figures for attendance at university have been completed on the basis that staff with a degree level qualification have attended university.

2. Information on attendance at Oxford or Cambridge University is not readily available.

3. Figures are not included for the Department of the Environment and the Northern Ireland Office (London) who could provide the information only at disproportionate cost.

Reproductive Health Care

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what estimates he has made of the costs of extending reproductive health care and abortion services in Northern Ireland; and which aspects will receive priority. [42685]

Mr. Worthington: No estimate of costs for extending reproductive health care and abortion services in Northern Ireland has been made. The provision of infertility services is a matter for the Health and Social Services Boards which are at present engaged in reviews of the infertility services provided to their local populations. Abortions are illegal in Northern Ireland except where necessary to save the life of the mother or where continuation of the pregnancy would involve risk of serious injury to her physical or mental health.

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will ensure that the people of Northern Ireland have the same access to reproductive health care and abortion services as is available in England and Wales. [42567]

Mr. Worthington: As in England and Wales, where the provision of infertility services is a matter for the health authorities, the provision of infertility services in Northern Ireland is a matter for the Health and Social Services Boards, which are at present engaged in reviews of the services provided to their local populations. Abortion is illegal in Northern Ireland except where necessary to save the life of the mother or where continuation of the pregnancy would involve risk of serious injury to her physical or mental health. It would therefore not be lawful to grant access to abortion services on the same grounds as in England and Wales, where the law is different.

Petroleum Products

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment she has made of the effect of the illegal importation of petroleum products into Northern Ireland on (a) ancillary industries, (b) rural employment and (c) the rural economy; and if she will make a statement. [42890]

Mr. Ingram: Illegal importation of petroleum products into Northern Ireland is a matter for HM Customs and Excise and the Treasury. Treasury Ministers are aware of the Petrol Retailers Association's concerns about the economic effects and Customs are actively deploying resources to counter the threats posed to the revenue and to the Northern Ireland business community.

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland for what reasons she declined to meet the officers of the Petrol Retailers Association to discuss the illegal importation of petroleum products into Northern Ireland; and if she will make a statement. [42881]

Mr. Ingram: The petrol Retailers Association wrote to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State expressing their concerns about illegal importation of petroleum products into Northern Ireland and requesting a meeting. Illegal importation of products across UK national boundaries is a matter for HM Customs and Excise and the Treasury. A response from the Financial Secretary to the Treasury has issued been to the Association.

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what additional measures are being taken by the Royal Ulster Constabulary to intercept commercial vehicles transporting motor fuel products into Northern Ireland; and if she will make a statement. [43448]

Mr. Ingram: The RUC has been liaising with a multi-national oil company and HM Customs and Excise. As a result a strategic, co-ordinated and intelligence led plan is being developed to address this problem effectively.

A series of additional tactics and operational measures are now being actively considered.

Small Businesses

Mr. Page: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will list the regulations that have been removed or amended to help small businesses since 1 May 1997. [42779]

Mr. Ingram: During the period 1 May 1997 to 30 April 1998 small businesses in Northern Ireland benefited from the repeal or amendment of the following regulations.

Health and Safety (Miscellaneous Fees Amendment) Regulations (NI) 1997

Motor Vehicle Testing (Amendment) Regulations (NI) 1998

Goods Vehicles Testing (Amendment) Regulations (NI) 1998

Motor Vehicles (Construction and Use) (Amendment) Regulations (NI) 1998

Planning (Control of Advertisements) (Amendment) Regulations (NI) 1998.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Fines (Lincolnshire)

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what was the total amount in fines levied (a) by courts in Lincolnshire, (b) on residents of Lincolnshire and (c) on residents of South Holland and the Deepings in the most recent available year. [43933]

Mr. Hoon: (a) The total fines imposed by Lincolnshire magistrates' courts in 1997 was £4.4m. (b) This Department does not hold any information on the amount of fines imposed by magistrates' courts on residents of Lincolnshire and this information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. (c) This Department does not hold any information on the amount of fines imposed by magistrates' courts on residents of South Holland and The Deepings and this information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Public Trust Office

Mr. Hammond: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will list the staff/client ratio at the Public Trust Office in each year since 1990. [43957]

Mr. Hoon: It is only from the 1993–94 financial year that caseload figures in the Public Trust Office have been monitored on the same basis. Although figures prior to 1993–94 exist, they have not been formulated in the same manner as those available from that date. On this basis I am able to provide the staff/client ratio from 1993–94.

1993–94: 457 clients per member of staff;

1994–95: 497;

1995–96: 517;

1996–97: 532; and

1997–98: 547.

Mr. Hammond: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what guidelines are followed by the Public Trust Office to keep next of kin informed about its involvement in each case. [43953]

Mr. Hoon: Both the Court of Protection and the Public Trust Office treat each case on its merits, and endeavour, using the information available, to try and do what the client (the mentally incapable person) would wish. If this involves close liaison and involvement with the next of kin, this is done.

However, the Mental Health area is not required to keep next of kin involved in each case on the grounds of confidentiality. If the individual was not suffering from a mental illness which meant that they were unable to manage their own financial affairs, they would not necessarily wish their next of kin to be informed of the current position regarding their finances. In some cases people would not, under any circumstances, wish next of kin involved in any way whatever. Each case must be judged on its individual merits.

Mr. Hammond: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many visitors are employed at the Public Trust Office; and how many visits each made per client in each year since 1990. [43956]

Mr. Hoon: The Public Trust Office assumed responsibility for the Lord Chancellor's General Visitors with effect from April 1996—prior to that the Visitors were employees of the Lord Chancellor's Department. There are currently six General Visitors who are appointed on a self-employed basis. Statistics showing the number of visits completed are available only from 1992–93 and are as follows:

	Visits completed
1992–93	1,500
1993–94	1,300
1994–95	850
1995–96	790
1996–97	1,680
1997–98	1,500

Mr. Hammond: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many staff were employed by the Public Trust Office in each year since 1990. [43958]

Mr. Hoon: The figures provided are based on permanent staff in post plus casuals. The figures supplied show full time equivalents and exclude those staff "off strength" e.g. those staff on maternity or career breaks, or on unpaid leave.

	Number
1989–90	591.5
1990–91	590
1991–92	580
1992–93	592
1993–94	572
1994–95	528
1995–96	550
1996–97	558.5
1997–98	553

Mr. Faber: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what plans he has to review the operation of the Public Trust Office. [43887]

Mr. Hoon: As the Public Trust Office became an executive agency in 1994, it will be subject to the usual Quinquennial agency review which must be completed in 1999. As is normal with such reviews, this will include a review of all the Public Trust Office's functions.

Court of Protection

Mr. Hammond: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what checks are made by the Court of Protection before approving a loan. [43955]

Mr. Hoon: The exercise by the Court of Protection of its discretion in approving a loan is a judicial matter and its exercise varies according to the circumstances of each particular case.

In approving a loan, the Court has regard to the requirements of the relevant Sections of the Mental Health Act 1983, the Enduring Powers of Attorney Act 1985, the Court of Protection Rules 1994, the Court of Protection (Enduring Powers of Attorney) Rules 1994 and relevant case precedent as necessary in the particular circumstances of the case.

Mr. Hammond: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what changes have occurred in the relationship between the Court of Protection and the Public Trust Office since the latter became an executive agency in 1994. [43954]

Mr. Hoon: There has been little change in the relationship between the Court of Protection and the Public Trust Office since 1990, except that the Court of Protection Rules 1994 and the review of the Public Trust Office's Framework Document in 1997 defined the functions and roles of each more clearly.

Personal Injury Cases

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what research he has commissioned or undertaken into the effect of his proposals for the (a) wider introduction of conditional fee arrangements and (b) allocation of legal aid in personal injury cases from the consumer's perspective. [42586]

Mr. Hoon: Organisations representing consumers have been consulted during the development of these proposals and have responded to the consultation paper. All the responses are being analysed and we intend to publish our response to the consultation in due course.

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what evaluation he has made of the pre-action protocols piloted by nine firms of solicitors and six insurers since October 1997; and if he will publish his conclusions, indicating the evidence underlying them. [42585]

Mr. Hoon: The pilot of the pre-action protocol for personal injury cases will continue until the end of August. The working group responsible for drafting the protocol, whose membership includes insurers and solicitors, and which is running the pilot, has agreed that officials of the Lord Chancellor's Department should evaluate the data produced by the pilot at its conclusion. Any decision on the publication of the results would be a matter for the working group.

Legal Aid

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what evaluation he has made of the Law Society's research undertaken by Sheffield University, and the Law Society's response to his Department's research undertaken by KPMG into conditional fees; and if he will publish his conclusions and the evidence underlying them. [42584]

Mr. Hoon: The Law Society's research into conditional fees and their response to the consultation paper Access to Justice with Conditional Fees are being analysed at the moment, together with all the other responses to the consultation paper. We intend to publish our response to the public consultation as soon as the analysis is complete and we have considered the results.

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many firms of solicitors in England and Wales undertook legal aid work in each of the last five years for which figures are available; what was the average income from legal aid, excluding VAT and disbursements, of those firms in each of those years; and how many of these firms were not included in his answer to the hon. Member for West Lancashire (Mr. Pickthall) on 28 April 1998, Official Report, column 65. [42598]

Mr. Hoon: The information requested is not available in the form requested and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. All solicitors' firms undertaking legal aid work are required to hold a Legal Aid Board account number to which payments are made. However, the payment records do not provide an accurate figure for the number of firms doing legal aid work, since a single firm may have more than one office, and therefore account number.

Information on the range of payments for various categories of legal aid made by the Legal Aid Board to solicitors offices are published in its annual report each year. In the 1996–97 annual report, Table General 5 relates to payments made, within each range, to the number of solicitors' offices by each legal aid area. The payments are inclusive of VAT and disbursements as these are not recorded separately.

However, it should be noted that the tables published prior to 1996–97 will not be comparable with those published in preceding annual reports as the tables were revised to make them more relevant to current developments in legal aid (paragraph 4.5 to Section 4 of the 1996–97 report refers). As of 1996–97, the area is the legal aid area in which the solicitor's office is situated.

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many barristers in England and Wales undertook legal aid work in each of the last five years for which figures are available; what was the average income from legal aid, excluding VAT, of those barristers in each of those years; and how many of those barristers were not included in his parliamentary answer to the hon. Member for West Lancashire (Mr. Pickthall) on 28 April 1998, Official Report, column 65. [42599]

Mr. Hoon: The information is not readily available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. Payments made to counsel for legal aid work are recorded by the Legal Aid Board by range of payments and category of work only. This means that the statistics contained in the Board's Annual Report do not accurately reflect the number of barristers undertaking legal aid work, as each barrister may appear in a number of categories and ranges of payment.

Information on the range of payments for various types of legal aid made by the Legal Aid Board to counsel are published in its annual report each year. In the 1996–97 annual report, Table General 9 relates to payments made to counsel (Table General 7 in preceding annual reports). The payments are inclusive of VAT and disbursements as these are not recorded separately. However, it should be noted that the tables published prior to 1996–97 will not be comparable with those published in preceding annual reports as the tables were revised to make them more relevant to current developments in legal aid (paragraph 4.5 to Section 4 of the 1996–97 report refers).

Defamation Act

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will list the dates when those parts of the Defamation Act 1996 not yet in force are to come into force; and when the attendant rules of court will become effective. [42456]

Mr. Hoon: The Government intend to bring the remaining provisions of the Defamation Act 1996 (including those which apply to Scotland) into force as soon as reasonably practicable. All those provisions will require secondary legislation to make them fully effective. We will make the necessary amendments to the Rules of Court and other Orders at the same time.

Public Bodies

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department (1) what is the average attendance fee of (a) male and (b) female members of boards of non-departmental public bodies responsible to his Department; [42845]

(2) what is the average salary of (a) male and (b) female members of boards of non-departmental public bodies responsible to his Department. [42844]

Mr. Hoon: The majority of board members of non-departmental pubic bodies give their time and services voluntarily and receive no payment other than normal travel and subsistence expenses. Where members do receive remuneration, this can vary between an annual salary, an honorarium or an attendance fee (which itself can be a daily rate or a half-daily rate, or calculated on a per meeting or per case basis). Individuals' remuneration therefore is not directly comparable. Full details of all payments to board members of non-departmental bodies, by gender, are given in the Cabinet Office publication 'Public Bodies'. Copies of 'Public Bodies 1997' are available in the Libraries of the House.

Public Appointments

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department when his Department's action plan for increasing the number of women holding public appointments will be published; and if he will place a copy in the Library. [42846]

Mr. Hoon: My Department's action plan will be published shortly. Copies will be placed in the Libraries of the House.

Public Inquiries

Maria Eagle: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what provisions and at what cost were made out of public funds in respect of costs of legal representation for the families and relatives of victims at the public inquiries into the following tragedies (a) Piper Alpha, (b) Hillsborough, (c) King's Cross, (d) the Marchioness, (e) the Clapham rail crash, (f) the MV Derbyshire, (first inquiry) and (g) Stephen Lawrence's murder; and in each case how the costs were (i) agreed, (ii) verified and (iii) disbursed. [42974]

Ms Glenda Jackson: I have been asked to reply.

I regret that the information requested is not obtainable except at disproportionate cost.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Fur Farming

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to implement the Council of Europe's recommendations regarding fur farming. [43706]

Mr. Morley: The revision of the recommendations regarding fur farming currently being undertaken in the Council of Europe will provide the sound scientific justification for any new welfare rules. We will consider legislating on the basis of the Council of Europe's work if it makes sense to do so once we have established the timetable for phasing out fur farming in Great Britain.

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what advice ADAS is currently giving fur factory farms with regard to investments in and improvements to their premises. [43707]

Mr. Morley: ADAS was privatised on 1 April 1997. Any services provided to fur farmers by ADAS are a matter for the parties concerned, and costs are met by the fur farms.

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is his timetable for banning fur factory farming; and what factors govern this timetable. [43708]

Mr. Morley: The Government's firm intention is to ban fur farming as soon as practicable. Such a ban must be implemented in accordance with national and international law and I am currently considering how our intention can best be implemented. An announcement will be made once I have decided how to proceed and there will be public consultation on any proposals for legislation to ban fur farming.

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many mink and fox fur factory farms there are by county. [43705]

Mr. Morley: As at 28 May 1998, there were the following mink farms in England:

County	Number of licensed mink farms
Cornwall	1
Dorset	1
Hampshire	1
Isle of Wight	1
Lancashire	6
Northumberland	1
South Yorkshire	1
Staffordshire	1
West Yorkshire	2
Total	15

There is no requirement to register fox fur farms. However, I am not aware of any in England.

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received from fur breeders opposing the Government's policy on fur breeding. [43710]

Mr. Morley: A public consultation letter seeking comments on how I proposed to prohibit the keeping of mink and other species for fur was issued on 5 August 1997. Since then, the Ministry has received 7 representations from fur breeding interests, including the British Fur Trade Association, the Fur Breeders Association of the UK and the International Fur Trade Federation, all opposing the Government's policy on fur farming.

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what guidance has been given to owners of fur factory farms with regard to the Government's policy on fur breeding. [43704]

Mr. Morley: All the current mink farm licensees have been informed in writing that it is the Government's intention to ban the keeping of mink for fur in this country and that I am considering how this intention may best be implemented.

Animal Welfare

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on his policy on the proposed EU update to Directive 88/166/EEC regarding the welfare of hens. [43886]

Mr. Morley: We are pleased that the Commission has now submitted to the Council of Ministers its proposals to set improved welfare standards for laying hens in cages and to introduce standards for alternative systems. The proposals will require thorough technical discussion, which we have already set going under our Presidency. Our aim is to secure a measure which significantly raises minimum welfare standards for laying hens throughout the European Union and leads to a phase-out of the battery cage.

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the adequacy of the current welfare requirements for free range hens. [43728]

Mr. Morley: The welfare of laying hens in free range systems is covered by a Welfare Code made under the Agriculture (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1968. We would like in addition to see firm statutory requirements adopted at the EU level on the welfare of hens in alternative systems: we will be working to secure such requirements in the EU negotiation which is now under way on the Commission's recent proposals in this area.

Marine Research Laboratory

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement about the future of the Marine Research Laboratory in Burnham-on-Crouch. [43209]

Mr. Morley: The laboratory at Burnham-on-Crouch is part of the Centre for Environment, Fisheries and Aquaculture Science (CEFAS), an Executive Agency of the Department. As part of its obligation to provide an efficient and effective scientific service, CEFAS is reviewing its long-term requirements for sites and specialist research facilities. The objective of the review is to ensure that CEFAS has appropriate facilities to support first class science, whilst recognising the need for the Agency to recover its full costs and offer affordable services. It is essential to develop flexible facilities, so that CEFAS can respond quickly to changing work opportunities.

The current work programme at Burnham fully occupies the site, and staff numbers have been increasing. There is no expectation that this situation will change significantly in the near future. The estate review will aim to establish the long-term costs and benefits of maintaining all CEFAS sites, including that at Burnham. It will assess the need for future investment in facilities, taking account of the views of the MAFF customers who commission work at CEFAS on their likely requirements, and on the prospects of acquiring new non-MAFF business.

Common Fisheries Policy

Mr. Gill: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement concerning his meeting with National Federation of Fisheries Organisations and the Scottish Fishermen's Federation on 30 April; and what issues raised at that meeting will be taken forward to the next meeting of fisheries ministers. [43872]

Mr. Morley: At my meeting with the National Federation of Fishermen's Organisations and Scottish Fishermen's Federation on 30 April we discussed their joint paper on the future of the Common Fisheries Policy after 2002.

I warmly welcomed the joint strategy as a good basis for discussion. Over the coming months the UK industry will discuss the paper with their counterparts in other Member States and there will be further discussions among ourselves in this country.

Reform of the CFP is a continuous process, and the June Fisheries Council will be looking at reform of the marketing regime as well as proposals for changes to the rules on enforcement. The Commission will also be making a report on preparation for the 2002 review.

Mr. Gill: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what amendment to the Treaty of Rome established the without time limit derogation of national allocation of quota from the equal access principle; [43819]

(2) pursuant to his answer of 6 May 1998, Official Report, column 421, if the common resource principle is part of Council Regulation EEC 3760/92. [43816]

Mr. Morley: The principle of equal access to fishing grounds is not set down in the EC Treaty but in Council Regulation (EEC) No. 2141/70. Council Regulation (EEC) No. 3760/92 heavily qualifies the principle so far as the practical operation of the Common Fisheries Policy is concerned.

Food Safety

Mr. Cox: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list his Department's bodies that have responsibility for food safety and hygiene; and if he will make a statement. [43629]

Mr. Rooker: The bodies reporting to the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, or jointly to the Minister and other Secretaries of State, which are concerned wholly or partially with food safety and hygiene, or which provide relevant services, are as follows:

Executive Agencies

- Meat Hygiene Service
- Pesticides Safety Directorate
- Veterinary Medicines Directorate
- Central Science Laboratory
- Farming and Rural Conservation Agency

Advisory bodies

- Advisory Committee on Microbiological Safety of Food
- Advisory Committee on Novel Foods and Processes
- Advisory Committee on Pesticides
- Consumer Panel
- Epidemiology of Foodborne Infections Group
- Food Advisory Committee
- Microbiological Food Surveillance Group
- Microbiological Safety of Food Funders Group
- Spongiform Encephalopathy Advisory Committee
- Veterinary Products Committee
- Working Party on Chemical Contaminants in Food
- Working Party on Chemical Migration from Materials and Articles in Contact with Food
- Working Party on Dietary Surveys
- Working Party on Food Additives
- Working Party on Pesticide Residues in Food
- Working Party on Radionuclides in Food
- Working Party on Veterinary Residues in Food

Other

- BSE Regulatory Forum
- Meat Hygiene Appeals Tribunal.

Antibiotic Growth Promoters

Dr. Ladyman: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what estimates his Department has made of the increased cost to the consumer if antibiotic growth promoters were banned in the production of poultry, pigs and beef. [43793]

Mr. Rooker: No such estimates have been made. However, figures produced by the European Federation of Feed Additive Manufacturers indicate that withdrawal of antibiotic growth promoters could result in increased production costs of up to 10 per cent., with a cost to EU farmers and consumers of almost ecu 2,500 million per year.

Dr. Ladyman: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what studies his Department has made of the experience of countries which have banned the use of antibiotic growth promoters in animal husbandry. [43792]

Mr. Rooker: The use of antibiotic growth promoters is controlled under EC Directive 70/524/EEC. Information in support of bans in certain Member states has been submitted to the European Commission's Scientific Committee on Animal Nutrition (SCAN). This information has either already been considered by the UK's independent scientific Veterinary Products Committee, which advises Agriculture and Health Ministers, or is to be reviewed by the Committee shortly.

Dr. Ladyman: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what estimates he has made of the increased levels of (a) nitrates and (b) phosphates which will be excreted if antibiotic growth promoters are banned in the production of pigs, poultry and cattle. [43791]

Mr. Rooker: Figures from the European Federation of Animal Feed Additive Manufacturers and the National Office of Animal Health indicate that withdrawal of antibiotic growth promoters in France, Germany and the UK would result in the excretion of an additional 78,000 tonnes of nitrogen and 15,000 tones of phosphorus each year.

Green-top Milk

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many people have suffered food poisoning in each of the last 10 years where the source of infection has been green top milk. [43187]

Mr. Rooker: The majority of food poisoning cases are sporadic and the vehicle of infection is not known. Cases may also occur as part of outbreaks and for some of these the vehicle of infection may be established. The latest information on the number of people infected in general outbreaks of infectious intestinal disease in England and Wales associated with all unpasteurised milk will be made available in a detailed table to be placed in the House of Commons Library shortly. However, information is not available specifically on sporadic cases associated with green top or unpasteurised cows' drinking milk.

SCOTLAND

Buildings Refurbishment

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his estimate of the cost of buildings refurbishment carried out by his Department in (a) 1995–96, (b) 1996–97, (c) 1997–98 to date and (d) 1997–98 full year; and if he will make a statement. [26644]

Mr. Dewar [holding answer 5 February 1998]: The information set out below relates to buildings owned by The Scottish Office and its associated Departments and Agencies, with the exception of the Scottish Prison Service, for which figures could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

The total cost of buildings refurbishment for the years requested are:

	£
1995–96	8,629,204
1996–97	13,708,322
1997–98 full year	7,276,063

The refurbishment work has been carried out on a range of buildings, offices and specialist facilities and has been necessary either to preserve the fabric of the buildings or to bring systems up to a modern standard. The greater part of the expenditure relates to the refurbishment of court buildings.

Public Appointments

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many people appointed to (a) the Scottish Office and (b) quangos were (i) females, (ii) males, (iii) from ethnic minorities and (iv) registered disabled in (1) 1995–96, (2) 1996–97, (3) January to April 1997 and (4) since 1 May 1997. [41811]

Mr. Dewar [holding answer 13 May 1998]: The number of permanent staff appointed to the Scottish Office and Quangos, together with details of sex, ethnicity and disability are shown in the table.

	Female	Male	Ethnic Minority	Disabled
The Scottish Office and its Executive Agencies (excl SPS)
Staff appointed in:
1995–96	88	148	1	3
1996–97	126	175	3	1
1 January 1997 to 30 April 1997	54	83	0	0
1 May 1997 to 30 April 1998	137	203	0	1
The Scottish Prison Service
Staff appointed in:
1995–96	212	486	2	0
1996–97	153	370	2	0
1 January 1997 to 30 April 1997	55	133	0	0
1 May 1997 to 30 April 1998	137	322	4	1
Quangos
Staff appointed in:
1995–96	280	418	2	1
1996–97	460	533	4	1
1 January 1997 to 30 April 1997	51	129	3	0
1 May 1997 to 30 April 1998	497	442	5	3

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when his Department's action plan for increasing the number of women holding public appointments will be published; and if he will place a copy in the Library. [42874]

Mr. McLeish: The Scottish Office action plan will be published shortly. Copies will be placed in the Libraries of the House.

Police Complaints

Mr. Gorrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many formal complaints have been made in each of the last five years against (a) Scottish chief constables and (b) deputy and assistant chief constables; how they were dealt with; and what the outcome was of each complaint. [42431]

Mr. McLeish: This information is not held centrally. Complaints made against chief constables, deputy and assistant chief constables are dealt with by the relevant police authorities.

Mr. Gorrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) how his Department ensures that police boards have an appropriate mechanism for dealing with formal complaints against the chief constable or deputy or assistant chief constables; [42428]

(2) what system each police board has in place to deal with formal complaints against the chief constable or deputy or assistant chief constables. [42427]

Mr. McLeish: It is for each police board to decide what system to put in place to discharge its statutory duty to keep itself informed as to the manner in which the Chief Constable handles complaints by members of the public. If it is reasonably believed that a disciplinary offence may have been committed by a senior officer, the police authority must institute procedures set out in the Police (Conduct) (Senior Officers) (Scotland) Regulations 1996. The Secretary of State has no locus to ensure that the police board's mechanism is appropriate.

Green Belt

Mr. Gorrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on his policy regarding the conservation of the Green Belt and of the countryside around cities and towns. [42546]

Mr. Macdonald: The Government are committed to ensuring the long term protection of Scotland's green belts and countryside, whilst looking to planning authorities to ensure through their development plans that their policies remain relevant to local circumstances and to reflect those policies in their planning decisions.

Mr. Gorrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list planning approvals allowing development in the Green Belt in Scotland since 1 January 1995, indicating the council concerned, the nature, date, location and extent of each development, the developer and whether approval was given by the council or by his Department. [42429]

Mr. Macdonald: Information on decisions taken by councils allowing development in the Green Belt is not held centrally. From 1 January 1995 to 31 December 1997 my right hon. Friend has granted approval for the applications listed in the table. The majority of these decisions were appeal decisions delegated to The Scottish Office Inquiry Reporters Unit.

Authority	Applicant	Development	Location	Ground area	Approved
North Lanarkshire	—	Letting bedroom block	Dalziel Park, Motherwell	—	15.12.97
North Lanarkshire	Peter D. Stirling Ltd	Infilling and recycling/reuse of construction waste	Drumcavel Quarry, Mount Ellen	—	06.08.97
South Lanarkshire	Mrs. M. Ingram	1 house	Muir Farm, Carmunnock, Glasgow	1.36ha	27.11.97
Renfrewshire	Linzi and William Gorman	Storage	Yardfoot Farm, Lochwinnoch	180m^2	19.11.97
South Ayrshire	Telecoms Tower and Compound	Mercury Personal Communications	Raith Hill, Prestwick	96m^2	21.07.97
East Dunbartonshire	Cora Foundation/St. Mary's Kenmure	Residential, teaching and leisure	St. Mary's Road, Bishopbriggs	366m^2	10.07.98
East Dunbartonshire	McCann, Lindsay Ltd.	Extension to hard standing, industry	Craigton Works, Craigton, Milngavie	—	06.05.97
East Dunbartonshire	Mr. J. Stark	1 House	Alton Farm, Antermony Road, Milton of Campsie	—	09.10.96
Falkirk	Goalday	Landfill	Avondale Farm, Polmont, Falkirk	80ha	15.11.96
Falkirk	Falkirk Football and Athletic Club	Football stadium	Westfield Road, Falkirk	30ha	03.06.96
Kyle and Carrick	—	House and garage	12 Monktonhill Road, Southwoods, Troon	—	10.02.97
Kyle and Carrick	Bett/Summerbridge	Retail	Heathfield/Whitletts, Ayr	—	24.04.96
Midlothian	—	Private housing (45) development	Dalkeith	—	22.03.95
Hamilton	George Wilson (Stonehouse) Ltd.	175 Houses	Strathaven Road/Carscallan Road, Hamilton	7.082ha	06.08.96
Strathkelvin	Mr. Kohli	House extension and garage	Lochview, Bardavie	—	16.04.96
Strathkelvin	Greater Glasgow Community and Mental Health Services	Offices to housing (change of use)	The White House, Lennox Castle, Lennoxtown	—	15.01.96
Strathkelvin	Mr. Kohli	Entrance vestibule and double garage	Lochview, Bardavie	—	31.01.95
Strathkelvin	Beazer Homes	Housing	Garnhart Estate	9ha	11.96
Aberdeen	Stewart Milne Homes Ltd.	Housing	Contlaw Road, Milltimber	15ha	06.03.96
Aberdeen	Mr. F. J. McLean	1 House (change of use from store)	West Lasts, Peterculter	—	10.05.95
Edinburgh	Gogar Curling Club	Extension to Curling Club	Gogar Station Road, Edinburgh	1ha	30.01.96

Authority	Applicant	Development	Location	Ground area	Approved
Grampian	J. Hutchison	2 Holiday chalets	Elrick Farm, Ridge of Muchalls, by Stonehaven	—	13.07.95
Grampian	C&R Fraser	Housing	Jellieshillock, Maryculter, Kincardine	—	25.01.95
Kincardine and Deeside	Trustees of late G. A. M. Saunders	Housing	Monduff, Newtonhill	—	15.05.95
East Kilbride	Lightbody Ltd.	Housing	Hamilton Road, Strathaven	3.4ha	01.96
East Kilbride	Whiteshawgate Ltd.	Housing	Hamilton Road, Strathaven	6.9ha	01.96
Renfrew	—	Housing	Kirktonfield Road, Neilston	—	16.03.95
Strathclyde	Wimpey Homes Holdings Ltd.	Housing	South of Wester Cleddons Road and West of Westerhill Farm	30ha	06.02.95

Source:
The Planning Exchange (details of applicant's name and ground area are not recorded in every instance)

Mr. Gorrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the councils which have sought approval since 1 January 1995 to remove protection from land previously designated as green belt and the date and the area of land involved in each case. [42446]

Mr. Macdonald: This information is not available in the form requested. However, the table indicates the housing provision in the green belt for which approval has been sought for release by the former regional councils since 1 January 1995.

Authority	Green belt	Housing allocation	Date of submission
Strathclyde Regional Council	Ayr, Prestwick, Troon	650	November 1995
Strathclyde Regional Council	Greater Glasgow	170	November 1995
Lothian Regional Council	Edinburgh	Up to 4,000	January 1995

Notes:
1. The Grampian Structure Plan, submitted for approval in February 1995, includes a green belt exceptions policy which allows for limited release of land for housing and business use. The extent of these releases remains to be defined and quantified through the relevant Local Plans.
2. The Edinburgh Green Belt is the subject of a review following modification of the Lothian Structure Plan by the Secretary of State.

Mr. Gorrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the parts of Scotland designated as Green Belt, indicating the areas covered. [42433]

Mr. Macdonald: There are six designated green belts in Scotland. The boundaries of individual green belts are defined in the relevant local authorities' local plans which can be viewed at the offices of the authority concerned. As at January 1998 the area covered by such designation is as follows:

Green belt	Area (hectares)
Aberdeen	23,039
Ayr, Prestwick and Troon	3,024
Clackmannan	981
Falkirk and Grangemouth	3,803
Glasgow and Clyde Valley	109,917
Edinburgh	15,869
Total	156,633

Source:
The Scottish Office Geographic Information Service—based on information in Local Plans.

Scottish National Sleep Laboratory

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will make a statement on his Department's funding for the Scottish National Sleep Laboratory for (a) 1998 and (b) each year since 1992; [42717]

(2) how many people are currently on waiting lists to be treated at the Scottish National Sleep Laboratory; [42718]

(3) what was the average length of time for which a patient had to wait for treatment at the Scottish National Sleep Centre in the last year for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [42719]

Mr. Galbraith: Until 31 March 1996 funding for the Scottish National Sleep Laboratory was provided centrally by the National Services Division of the Common Services Agency. Funding from 1992 until 1996 was as follows:

Financial year	£
1992–93	54,525
1993–94	295,916
1994–95	286,987
1995–96	519,338

Planning of sleep disorder services was devolved to Health Boards with effect from 1996–97 and funds were allocated to them on a weighted basis. Exceptionally in 1997–98, the Management Executive granted an additional allocation of £150,000 to the Laboratory. There are currently 416 people waiting for a new out-patient appointment, 188 waiting for a diagnostic study, and 220 waiting to start treatment.

The waiting time for a new out-patient appointment is on average 28 weeks, for diagnostic study 2.5 months and for the start of treatment 10 months.

Association of Chief Police Officers

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the funds and assistance provided in each year since 1994–95 to the Association of Chief Police Officers in Scotland by (a) the Scottish Office, (b) other Government departments and (c) each police authority or board. [42409]

Mr. McLeish: The assistance provided by The Scottish Office in respect of the staff salaries and administrative costs incurred by the Association of Chief Police Officers (ACPOS) was £104,000 in 1994–95, £119,000 in 1995–96, £135,000 in 1996–97 and £141,000 in 1997–98. No other Government department provided funding.

Scottish Office funding for the ACPOS secretariat is included among the common police services for which the Secretary of State recovers 50 per cent. of his expenditure from police authorities. Details of the expenditure recovered from police authorities for the years in question are shown in the table.

£

Police authority	1994–95	1995–96	1996–97	1997–98
Central	2,380	2,741	3,123	3,262
Dumfries and Galloway	1,406	1,573	1,787	1,985
Fife	2,856	3,289	3,737	4,009
Grampian	4,313	4,854	5,533	5,889
Lothian and Borders	9,238	10,546	11,981	12,816
Northern	2,395	2,758	3,133	3,518
Strathclyde	25,462	29,202	33,154	33,588
Tayside	3,951	4,537	5,183	5,433
	52,001	59,500	67,631	70,500

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the grades within the uniformed police or civilian police service which make up the membership of the Association of Chief Police Officers in Scotland. [42405]

Mr. McLeish: The membership of the Association of Chief Police Officers in Scotland comprises chief constables and assistant chief constables (including designated deputies).

Grampian Constabulary

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will place in the Library a copy of (a) the report by the Deputy Chief Constable of Lothian and Borders Police, on the Grampian Constabulary and (b) other reports concerning the management and administration of the Constabulary. [42404]

Mr. McLeish: Yes. Copies of the report by Graham Power on the handling of the Scott Simpson murder inquiry by Grampian Police have already been placed in the Libraries of both Houses. Arrangements are being made to place copies of the Accounts Commission for Scotland's Report on the Scottish Police Service Performance Manual, published on 22 April, in the Libraries. Copies of Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Constabulary's inspection report on Grampian Police will be placed in the House Libraries when it is published.

Information

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if his Department operates a monitoring exercise of persistent inquirers for information. [42630]

Mr. Dewar [holding answer 19 May 1998]: It does not. The low incidence of such inquirers has not warranted the setting up of a monitoring system across my Department.

Voluntary Sports Clubs

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the cost in 1997–98 of discretionary rate relief for voluntary sports clubs in Scotland. [42912]

Mr. Macdonald: The cost of discretionary rate relief for voluntary sports clubs for 1997–98 is estimated at £5,398,120.

Scottish Parliament

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the responsibilities in respect of the (a) regulation of and (b) payment of subsidy to the railways to be transferred to the Scottish Parliament. [43132]

Mr. McLeish: Under the Government's devolution proposals all matters relating to the regulation of the railway are to be reserved to the UK Parliament. We propose, however, to give appropriate oversight of Scottish passenger rail services to the Scottish Executive including the responsibility for funding passenger rail services which start and end in Scotland.

High Rise Flats, Shettleston

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many blocks of high rise flats, containing what total number of housing units, there are in the Glasgow, Shettleston constituency. [43335]

Mr. Macdonald [pursuant to his reply, 19 May 1998, c. 337–38]: The information requested is not available centrally by constituency.

Housing

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make it his policy to collect statistics on the number of houses below tolerable standards in each constituency in Scotland; and if he will make a statement. [43333]

Mr. Macdonald: Information on the number of houses below the tolerable standard is available nationally (from the Scottish House Condition Survey) and at local authority level (from data collected by individual local authorities). Below tolerable standard housing is one of four national housing priority categories for investment for local authorities. There are no current plans to collect this information by constituency.

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make it his policy to collect statistics relating to high rise flats in each constituency in Scotland; and if he will make a statement. [43334]

Mr. Macdonald: Information on the number of council owned high rise flats is available at national and local authority level. There are no plans to collect this information by constituency.

Asthma

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the net ingredient cost for preparations used in the treatment of asthma (a) in total, (b) per health authority and (c) per head of population per health authority, in each of the last five years. [43694]

Mr. Galbraith: The information by health board and Scotland for financial years 1993–94 to 1997–98 is set out in the table. The costs shown are based on the value of ingredients dispensed by community pharmacists and dispensing doctors before the addition of dispensing fees or deduction of any discount or patient charges. The cost of drugs used in hospital treatment of asthma is not available centrally.

The costs shown relate to drugs used in the treatment of asthma contained in British National Formulary sections 3.1 (Bronchodilators), 3.2 (Corticosteriods) and 3.3 (Cromoglycate and related therapy). Some of the drugs may be used in the treatment of other conditions.

	Ingredient cost (£ million)					Ingredient cost per patient on GP lists (£)
Health Board	1993–94	1994–95	1995–96	1996–97	1997–98	1993–94	1994–95	1995–96	1996–97	1997–98
Argyll and Clyde	3.206	3.575	3.867	4.120	4.455	7.18	8.06	8.81	9.39	10.15
Ayrshire and Arran	3.470	3.972	4.373	4.665	5.096	8.86	10.12	11.17	11.91	13.06
Borders	0.880	0.949	0.999	1.036	1.142	8.21	8.80	9.25	9.56	10.56
Dumfries and Galloway	1.078	1.195	1.293	1.412	1.573	7.03	7.80	8.43	9.21	10.31
Fife	2.377	2.627	2.892	3.122	3.496	6.76	7.44	8.16	8.80	9.84
Forth Valley	2.004	2.275	2.490	2.697	2.968	6.90	7.83	8.54	9.27	10.21
Grampian	3.546	3.960	4.337	4.643	4.980	6.69	7.22	8.05	8.59	9.22
Greater Glasgow	7.198	8.099	8.841	9.251	9.796	7.12	8.13	8.92	9.33	9.96
Highland	1.248	1.401	1.557	1.752	1.890	5.88	6.58	7.28	8.15	8.76
Lanarkshire	4.448	5.074	5.706	6.050	6.590	7.62	8.68	9.78	10.32	11.29
Lothian	5.237	5.652	6.091	6.461	7.279	6.52	7.03	7.57	7.93	8.89
Orkney	0.109	0.130	0.144	0.149	0.156	5.45	6.47	7.17	7.38	7.81
Shetland	0.100	0.111	0.128	0.141	0.158	4.46	4.82	5.57	6.12	6.95
Tayside	3.435	3.936	4.388	4.741	4.979	8.36	9.58	10.73	11.57	12.17
Western Isles	0.142	0.172	0.201	0.215	0.229	4.76	5.77	6.76	7.27	7.88
Scotland	38.478	43.128	47.307	50.455	54.787	[1]7.17	[1]8.03	[1]8.84	[1]9.40	[1]10.22

[1] Based on cost of ingredients divided by the total numbers of patients on GP lists

Small Businesses

Mr. Page: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the regulations that have been removed or amended to help small businesses since 1 May 1997. [42781]

Mr. Wilson: Since 1 May 1997, The Scottish Office has made the following amendments to regulations which are expected to help small businesses:

Invergarry-Kyle of Lochalsh Trunk Road (A87) Extension (Skye Bridge Crossing) Toll Order (Variation) Order 1997—(SI1997/2941 S.186)

The Town and Country Planning (Use Classes)(Scotland) Order 1997—(SI1997/3061)

The Corn Returns Regulations 1997—(SI1997/1873)

The Non-Domestic Rates (Levying)(Scotland) Regulations 1997—(SI1997/452—S.34).

TREASURY

Information

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if his Department operates a monitoring exercise of persistent inquirers for information. [42643]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 19 May 1998]: HM Treasury Public Enquiry Unit (PEU) records the total number of calls answered by PEU staff. We do receive calls from persistent inquirers but we do not monitor these independently of the overall total.

Working Hours

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the minimum number of hours someone has to be working to count as employed under the ILO definition. [43972]

Mrs. Liddell: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Chief Executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. David Willetts, dated 1 June 1998:

As Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS), I have been asked to reply to your parliamentary question on the ILO definition of being employed.

Under the definitions of economic status agreed by the Thirteenth International Conference of Labour Statisticians (Geneva, 1982) anyone working at least one hour in the reference period (normally the week preceding the interview) is counted as being employed. This minimum does not apply to those who happened to be away from work in the reference period due to sickness, holiday etc.

The full ILO definition of employment is published on page 63 of the 1996 ILO Yearbook, a copy of which is available from the House of Commons Library.

The United Kingdom's and all other European Union countries' Labour Force Surveys use the ILO definitions although there may be some small differences in interpretation between countries.

Mortality Statistics

Mr. Cunliffe: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the mortality rates for (a) heart disease,

(b) lung cancer and (c) renal failure in (i) the National Health Service North-West Region and (ii) Wigan and Bolton health area. [43308]

Mrs. Liddell: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Chief Executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Lawrence Cunliffe, dated 1 June 1998:

As Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS), I have been asked to reply to your parliamentary question on the mortality rates for (a) lung cancer, (b) other forms of cancer and (c) kidney disease in (i) the National Health Service North-West Region and (ii) Wigan and Bolton health area.

The data requested are shown in the table.

Death rates[1] by cause in the North Western Regional Office and Wigan and Bolton Health Authority, 1996

	North Western RO	Wigan and Bolton HA
Lung cancer	71	64
Other forms of cancer	211	193
Kidney disease	9	11

[1] Deaths per hundred thousand population

The deaths data were identified as those certified with an underlying cause assigned to the following International Classification of Diseases Ninth Revision (ICD9) codes:

Cause
Lung cancer	162
Other cancers	140–208 (malignant neoplasms) minus 162
Kidney disease	580–593 (renal failure and infections of the kidney)
	250.3 (diabetes with renal manifestations)
	403–404 (hypertensive renal disease)

Dividend Tax Credits

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 18 July 1997, Official Report, column 375, if he will provide a breakdown of the number of (a) non-taxpayers aged over 65 years and (b) all non-taxpaying individuals reclaiming tax credits on dividends in (i) 1995–96 and () 1996–97, in the categories (1) under £20, (2) £21 to £50, (3) £51 to £100, (4) £101 to £200 and (5) over £200 reclaimed. [41637]

Mr. Geoffrey Robinson: The latest available estimates derived from the Survey of Personal Incomes cover dividends paid in 1995–96 and are given in the table.

Amount of dividends tax credit claimed (£)	Number of non taxpayers aged 65 and over with claims (thousands)	Number of non taxpayers with claims (thousands)
under 20	100	240
21–50	60	130
51–100	60	110
101–200	50	90
201 and over	30	60
Total	300	630

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 18 July 1997, Official Report, column 375, concerning tax credits on dividends, if he will provide figures for 1996–97. [41635]

Mr. Geoffrey Robinson: I regret that the information requested for 1996–97 is not yet available.

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 18 July 1997, Official Report, column 375, what is the estimated saving to the Exchequer of abolishing the repayment of dividend tax credits in respect of (a) all non-taxpaying individuals and (b) non-taxpaying individuals aged over 65 years. [41638]

Mr. Geoffrey Robinson: It is estimated that abolishing payment of dividend tax credits in respect of all non taxpaying individuals will save the Exchequer about £50 million in a full year. About half of this relates to payments to non taxpaying individuals aged 65 and over. These estimates do not take into account any behavioural effects which might result from abolishing the payment of tax credits.

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many individuals with no tax liability reclaimed a tax credit on dividends paid in (a) 1995–96 and (b) 1996–97; and what was the average amount re-claimed. [41636]

Mr. Geoffrey Robinson: The latest available information is derived from the 1995–96 Survey of Personal Incomes. It is estimated that some 630,000 non taxpayers made claims, averaging £75, for payment of the tax credit on dividends paid in 1995–96.

Euro-X Committee

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what are the terms of reference of the Euro-X Committee; and what matters have been reserved to ECOFIN. [43142]

Mrs. Liddell: The terms of reference of the Euro-X committee are set out in the Luxembourg European Council conclusions. The Luxembourg European Council conclusions state that decisions will in all cases be taken by the ECOFIN Council in accordance with the procedures set out in the Treaty.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what will be the agenda for the June meeting of the Euro-X Committee. [43141]

Mrs. Liddell: As agreed by all member states, the agenda for the June meeting of Euro-X will include practical arrangements for future meetings of Euro-X and a preliminary assessment of the macroeconomic situation in the euro area with a view to the introduction of the single currency in those countries.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what mechanisms will be created to co-ordinate the work of the Euro-X Committee and ECOFIN. [43143]

Mrs. Liddell: Euro-X is an informal body to be established in line with the conclusions of the Luxembourg European Council. The ECOFIN Council is a formal body of the EU, established under the Treaty. The Luxembourg European Council conclusions state that the Ministers of member states participating in the euro area may meet informally among themselves to discuss issues connected with their shared specific responsibilities for the single currency. The Luxembourg conclusions also state that whenever matters of common interest are concerned they will be discussed by Ministers of all member states. Decisions will in all cases be taken by the ECOFIN Council in accordance with the procedures laid down in the Treaty.

Capital Receipts

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he will announce the capital receipts initiative for the next three years. [43196]

Mr. Darling: The Chancellor announced in his 1997 Budget the amount of resources for the Capital Receipts Initiatives in 1997–98 and 1998–99.

The provision for the next three years will form part of the new spending plans which will be announced in the summer following the completion of the Comprehensive Spending Review.

Official Engagements

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list his official engagements during his recent visits to (a) Indonesia, (b) Korea and (c) Malaysia. [42398]

Mr. Gordon Brown: My visit to Asia began in Korea, where I met President Kim Dae-Jung, the Ministers of Finance and Foreign Affairs and the Governor of the Bank of Korea. I also met members of the business and financial community, and representatives from the trade unions.

I then travelled to Malaysia, where I met Deputy Prime Minister and Finance Minister Anwar Ibrahim. As in Seoul, I also had discussions with members of the business and financial community in Kuala Lumpur.

The final leg of the visit was to Indonesia. I met President Soeharto and delivered a strong message on the need for political reform. I then met a number of the key figures involved in the economic reform effort: the Ministers for the Economy, Finance, and Trade and Industry, and the Governor of the Bank of Indonesia. I also delivered a speech at the Jakarta Stock Exchange on strengthening the architecture of the international financial system, and visited a World Bank rehabilitation project.

Korea

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on his discussions with the Korean trade union movement. [42351]

Mr. Gordon Brown: On my recent trip to Korea I met President Kim Dae-Jung, the Ministers of Finance and Foreign Affairs and the Governor of the Bank of Korea. I met some members of the business and financial community. I also met the leaders of the two main Korean trade union bodies: Park In-Sang, President of the Federation of Korean Trade Unions and Lee Kap-Yong, President of the Korean Confederation of Trade Unions.

HIPC Initiative

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what discussion of the five points of the Mauritius Mandate occurred at (a) the Finance Ministers' meeting and (b) the G8 summit; and if he will make a statement. [43837]

Mrs. Liddell: Agreement was reached at both the Foreign and Finance Ministers meeting on 9 May and at the Birmingham Summit itself on issues raised in the Mauritius Mandate. Both meetings agreed to the speedy and determined implementation of debt relief to more countries under the Heavily Indebted Poor Countries (HIPC) initiative, and encouraged all poor countries to have begun the process of securing debt relief by the year 2000. The meetings also urged all countries that have not already done so to forgive aid-related bilateral debt or to take comparable action for reforming poor countries, and to use export credits to countries eligible for debt relief under the Heavily Indebted Poor Countries (HIPC) initiative only for productive expenditure. These agreements follow directly from proposals originally made by the Chancellor in the Mauritius Mandate.

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what discussions were held regarding the six-year qualification period for the HIPC initiative at (i) the Finance Ministers' meeting and (ii) the G8 summit. [43836]

Mrs. Liddell: To date, five of the six countries that have had decision points under the Heavily Indebted Poor Countries (HIPC) initiative, have been granted shortened second stages before their completion points, demonstrating the willingness of the international community to implement the initiative flexibly.

The G8 further demonstrated its support for the speedy and determined implementation of debt relief to the world's poorest countries under the HIPC initiative in the communiques issued after both the G8 Foreign and Finance Ministers meeting on 9 May and the Summit itself.

Following an initiative by the Chancellor at the Foreign and Finance Ministers meeting, the Summit also discussed the needs of post conflict countries. One possibility to be looked at is counting IMF post conflict assistance programmes towards a country's track record. This could bring the decision point forward by up to twelve months for certain countries.

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent representations he has received from the Governments of (a) Japan and (b) Germany with regard to debt relief. [43735]

Mrs. Liddell: (a) The Chancellor has not received any recent representations from the Japanese Government with regard to debt relief.

(b) The Chancellor has received recent representations from the German government, which make clear its support of the Heavily Indebted Poor Countries (HIPC) initiative and which illustrate its generosity in granting debt relief to date.

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what discussions he has had with the G8 Finance Ministers regarding the sale of IMF gold stocks to fund Third World debt relief. [43734]

Mrs. Liddell: At the present time the sale of IMF gold reserves is not necessary to finance debt relief under the Heavily Indebted Poor Countries (HIPC) initiative. The British Government recognise that gold sales will eventually be necessary, and will discuss the issue with other creditors when appropriate.

Asian Crisis

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what initiatives the G8 Summit discussed regarding the impact of the Asian financial crisis on the poor; and what proposals were made. [43733]

Mrs. Liddell: G8 leaders were very conscious of the serious impact of the Asian crisis on the poor and most vulnerable. They agreed that economic and financial reform needs to be matched with actions and policies by the countries concerned to help protect these groups from the worst effects of the crisis. G8 leaders welcomed the support for this by the World Bank, the Asian Development Bank and bilateral donors and the increased emphasis on social expenditure in programmes agreed by the IMF. At the Summit there was also a full discussion of the challenges of poorer developing countries throughout the wider world and a number of steps were agreed to help them. The conclusions on this are contained in the G8 Communique in the Library of the House.

PRIME MINISTER

BSkyB

Mr. Maude: To ask the Prime Minister when Cabinet Office officials were consulted about the appointment of Mr. Timothy Allan to a position at BSkyB. [39892]

The Prime Minister: Before his contract was signed on 19 April.

Mr. Maude: To ask the Prime Minister when he was informed that his deputy press spokesman, Mr. Timothy Allan, was negotiating to become an employee of BSkyB. [39874]

The Prime Minister: I was aware that he was discussing employment with several companies for some weeks before his appointment with BSkyB was announced.

Mr. Maude: To ask the Prime Minister when he was informed that his deputy press spokesman, Mr. Timothy Allan, was to become an employee of BSkyB. [39875]

The Prime Minister: On 19 April.

Mr. Maude: To ask the Prime Minister if he provided a reference for Mr. Timothy Allan, his former deputy press spokesman, in connection with his securing a senior position at BSkyB. [39876]

The Prime Minister: No.

Sierra Leone

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list the occasions on which he has met President Kabbah of Sierra Leone since 1 May 1997; and if he will publish the minutes of such meetings. [42093]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 14 May 1998]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 19 May 1998, Official Report, column 313.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Prime Minister what United Kingdom public funds were made available to President Kabbah of Sierra Leone during his exile; and what reports he has received on what the money was used for. [42803]

The Prime Minister: The total financial value of United Kingdom assistance to President Kabbah and his government representatives while they were in Conakry, Guinea was £342,711. This comprised direct support from the Department for International Development and the Foreign and Commonwealth Office for: the basic services of President Kabbah's government in Conakry; President Kabbah and a Sierra Leone delegation to attend the Commonwealth Heads of Government Meeting in Edinburgh in October 1997; a workshop and seminar in the United Kingdom to help President Kabbah restore the legitimate Government of Sierra Leone; and communications equipment.

The expenditure has been monitored by the British High Commissioner to Freetown, who worked alongside President Kabbah's government in Conakry, and by periodic reports to the Department for International Development from the government of Sierra Leone.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Prime Minister by whom the decision was taken to release the recent letter from President Kabbah to the press; who was consulted; and when. [42708]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 20 May 1998]: I took the decision in consultation with the Foreign Secretary on the day the letter was received. President Kabbah himself wrote in the letter that he had no objection to its contents being released to the media. When the letter was made public my Press Secretary made clear to journalists that there were interpretations in the letter which the British Government did not agree with—both in relation to interpretation of Security Council Resolutions and in relation to named individuals—but that we saw it as helpful in providing the perspective of the democratically elected and legitimate government of Sierra Leone on events which led to their restoration after the military coup.

Mr. Butterfill: To ask the Prime Minister how many intelligence reports on the activities of Sandline were submitted to No. 10 Downing Street; on what dates; and if he will extend the scope of Sir Thomas Legg's inquiry to include such reports. [43466]

The Prime Minister: All papers that were available to me will be made available to Sir Thomas Legg's investigation.

Consultation Papers

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer of 11 May 1998, Official Report, column 19, what estimate he has made of the cost of holding centrally details of all the consultation papers issued by Departments since 1 May 1987. [42217]

The Prime Minister: I have made no estimate. Individual Ministers are responsible for the consultation papers they publish.

North Korea

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Prime Minister what plans Her Majesty's Government have to provide contributions in terms of (a) food aid, (b) agricultural development and (c) the provision of light water reactors to North Korea. [42424]

The Prime Minister: The United Kingdom, in our Presidency role, led a European Union Technical Mission to North Korea from 8–17 May to assess the present humanitarian situation and consider future needs. The UK participated in the United Nations Development Programme Round Table on 28–29 May to discuss plans for agricultural rehabilitation. The Secretary of State for International Development will review UK policy in the light of these events.

We and our EU partners are committed to resolving the issue of nuclear proliferation on the Korean Peninsula. The EU is a full member of the Korean Peninsula Energy Development Organisation (KEDO), which is providing North Korea with new Light Water Reactors and interim energy supplies in return for North Korea suspending (and eventually dismantling) its own nuclear reactor programme. The UK contributed $1 million to KEDO in 1995. The EU contributed 5 million ecu in 1996 and in 1997 agreed to contribute 15 million ecu a year for 5 years.

China

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Prime Minister what plans he has to visit (a) the Suzhou Industrial Park and (b) Sichuan Province during his forthcoming visit to China. [42352]

The Prime Minister: Arrangements for my visit to China in October are at the planning stage. However, given the large number of competing demands on the programme, I unfortunately do not expect to visit either the Suzhou Industrial park or Sichuan Province on this occasion. However, my programme will ensure that I see as many aspects of Chinese society as possible.

Asia-Europe Meeting

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make a statement on ASEM II in London, listing his bilateral meetings with foreign leaders during the summit; and what responses have been received to the proposed trust fund from (a) foreign Governments and (b) international financial institutions. [42357]

The Prime Minister: The second Asia Europe meeting made a significant contribution towards reinforcing the bonds between Asia and both Britain and Europe as a whole.

There was a strong message on the financial crisis in Asia: how we can work together to restore confidence and stability. At a critical time, we were able to emphasise Europe's commitment to the region and secure agreement on the need to maintain open markets and free trade.

Action plans were agreed to encourage trade and promote investment. The third Asia-Europe Business Forum was also held during the Summit. This gave business leaders from all ASEM members the opportunity to report on the concerns of business directly to political leaders at the summit.

The ASEM process is breaking new ground in political dialogue between the two regions. At the London meeting, there was discussion of fundamental rights and issues ranging from international crime to developments in Cambodia, the Korean Peninsula, Kosovo and enlargement of the European Union.

The London Summit also launched major initiatives in areas of particular concern to all our peoples: the environment and the welfare and education of our children.

The UK's initiative to establish an ASEM Trust Fund was widely welcomed. The Fund, which will provide assistance in assessing the poverty impact of the Asian financial crisis and help with financial restructuring, will be managed by the World Bank. Discussions are at an advanced stage on the operating arrangements. Indications of financial support from EU ASEM participants exceed $30 (US) million (including £5 million from the UK) and further support is expected from both European and Asian participants.

During the Summit and immediately before, I had bilateral meetings with the Prime Ministers of China, Japan, Korea, Malaysia and Thailand.

Information

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Prime Minister if his Office operates a monitoring exercise of persistent inquirers for information. [42627]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 19 May 1998]: Although requests for information under the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information are routinely monitored, it has not been found necessary to introduce specific procedures for persistent inquiries.

Whaling (Japan)

Mr. Baker: To ask the Prime Minister if he will raise Japan's continued whaling with Emperor Akihito during the latter's forthcoming visit. [42170]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 20 May 1998]: Under the Japanese constitution, the Emperor has a strictly non-political role. However, we have made the Japanese Government aware on many occasions that the United Kingdom supports a permanent international ban on whaling, with the exception of some limited aboriginal subsistence whaling. The most recent occasion was at the International Whaling Commission meeting that took place between 27 and 29 May in Oman.

Former Service Personnel

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Prime Minister how many Government departments currently have responsibilities for the affairs of former service personnel. [43055]

The Prime Minister: Ex-Service personnel are accorded the same access to services provided by Government Departments as every other citizen. It will depend on the nature of the services required as to which Government Department will be involved. However, the majority of cases are matters relating to the Ministry of Defence, the Department of Social Security, of which the War Pensions Agency is a part, and the Department of Health.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Prime Minister if he will assess the advantages of having the affairs of former service personnel dealt with by a single Government department; what representations he has received on this matter; and if he will make a statement. [43056]

The Prime Minister: The Government have received a number of representations on this subject. My hon. Friend the Minister for the Armed Forces met the Secretary General of the Royal British Legion on 11 March, when they discussed how best to improve the handling of ex-Service affairs. The Ministry of Defence are looking closely at options for approaching the wider question of matters relating to the ex-Service community in the light of these discussions.

Party Funding

Dr. Tony Wright: To ask the Prime Minister if he will arrange for the minutes of the Political Honours Scrutiny Committee since 1979 to be made available to the Committee on Standards in Public Life for its inquiry into party funding. [43294]

The Prime Minister: No. The Committee's advice has been given in confidence to the Prime Minister of the day to assist him or her in making recommendations for political honours.

DEFENCE

British Beef

Mr. Linton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what progress has been made with the European Commission in seeking to release stocks of British intervention beef for use by the armed forces. [44107]

Mr. Spellar: I am pleased to announce that, following discussions with my right hon. Friends the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food and the Secretary of State for Defence—taken forward by my noble Friend the Parliamentary Secretary, Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, and as a result of his Ministry's approach to the European Commission—the Commission has approved a Regulation allowing access to intervention stocks of British beef for use by the Armed Forces at competitive prices. Access to these stocks on terms agreed should allow our food supply contractor to substantially increase the amount of British beef consumed by our UK based Armed Forces.

Service Fatalities

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many service personnel lost their lives in the past 12 months while in action, or as a consequence of wounds received during active service, outside Northern Ireland; and what was the country or coastal region of their deaths or wounds which consequently resulted in their deaths. [42897]

Dr. Reid [holding answer 21 May 1998]: This is a matter for the Chief Executive of the Defence Analytical Services Agency (DASA). I have asked the Chief Executive to write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Paul Altobell to Mr. Andrew Mackinlay, dated 1 June 1998:

I am replying to your questions to the Secretary of State for Defence about the number of service personnel who have lost their lives in action outside of Northern Ireland over the past 12 months, as this matter falls within my area of responsibility.

I am happy to report that our records show that, in the period 1 April 1997 to 19 May 1998, no service personnel died as a result of battle wounds or injuries as a direct result of action by or against an organised enemy.

I hope you find this information helpful.

WE177 Bombs

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what volumes of radioactive waste were generated in the research, manufacture, storage, maintenance and deployment of the WE177 nuclear bombs; what quantities of radioactive waste will be created in their decommissioning; what environmental measures are to be applied to their decommissioning; and where the residual radioactive waste and plutonium will be stored. [40778]

Dr. Reid: The WE177 free fall bomb programme started over 30 years go. Details of radioactive waste arising from the different phase of the programme were not recorded separately, and could be collated only at disproportionate cost.

Decommissioning of WE177 is being undertaken in accordance with all relevant environmental legislation and in line with the requirements of the appropriate regulatory bodies, principally the Environment Agency and the Nuclear Installations Inspectorate.

Any radioactive waste arising from this work will be disposed of via normal approved routes where these are available, and in accordance with certificates of authorisation issued by the Environment Agency; for example, suitable low level waste will be sent to BNFL Drigg. Other waste for which no disposal route is currently available will be stored safely and securely at AWE Aldermaston. Any plutonium will also be safely and securely held, though I must withhold details under Exemption 1 of the code of Practice on Access to Government Information relating to Defence, Security and International Relations.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence to which establishments WE177 bombs were taken for servicing; what the nature of such servicing entails; and how regularly this servicing was conducted. [40814]

Dr. Reid: Servicing was carried out by the Atomic Weapons Establishment as necessary to ensure the continued safety and reliability of WE177 whilst in service. I am withholding details as to the regularity and nature of servicing under Exemption 1 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information relating to Defence, Security, and Internal Relations.

RAF Menwith Hill

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 2 March 1998, Official Report, column 489, what proportion of the total cost of the infra-red system at RAF Menwith Hill has been met by his Department. [42073]

Dr. Reid: As I told the hon. Gentleman in my reply of 2 March 1998, Official Report, column 489, the Space Based Infra-Red System (SBIRS) is a programme funded by the United States Government. As such, we do not have details of the total programme costs and therefore I am unable to specify what proportion of these costs associated with the SBIRS programme at RAF Menwith Hill is being borne by my department.

Sierra Leone

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list all visitors to HMS Cornwall in the period during which President Kabbah was aboard and in the preceding and following weeks; and if he will give their job titles, their reasons for being there and the dates when they were aboard. [41957]

Mr. George Robertson [holding answer 14 May 1998]: President Kabbah visited HMS Cornwall in Freetown on 19 March for a lunch jointly hosted by the British High Commissioner and the Commanding Officer of HMS Cornwall to mark the successful completion of the ship's humanitarian mission prior to her sailing the following day. The following visited the ship while President Kabbah was on board:

Vice President Demby

Dr. James Jonah—(then Ambassador to the UN, now Minister of Finance)

Colonel Max Khobe—(ECOMOG Task Force Commander, Sierra Leone)

Mr. C. Margai—(senior political figure, now Minister of Internal Affairs)

Mr. A. Bangura—(Sierra Leone Radio)

Mr. Peter Penfold—(British High Commissioner)

Mr. Colin Glass—(Deputy High Commissioner).

In the evening, the Commanding officer and the British High Commissioner jointly hosted a reception, also to mark the completion of Cornwall's mission. The following attended:

Momodu Koroma—then Kabbah Task Force (now Minister for Presidential Affairs)

Dr. Soyei—Cottage Hospital

Tejan Kella—AFRICARE (organisation involved in humanitarian work)

Dr. Philip Almeida—Cottage Hospital

Mr. V. Collier—Head of Civil Service

Mr. Gael—Action Against Hunger (organisation involved in humanitarian work)

Mr. A. R. Wurie—Head of Protocol

Mr. P. Lamsona—CARE (Organisation involved in humanitarian work)

Dr. Julius Spencer—then Kabbah supporter (now Minister of Information)

Mr. H. Charels—CAUSE Canada (organisation involved in humanitarian work)

Martin Katta

Mr. Koroma—Council of Churches, Sierra Leone (organisation involved in humanitarian work)

Dr. Joe Lappia

Mr. A. Cox—Concern Universal (organisation involved in humanitarian work)

Kanga Sessay—Kabbah Task Force

Ms K. Richardson—Catholic Relief Society

Desmond Luke—then Presidential Adviser (now Attorney General)

Mr. J. Metzker—International Committee of Red Cross

Mrs. S. Gbujama—then Foreign Minister (now Minister for Social Welfare)

Mr. A. Eddo—International Committee of Red Cross

Mr. S. Berewa—then Attorney General

Jean Clement—Medecins sans Frontiéres

Martha Carey—Medecins sans Frontiéres

Rick Fitzpatrick—World Vision

Col. Musa—ECOMOG

Siko Pyker—OXFAM

Lt. Col. Shoboiki—ECOMOG Freetown Commander

Jost Vandenakker—OXFAM

Mr. E. Perez Porras—European Union Resident Representative to Sierra Leone

Clive Dawson—UK businessman

Tony Todd—Crown Agents Emergency Logistics Management Team Consultant

Mr. Hailey—Sierra Leone Police

Mr. Lathbry—Cable and Wireless

Mr. S. Lebby—British High Commission

Mr. Clarke—Cable and Wireless

Lt. Col. Ted Glover—Defence Attaché, Accra

Mr. H. Kamara

Mrs. Gloria Thomas—British Council

Dr. Frank Nyama—New England Clinic

Elizabeth Decker—Nurse

Mrs. D. Fraser

John BB Ganda—Head of Children's Clinic.

The following visited the ship on 19 March as Wardroom guests:

Mr. Juba Jubert—Sandline or associate

Mr. John Farr—Sandline or associate

Mr. Mike Ashworth—Sandline or associate

Mr. Rupert Bowen—Sandline or associate

8 others for whom full names were not given—Sandline or associate.

The following visited the ship in the week preceding 19 March as representatives of their organisations:

18 March

Francis Okello—United Nations

Martin Booth—United Nations

Representative of Cable and Wireless

17 March

Lt. Col. Ted Glover—UK MOD

Representative of Australian World Vision

Representative of Filipino World Vision

Representative of Cable and Wireless

13 March

Kristen Richardson—Catholic Relief Society

Mr. Lathby—Cable and Wireless

Mr. Clarke—Cable and Wireless

Mr. Hailey—Sierra Leone Police

12 March

Francis Okello—United Nations

Colonel Andrew Gale—United Nations

Mike Booth—United Nations

Dr. Jonah—Kabbah Task Force

Mike Downham—Medical Doctor

Clive Dawson—UK businessman

Peter Penfold—British High Commissioner

Mr. Albrecht—ICRC Driver

Mr. Mustaffa—CARE Driver.

A comprehensive list of job titles is not available. The ship sailed from Freetown on 20 March.

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will place a copy of the captain's log of HMS 'Cornwall' for the last 12 months in the Library; [42407]

(2) if he will place a copy of the ship's log of HMS 'Cornwall' for the last 12 months in the Library. [42418]

Mr. George Robertson: There is no such document as a Captain's log. HMS Cornwall's ships logs for the last year are either onboard the vessel, which is currently off Southern Africa, in the post to the UK, or in storage. The logs are not therefore readily available. However, as I told the hon. Member for Salisbury (Mr. Key) in my reply of 18 May 1998, Official Report, column 257, the logs for the period 1 January 1998 to 1 April 1998 are being collected and I will then consider their possible release. They cover the period that HMS Cornwall was off West Africa.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the Royal Navy vessels which have (a) carried out and (b) attempted to carry out shore operations in Sierra Leone since May 1997; if he will make a statement on the operations concerned; and what involvement there was of private companies. [42709]

Mr. George Robertson [holding answer 20 May 1998]: Since May 1997, with the exception of HMS Cornwall which, between 1 and 20 March 1998, provided humanitarian assistance to the people of Sierra Leone, supported our diplomatic efforts there and assisted in the return of the British High Commissioner, no Royal Navy vessels have carried out shore operations in Sierra Leone.

As far as involvement with private companies is concerned, the ECOMOG air operations centre, run by Sandline personnel, regularly briefed HMS Cornwall during her deployment to Sierra Leone on the security situation and the possible threat posed by rebels. This information was essential to ensure that HMS Cornwall's helicopter could safely carry out its humanitarian relief flights within the country. In addition, on 6 March, HMS Cornwall personnel spent two hours ashore repairing a Sandline helicopter, operating in support of ECOMOG, that had landed at a heli-port alongside the ship following a bird strike. While the helicopter was being repaired, the Sandline pilot and two others accompanying him were invited on-board. On 13 March, HMS Cornwall assisted Sandline personnel with some minor maintenance of the helicopter when it was at the same heli-port. On 19 March, the pilot and 11 others employed by, or connected with Sandline, were invited into the Wardroom for drinks.

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence under what authorisation assistance was rendered to a Sandline helicopter by HMS Cornwall; what ship stores and spares were used during this operation; and under what head of charge these items were accounted for by the supply officer, HMS Cornwall. [42309]

Mr. George Robertson: The decision to assist with the repair of the helicopter operating in support of ECOMOG was, quite properly, taken locally by HMS Cornwall. No ship's stores or spares were used, apart from five litres of degreasant and 40 rivets. Both these items were routine consumables which were accounted for when they were issued to the ship's Flight by RNAS Culdrose prior to the Flight's embarkation in February 1998.

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 18 May 1998, Official Report, column 258, to the hon. Member for Salisbury (Mr. Key), what payment was made for the assistance provided for Sandline International's helicopter by the crew of HMS Cornwall; if prior approval was sought and obtained from his Department by the Captain of HMS Cornwall; if Ministers were informed; and what other assistance was given by British military personnel to Sandline, and when. [43293]

Mr. George Robertson: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Northavon (Mr. Webb). No other assistance was provided to Sandline in addition to that detailed in my answer to the hon. Member for Salisbury (Mr. Key) on 18 May 1998, Official Report, column 258. This was properly a matter for the local commander; ministers were not informed of, nor were charges raised for, the assistance provided.

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list those visitors to HMS Cornwall since 1 January 1996 who were employees of or connected with Sandline International indicating (a) the names of the visitors, (b) the dates of the visits, (c) the names of the persons met, (d) the purpose of the visits and (e) the location of the ship at the time of the visits. [41817]

Mr. George Robertson [holding answer 14 May 1998]: Information on visitors going back to January 1996 is not available. While HMS Cornwall was providing humanitarian assistance in Sierra Leone there were two occasions on which the ship was visited by identified Sandline personnel. On 6 March the pilot of the helicopter operated on behalf of ECOMOG, Mr. Juba Jubert, and two others accompanying him, identified as Mr. Farr and Mr. Ashworth, were invited on board while the helicopter was being repaired at the heliport alongside HMS Cornwall after a bird strike. On 19 March, twelve persons employed by, or connected with Sandline, were invited into the Wardroom for drinks. The group comprised Mr. Jubert, Mr. Farr, Mr. Ashworth, Mr. Bowen, and eight others for whom full names were not given.

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if HMS 'Monmouth' provided support to ECOMOG in discharging UNSCR 1132; and if he will make a statement. [42559]

Mr. George Robertson [holding answer 18 May 1998]: HMS Monmouth did not provide any support to ECOMOG in discharging UNSCR 1132.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on what date notice was given to the crew of HMS Nottingham to report for duty to prepare to depart for Sierra Leone; and on what date preparations were begun to load that vessel with humanitarian aid for that country. [42711]

Mr. George Robertson [holding answer 20 May 1998]: No such notice was given to the crew of HMS Nottingham; nor was Nottingham loaded with humanitarian aid for that country.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the role of HMS Monmouth in Sierra Leone since May 1997; what requests were received from that vessel with respect to acquiring additional (i) personnel and (ii) equipment for land operations; and if representatives from Sandline International were in contact with that ship. [42710]

Mr. George Robertson [holding answer 20 May 1998]: The instructions to HMS Monmouth (and later HMS Cornwall) were to deploy to the vicinity of Sierra Leone to be prepared to provide immediate humanitarian assistance to the people of Sierra Leone, to support our diplomatic efforts there, and to assist in the return of the British High Commissioner, should the democratically elected Government be restored.

No requests were made by HMS Monmouth to acquire additional personnel or equipment for land operations. As far as we can ascertain at no time, nor in any way, did representatives from Sandline International have any contact with the ship.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on what date Sandline started running the ECOMOG Air Operations Centre. [43460]

Mr. George Robertson: This is not a matter for my Department.

Merlin and Astor Programmes

Mr. Rapson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on his plans for the future procurement of (a) Merlin and (b) Astor from Lockheed Martin. [42914]

Mr. Spellar: I can confirm that, like many other equipment programmes, the procurement of the second batch of Merlin HM Mark 1 helicopters is under consideration as part of the Strategic Defence Review. A judgment must be taken on the optimum balance of Anti-Submarine Warfare assets, including helicopters, fixed wing aircraft, ships and submarines, in light of the perceived threat and against the backdrop of finite resources.

A package of SDR measures has been put before Cabinet, but no final decisions have yet been taken. Once they have, they will be published as quickly as possible.

Final proposals for ASTOR development and production were received at the end of February 1998 and are currently being evaluated. It is planned that a final decision will be taken around the end of this year.

Foreign Armed Forces (Training and Assistance)

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what has been the cost to Her Majesty's Government of providing training and assistance to the armed forces of (a) India, (b) Pakistan and (c) China in each of the last five years. [43095]

Dr. Reid: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Cynon Valley (Ann Clwyd) on 7 May 1998, Official Report, column 436. I wrote to my hon. Friend the same day and a copy of my letter is in the Library.

Air Bases (Joint Use)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the air bases in the United Kingdom jointly used by the United Kingdom and the United States of America. [43630]

Mr. Spellar: There are various facilities where use is shared to some extent between UK and US personnel, but there are currently no air bases shared by flying units of our two nations on a permanent basis. I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given to the hon. Member for Lewes (Mr. Baker) on 7 April 1998, Official Report, column 219, which details those sites made available to the United States Visiting Forces in the UK.

Defence Clothing and Textiles Agency

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the current capacity of the Defence Clothing and Textiles Agency to deliver the correct types of uniforms in the correct quantities for recruits to the armed forces. [43729]

Dr. Reid: This is a matter for the Chief Executive of the Defence Clothing and Textiles Agency (DCTA). I have asked the Chief Executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Michael Roycroft to Mr. Andrew Robathan, dated 1 June 1998:

I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence about the current capacity of the Defence Clothing & Textiles Agency to provide uniforms for recruits to the armed forces, as this matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of the Defence Clothing & Textiles Agency.

Recruits are issued with items from our uniform and operational clothing ranges for which the current availability is 77.53% and 87.52% respectively against a funded target of 80%. The figures represent the proportion of demands which are met on first presentation and do not include other methods of supply such as local purchase. The actual availability is therefore higher. When items are in short supply or a future problem is forecast, efforts are made to ensure that our stocks are husbanded and that the requirements of the recruit establishments are met as a priority second only to support for operations.

I hope this answer is helpful and am willing to provide more precise information if you have specific concerns in regard to individual items.

Indonesia

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence at which United Kingdom educational institutions, including military colleges, Indonesian army officers are currently being taught, how many officers are at each institution and to what units each is attached. [41552]

Dr. Reid: There are eleven Indonesian army officers currently attending training courses at Ministry of Defence establishments in the UK. One is at the Joint Services Command and Staff College at Bracknell, and a further ten are at the Royal Military College of Science at Shrivenham.

Details of Indonesian army officers attending non-military UK educational institutions are not a matter for my Department. However, based on the information available to us, we understand that there are a further 18 army officers being taught at non-military educational institutions in the UK. Information on the location of those establishments has been withheld under Exemption 4 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information. These students are part of a programme of university training in international relations, defence management, international law and human rights, and the programme is being provided on a private and commercial basis.

We do not have records of which units Indonesian army officers have come from before attending courses in the UK.

Land Command

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place in the Library copies of (a) the documents sent by GOC 2 Division to GOC Land Command in support of retaining a Land Command Divisional Head Quarters in York rather than Edinburgh and (b) the papers submitted to the Executive Committee of the Army Board on the future divisional structure of Land Command. [42903]

Dr. Reid: I am withholding the documents requested under Exemption 2 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

Service Personnel (Brave or Gallant Service Awards)

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many service personnel have been (a) awarded and (b) formally recommended but not yet gazetted for the Military Cross over the past 12 months, for service outside Northern Ireland; and what was the country or coastal location in which their acts related to the award or recommendation. [42896]

Dr. Reid: In the past twelve months two Servicemen have been recommended and awarded the Military Cross. One was for service in Sierra Leone, published in the London Gazette on 5 December 1997, and the other for service in the Former Republic of Yugoslavia published in the London Gazette on 8 May 1998. At present there are no other recommendations outstanding for the award of the Military Cross.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) awards and (b) recommendations not yet gazetted for gallantry or bravery have been made in relation to service personnel serving in Northern Ireland over the past 12 months. [42894]

Dr. Reid [holding answer 21 May 1998]: Nominations for brave or gallant service by soldiers, sailors and airmen of the three Services are considered centrally to ensure continuity of standards and to protect the integrity of the awards. All recommendations received from HQ Northern Ireland reflecting service from 1 April 1997 to 30 September 1997 were approved and subsequently announced in the London Gazette on 8 May 1998. No recommendations for service from 1 October 1997 onwards have yet been submitted.

Territorial Army

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) officers and (b) soldiers are attached to the 5LI Shropshire and Herefordshire Light Infantry and the Royal Mercian and Lancastrian Yeomanry. [43119]

Dr. Reid: As at 1 May 1998, the current and established strengths of 5 Shropshire and Hereford Light Infantry and the Royal Mercian and Lancastrian Yeomanry, by officers and soldiers, are as follows:

	5 Shropshire & Hereford Light Infantry		Royal Mercian & Lancastrian Yeomanry
	Current strength	Established strength	Current strength	Established strength
Officers	38	36	39	39
Soldiers	491	494	297	280

Note:
Figures include TA, Regular and Non Regular Permanent Staff (NRPS).

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what representations he has received from those living in Shropshire on the future of 5LI Shropshire and Herefordshire Light Infantry and the Royal Mercian and Lancastrian Yeomanry. [43120]

Dr. Reid: My Department has received a number of representations from hon. Members with constituency interests in the Territorial Army in Shropshire on the future of 5 Shropshire and Herefordshire Light Infantry and the Royal Mercian and Lancastrian Yeomanry.

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what criteria are being used in the Strategic Defence Review to decide which Territorial Army battalions will continue. [43628]

Dr. Reid: Our prime aim is to structure the Territorial Army in a way that will be relevant and useable in the operational circumstances we foresee. But we wish to take account of the valuable economic contribution made by Territorial Army units in their local community.

We will also want to build on existing strong social links of Territorial Army units with their communities, and the cadets; we will want to build on the enthusiasm that there is in many areas for volunteer service. We will also wish to take into account the availability of training facilities; and the need for close working between Territorial units and the Regular Armed Forces.

Within these constraints we aim to preserve as wide a presence as possible for the Territorial Army across the country. It may take some months after our first announcements to reach final decisions on what may be complex set of changes.

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to visit the 5 Shropshire and Herefordshire Battalion and the Royal Mercian and Lancastrian Yeomanry at the Copthorne barracks in Shrewsbury. [43646]

Dr. Reid: Neither my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence nor I have any current plans to visit the 5th Shropshire and Herefordshire Battalion and the Royal Mercian and Lancastrian Yeomanry.

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will assess the economic impact on Shrewsbury of the presence of the 5 Shropshire & Herefordshire Light Infantry and the Royal Mercian & Lancastrian Yeomanry. [43611]

Dr. Reid: No assessment has been made of the impact of any Territorial Army unit on its local economy, nor are there plans to make such an assessment.

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the effect on the numbers of officers, soldiers and associated civilian staff of the amalgamation of the Queen's Own Mercian Yeomanry and the Duke of Lancaster's Own Yeomanry to form the Royal Mercian and Lancastrian Yeomanry. [43645]

Dr. Reid: The Queen's Own Mercian Yeomanry and the Duke of Lancaster's Own Yeomanry amalgamated on 1 April 1993 as part of the restructuring of the Territorial Army in that year. The establishment of the two units at the time of amalgamation, and the current establishment of the Royal Mercian and Lancastrian Yeomanry are shown in the table.

	Establishment
	Queen's Own Mercian Yeomanry	Duke of Lancaster's Own Yeomanry	Royal Mercian and Lancastrian Yeomanry
Officers	36	36	39
Soldiers	398	398	280
Civilians	14	14	19
Total	448	448	328

Note:

Figures include TA, Regular and Non Regular Permanent Staff (NRPS)

Copthorne Barracks, Shrewsbury

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many civilian staff are employed at the Copthorne barracks in Shrewsbury. [43648]

Dr. Reid: 255 civilian staff are employed by the Ministry of Defence at Copthorne Barracks, Shrewsbury, including 18 part time staff. In addition, 34 civilian staff are employed by a contractor at Copthorne Barracks, including six part time staff.

Service Personnel Injuries

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many service personnel were injured (a) in the United Kingdom and (b) abroad during (i) 1997, (ii) 1996 and (ii) 1995. [43481]

Dr. Reid: The numbers of Service personnel injured in the UK and abroad in the years 1995, 1996 and 1997 were as follows:

Year	UK	Abroad
1995	4,316	1,717
1996	4,322	1,389
1997	3,387	790

Notes:

1. The figures provided include injuries resulting in death.

2. The figures for the United Kingdom include injuries which occurred in UK waters and the North Atlantic.

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many service personnel who were injured (a) in the United Kingdom and (b) abroad during (i) 1997, (ii) 1996 and (iii) 1995 were forced through their injuries to leave the service. [43480]

Dr. Reid: The numbers of Service personnel medically discharged in the years 1995, 1996 and 1997 owing to injuries sustained in the UK and abroad were as follows:

Year	UK	Abroad
1995	450	88
1996	573	81
1997	484	77

Notes:

1. The figures provided represent the numbers of medical discharges resulting from injury irrespective of the year in which the injury was sustained. The total number of injuries occurring in 1995, 1996 and 1997 which resulted in medical discharge within the same year or a later year could be compiled only at disproportionate cost.

2. The figures for the United Kingdom include injuries which occurred in UK waters and the North Atlantic.

Fishery Protection Vessels

Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Spanish naval personnel or Spanish fishery officers have been aboard British fishery protection vessels in each year between 1993 and 1997; which vessels were involved; and what were the dates and the duration of those visits. [43873]

Dr. Reid: There has been no formal exchange of naval personnel between the Spanish Navy and vessels of the RN Fishery Protection Squadron. No records are kept of Spanish naval personnel who may have visited ships during port visits. It is however known that at least three members of the Spanish Navy were on board HMS Guernsey at various times during her visit to Vigo in 1997.

My department does not hold records which would show the nationality of EU fisheries inspectors embarked on vessels of the RN Fisheries Protection Squadron.

The Scottish Fisheries Protection Agency operates its own fishery protection vessels for which the Secretary of State for Scotland is responsible. Since April 1997 these have had exclusive responsibility for fishery protection duties in Scottish waters.

Japanese Prisoners of War

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what estimate he has made of the number of widows of servicemen imprisoned by Japanese forces during World War 2 (a) in total and (b) by constituency. [43306]

Mr. George Robertson: No estimate has been made and no centrally collated figures exist.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what estimate he has made of the number of (a) servicemen and (b) civilians who were imprisoned or interned by Japanese forces during World War 2 (i) in total and (ii) by constituency. [43305]

Mr. George Robertson: 50,016 Service personnel from the Armed Forces of the United Kingdom were captured by Japanese forces during the Second World War. While matters concerning civilian citizens of the United Kingdom in such circumstances are a matter for my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary, I can advise that contemporary records show that some 20–21,000 civilians of British origin, British Indian or British subjects of European descent were interned by the Japanese during the Second World War.

The information on these Servicemen and civilians broken down by constituency is not held centrally and it could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Departmental Energy Use

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 19 May 1998, Official Report, column 322, concerning departmental energy use, if he will list for each site the (a) name and (b) rank of the Energy Manager; and what method is used to assess the individual's effectiveness in the collection of relevant data. [43680]

Mr. Spellar: The Top Level Budget Holders in the Ministry of Defence are responsible, in conjunction with Energy Efficiency Focal points, for the setting and achievement of performance targets within their area. Assessments of an Energy Manager's effectiveness are based upon the practical savings achieved against recognised performance indicators, such as usage.

The names and ranks of the Energy Managers are being withheld under exemption 14 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

Depleted Uranium

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list those authorised to use depleted uranium in the United Kingdom. [43053]

Mr. Spellar: Depleted uranium has wide ranging use in both the civil and defence sectors, including shielding of radioactive sources, counterbalances for aeroplanes and oil rigs, and also in tank and naval ammunition.

The use and handling of depleted uranium are governed by a number of different regulations, none of which requires specific "authorisation" as such. However, disposal, as opposed to use, of depleted uranium is authorised only for licensed nuclear sites. The basic control of depleted uranium is provided by the Radioactive Substances Act 1993 (amended 1995), which is administered by the Environment Agency. Other regulations which may be applicable are the Ionising Radiation Regulations and associated Code of Practice 1985 and 1993, and the Radioactive Material (Road Transport) (Great Britain) Regulations 1996. The MOD itself also issues a number of internal manuals, regulations and instructions relating to the control of radioactive material within the Armed Forces and the MOD.

Small Businesses

Mr. Page: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the regulations that have been removed or amended to help small businesses since 1 May 1997. [42783]

Mr. Spellar: The Ministry of Defence is not a Government Department which passes through Parliament regulatory legislation with which industry has to comply. The Department of Trade and Industry is the Government Department responsible for regulations concerning small businesses.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Occupational Pensions

Mr. Quentin Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many occupational pension funds (a) have opted out of the Pensions Act 1995 provisions for member-nominated trustees, (b) have no contributing employee and no pensioner-nominated trustees and (c) have pensioner-nominated trustees. [43961]

Mr. Denham: The Government want to promote healthy and well run occupational pension schemes and attach great importance to the role that member-nominated trustees have to play in achieving this.

We are taking stock of how the member-nominated trustee requirements are working in practice and, as part of our evaluation of the Pensions Act 1995, we will be looking very carefully at how we can further promote member-nominated trustees, including greater involvement for pensioner members.

The time limit for completion of member-nominated trustee exercises ended in May 1998 and research is currently underway to obtain information along the lines requested. It will be published as part of the 1998 Employers' Pension Provision Survey. The National Association of Pension Funds (NAPF) Annual Survey 1997 provides some early indications from data collected from 613 of their member organisations in the last quarter of 1997. This shows that 83 per cent. of schemes adopted employers' alternative arrangements. This is commonly referred to as opting-out although it does not necessarily mean that a scheme does not have member trustees. The NAPF data shows that the vast majority of schemes, including those who used employer proposed arrangements, do, in fact, have one-third or more member trustees, although these trustees have not been nominated and selected under sections 16 or 18 of the Pensions Act 1995.

Incapacity Benefits

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) if she will make a statement on the timetable for execution and evaluation of pilot schemes to test less restrictive definitions of incapacity for benefit purposes; [43560]

(2) what budget the Government have set for 1998–99 for pilot schemes to test less restrictive definitions of incapacity for benefit purposes; [43562]

(3) what plans the Government have to consult with disability groups prior to undertaking pilot schemes to test less restrictive definitions of incapacity for benefit purposes. [43561]

Mr. Denham: Pilots testing more flexible definitions of incapacity to help disabled people into work are due to start in April 1999. No budget has been set for 1998–99.

The Government will continue to consult disabled people and their organisations on our plans to help disabled people who want to work.

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans she has to extend the linking period between work entry and benefit claiming for severe disablement allowance and incapacity benefit. [43564]

Mr. Denham: We are taking action to remove obstacles to work from the benefits system as part of our strategy for helping people with disabilities or long-term sickness who want to work. As one of the first steps in this process we will introduce a new 52 week linking rule for people receiving Severe Disablement Allowance and longer-term incapacity benefits who move into work. We are planning to introduce the new rules, which will take some of the risks out of a return to work, with effect from October 1998.

Therapeutic Earnings

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will introduce greater flexibility in terms of (a) hours, (b) wages and (c) types of work considered therapeutic for the assessment of therapeutic earnings. [43566]

Mr. Denham: The Government announced in the Green Paper, "New Ambitions for Our Country: A New Contract for Welfare", changes to the benefits system to encourage disabled people who have the capacity to work to do so. Once we have seen the results of these initiatives we will then consider whether further changes are needed to the work claimants are permitted to undertake whilst retaining benefit.

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will disregard therapeutic earnings up to the present therapeutic earnings limit for the purposes of income support and housing benefit calculations. [43565]

Mr. Keith Bradley: For people in receipt of the disability premium there is a disregard of £15 in Income Support and Housing Benefit. There are no plans to introduce a special therapeutic earnings disregard in these benefits.

Benefit Integrity Project

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what steps her Department has taken to ensure that DLA recipients subject to Benefit Integrity Project review who have appealed against adjudication do not have to return their Motability vehicle. [43298]

Mr. Denham: Motability is an independent charity, but we have worked with them to consider what might be done in cases where entitlement to the higher rate mobility component (HRMC) of Disability Living Allowance is ended under the Benefit Integrity Project.

The Governors of Motability have introduced, from 5 May 1998, a scheme whereby lease payments may be protected for Motability customers who have requested a review of the decision to end their HRMC entitlement. This protection will continue to the date that this further review is completed and the claimant is notified of the outcome. If that decision is favourable to the customer the lease reverts to its previous status; if the decision is still adverse, payment protection ends and the Motability car will have to be surrendered. The new procedures are explained in Motability literature sent to each customer whose HRMC entitlement is ended.

The costs of payment protection will be met from within Motability scheme funds.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when her Department will undertake a review of Benefit Integrity Project cases where benefit was stopped or reduced prior to the introduction of pre-adjudication check. [43297]

Mr. Denham: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave the hon. Member for North Tayside (Mr. Swinney) on 5 May 1998, Official Report, columns 376–77.

Lone Parents

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to her answer of 18 May 1998, Official Report, column 285, if she will list the variables which are considered in the management data routinely collected on the New Deal for Lone Parents; if she will make a statement on the reasons why housing status is not included; and what plans she has to include such information in the future. [43593]

Mr. Keith Bradley: Management data show the numbers of lone parents who have reached the various key stages in the New Deal for Lone Parents process.

The information collected records:

- the number of initial invitation letters issued;
- the number of initial interviews with Personal Advisers booked;
- the number of initial interviews which have taken place;
- the number of lone parents who agree to participate in the programme following an initial interview;
- the total number of interviews conducted (including initial interviews);
- the number of referrals to Employment Service programmes or other training;
- the number of jobs obtained following participation;
- the number of lone parents who have increased their hours of work following participation.

These points mark the key milestones in the New Deal for Lone Parents process, and the information is collected and collated on a monthly basis.

The following additional information is also collected for each positive work outcome (each case where either a job has been obtained or hours of work have been increased):

for the first work outcome for each participant, a record is kept of whether the hours of work are (a) under 16 hours per week; (b) 16 to 29 hours per week; or (c) 30 hours or more per week;

whether the outcome has led to a move off Income Support;

whether the lone parent has a child under 5 years and 3 months;

for those whose youngest child is over 5 years and 3 months, whether the lone parent put themselves forward before receiving an invitation letter;

in cases where the lone parent has obtained a job not identified by their Personal Adviser, whether they have received other assistance under the New Deal for Lone Parents (such as referral to training, in-work benefit calculations, help with interview skills, preparation of a CV etc); and whether those moving into work were given help with making an application for Family Credit.

Other information may be collected on an ad hoc basis, for example, by interrogation, on a case-by-case basis, of DSS/local authority computer systems and clerical records.

The management data collected are designed to show the extent of participation in and process through the New Deal for Lone Parents programme. In this context it is not appropriate to collect information on other characteristics, such as housing status, of the lone parents who participate.

Full independent evaluation of the New Deal for Lone Parents is being carried out by a research consortium led by Social and Community Planning Research on behalf of the Department. The evaluation will consider housing status and mortgage payments in its assessment. The final evaluation report will be published in autumn 1999.

Pensions

Mr. Dawson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will estimate the cost of establishing a common minimum pension for men and women at 60 years including a breakdown of both costs and savings. [41981]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 18 May 1998]: The information is set out in the table.

The cost of paying a basic State pension of £64.70 to every GB resident aged 60

	£ billion
Gross Retirement Pension cost	40
National Insurance (contributory) benefit offsets	−31.5
Means-tested benefit offsets	−1.5
Net cost	7

Notes:
1. Costs and savings are in 1998/99 prices and are rounded to the nearest £0.5 billion. (−) denotes a saving.
2. National Insurance benefit costs and savings have been provided by the Government Actuary's Department.
3. Behavioural changes have not been allowed for, other than moves between National Insurance benefits.

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans she has, when reviewing the level of the basic state pension, to take account of the rises in the levels of fuel tax and council tax in 1998–99; and if she will make a statement. [42662]

Mr. Denham: We are committed to retain the basic State pension as the foundation of pension provision in retirement, and to increase it at least in line with prices.

The Retail Prices Index used to uprate the basic pension takes into account increases in the price of a wide range of goods and services, including fuel and council tax.

Pensioners with low incomes are entitled to help with their Council Tax through Council Tax Benefit.

Correspondence

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when she will reply to the letter from the hon. Member for Walsall, North of 23 March 1998 concerning a constituent, (Reference 5/3644/28). [43307]

Mr. Field: A reply was sent to my hon. Friend on 22 May 1998.

Sick and Disabled People

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans she has to pilot worker retention schemes (a) as part of and (b) in addition to the New Deal for Sick and Disabled People. [43563]

Mr. Denham: Using some of the £195 million set aside from the Windfall tax we will provide funding to run a number of innovative schemes to test ways of helping disabled people who want to work. These schemes may include worker retention schemes. We expect to announce the first contracts to be awarded towards the end of June.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Public Bodies

Jackie Ballard: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) what is the average attendance fee of (a) male and (b) female members of boards of non-departmental public bodies responsible to her Department; [42818]

(2) what is the average salary of (a) male and (b) female members of boards of non-departmental public bodies responsible to her Department. [42817]

Mrs. Beckett: The majority of board members of non-departmental public bodies responsible to my Department give their time and service voluntarily, and do not receive payment other than normal travel and subsistence expenses. Where members do receive remuneration, this can vary between an annual salary, an honorarium, or an attendance fee—which can be a daily or half-daily rate, or calculated on a per meeting or per case basis. Individuals' remuneration therefore is not directly comparable. Full details of all payments to board members of non-departmental public bodies—by gender, are given in the Cabinet Office publication 'Public Bodies'. Copies of 'Public Bodies' 1997 are available in the Libraries of the House.

Public Appointments

Jackie Ballard: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when her Department's action plan for increasing the number of women holding public appointments will be published; and if she will place a copy in the Library. [42819]

Mrs. Beckett: My Department's action plan for increasing the number of women holding public appointments will be published shortly. Copies will be placed in the Libraries of the House.

Coal Industry

Mr. Boswell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when she will announce her conclusions on the recent review of the coal industry contracts and the consumption of coal in power stations. [43063]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 21 May 1998]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the right hon. Member for Wokingham (Mr. Redwood) on 2 February 1998, Official Report, columns 479–80.

Power Stations

Mr. Boswell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many applications for construction and operation of gas-fired power stations are currently awaiting decision; at what stage; from which applicants; for how much capacity; and if she will make a statement. [43061]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 21 May 1998]: The following is the information requested:

Station	Applicant	Size(MW)
Cottam (dual firing)	PowerGen plc	1,000
Spalding	InterGen (UK) Ltd	800
Baglan Bay	Baglan CoGeneration Ltd	1,200
Partington	AES Partington Ltd	380
Shotton	Eastern Generation Ltd	215
Barking	Barking Power Ltd	154
Rugeley B (dual firing)	Eastern Generation Ltd	1,000
Drakelow C (dual firing)	Eastern Generation Ltd	1,000
Teeside	Teeside Power Ltd	45
York	British Sugar plc	80
Castleford	Yorkshire CoGen Ltd	56

Our general approach to those awaiting decision is set out in the reply given by my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade to my hon. Friend the Member for Rugby and Kenilworth (Mr. King) of 22 December 1997, Official Report, columns 519–20.

It should be noted that the previous Government gave the go-ahead for some 23,000 MW of new gas-fired capacity, mostly combined cycle gas turbine stations but some combined heat and power (CHP). We inherited 21 applications for new gas-fired projects, totalling some 10,500 MW. Since coming into office we have given approval to 9 projects, 7 of which were industrial CHP totalling some 600 MW with another having an element of CHP.

Mr. Boswell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will list in normal order of consideration the various consents to be given before construction and operation of a gas-fired power station may be initiated. [43062]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 21 May 1998]: The construction, extension, or operation of a gas-fired power station with a capacity of more than 50 megawatts requires the President of the Board of Trade's consent under section 36 of the Electricity Act 1989. The President's approval is also required under section 14 of the Energy Act 1976 to use gas as the fuel for power stations over 10 megawatts. In addition, the President's consent under section 37 of the Electricity Act 1989 may also be required if the proposed station is to be connected to the transmission system via an overhead electric line. Other consents and approvals also need to be obtained from other statutory bodies, for example an Integrated Pollution Control licence under the Environmental Protection Act 1990 has to be sought from the Environment Agency. It is for the applicant to determine when and in which order to seek the necessary approvals.

Petroleum Industry

Mr. Boswell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the actual and percentage reduction in the number of retail petroleum outlets in the last 12 months for which figures are available; and what assessment he has made of the adequacy of competition in the sector. [43100]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths [holding answer 21 May 1998]: The Director General of Fair Trading has considered the evidence on this as part of his report on 'Competition in the Supply of Petrol in the UK'. I have asked the Director General to respond to the hon. Gentleman.

Mr. Boswell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what studies she has commissioned into the pricing behaviour of petrol retailers on motorways relative to general purpose roads; and if she will make a statement. [43088]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths [holding answer 21 May 1998]: None—since the Director General of Fair Trading is responsible for keeping the operation of markets under review. The Office of Fair Trading report 'Competition in the supply of petrol in the UK', published on 18 May, does not address the particular issue of the pricing behaviour of petrol retailers on motorways.

Mr. Boswell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade by what means she will monitor the retail petroleum industry for potential abuse of dominant market position. [43071]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths [holding answer 21 May 1998]: The Director General of Fair Trading is responsible for keeping the operation of markets under review. He has set out proposals for further monitoring of the petrol retailing market in Annex 3.1 of his report on 'Competition in the Supply of Petrol in the UK' published on 18 May. Copies have been placed in the libraries of the House.

Mr. Boswell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will ensure that those types of vertical agreements in the retail petroleum industry which the

OFT has determined are not covered by the undertakings given by the oil companies in 1966 are subject to equivalent measures to ensure competition. [43097]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths [holding answer 21 May 1998]: I understand that the Director General of Fair Trading will shortly commence a review of the undertakings given by the oil companies in 1966; he will advise me whether modifications are necessary. The undertakings were last modified in January 1994. In addition, any complaints about vertical agreements not covered by the undertakings should be put to the Director General for his consideration.

Mr. Boswell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what action she proposes to take in response to the recent OFT report on the retail petrol industry. [43070]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths [holding answer 21 May 1998]: The Director General of Fair Trading has responsibility for keeping under review the operation of the retail petrol market, and powers to act where necessary to promote competition. I am studying his conclusions. The hon. Member should address any comments on the report to the Director General of Fair Trading.

Mr. Kidney: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to her answer of 11 February 1998, Official Report, column 218, when she expects to receive the report of the Director General of Fair Trading regarding the wholesale and retail petrol market. [42114]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: I received a copy of the Director General's report on the wholesale and retail petrol market in the UK on 18 May.

EU Postal Directive

Mr. Boswell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when she expects the United Kingdom to adopt the EU Postal Directive; and if it will be fully applied in the United Kingdom. [43799]

Mr. Ian McCartney: By early February 1999 and the Directive will be fully applied.

Post Office

Mr. Boswell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will set out the calculation underlying the most recent Post Office external financing limit. [43804]

Mr. Ian McCartney: The Post Office external financing limits for 1997–98 and for the current financial year remain as set by the previous Government in line with our commitment to maintain public expenditure at the levels they had set.

Parcelforce

Mr. Boswell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will make a statement on the current (a) financial situation of and (b) plans for the future of Parcelforce. [43806]

Mr. Ian McCartney: Parcelforce recorded a loss of £21m in 1996–97; the Post Office accounts for 1997–98, which will include details of the Parcelforce financial performance last year, are expected to be published next month. The second stage of our review of how best to grant the Post Office greater commercial freedom within the public sector is looking at a range of issues, including the future status of Parcelforce. We hope to announce our conclusions on this second stage of the review in the Autumn.

Meanwhile, the development of new twin hubs at Coventry Airport for use by Parcelforce for express and international traffic, for which planning permission has recently been received, will represent a major step forward in the modernisation of the business, and should help to secure its longer-term future.

Royal Mail

Mr. Boswell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what representations she has received concerning the investigation of local complaints about the security of Royal Mail. [43059]

Mr. Ian McCartney [holding answer 21 May 1998]: One representation has been received.

Mr. Boswell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what representations she has received concerning the premature collection of mail from post boxes before the advertised time of last posting. [43060]

Mr. Ian McCartney [holding answer 21 May 1998]: A small number of representations from around the country have been received in the last year about collection of mail from post boxes before the advertised collection time.

Utility Regulation

Mr. Caplin: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will establish a unified regulator for the electricity and gas industry with particular responsibility for monitoring cross-subsidy between the two markets. [43108]

Mrs. Beckett: In the Green Paper on utility regulation 'A Fair Deal for Consumers', which I published on 25 March, there is a proposal that the electricity and gas regulators should be replaced as soon as possible with a single energy regulator, and OFFER and OFGAS should be merged to create a single regulatory office. The duties of the new energy regulator will need to acknowledge the convergence of the gas and electricity markets. It will also be necessary to ensure that the creation of a joint energy regulator is underpinned by the proper integration of the supporting regulatory regimes.

The Green Paper also proposes that, as an interim measure, steps should be taken to ensure collaboration on the regulatory issues raised by integrated energy markets, and strategic planning set in hand for the creation of the single regulatory office.

Procedures are now in hand to appoint a Director General of Gas Supply as from November 1998. It is expected that the successful candidate will also be appointed as Director General of Electricity Supply, at or soon after appointment as DGGS. Subject to Parliamentary approval of legislation, it is also expected that he or she would later be appointed as Energy Regulator for Great Britain.

Energy Industry Reviews

Mr. Paterson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) when each of the current reviews relating to the energy industry will be completed; [42596]

(2) how many reviews of the energy industry the Government are conducting. [42600]

Mrs. Beckett: A Green Paper on Utility Regulation, including regulation of gas and electricity, was published in March, and the consultation period extended until the end of May. My hon. Friend, the Minister for Science, Energy and Industry, is currently considering future policy and programme options for renewables, and expects to make a further announcement later this year. My Department will be publishing an Energy Paper setting out our policy on clean coal technology in the Summer. The review of energy sources for power generation is expected to reach conclusions by the end of June. The review of electricity trading arrangements, which is being co-ordinated by OFFER, will report in July.

Home Workers

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is her policy towards the regulation of home worker schemes which require non-returnable registration fees; and if she will make a statement. [42686]

Mr. Ian McCartney [holding answer 19 May 1998]: People should never send money in advance for work at home. I have this week launched a publicity campaign to warn against the risks of falling victim to homeworking scams. Responsibility for investigating complaints about the promotion of such schemes lies with the Advertising Standards Authority. The British Codes of Advertising and Sales Promotion contain specific requirements for homeworking schemes and breaches of the codes in this respect are taken very seriously.

Channel Tunnel Rail Link

Mr. Paul Clark: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment her Department has made of the impact on small businesses of a fast rail link from the Channel Tunnel to the north via Ebbsfleet, Stratford and St. Pancras. [43093]

Mrs. Roche: My right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister is aware of the economic regeneration aspects of the Channel Tunnel Rail Link (CTRL). Negotiations on the future of the CTRL continue.

Cambodia

Ann Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many export licences to British firms for arms have been (a) granted, (b) refused, and (c) revoked for export to Cambodia since May 1997 broken down by category of licence; and what human rights considerations were taken into account when considering the licences. [40811]

Mrs. Roche: The Export Control Organisation's computer databases have been interrogated, and the following results were obtained:

Between 2 May 1997 and 3 April 1998, three Standard Individual Export Licences were issued covering the export to consignees or endusers in Cambodia of goods subject to export control by being listed in Part III of Schedule 1 to the Export of Goods (Control) Order 1994, the so-called Military List. The entry in the relevant legislation under which the export of goods is controlled is known as their rating. Two of these licences covered goods with a rating of ML4; the other covered goods with a rating of ML13. In addition to those shown above, one Standard Individual Export Licence was issued for an export to Cambodia under the End-Use Control.

In the same period, no Open Individual Export Licences covering such exports were issued; no Standard or Open Individual Export Licences covering such exports were revoked and no applications for Standard or Open Individual Export Licences covering such exports were refused.

This does not include any Media OIELs that may have been issued during this period. Media OIELs authorise the export to all destinations of protective clothing, mainly for the protection of aid agency workers and journalists, when working in areas of conflict.

This information should be considered in light of my answer to my hon. Friend the Member for Don Valley (Caroline Flint) on 30 October 1997, Official Report, columns 870–71.

During the period, goods on the Military List may have been exported to Cambodia under certain Open General Licences, though it cannot be assumed that any such exports actually took place. Copies of all Open General Licences that were valid at any time during the period are in the Library of the House.

All applications for licences to export goods on the Military List are considered on a case-by-case basis against the criteria announced by my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary on 28 July 1997, Official Report, columns 26–29. The Government take into account respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms in the recipient country, and will not issue an export licence if there is a clearly identifiable risk that the proposed export might be used for internal repression.

Astra

Mr. Cohen: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the total public cost of (a) Treasury solicitors and (b) others in connection with the disqualification proceedings against Mr. Gerald James and the directors of Astra Holdings. [41875]

Mrs. Beckett: The final figures have yet to be determined, but Treasury Solicitors' costs are likely to be about £280,000. The costs (£122,000) of two directors have already been paid after proceedings against them were discontinued in May 1996. Following the request by the judge that I personally consider the handling of the case, and my subsequent decision to abandon the proceedings against the remaining four directors (three of whom are legally aided) my Department will meet their costs, to be taxed on the standard basis, unless previously agreed. It is too early accurately to predict what those costs might amount to.

Nuclear Material

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) what guidelines her Department has in place to restrict the supply of weapons-usable nuclear material to foreign countries; [43065]

(2) what steps her Department takes to prevent the use for military purposes abroad of weapons-usable nuclear material of United Kingdom origin. [43066]

Mrs. Roche [holding answer 21 May 1998]: Transfers of nuclear materials from the UK to other countries are subject to strict controls. The requirements in the case of separated plutonium and uranium enriched in the isotopes 235 or 233 to more than 20% (highly-enriched uranium or HEU) are particularly stringent.

The UK's export controls on nuclear and nuclear-related goods are derived from international nuclear non-proliferation commitments and membership of international nuclear export control regimes, in particular the Nuclear Suppliers Group (NSG) whose members have agreed common guidelines for the transfer of nuclear and nuclear-related goods and technology. The NSG guidelines are reproduced as International Atomic Energy Agency document INFCIRC 254 Parts I and II as amended. In addition, the UK was among a group of nine countries which recently adopted a set of Guidelines for the Management of Plutonium published as INFCIRC 549 which adds a further requirement in the case of transfers of plutonium.

These commitments are given effect in the relevant legislation, which in this case is Council Regulation (EC) No. 3381/94 on the export of dual use goods and the related Council Decision 94/942/CSFP as amended. Separated plutonium and HEU require an export licence—even in the case of transfers to other EU Member States.

Before such a licence could be issued certain conditions would have to be fulfilled which include assurances from the recipient Government as set out in the NSG guidelines in relation to peaceful use, physical protection and retransfer of the materials. Transfers to non-nuclear weapon States (NNWS) are only authorised once the receiving State has brought into force an agreement with the IAEA requiring the application of safeguards on all source and special fissionable materials in its current and future peaceful activities. In the case of separated plutonium and HEU, the UK's consent would be required for any retransfer.

Moreover, pursuant to our adoption of the Guidelines for the Management of Plutonium and in addition to the foregoing, before any shipment of separated plutonium exceeding 50 grams to one recipient country in any period of 12 months is undertaken, we require the recipient to provide a certificate containing details including the end-use and timetable for utilisation. The correctness of the information in the certificate has to be confirmed by the Government of the recipient country. This builds on the existing requirement within the EU for a similar certificate to be completed in the case of transfers of plutonium and HEU.

In addition to these governmental assurances an end-use undertaking would also be required from the consignee explicitly excluding uses that might result in any weapon of mass destruction and an assurance that the goods would not be used in any unsafeguarded nuclear fuel cycle activity.

As noted, the controls that we have in place on transfers include requirements for the application of IAEA safeguards. The purpose of these safeguards is to ensure that nuclear materials are not diverted to nuclear weapons or other nuclear explosive devices.

Dounreay

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will place in the Library a copy of the Nuclear Installations Inspectorate's report on Dounreay's fuel cycle area, referred to in the Nuclear Installations Inspectorate's Site Inspector's Quarterly report for UKAEA-Dounreay for 1 January to 31 March. [43067]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 21 May 1998]: The NII report covers areas that will form the subject of the major audit into the Management of Safety at the Dounreay plant which was announced by HSE on Friday 15 May. The report of that audit will be published later this summer.

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when a statement will be made regarding the UKAEA application for funding for the repair of Dounreay plant D1206; and what criteria will govern her decision. [43069]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 21 May 1998]: My officials are in discussion with UKAEA about their proposals for the repair of the Dounreay plant D1206 and, when they have been concluded, they will make a recommendation to me regarding plans for the future of the D1206 plant. Depending on the outcome of these discussions, I may wish to consult more widely before making a decision.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what directions and instructions have been issued in the last month to the UKAEA by the Safety Inspectorate. [42376]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 18 May 1998]: I have been advised by the UKAEA that the Nuclear Installations Inspectorate (NII), during the past month, have issued one direction which requires the UKAEA to shut down all processing activities in the Dounreay Fuel Cycle Area facility other than those operations and activities which are necessary to maintain the safe condition of the facility. In addition, and following on from the formal direction, the NII have issued the two following oral instructions. Firstly, no excavation permits may be issued until further notice and all excavation permits currently in force must be suspended until further notice. The only exception is the work to repair the damaged cable. Secondly, evidence must be preserved for the NII investigation into the power failure.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the President of the Board of Trade which facilities at Dounreay are not currently functioning; and what recent reports she has received on the safety and condition of the plant. [42120]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 18 May 1998]: No reprocessing facilities are currently functioning in the Fuel Cycle Area at Dounreay apart from those required for safety purposes. Otherwise, normal Decommissioning and

Waste Management Operations are continuing at the site. Work at Dounreay continues to be subject to strict independent regulation by the Health and Safety Executive's Nuclear Installations Inspectorate (NII) and the Scottish Environment Protection Agency. My officials hold quarterly meetings with the NII at which policy matters are discussed. Specific safety issues are a matter between the NII and UKAEA, but my Department does have sight of the NII Site Inspector's quarterly report on Dounreay. I expect my Department to receive full reports from both UKAEA and NII after they have concluded their investigations into the recent incident at the site.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what investment the UKAEA is planning at its Dounreay facilities in the next three years; and what revisions to these plans have been made in the last six months. [42122]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 18 May 1998]: The UKAEA's expenditure plans at Dounreay are described in the 1996–97 UKAEA Annual Review, which is available in the Library of the House. Such plans are reviewed at least annually by my officials. It is normal practice to withhold precise details of expected project costs to protect UKAEA's ability to subject the work to competition. The only significant revision in the last six months was the decision to retrieve waste from the Shaft which was reported to Parliament on 31 March 1998. We are currently waiting for UKAEA to complete their proposal for investment in a replacement dissolver in the Prototype Fast Reactor fuel reprocessing plant. This expenditure by UKAEA is aimed at discharging their main function which is removal of their existing nuclear liabilities safely, with due regard for the environment and at minimum cost to the taxpayer.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if the recycling capacity at Dounreay is currently operational. [42121]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 18 May 1998]: The reprocessing capacity at Dounreay is not currently operational. UKAEA suspended all reprocessing operations on Friday 8 May, pending a full safety review following an incident on the previous day.

Indonesia

Mrs. Ann Cryer: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the outstanding level of ECGD exposure for the supply of Hawk Fighter jets to Indonesia. [43621]

Mrs. Roche: ECGD's exposure, which covers interest as well as the principal value of the guaranteed loans, currently amounts to £531 million.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will make a statement on the impact of recent disturbances in Indonesia on British exports to that country. [42918]

Mrs. Roche [holding answer 21 May 1998]: The economic and political crisis being experienced by Indonesia has inevitably affected UK exports to Indonesia. Exports fell by 50.3 per cent. in the first quarter of this year.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Flight: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many full-time equivalent positions within her Department are currently occupied by people working on (a) millennium and (b) single currency compliance requirements. [41928]

Mrs. Beckett: The numbers of people within my Department working on the following are:

(a) Millennium—About 7.6 full-time equivalent staff are dealing with Millennium issues relating to information systems and to estates and facilities management in the Department. A further 2.5 staff are involved in assisting UK businesses to deal with the problem of the Millennium date change in co-ordination with Action 2000 which DTI set up earlier this year. The numbers may vary according to the needs of the programmes.

(b) Single currency—Some 1.5 full-time equivalent staff are directly involved in helping UK firms prepare for Economic and Monetary Union. These officials are working closely with Treasury's Euro Preparations Unit, which has the primary role in raising awareness of UK firms to the implications of EMU and helping them to prepare. A number of DTI staff have been seconded to the Treasury to work in that unit.

Duty Free

Mr. Gale: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what surveys have been carried out by (a) the Government of the United Kingdom and (b) the European Union to establish the effect upon jobs of the proposed abolition of the duty-free trade; and if she will make a statement. [42342]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 19 May 1998]: The Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions has undertaken a study into the effects on the transport sector of the abolition of intra-EU duty and tax free sales in 1999. The European Union has not undertaken a survey to establish the effect upon jobs of the proposed abolition of duty and tax free sales within the EU. The Government's position remains that they would not oppose a study should there be a consensus amongst Member States in favour of such a study. However, when these matters were discussed at 19 May EFOFIN Council, there was no consensus amongst Member States to call for a Community-wide study of the impact of abolition.

Solar Energy

Sir Alastair Goodlad: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how much her Department spent on research into solar energy in (a) 1996–97 and (b) 1997–98; and what plans she has for future expenditure on this. [43126]

Mr. Battle: My Department, under its New and Renewable Energy Programme, spent £2.0 million (net of any associated receipts) in 1996–97, and £1.6 million (net of any associated receipts) in 1997–98 on RD&D into solar energy. Within the overall solar budget the proportion allocated to photovoltaics is increasing as part of DTI's funding of the Energy Design Advice Scheme (EDAS). EDAS is being funded by the Department of Environment, Transport and the Regions (DETR) while they consider the shape of a future energy advice scheme. Future expenditure plans are the subject of the renewable policy review, the outcome of which will be announced later this year.

In addition, the Engineering and Physical Science Research Council (EPSRC) has been spending £1 million a year over the past three years on basic and applied research, and the Office of Science and Technology (OST) has committed £1 million to the £2.5 million Foresight Challenge Solar programme which aims to put photovoltaic arrays into 100 schools and colleges across the country by 2000.

More Group Plc

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what contacts the Minister for Competition and Consumer Affairs has had with executives or personnel of More Group plc, or its subsidiaries, in connection with the bid by J. C. Decaux. [43213]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: None.

Mergers

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many mergers she has referred to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission against the advice of the Director-General of Fair Trading since May 1997; what representations she has received on this issue from United Kingdom financial institutions or businesses; and if she will make it her policy to state in full her reasons for all decisions taken against Office of Fair Trading advice. [43201]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: Between 1 May 1997 and 21 May 1998 my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade disagreed with the Director-General of Fair Trading's ("DGFT's") advice on whether or not to refer a merger to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission ("MMC") on just three cases out of 189. These were National Express Group ("NEG")/Central Trains, NEG/ScotRail and PacifiCorp/The Energy Group.

In each case, the President or the DGFT received representations from competitors, customers or other third parties both for and against reference to the MMC.

On each occasion, the Department's announcement referred explicitly to the President's disagreement with the DGFT's advice. It is our intention to continue this practice. The President has made it clear that it is her policy to make references primarily on competition grounds. Where other public interest considerations lead to an MMC reference against the advice of the DGFT, this will be made clear in the announcement, as was done when PacifiCorp/The Energy Group was referred.

Funerals

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will make a statement about her Department's plans to ensure adequate protection of consumers purchasing their funerals in advance. [42053]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: I refer the hon Member to the reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Hove (Mr. Caplin) on 22 January 1998, Official Report, column 655. The Department is actively discussing this with interested parties.

Post Office Users National Council

Mr. Kidney: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will accept nominations for membership of the Post Office Users National Council from rural community councils. [43329]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: An advertisement for appointments to a number of consumer councils, including the Post office Users National Council, will appear in the press in the next couple of weeks. At the same time we seek nominations for appointment from a range of bodies, and will be happy to consider any names put forward by rural community councils for appointment to the Post Office Users National Council as part of this process.

Anyone wishing to apply to be considered for appointment to the Post Office Users National Council should write to:

Consumer Affairs & Competition Policy Directorate 2b
Department of Trade & Industry
Room 4.T.11
1 Victoria Street
London SW1H OET.

Corporation Tax

Mr. Livsey: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when she will announce the outcome of the review into corporation tax exemption under Section 508 of the Income and Corporation Taxes Act 1988. [42869]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 21 May 1998]: I hope to issue revised guidance notes for applicants by July.

Ice Cream

Fiona Mactaggart: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what action she will take during the Presidency of the EU to support the European Commission in resisting attempts to delay implementation of decisions designed to ensure fair competition in ice cream markets; and if she will make a statement. [43101]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths [holding answer 21 May 1998]: The European Commission is the competent investigative authority on EC competition law cases. It is therefore the appropriate body to respond to attempts to challenge its decisions or delay their implementation. However, I can assure my hon. Friend that we support the full and fair application of EC competition rules.

London Art Market

Miss McIntosh: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what representations she has made to Britain's EU partners concerning the preservation of the London art market. [42005]

Mr. Ian McCartney: The Government continue to press the case for the preservation of the London art market. So far as artists' resale rights are concerned, the Government have argued repeatedly that the European Commission's proposal is ill-considered and would damage the international competitiveness of Community art markets, in particular the London art market, and would lead to a net loss of earnings and jobs in the Community. We are actively seeking the support of other Member States to defeat the proposal.

Vehicle Licensing

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) what the cost is per licence of providing a vehicle licensing service by the Post Office; and if she will provide a breakdown of the costs; [41045]

(2) what the cost is, per licence, of providing a vehicle licensing service using the postal service. [41047]

Mr. Ian McCartney: This information is commercially confidential.

Export Licences

Mr. Paterson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many export licence applications are currently pending. [42579]

Mrs. Roche [holding answer 18 May 1998]: Licences to export arms and other goods subject to control for strategic reasons are issued by the President of the Board of Trade and the Export Control Organisation of the Department of Trade and Industry is the licensing authority. All relevant individual licence applications are circulated by the DTI to other Government departments with an interest as determined by them in line with their policy responsibilities. These include the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, the Ministry of Defence and the Department for International Development.

ECO management data on the processing of licence applications are compiled on the basis of four-week periods. At the end of the last four week period for which statistics have been compiled—ie 4 April 1998 to 1 May 1998—a total of 1,752 applications were awaiting a decision: these applications comprised applications for new standard or open individual export licences to export strategic goods and applications for the renewal or amendment of existing individual licences. This compares with 2,184 outstanding applications on 17 October 1997. ECO is also the licensing authority for goods whose export is only controlled because of UN trade sanctions but data on the number of applications awaiting a decision are not compiled as most decisions are subject to UN authorisation, which can take some time.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how old is the longest outstanding application for an export licence. [42580]

Mrs. Roche [holding answer 18 May 1998]: Licences to export arms and other goods subject to control for strategic reasons are issued by the President of the Board of Trade, and the Export Control Organisation of the Department of Trade and Industry is the licensing authority. All relevant individual licence applications are circulated by the DTI to other Government Departments with an interest, as determined by them in line with their policy responsibilities. These include the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, the Ministry of Defence, and the Department for International Development.

Of applications for individual licences pending a decision at 21 May 1998, the oldest application for a Standard Individual Export Licence was received in August 1996; processing of this application cannot be completed until the applicant fulfils a request from the Export Control Organisation to supply an end-user undertaking. The oldest application for an Open Individual Export Licence pending a decision on this date was received in February 1996. My Department has now received the necessary advice from advisers in other Government departments, and after final checks the licence will be issued.

Consultation Papers

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will list the consultation papers published since 1 May 1997 giving the date of publication, closing date for submissions and the number of respondents. [42251]

Mrs. Beckett: A list of significant consultation papers has been placed in the Library.

Arms Sales

Mr. Redwood: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how frequently she receives reports on arms sales to African markets. [42378]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 18 May 1998]: Reports on arms sales to any market are not routinely received by any Minister in the Department of Trade & Industry. The Defence Export Sales Organisation of the Ministry of Defence is primarily responsible for assisting the British defence industry to promote its goods and services overseas.

Information

Mr. Sanders: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if her Department operates a monitoring exercise of persistent inquirers for information. [42632]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 19 May 1998]: My Department provides a great deal of information to business, the scientific community, and the general public in pursuit of its objectives. No central exercise to monitor persistent inquirers for information is undertaken.

Competitiveness White Paper

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if an environmental appraisal will be produced as part of the Competitiveness White Paper, using "Policy Guidance on Policy Appraisal and the Environment". [42667]

Mrs. Beckett: The forthcoming Competitiveness White Paper will set out the Government's vision for sustainable wealth creation, based on a high-skill, high-investment, innovative, modern economy. It will contain a range of policies and initiatives for companies themselves to improve their performance, and for Government and others to create the right framework and conditions to foster such an improvement. It will be for each public and private sector body involved to address the environmental implications of their activities, including where necessary, through specific environmental appraisal.

Caravans

Mr. Woolas: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans she has for further protection of consumers regarding the buying and selling of static caravans. [42913]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: The Director General of Fair Trading has recently agreed a revised code of practice for holiday caravans with the two main site owners' organisations which give clear rights to those buying and selling holiday caravans. Buyers of holiday caravans also benefit in the same way as other consumers from general consumer protection legislation, such as the Sale of Goods Act 1979 and the Unfair Terms in Consumer Contracts Regulations 1994. The responsibility for legislation covering residential caravans lies with the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions.

HEALTH

Cosmetic Surgery

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will legislate to restrict the use of the term cosmetic surgeon to doctors with specialist qualifications and membership of the British Association of Plastic Surgeons or the British Association of Aesthetic Plastic Surgeons. [34164]

Mr. Boateng: Legislation would not be practicable because cosmetic surgery is not a defined specialty and not all cosmetic surgery practitioners are plastic surgeons.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will estimate the number of (a) men and (b) women who have undergone cosmetic surgery in each year since 1990. [34163]

Mr. Boateng: It is not possible to estimate the number of people who have undergone cosmetic surgery because it is not a defined medical specialty. Available information relates to the number of consultant episodes of treatment in which an operation or procedure was recorded "for purposes other than for remedying health states".

In 1994/95 there were 3,676 such episodes in the National Health Service in England.

Organophosphates

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what (a) guidance and (b) information his Department provides to general practitioners in farming areas on the symptoms and health risks associated with organophosphates; and if he will place a copy of this information in the Library. [41379]

Ms Jowell: The advice given by the Department has been widely distributed on a national basis and has not been confined to farming areas.

The Chief Medical Officer wrote to all doctors in England in 1991 and again with the Chief Executive of the Veterinary Medicines Directorate in June 1993 to alert doctors to the possibility of adverse effects from exposure to pesticides and certain veterinary medicines and to remind them of the reporting schemes for human adverse reactions to veterinary products operated by the Employment Medical Advisory Service and the Ministry of Agriculture Fisheries and Food's Veterinary Medicines Directive. The Chief Medical Officers in Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland also wrote to doctors in those countries.

An article in the October 1995 edition of Chief Medical Officer's Update, sent to all doctors in England, dealt with both the acute and chronic effects of organophosphates and the methods of reporting adverse reactions to them.

A further article, in the April 1996 edition of Update (England only) informed all doctors of the publication, in the same month, of the new edition of the book "Pesticide Poisoning: Notes for the Guidance of Medical Practitioners". This book was sent by all United Kingdom Health Departments to general practices, accident and emergency departments and consultants in communicable disease control (and equivalents) with a covering letter.

Copies of this book were also sent to the Presidents of the Royal Colleges under cover of an explanatory letter which encouraged them to draw the book to the attention of their Fellows/Members through their continuing medical education programmes.

Copies of the book "Pesticide Poisoning: Notes for the Guidance of Medical Practitioners" are available in the Library.

We will look closely at the Report of the "Working Party on Management of Patients Chronically Exposed to Organophosphate Sheep Dips" set up by the Royal College of Physicians and the Royal College of Psychiatrists to be published later this year to identify issues for action including whether further guidance to medical practitioners is necessary.

Asthma

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list for each local authority area, the number of emergency admissions of patients suffering from asthma and breathing-related illnesses for each year since 1992. [41948]

Mr. Boateng: The available information has been placed in the Library. It gives estimated episodes of treatment, by health authority, in National Health Service hospitals in England for the years 1992–93 to 1995–96 (the most recent for which data are available), for emergency admissions with a primary diagnosis of asthma and other chronic lower respiratory diseases. These figures represent the number of episodes of care under individual consultants.

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the potential savings to the NHS for treating asthma and other breathing-related illnesses from a reduction in air pollution levels of (a) five per cent., (b) 10 per cent., (c) 15 per cent., (d) 20 per cent. and (e) over 20 per cent. [41947]

Ms Jowell: None. The January 1998 report by the Department's Committee on the Medical Effects of Air Pollutants, "Quantification of the Effects of Air Pollution on Health in the UK", copies of which are in the Library, illustrated that air pollution has a substantial effect on people's health. It included estimates of the numbers of people affected by different air pollutants. The Committee concluded that deaths and hospital admissions and readmissions were likely to be brought forward as a result of exposure to air pollution. That is why we are committed to reduce air pollution both in this country and in Europe.

However, there is no guarantee that reducing air pollution by particular amounts would lead to a corresponding reduction in the health effects nor in treatment costs associated with such illnesses. For instance, not all air pollutants affect people with asthma. Also, because some pollutants have no threshold of effects—that is, effects can be detected even when concentrations of particular pollutants are low—there will clearly be an effect at any level for some people.

Dentists

Mr. Prior: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many NHS dentists practise in Norfolk; and what is the average number of people registered with each dental practitioner (a) in Norfolk and (b) nationally. [42770]

Mr. Milburn: Information on the number of dentists and patients registered with them is available by health authority. The table gives details for England, and for East Norfolk Health Authority and North West Anglia Health Authority which cover Norfolk.

General dental service: number of dentists[1] and average number of registered patients per dentist at 31 March 1998

	Number of dentists	Average number of registered patients per dentist
England	16,830	1,477
East Norfolk HA	215	1,572
North West Anglia HA	111	1,635

[1] Principals, assistants and vocational trainees (not salaried, hospital and community dentists)

Mental Health

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to ensure that nurses staffing the NHS direct telephone advice line are trained in advising people on mental health issues and dealing with people who may have mental health problems. [42876]

Mr. Boateng: We recognise the importance of ensuring that the NHS Direct service can appropriately meet the needs of people with mental health problems. We will ensure that this is addressed by NHS Direct sites in their plans for staff training.

Family Planning

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance has been issued to health authorities about providing a choice of sources for family planning services; and when it was last issued. [42887]

Ms Jowell: Departmental guidance on National Health Service family planning services was issued in January 1992. The circular HSG(92)6 "Guidelines for reviewing family planning services : Guidance for Regions", copies of which are in the Library, states that specialist family planning clinic services should complement those provided by general practitioners. The guidance asks health authorities to consider the best way to integrate the two to ensure the most comprehensive range of effective family planning services is provided to their local populations.

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list, by health authority, the number of objections which he has received since 1 January about reductions in family planning services. [42888]

Ms Jowell: Since 1 January 1998, proposals from Northamptonshire Health Authority, which include changes to local family planning service provision, have been referred to Ministers for a final decision.

Fit for Business Campaign

Mr. Caplin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans his Department has to support the national Fit For Business campaign. [43058]

Ms Jowell: We welcome initiatives in the private sector in promoting health in the workplace. Our new health strategy, "Our Healthier Nation", identifies healthy workplaces as one of the key settings to help deliver our aims to improve the health of the population as a whole. We also support the "Health at Work" and "Workplace Health" initiatives, through the Health Education Authority, which provides information, advice and research on health promotion in the workplace.

Drugs Budget

Mrs. Ellman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the gross cost of drugs to the NHS in actual and percentage terms for the last year for which information is available; and what is the estimated expenditure in the current year. [43031]

Mr. Milburn: In 1996/97 total expenditure on drugs was £4.7 billion accounting for 14 per cent. of total National Health Service expenditure.

Final outturn figures for 1997/98 and forecasts for the current year are not yet available.

Child Developmental Checks

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many health authorities currently carry out 18 months old developmental checks on children; and how many do not; [42975]

(2) what guidance has been issued by his Department to health authorities regarding developmental checks on young children. [42976]

Mr. Boateng: Developmental checks on children, including at the age of 18–24 months, form part of the core child health surveillance programme recommended in guidance issued by the Department in 1992—which updated the content and focus of this activity in line with developments in medical knowledge. The programme is led by general practitioners, who are trained and accredited in the practice of child health surveillance, with the assistance of health visitors and other members of the primary health care team. The majority (some 94 per cent.) of general practitioners participate in this service. We do not know of any health authority area where the service is not available.

GP Lists

Mr. Andy King: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the circumstances under which a patient may be removed from a general practitioner's list and on the healthcare arrangements which are available to patients who are not registered with a general practitioner. [43160]

Mr. Milburn: General practitioners' terms of service provide that a doctor has the right, subject to certain necessary safeguards to ensure ongoing necessary treatment is not disrupted, to remove patients from their list without giving a reason unless they are seeking immediate removal due to an act or threat of violence in which case a complaint has to be made to the police.

General practitioners' terms of service also require that, unless they have been specifically relieved from such responsibilities, they provide healthcare to any person to whom they may be requested to give treatment which is immediately required owing to an accident or other emergency at any place in their practice area.

Cardiomyopathy

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will estimate the number of teenagers who might be at risk from cardiomyopathy leading to sudden death. [43130]

Mr. Boateng: While cardiomyopathy is one of the leading causes of sudden death in teenagers, it is not known how many people are affected by cardiomyopathy nor, of those who are, how many might be at risk. The Department is working with clinicians and voluntary organisations on the diagnosis, management and treatment of this condition.

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the cost of establishing a national screening programme for cardiomyopathy for all children starting secondary school to identify those suffering from Wolff-Parkinson-White Syndrome. [43129]

Mr. Boateng: The National Screening Committee (NSC), which offers health Ministers advice about the case for individual screening programmes, has not yet considered the case for screening children for cardiomyopathy. The NSC has commissioned a study of the emerging evidence which will inform its consideration later in the year. Any decision on the introduction of a national programme will be made in the light of that consideration.

Epilepsy

Mr. Jim Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received and what response he has made on the issue of sudden unexpected death in epilepsy. [43330]

Mr. Boateng: Since November 1997, 37 private office cases have been received on the subject of sudden unexpected death from epilepsy (SUDEP) and one Parliamentary Question has been asked in the same period. Virtually all the private office correspondence has been from families who have lost a relative through SUDEP.

The Department has awarded £45,000 in total for the years 1997–2000 to the organisation Epilepsy Bereaved? through a Section 64 grant, to help them raise awareness of SUDEP.

I shall be meeting representatives from the charity Epilepsy Bereaved? and the Joint Epilepsy Council on 2 June.

Bacteria Spraying

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what assessment his Department has made of the effects of spraying bacillus golbigii, E.coli and serratia marcescens on (a) humans, (b) men, (c) women and (d) pregnant women; [43290]

(2) if he will conduct a study of the health records of people resident in South Devon and South Dorset between 1966 and 1971 who were sprayed with bacillus golbigii, E.coli and serratia marcescens in Ministry of Defence germ warfare tests. [43289]

Ms Jowell: Information received from the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency states that the bacteriological material released during tests in the 1960s and 70s was composed of organisms which either occur naturally in the environment, or which were killed before release. The bacteria used do not present health problems.

Following concerns raised by local residents, Dorset Health Authority has commenced a survey into birth defects in the East Lulworth area. Preliminary investigations have not revealed any unexplained cluster of birth defects or ill health.

Disabled People

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will issue further guidance on the weight which purchasers are required to give to the views of disabled people and their families when evaluating options for providing social care for people with learning disability who have been in long-stay residential hospital provision; and if he will make a statement. [43299]

Mr. Boateng: We have no plans to do so. Current guidance already makes clear that we would expect the views and wishes of disabled people and their families to be taken into account when planning and arranging services. We are currently looking at the closure plans for the old long stay learning disability hospitals so that we can be sure that the proposals are based on sound individualised planning, proper consultation has taken place and all options have been fully considered.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps his Department has taken to promote independent mobility for disabled people. [43355]

Mr. Boateng: Between 1996 and 2000 the Department is making an additional £50 million available to National Health Service wheelchair services to enable them to provide electrically powered indoor/outdoor wheelchairs for those severely disabled people who can benefit from them, and to introduce a voucher scheme to give wheelchair users more choice.

Chiropody Services

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what response he has made to the recommendations of Age Concern's report, On Your Feet: Older People and NHS Chiropody Services. [43161]

Mr. Boateng: I wrote on 8 May 1998 to Evelyn McEwan, Director of Age Concern England. The report provides valuable information about National Health Service chiropody services and the perceptions of its users and providers.

Officials in the NHS Executive are looking at ways in which chiropody services might be further developed and will be consulting Age Concern during this process.

Hospital Waiting Lists

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 19 May 1998, Official Report, column 353, on hospital waiting lists, what information is held centrally; and for what reasons the information requested was available for 1996–97 and 1997–98. [43357]

Mr. Milburn: Waiting list/time information held centrally is based on the well established series of quarterly returns from health authorities and trusts. The information provided last year in respect of 1996–97 and 1997–98 had already been collected centrally as special exercises by the previous administration.

Children Act

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to review the guidance issued by his Department in respect of the Children Act 1989. [43296]

Mr. Boateng: There are no plans for a fundamental review of the guidance issued by the Department in respect of the Children Act 1989. Where legal changes or new policy requirements have arisen, appropriate guidance by way of a local authority circular has been issued.

Cancer and Kidney Disease

Mr. Cunliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the incidence is per 1,000 population of (a) lung cancer, (b) other forms of cancer and (c) kidney disease in (i) the National Health Service North-West Region and (ii) Wigan and Bolton health area. [43309]

Mr. Boateng: Figures which show the incidence of these diseases is not collated centrally. My hon. Friend may wish to contact the cancer registries at Liverpool and Manchester Universities which collect some information about the incidence of certain cancers.

Whooping Cough Vaccine

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what are the circumstances in which his Department advises that the pertussis vaccine should not be administered to a baby; [43205]

(2) what guidelines are issued to health practitioners on the use of the pertussis vaccine on babies; and what are the recognised side-effects of the vaccine. [43203]

Ms Jowell: Details of the recommendations for pertussis vaccine, the contraindications to vaccination and the adverse reactions associated with the pertussis vaccine are set out in the United Kingdom Health Departments' memorandum 'Immunisation against Infectious Disease'. This publication is issued to doctors, practice nurses, health visitors and pharmacists involved in immunisation. Copies are available in the Library.

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many cases have been recorded since 1987 of brain damage or blood poisoning which (a) have been attributed to the pertussis vaccine and (b) are claimed to be attributable to the pertussis vaccine but are yet to be determined. [43204]

Ms Jowell: There has been one suspected adverse drug reaction (ADR) report of mental handicap made via the United Kingdom spontaneous reporting scheme since 1987 associated with the multiconstituent diphtheria, tetanus and pertussis (DTP) vaccine. There have been no such reports of blood poisoning since 1987. Doctors are asked to report suspected adverse drug reactions via this scheme and therefore it is not possible to attribute causality definitely. When ADRs are reported with multiconstituent vaccines such as DTP it is not generally possible to know which, if any, component of the vaccine was responsible.

Industrial Tribunals

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) which trusts in the South Thames Region have, as respondents, made applications in the past year to have industrial tribunal hearings held in camera; and what legal costs have to date been incurred in respect of each application; [42494]

(2) how many applications in respect of unfair dismissal or constructive dismissal are outstanding in relation to (a) health authorities and (b) health trusts in the North Thames Region and South Thames Region; and to which authorities and trusts they relate; [42492]

(3) which trusts in the North Thames Region have, as respondents, made applications in the past year to have industrial tribunal hearings held in camera; and what legal costs have been incurred in respect of each application. [42493]

Mr. Milburn: The information requested is not held centrally. My hon. Friend may wish to contact individual trusts for details.

Tobacco Sponsorship

Mr. Maude: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the proposed ban on tobacco sponsorship will be introduced. [43745]

Ms Jowell: On 13 May the European Parliament voted through unamended the common position on the tobacco advertising Directive agreed by European Union Health Ministers last December. We hope that it can now be adopted during the United Kingdom Presidency. Following this, member states would have three years to implement the basic provisions of the Directive; a further 2 years are available beyond that for sponsored events; sponsored events organised on a global basis could be exempted for up to three further years, subject to diminishing advertising visibility and sponsorship expenditure. All forms of tobacco advertising and sponsorship covered by the Directive must cease by 1 October 2006. The timescale for implementation of the Directive in UK law will be set out in the tobacco control White Paper to be published later this year.

Small Businesses

Mr. Page: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the regulations that have been amended or removed to help small businesses since 1 May 1997. [42786]

Ms Jowell: While none of the regulations laid by the Department have specifically targeted small businesses, all which impact on business generally take account of the needs of small businesses. For example, Statutory Instrument 1998/574, The Medicines for Human Use and Medical Devices (Fees and Miscellaneous Amendments) Regulations 1998, reduced fees for all businesses involved in the manufacture and sale of medicines for human use. It also extended a small business concession to a greater number of companies.

Haemophiliacs

Mr. St. Aubyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects to respond to the proposal for a special payment scheme for haemophiliacs infected with hepatitis through NHS tests treatment. [43465]

Mr. Boateng: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to my hon. Friend, the Member for Amber Valley (Judy Mallaber) on 11 May 1998, Official Report, column 39.

Abortion

Dr. Stoate: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will require general practitioners to make information publicly available as to whether they are prepared to refer women for abortion. [43602]

Ms Jowell: Referrals under the Abortion Act are part of the general medical services provided by general practitioners. Guidance issued by the British Medical Association states that practitioners with a conscientious objection to abortion who fail to refer on to another practitioner quickly could be alleged to be in breach of their terms of service. In these circumstances public statements about the GP's personal views on abortion are neither necessary nor appropriate.

Dr. Stoate: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will replace the current assurances for private hospitals providing abortion with guidelines that will apply to both NHS and private services. [43603]

Ms Jowell: My right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State has a power under Section 1(3) of the Abortion Act to approve non-National Health Service premises for termination of pregnancy. The assurances were introduced to combat abuses of the Act and to ensure that approved places provide an appropriate standard of care. The approval and monitoring processes have ensured that these abuses have been eradicated. Key extracts from the current assurances were issued to the NHS in 1995 for information.

Dr. Stoate: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if the inquiry into health inequalities will include an investigation of inequalities in abortion services. [43597]

Ms Jowell: It is for the Independent Inquiry into Inequalities in Health to determine its own work programme in discharging its terms of reference. Copies of the terms of reference have been placed in the Library.

Emergency Contraception

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make emergency contraception available through (a) pharmacy prescription and (b) pharmacies without prescription. [43454]

Ms Jowell: The emergency contraceptive pill is classified as a prescription only medicine under United Kingdom and European Community legislation which takes into account the safety of the product, the risk to health if utilised without medical supervision and the likelihood of incorrect use.

There are currently no proposals to make emergency contraception available through pharmacies without a doctor's prescription. Any such proposal would be carefully assessed by the Medicines Control Agency, taking into account the advice of the Committee on Safety of Medicines, and there would be statutory public consultation before a decision was reached.

There is presently no legal provision for pharmacists to prescribe medicines.

Smoking

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of teenage (a) boys and (b) girls in England was smoking tobacco (i) in 1988 and (ii) at the most recent date for which figures are available. [44019]

Ms Jowell: The table shows the percentages of boys and girls aged 11–15 who smoked regularly in 1988 and 1996.

Year	Boys	Girls
1988	7	9
1996	11	15

Notes:

1. Regular smoking is defined as smoking at least one cigarette a week
2. Percentages are rounded to the nearest whole figure

Source:

Smoking Among Secondary School Children Surveys, 1996, conducted by the Office for National Statistics on behalf of the Department of Health

West Kent Health Authority

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the mechanism used to determine funding for the West Kent Health Authority for (a) 1995–96, (b) 1996–97, (c) 1997–98 and (d) 1998–99; and what factors underlay (i) the requirement for additional funding in (1) 1995–96, (2) 1996–97 and (3) 1997–98 and (ii) the overspend in the current year. [41922]

Mr. Milburn [holding answer 18 May 1998]: From 1996–97 a national weighted capitation formula has been used to determine each health authority's target fair share of available resources. Annual decisions are taken on how quickly health authorities are moved closer to their weighted capitation target. Prior to 1996–97 the regional health authority managed the allocation process using a similar formula.

Other than moneys held centrally, such as funding for the new deal to help reduce junior doctors hours, additional funds have been provided in 1997–98 to ease the pressures on the health and social care system during the winter and in 1998–99 to reduce National Health Service waiting lists to below the record levels we inherited, by next April.

Figures will be available on the health authority's financial position in 1998–99 at the end of July.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

New Deal (Young People)

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what proportion of young people aged 18 to 24 years who have attended their first New Deal interviews have not then met a subsequent appointment as part of the New Deal. [43881]

Mr. Andrew Smith: This information is not held centrally in the form requested. This will be assessed as part of the evaluation strategy.

National Insurance

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, pursuant to his answer of 7 April 1998, Official Report, column 228, on National Insurance, when the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Education and Employment will write to the hon. Member for Havant. [43989]

Dr. Howells: We are still awaiting assessments by the Further and Higher Education Funding Councils of the impact on the further and higher education sectors respectively of changes to employers' National Insurance contributions from April 1999. Meanwhile, the Committee of Vice-Chancellors and Principals have estimated that the annual cost to the higher education sector across the UK is likely to be some £10 million. In the case of further education, we estimate that the effect of the changes is likely to be a small saving of around £5 million per annum. I will write to the hon. Member as soon as we have received and considered the Funding Councils' advice.

European Voluntary Service

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if the European Voluntary Service will be eligible for the voluntary option of the New Deal. [43968]

Mr. Andrew Smith: The European Voluntary Service programme has not yet been formally agreed by the European Council and European Parliament. If and when the programme is fully operational, the opportunities offered will be eligible for the Voluntary Sector option of the New Deal for young unemployed people if they satisfy the design and quality criteria of that option. Organisations offering opportunities abroad on that option must also ensure that participants comply with benefit and immigration regulations.

Access Courses

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if sub-degree level higher education access courses will be covered by the New Deal as part of the education and training option. [43971]

Mr. Andrew Smith: The Full-Time Education and Training option of the New Deal for 18–24 year olds is primarily aimed at enabling young people who do not hold qualifications at NVQ Level 2 (or equivalent) to gain those qualifications. Support for higher level studies can also be given, where this will clearly enhance the young person's employability. In the case of an Access to Higher Education course, support can be given under the New Deal where the course forms part of a coherent action plan leading towards sustained employment.

Tuition Fees

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what estimate he has made of the cost and the number of staff to be involved in administering means tests for tuition fees for students from the EU. [43974]

Dr. Howells: The cost of administering the means test will be approximately £400,000 for the academic year 1998/99 and there will be some 25 staff providing this central service.

Disability Discrimination Act

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when his Department expects to make an announcement on the timetable for the implementation of part 3 of the Disability Discrimination Act 1995. [43594]

Mr. Alan Howarth: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Solihull (Mr. Taylor) on 18 May 1998, Official Report, column 282.

New Deal (Disabled People)

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will provide disability awareness/equality training to employers as part of the New Deal for Sick and Disabled People. [43559]

Mr. Alan Howarth: The Employment Service, through its Placing Assessment and Counselling Teams and Disability Employment Advisers, already provides significant support to employers. The Personal Adviser Service, the key part of the New Deal for Disabled People, will also provide employers with advice on employing disabled people. This will complement the role of the many voluntary organisations who also work with employers to increase their disability awareness.

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will provide specialist advisers to the (a) post acute brain injured and (b) recovering mentally ill as part of the New Deal for Sick and Disabled People. [43570]

Mr. Alan Howarth: We will expect those providing the Personal Adviser Service as part of the New Deal for Disabled People to ensure advisers are equipped with the necessary knowledge and expertise to support people with a wide range of specialist needs, including the post-acute brain injured and people recovering from mental illness.

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) how much money the Employment Service plans to invest in supported employment programmes for sick and disabled people in 1998–99; [43556]

(2) what funding has been given to supported employment programmes for sick and disabled people since 1995–96 by the Employment Service. [43555]

Mr. Alan Howarth: The information requested is given in the following table.

Supported employment programme

Year	£ million
1995–96 outturn	154.2
1996–97 outturn	154.3
1997–98 outturn	155.6
1998–99 plans	155.1

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will provide disability awareness/equality training to personnel in the Careers Service as part of the New Deal for Sick and Disabled People. [43558]

Mr. Alan Howarth: Careers advisers are required as part of their initial training to undergo disability awareness and equal opportunities training. Training as appropriate will be provided for New Deal for Disabled People Personal Adviser Service staff.

Special Educational Needs

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on the Government's policy on integrating pupils with (a) severe learning difficulties, (b) moderate learning difficulties and (c) emotional behavioural difficulties into mainstream schools. [43798]

Ms Estelle Morris: We are preparing an action programme to take forward our policies on special educational needs (SEN), taking careful account of the responses to the Green Paper—Excellence for all children; meeting special educational needs. Progress on inclusion will be at the heart of those policies. We want to see an increased proportion of children with SEN included in mainstream schools where parents are happy with this, and where schools are properly prepared. But we will also promote a strong special school sector, to provide support for mainstream schools, and to offer high quality specialist provision for those children who need it.

Grant-maintained Schools

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what arrangements he is making to transfer grant-maintained schools back to the control of LEAs; when he expects this process will be completed; and if he will make a statement. [43808]

Mr. Byers: We are not proposing to transfer grant-maintained schools back to the control of LEAs. The School Standards and Framework Bill currently before Parliament provides for a new framework for the organisation of schools, which will accommodate all existing schools, including grant-maintained schools. It will strike a better balance between the discretion of schools to manage their own affairs and the role of LEAs in supporting and challenging schools in raising standards. The Government propose to introduce the new framework in September 1999.

Dental Students

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment he has made of the impact of his Department's proposals for higher education on the numbers of dental students; and what research his Department has evaluated on this matter. [43019]

Dr. Howells: The progress of applications to enter higher education in October 1998 is being closely monitored. Although applications for Clinical Dentistry are currently down on last year (from 11,939 to 10,381 as at 16 May according to figures from the Universities and Colleges Admission Service) we do not expect universities to have difficulty meeting the UK dental target of 805 places per year.

Small Businesses

Mr. Page: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list the regulations that have been amended or removed to help small businesses since 1 May 1997. [42784]

Mr. Andrew Smith: None of the Statutory Instruments made by the Department for Education and Employment revoking or amending regulations between 1 May 1997 and 22 May 1998 had a direct impact on small businesses. The Department is continually mindful of reflecting in policy the importance of job generation in small businesses, for example in the design of the New Deal and its self-employment option.

Supported Employment Placements

Ms Keeble: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) if he will estimate the cost of increasing the capitation grant for supported employment placements by the rate of inflation between 1 April 1998 and 1 April 1999; [42993]

(2) what was the cost of the capitation grant for supported employment placements in 1998–99. [42989]

Mr. Alan Howarth: The capitation grant for 1998–99 is £4,680. The cost of supported placements in 1998–99 can be calculated on a retrospective basis only once the financial year has ended and supported employment providers have sent the Department their audited accounts. Providers have been given a deadline of December 1999 for this.

Uprating the capitation grant in line with the GDP deflator of 2.9 per cent. would result in a level of £4,815.

Training and Enterprise Councils

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) what was the budget of the Staffordshire TEC in (a) 1997–98 and (b) 1998–99; [43114]

(2) what has been the level of public funding for each TEC in the West Midlands since they were established. [43115]

Dr. Howells: The information requested is shown in the following table.

West Midlands TEC funding (DfEE and DTI) 1995–96 to 1998–99

	1995–96	1996–97	1997–98	1998–99
Birmingham	27,187,475	31,481,373	29,419,491	29,141,010
Central England	8,891,325	8,350,991	9,630,290	620,756
Coventry and Warwickshire	21,444,349	21,400,763	22,001,108	20,076,484
Dudley	7,566,289	8,311,713	9,355,398	8,462,913
Herefordshire and Worcestershire	11,566,289	11,647,220	13,012,475	15,394,526
Sandwell	10,739,570	10,938,147	10,455,393	9,439,113
Shropshire	11,517,320	12,058,394	12,069,144	11,515,966
Staffordshire	26,071,937	27,430,212	24,861,306	24,369,613
Walsall	6,370,719	6,840,242	7,702,685	7,028,588
Wolverhampton	8,084,884	8,955,628	8,119,765	7,735,364

Notes:
Information prior to 1995–96 is not readily available and has, therefore, not been provided.
The contract with Central England TEC ceased at the end of 1997–98. The funding shown for this TEC for 1998–99 represents carry-over liabilities from the 1997–98 contract.
The area covered by Central England has been taken over by Birmingham (Solihull) and Herefordshire and Worcestershire (Redditch and Bromsgrove and Wyre Forest).
The 1998–99 funding for Birmingham and Solihull includes funding in respect of these areas.

Local Management of Schools

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) when he expects to publish the document on local management of schools: framework for guidance of local education authorities; [43033]

(2) when he expects to implement further delegation of responsibilities from local education authorities to schools. [43034]

Mr. Byers: The Government's consultation paper on the future development of local management of schools was published on 29 May. The intention is that the new arrangements should take effect from the beginning of the financial year 1999–2000. Copies of the paper have been placed in the Library.

Chefs (Work Permits)

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on the number of applications he has received for work permits for chefs for each year since 1990 indicating the number of permits granted; what plans he has to review his Department's policy on the admission of chefs; and how many work permits for chefs are currently under consideration by his Department. [43083]

Mr. Alan Howarth: The information about work permit applications for chefs requested is as follows:

Year	Number of applications received	Number approved
1990	2,160	767
1991	2,091	538
1992	1,408	455
1993	1,058	349
1994	844	238
1995	530	198
1996	589	259
1997	513	220

These figures include a small number of chefs training or gaining work experience. The totals for 1990–94 reflect the large number of applications made for a limited number of available permits under the former Dependent Territories Quota Scheme which was phased out over the period.

There are currently 114 work permit applications for chefs under consideration.

The Department consults, informally and formally, employers and interested bodies about the criteria for work permits but there are no firm plans at present to review the criteria for chefs.

Asperger Syndrome

Mr. Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many children are diagnosed as suffering from Asperger Syndrome in (a) the United Kingdom and (b) West Sussex. [43284]

Mr. Boateng: I have been asked to reply.

Data are not collected centrally on the number of cases of Asperger Syndrome. Research in Scandinavia has suggested a prevalence rate of 36 per 10,000 population. The National Autistic Society estimate there are 47,400 children with Asperger Syndrome in the United Kingdom.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Sierra Leone

Mr. Howard: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the procedures which officials must follow when asking for an inquiry by Customs and Excise officials. [41727]

Mr. Robin Cook [holding answer 12 May 1998]: In the normal way FCO officials refer allegations which they believe might require investigation to Customs and Excise officers.

Further action is for Customs and Excise to determine given that in such matters they are acting as an independent prosecuting authority of the Crown.

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which of his departmental officials are specifically responsible for policy relating to arms sales to Sierra Leone. [41596]

Mr. Robin Cook [holding answer 12 May 1998]: Within the FCO, arms sales are dealt with by the geographical department concerned in consultation with the Non-Proliferation Department.

Mr. Howard: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what meetings were held between Government representatives and President Kabbah of Sierra Leone while the President was in exile; who was present at such meetings; where and when they were held; what was their purpose; and what was discussed at them. [41800]

Mr. Robin Cook [holding answer 13 May 1998]: Officials from the High Commission had numerous meetings with President Kabbah in Conakry. Officials also met him when he visited the UK in October 1997.

The Minister of State, my hon. Friend the Member for Manchester, Central (Mr. Lloyd), met President Kabbah on 20 October when he addressed the seminar 'Restoring Sierra Leone to Democracy'; on 25 October, with the Minister of State at the Department for International Development; and on 31 March 1998 when he visited Sierra Leone as a member of the Commonwealth Ministerial Action Group mission.

My right hon. Friend, the Prime Minister, met him informally during the Commonwealth Heads of Government Meeting in Edinburgh in October 1997. I met the Foreign Minister of Sierra Leone in the margins of the UN General Assembly meeting in September 1997.

It is not normal practice to release the records of discussions with foreign Governments, but all relevant documents will be available to Sir Thomas Legg for his investigation.

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many reporting telegrams his Department received from Freetown and Conakry since 1 May 1997; and how many of these were copied to the private office of a Minister. [42096]

Mr. Robin Cook [holding answer 14 May 1998]: From 1 May 1997 to 18 May 1998 the FCO received 141 telegrams from Freetown, 102 of which were copied to my office and that of my hon. Friend the Minister of State.

During the period when Freetown was evacuated, the High Commission operated out of a hotel room in Conakry and communicated with the FCO by fax. No record has been kept of the total number of faxes received during this period. However 48 of these faxes were retransmitted as FCO telegrams, 43 of which were copied to Ministerial offices as above.

Mr. Howard: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will publish the reports submitted by the Committee of the UN Security Council established by paragraph 10 of UNSCR 1132. [41967]

Mr. Robin Cook [holding answer 14 May 1998]: The Sierra Leone Sanctions Committee has yet to make a periodic report.

Mr. Howard: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs by whose authority repairs were effected by Royal Naval personnel to a helicopter exclusively used by a Sandline International crew; and if this constituted a breach of the UN arms embargo. [41969]

Mr. Robin Cook [holding answer 14 May 1998]: I refer the right hon. and learned Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence to the hon. Member for Salisbury (Mr. Key), on 18 May 1998, Official Report, column 258. We do not believe that the repair of this helicopter constituted a breach of UNSCR 1132.

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on what date Ministers and officials in his Department first consulted ministers and officials in the Ministry of Defence concerning the use of UK military assets to help restore the Government of Sierra Leone. [41830]

Mr. Robin Cook [holding answer 14 May 1998]: UK military assets were not used to overthrow the junta in Sierra Leone, which fled from Freetown on 13 February. The instructions to HMS Monmouth, and later to HMS Cornwall, were to deploy to the vicinity of Sierra Leone to be prepared to provide immediate humanitarian assistance to the people of Sierra Leone, to support our diplomatic efforts there, and to assist in the return of the British High Commissioner, should the democratically elected Government be restored. The FCO and the MOD liaised closely throughout this period about the activities of HMS Monmouth and HMS Cornwall.

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if any official of his Department was in contact with officials of the Customs and Excise on 28 or 29 April in connection with the investigation into Sandline International. [42313]

Mr. Robin Cook [holding answer 18 May 1998]: The FCO fully cooperated with the Customs and Excise investigation throughout April and early May.

Mr. Faber: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if the Minister of State, the hon. Member for Manchester, Central, discussed the activities of Sandline International with Mr. John Flynn at their meeting on 19 March. [42284]

Mr. Robin Cook [holding answer 18 May 1998]: No.

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the occasions on which his Department's Overseas Visitors Unit arranged calls by President Kabbah of Sierra Leone on Sandline International during his visits to the United Kingdom since 1 May 1997. [43206]

Mr. Robin Cook: The Overseas Visitors section has not arranged any calls by President Kabbah on Sandline International.

Mr. Howard: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action he took after he was informed on 6 February that military intervention was planned in Sierra Leone. [42625]

Mr. Robin Cook: I took note of the reports of the military action by forces of the Economic Community of West African States Monitoring Group (ECOMOG) against the junta in Sierra Leone. In the following weeks, the following actions were taken by the FCO:

- the Permanent Representative to the UN was instructed to seek an explanation from members of the Economic Community of West African States (ECOWAS) Committee of five Foreign Ministers during a briefing for Security Council members held on 6 February and at the subsequent meeting on 6 March;
- we drafted the EU Presidential Statement on Sierra Leone issued on 20 February.
- on 20 February, we instructed our Missions in ECOWAS capitals to carry out a joint demarche with EU Troika partners urging inter alia that ECOMOG open up humanitarian supply lines, and assist in the rescue and evacuation of EU nations held hostage in Sierra Leone;
- the FCO liaised closely with MOD about instructions to HMS Monmouth on 10 February to proceed to the waters off Freetown to stand by to provide humanitarian assistance. HMS Monmouth was replaced by HMS Cornwall which entered Freetown on 1 March;
- we contributed to the drawing up of the statement issued by the president of the Security Council on 26 February;
- we contributed to the drawing up and adoption of UNSCR 1156 on 16 March 1998 which welcomed President Kabbah's return to Freetown and lifted the prohibition on the supply of petrol and petroleum products to Sierra Leone;
- we contributed to the drawing up and adoption of UNSCR 1162 on 17 April, which authorised the deployment of up to 10 United Nations military liaison and security advisory personnel to work under the Secretary General's Special Envoy. HMG is contributing one officer to the deployment;
- we donated £2 million to the UN Trust Fund established in February to support the demobilisation and disarmament process, and instructed our diplomatic missions in the EU and elsewhere to urge their host governments to contribute towards the Trust Fund and to provide humanitarian relief for Sierra Leone.

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) if his Department received telegrams from the British High Commissioner for Sierra Leone warning that Sandline might breach the arms embargo; [42602]

(2) if his Department communicated the terms of the Sierra Leone (United Nations Sanctions) Order 1997 to the British High Commissioner for Sierra Leone. [42603]

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the occasions on which Mr. Peter Penfold visited the offices of Sandline International since 1 May 1997. [43207]

Mr. Robin Cook [holding answer 20 May 1998]: I refer the right hon. and hon. Member to my statement in the House during the debate on 18 May 1998, Official Report, columns 604–11, in which I announced the investigation by Sir Thomas Legg KCB QC into allegations about Government involvement with the supply of arms to Sierra Leone by UK citizens and firms, and said that the Terms of Reference would be placed in the Library of the House. I intend to publish the report of the investigation.

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will publish the written brief received by the Minister of State, the hon. Member for Manchester Central, before (a) the visit to CHOGM of President Kabbah, (b) his speech to the seminar in London on restoring Sierra Leone to democracy in October 1997, (c) the decision to invite HM Customs and Excise to conduct an investigation into Lord Avebury's allegations on 10 March, (d) the Commonwealth Ministerial Action Group meeting in London on 2 and 3 March, (e) the decision to send HMS Cornwall to Sierra Leone, (f) the debate on Sierra Leone in the House on 12 March, (g) his visit to Sierra Leone in March, and (h) his evidence to the Foreign Affairs Committee on 5 May; and if he will list the oral briefings received in connection with those occasions, stating who was present when oral briefings or office meetings took place about Sierra Leone. [42099]

Mr. Robin Cook [holding answer 14 May 1998]: I refer the hon. Member to my statement in the House during the debate on 18 May 1998, Official Report, columns 604–11, in which I announced the investigation by Sir Thomas Legg KCB QC into allegations about Government involvement with the supply of arms to Sierra Leone by UK citizens and firms, and said that the Terms of Reference would be placed in the Library of the House. I intend to publish the report of the investigation.

European Structural Funds

Mr. Gareth Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the nature and scope of his responsibilities in relation to the review of European structural funds in respect of Wales, indicating the timetable for action by his Department. [42471]

Mr. Doug Henderson: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Minister for Small Firms, Trade and Industry on 21 May 1998, Official Report, column 543.

Turkey

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Government of Turkey on the shooting of the Human Rights Association Leader Akin Birdal. [42439]

Mr. Doug Henderson [holding answer 18 May 1998]: As EU Presidency, the UK issued a declaration on behalf of the European Union on 13 May expressing shock and dismay at the shooting of Mr. Akin Birdal, condemning this cowardly attack on the Chairman of the Human Rights Association, and strongly supporting statements of the Turkish authorities that every effort would be made to bring to justice those responsible.

My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary made clear the importance we attach to the proper protection of human rights during his visit to Ankara on 19 May. He took the opportunity to visit Mr. Birdal in hospital to emphasise our support for the work of the Human Rights Association.

Indonesia

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on his most recent discussions with Jose Ramos Horta; and what representations he has made recently to the Government of Indonesia regarding human rights, with particular reference to ethnic Chinese residents of Indonesia. [42345]

Mr. Fatchett: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary had a wide-ranging discussion with Mr. Ramos-Horta on 31 March. We have made various representations about human rights, in both a Presidency and national capacity, to the Indonesian authorities in Jakarta. My right hon. Friend raised human rights in East Timor in his meeting with Vice President Habibie and Foreign Minister Alatas in the margins of ASEM 2.

Human Rights

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received regarding the first annual human rights report from (a) foreign Governments and (b) British non-Governmental organisations. [42396]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: The report has been widely welcomed. Mary Robinson, the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, has written that she believes,

"it is a marvellous initiative by the Government",

Amnesty International stated publicly that they were "delighted at the publication of the first such report".

It quoted David Bull, a Director as saying,

"This is a good day for human rights".

The response of NGOs has been generally positive.

My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has received no formal representations about the report.

Arms Sales

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if the new European Code of Conduct on arms sales will ensure that signatories will open their arms sales to parliamentary scrutiny. [43170]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: No. Different Member States have different practices in this respect. It would not have been realistic to propose a Code which sought to dictate Member States' internal licensing procedures.

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what consultation will take place under the European Code of Conduct on arms sales before one member state accepts an arms contract that has been turned down on ethical grounds by another. [43174]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: The Code of Conduct specified that before any Member State grants an export licence which has been denied in accordance with the Code by another Member State or States for an essentially identical transaction within the past three years, it will first consult the Member State or States issuing the denial(s).

UN Convention on the Rights of the Child

Sir Alastair Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made about proposed changes to the United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child. [43128]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: The UN Convention on the Rights of the Child was adopted by UNGA in 1989 and has achieved near universal ratification. The UK ratified in 1991. States Parties recognise and undertake to uphold the full range of human rights—and, political, economic, social and cultural—in respect of children.

We have no plans to propose changes to the United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child, nor have we received representations to do so. We are, however, participating actively in UN Working Group discussions on draft Optional Protocols to the convention on the involvement of children in armed conflict, and on the sale of children, child prostitution, and child pornography. We support efforts to bring these discussions to a successful conclusion.

Gibraltar

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action he has taken in the last four weeks to secure EU recognition for Gibraltar I.D. cards. [43106]

Mr. Doug Henderson: My answer to the hon. Member for Macclesfield (Mr. Winterton) of 13 March 1998, Official Report, column 402, recorded that we were pursuing our complaint against Spain's non-recognition of Gibraltar's ID cards through the relevant Commission procedures. That remain the position.

Clive Allison

Mr. Collins: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the French Government over the disappearance of British citizen Clive Allison in Lyon on 25 April and subsequent events. [43359]

Mr. Fatchett: Following Mr. Allison's disappearance our Consulate in Lyon contacted the French Police who confirmed that they had already circulated his details as a missing person. On 29 April they issued a "search notice" to all police forces and hospital emergency units. A body was found in the Saone on 4 May and identified the next day as Mr. Allison.

The police investigation into Mr. Allison's death is continuing.

Mr. Collins: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will seek reports upon the steps taken by (a) the British Consulate in Lyon and (b) the French authorities following the reported disappearance of British citizen Clive Allison in Lyons on 25 April; and if he will make a statement. [43358]

Mr. Fatchett: Our Consul in Lyon has provided a full report of action taken by consular staff and French police when informed of the disappearance of Mr. Allison.

We are satisfied that the French authorities and our consular staff did all they properly could to help Mr. Allison's friends and relatives. Our consular staff cannot investigate the disappearance of a British citizen; that is a job for the police. In this case there was no reason to suspect foul play was involved and the police acted according to normal practice when dealing with missing persons.

Following the discovery of Mr. Allison's body the police opened an investigation, which is continuing.

Tibet

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the resolution by the European Parliament calling for a United Nations commission of inquiry into Tibet. [43164]

Mr. Fatchett: During our Presidency of the European Union the issue of Tibet has featured prominently in the EU's human rights dialogue with China. A delegation of EU Ambassadors to Beijing visited Tibet in May in order to make an assessment of the situation there. Our EU partners are considering their report.

Small Businesses

Mr. Page: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the regulations that have been removed or amended to help small businesses since 1 May 1997. [42775]

Mr. Fatchett: Since 1 May 1997 the Foreign and Commonwealth Office has not amended or removed any regulations to help small businesses.

Israel

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress is being made on the implementation of the interim agreement on trade and trade-related matters between the EU and Israel in respect of verifying the accuracy of the labelling of goods as Made in Israel; and if the agreement will prohibit the labelling of goods produced in part or wholly in (a) illegal Israeli settlements, (b) East Jerusalem, (c) the Golan Heights, (d) the West Bank and (e) the Gaza Strip as Made in Israel. [43351]

Mr. Doug Henderson: On 13 May, the European Commission adopted a Communication to the Council on the implementation of the Interim Agreement on trade and trade-related matters between the European Community and Israel. This Communication is now being studied at a technical level by Member States and the Commission.

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress is being made on the implementation of the interim agreement on trade and trade-related matters between the EU and Israel in respect of monitoring human rights abuses in the occupied territories and the Israeli Government response to those abuses. [43352]

Mr. Doug Henderson: The EU continues to monitor closely the human rights situation in Israel. The EU attaches great importance to this subject, which is reflected in the terms of the EC/Israel Interim Agreement. EU Heads of Mission regularly report to the Council on the human rights situation in Israel and the Occupied Territories. A summary of the last report was released on 15 May. Member States, including the UK, also raise human rights in their bilateral contacts with Israel. The EU/Israel Association Agreement awaits ratification by all Member States. The EU/Israel Association Council set up under that agreement should also provide a welcome new forum for discussion of human rights.

Iraq

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the latest inspection of weapons of mass destruction in Iraq since the last agreement was reached; and what estimate has been made of the amount of such weapons left. [43337]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: We are satisfied that Iraq has adhered to the commitments it gave to the UN Secretary-General on 23 February, and at present is allowing weapons inspections to proceed in line with its obligations under relevant Security Council Resolutions.

The latest report by the Executive Chairman of the UN Special Commission, issued in April, reported little progress in verification of all 3 areas of WMD (Biological weapons, Chemical weapons and Ballistic missiles), as a result of 4 months of crisis. As a result of the latest report from the Director General of the International Atomic Energy Authority (IAEA), the United Nations Security Council has agreed that the IAEA dedicate its resources to the implementation of Ongoing Monitoring and Verification of the nuclear capabilities of Iraq, subject to satisfactory Iraqi responses to outstanding IAEA questions and concerns prior to the issue of the next IAEA report (October 1998).

Copies of these reports will be placed in the Libraries of the House.

Dependent Territories

Mr. Gordon Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information is available from British Consular offices in North America to potential investors in British Dependent Territories in the Caribbean. [43423]

Mr. Fatchett: Our Consulates-General in North America assist with any inquiries about investment in the Caribbean Overseas Territories either by obtaining relevant information from the Governments of the Overseas Territories themselves, or by putting potentional investors in direct contact with them.

Mr. Gordon Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans (a) he and (b) other Ministers have to visit the Turks and Caicos Islands. [43427]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: Neither my right hon. Friend, the Foreign Secretary, nor other FCO Ministers have any immediate plans to visit the Turks and Caicos Islands.

Mr. Gordon Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on progress made in his review of the future status of Britain's Dependent Territories. [43446]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary published a response on 13 May 1998 to the FAC's Interim Report on the Dependent Territories. A copy of this is available in the Libraries of the House.

Mr. Gordon Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what consultations he has had with the Governments of (a) the British Virgin Islands (b) the Cayman Islands and (c) the Turks and Caicos Islands on his proposals for their future status and citizenship. [43447]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: My right hon. Friend, the Foreign Secretary, discussed the proposals on the future status and citizenship with the Chief Ministers and equivalents of all the Caribbean Overseas Territories' and Bermuda in February. We have consulted the Overseas Territories's governments on this matter at regular intervals since the announcement of the FCO Review last August. My noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Baroness Symons, wrote to the Chief Ministers updating them on progress with the Review last month.

Defence Exports

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Slough (Fiona Mactaggart) on defence exports of 18 May 1998, Official Report, column 265, if he will make a statement on the means by which the monitoring and assessment policy was applied to each item authorised for sale to Indonesia since 1 May 1997. [43450]

Mr. Fatchett: My hon. Friend the Minister of State's answer to my hon. Friend the Member for Slough referred to the process of assessing at the licensing stage the risk that proposed exports might be used for internal repression. We have made such an assessment in the case of all licence applications for the export of controlled goods to Indonesia circulated to the Foreign and Commonwealth Office by the Department of Trade and Industry in line with our policy responsibilities. No formal procedures exist for routinely monitoring the use that is made of British defence equipment, once exported. But we are ready when necessary to investigate any specific allegations of misuse.

Nuclear Tests (South Asia)

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when Her Majesty's Government first learned that India was about to test nuclear weapons this year. [43451]

Mr. Fatchett: We first learned of the Indian nuclear tests from the Indian Government's statements to the press on 11 May and on 13 May, announcing that the tests had been conducted.

Departmental Inquiries

Mr. Howard: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list those inquiries which were launched by his officials without his prior knowledge since 1 May 1997. [41724]

Mr. Robin Cook [holding answer 12 May 1998]: No formal investigations have been launched since 2 May 1997 by officials of the FCO without my knowledge. In the case of the alleged breach of the arms embargo on Sierra Leone, officials acted perfectly properly in referring allegations to Customs and Excise.

Written Answers to Questions

Tuesday 2 June 1998

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Wheel Clamping

Ms Rosie Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the outcome of discussions with the Home Department on the regulation of the wheel clamping industry. [43193]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Government intend to include a statement on this subject in their forthcoming Transport White Paper.

Road Maintenance

Ms Rosie Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what estimate he has made of the current backlog in road maintenance on (a) trunk roads and (b) other adopted roads. [43188]

Ms Glenda Jackson: In December last year, my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister announced an increase of 50% in the Highways Agency's provision of capital maintenance on trunk roads and motorways to £300m for 1998–99. It is estimated that this will overcome underfunding in recent years and hold the trunk road network in a steady state condition. There is currently no central government estimate of maintenance backlog for local authority roads. Road maintenance for the future is an issue which we are considering in the Comprehensive Spending Review.

Water Abstraction

Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on Government policy in relation to proposals from the Water Companies Association to increase abstraction to meet demand in areas of water shortage. [43548]

Angela Eagle: Proposals for new or increased abstractions of water to serve the needs created by development must be discussed with the Environment Agency which regulates abstractions through its licensing system. A review of that licensing system was announced at the water Summit last May and we shall shortly be publishing a consultation paper on a range of proposals for change. Water companies have duties to maintain and develop efficient and economical water supply systems to meet the needs of their areas, and to promote the efficient use of water by their customers. They are currently preparing water resource plans to maintain a balance between demand and supply over the next 25 years.

Air Bags

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to the letter of 10 November 1997 from the Minister for Transport in London to the hon. Member for Linlithgow (J/P50/10405/97), what is her Department's latest assessment of the development of air-bags for aircraft. [44064]

Ms Glenda Jackson: There have been no further developments to those outlined in my letter of 10 November 1997.

No Man's Heath Bypass

Sir Alastair Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he expects to announce a decision on the A41 No Man's Heath bypass; and if he will make a statement. [43382]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Inspector's report on the public inquiry into the proposed A41 No Man's Heath and Macefen bypass was received on 3 December 1997. My right hon. Friend will announce his decision in the light of the Inspector's recommendations as soon as possible.

Single-person Households

Mr. Tom King: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what estimate he has made of the proportion of households formed in each region between 1991 and 1996 which were single-person households. [43858]

Mr. Raynsford: There are no suitable survey sources for the information requested. However, my Department makes annual estimates of the total number of households by applying household information derived from recent censuses and the Labour Force Survey to the annual mid-year population estimates produced by the Office for National Statistics.

Using these figures for 1991 and 1996, the net change in the number of one person households as a percentage of the net change in total households is as set out.

Government office region	Net increase in the number of one person households (thousands)	Net increase in the total number of households (thousands)	Percentage of total net increase that is one person households
North East	34	34	102
North West	71	87	82
Merseyside	15	10	149
Yorkshire and the Humber	64	84	76
East Midlands	59	95	62
West Midlands	69	90	77
Eastern	85	135	63
London	112	158	71
South East	122	194	63
South West	73	110	66
England	702	996	71

In some areas the net growth in one person households exceeds the net growth in total households. This can be explained by, for example, one person households being formed when one member of a couple dies. This increases the number of one person households by one but the overall number of households remains unchanged.

A49

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he plans to review proposals for improvements to the A49 between Ludlow and Shrewsbury. [43383]

Ms Glenda Jackson: I have asked the Chief Executive of the Highways Agency, Mr. Lawrie Haynes, to write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr. Paul Marsden, dated 2 June 1998:

The Minister of Transport in London has asked me to reply to your recent question about plans to review proposals for improvements to the A49 between Ludlow and Shrewsbury.

The Highways Agency regularly reviews the operation of its trunk roads and last year commissioned its agent, at that time, Shropshire County Council, to carry out a number of safety and traffic calming studies on the A49. From 1 April, we appointed a new agent, WSP Graham, who will be reviewing the outcome of those studies with a view to acting on their recommendations at the earliest opportunity. The Agency's Area Manager, whose responsibilities include this length of A49, recently met with representatives of a newly formed Safety Campaign Group to listen to their concerns. We shall be carefully considering the points which they raised as part of the review process.

In addition, you will be aware that a review of the trunk road programme is currently being carried out, the results of which are due to be announced shortly.

National House-building Council

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what representations he has received about the operations of the NHBC. [43868]

Mr. Raynsford: In the last year I have received representations concerning some 35 cases involving the NHBC Buildmark warranty scheme, some of which also involved NHBC in its capacity as an approved building control inspector. From these representations and other sources I am aware of the dissatisfaction with the way the Buildmark scheme sometimes operates. That is why, on three occasions in the past year, I have met the Chief Executive and other senior staff of the NHBC to hear progress with their Buildmark review. I am awaiting a further update from them on action to improve the operation of the scheme. As regards building control, I have welcomed the setting up by the Construction Industry Council, the Local Government Association and the Association of Corporate Approved Inspectors of a steering group to draw up recommendations on a common performance standard applicable to private sector approved inspectors and to local authority building control officers.

Wild Boars

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what estimate he has made of the wild boar population in (a) East Sussex, (b) Kent, (c) Dorset and (d) elsewhere in the United Kingdom; what is his policy in respect of these animals; and if he will make a statement. [43217]

Angela Eagle: The Central Science Laboratory has recently completed a review of the current status and potential impact of wild boar on the English countryside. This Department and the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food are currently considering the review and a statement will be made in the near future.

Driving Test Centre, Chelmsford

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the progress being made to move the Driving Test Centre in Beeches Road, Chelmsford, to an alternative site in the town; and if he expects the move to be completed prior to 31 December. [43165]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Planning approval has recently been granted for the building of a new driving test centre at the Chelmer Business Park. We are confident that we shall be able to switch driver testing to there and cease at the current premises in Beeches Road, by the end of this year.

Traffic Conditions (Warrington)

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the effect on weekend traffic conditions on the A49 and on Cromwell Avenue in Warrington of building a new Junction 8 on the M62. [43385]

Ms Glenda Jackson: I have asked the Chief Executive of the Highways Agency, Mr. Lawrie Haynes, to write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Helen Jones, dated 2 June 1998:

I have been asked by the Minister for Transport to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the M62.

The results of recent roadside traffic surveys carried out by the Highways Agency in this area are still being assessed. However, we expect them to confirm that the provision of the new junction would reduce significantly weekend traffic on the A49 and on Cromwell Avenue in Warrington.

Vulnerable Road Users

Mr. McWalter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what he is doing to educate all road users to be aware of vulnerable road users, in order to reduce two-wheeler, horse-riding and pedestrian casualties. [42334]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Highway Code contains advice for road users and aims to help prevent accidents by ensuring that all road users follow the same rules. The Code is being revised. We are considering how to highlight the need for motorists to be aware of vulnerable road users. In July there will be a 25 per cent. increase in the number of questions on driver awareness of all vulnerable road users in the driving theory test question bank. We also provide a wide range of publicity and information material for use by Road Safety Officers, police, schools and others to promote consideration for vulnerable road users. Examples include the Horse Sense for Motorists and the Drive Safe Cycle Safe leaflets.

Two-wheeled Vehicles

Mr. McWalter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if it is his policy that steps to restrain motor car use should not apply automatically to powered two wheelers. [42335]

Ms Glenda Jackson: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given on 20 May 1998, Official Report, column 365.

Deprivation

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when the updated Index of Local Deprivation will be published. [44135]

Mr. Caborn: I am today placing in the Library copies of a summary of the 1998 Index of Local Deprivation. The Index of Local Deprivation combines 12 up to date measures on different aspects of deprivation into a single indicator for all local authority districts in England. The Index will be used as background information for the development of regeneration policy and programmes. A further review of the Index will be commissioned later this year to take account of new data sources relevant to deprivation which will include income support statistics for areas smaller than local authority districts.

Termites (North Devon)

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what action the Government are proposing to take to control and eradicate the infestation of termites at Saunton, North Devon; and if he will make a statement. [44136]

Mr. Raynsford: The Government are determined to do everything possible to contain and destroy the termite infestation at two properties in Saunton, North Devon. Our priority is to stop the infestation spreading and to destroy it at source.

I can therefore announce that the Government will fully fund a 12 year eradication and control programme, costing some £190,000, which will start immediately the consent of the affected owners has been received.

As my noble Friend Baroness Hayman indicated in Another Place on 28 April 1998, Official Report, House of Lords, columns 150–53, when the presence of this reinfestation became known the Government asked the Building Research Establishment (BRE) to explore, as a matter of urgency, the optimum means of eradicating the termites. The programme—which has been drawn up at my request by the Building Research Establishment together with experts from agencies including the Pest Management Unit of Imperial College (London), the Natural Resources Institute and CTBA-BIOTEC, France—will be based on close monitoring within 500 metres of the affected properties followed by baiting using an insect growth regulator which will prevent the developing insects from maturing.

The Government have accepted these proposals as the best way forward, and the consortium led by the BRE has been asked to implement the eradication strategy forthwith. The proposal, based on the existing knowledge of the extent of the infestation, is to survey and monitor an area within a 500m radius of the known infestation, but to install a more intensive monitoring grid in the grounds of the two affected properties and within a 200m radius of them. If surveys show that the activity extends beyond this area, it will be extended. Once activity is detected within the growth regulator hexaflumuron is proposed to be installed. Bait stations would also be installed at suitable locations within affected timbers in the infested properties. Monitoring will continue for up to ten years after activity has ceased in order to ensure that the treatment has indeed been effective. This work is dependent upon the co-operation of all property and land owners within this area, and officials in my Department are seeking their permissions as a matter of urgency.

It should be stated that it is not possible to be certain of the outcome. The BRE report stresses that total eradication of a termite population is not normally considered feasible in other countries where the termite is endemic. However, since the population appears to be very restricted in this country, on the basis of the knowledge that this is a single infestation centred on two adjacent properties, we are assured by the experts that there is a high probability of success in eradicating the termite colony.

As it is considered essential to do all possible to curtail this infestation before it spreads further, the Government have undertaken to fund the full cost of the eradication and monitoring work.

Leaseholders (Service Charges)

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a further commencement order in respect of the Housing Act 1996, enabling disputes over the reasonableness of service charges between landlords and long leaseholders on which court proceedings began before 1 September 1997 to be transferred to leasehold valuation tribunals. [44137]

Ms Armstrong: Today my Department is publishing for consultation proposals which should be welcome to a number of those leaseholders who have not so far been able to take advantage of the improved arrangements for dealing with service charge disputes under the Housing Act 1996.

Section 83 of that Act allows a residential tenant or landlord to go to the Leasehold Valuation Tribunal (LVT) rather than to a civil court when seeking a decision on whether or not service charges are reasonable. It also gives the court discretion to transfer to the LVT any question relating to the reasonableness of service charges which falls within the Tribunal's jurisdiction. This provision came into effect on 1 September 1997 but it has not so far been applied to cases where court proceedings had begun before that date. Representations have been made that this exclusion is unfair.

Under the further Commencement Order proposed today, the court's discretion would also apply to cases where proceedings had begun before 1 September 1997. This would allow the courts to consider whether the interests of justice would best be served by transferring a service charge dispute in such a case to the LVT.

Subject to consultation, the proposed further Commencement Order should bring these new measures into effect in August 1998. Tenants involved in proceedings which started before 1 September 1997 may wish to take legal advice about the implications of these proposals.

Reservoirs Act

Mr. Davidson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what steps he is taking to simplify the procedures in the Reservoirs Act 1975 for making appointments to panels of civil engineers and for enforcing the safety provisions of the Act. [44121]

Angela Eagle: I am today issuing a consultation paper, jointly with the Secretaries of State for Scotland and for Wales, setting out the Government's proposals to amend the Reservoirs Act 1975. These proposals involve the transfer of the Secretaries of States' responsibilities for making appointments to the President of the Institution of Civil Engineers and the transfer of local authorities' enforcement duties in England and Wales to the Environment Agency. I am satisfied that these measures will result in the procedures being made less burdensome both for candidates for appointment and for reservoir undertakers. The amendments would be made by an Order under section 1 of the Deregulation and Contracting Out Act 1994. I have today placed a copy of the consultation paper in the Library of the House.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Sittings of the House

Dr. Tony Wright: To ask the President of the Council on how many occasions since the House adopted the recommendations of the report of the Select Committee on the Sittings of the House business was concluded by 7 pm on Thursdays. [43286]

Mrs. Ann Taylor: The House has risen before 7 pm on Thursdays on three occasions since January 1995 and on a further 15 occasions the business under consideration at that time was the half-hour adjournment. My hon. Friend will be aware that the original Sittings of the House Report in 1991–92, known as the Jopling report, recommended that, on the Thursdays immediately preceding non-sitting Fridays, the House should complete its main business by 7.00 pm and rise after the adjournment at 7.30 pm. The Committee also said that 7.00 pm on the other Thursdays should be the normal time for completion of main business. On the 26 Thursdays before non-sitting Fridays since January 1995, the House rose before 8 pm on 11 occasions and before 9 pm on eight other evenings. On the 83 Thursdays preceding sitting Fridays since then, the House rose between 10 and 10.30 pm on 44 occasions, later than that on eight occasions and adjourned before 9 pm on 26 evenings.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Post Office Users National Council

Mr. Kidney: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will list the members of the Post Office Users National Council and their terms of office. [43327]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: The current members of the Post Office Users National Council, who are generally appointed for individual terms of 3 or 4 years, are:

Member	Appointment expiry date
John Hackney (Chairman)	30 September 1999
Eric Diston	31 December 1998
Rodger Gooding	31 December 1998
Gary Hepburn	31 December 1998
David Morris	31 December 1998
Edward Vidler	31 December 1998
Dennis Wilson	31 December 1998
Dr. Stephanie Stray	31 December 1999
Frederick Bell	31 December 2000
Keith Hitchings	31 December 2000
Andrew Robertson[1]	30 September 1999
Eifion Pritchard[1]	30 September 2000
Gerard Trainor[1]	31 August 2000

[1] Sit on the National Council by virtue of their appointments as Chairmen of the Post Office Users Councils for Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland

In the current round of appointments, I am seeking a more balanced representation in terms of gender and ethnic origin on all the Consumer Councils.

Mr. Kidney: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what the procedures are for nomination and appointment of members to the Post Office Users National Council. [43328]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: The procedures for appointments to the consumer councils for which I am responsible have been drawn up since Lord Nolan published his report and are fully compliant with the Guidance of the Commissioner for Public Appointments. An advertisement for appointments to a number of consumer councils, including the Post Office Users National Council, appears in the press annually. At the time of advertising we also seek nominations from a number of sources including the Council Chairmen, the Public Appointments Unit and all consumer representative organisations and minority groups. Applications are considered by an interview panel, which includes an independent representative, and a short list of candidates is interviewed. Thereafter Ministers select appointees from among all those successful at interview on the basis of merit. This year I expect to be able to confirm the appointments to the Post Office Users National Council by October. I am seeking to ensure that this recruitment provides for better representation of gender and ethnic minorities.

The procedures outlined above were drawn up by a Departmental Appointments Panel which has five independent members.

Small Businesses

Mr. Page: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will list the regulations that have been removed or amended to help small businesses since 1 May 1997. [42777]

Mrs. Roche [holding answer 1 June 1998]: Between 1 May 1997 and 31 May 1998 my Department has laid 8 amending regulations which resulted in compliance cost savings to business. These are as follows:

The Wireless Telegraphy (Network User Stations) (Exemption) Regulations 1997;

The Gas Act 1986 (Exemption) Order 1997;

The Insurance Companies (Accounts and Statements) (Amendment) Regulations 1997;

The Restrictive Trade Practices (Non-Notifiable Agreements) (Sale and Purchase, Share Subscription and Franchise Agreements) Order 1997;

The Restrictive Trade Practices (Non-Notifiable Agreements) (Turnover Threshold) Amendment Order 1997;

The Cosmetic Products (Safety) (Amendment) Regulations 1997;

The Wireless Telegraphy (Licence Charges) (Amendment) Regulations 1998; and

The Trade Marks (Amendment) Rules 1998.

Regulations to reduce the burdens on business are not necessarily targeted on businesses of a particular size. The regulations listed are expected to reduce burdens on business irrespective of size.

EU Structural Funds

Ms Atherton: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what percentage of the United Kingdom population reside in areas in receipt of Objective 1 Funding. [43440]

Mrs. Roche: Of the United Kingdom's population, 6.0 per cent. reside in areas in receipt of Objective 1 Funding.

Source:

European Commission, Structural and Cohesion Fund 1994–99 Regulation and Commentary.

Funeral Industry

Mr. Caplin: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what further action is being taken to improve consumer protection in the funeral industry. [43476]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: The Director General of Fair Trading announced on 15 May that he is to instigate an inquiry into the 'at need' funeral industry. I very much welcome this initiative. I share his concern about any allegations of malpractice and aggressive selling techniques in the funerals industry and call upon the industry to raise standards of consumer service.

I am also urgently considering measures to ensure that consumers who purchase their funerals in advance are properly protected. My Department is in regular contact with interested parties.

Business Link North West London

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to her answer of 14 May 1998, Official Report, column 193, on Business Link, London North West, (1) on what basis the committed and actual partner contributions figures include in kind contributions; [43992]

(2) if she will provide a detailed breakdown of the forecast figure of £160,000 partnership income for the financial year 1998–99. [43993]

Mrs. Roche [holding answer 1 June 1998]: For the financial year 1997–98 Business Link North West London received £150,000 as a partnership contribution. Of this sum £25,000 was allocated to the salary of a North West London TEC contracts manager who had the specific duty of servicing the Business Link.

For the financial year 1998–99 the forecast contribution will flow from savings produced as a result of the merger. At this stage it is not possible to provide a detailed breakdown.

Fireworks

Dr. Iddon: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how retailers are to dispose of their stocks if the Fireworks Bill is enacted. [43669]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: The Fireworks Bill is a Private Member's Bill which, if enacted, would provide the capability to deal with issues which cannot be addressed under the presently available powers. However, the fact of the Bill reaching the statute book would not of itself result in any new controls on fireworks being introduced. A key element in the Bill is a provision which would allow for the introduction of a training regime for the organisers of firework displays.

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what changes have been made to import controls on fireworks since November 1996; and what plans she has for further changes. [43389]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: There have been no changes to import controls on fireworks since November 1996.

The Fireworks (Safety) Regulations 1997, which I made in September 1997, introduced a number of firework safety measures including banning bangers, flash bangers, fireworks with erratic flight, aerial shells, maroons and other large fireworks from sale to the public. The Regulations also place limits on the size of certain fireworks—such as Roman Candles—which can be sold to the public. These restrictions apply both to imported fireworks and to those manufactured in the United Kingdom.

I am currently discussing with the firework industry the "traceability" of imported fireworks to improve the interception of dangerous ones.

Plutonium

Dr. Moonie: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will publish the figures for the United Kingdom's stock of civil plutonium as at 31 December 1997. [44282]

Mr. Battle: I have today placed in the Library of the House figures for the United Kingdom under the new format showing national holdings of civil plutonium as at 31 December 1997. These figures are published as part of the UK's renewed commitment to improve transparency and openness in its management of our national holding of civil plutonium. This follows the same format as that announced on 2 December 1997 for holdings as at 31 December 1996. In accordance with the requirements of the 'Guidelines for the Management of Plutonium', I have today sent a copy of the figures to the Director-General of the International Atomic Energy Agency, who will be circulating it to Member States in due course.

EC Telecommunications Council

Maria Eagle: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will make a statement on the outcome of the EC Telecommunications Council on 19 May. [44281]

Mrs. Roche: I chaired the Telecommunications Council held in Brussels on 19 May.

Substantial progress was made towards agreement on two decisions: on the further development of mobile and wireless communications in Europe (universal mobile telecommunications system); and on a multi-annual programme to promote safe use of the internet. Both decisions will be finalised once the European Parliament has given its first reading.

Following a presentation of the report from the ad hoc Working Group on electronic commerce, which examined the Commission Communication on Globalisation and the Information Society, the Council adopted conclusions on this subject. The Commission gave oral presentations of a draft Directive on a European framework for electronic signatures, and a Communication on the radio frequency requirements for Community policies in the context of the World Radiocommunications Conference 1999. The Commission also provided an oral update on discussions with the US on the subject of internet domain name governance.

The Commission and I briefed the Council on progress in tackling the Millennium Bug. In particular, I reported to the Council on the conference hosted by the UK on 8 May this year, in London.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Film Industry

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will list those films which have received lottery funding indicating (a) how much lottery money each received, (b) their total budgets, (c) their release dates, (d) the number of screens on which they opened and (e) their takings to date. [41802]

Mr. Tom Clarke [holding answer 13 May 1998]: The table shows the information available as provided by the Arts Council of England.

Film title	Lottery award	Budget	Release date	Number of screens	Total box office to date (£)
Glastonbury The Movie Limited	36,061	125,000	Released 12.6.96	Opened on 3; played up to 75	£30,000; other income through its video release
True Blue	1,000,000	3,500,000	Released 15.11.96	108 screens	152,042
Crimetime	302,421	3,817,755	Released 29.11.96	23 screens	13,127
A Midsummer Nights Dream	750,000	2,300,000	Released 29.11.96	6 screens	25,859
Frantz Fanon	84,000	320,000	Released 27.6.97	1 screen, ICA	2,180
The Slab Boys	520,000	2,500,000	Released 29.8.97	8 screens	15,911
Gallivant	170,000	334,366	Released 19.9.97	3 screens	21,000
Photographing Fairies	890,000	3,620,000	Released 19.9.97	60 screens	81,609
Shooting Fish	980,000	2,135,000	Released 17.10.97	206 screens	4,023,915
Wilde	1,500,000	6,000,000	Released 17.10.97	53 screens	1,746,912
The Tango Lesson	690,000	2,700,000	Released 28.11.97	60 screens	207,120
Keep the Aspidistra Flying	1,000,000	2,750,000	Released 28.11.97	9 screens	105,163
The Woodlanders	1,400,000	4,300,000	Released 6.2.98	18 screens	177,442
Downtime	768,898	1,956,495	Released 13.2.98	42 screens	28,135
Bent	561,000	2,154,183	Released 6.3.98	3 screens	27,962
My Son the Fanatic	750,000	2,134,800	Released 1.5.98	16 screens	60,084
Amy Foster	2,000,000	10,500,000	Released 8.5.98	39 screens	20,371
Love and Death on Long Island	750,000	2,300,874	To be released 3.7.98
The Land Girls	1,500,000	5,800,000	To be released 28.8.98
Love is the Devil	364,551	1,119,364	To be released 9.98
The Governess	907,075	2,803,000	To be released 10.98
The Revengers Comedies	950,000	4,000,000	Release date tbc
Among Giants	665,000	2,479,000	Release date tbc
Divorcing Jack	800,000	3,350,000	To be released autumn 98
Metroland	865,000	2,953,347	Release date tbc
A Kind of Hush	750,000	2,215,287	Release date tbc
Food of Love	800,000	2,100,000	UK Distributor tbc
Peggy Sue	500,000	1,130,000	UK Distributor tbc
Sixth Happiness	469,727	976,081	UK Distributor tbc
Nana	160,000	320,000	UK Distributor tbc
Get Real	800,000	1,808,000	UK Distributor tbc

Cable Television

Mr. Caplin: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will ensure that future cable television licensing agreements require the provision of high quality local programming by franchise operators and that that provision be monitored by the ITC. [43109]

Mr. Fisher: The award and regulation of cable television licences is, by statute, a matter for the Independent Television Commission (ITC). The terms of the Broadcasting Act 1990 require that licences awarded by the ITC under that Act contain no positive requirements for specific programming categories or quality. The ITC will however continue to monitor conditions relating to local programming in cable licences issued by the Cable Authority under the Cable and Broadcasting Act 1984, for which the Commission is now responsible.

Libraries

Ms Beverley Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what public money is being provided to help libraries take advantage of new technology. [41985]

Mr. Fisher [holding answer 1 June 1998]: The Government published their plans for the development of an IT Public Libraries Network on 16 April. £70 million of Lottery funding will be made available from the New Opportunities Fund for the development of new digital resources and the provision of ICT training of public library staff, together with £6 million to support the development of infrastructure.

EU Culture Council

Mr. Caplin: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what was the outcome of the Culture Council on 28 May. [44192]

Mr. Fisher: EU Ministers of Culture met on 28 May 1998 in Brussels. Ministers agreed a common position regarding the proposed European Parliament and Council decision establishing a Community action for "The European City of Culture" event for the years 2005 to 2019. Ministers also agreed the cities to be offered the title "European City of Culture" and "European Cultural Month" for the years 2001 to 2004.

The European Commission presented its proposal for a new culture framework programme. Ministers held an exchange of views on the Commission's proposal.

The Presidency provided the Council with information about an informal meeting between the Cultural Affairs Committee and representatives of the Council of Europe which took place on 16 April and focused on the impact of new technologies upon culture.

The Commission provided the Council with a progress report on its study on cross border fixed book prices in the European Union.

Ministers also held an exchange of views on culture and employment.

Ministers agreed a draft recommendation concerning the protection of minors and human dignity in audiovisual and information services.

The Presidency gave a report on the European Audiovisual Conference, "Challenges and Opportunities of the Digital Age", which was held in Birmingham on 6–8 April. The Council adopted Council conclusions on the outcome of the Conference.

Ministers discussed a proposal to establish a European Film Award and the Commission agreed to undertake a study. Under any other business, access to archives in the European Union, the importance of music and music sector, and Weimar's plans as City of Culture 1999 were mentioned.

WALES

Breast Cancer

Ms Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when up-to-date figures will be available on the incidence of breast cancer among women by unitary authority area and by age. [43473]

Mr. Win Griffiths: The Welsh Cancer Intelligence and Surveillance Unit is dealing with the registration backlog at the rate of one year's data every four months.

This means incidence data for the current calendar year (1998) should be available by February 2000. For 1999 and subsequent years, data will be available in the following September.

Football Trust

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to assist the work of the Football Trust in Wales; and if he will make a statement. [44053]

Mr. Ron Davies: I have no such plans but discussions are ongoing between the Sports Council for Wales, the Football Association of Wales and the Football Trust on how they might make the best use of their joint resources to develop football in Wales.

NHS Trusts

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the year end financial position of each NHS trust in Wales. [44193]

Mr. Win Griffiths: The table shows the unaudited end year financial position of NHS trusts in Wales. Twenty one of the 29 trusts improved on their projected year end position provided in their December quarter returns. The efforts made by the trusts are appreciated.

£000

Trust	Unaudited year end position	December quarter projected figures
Bridgend and District	25	0
Cardiff Community	315	259
Carmarthen	−1,557	−1,659
Ceredigion	−918	−1,100
Clwydian Community	179	187
East Glamorgan	168	92
Glan Y Mor	13	0
Glan Clwyd	167	127
Glan Hafren	330	330
Gwent Community	66	66
Gwynedd Community	63	97
Gwynedd Hospitals	198	−92
Llandough Hospital	−1,346	−1,822
Llanelli/Dinefwr	−646	−800
Mid Glamorgan Ambulance	69	49
Morriston	−1,667	−2,691
Nevill Hall and District	18	−82
North Glamorgan	54	−308
North Wales Ambulance	4	56
Pembrokeshire and Derwen	−2,039	−2,097
Powys	−900	−1,278
Rhondda	132	116
SEWAT	58	0
Swansea	49	60
University Dental Hospital	7	−92
University Hospital of Wales	−1,462	−4,574
Velindre	23	87
West Wales Ambulance	0	0
Wrexham Maelor	−87	−737
Total	−8,684	−15,806

HOME DEPARTMENT

Immigration

Ms Moran: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to conclude his review of immigration cases where domestic violence is involved; and if he will make a statement. [43200]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The review is nearing its conclusion and I hope to be able to make an announcement shortly.

Reginald Kray

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how often Reginald Kray has been found in possession of alcohol in the last 12 months; and what is its source. [42139]

Ms Quin: While Mr. Kray has not been found in possession of alcohol during the last 12 months, reports prepared for his most recent Parole Board review in March of this year referred to admission by him that he continued to drink illicit alcohol.

Sentencing

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps are being taken to ensure uniformity of sentences for similar offences in different areas; and if he will make a statement. [43610]

Mr. Michael: Provisions in the Crime and Disorder Bill [Lords] place a statutory duty on the Court of Appeal to consider producing sentencing guidelines. The Bill also establishes a new sentencing advisory panel which will offer advice to the Court of Appeal. Taken together, we are confident that these measures will help to ensure greater consistency in sentencing.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what instructions he has issued to the Immigration Service regarding arrangements for asylum seekers to be represented at interviews held at ports. [43464]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Current and longstanding instructions to the Immigration Service about representation at interviews of passengers at ports have not altered significantly in recent times.

All passenger interviews, including those of asylum seekers, are conducted under Schedule 2 to the Immigration Act 1971. It is not a mandatory requirement for a representative to be present at any interview. However, at the discretion of the immigration officer, representatives are usually admitted to interviews once their bona fides have been established and provided that no unreasonable delay is involved.

On arrival in the United Kingdom, all port asylum seekers are given written information about access to legal advice including details of the Refugee Legal Centre and The Immigration Advisory Service.

Prison Site, Morecambe

Miss Geraldine Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the proposed temporary prison at Middleton Sands, Morecambe will close. [43663]

Ms Quin: A condition of the planning clearance is that the period between the opening and closing of the prison should not exceed three years; and the prison should close prior to 31 December 2001.

UK Visa Applications (Turkish Cypriots)

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he received a request from the Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Office, the hon. Member for Newcastle-upon-Tyne, North (Mr. Henderson), to reply to a query regarding visas for Turkish Cypriots entering the United Kingdom; when he received a letter on the same subject dated 4 February from the right hon. Member for Strangford; and if he will make a statement. [44030]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: I have received a number of representations on this issue, including a letter from the right hon. Member for Strangford (Mr. Taylor) received on 30 April, and will write to the hon. and right hon. Members concerned as soon as possible.

Easter Sunday Trading

Mr. Gareth Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action he is taking to prevent indoor retail outlets trading on Easter Sunday. [44031]

Mr. George Howarth: Under the Sunday Trading Act 1994, only those shops with a relevant floor area of more than 280 square metres are prohibited from trading on Easter Sunday. Local authorities are responsible for enforcing the Act's provisions. Contravening the shop opening hours provisions can attract a fine of conviction of up to £50,000.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Travel Expenses

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what was the total value in real terms of (a) staff car mileage claims paid and (b) staff rail fares paid in each year since 1989–90; and what was the total amount of staff car mileage for which reimbursement was made and the percentage change in each year since 1989–90. [42551]

Mr. Fatchett: The information required to answer this question is not readily available and to obtain it would involve disproportionate cost.

Thailand

Mr. Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assistance has been given to the Thailand Government to prevent cross-border incursions by the Burmese military. [43470]

Mr. Fatchett: We have received no request from the Thai authorities for assistance to prevent incursions from Burma. As EU Presidency, we have condemned recent incursions and highlighted their impact on refugees along the Thai-Burma border. Our Embassies in Rangoon and Bangkok have raised our concerns with their host governments at a high level.

Most recently, I raised the issue of Burmese refugees in Thailand with General Chettla Thanajaro, Commander in Chief of the Royal Thai Army, in Bangkok on 29 May.

HEALTH

Winter Pressures

14. Mrs. Heal: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of the extra funding provided to the NHS for coping with winter pressures was spent on projects involving joint working with social services. [42190]

22. Mr. Sutcliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of the extra funding provided to the NHS for coping with winter pressures was spent on projects involving joint working with social services. [42198]

Mr. Boateng: Of the £159 million allocated to health authorities in England, over one fifth (some £35 million) was transferred to social services departments for projects where the need was specifically for social care. Details of the precise spend on other projects which involved joint working with social services is not available centrally. However, we made it clear that all projects funded by the additional resources should be developed in consultation with local social services departments.

NHS Quality Standards

15. Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action he is taking to improve mechanisms within the NHS for the introduction of more demanding quality standards. [42191]

Mr. Milburn: Our White Paper "The New NHS", published last December, set out a range of proposals for driving and supporting quality improvement in the National Health Service. We shall shortly be publishing a consultation paper which sets out some of our key proposals in more detail.

Infertility Treatment (Workington)

16. Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on his review of the case of Mrs. X of Workington, whose name has been supplied to him. [42192]

Ms Jowell: I understand that this case is about a woman who has not been able to obtain in-vitro fertilisation treatment in Cumbria as she is not eligible under the North Cumbria Health Authority's criteria for infertility treatment. Like most National Health Service treatments, infertility treatment is funded through the general funding of health authorities, and decisions about the allocation of resources and about who should be eligible for treatment are the responsibility of individual authorities. We are determined to address concerns that the NHS should provide equality of access to services throughout the country and are currently considering what further advice the NHS should be given on infertility service provision.

Health Action Zones

17. Mr. McNulty: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much money he is making available to support the development of health action zones. [42193]

Mr. Milburn: We are making £5.3 million in 1998/99 and £30 million from 1999/2000 available to support the first wave of Health Action Zones.

Health Authorities (West Yorkshire)

18. Mr. Bill O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has for the reorganisation of health authorities and community trusts in West Yorkshire; and if he will make a statement. [42194]

Mr. Milburn: We have received no proposals to reorganise health authorities or community trusts in West Yorkshire.

Health Information (Men over 40)

19. Mrs. Dean: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action his Department is taking to provide improved health information to men over 40 years of age. [42195]

31. Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action his Department is taking to provide improved information on health to men over 40 years of age. [42208]

Ms Jowell: I refer my hon. Friends to my oral reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Heywood and Middleton (Mr. Dobbin) today, Official Report, column 161.

Elderly Patients

20. Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action his Department is taking to ensure patients aged over 75 years are not discharged without adequate social services available for their care. [42196]

Mr. Boateng: The Department is undertaking a number of relevant activities. Guidance on hospital discharge is under review. Social services inspectors are about to publish a report on local authorities' hospital discharge arrangements. The Department is working with health and social services authorities to develop assessment and care management, including written care plans for all patients on discharge from hospital, rehabilitation and recuperation services and joint investment plans.

Grimsby Hospital

21. Shona McIsaac: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action he is taking to improve mechanisms within the NHS for the introduction of more demanding quality standards at Grimsby hospital. [42197]

Mr. Milburn: Our White Paper "The New NHS", published last December, set out a range of proposals for driving and supporting quality improvement in the National Health Service. We shall shortly be publishing a consultation paper which sets out some of our key proposals in more detail. The proposals for hospitals will apply to all hospital trusts and therefore to Grimsby hospital.

Treatments (Clinical Effectiveness)

23. Mr. Russell Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans the Government have to enforce NHS guidance on the clinical effectiveness of treatments. [42200]

Mr. Milburn: In the White Paper "The New NHS" we announced the end of the internal market in the National Health Service. The new National Institute for Clinical Excellence will set the standards of care that must be equally available to all. For the first time, the Government will require managers throughout the NHS to give as much attention to the effectiveness of treatments as to efficiency and cost. We will develop and publish National Service Frameworks which will make it clear what patients can expect from the NHS; and we will use the Service Frameworks to drive up quality through our management of NHS performance.

NHS Hospitals

24. Lorna Fitzsimons: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many new NHS hospitals have been announced since 1 May 1997. [42201]

Mr. Milburn: Thirty hospital schemes have been given the go ahead since 1 May 1997. Twenty-five of these were under the Private Finance Initiative and five publicly funded.

Cancer Treatment

25. Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will encourage cancer treatment in hospitals with specialist cancer research facilities. [42202]

Mr. Boateng: The Calman/Hine report on cancer services recognises the importance of high quality research and recommends that this is carried out throughout the cancer care network—in cancer units, cancer centres; primary care and within the voluntary sector. This means that the necessary population is available for research; there is close liaison between the service and the research; and the results leading to improved care can be disseminated quickly.

Prescriptions

26. Maria Eagle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he is taking to ensure consistency between health authorities in respect of the prescription of certain drugs. [42203]

Mr. Milburn: We will work with the professions to produce National Service Frameworks and clinical guidelines which will be relevant to all health authorities. We will challenge and address variations in the provision of clinically and cost effective treatments not based on the health needs and wishes of local people.

Heart Disease

27. Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action he is taking to reduce the incidence of heart disease. [42204]

Ms Jowell: Coronary heart disease is one of the biggest killers in this country. It accounts for some 120,000 deaths a year including premature deaths. Its incidence shows marked social class inequality. For example, men of working age in the bottom social classes are more than 50 per cent. more likely to die of coronary heart disease than men in the overall population.

The Government are undertaking a variety of initiatives to tackle the risk factors for coronary heart disease. These include the forthcoming White Paper on tobacco control, a major campaign, called "Active for Life" to publicise the significant health benefits of moderately intense physical activity, a review, last year, of effective interventions in the prevention and treatment of obesity, and a directory of weight management services available across the National Health Service in England. We also launched a rolling programme of National Service Frameworks including the development of a framework for the prevention and treatment of coronary heart disease, which will set national standards; put in place strategies to support implementation; and establish performance measures against which progress in reducing preventable death, tackling inequalities, and ensuring consistency of treatment, will be measured. The emerging findings from this work are expected in the autumn, and will be published and disseminated.

Mental Health

28. Mr. Truswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how he will ensure community and mental health services in Leeds receive an adequate share of the Government's extra investment in the NHS. [42205]

Mr. Boateng: I am pleased to say that Leeds Health Authority will receive a general allocation of £339.93 million in 1998/99, which is a total cash increase of £15.89 million over 1997/98.

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the provision of long-stay beds for the mentally ill in (a) the North West Region, (b) the county of Cheshire and (c) East Cheshire NHS Trust. [42187]

Mr. Boateng: North West Region has resettled almost all long stay residents from the large institutions which provided treatment and care for people with mental health problems. There are still some final moves from some of the sites yet to be achieved. The whole of this was subject to a report submitted to the Independent Reference Group in 1997.

At Winwick Hospital, the local mental health services are still in the process of moving to newly developed areas on the Winwick site and also to a purpose built mental health unit at Halton General Hospital, Runcorn. These moves have been notified to the health authority concerned and will be monitored closely by the North West Regional Office of the National Health Service Executive.

In East Cheshire NHS Trust, patients previously at Parkside Hospital (the largest institution of its type in South Cheshire) have been reprovided for in a range of community based facilities, mostly within their home areas.

Small Pharmacies

29. Mr. St. Aubyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans his Department has to support the role of small pharmacies in delivering health care. [42206]

Mr. Milburn: All pharmacies which provide National Health Service services receive a fair and appropriate level of remuneration for the work they carry out. We have in place special arrangements—the Essential Small Pharmacies Scheme—to guarantee a minimum NHS income for certain smaller pharmacies which might not otherwise be viable. We plan to continue both these forms of support.

Health Inequalities

30. Mr. Paul Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent research he has commissioned into health inequalities. [42207]

Ms Jowell: We recently announced eight research projects at a cost of £1.7 million on inequalities in health. This round of commissioning has focused on important areas to do with children and young people as well as health service mechanisms. All the projects are geared to answering the question: what actions on the part of health and other services can be effectively taken to reduce inequalities in health? In addition the Independent Inquiry into Inequalities in Health is reviewing existing research on this issue. Further research will be commissioned in the light of the Inquiry's report.

National Service Frameworks

32. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action he has taken to introduce national service frameworks in the NHS. [42209]

Mr. Milburn: The annual programme of national service frameworks was launched on 16 April 1998. The initial programme of work will take forward the existing frameworks for cancer and paediatric intensive care, and will begin to develop new national service frameworks for mental health and coronary heart disease.

Each national service framework will be developed with the assistance of an expert reference group which will bring together health professionals, service users and carers, health service managers, partner agencies, and other advocates. The reference groups for mental health and coronary heart disease will be established during the next few weeks, and will begin work in the early summer.

Emerging findings will be published in the autumn and the frameworks in spring 1999. The National Health Service, working with partner agencies, will be expected to begin to plan for implementation from April 1999.

Primary Care Groups

33. Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress is being made in respect of primary care groups. [42210]

Mr. Milburn: A great deal of work has been done since publication of the White Paper "The New NHS: Modern—Dependable" to establish Primary Care Groups. We are on course to have Primary Care Groups in place and operational by April 1999.

Local discussions are now well under way to agree Primary Care Group configurations by July this year. We have also been consulting various interested bodies nationally on implementation issues. We have made £22 million available to help get Primary Care Groups off the ground. This £22 million will be deliberately targeted to areas with higher numbers of non-fundholding general practitioners in recognition of the fact that they do not have the resources of the fundholder management allowances to draw on. It takes account of the fact that primary care management resources—including GP computing cash—has been unevenly distributed in the past. This is a first step to restoring equity across practices. It will be for local doctors and nurses to decide with their health authority how this money is best spent. This additional support will help family doctors and community nurses get their local Primary Care Group right so that patients get the maximum benefit from the new arrangements.

Palliative Care

34. Mr. Flight: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on Government funding for hospices. [42211]

Mr. Milburn: It is the duty of health authorities to arrange the provision of specialist palliative care services (including hospice care) commensurate with the assessed health needs of their populations, in the same way as for other health services. Since 1994/5, funding for this purpose has been built into health authorities' general allocations.

Health Service Commissioner

35. Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to increase confidence among parents in the role of the Health Service Commissioner with respect to the NHS complaints procedure. [42212]

Mr. Milburn: As an Officer of Parliament the Health Service Commissioner is independent of the Government and it is not for Ministers to intervene in the way he operates. However, we have every confidence that the Commissioner carries out his role in an entirely appropriate manner.

Care (Young People)

36. Ms Christine Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he has taken to involve young people in care in consultations on the provision of that care. [42213]

Mr. Boateng: Children Act Regulations prescribe that local authorities shall seek and take account of the views of a child before conducting any review of his case.

Guidance on children's services planning highlights the importance of local authorities seeking children's views and giving due weight to them alongside those of parents and carers.

A care leaver is one of the members of the Ministerial Task Force on children's safeguards, and the Department will be providing funding for the establishment of a new national organisation for young people in care and for care leavers.

Children's Rights

Mr. Gorrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to appoint (a) a United Kingdom children's rights commissioner and (b) an English children's rights commissioner. [24346]

Mr. Boateng: We have no plans to establish an office of Children's Rights Commissioner. During 1998 the Government will be preparing the Second United Kingdom Report to the United Nations Committee on the Rights of the Child in accordance with the requirements of Article 44 of the Convention on the Rights of the Child, 1989. We will take into account possible advantages of such an Office and note progress in other countries where such an Office has been established.

Occupational Health

Laura Moffatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many medical and nursing staff have worked in occupational health in the National Health Service for the last five years for which figures are available; and what were the grades of those employees. [42460]

Mr. Milburn: The available information is given in the tables. The introduction of a new method of classifying staff from 1995 means that nursing staff working in occupational health can no longer be separately identified.

Hospital and community health services (HCHS) nursing staff working in occupational health in England as at 30 September each year

Whole-time equivalents

	1990	1991	1992	1993	1994
Total	630	610	590	600	640

Note:
Figures are rounded to the nearest ten
Source:
Department of Health Non-Medical Workforce census

NHS hospital medical staff occupational medicine staff by grade in England as at 30 September each year

Whole-time equivalents

Grade	1992	1993	1994	1995	1996
All staff	70	70	90	100	90
Consultant	30	30	40	50	50
Staff grade	0	0	0	0	0
Associate specialist	—	—	—	0	0
Senior registrar	10	10	10	10	10
Registrar	10	0	0	0	0
Senior house officer	—	—	0	0	—
House officer	—	—	—	—	—
Hospital practitioner	0	0	0	0	0
Clinical assistant	20	20	30	30	20
Other staff	0	0	0	0	0

Notes:
Previous to 1996 occupational medicine was called occupational health
The figure for senior registrars in 1996 includes specialist registrars
Figures are rounded to the nearest 10 whole-time equivalents
Totals may not equal the sum of component parts due to rounding
0 = 5 or less and greater than zero
— = zero
Source:
Department of Health Medical and Dental Workforce Census.

Dr. Stoate: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps are being taken to ensure that the guidance, Occupational Health Services for NHS staff 94(51), is being implemented in each NHS trust. [43598]

Mr. Milburn: Occupational Health Services for National Health Service Staff 94(51) has been superseded by the Management of Health, Safety and Welfare issues for NHS Staff 98(64). This guidance, issued on 18 May 1998 to all chief executives and human resource directors in health authorities and NHS trusts, covers all aspects of health and safety and occupational health.

The NHS Executive is currently working on a new human resources strategy for the NHS. Taking forward occupational health provision will be a priority area for action requiring demonstrable year on year progress.

Dr. Stoate: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps are being taken to make occupational health services available to staff working in primary care. [43601]

Mr. Milburn: The National Health Service Executive is working with representatives of interested parties to examine ways of extending occupational health provision to staff working in primary care, in the light of changes currently taking place in primary care provision.

Glaucoma

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what representations his Department has received in the last year on the extension of glaucoma testing as part of the NHS standard sight test; and if he will make a statement; [42368]

(2) what estimates he has made of (a) the number and (b) the proportion of opticians who carry out the full three stage test for glaucoma in the course of NHS sight tests; what plans he has to extend the provision of all three tests to all patients receiving NHS sight tests; and if he will make a statement. [42366]

Mr. Milburn: Information from the College of Optometrists, which regularly reviews current practice among its members, suggests that, in testing patients over 40 and other patients predisposed to glaucoma, virtually all optometrists examine the optic disc and measure intra-ocular pressures, and over half routinely undertake a visual field assessment. These data are not broken down between private and National Health Service sight tests, but we would expect optometrists to adopt common practices for both groups of patients.

We have not received representations on this subject.

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what evaluation he has made of (a) the increased cost of ensuring that every NHS periodic sight test includes all three glaucoma detection tests and (b) the additional number of early-stage glaucoma cases that would be detected with universal three test procedures; and if he will make a statement. [42367]

Mr. Milburn: We are aware of research which suggests that the accuracy of referrals could be improved from 60 to 80 per cent. by the combined use of the 3 tests on patients at risk of glaucoma. There is a single fee for undertaking National Health Service sight tests which is set through negotiations between the Department and representatives of optometrists and ophthalmic medical practitioners. Clinical developments are among the factors taken into account, but it is not possible to isolate their impact.

Spinal Injuries

Mr. Woodward: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many people with spinal cord injury have not received specialist treatment at a spinal injuries unit in each of the last three years; [42653]

(2) how many people with acute spinal cord injury are awaiting admittance to a spinal injuries unit; [42649]

(3) how many people diagnosed with spinal cord injury died before reaching a spinal injuries unit, in each year since 1990–91. [42652]

Mr. Milburn: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Mr. Woodward: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what studies have been undertaken or commissioned by his Department on (a) the quality of life and (b) the long term cost of care of people with spinal cord injury who (i) received treatment and (ii) did not receive treatment at a spinal injuries unit; [42650]

(2) what research his Department (a) has commissioned and (b) proposes into (i) the incidence and (ii) the prevalence of spinal cord injury. [42648]

Mr. Milburn: The Department's policy research programme and the central National Health Service research and development programmes are not currently supporting any research into spinal cord injuries. However, many NHS trusts support programmes of research and development, some of which are considerable. The NHS supports clinical trials in spinal injuries which are conducted within its facilities. A comprehensive database for the projects funded under these programmes is currently under development.

Mr. Woodward: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people with spinal cord injury are currently being treated in (a) spinal injuries units and (b) non-specialist hospitals. [42651]

Mr. Milburn: We do not collect the information in the form requested. However, information for in-patient treatment, for the latest year available, 1995–96, is shown in the tables, copies of which have been placed in the Library, and is based on finished consultant episodes; which represent the number of episodes of care under individual consultants.

NHS Drugs (Prices)

Mrs. Ellman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what mechanisms exist to assess, monitor and regulate price increases in drugs used by the NHS. [43030]

Mr. Milburn: The prices of branded medicines sold to the National Health Service are regulated through the pharmaceutical price regulation scheme (PPRS), which is a voluntary agreement between the health departments and the pharmaceutical industry. The scheme sets for each major company a profit cap (with various cost allowances), based on return of capital employed, within which the company is allowed to establish the price of new medicines it proposes to sell to the NHS. Increases in the price of medicines have to be agreed by the Department. Small companies (sales below £20 million per annum to the NHS) are not required to supply such detailed information as a matter of routine, but remain subject to the price restraint provisions of the scheme.

Generic products are not included in the PPRS. We do not control their prices which are determined by competitive market forces.

Slow Sodium Tablets

Mrs. Ellman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the increase in the price of slow sodium tablets per 100 to the NHS between March and May 1998 in actual and percentage terms. [43032]

Mr. Milburn: The list price to the National Health Service of this product increased during this period from 55p to £6.05 per 100, an increase of 1,000 per cent. Officials wrote to HK Pharma specifically on this issue on 28 April. So far they have not replied.

Commission for Health Improvement

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) when he will announce detailed plans for user representation on the Commission for Health Improvement; [43156]

(2) what remit the National Institute for Clinical Excellence and the Commission for Health Improvement will have to encourage the spread of good practice in wheelchair services; [43157]

(3) when he will announce detailed plans for user representation on the National Institute for Clinical Excellence. [43155]

Mr. Milburn: We will be consulting shortly on our detailed proposals for the Commission for Health Improvement and the National Institute for Clinical Excellence.

Midwives

Mr. Alan Johnson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will list the number of midwife vacancies in the NHS by health authority and NHS trust; [43150]

(2) if he will list the number of midwives employed in the NHS by health authority and NHS trust; [43152]

(3) if he will list the number of whole-time equivalent midwifery posts in the NHS by health authority and NHS trust. [43154]

Mr. Milburn: The National Health Service Executive does not collect information on the number of vacancies or posts (counted as the sum of staff in post and vacancies) in the hospital and community health services. For the information that is available on midwife vacancies and posts in the NHS, I refer my hon. Friend to the reports of the Review Body for Nursing Staff, Midwives, Health Visitors and Professions Allied to Medicine, copies of which are available in the Library.

Information on the number of midwives employed in English health authorities and NHS trusts is given in a table, copies of which have been placed in the Library.

PFI (Loughborough)

Mr. Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress has been made towards the completion of the private finance initiative project to replace Loughborough's general hospital. [43185]

Mr. Milburn: The National Health Service Executive is expecting to receive a revised full business case (FBC) from Fosse Health NHS Trust for the scheme to replace Loughborough's general hospital under the private finance initiative scheme in June 1998. The FBC will then be considered for approval.

Patients (Dietary Needs)

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he will take to ensure that those patients who need assistance in feeding themselves obtain it; and if he will make a statement. [43459]

Mr. Milburn: It is the responsibility of clinical staff in hospitals to identify the needs of individual patients, including identifying people who need help with eating and drinking, for whatever reason, and the Department has issued guidance on meeting the dietary needs of people in hospital.

The Department commissioned further work by the University of Newcastle-upon-Tyne to look at the whole issue of meeting the dietary needs of people in hospitals. We issued this work, "Eating Matters", in November 1997 and it was sent to all National Health Service trusts.

We are strongly committed to improving the health and social care services provided to older people. In response to the recent "Dignity on the Ward" campaign by The Observer my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has commissioned HAS 2000 to examine the care which acute hospitals provide for older people. HAS 2000 are expected to look at the problem nationwide, and are examining eight hospitals in greater detail. They will report directly to my right hon. Friend, who plans to publish their report. The study is being undertaken between January and June 1998.

Emergency Contraception

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of United States pilot projects allowing pharmacists to prescribe emergency contraception within protocols agreed with local doctors. [43456]

Mr. Milburn: No such assessment has yet been made. The review of prescribing, supply and administration of medicines is considering whether and in what circumstances health professionals other than doctors and dentists should be able to prescribe. We await its report later this year and will then consider our response.

Drugs Treatment

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 19 May 1998, Official Report, column 352, what percentage of the total number of drug users of (a) cannabis, (b) ecstasy and (c) heroin he estimates are in contact with drug treatment services. [43890]

Ms Jowell: Because of the covert and illegal nature of drug taking it is impossible to measure the number of people who take drugs in the general population and therefore to estimate the percentage who attend drug treatment services.

Hospital Doctors (Working Hours)

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what were the average hours worked each week by hospital doctors in (a) the North Thames Region and (b) the South Thames Region in (i) the last year for which figures are available and (ii) each of the previous 10 years. [43688]

Mr. Milburn: Figures are not collected on average hours worked each week by hospital doctors. However, the New Deal on junior doctors' hours, begun in June 1991, requires each trust to monitor the hours of work of doctors in training against agreed limits over a series of target dates and to report compliance via regional task forces.

Figures for on-call posts since 1991 for the two regions in question are in the table.

	North Thames			South Thames
	Total number of juniors	Complying[1] with New Deal	Per cent.	Total number of juniors	Complying[1] with New Deal	Per cent.
September 1991	5,101	3,086	60	3,372	2,481	74
February 1992	5,051	3,078	61	3,358	2,310	69
August 1992	5,144	3,757	73	3,562	2,638	74
March 1993	5,147	4,294	83	3,481	2,705	78
September 93	5,321	4,667	88	3,606	3,037	84
March 1994	5,482	4,115	75	3,639	2,324	64
September 1994	5,388	4,132	77	3,821	3,135	82
December 1994	5,478	4,760	87	3,652	3,114	85
September 1995	5,587	3,813	68	3,858	2,699	70
March 1996	5,558	4,091	74	4,039	3,124	77
September 1996	5,648	4,378	78	3,976	3,188	80
March 1997	5,734	4,816	84	4,280	3,567	83
September 1997	5,754	4,906	86	4,190	3,606	86
March 1998	5,756	4,856	86	4,360	3,936	90

[1] These figures represent hours' targets prevailing during the period; after December 1994 returns were altered to emphasise compliance with actual hours of work rather than contracted hours of duty

1991–1994 (non-compliance with contracted duty hours on-call greater than 72)

1995–98 (non-compliance with actual hours of work on-call greater than 56).

Secure Beds (London)

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many local government secure beds are available in London for females under 18 years of age. [43641]

Mr. Boateng: All secure units are approved to accommodate boys and girls. There are currently 40 approved places within London with an additional 10 places coming on stream at Stamford House later this summer.

NHS Staff (Assaults)

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many assaults on staff in NHS (a) London and (b) South East hospitals have resulted in serious injury or death of members of staff in the last 10 years. [43449]

Mr. Milburn: There is currently no central collection or collation of data on violence in the National Health Service. There is a requirement for statutory reporting to the Health and Safety Executive (HSE) Reporting of Injuries, Diseases and Dangerous Occurrences Regulations 1985. This requirement relates to serious injury cases arising from activities on hospital premises, for example: deaths, specified fractures (for example skull or leg), loss of sight, injury requiring hospital in-patient treatment for more than 24 hours, or injury leading to absence from work for more than three days. In addition to this NHS trusts and health authorities collect information locally.

GPs (Terms of Service)

Mr. Nicholls: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if the duty presently imposed on general practitioners by Paragraph 43 of the NHS Terms of Service will also be imposed on general practitioners who are part of a primary care group; if he will ensure that general practitioners in a primary care group are protected from litigation by patients for refusal to supply a drug solely on the grounds of cost; and if he will make a statement. [43365]

Mr. Milburn: General practitioners will continue to be expected to prescribe medicines to meet the clinical needs of their patients. Patients will continue to be guaranteed the medicines they need.

Chlamydia

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to introduce a screening programme for chlamydia infection. [42199]

Ms Jowell: In line with expert advice we have received we have decided to set up pilot studies to evaluate the use of opportunistic screening for chlamydial infection. Portsmouth and Wirral have been identified as possible pilot sites and work is in hand to establish the detailed arrangements. These will start later this year and this experience will be evaluated to shape the course of future action.

DEFENCE

Sierra Leone

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what tactical and operational advice was given by Sandline officers from HMS Cornwall to Sandline staff. [42141]

Mr. George Robertson: There were no Sandline officers based on HMS Cornwall, and no tactical or operational advice was given by HMS Cornwall to Sandline personnel.

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish all dispatches from HMS Cornwall while on station off West Africa in the last year. [42408]

Mr. George Robertson: A large number of communications were sent from HMS Cornwall covering a very wide range of subjects including operational, administrative and personnel matters. I am not, therefore, prepared to release this material and am withholding it under exemptions 1, 2 and 12 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information. Any relevant material will, of course, however, be made available to the independent investigation by Sir Thomas Legg KCB QC.

Depleted Uranium

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what research his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated regarding the use and threat of depleted uranium. [43054]

Mr. Spellar: A detailed review of the environmental impact of depleted uranium on the Kirkcudbright and Eskmeals ranges was undertaken by an independent environmental consultant (W. S. Atkins) in 1995. This review concluded that the radiation doses and associated risks from exposure to both the public and the environment were extremely low.

Additionally, a review being conducted within MOD of current developments and trends in munitions may have future clinical implications for the treatment of injured servicemen or women. The medical issues arising from the use of depleted uranium based ammunition against our own forces form part of the review. MOD is not conducting any experimental work on the short or long term effects of depleted uranium on humans, animals or the environment.

Studies are also being carried out by the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency to establish the rate of corrosion of depleted uranium in the marine environment.

Research and development work has been carried out on two tank munitions programmes which use depleted uranium, CHARM 1 and CHARM 3. These anti-tank rounds were developed under commercial contracts at the following locations: Royal Ordance facilities at Birtley and Featherstone, AWE Aldermaston; the former AWE Cardiff, and MOD ranges at Eskmeals and Kirkcudbright.

I am withholding information on any other MOD research programmes involving depleted uranium under exemption 1 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

Helicopter Accident, Mull of Kintyre

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the new evidence he received on 19 May about the crash of Chinook helicopter ZD576 on the Mull of Kintyre; and if he will make a statement. [43177]

Dr. Reid: The information provided is currently being analysed and I will write to the hon. Member when the work is completed. A copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

MINISTER WITHOUT PORTFOLIO

Millennium Dome

Mr. Brady: To ask the Minister without Portfolio when he expects to announce the cost of admission to the Millennium Dome. [43592]

Mr. Mandelson [holding answer 1 June 1998]: The New Millennium Experience Company (NMEC) will announce the cost of admission to the Dome in due course, taking into account the needs of the travel trade and the Company's aim to put tickets on sale to the public in the summer of 1999.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Consultants

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is her estimate of the expenditure of her (a) Department, (b) agencies and (c) non-departmental public bodies on external consultants in (i) 1995–96, (ii) 1996–97, (iii) 1997–98 to date and (iv) 1997–98 full year; and if she will also estimate the cost savings resulting from the employment of such consultants for each of the above years. [26605]

Mr. Paul Murphy [holding answer 5 February 1998]: The information for the Northern Ireland Office and the Northern Ireland Departments is as follows:

£000

	Expenditure
Year	(a)	(b)	(c)[1]
1995–96	10,284	3,202	1,221
1996–97	7,355	3,291	1,228
1997–98	5,979	4,353	1,235

[1] Information on NDPBs from the Department of Education is not readily available and could be provided only at a disproportionate cost.

As consultants are, in many instances, engaged to contribute particular skills to an element of a much larger process, or where the necessary expertise is not available in-house, it is not possible to quantify savings resulting from the employment of such consultants, but in each instance consultants were engaged on the basis of best value for money.

Public Bodies

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will publish (a) the number of places on each of her Department's non-departmental public bodies, (b) the number of places that are currently unfilled on each non-departmental public body, (c) the total number of members that have resigned since 1 May 1997, (d) the total number that have retired since 1 May 1997, (e) the total number that have not had their contracts renewed since 1 May 1997, (f) the total number that have remained in place since 1 May 1997 and (g) the total number that have been appointed since 1 May 1997. [35282]

Mr. Paul Murphy [holding answer 19 March 1998]: The information requested has been placed in the Library of the House.

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what is the average salary of (a) male and (b) female members of boards of non-departmental public bodies responsible to her Department; [42808]

(2) what is the average attendance fee of (a) male and (b) female members of boards of non-departmental public bodies responsible to her Department. [42809]

Mr. Paul Murphy: The majority of board members of non-departmental public bodies give their time and services voluntarily and receive no payment other than normal travel and subsistence expenses. Where members do receive remuneration, this can vary between an annual salary, an honorarium or an attendance fee (which itself can be a daily rate or a half-daily rate, or calculated on a per meeting or per case basis). Individuals' remuneration therefore is not directly comparable. Full details of all payments to board members of non-departmental bodies, by gender, are given in the Cabinet Office publication "Public Bodies". Copies of "Public Bodies 1997" are available in the Libraries of the House.

Public Appointments

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when her Department's action plan for increasing the number of women holding public appointments will be published; and if she will place a copy in the Library. [42810]

Mr. Paul Murphy: Northern Ireland's action plan will be published shortly. Copies will be placed in the Libraries of the House.

Sites of Special Scientific Interest

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many sites of special scientific interest there were in Northern Ireland on 1 March; and what was their total area in hectares. [42440]

Mr. Paul Murphy: In Northern Ireland, these sites are known as areas of special scientific interest. On 1 March 1998, there were 139 of them, covering 79,529 hectares.

Ethnic Communities

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps she will take to ensure that the proposed new Equality Commission, addresses the concerns of the (a) South Asian and (b) Chinese communities in Northern Ireland. [42350]

Mr. Worthington: The White Paper 'Partnership for Equality' invited comments by 12 June on a proposal for the establishment of a new Equality Commission to take over the functions now exercised by the Fair Employment Commission for Northern Ireland, the Equal Opportunities Commission for Northern Ireland, the Commission for Racial Equality for Northern Ireland and the Disability Council for Northern Ireland. The existing obligations of the Commission for Racial Equality for Northern Ireland and the other equality bodies to combat discrimination and promote equality of opportunity within their respective fields would be fully maintained in the new Commission. Furthermore, the White Paper has proposed that an Equality Commission would have a significant new role in assisting the public sector to fulfil a statutory obligation to provide equality of opportunity and good relations between people of different racial groups.

Agriculture

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the cost to her Department of administering grants to agriculture in the last year; and how many (a) full-time and (b) part-time staff were involved. [42436]

Mr. Paul Murphy: The information could be provided in the form requested only at disproportionate cost. However, information about the Department's activities, including details of the running costs associated with each of its principal spending programmes for the year ending March 1998, is contained within the 1998 Northern Ireland Expenditure Plans and Priorities (Cm 3916), copies of which have been placed in the Library of the House.

Voluntary Sports Clubs

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the cost in 1997–98 of mandatory rate relief for voluntary sports clubs in Northern Ireland. [42910]

Mr. Paul Murphy: The amount of the rate relief granted in 1997–98 in respect of premises occupied by clubs, societies or other organisation engaged in certain specified recreations is estimated to have been a little over £1.3 million.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Child Support Agency

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many full-time equivalent vacancies the Child Support Agency had on 14 May; [42766]

(2) how many staff are currently employed on casual contracts by the Child Support Agency; [42767]

(3) how many employees resigned from working for the Child Support Agency in (a) 1997, (b) 1996, (c) 1995 and (d) 1994; and how many employees were appointed by the Child Support Agency in each of those years. [42765]

Mr. Keith Bradley: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mrs. Faith Boardman. She will write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Mrs. Faith Boardman to Dr. Brian Iddon, dated 1 June 1998:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Questions to the Secretary of State for Social Security about staffing in the Child Support Agency.

I cannot provide precisely the information that you have requested, but have provided as much as possible from the most recent information available.

The number of whole time equivalent vacancies that the Agency had at 1 April 1998 (the difference between staff in post and planned staff numbers) was 183.

At the end of April 1998, the Child Support Agency employed 320 staff on casual appointments.

Information on resignations and appointments are shown in the attached table.

I hope this is helpful.

Child Support Agency—number of employees resigning and the number of new appointments

Year	Resignations[1]	Appointments[1]
1994–95	606	not available
1995–96	449	not available
1996–97	500	1,557
1997–98	764	1,427

[1] Figures show available information for permanent and fixed term staff

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many absent parents have child support maintenance arrears, excluding Category A interim maintenance assessments of (a) £1 to £999, (b) £1,000 to £1,999, (c) £2,000 to £2,999, (d) £3,000 to £3,999, (e) £4,000 to £4,999, (f) £5,000 to £5,999, (g) £6,000 to £6,999, (h) £7,000 to £7,999, (i) £8,000 to £8,999, (j) £9,000 to £9,999, (k) £10,000 to £10,999, (l) £11,000 to £11,999, (m) £12,000 to £12,999, (n) £13,000 to £13,999, (o) £14,000 to £14,999, (p) £15,000 to £15,999, (q) £16,000 to £16,999, (r) £17,000 to £17,999, (s) £18,000 to £18,999, (t) £19,000 to £19,999 and (u) £20,000 or more; and what is the total amount of arrears outstanding. [43577]

Mr. Keith Bradley: All children are entitled to the financial and emotional support of both their parents wherever they live. It is not right that so many non-resident parents should seek to avoid paying the maintenance which their children are due. An extra £15 million is being invested in the Child Support Agency this year and next, specifically aimed at increasing the amounts of maintenance which are paid.

The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mrs. Faith Boardman. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Faith Boardman to Mr. Steve Webb, dated 1 June 1998:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about child support maintenance arrears.

The numbers of child support maintenance accounts with arrears in the band-widths you have requested are shown in the attached table.

The total amount of child support maintenance outstanding including regular maintenance and arrears but excluding Category A interim maintenance assessment arrears at 20 May 1998 was £726,407,399 relating to a total of 301,507 cases.

Over the last year the Agency has moved away from imposing punitive Category A interim maintenance assessments and has concentrated on completing full maintenance assessments. This has led to an increase in the total full maintenance assessment debt, but this puts the Agency in a better, more realistic position to increase the flow of maintenance to parents with care. This is demonstrated by the increase in the amount of maintenance collected and arranged during 1997–98 to approximately £547 million compared with approximately £400 million during 1996–97.

To further increase the flow of maintenance and to help non-resident parents pay the arrears that they owe, wherever possible the Agency makes every effort to re-schedule debts; re-scheduled debts are those where the Agency has negotiated a closely monitored agreement with the non-resident parent to pay arrears by instalments. The amount of debt re-scheduled (included in the above) at 20 May 1998 was £340,207,244. This amount related to 204,098 cases and equates to 47% of the debt and 68% of the cases.

I hope this is helpful.

Child Support Agency full maintenance debt—£1 or greater at 20 May 1998

Bands (£)	Number of cases
1 to 999	155,790
1,000 to 1,999	42,814
2,000 to 2,999	23,592
3,000 to 3,999	15,245
4,000 to 4,999	10,461
5,000 to 5,999	7,432
6,000 to 6,999	5,673
7,000 to 7,999	4,252
8,000 to 8,999	3,341
9,000 to 9,999	2,521
10,000 to 10,999	1,912
11,000 to 11,999	1,639
12,000 to 12,999	1,205
13,000 to 13,999	888
14,000 to 14,999	724
15,000 to 15,999	531
16,000 to 16,999	403
17,000 to 17,999	305
18,000 to 18,999	206
19,000 to 19,999	158
20,000 or more	781

Flood Victims (Northampton)

Ms Keeble: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what grants or loans are available to pensioners in Northampton who were victims of the recent floods; [42385]

(2) what is the (i) average and (ii) range of time it has taken to process (a) community care grants, (b) budgeting loans and (c) crisis loans from date of receipt of application by the Benefits Agency to receipt of funds by the applicant; [42383]

(3) how many flood victims in Northampton have received (a) community care grants, (b) budgeting loans and (c) crisis loans; and what is the average value of each category of grant or loan. [42382]

Mr. Denham: The administration of the Social Fund is a matter for Peter Mathison, Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Ms Sally Keeble, dated 1 June 1998:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent parliamentary questions about the Social Fund (SF) loans and grants available to the victims of the recent floods in Northampton.

Over the Easter weekend, the Benefits Agency (BA)'s Northampton office was open to personal callers and for telephone enquiries. The Business Manager appeared on BBC Radio Northampton to publicise the additional opening hours and to give advice to the public. Social Services and the Police were also advised of the additional opening. All applications for immediate help on Sunday 12 and Monday 13 April were awarded. On Tuesday 14 April a flood helpline was made available to the public, giving them direct access to staff able to answer their enquiries. This telephone number was advertised in the local press and on local radio. District staff also attended public meetings, held on 14, 15 and 16 April, to offer advice and assistance.

In common with all client groups, pensioners who were affected by the floods in Northampton were eligible to apply to the SF for Community Care Grants (CCGs) if they were receiving Income Support (IS) or income-based Jobseeker's Allowance (JSA(IB)), Budgeting Loans (BLs) if they have been in receipt of IS or JSA (IB) for 26 weeks or more and Crisis Loans (CLs) which might be payable irrespective of whether the applicant was in receipt of benefit.

The BA measures the time taken to process applications to the SF by a series of targets which monitor the time from the date of receipt of the application to the date of the decision, not the date the applicant receives the funds. Information on the time taken to process CCGs, BLs and CLs is contained in the enclosed Table 1.

Information relating to the range of time taken to process CCGs, BLs and CLs is not available and could only be provided at disproportionate cost. Information relating to the number and average value of grants and loans received by flood victims in Northampton is not available in the format requested. The BA collates statistics by BA Districts. These Districts do not correspond to constituency boundaries or specific geographical areas.

The BA does not routinely collate the reasons for SF applications. However, because of the nature of this emergency, the Northamptonshire District has maintained certain details of applications received from flood victims. Such information as is available is contained in Table 2 attached.

I hope that this is helpful.

National Social Fund (SF) clearance targets 1997/98 and Benefits Agency's (BA's) achievement
Table 1

	Clearance targets	BA achievements in relation to the targets	BA's average clearance time
Community Care Grants (CCGs)	65% cleared in 7 days 95% cleared in 20 days	86% cleared in 7 days 99% cleared in 20 days	5 working days
Budgeting Loans (BLs)	65% cleared in 6 days 95% cleared in 20 days	82% cleared in 6 days 99% cleared in 20 days	5 working days
Crisis Loans (CLs)	On the day the need arises[1]	98%	1 working day

[1] We aim to clear applications that are specifically for CLs on the day the application is received. All applications to the SF are considered for CCGs and BLs initially. At the point when the SF Officer knows that such an award is inappropriate a CL is considered. Whilst the majority of CL applications are made in person, a proportion of postal applications are received. Therefore, for the purpose of measuring performance, the target is considered to have been met if 95% of CL applications are considered on the day on which they were received

Note:

The information has been provided by the BA's Benefit Support SF Accounting Team, is provisional and maybe subject to change

Social Fund applications from victims of the floods during April 1998 administered by the Benefits Agency's (BA's) Northamptonshire District[1]
Table 2

	Total number of applications	Number of successful applications	Average value of award (£)
Community Care Grants	8	4	573.50
Budgeting Loans	41	36	567.37
Crisis Loans	25	25	46.39

[1] BA's Northamptonshire District includes Corby, Daventry and Kettering Caller Offices, Northampton and Wellingborough. The information is provisional and may be subject to change

Benefits Advisers

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many Benefits Agency offices or their equivalent had one or more benefits advisers on the premises (a) in 1979 and (b) currently. [43388]

Mr. Keith Bradley: Although the Benefits Agency does not formally employ "benefits advisers", I can confirm that staff in every office of the Agency are able to provide advice about benefit entitlements and related matters, or to obtain such advice. Similarly, in 1979, every local benefits office in the Department of Health and Social Security employed staff who were able to provide or obtain such advice.

Benefit Recipients

Mr. Duncan Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people of working age without disabilities received benefit payments and at what total cost in (i) 1980, (ii) 1990 and (iii) the latest date for which figures are available. [43949]

Mr. Denham: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is set out in the table.

Numbers of benefit recipients

000

Benefit	1980[1]	1990[2]	For date see note[3]
Maternity Allowance[4]	119	13	12
Widow's Benefit	452	312	248
Family Credit	n/a	324	766
Housing Benefit[5,6,7]	n/a	1,585	2,201
Council Tax Benefit/Community charge benefit[5,6,7]	n/a	[8]2,360	[9]2,169
Supplementary Benefit or Income Support[5]	1,212	2,347	1,605
Jobseeker's Allowance Income-based[5]	n/a	n/a	1,173
Jobseeker's Allowance Contribution-based only[5]	n/a	n/a	176

[1] Maternity Allowance and Income Support are at May. Widow's Benefit is at November 1979.
[2] Maternity Allowance as at March, Widow's Benefit as at September, Family Credit, Income Support, Housing Benefit and Council Tax Benefit as at May.
[3] Maternity Allowance as at May 1997, Widow's Benefit as at September 1997, Family Credit as at November 1997, Housing Benefit and Council Tax Benefit as at May 1996, Income Support and Jobseeker's Allowance figures are at August 1997.
[4] Maternity Allowance was abolished from April 1987. Statutory Maternity Pay was introduced from 6 April 1987.
[5] Information refers to benefit units or claimants where there is no disability premium in payment.
[6] Information does not include second adult rebate cases.
[7] Community Charge Benefit at May 1990.
[8] Council Tax Benefit at May 1996.
[9] These figures do not take into account benefit overlap.
[10] A detailed breakdown of each benefit by working age could be provided for some benefits and years but this would be at a disproportionate cost.
[11] Figures rounded to the nearest thousand.

Source:
1. Maternity Allowance figures for 1980 and 1990 are from a 1 per cent. sample of claimants and for May 1997 from a 5 per cent. sample.
2. Widow's Benefit is from a 10 per cent. sample in 1980, 1990 and a 5 per cent. sample in September 1997.
3. Family Credit for 1990 is a 1 per cent. sample and for 1997 a 5 per cent. sample.
4. Income Support Statistics Quarterly Inquiry, August 1997.
5. Jobseeker's Allowance Statistics Quarterly Inquiry, August 1997.
6. Annual Statistical Inquiry, 1980 and 1990.
7. Housing Benefit Management Information System, annual 1 per cent. sample inquiry with and without Income Support.

Information on costs

£ million

	Benefit expenditure
1980–81[1]	3,944
1990–91[1]	12,710
1996–97[2]	21,677

[1] Excludes expenditure on Sickness Benefit, Invalidity Benefit, Non-contributory Invalidity Pension (in 1980–81), Severe Disablement Benefit (in 1990–91), Industrial Disablement Benefit and Housing Benefit and Income Support where a Disability Premium is paid.
[2] Excludes expenditure on Incapacity Benefit, Severe Disablement Benefit, Industrial Disablement Benefit, Disability Living Allowance and Housing Benefit and Income Support where a Disability Premium is paid.

Notes:
1. The figures do not include all expenditure to people of working age and also includes some expenditure for people not of working age.
2. The figures in the table are consistent with Table 4 of the Departmental Report 1998 (Cm 3913) which provides a general guide to benefit expenditure of people of working age, people over working age and people under working age.

Mr. Duncan Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people of working age received disability benefit payments and at what cost in (a) 1980, (b) 1990 and (c) the latest date for which figures are available. [43950]

Mr. Denham: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is set out in the tables.

Numbers of benefit recipients[1]

000

Benefit	1980[2]	1990[3]	1997–98[4]
Industrial Injuries Disablement Benefit	127	116	171
Attendance Allowance	82	192	n/a
Mobility Allowance	144	388	n/a
Disability Living Allowance	n/a	n/a	1,163
Disability Working Allowance	n/a	n/a	14
Sickness Benefit/Invalidity Benefit or Incapacity Benefit	945	1,106	1,560

Numbers of benefit recipients[1]

000

Benefit	1980[2]	1990[3]	1997–98[4]
Non-Contributory Invalidity Pension (NCIP) and Housewives' NCIP or Severe Disablement Allowance	158	247	329
War Disablement Pension	163	56	71
Supplementary Benefit or Income Support with Disability Premiums[5]	[5]199	[5]330	841
Income-Based Jobseeker's Allowance with Disability Premiums[5]	n/a	n/a	17
Housing Benefit with Disability Premiums[5, 6]	n/a	289	665
Council Tax Benefit with Disability Premiums[5, 6]	n/a	440	727

Notes:

[1] These figures do not take into account any benefit overlap

[2] Attendance Allowance as at March, Sickness Benefit, Invalidity Benefit, Incapacity Benefit, NCIP, Housewives' NCIP and Severe Disablement Allowance as at May, Industrial Injuries Disablement Benefit as at September, and Mobility Allowance and War Disablement Pension as at December. Supplementary Benefit figures are from the Annual Statistical Inquiry 1980

[3] Industrial Injuries Disablement Benefit, Attendance Allowance, Sickness Benefit, Invalidity Benefit, Incapacity Benefit, NCIP, Housewives' NCIP and Severe Disablement Allowance as at March, and Mobility Allowance and War Disablement Pension as at December. Income Support figures are from the Annual Statistical Inquiry 1990, and Housing Benefit figures as at May 1990

[4] Disability Living Allowance as at February 1997, Industrial Injuries Disablement Benefit as at April 1997, Sickness Benefit, Invalidity Benefit, NCIP, Housewives' NCIP and Severe Disablement Allowance as at May 1997, War Disablement Pension as at February 1998, Income Support and Jobseeker's Allowance figures as at August 1997 and Disability Working Allowance figure as at October 1997, Housing Benefit and Council Tax figures as at May 1996

[5] The 1980 figures show number of claimants receiving Supplementary Benefit on grounds of incapacity. The 1990 figures show number of claimants receiving Income Support (i) who also receive NI sickness, injury, disablement or widows industrial injury benefit or invalidity pension or allowance and (ii) who are sick or disabled, under pension age and incapable of work, and not in receipt of NI benefit

[6] Claims for Housing Benefit, Council Tax Benefit, Income Support and Jobseeker's Allowance may be in respect of a single person or a couple.

[7] There is an overlap between Housing Benefit and Council Tax Benefit as a high percentage of claimants receive both Housing Benefit and Council Tax Benefit. Figures do not include second adult rebate cases

[8] Figures rounded to the nearest thousand.

Sources:

1. Industrial Injuries Disablement Benefit is based on a 10 per cent. sample. Attendance Allowance, Mobility Allowance, and War Disablement Pension on a 100 per cent. count. Sickness Benefit/Invalidity Benefit and Severe Disablement Allowance for 1980 and 1990 are taken from a 1 per cent. sample. The Incapacity Benefit and Severe Disablement Allowance figures for 1997, the War Disablement Pension figures for 1998 and the Disability Living Allowance figure are based on a 5 per cent. sample

2. Income Support Statistics Quarterly Inquiry, August 1997 (5 per cent. sample)

3. Jobseeker's Allowance Statistics Quarterly Inquiry, August 1997 (5 per cent. sample)

4. Disability Working Allowance Statistics Quarterly Inquiry, October 1997 (100 per cent. count of claims)

5. Income Support Annual Statistical Inquiry, 1980 and 1990 (1 per cent. sample)

6. Housing Benefit Management Information System, annual 1 per cent. sample) inquiry with and without Income Support, taken at the end of May 1990 and May 1996.

Expenditure on disability benefits

Year	£ million
1980–1981	2,740
1990–1991	7,388
1996–1997	18,906

Notes:

1. Total of expenditure on Sickness Benefit, Invalidity Benefit, Non-Contributory Invalidity Pension, Industrial Disablement Benefit and Housing Benefit and Income Support where a Disability Premium is paid. Severe Disablement Benefit replaced Non-Contributory Invalidity Pension in 1984

2. Sickness Benefit and Invalidity Benefit were replaced by a single Incapacity Benefit in April 1995. Disability Living Allowance and Disability Working Allowance introduced in 1992

3. The figures do not include all expenditure to people of working age—for example, War Pensions paid to disabled people. Table 4 of the Departmental Report attributes expenditure for a particular benefit to the group where the majority of expenditure arises—in the case of War Pensions this applies to people over working age. The figures also include some expenditure for people not of working age. The figures for Disability Living Allowance include payments made in respect of children under age 16 and to people over age 60

4. The figures in this table are consistent with Table 4 of the Departmental Report 1998 (Cm 3913) which provides a general guide to benefit expenditure of people of working age, people over working age and people under working age

5. A detailed breakdown of each benefit by working age could be provided for some benefits and years but this would be at disproportionate cost.

Departmental Reviews

Mr. Duncan Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many reviews have been initiated by his Department since 1 May 1997; how many of these have reported; and what the cost of these reviews has been to date. [44002]

Mr. Denham: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for West Chelmsford (Mr. Burns) on 12 May 1998, Official Report, columns 101–02.

TREASURY

Environmental Appraisals

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many environmental appraisals were produced by the European Commission to accompany proposals presented to ECOFIN at its meeting on 16 February. [42664]

Dawn Primarolo: No formal Commission proposals were put to ECOFIN on 16 February.

European Structural Funds

Mr. Gareth Thomas: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the scope and nature of his responsibilities in relation to the review of European structural funds in respect of Wales, indicating the timetable for action by his Department. [42469]

Mrs. Liddell: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given to him on 21 May 1998, Official Report, columns 543–44, by my hon. Friend the Minister for Small Firms, Trade and Industry. The Treasury has an interest in the proposals for reform of the Structural and Cohesion Funds in view of the implications for the EC Budget and the UK contribution to it.

Economic and Monetary Union

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assistance the Government are offering to the financial services sector in respect of software problems originating from the formation of EMU. [43140]

Mrs. Liddell: This is primarily a matter for the industry. However, the Euro Preparations Unit in HM Treasury provides general information and advice on business preparations for the introduction of the euro on 1 January 1999 and will shortly be publishing a factsheet on the IT aspects of this.

Investment Ombudsman

Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received on the appointment of an Investment Ombudsman to consider complaints relating to the handling of investments by banks and other financial institutions. [43311]

Mrs. Liddell: Complaints relating to banks and other financial institutions authorised to do investment business under the Financial Services Act 1986 are currently dealt with by the PIA Ombudsman Bureau, the SFA Complaints Bureau and Arbitration Service, the Investment Ombudsman (for firms supervised by IMRO) and the FSA Direct Regulation Unit and Independent Investigator. The Government have announced plans to introduce a single Financial Services Ombudsman scheme as part of the planned legislation to reform the financial services regulatory structure. A number of representations have been received on these proposals, including in response to the Financial Services Authority's consultation on this issue.

Motorists (Petrol)

Ms Rosie Winterton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the average annual excise duty paid by a motorist using (a) leaded and (b) unleaded petrol in (i) 1997–98 and (ii) 1998–99. [43189]

Dawn Primarolo: The average annual excise duty paid by a motorist is estimated to be:

£

	1997–98	1998–99
(a) Leaded petrol	715	805
(b) Unleaded petrol	635	720

These figures do not include vehicle excise duty which is currently £150 per car. The estimate is based on Department of Transport data for total car mileage, number of cars and fuel consumption. It also assumes that there will be no further rise in road fuel excise duty before the end of the financial year.

Duty Free

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his policy towards recent actions by the Government of the Republic of Ireland in respect of the abolition of duty free sales. [43163]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 1 June 1998]: The Government have always said they would not oppose a Commission study into the impact of the abolition of intra-EU duty free sales should there be a consensus amongst member states in favour of such a study. This matter was discussed at the ECOFIN Council meeting on 19 May 1998 but there was no consensus in favour of such a study.

Income Tax

Mr. Lilley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will estimate the total number of individuals paying any part of their income tax at the lower rate of income tax in (a) 1996–97, (b) 1997–98 and (c) 1998–99; [43985]

(2) if he will estimate the total number of individuals paying any part of their income tax at the higher rate of income tax in (a) 1996–97, (b) 1997–98 and (c) 1998–99; [43983]

(3) if he will estimate the total number of income tax payers in (a) 1996–97, (b) 1997–98 and (c) 1998–99; [43981]

(4) if he will estimate the total number of individuals paying any part of their income tax at the basic rate of income tax in (a) 1996–97, (b) 1997–98 and (c) 1998–99. [43982]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 1 June 1998]: The latest estimates are given in the table. They are based on the 1995–96 Survey of Personal Incomes and are provisional.

Number of taxpayers (thousands) paying some income tax at:

	Lower rate	Basic rate	Higher rate
1996–97	25,900	18,600	2,100
1997–98	26,100	18,700	2,300
1998–99	26,200	18,700	2,300

All taxpayers pay at least some of their income tax at the lower rate of tax.

Capital Gains Tax

Mr. Loughton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the number of individuals affected by the proposed abolition of retirement relief. [43618]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 1 June 1998]: It is estimated that there are about 10,000 people with CGT retirement relief each year.

Mr. Loughton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will place in the Library the results of the consultation exercise on changes to capital gains tax before consideration of the relevant clauses in the committee stage of the Finance (No.2) Bill. [43295]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 1 June 1998]: The results of the consultation exercise on capital gains tax were set out as an Annexe to the Budget day Press Release on capital gains tax reform (press release Inland Revenue 16). This press release is available in the House of Commons Library.

Mr. Loughton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the estimated saving to the Treasury from the proposed abolition of bed and breakfasting in respect of Capital Gains Tax; and how many savers he estimates currently take advantage of this facility. [43613]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 1 June 1998]: The Capital Gains Tax yield from the provisions to counter bed and breakfasting of shares may be of the order of £50 million in the long term, but the short term yield is likely to be low and to grow slowly. The number of people undertaking such transactions is highly uncertain but could be of the order of 100,000.

Small Businesses

Mr. Page: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the regulations that have been removed or amended to help small businesses since 1 May 1997. [42787]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 1 June 1998]: The Government have concentrated on a number of measures to help small businesses although no specific regulations have been removed or amended, a number of measures such as cuts in the small companies' rate of corporation tax and enhanced first year capital allowances. Future changes, such as the transfer of the Contributions Agency to the Inland Revenue from April next year, will also help to ease the burden on smaller businesses. No specific regulations have been removed or amended.

Inflation

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what measures he will take to ensure that the delivery of the Government's inflation target is subject to the Government's objectives for employment and growth. [43970]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 1 June 1998]: The Government have put in place monetary and fiscal frameworks designed to achieve economic stability. The Government set, and take responsibility for, the objectives of monetary policy through the inflation target. It is the job of the Bank of England's Monetary Policy Committee to set interest rates to achieve the Government's inflation target.

SCOTLAND

Prisoners (Television)

Mr. Roy: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he proposes to allow prisoners to have televisions in their cells; and if he will make a statement. [44219]

Mr. McLeish: Except in a very limited number of cases for educational purposes, prisoners in Scotland have not been allowed to have televisions in their cells.

However, having taken into account the support for wider availability of in-cell television evinced by a number of studies—and most recently by the review by the Social Work Services and Prisons Inspectorates of community disposals and the use of custody for women offenders in Scotland—I have decided that in-cell television should be made available on a limited pilot basis as a suicide prevention measure at Cornton Vale women's prison.

The first sets will become available this Autumn. Eligible prisoners will pay a charge of around £1.00 per week to cover the cost of the sets, out of a weekly wage of around £6.00 per week, from which prisoners have to buy all of the items they are allowed but which are not provided by the prison authorities, including 'phone cards, additional toiletries, tobacco and sweets. They will have access to terrestrial channels only, during "lock-up" hours.

Our expectation is that in-cell television will assist greatly in the normalisation of the prison environment at Cornton Vale, and reduce instances of self-harm among the more damaged members of its population. We shall monitor its use in the pilot study to ensure that it has no detrimental effect on prisoners' participation in the regime of the establishment.

Consideration is also being given as to when this provision might be extended as an opportunity for a relatively small number of more responsible prisoners at the top end of the prison regime in Scotland, who would earn the privilege of access to in-cell TV through responsible behaviour. Out of a prison population of more than 6,000, such an extension would result in some 500 prisoners qualifying over time.

Road Traffic Convictions

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many convictions there have been under section 1 of the Road Traffic Act 1988 for each year of its operation; if he will list the sentence imposed in each case; and if he will indicate those offences which relate to incidents involving fatalities. [43605]

Mr. McLeish: The available information is set out in the table. Section 1 of the Road Traffic Act 1988 refers to the offence of causing death by dangerous or reckless driving. Therefore a fatality was involved in each of the cases in the table.

Persons with a charge proved where the main offence is an offence under section 1 of the Road Traffic Act 1988, Scotland 1988–96

Year of disposal	Number of persons given a custodial sentence	Number of persons given a community service order	Number of persons fined	Number of persons given probation	Number of persons admonished	Total
1988[1]	11	3	8	—	—	22
1989[1]	14	5	4	—	—	23
1990[2]	14	8	1	—	—	23
1991	11	9	8	—	—	28
1992	14	2	4	—	—	20
1993	17	3	4	—	1	25
1994	8	4	3	1	—	16
1995	12	4	2	2	—	20
1996	13	4	1	1	—	19

[1] Persons with a charge proved under section 1(1) of the Road Traffic Act 1972. Section 1(1) of the Road Traffic Act 1972 was replaced by section 1 of the Road Traffic Act 1988 (as later amended by the Road Traffic Act 1991)
[2] Includes one person with a charge proved in 1990 who was proceeded against under section 1(1) of the Road Traffic Act 1972

NHS Budget

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was his Department's budget for the NHS (i) in cash terms, (ii) in real terms in 1998–99 prices and (iii) as a percentage of Scottish gross domestic product in each year since 1978–79; and how much was spent per head of population on the NHS in Scotland in (a) cash terms and (b) real terms, in 1998–99 prices in each of these years. [43390]

Mr. Galbraith: The information requested is set out in the table.

Year	Cash expenditure[1] £ million	Expenditure at 1998–99 prices[1] £ million	Percentage of Scottish GDP[2]	Per capita expenditure (cash)[2] £	Per capita expenditure (real)[2] £
1978–79 outturn	870	2,833	6.8	167	543
1979–80 outturn	1,036	2,890	7.1	199	555
1980–81 outturn	1,307	3,082	7.8	252	593
1981–82 outturn	1,492	3,208	8.1	288	619
1982–83 outturn	1,614	3,239	8.1	312	627
1983–84 outturn	1,720	3,299	7.9	334	640
1984–85 outturn	1,845	3,370	8.1	359	655
1985–86 outturn	1,954	3,383	7.7	380	659
1986–87 outturn	2,071	3,481	7.6	404	679
1987–88 outturn	2,248	3,587	7.5	440	702
1988–89 outturn	2,501	3,741	7.6	491	734
1989–90 outturn	2,721	3,804	7.5	534	746
1990–91 outturn	2,972	3,847	7.4	582	754
1991–92 outturn	3,343	4,067	7.9	655	796
1992–93 outturn	3,668	4,284	8.2	718	838
1993–94 outturn	3,777	4,285	8.1	738	837
1994–95 outturn	3,948	4,414	7.9	769	860
1995–96 outturn	4,092	4,452	7.8	797	867
1996–97 outturn	4,240	4,480	7.8	827	874
1997–98 estimated outturn	4,394	4,521	n/a	858	883
1998–99 plans	4,626	4,626	n/a	898	898

[1] Expenditure covers the period 1 April to 31 March
[2] Gross Domestic Product for Scotland and population figures are available only for the calendar year i.e. 1 January to 31 December
[1] Provisional
n/a = not applicable

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Periodicals

Mr. Cran: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many magazine articles relating to agriculture he has written in the last four months; and if he will list them. [43001]

Dr. John Cunningham [holding answer 21 May 1998]: In the past four months, I have contributed by-lined articles to: the Parliamentary Review, on reform of the Common Agricultural Policy of the EU; the Parliamentary Monitor, on the Government's proposals to establish a Food Standards Agency; the Newcastle Journal, on the Informal Council of EU Agriculture Ministers held in the North East on 10–12 May 1998.

Correspondence

Mr. Cran: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many letters sent to him before 31 January from hon. Members have not been answered to date; and if he will make a statement. [43006]

Dr. John Cunningham [holding answer 21 May 1998]: The Department has 34 overdue letters from hon. Members, prior to 31 January, awaiting a substantive reply. These letters raise particularly complex issues requiring detailed inquiries before replying. All overdue letters are sent holding replies and interim replies where possible.

Mr. Cran: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the most common factor underlying delays in his responses to letters from hon. Members of more than four months. [43007]

Dr. John Cunningham [holding answer 21 May 1998]: While every effort is made to ensure that all letters are dealt with within the target set by the Department, there are occasions when replies may be delayed owing to factors not necessarily within the Department's control.

Mr. Cran: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is his target period for replying to letters from hon. Members; and what is the percentage of occasions when the target is met. [43003]

Dr. John Cunningham [holding answer 21 May 1998]: The Department aims to reply to letters from hon. Members and Peers within 15 working days. MAFF received over 8,500 such letters in the 12 month period ending April 1998 and 70 per cent. of these received a reply within this target.

Whaling

Mr. Lock: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the outcome of the recent meeting of the International Whaling Commission; and if he will make a statement. [44283]

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) if he will make a statement on the progress of the consultative forum on whaling in respect of making permanent the existing moratorium on commercial whaling; [43429]

(2) if he will make a statement on the Irish proposals on commercial whaling. [43430]

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the proposal of the Commissioner for Ireland to end the 12 year moratorium on commercial whaling; and what representations he has made on this subject. [43052]

Mr. Morley: The International Whaling Commission's 50th annual meeting was held in Oman from 16 to 20 May. The United Kingdom delegation was composed of officials from the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, assisted by officials from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions and by representatives of environmental organisations.

At this meeting our delegation emphasised that the UK remains strongly opposed to all whaling, other than some limited subsistence whaling by indigenous people. We made it clear that we would like to see all other forms of whaling, including so-called 'scientific' whaling, brought to an end and a permanent, comprehensive international ban on whaling introduced.

It is with these objectives in mind that we are participating in consideration of ideas put forward by Ireland at the IWC's last annual meeting in Monaco last October. These ideas are intended to provide the basis for a compromise solution acceptable both to those countries opposed to, and to those countries in favour of, whaling. There was only limited further discussion of the Irish proposals in Oman. The UK delegation made it clear once again that while we were prepared to discuss these proposals, and all other possible ways of improving the conservation of whales, we continued to have serious reservations about some aspects of them, in particular those concerning coastal whaling. We and a number of other countries also stressed that further progress on them was unlikely unless the two whaling countries, Norway and Japan, indicated a readiness to end pelagic, and in particular so-called 'scientific', whaling and to accept a ban on international trade in whalemeat: this they declined to do. Nevertheless, the Irish Commissioner, who is the current chairman of the IWC, said that the proposals would remain on the table and that he would continue to try to advance them.

Throughout the meeting the UK delegation stressed our strong support for the current moratorium on commercial whaling. We opposed a request by Japan for a quota of 50 minke whales, which I am pleased to say was again defeated, and we supported resolutions criticising Norway and Japan's continued whaling activities; although these do not conflict with the letter of the IWC's rules we and many others believe that they are contrary to their spirit and undermine the credibility of the IWC and of the moratorium.

In recent years the UK has been arguing that environmental pollution and climate change may pose significant long term threats to whales and other cetaceans, and urging the IWC to devote more effort towards assessing these threats. At this meeting two significant resolutions were adopted. The first confirms that environmental issues are central to the IWC and directs the IWC's scientific committee to continue its work on the development of long term research programmes on the effects of pollution and climate change on cetaceans. The second deals with the financing of these programmes: it records an agreement in principle to find the necessary funds, drawing if need be on the IWC's financial reserves, and to consider establishing a dedicated Environment Research Fund. I very much welcome the increased emphasis that the IWC is now placing on this important area.

The UK delegation again expressed our concern about the cruelty involved in killing whales. It was agreed that a workshop comprising scientific and veterinary experts would meet next year, immediately before the next annual meeting, to consider ways of improving the humaneness of whale killing methods. The UK will be playing a full role in the workshop.

Small cetaceans continue to be threatened by human activities in many parts of the world. We took the lead in putting forward a resolution which drew attention to the number of beluga whales killed in subsistence hunts in West Greenland and to doubts among scientists that the current level of exploitation may not be sustainable. The IWC Scientific Committee will be examining this issue at its meeting next year. We also drew attention to the numbers of Dall's porpoise killed in directed takes in Japan.

Other important issues were discussed at this meeting. We and a number of other delegations expressed concern at evidence presented to the IWC's Scientific Committee suggesting that illicit trade in whalemeat may be taking place, and a resolution was adopted reaffirming the need for close co-operation between the IWC and CITES on trade issues and calling on all IWC members to respect previous resolutions on illegal trade in whalemeat. There was a positive debate on whalewatching. The UK highlighted the continuing expansion of this popular tourist activity and underlined the importance of the IWC's role in preparing guidelines and overseeing development in this area. Finally, Japan's proposal to amend the IWC's rules of procedure to allow secret voting on policy issues was heavily defeated.

Overall, I believe that this was a successful meeting for the UK. We achieved the majority of our objectives: in particular the moratorium on commercial whaling has not been weakened and there was further recognition of the increasing importance to the IWC of environmental issues. I will now be working with the environmental organisations and Government departments represented on the Consultative Forum on Whaling to formulate our objectives for the IWC's next annual meeting, which will take place in Grenada in June 1999.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what quotas of minke whales were granted to Norway and Japan over the past five years. [43431]

Mr. Morley: None. Under the terms of the current International Whaling Commission moratorium, commercial catch limits have been set at zero. Norway's commercial whaling is carried out under objection to the moratorium and its quota is self-awarded. Japan issues special permits to take minke whales in both the Southern Ocean and the North Pacific as part of its scientific research programme.

Driftnets

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food for what reasons he is opposing an EU ban on driftnets. [43220]

Mr. Morley: The Government are actively seeking agreement to an EU ban on those drift nets which result in unacceptable by-catches of dolphins.

Set-aside

Mr. Lock: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the agronomic and environmental implications of set-aside under the arable area payment scheme; and if he will make a statement. [44284]

Mr. Morley: In 1995 MAFF commissioned a three year agronomic and environmental evaluation of set-aside in England from a consortium including the Institute of Terrestrial Ecology, the British Trust for Ornithology and ADAS and this has now been completed. The evaluation concluded that for most farmers the agronomic costs of set-aside are small, with if anything a yield benefit to crops following set-aside and few increases in pest, weed or disease problems.

Many farmers have observed positive environmental effects from set-aside and studies indicated that set-aside has benefited some species of farmland birds whose numbers have been in decline in recent years. Field studies showed that set-aside was an important habitat for these birds providing breeding sites and valuable food resources. The Government will consider how voluntary set-aside and the agri-environment schemes can be used to help to retain these benefits if the rate of compulsory set-aside is reduced as a result of EU Commission CAP reform proposals.

I am placing copies of the full report of the evaluation in the Library of the House.

EU Agriculture Council

Mr. Lock: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the outcome of the Agriculture Council held in Brussels on 25 and 26 May; and if he will make a statement. [44285]

Dr. John Cunningham: I chaired a meeting of the European Union Agriculture Council in Brussels on 25 and 26 May. My noble Friend Lord Donoughue, the Parliamentary Secretary responsible for the farming and food industry, represented the United Kingdom, and my noble Friend Lord Sewel, Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Scotland, was also present.

The principal business of the Council was to assess progress in negotiations on the Commission's proposals for CAP reform made in the framework of Agenda 2000. Those negotiations were launched at a special meeting of the Council which I chaired on 31 March 1998, and have continued at an intensive pace at expert level since then. In the Council, EU Ministers recognised the excellent start which had been made to this work, and discussed draft conclusions which I circulated as Presidency summarising the work to date, identifying the principal issues central to the on-going negotiation, and committing the Council to continuing its intensive work on the Agenda 2000 proposals from now on.

I am pleased to say that the Council was able to give unanimous approval to those conclusions, which will now be submitted to Foreign Ministers for inclusion in the report to Heads of Government meeting in Cardiff on 15–16 June. The Agriculture Council will then continue its discussions of Agenda 2000 at its July meeting.

The Council also debated the Commission's proposal on reform of the EU olive oil regime, and noted the principal questions remaining to be resolved on that proposal. I undertook to continue work on the proposal in the hope of finding a basis of agreement at the Council in June.

The Council had a presentation from the Commission of its proposals for a decision on an EU/Canada veterinary agreement. The Council also reached agreement by qualified majority on a regulation setting out detailed rules for genetically modified soya and maize intended for sale to the final consumer; Italy, Sweden and Denmark voted against.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Training and Enterprise Councils

Mr. Healey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when he expects to complete the review of the future role and funding of TECs; and what plans he has to publish the findings. [42673]

Dr. Howells: The review will lead to the publication of new Strategic Guidance to TECs in the Autumn. Any resulting changes to the way the Government fund and contract with TECs will also be reflected in TEC contracts for 1999–2000.

Regional Development Agencies

Mr. Healey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) from what source the development fund he plans for use by regional development agencies to analyse and tackle regional skills shortages in their area will be provided; [42674]

(2) how much he plans to allocate to the development fund for use by regional development agencies to analyse regional skills shortages and to design and implement solutions; [42675]

(3) when the development fund for use by regional development agencies to tackle skills shortages in their areas will be made available; and whether the shadow RDAs will be able to make use of it. [42676]

Dr. Howells: The Development Fund for Regional Development Agencies along with all Government funded programmes is currently being reviewed as part of the Comprehensive Spending Review. My right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer said in his Budget statement of 17 March 1998, Official Report, columns 1097–112, that an announcement about the Review would take place in the summer. The Development Fund for RDAs will be available from 1 April 1999.

Higher Education Students

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) what changes he plans in eligibility for access and hardship funds for higher education students in 1998–99; [42369]

(2) what is the planned increase in budget for access funds and hardship funds for higher education students in 1998–99. [42370]

Dr. Howells: From the beginning of the 1998–99 academic year the amount available for the higher education Access Funds will be doubled to £44 million in England and eligibility will be extended to part-time students.

In addition, a new £250 Hardship Loan will be available to students eligible for student loans who are in financial difficulties. This will cost £5 million in England and Wales in the current financial year.

Women Scientists

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) what percentage of PhDs in science subjects were awarded to women in each of the last five years; [42915]

(2) what percentage of (a) MScs and (b) BScs were awarded to women in each of the last five years. [42916]

Dr. Howells: The information covering the five years up to 1996–97, the latest year for which it is available, is given in the table:

Science[1] degrees awarded in UK higher education institutions 1992–93 to 1996–97[2] by level of degree: percentage awarded to women

Level	1992–93	1993–94	1994–95	1995–96	1996–97
Doctorate	26	27	28	31	31
Masters	30	31	32	34	35
First Degree	34	35	38	39	41

[1] Science subjects are: Medicine and Dentistry, Subjects Allied to Medicine, Biological Sciences, Veterinary Science, Agriculture and Related Subjects, Physical Sciences, Mathematical Sciences, Computer Science, Engineering and Technology, Architecture, Building and Planning. Combined degrees are not included

[2] Because of a change in data collection arrangements in 1994–95, the figures before and from that date may not be directly comparable

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many women currently hold professorships in the sciences. [42917]

Dr. Howells: In the 1995–96 academic year, the latest year for which figures are available, there were 280 professors in science subjects who were female, in higher education establishments in the UK. This figure covers those employed within the Professor grade in institutions. There may be others who carry the title of Professor but are employed in other grade structures and so are not included in this figure.

Tuition Fees

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment who is liable to pay the tuition fees if the relationship between the student and parent breaks down during the education tenure. [43035]

Dr. Howells: On admission to a higher education institution, a student is personally liable for the fees charged and liability will continue irrespective of the student's personal circumstances. Where the student holds a mandatory award from an LEA and is eligible for assistance with fees because he or she is from a lower-income family, the LEA will assess and make a contribution from public funds. We have asked higher education institutions to be sensitive in collecting the private contribution in the early months of the degree course having regard to individual circumstances as necessary.

Education Development Plans

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what guidelines his Department has issued to local education authorities on the content of education development plans. [43036]

Mr. Byers: On 18 February the Department for Education and Employment issued for consultation draft Guidance on Education Development Plans. The deadline for responses was 8 May and officials are currently analysing the responses received. Final guidance in the light of those responses will be issued in due course.

Further Education

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to replace discretionary grants as a means of support for students wishing to take up courses of study at further education colleges; and if he will make a statement. [43367]

Dr. Howells: The Government are committed to replacing LEA discretionary awards with a better targeted system of support for students at Further Education Colleges. We are continuing to consult on this matter and, as part of this process, we will be publishing the report of the Further Education Student Support Advisory Group later this month.

New Deal (Unemployed Adults)

Mr. Stephen Twigg: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has for local New Deal partnerships to organise and deliver the New Deal to those unemployed adults covered by the pilot initiatives due to commence in November. [44286]

Mr. Andrew Smith: The Government wish, through the use of high quality and innovative provision, to build on the experience gained from the New Deal for 18–24 year olds in taking forward the pilots for unemployed adults aged 25 and over, which were announced by the Chancellor in the Budget, 17 March 1998, Official Report, columns 1097–112, and which are due to begin in November.

In the answer that I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Scarborough and Whitby (Mr. Quinn) on 14 May 1998, Official Report, columns 181–82, I announced an invitation to existing private sector led New Deal partnerships to bid for the delivery of ten of the pilots. I am now inviting by means of a letter distributed this week through Employment Service Regional Directors, each of the remaining New Deal partnerships to bid for the delivery of one of the rest of the pilots. The bids will be assessed in terms of both quality and innovation and their provision of a robust basis for evaluation. For this reason we will not be inviting bids from areas which overlap with any of the prototype Employment Zones established in February. We will also need to consider carefully the case for pilots in areas where in-work benefits Earnings Top Up schemes are operating.

We aim to announce the successful bidders, which will number around 20, by September.

Written Answers to Questions

Wednesday 3 June 1998

DEFENCE

Porton Down (Document)

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place in the Library a copy of the letter dated 22 February 1941 from the Experimental Station, Porton near Salisbury reference numbers S.B. 3288/R.D. Arm 6 and Ptn/1552 (R.2840) SS/PB. [43928]

Mr. Spellar: This is a matter for the Chief Executive of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency (DERA). I have asked the Chief Executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from John Chisholm to Mr. Robert Key, dated 3 June 1998:

I have been asked to reply to your question requesting a copy of a letter from the former Experimental Station at Porton Down to be placed in the House of Commons library.

Staff at DERA's Chemical and Biological Defence sector (CBD) have been unable to trace the document in which you are interested. The reference you gave of S B 3288/RD Arm 6 dated 22 Feb 1941 is not recognised by the archivist at Porton Down. The Ptn/1552 reference is recognised as being part of a file series dated from 1936 to 1941. The files in this series were forwarded to the Public Record Office in 1992.

I am sorry to have been unhelpful on this occasion. If you can let me have any additional details about the letter I will be happy to make further enquiries.

Abandoned Ordnance

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the outcome of the major incident co-ordinating group meeting held at the chemical and biological defence division of DERA at Porton Down on 1 May, in relation to unidentified buried ordnance at the defence nuclear, biological and chemical centre at Winterbourne Gunner; who attended that meeting; and when the next meeting will be held. [43924]

Mr. Spellar: This is a matter for the Chief Executive of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency (DERA). I have asked the Chief Executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from John Chisholm to Mr. Robert Key, dated 3 June 1998:

I have been asked to reply to your question asking for details of the outcome of the major incident co-ordinating group meeting which took place at the Chemical and Biological Defence (CBD) Sector of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency (DERA), Porton Down on 1 May. In particular, you asked for information in relation to the discussion on the unidentified buried ordnance at the nuclear, biological and chemical centre at Winterbourne Gunner.

Firstly, I should explain that Headquarters Land Command, not CBD/DERA, is responsible for the Defence Nuclear Biological Chemical Centre (DNBCC) at Winterbourne Gunner. That said, CBD/DERA would expect to be involved in an advisory and support capacity in any plan to clear the land. The meeting on 1 May was a routine meeting, the venue for which was provided by CBD/DERA. It was chaired by Wiltshire's Assistant Chief Constable and the minutes were taken by the County Emergency Planning Officer, Emergency Planning Unit, Wiltshire. He should be able to provide you with a record of the meeting and let you know the arrangements for future meetings.

I am sorry that I am unable to be more helpful on this occasion.

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when (a) Wiltshire Constabulary, (b) Wiltshire Fire Brigade and (c) the County Emergency Planning Officer for Wiltshire were consulted as part of Operation Abbott concerning expended and unexpended mortar bombs and shells; and what assessment he has made of how many contained mustard gas and phosgene. [43926]

Mr. Spellar: The Wiltshire Constabulary and the County Emergency Planning Officer (CEPO) for Wiltshire County Council, also acting on behalf of Wiltshire Fire Service, were advised in July last year of the possible need for an Army clearance operation in Winterbourne Gunner, to be called Operation Abbott. However, further consultation was postponed pending a detailed survey of the land in question, and subsequent discussion in my Department of the need for a clearance operation. The Wiltshire Fire Service and the CEPO, also acting on behalf of Wiltshire Constabulary, were then invited to a meeting on 18 May this year, to discuss my Department's current position regarding the clearance.

My Department has made no assessment of how much ordnance expended at Winterbourne Gunner contained phosgene; however, on the evidence of ordnance that has emerged at Winterbourne Gunner in the past, we estimate that some 15% of ordnance fired there might have contained either chemical agents or harmless chemical simulants.

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what abandoned ordnance was found at Home Farm, West Cottingworth, York, at RAF Escrick, at RAF Clifton, York and at Clifton Moor and Royde Mills, Huddersfield; if the ground has now been cleared; and at what cost. [43927]

Mr. Spellar: RAF Escrick, situated on Home Farm land at West Cottingworth, was cleared in 1995 in an exercise known as Operation Capsicum Jar. This clearance operation removed six live 61b ground bombs, 2 inert 61b ground bombs and some 4,600 flame floats. Costs of the clearance are not held centrally, and could now be obtained only at disproportionate cost, but we know 728 man-days were spent on the task. Assuming average pay rates this would equate to a rough order of manpower costs of some £30,000. There would have been further costs for plant hired during the clearance operation, but these are not available.

We are unable to find any reference to clearance exercises at RAF Clifton.

We believe that Royde Mills was an ICI establishment, which was sold to the local authority in 1991.

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the chemical and biological defence division of DERA was first asked to prepare a plan for the clearance of ordnance and other metal objects from fields adjacent to the Defence Nuclear Biological and Chemical Centre at Winterbourne Gunner; what was their estimate of the cost; and what were the reasons he decided not to proceed. [43925]

Mr. Spellar: The Chemical and Biological Defence, CBD, sector of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency, DERA, has not been asked to prepare a plan for such a clearance. It has provided expert advice to Headquarters Land Command, which has the responsibility for preparing such a plan in this instance, and we would also expect CBD/DERA to provide technical advice and support in the disposal of any chemical weapons materials were a clearance operation to be mounted. No decision has been taken to mount or not to mount a clearance operation at this site.

Hunting

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to issue licences for cub hunting on his Department's land; and what restrictions will be placed on these licences. [43862]

Mr. Spellar: Foxhunting with hounds takes place on the Defence Estate under licence and is conducted in accordance with the rules of the Master of Foxhounds Association and the additional restriction that the practices of digging out and holding up are not permitted.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Birmingham Northern Relief Road

Dr. Tony Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what are the projected costs to the public purse of works associated with the construction of the Birmingham Northern Relief Road. [43285]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Under the concession agreement with Midland Expressway Limited (MEL) the costs and risks of constructing the Birmingham Northern Relief Road (BNRR) and its link roads are for MEL. There are, of course, certain non-works costs involved in promoting a private finance scheme that fall to the Government.

Works associated with the BNRR include reconstruction of the existing M42 near Water Orton to enable its use by BNRR traffic. Under the agreement the major part of the costs of this work is to be met by MEL, but the Department is to contribute a share currently estimated at £20m. This provision reflects the fact that not all traffic on that section will use the BNRR.

Further costs to the public purse could result from any changes imposed by the Department to the specifications included in the Concession Agreement, for example changes reflecting revised engineering standards. Where imposed changes involve extra costs to the Concessionaire the Department must meet the costs involved. At present the costs of identified changes seem unlikely to exceed £1.5m.

Motorists

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many motorists there were on British roads in (i) 1994, (ii) 1995, (iii) 1996 and (iv) 1997. [43482]

Ms Glenda Jackson [holding answer 1 June 1998]: Information on the number of 'active' driving licence holders (the nearest equivalent available data) is normally derived from the National Travel Survey; however, annual estimates cannot be made from this source. It is estimated that there were an average of 30.1 million full car licence holders for the years 1994–96.

Yearly estimates of licensed vehicle stock in Great Britain are available on an annual basis and are detailed.

At end of year	All vehicles	Of which motorcars
1994	25,231.3	21,199.2
1995	25,369.4	21,394.2
1996	26,301.9	22,237.5
1997	26,973.8	22,831.7

Piracy

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) what steps he is taking to enlist the support of (a) the United Nations and (b) the European Union for measures to protect British seafarers against piracy; and if he will make a statement; [44028]

(2) when he expects to complete the revision of and re-issue the Piracy and Armed Robbery Merchant Shipping Notice (No. 1517); and if he will make a statement. [44027]

Ms Glenda Jackson: I refer the hon. Member to my answer on 8 April 1998, Official Report, column 285, and reiterate that the best and most sensible way to combat piracy and armed robbery at sea is through concerted international action through the International Maritime Organisation (IMO). The IMO is the United Nations special agency for dealing with maritime issues. We coordinate with EU partners on issues at IMO, including piracy; the European Union has observer status at IMO which enables it to keep abreast of discussions on the subject.

In addition to playing an active role at the IMO as one UN Forum, the UK intends to raise its concerns about piracy and armed robbery at sea at the UN General Assembly this Autumn. At UNGA we coordinate with EU partners on maritime subjects. We expect therefore to raise piracy in a coordinated manner, through an EU joint statement.

The UK voiced its support for action at the IMO Maritime Safety Committee meeting in London last month supporting, in particular, the planned missions and seminars for key piracy areas. The UK has already made a financial contribution to help fund these initiatives and hopes that they are successful.

The revised piracy and armed robbery advice is now contained in a Marine Guidance Note (MGN 75) which will be distributed towards the end of June. Copies are being made available to the Chamber of Shipping and NUMAST, the mariner's union, for onward transmission to their members and it will, for the first time, be available on the internet.

Transport White Paper

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the basis of Mr. Mike Craven's involvement in the drafting of the Transport White Paper. [43692]

Mr. Prescott: I have taken advice on the content and drafting of the Transport White Paper from a variety of sources including officials here and in other Government Departments, my Panel of Advisers on the White Paper, environmental and transport user groups, academics, the public consultants, advisory groups and special and other advisers. Mr. Craven is one such source of advice. The White Paper is being drafted in the normal way by my Department.

Fossil Fuel Emissions

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what progress his Department has made in implementing its long-term strategy for the reduction of fossil fuel emissions in terms of (a) encouraging greater energy efficiency, (b) encouraging the use of renewable energy and (c) introducing an integrated transport policy. [43301]

Angela Eagle: We are aiming to consult this summer on the policy options for delivering our climate change targets. This will largely focus on delivering our legally binding commitment from Kyoto, but will also consider how we might move towards our separate 20 per cent. domestic aim. The consultation paper will build on the outcomes of other reviews, including those on Integrated Transport Policy, Energy Policy, and Utility Regulation. We will then develop a balanced climate change programme under which all sectors of the economy will play their part.

Carbon Monoxide Emissions

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what estimate he has made of the main contributors, in percentage terms, to total carbon monoxide emissions in the United Kingdom. [43302]

Angela Eagle: The latest figures available for United Kingdom carbon monoxide emissions are for 1996. Road transport account for 71 per cent. of such emissions, other transport for 17 per cent., industry for 7 per cent., power stations for 4 per cent., and 1 per cent. from waste treatment and disposal.

Carbon Dioxide Emissions

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the role of the reduction of speed limits as a method of reducing carbon dioxide emissions. [43304]

Angela Eagle: We intend to publish this month our Integrated Transport White Paper which will address the whole issue of traffic management and set out our transport policy to help deliver many environmental, economic and social objectives.

The Government are aware that the way speed limits are set and enforced can affect emissions of greenhouse gases and local air pollutants. It is a complex relationship which merits further consideration.

This summer we will launch an open and wide ranging consultation exercise on the sort of measures needed to meet our legally binding Kyoto target for reducing greenhouse gas emissions and move towards our domestic aim of reducing carbon dioxide emissions to 20 per cent. below 1990 levels by 2010.

South Gloucestershire (Electoral Review)

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he expects to conclude the periodic electoral review of South Gloucestershire; and if the 1999 unitary election will be conducted on the basis of the new boundaries. [43748]

Mr. Raynsford: We are currently considering the representations which we have received on the Commission's recommendations, and intend to announce our preliminary response to the recommendations shortly. Our present intention is for the new arrangements to be established in time for the 1999 elections.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Magistrates Courts

Mr. Todd: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will list those urban communities of greater than 30,000 population which are more than 60 minutes travel by public transport from the nearest magistrates' court administered by the magistrates' court committee of that county. [43025]

Mr. Hoon: The information requested is not collected centrally and could be provided only at a disproportionate cost.

In accordance with section 56 of the Justices of the Peace Act 1997, decisions on the provision of magistrates' courts are for the relevant magistrates' courts committee to determine, after consultation with its local paying authority.

Mr. Todd: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what will be the annual running cost of adopting the PFI proposal of Derbyshire Magistrates' Court Committee relative to maintaining the status quo; and how this cost is to be funded. [43027]

Mr. Hoon: Current property related running costs amount to c£637,000. No firm figures are currently available for the future cost of the PFI scheme as bids have not yet been invited but, based upon a Public Sector Comparator, the maximum estimate of the running cost element of the annual PFI charge will be c£720,000. Running costs will be paid from the Magistrates' Court Committee's revenue budget which is funded by 80 per cent. direct grant from the Lord Chancellor's Department and a 20 per cent. contribution from the local authority. The capital element of the annual PFI charge will be supported by PFI Credits which will entitle the paying authorities to additional revenue support grant.

Mr. Todd: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what factors may be taken into account by sponsoring authorities when they consider proposals from county magistrates' court committees for reorganisation of courts. [43026]

Mr. Hoon: Section 56 of the Justices of the Peace Act 1997 provides that magistrates' courts committees must consult their paying authority and gives the paying authority sole right of appeal against a magistrates' courts committee's proposals.

There are no restrictions on the factors taken into account by a paying authority when considering whether to appeal against a magistrates' courts committee's determination.

Deaf Jurors

Mr. Levitt: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, pursuant to his answer of 12 May 1998, Official Report, columns 69–70, on deaf jurors, for what reasons palantypists are not available for deaf jury members; and if his Department will permit deaf people carrying out jury service to be allowed a palantypist where this is their preferred means of communication support. [42909]

Mr. Hoon: The Crown Court must comply with the Court of Appeal decision that no one, other than a member of the jury, can sit with the jury when they are considering a case. This would make it impossible for a palantypist, or any other person supporting a deaf jury member, to assist during this part of the proceedings.

PRIME MINISTER

Mr. Stephen Kock

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Prime Minister (1) what information was provided to Foreign Office officials by civil servants as to the nature and occasions on which representatives or organisations funded by Government met Mr. Stephen Kock; [38546]

(2) what sums of money were paid (a) by Her Majesty's Government and (b) by those acting on its behalf in salary and expenses to Mr. Stephen Kock between 1985 and 1992. [38552]

The Prime Minister: I refer my hon. Friend to paragraphs F3.19 and F3.27 in Volume III of the Report of Sir Richard Scott's Inquiry into the Export of Defence Equipment and Dual-Use Goods to Iraq.

Homelessness

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Prime Minister (1) what assessment he has made of the effect of the Social Exclusion Unit on rates of homelessness in Coventry; [41212]

(2) what plans the Social Exclusion Unit has to reduce homelessness in the West Midlands Region. [43015]

The Prime Minister [holding answers 11 May and 1 June 1998]: The Social Exclusion Unit have been looking into the problem of rough sleeping as one of its first three priorities. I will announce the Government's decisions shortly. Any policy changes proposed will have clear targets and evaluation plans. Policy on wider homelessness issues remain with my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister.

Housing

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Prime Minister what research the Government have (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on links between poor housing and (i) educational under-achievement, (ii) ill-health and (iii) crime; and what priority will be given in future spending programmes to tackling housing disrepair and housing shortages. [43198]

The Prime Minister: The Government are examining links between poor housing and a wide range of issues, including health, crime and education.

Current research for the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions (DETR) by Bristol University is looking at the effects of poor housing in early life on factors such as poor health and educational attainment later on; Imperial College, London is undertaking a project sponsored by DETR and the Department of Health (DH) examining the links between winter mortality levels and poor housing; a joint DETR/DH research programme is studying the effects of air pollution and damp in the home.

Research is also evaluating area based programmes designed to tackle high unemployment, high levels of crime and fear of crime, poor housing, poor environmental quality, poor educational achievement and poor health.

The Comprehensive Spending Review was set up to ensure that Government spending is in line with current priorities. It is considering the need to spend on maintaining the existing housing stock and on the provision of new homes.

Older People

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Prime Minister (1) what cross-department fora have been established since 1 May 1997 concerning older people; what are their terms of reference; which departments are represented; and to whom they report; [43696]

(2) what plans he has to establish Cabinet level co-ordination of Government policy for older people. [43697]

The Prime Minister [holding answers 1 June 1998]: Many Government departments are involved in work which affects older people. This work is being taken forward within existing Government machinery, including ad-hoc inter-departmental groups of officials.

Ministerial colleagues and I are taking a close interest in these issues. We recognise that it is important that central Government work together in a co-ordinated way to improve the quality of life for all older people and are considering the best way to achieve this.

We recognise that this co-ordination also needs to happen at a local level. On 5 June, we will be formally launching the Better Government for Older People programme. The programme will establish 28 pilots centred on local authorities but involving scores of other local partners to improve public services for older people by better meeting their needs, listening to their views, and encouraging and recognising their contribution.

Duty Free

Mr. Gale: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his oral answer of 20 May 1998, Official Report, column 315, relating to the abolition of duty free, on what factors he based his statement that there was evidence that other countries were prepared to support reversing the position on duty free trade. [43591]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 1 June 1998]: In my oral answer of 20 May I said that there is no evidence that other countries are prepared to support reversing the position on the abolition of intra-EU duty free sales. I made this statement on the basis of the previous day's discussions at the ECOFIN Council meeting.

No. 10 Website

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Prime Minister if the Government consulted non-Governmental organisations representing visually-impaired people prior to the design of the No. 10 Downing Street Website. [43553]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 1 June 1998]: Since the launch of the No. 10 website on 16 April, we have been in contact with non-governmental experts in the field of site design for people with disabilities, including the visually impaired. We are currently considering options for making the site more accessible for these people.

Anti-poverty Strategy

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Prime Minister if he will ensure that under his presidency the EU adopts the anti-poverty strategy targets set for 2005 and 2015 by the Development Assistance Committee. [43576]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 1 June 1998]: Yes. One of our top development priorities during the UK Presidency is to increase the EU's commitment to implementing the International Poverty Eradication Strategy, of which targets form an important part, and ensuring poverty eradication is at the heart of European development programmes.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for International Development organised a high level seminar on 17 March for the Development Ministers from Member States, and representatives from the Commission and the European Parliament to discuss how to put the International Poverty Eradication Strategy into practice.

Heavily Indebted Poor Countries

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Prime Minister how many of the G8 representatives have adopted the five provisions of the Mauritius Mandate. [43841]

The Prime Minister: Agreement was reached at both the G8 foreign and finance ministers meeting on 9 May and at the Birmingham Summit itself on issues raised in the Mauritius Mandate. Both meetings agreed to the speedy and determined implementation of debt relief to more countries under the Heavily Indebted Poor Countries (HIPC) initiative, and encouraged all eligible countries to have begun the process of securing debt relief by the year 2000. The meetings also urged all countries that had not already done so to forgive aid-related bilateral debt or to take comparable action for reforming poor countries, and to use export credits to countries eligible for debt relief under the HIPC initiative only for productive expenditure. These agreements follow directly from proposals originally made by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer in the Mauritius Mandate.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Prime Minister what steps have been taken by his Ministers since 1 May 1997 to relieve the debt burden of the poorer Third World countries. [44015]

The Prime Minister: Since this Government came to office, they have taken an international lead in tackling the problem of debt relief for the world's most heavily indebted countries. In September my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer launched his Mauritius Mandate, which set out many proposals aimed at the speedy and determined implementation of debt relief under the Heavily Indebted Poor Countries (HIPC) initiative. Many of my right hon. Friend's proposals were endorsed by the G8 at the recent Summit in Birmingham, at which debt was a major issue.

Following another British initiative, launched by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer at the G8 foreign and finance ministers meeting on 9 May, agreement was also reached in Birmingham on the need to consider ways for debt relief mechanisms to be used to release more resources for essential rehabilitation in poor countries that have recently emerged from conflict, particularly where those countries have arrears to the International Financial Institutions.

Amongst other actions that the British Government have undertaken on debt relief, my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer held a seminar on the issue which church leaders and charity directors at Downing Street; the Government took an international lead in helping to solve the problems of financing debt relief for Mozambique by announcing that they would donate a further $10 million to Mozambique above the debt relief already provided through the Paris Club and other mechanisms; and the Department for International Development announced that they will cancel up to a further £132 million of old aid loans to poor Commonwealth countries committed to structural reform.

The Government remain committed to the HIPC initiative, and will continue to strive to meet the targets for debt relief set out in the Mauritius Mandate.

NORTHERN IRELAND

RUC

Mr. Maginnis: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans she has to establish a commission to examine the future structure of and operational matters pertaining to the RUC; and if she will make a statement. [37381]

Marjorie Mowlam: The Government have appointed a Chairman and seven Members to the independent Commission on Policing for Northern Ireland, which is one of the elements in the Belfast Agreement (Command 3883).

The Chairman is the right hon. Chris Patten, the former Governor of Hong Kong and Minister in the Northern Ireland Office. In addition, the seven Members each contributes different expertise, effectively under four headings. There are two representatives with policing expertise. One representative of either side of the community in Northern Ireland, but bringing with them a great deal more than this. Two leading academics and a senior, and significant business figure.

The names are Sir John Smith, former Deputy Commissioner in the Metropolitan Police, who also has previous experience as one of Her Majesty's Inspectors of Constabulary. Kathleen O'Toole, having begun her career in the Boston police, is now Secretary for Public Safety in Massachusetts and has vast experience in the law enforcement field. There is no questioning her knowledge of policing, and she has already worked with the RUC, for example on training.

Peter Smith, a QC who has over 20 years' experience at the Bar, is widely regarded as one of the most acute legal practitioners here, and Dr. Maurice Hayes has his wide experience as a former senior civil servant and subsequently Ombudsman. He produced a well received review of the police complaints system in 1997 and has made contributions to policing issues over many years.

Professor Clifford Shearing, who is the Director of the Centre of Criminology at the University of Toronto, has agreed to bring his academic expertise to bear. He has extensive knowledge of policing, having examined the subject in his native South Africa, Australia and Canada. Another expert in this area is Dr. Gerald Lynch, President of John Jay College, New York which has been judged to be the best criminal justice institute in the USA. He has done a great deal of work on policing worldwide, including developing a course on police and community relations for the United States Department of Justice.

The seventh member is Lucy Woods, the very able Chief Executive of British Telecom in Northern Ireland, whose experience of management in a large organisation, delivering a service to a demanding public, will be very valuable.

The entire membership is of the highest standing. Individually and collectively they have a considerable amount of expertise and ability to offer the Commission.

The functions of the Commission are set out clearly in the terms of reference contained in the Good Friday Agreement. It will convene shortly to take this work forward. It will be expected to consult widely and to report by Summer 1999. The Government will publish the report, and consult on the recommendations, as set out in the Agreement.

School Transport

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will list (a) the average number of school children in Northern Ireland travelling by school transport each day and (b) the number of (i) fatalities and (ii) injuries of school children involved in road accidents associated with school transport in each of the last five years. [42420]

Mr. Worthington [holding answer 21 May 1998]: The average number of children in schools in Northern Ireland in receipt of assistance with home to school transport over the period 1992–93 to 1996–97 was 103,414.

The number of road accident casualties in Northern Ireland who were school pupils going to or from school by bus or coach for each of the last five years is shown.

School child casualties (aged 4–16) travelling to or from school by bus or coach in Northern Ireland

School year (September—June)	Fatalities	Injured
1992–93	1	32
1993–94	0	10
1994–95	0	62
1995–96	0	67
1996–97	0	158

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Sportsmatch

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what funding his Department has provided to Sportsmatch in each year of its operation. [43575]

Mr. Banks [holding answer 1 June 1998]: The Sportsmatch scheme in England, which has been successful in attracting over £16.6 million in commercial sponsorship to grass roots sport since its inception, has received the following funding from my Department:

	£ million[1]
1992–93	0.9
1993–94	3.0
1994–95	3.3
1995–96	3.7
1996–97	3.2
1997–98	3.2
1998–99	3.2

[1] Sportsmatch was launched in November 1992

Millennium Bank Holiday

Judy Mallaber: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans there are for an additional bank holiday to mark the Millennium. [44557]

Mr. Chris Smith: I am pleased to announce that the year 2000 will be heralded by a one-off additional Bank Holiday throughout the United Kingdom on Friday, 31 December 1999. A recent consultation exercise conducted by the Government has confirmed that this decision commands overwhelming support among the many organisations which responded, and I know that large numbers of people will welcome this opportunity to prepare for the festivities on New Year's Eve and New Year's Day 2000.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Youth Justice

Mr. Rapson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if the Government have identified areas to pilot the new youth justice measures and the procedural changes to reduce delays in youth and adult cases contained in the Crime and Disorder Bill [Lords]. [44417]

Mr. Michael: We have identified nine areas in which, in principle, we would like to pilot the new youth justice measures contained in the Crime and Disorder Bill. These measures are the final warning scheme; the reparation order; action plan order; child safety order and parenting order; and youth offending teams.

Four areas have been identified to pilot all of these measures. This will demonstrate how the new powers operate together and how the youth offending team structure can best deliver the associated intervention work. The four areas are the London Boroughs of Hammersmith and Fulham, Kensington and Chelsea and the City of Westminster (jointly); Hampshire, Southampton, Portsmouth and the Isle of Wight (jointly); Wolverhampton; and Sheffield.

Five areas have been identified to pilot the child safety order and parenting order, together with youth offending teams. This will ensure that we have sufficient information to evaluate the operation of these two orders. The five areas are the London Borough of Lewisham; Luton and Bedfordshire (jointly); Devon; St. Helens; and Sunderland.

We will be undertaking further detailed work in these nine areas with a view to establishing the pilot projects from October 1998. The pilots will operate for a period of 18 months. They will help develop good practice and allow us to assess the costs and savings which nation-wide implementation will involve. The pilots will inform decisions over the timing of full implementation of these measures.

We are also considering how we might best support other areas, including those others which expressed interest in taking part in the pilots, in planning and developing their arrangements for youth offending teams and the other youth justice measures.

In addition, six areas have been identified to pilot procedural changes recommended by the Review of Delay in the Criminal Justice System, some of which are contained in the Crime and Disorder Bill. These are expected to reduce delays in youth and adult cases. The pilots are being organised under the auspices of the Trials Issues Group and they will also be used to inform the setting of statutory time limits in due course for both youth and adult cases. The six areas are Tyneside; Croydon; Blackburn and Burnley; Northamptonshire; North Staffordshire; and North Wales. Two of these areas—Blackburn and Northamptonshire—will also operate the final warning scheme and youth offending teams, since these arrangements will have an effect on speed through the system and procedures in young offender cases.

Sir Iain Glidewell's Review of the Crown Prosecution Service supports the changes which are to be piloted, and proposes some further changes which he recommends should be incorporated in the pilots. The Government will be considering how best to take this forward.

These pilots reflect the Government's determination to test innovative and effective ways of delivering services and programmes across Government Departments and agencies. Experience from these pilots and other area-based initiatives will help to ensure new measures are implemented effectively at local level.

Firearms

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on what date his Department held consultative meetings on the Review of the Firearms Forms and Rules with (i) the British Medical Association and other professional medical representative bodies, (ii) the National Farmers Union (England and Wales), (iii) the National Farmers Union (Scotland), (iv) the Country Landowners Association (England and Wales), (v) the Country Landowners Association (Scotland), (vi) firearms clubs and associations, (vii) the British Deer Society, and the Deer Commission for Scotland, and (viii) the British Sports Association for the Disabled; when he plans to conclude the review of Firearms Forms and Rules; when he plans to implement the proposed new Forms and Rules; for what reasons the Home Office Note of the main issues raised at the meeting on 19 February to discuss the forms, was not sent to all consultees when requesting further written submissions; and when he intends to meet consultees to discuss these matters. [44101]

Mr. Michael: The arrangements made for meeting representatives of shooting organisations to discuss the proposed new Firearms Rules and forms are as set out in my answer to the hon. Member of 18 May 1998, Official Report, column 241. The new Rules and forms are planned to come into effect on 1 September 1998. The minutes of the working group meeting held on 19 February 1998 were intended solely as a record for those attending but were reflected in the draft forms subsequently sent out for comment. No further meetings are planned.

Joint Enterprise Killings

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the law relating to killings described as joint enterprise killings in non-UK jurisdictions. [44055]

Mr. Michael: When the Law Commission drew up their proposals contained in their consultation paper (No. 131) entitled "Assisting and Encouraging Crime" in September 1993, they looked at how the law in Australia, Canada, New Zealand and the United States of America deals with those who participate in a common criminal enterprise. An account of the law in each of these jurisdictions is set out in an Appendix to their consultation paper.

The Law Commission expect to produce a report in due course and I understand that they will bear in mind the experience of these other jurisdictions. Once the report is received, the Government will consider whether the law in this area needs to be changed.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to revise the law relating to killings described as joint enterprise killings. [44057]

Mr. Michael: The doctrine of joint enterprise is under consideration by the Law Commission who discussed the issues as part of their consultation paper (No. 131) entitled "Assisting and Encouraging Crime", issued in September 1993. Although completion of the project has been delayed to take into account the implications of the House of Lords decision in R v. Powell and another and R v. English, I understand that a report will be available in due course and that it will reflect the responses to the consultation paper and the development of the law, including any subsequent decisions and problems that have emerged. The Government will then consider whether the law in this area should be revised.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received on the law relating to killings described as joint enterprise killings. [44056]

Mr. Michael: Some 41 letters were received about the death of Sarah Adams, whose parents were convicted of cruelty, together with one other representation about joint enterprise, in the past six months. The Department does not keep records which would enable use to identify this topic with certainty: it may arise in the context of crimes other than murder, or on an appeal; such representations may be recorded in a way that does not identify a link to the doctrine of joint enterprise.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people were being detained on 28 February who had sought asylum at some stage, broken down by (a) length of detention and (b) immigration status. [44039]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The available information, relating to 27 February 1998, is given in the table:

Number of people recorded as being detained[1,2] on 27 February 1998 who had sought asylum at some stage, by length of detention[3] and immigration status

Length	Port	Illegal entrants	Subject to deportation action	Total
0–1 Month[1]	69	169	4	242
1–2 Months	46	86	1	133
2–6 Months	148	127	11	286
6–12 Months	21	34	15	70
12 Months+	8	6	7	21
Total	292	422	38	752

[1] Persons detained solely under the powers contained in Schedule 2 or 3 of the Immigration Act 1971

[2] These figures include people who have been in detention for less than a month. Because of the delay in recording receptions into, and releases from, detention and the large number of persons detained for a short period, the figures should be used with caution

[3] In some cases the date a person enters detention may be understated due to the method of recording.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 26 March 1998, Official Report, column 232, if he will list the criteria on the basis of which asylum seekers detained under the Immigration Acts are classified as Category A status. [44041]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Under an agreement with the Prison Service, a number of places are made available for immigration detainees in Prison Service establishments other than Haslar and Rochester. These prisons may also contain Category A accommodation as well as accommodation of other categories.

Prison staff are required to identify those prisoners charged with certain serious offences which are listed in section 36 of Part C of the Prison Service Manual on Security. A copy of the Manual is available in the Library. The cases of those prisoners charged with such offences which meet any one or more of a list of specified criteria, also set out in the Security Manual, are reported to Prison Service Headquarters where it is decided whether the inmate should be placed in Category A.

In the interests of public protection, the guidance and criteria set out in the Security Manual are also applied to administrative detainees, which includes persons detained under the Immigration Act 1971, who are believed to have been involved in the commission of serious offences abroad. The overriding consideration must be the safety of the public and the lack of potential dangerousness presented by the individual prisoner.

Child Deaths

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many cases involving the death of a child there have been since 1993 where neither parent or carer has been charged with either murder or manslaughter because both parents or carers have denied responsibility, but no third party involvement is suspected. [44058]

Mr. Michael: The information requested is not available.

The police are not required to specify the reason why any person suspected of homicide is not charged for statistical purposes. Moreover, they have to supply details of a person initially suspected of a homicide only when that person is arrested or charged with the offence or if a suspect subsequently commits suicide.

The table shows all currently recorded homicides of children (aged under 16) where no conviction had been recorded as at 1 August 1997. All suspects who committed suicide were parents.

All offences currently recorded as homicide where the victim was aged under 16 and no conviction had been recorded as at 1 August 1997

	Number of offences	Of which, suspect committed suicide
1993	9	4
1994	23	13
1995	26	15
1996	33	14

Prisoners

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the total prison population expressed as a percentage of total prison capacity. [44010]

Ms Quin: The total prison population of England and Wales expressed as a percentage of the total prison capacity (operational capacity) was 95.8 per cent. for Friday, 29 May 1998.

Road Policing

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was total spending on road policing by (a) police forces in England and Wales and (b) each individual police force in the latest year for which figures are available; what such spending was as a proportion of the total spending on policing in each case; and what guidance his Department gives to police authorities on the proportion of overall spending which should be allocated to road policing. [43995]

Mr. Michael: The information requested is not collected centrally. The allocation of resources to particular functions and the deployment of officers are operational matters for individual chief constables. We have issued no guidance to police authorities on the allocation of resources to road policing.

Road traffic offences and other crimes do not necessarily occur separately. A large part of traffic officers' time is spent dealing with ordinary crime or carrying out ordinary police duties. Conversely, officers on general beat duties are able to take prompt action against breaches of road traffic law.

Alcohol (Young Persons)

Mr. Gareth Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action he has taken to ensure the enforcement of the Confiscation of Alcohol (Young Persons) Act 1997. [44038]

Mr. Michael: Responsibility for the enforcement of the Confiscation of Alcohol (Young Persons) Act 1997 is an operational matter for chief officers of police. Guidance on the Act, which came into force on 1 August last year, has been issued to all chief officers. The Act is intended to allow the police to deal with situations where drinking by young people causes a nuisance to others or may lead to other bad behaviour. The guidance makes it clear that it was not Parliament's intention that the new powers should be used where young peoples' drinking is not perceived to be a problem. A copy of the guidance (Home Office Circular 38/1997) is in the Library.

TREASURY

Private Finance Initiative

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list by Department the capital expenditure under the private finance initiative in (a) 1996–97 and (b) 1997–98, and estimates for 1998–99 (i) in real terms and (ii) in cash. [43920]

Mr. Darling: The information required in cash terms for 1996–97 was given in an answer to the hon. Member for Gordon (Mr. Bruce) on 10 December 1997, Official Report, columns 572–73. The information for subsequent years is contained in Table B15 at Annex B to the Financial Statement and Budget Report (HM Treasury, March 1998). The information required for the calculation of real terms figures is contained in Table B1.

Taxation

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 5 May 1998, Official Report, columns 331–34, if he will make it his policy to continue to publish the updated series for the tax burden until a new methodolgy for updating the tax burden can be introduced; by what date he expects to introduce improved statistics for the tax burden; and if he will make a statement. [42148]

Mr. Lilley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what action officials in his Department are taking to make information on the burden of indirect taxes on household types more meaningful and reliable; [43986]

(2) when he expects to publish more meaningful and reliable information on the burden of indirect taxes on household types; [43979]

(3) on what date he first instructed officials in his Department to consider ways in which information on the burden of indirect tax on household types could be made more meaningful and reliable. [43984]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answers 18 May and 1 June 1998]: I have nothing to add to my answer of 5 May 1998, Official Report, columns 331–34, to the hon. Member for Gordon (Mr. Bruce).

Transsexuals

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer in what way he proposes to amend the Births and Deaths Registration Act 1953 following the out-of-court settlement with Alan Veale; and if he will review the Act to consider whether other amendments should be made to enable transsexuals to have their birth certificates amended. [44299]

Mrs. Liddell: In order to correct an error or fact or substance in a birth or death register the Birth and Deaths Registration Act 1953 requires two statutory declarations to be made. The declarations must set out the nature of the error and the true facts of the case. I propose to amend the legislation to allow a Court Order to be accepted in place of one of the statutory declarations. The same provisions apply to the correction of the sex of an individual where it was wrongly recorded at birth.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has for the total level of the local government financial settlement for 1999–2000. [43353]

Mr. Darling: Future plans for public spending, including provisions for local authorities, will be set out in the Comprehensive Spending Review, to be completed in the summer.

Heavily Indebted Poor Countries

Mr. Reed: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to write off the remaining debts owed by heavily indebted poor countries to the United Kingdom Government. [43469]

Mrs. Liddell: The Government remain fully committed to the Heavily Indebted Poor Countries (HIPC) initiative, and continue to press for full debt relief to all eligible countries that are committed to economic and structural reforms, for example through the Chancellor's Mauritius Mandate and at the recent G8 Summit in Birmingham.

Methadone Deaths

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the total number of deaths in (a) England, (b) Wales and (c) Scotland from methadone in each of the last four years; and if he will make a statement. [44011]

Mrs. Liddell: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Chief Executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Paul Flynn, dated June 1998:

As Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS), I have been asked to reply to your parliamentary question on the total number of deaths in (a) England, (b) Wales and (c) Scotland from Methadone for each of the last four years.

The data requested are shown in the table below.

Deaths involving methadone in England, Wales and Scotland 1994–1997

	1994	1995	1996	1997[1]
England	246	273	328	286
Wales	8	18	16	13
Scotland	55	58	101	87
Total	309	349	445	386

[1] 1997 data are provisional

Notes:

Data for England and Wales represent the number of deaths occurring in each year

Data for Scotland represent the number of deaths registered in each year, and were supplied by the General Register Office for Scotland

The deaths included correspond to those with an underlying cause of death of drug dependence, nondependent abuse of drugs, accidental poisoning, suicidal poisoning or poisoning undetermined whether accidentally or purposely inflicted and where methadone was mentioned on the death certificate.

The figures include deaths attributed to methadone in combination with other drugs. In some cases, therefore, the death may not be directly or solely due to methadone.

Economic and Finance Council

Mr. Timms: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the Council meeting of the Economic and Finance Ministers of the European Union held on 19 May. [43749]

Mr. Gordon Brown: I chaired the Economic and Finance Council—ECOFIN—of the European Union in Brussels on 19 May. The Economic Secretary represented the UK.

The Council began with a presentation by Commissioner Liikanen of the Commission's Preliminary Draft Budget for 1999. The Council stressed the need for continued budgetary rigour.

On Agenda 2000, the Council held a wide-ranging discussion on the economic and financial issues arising from the proposals published by the Commission on 18 March concerning future financing and the reform of the Community's main spending policies (the Common Agricultural Policy and the Structural and Cohesion Funds). The next ECOFIN will return to these issues, and consider ECOFIN's input to the Cardiff European Council.

Commissioner Liikanen gave a progress report on the Sound and Efficient Management (SEM 2000) initiative. The Council agreed conclusions on the report.

Commissioner Gradin presented the annual report on the fight against fraud and the future work programme. The Council adopted conclusions on the documents, including a call for the convention on the Protection of the Communities' Financial interests to be ratified as soon as possible.

The Council unanimously supported conclusions endorsing the report of the High Level Group on alcohol and tobacco fraud, and welcoming the Commission's Communication.

The Council approved the Commission's Recommendation on Greece's excessive deficit.

Commissioner de Silguy presented the Commission's recommendations for this year's Broad Economic Guidelines. These will be discussed at the next ECOFIN.

The Presidency's proposals on the procedure for surveillance of progress on economic reform were agreed. These include the presentation by Member States and the Commission of short annual progress reports on product and capital markets, which will complement the procedure already established on labour markets.

There was a first discussion of National Employment Action Plans, substituted by all Member States. Employment will again be discussed at the next ECOFIN, which will contribute to the preparation of the Cardiff European Council.

Under Any Other Business, Irish Finance Minister McCreevy presented a study on the impact on Ireland of the abolition of the duty free regime on 30 June 1999. The Commission agreed to produce a working document clarifying the existing instruments available to member States for addressing the adverse consequences of abolition. The decision to abolish duty free was taken in 1991 and there was no unanimous view to reopen this issue.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

BMARC

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if commissions were paid by BMARC to companies owned by or connected to Her Majesty's Government. [38898]

Mrs. Beckett: Not to my knowledge. Any legitimate commissions for services rendered paid by BMARC to companies owned by or connected to Her Majesty's Government would have been a matter solely for BMARC or its parent company and the provider of the service. Evidence of any improper commissions paid to companies owned by or connected to Her Majesty's Government should be passed to the relevant authorities.

Export Licences (Indonesia)

Ann Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many applications for licences for the export of (a) paramilitary, (b) security and (c) police equipment to Indonesia have been (i) granted, (ii) refused and (iii) revoked since 20 March; and what was the export licence category in each case. [42626]

Mrs. Roche [holding answer 19 May 1998]: The Export Control Organisation's computer databases have been interrogated and the results are as follows. Between 7 March and 10 May 1998 inclusive, 8 Standard Individual Export Licences (SIELs) and 7 Open Individual Export Licences (OIELs) were issued to export to endusers or consignees in Indonesia goods subject to export control by being listed in Part III of Schedule 1 to the Export of Goods (Control) Order (the so-called "Military List"). In the same period no individual licences for such exports were revoked, and no applications for such licences were refused. This does not include Media OIELs, which are Open Individual Export Licences authorising the export to any destination of protective clothing, mainly for the protection of aid agency workers and journalists when working in areas of conflict.

Individual licences issued between 7 March and 10 May 1998 covering the export to Indonesia of goods on the Military List

Rating	Number of SIELs issued covering goods with this rating	Number of OIELs issued covering goods with this rating
ML2	2	0
ML3	1	0
ML6	1	0
ML9	0	1
ML10	0	3
ML11	1	3
ML15	1	0
PL5006	2	0

This information should be considered in light of my answer to a question from my hon. Friend the Member for Don Valley (Caroline Flint) on 30 October 1997, Official Report, columns 870–71.

As I said in my answer to my hon. Friend of 8 April 1998, Official Report, columns 345–47, it is not possible to break down these data in the manner requested as the equipment covered by many entries in the Military List could be used by military, paramilitary or police end-users.

Bulldog Trainer Aircraft

Mr. Hancock: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) what representations she has received concerning the award of the contract to replace the Bulldog trainer aircraft; [43023]

(2) what assessment she has made of the potential benefits to United Kingdom industry of the contract for the replacement of the MOD's Bulldog trainer aircraft. [43024]

Mr. Battle: The President has received a variety of representations, mainly pressing for the selection of the Slingsby Firefly as the replacement for the Bulldog trainer aircraft. These have contributed to the continuing assessment being made by the Department of the potential impact on the UK aerospace industry of this procurement, which is being discussed with the Ministry of Defence.

Truck Refrigeration Systems

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans she has to subject auxiliary engines for refrigeration systems on trucks to noise limits; what assessment she has made of emissions from these units; and if she will make a statement. [43488]

Mr. Battle: I have no plans to subject such units to noise limits. However, the European Commission has recently proposed a directive on noise emissions by equipment used outdoors [COM(1998)46 final] which includes the proposal to subject this type of equipment to noise labelling only. The directive has yet to be agreed by the Member States. An Explanatory Memorandum (6363/98) was submitted to both Houses on 26 March 1998.

The Department has not undertaken an assessment of noise emissions from these units.

Renewable Energy

Mr. Stunell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will exempt renewables generated within the NFFO arrangement from the fossil fuel levy. [43736]

Mr. Battle: I have no plans to do so. Generators who generate electricity from renewable sources of energy under the non-fossil fuel obligation (NFFO) arrangements receive financial support through the scheme which makes the electricity they generate competitive with other leviable forms of generation. I see no need to give such generators further special treatment.

Mr. Stunell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what proposals she has to provide incentives for (a) suppliers and (b) consumers to develop the renewable energy industry in the United Kingdom. [43668]

Mr. Battle: I expect to provide a further incentive to the development of the renewable energy industry in the United Kingdom when I make the fifth Order under the Non-Fossil Fuel Obligation (NFFO) later this year. The NFFO places an obligation on the Public Electricity Suppliers in England and Wales to obtain a specified amount of electricity from renewable sources, providing a protected market in which the industry can grow. Similar arrangements operate in Scotland and Norther Ireland.

More widely, this Government propose to undertake a new and strong drive to develop renewable energy sources in line with its manifesto commitment. To this end, DTI Ministers are reviewing policy, including considerations of what would be necessary and practicable to achieve 10 per cent. of UK electricity needs from renewable sources by the year 2010 and how renewables can make an effective contribution to meeting requirements for future greenhouse gas reduction commitments. The outcome of that review will be announced later this year.

Money-lenders

Kate Hoey: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many money-lenders lost their licences in the last full year for which figures are available. [44037]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: During 1997 the Director-General of Fair Trading revoked 35 consumer credit licences.

Information on individual cases is published each year in the Annual Report of the Director-General of Fair Trading, issues of which up to 1996 are in the Library. The Report for 1997 will be published shortly. Information is also published periodically in the OFT Journal "Fair Trading".

Kate Hoey: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what penalties are applied to unlicensed money-lenders. [44051]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: A trader who offers credit facilities to consumers must be licensed under the Consumer Credit Act 1974. A trader who engages in a consumer credit business without obtaining the necessary licence from the Office of Fair Trading commits an offence punishable by a fine of up to £5,000, if he is prosecuted in a magistrates court, or by an unlimited fine or 2 years' imprisonment or both, if he is prosecuted in the Crown Court.

WALES

Waiting Lists

Mr. Denzil Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much of the estimated £25 million allocated to the NHS in Wales is to be spent on reducing waiting lists; and on what projects the balance will be spent. [43665]

Mr. Win Griffiths: £20 million will be spent on reducing waiting lists, £18 million of which has already been allocated to the NHS. £2 million has been held back for issues arising in-year.

The balances is expected to be used mainly to fund costs arising from new variant CJD in blood products and to contribute to Welsh costs associated with the trust reconfiguration exercise and the production of a corporate strategy for NHS Wales.

Further Education

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the average funding per student in further education in Wales; and what assessment he has made of this level relative to that applying in (a) England and (b) Scotland. [42684]

Mr. Hain: The average funding per student in further education in Wales in the financial year ending 31 March 1998 was £2,993, compared to £2,842 in England for the same period. No assessment of the level applying in Scotland has been made.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Debt Reduction

1. Dr. Palmer: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on the steps to be taken in reducing the debt of poor countries, following the G8 meeting. [42496]

9. Sir Sydney Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what progress she expects to be made in the reduction of debt among the poorest countries in the next 18 months. [42506]

Clare Short: At the G8 Summit in Birmingham on 15–17 May, we made useful progress in speeding up the implementation of the Heavily Indebted Poor Countries Initiative (HIPC). The Communiqué set out the objective of getting all eligible countries, likely to be about 20 in number, into the process by 2000. This constitutes a significant step towards meeting the Government's Mauritius Mandate which aims for at least three quarters of eligible countries to have received debt relief within the next few years. And following a British initiative, the Summit also agreed on the need to look at ways of providing more and earlier debt relief, to help heavily indebted post-conflict countries. We will be pressing in all appropriate fora for the implementation of these targets.

11. Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what recent discussions she has had with the International Monetary Fund in respect of third world countries' indebtedness; and if she will make a statement. [42508]

Clare Short: Together with my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer, I most recently discussed developing country debt with the Managing Director of the IMF in Washington in mid-April. Despite the progress that has been made in implementing the Heavily Indebted Poor Countries Initiative, we agreed that more must be done, and that we should look at ways for speeding the process up.

24. Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what progress is being made on expanding the scope of international debt reduction programmes. [42521]

Clare Short: At last month's G8 Summit in Birmingham, leaders agreed to support the speedy and determined extension of debt relief under the Heavily Indebted Poor Countries' (HIPC) debt Initiative. Following a British proposal, leaders also agreed on the need to look at ways for providing more and earlier debt relief to help post-conflict countries. We shall be pressing for this work to be taken forward urgently. As a first step, at the donors' meeting in Stockholm earlier this week, we announced a significant contribution to the multi-donor Debt Trust Fund for Rwanda.

25. Mr. Ian Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what further actions her Department intends to take to reduce the debt burden of the world's poorest and most indebted countries. [42522]

Clare Short: We shall continue to press for the speedy and determined implementation of the Heavily Indebted Poor Countries debt Initiative, and for the urgent consideration of ways to provide earlier and more debt relief for post conflict countries. As a first step, at the donors' meeting in Stockholm earlier this week, we announced a significant contribution to the multi-donor Debt Trust Fund for Rwanda.

Niger

8. Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what plans she has to assist the Government of Niger in combating disease among children. [42504]

Mr. Foulkes: Although Niger does not have close links with Britain, we provide support through our commitments to multilateral institutions, particularly the EC, the UN and the World Bank which provide significant levels of assistance to Niger. The EC, the World Health Organisation and UNICEF all have health programmes in Niger.

Iraq

12. Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what percentage of British aid to Iraq since 1991 has been spent on administration costs; and if she has any conveniently available figures. [42509]

Clare Short: Published figures for UK humanitarian aid to Iraq do not include DFID administration costs, which come from a separate departmental budget and represent some 0.7 per cent. of this year's programme. NGOs and other agencies which we fund typically spend three to seven per cent. of project costs on headquarters administration.

I am pleased to announce that my department has just approved a much needed £2 million project to improve water and sanitation in Baghdad-controlled Iraq. This is part of the £7 million aid package for the region which I announced on 12 March 1998, Official Report, column 297.

Microfinance

13. Mr. Goggins: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what action she is taking to support the use of microfinance in developing countries. [42510]

Mr. Foulkes: We believe that microfinance—savings and credit—can be a powerful tool to support the livelihoods of large numbers of poor people in developing countries. For the past ten years, the UK has provided increasing support to projects and institutions engaged in microfinance. Our current commitments to date and projects in the pipeline amount to about £60 million and we anticipate increasing resources in this field.

Emergency Relief

14. Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what proportion of the United Kingdom aid programme was devoted to emergency relief operations, and disaster preparedness and prevention programmes in 1997–98; and what provision she has made for 1998–99. [42511]

Clare Short: The Department for International Development (DFID) expenditure figures for the financial year 1997/98 are not finalised. However, we estimate that the proportion of the bilateral aid programme provided to disaster relief, emergency food aid, short-term refugee relief and disaster preparedness will be around 8 per cent. of total bilateral expenditure.

Full statistical information for 1997/98 will be published later in the year as the British Aid Statistics and I will place copies in both Houses. Adequate provision has been built into 1998/99 planning for both foreseeable relief needs and unforeseeable emergencies.

Bilateral Aid

15. Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on the top five recipients of United Kingdom bilateral aid, and the amounts paid to them in the year 1997–98. [42512]

Clare Short: The Department for International Development expenditure figures for the financial year 1997/98 are not finalised but the top five recipients will be India, Bangladesh, Uganda, Tanzania and Montserrat.

Full statistical information for 1997/98 will be published later in the year as the British Aid Statistics and copies will be placed in the library of both Houses.

Rwanda

16. Mr. McNulty: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps her Department is taking to support conflict prevention and peacebuilding in Rwanda. [42513]

Clare Short: The focus of the UK support programme for Rwanda has moved away from emergency interventions towards longer term rehabilitation efforts. In close collaboration with the Government, we are implementing a £25 million rehabilitation package targeted on key Government priorities. But we need to do more.

Donors and Government of Rwanda are meeting in Stockholm on 3 June under the chairmanship of the World Bank, to discuss Rwanda's long-term external financing needs and initiatives to address debt. My Department is attending the meeting and will be advocating the need for flexible long-term support underpinned by a deeper, more transparent policy dialogue with Government on issues related to Governance and human rights. We will announce a new 3 year financial commitment for Rwanda at the Stockholm meeting.

Security Sector Reform

17. Mr. Derek Twigg: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what actions her Department is taking to support security sector reform in developing countries. [42514]

Clare Short: Security sector reform is an important part of the work of my new Department. A security sector that is well tasked and managed can better serve the interests of all. But a military sector that is inappropriately tasked, badly managed and indisciplined can hinder development. We know from our surveys that for very poor people, decent law and order, and a safe and secure environment, are a top priority.

My Department has taken a number of important initiatives to address this problem. We are supporting an OECD initiative to incorporate greater transparency, civilian accountability and control of the security sector as part of development assistance.

I have had discussions with the Secretary of State for Defence on these issues. I gave evidence to the Defence Select Committee and am due to give evidence shortly to the Development Committee on this and related subjects.

Last month my Department sponsored a major seminar on security sector reform with the research group, Saferworld, that brought together a range of leading experts in this area. This seminar will lead to a substantial report later this year, setting out a range of practical ways in which the British government can support security sector reform in developing countries, both bilaterally and through the multilateral institutions.

Religious Freedoms

18. Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what recent discussions she has had with heads of state of developing countries regarding the use of development assistance to support religious freedoms. [42515]

Clare Short: I frequently meet senior members of the governments of developing countries; my discussions with them cover issues related to the establishment of practical partnerships to work for the elimination of poverty.

All our work places a strong emphasis on human rights. Freedom of worship is a fundamental freedom. Persecution of people for their religious belief is a breach of international human rights conventions. Our human rights work for crises focuses on the human rights of poor and disadvantaged people this includes those who may be discriminated against because of their religion.

Sudan

19. Mr. Hope: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps her Department has taken to provide humanitarian assistance to the people of Sudan; and if she will make a statement. [42516]

Clare Short: In February, we pledged £4 million to the United Nations 1998 Consolidated Appeal for Sudan. On 6 May this was increased to £5.23 million. This has been given to UN agencies and international NGOs in Sudan with the current crisis in Bahr El Ghazal region a key focus. I approved a further £5 million on 15 May which will be used over the coming months to meet urgent humanitarian needs in this region and wherever else they arise in Sudan.

The war is the direct cause of the current crises. The problem in providing humanitarian relief is not a lack of resources but lack of access. The Government of Sudan have approved increased flights and is willing to offer a ceasefire—which is the best solution to the problem of access. The SPLA has refused to consider a ceasefire. Without peace, humanitarian crises will recur.

Multilateral Agreement on Investment

20. Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on progress on the multilateral agreement on investment and its impact on developing countries. [42517]

Clare Short: The Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD) Ministers, meeting at the end of April, reaffirmed their commitment to a successful and timely conclusion of the negotiations on the Multilateral Agreement on Investment (MAI), and to seeking broad participation in it. The next meeting of the negotiating group will be in October 1998. Ministers also affirmed their commitment to pursuing an active dialogue with non-member countries, including on their development interests. The independent study on the development implications of the MAI commissioned by my Department earlier this year concluded that the MAI could have a positive developmental impact, if appropriate arrangements are made for developing countries to accede to the Agreement. The OECD Secretariat is now carrying out further analytical work on the MAI and development. Officials from my Department are in close touch with the OECD Secretariat, and will continue to contribute actively as this analytical work moves forward.

Child Labour

21. Mr. Rammell: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on the outcome of the ILO Conference on the international convention on child labour. [42518]

Clare Short: The committee on Child Labour will be meeting between 3 and 16 June. The Conference is likely to adopt the report of the committee on 18 June. I will place a copy of the report in the Library of the House.

Jubilee 2000

22. Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on progress made in relation to the Jubilee 2000 initiative. [42519]

Clare Short: Jubilee 2000 seeks the cancellation of the unpayable debt of developing countries by the year 2000. The campaign has been tremendously successful in raising public awareness of debt issues, helping to keep the international debate on debt alive. I was pleased to address some of their supporters who gathered in Birmingham at the time of the G8 Summit last month.

The UK Government are pressing for speedy and flexible implementation of the Heavily Indebted Poor Countries (HIPC) Initiative, which also seeks the early remission of such countries' unpayable debt. One element of the Mauritius Mandate, launched last year by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer, aims to ensure that by the year 2000 all eligible countries have embarked on the process which will lead to debt relief under the Initiative. I therefore welcome the agreement by leaders at the G8 Summit to encourage all eligible countries to take the policy measures needed to bring them into the HIPC process by then. But it is important to bear in mind that debt relief is not provided for its own sake, it must be linked to poverty reduction.

Rain Forests

23. Mr. Sawford: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what is her Department's policy on the use of development assistance for the preservation of the rain forests; and if she will make a statement. [42520]

Clare Short: My Department's aim is the elimination of poverty through the promotion of sustainable development, which requires conservation of the environment. Our approach towards the conservation of rain forests and the problem of deforestation is to support work to improve management of forest resources in ways that lead to a range of benefits to poor communities as well as helping to secure the global environmental benefits that forests offer.

In the past year, DFID has also supported a number of important new initiatives, for example:

- a grant of £3 million to the Guyana Sustainable Human Development Project, which will benefit forest-dependent communities encircling the Iwokrama Rain Forest.
- a grant of £2 million to the UNDP's Global Programme on Forests: Forest Management to Support Sustainable Livelihoods Project, which will promote public and private sector partnerships for sustainable forest management.
- a grant of £400,000 to the Forest Resource Accounting (FRA) 2000 project—FAO's global assessment of the status and condition of forest resources.

DFID has played an active part in the development and implementation of the Action Programme on Forests endorsed by Heads of Government at the G8 Birmingham Summit and all other international forestry initiatives.

Details of my Department's forestry activities are set out in our publication: forests MATTER and our DFID Forestry Sector Projects, both of which are in the Libraries of the House and are available on request from DFID's Environment Policy Department.

Indonesia

26. Mr. White: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on what aid is being given to Indonesia (a) by her Department and (b) by non-governmental organisations to alleviate the current economic crisis. [42523]

Clare Short: The most important step is implementation of political and economic reforms in Indonesia. This is critical if the reduction of poverty in recent years is not to be reversed and if benefits are to be more widely shared. The UK supports the IMF economic reform programme and is also contributing £5 million to the Asia Europe Meeting (ASEM) Trust Fund which will underpin the efforts of Asian Governments, including Indonesia, to combat the social effects of the crisis and reform their financial sectors. We have provided £375,000 of assistance to the International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC) to help with nutrition, hygiene and medical needs for the people of Irian Jaya; and continue to monitor the food situation more widely.

We are also providing support to trade union education. We are currently exploring urgently any additional measures, through civil society, which might bring effective help to the most vulnerable people suffering the effects of the crisis.

Sierra Leone

27. Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on the current level of aid being provided to Sierra Leone by (a) the United Kingdom and (b) the EU. [42524]

Clare Short: Since the return of President Kabbah's democratically elected government, we have provided £1 million to re-establish core functions and services, £1 million for NGOs delivering humanitarian and development assistance, and £1 million to the ICRC to continue its humanitarian aid and protection work. The EC is providing 2 million ecu for seeds and tools and 200,000 ecu to help refugees in Guinea to return home.

We are looking at what more we can do to strengthen governance and bring immediate relief to the people. We hope in the future to be able to assist in demobilising and re-integrating ex-combatants.

European Union Development Council

Mrs. Dean: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on the outcome of the European Union Development Council meeting on 18 May. [44496]

Clare Short: The Council discussed the development co-operation aspects of the EU's draft negotiating mandate for the renegotiation of the Lomé Convention, which covers EC aid, trade and development relations with 71 African, Caribbean and Pacific (ACP) States and expires in the year 2000. The Council held a useful discussion, resolving most of the outstanding issues on the development aspects of the mandate. Trade aspects are still to be agreed but we are aiming to have the mandate adopted at the General Affairs Council in June.

The Council agreed Conclusions on follow up to the 1993 Poverty Resolution and on follow up to the 1995 Gender Resolution. The Conclusions refer to experience in implementing the Resolutions and set out what more needs to be done to improve effectiveness in these key areas. Procedural Conclusions were also agreed on Microfinance, Indigenous Peoples, Evaluation, and Humanitarian Aid.

Ministers also discussed Rwanda, Nigeria, the nuclear test in India, Cuba's request to become an observer in the negotiations on the future of ACP-EU relations, aid untying, the DAC Chairmanship, the successor to the current administrator of UNDP, and a proposal to set up an expert group on migration. They also agreed conclusions on the situation in Southern Sudan, noting with extreme concern the grave situation there and the plight of more than 350,000 people in Bahr el Ghazal. The Conclusions reflect the fact that the Council feels that the root of the problem there is the long-term conflict and commit the EU to continuing to provide flexible assistance, urging other donors to do the same.

HEALTH

Breast Screening

Mr. Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects to include women of 64 years of age in the breast screening programme; and if he will make a statement. [43116]

Mr. Boateng: The National Health Service breast screening programme invites all women aged 50–64 to be screened by mammography every three years. Breast screening for women aged 65 and over is available three-yearly on request, and this is widely publicised by the NHS breast screening programme and Age Concern.

We are funding three pilot studies to evaluate the effectiveness of extending the breast screening programme to invite routinely women aged 65–69. These are due to end in 1999/2000. In view of the importance of this issue, we are now planning to ask the National Screening Committee, which advises Ministers on extensions to or modifications of existing screening programmes, to consider this matter in July. The Committee will assess the case for routinely inviting older women in the light of the evidence emerging from the pilot studies, and the workforce and other implications of extending the programme nationally.

Midwives

Mr. Alan Johnson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to encourage health authorities and trusts to implement the National Health Service Executive recommendation of a minimum 'F' grade for midwives on the clinical grading scale. [43153]

Mr. Milburn: The National Health Service Executive recommended in 1995 (Executive Letter (95)77) that an "F" or "G" grade, or equivalent, would normally be appropriate for posts in which a midwife, regardless of the route to registration, has a defined caseload of women to whom she/he gives the full range of midwifery care. The Review Body for Nursing Staff, Midwives, Health Visitors and Professions Allied to Medicine recommended in January 1998 (paragraph 77) that

"where midwives' roles have changed in line with the criteria given in EL(95)77, their pay and grading should reflect the fact. We therefore recommend that the Health Departments ensure implementation of the agreement EL(95)77 at Trust level."

The Advance Letter promulgating the nurses' pay increase this year, to be distributed on 4 June, will draw this recommendation to the attention of employing authorities and ask them to act upon it.

NHS Trusts (Health and Safety)

Dr. Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if National Health Service commissioners are required to stipulate health and safety performance standards in their contracts with NHS trusts. [43737]

Mr. Milburn: National Health Service commissioners are not required specifically to stipulate health and safety performance standards in their contracts with NHS trusts. Guidance issued by the NHS Executive (Health Service Guidelines (97)6) commends the inclusion of health and safety performance in the contracting process.

Tuberculosis

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he is taking to monitor (a) links between human TB and bovine TB and (b) the incidence of TB; and if he will make a statement. [43683]

Ms Jowell: There are established procedures for reporting, investigating and treating cases of tuberculosis, including the screening of contacts. Guidance on these matters is contained in the reports of the Interdepartmental Working Group on Tuberculosis, which were published in July 1996, copies of which are available in the Library, and in the publications of the British Thoracic Society and other specialist groups. Additionally, Veterinary Officers notify local authority environmental health officers when a restriction of movement order is imposed on a herd of cattle which has shown positive reactors, so that contact tracing can ensue.

Cases due to M-bovis infection, the strain which infects badgers and cattle, are identified through culture of the infecting organism. Around 30 to 40 cases of human tuberculosis each year are confirmed to be due to M-bovis infection. These are mainly in older people who were exposed to bovine tuberculosis before sterilisation of milk and routine testing of herds for tuberculosis were introduced and are not thought to be due to recent transmission. However, as cases of bovine TB in cattle are increasing in the United Kingdom, this is something we are monitoring carefully.

Tuberculosis is a notifiable disease. The incidence of cases is monitored nationally and by health authorities, and surveillance of laboratory confirmed cases is conducted on a routine basis by the Public Health Laboratory Service (PHLS). There were 5,913 notifications of tuberculosis reported in England and Wales in 1997 (provisional figure).

The PHLS has taken steps to improve surveillance of tuberculosis, including resistant strains, and local initiatives by health authorities have been undertaken to improve completeness of notifications. In addition, the Department is funding the PHLS Communicable Disease Surveillance Centre to conduct a further 5-yearly survey of notifications of tuberculosis during 1998 to provide a more detailed picture of the disease in England and Wales.

Hospital Closures (Cornwall and Scilly)

Mr. Nicholls: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 18 May 1998, Official Report, column 265, what factors underlay the delays in considering proposals put forward by the Cornwall and Isles of Scilly Health Authority. [43366]

Mr. Milburn: The proposals put forward by Cornwall and Isles of Scilly Health Authority remain under consideration by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State. The decision will reflect the best interests of the people of Cornwall and will be announced when all the relevant factors and information have been properly scrutinised.

Emergency Contraception

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will take steps to ensure that women at risk of unwanted pregnancy use emergency contraception. [43453]

Ms Jowell: The Health Education Authority ran a major public awareness campaign on emergency contraception in 1995 and 1996. The campaign was coordinated by the Contraceptive Education Service (CES), which is funded by the Department. CES continues to promote awareness of emergency contraception and made this its focus during Contraceptive Awareness Week in February. Earlier this year CES launched a new pack containing leaflets, posters and "credit cards" giving key information, plus guidance for professionals providing an emergency contraceptive service.

User Groups

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidelines the NHS Executive has issued concerning procedures for health authority and NHS trust consultations with user groups. [43817]

Mr. Milburn: Health authorities are required to consult on proposals for substantial variations in service. Guidance on these consultations was set out in Executive Letter (90)185 and EL(96)17, copies of which are available in the Library.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance the NHS Executive has issued on procedures for users to chair health authority and NHS trust user groups. [43818]

Mr. Milburn: None.

Dental Services

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions he has held with dentists to encourage them to undertake work on the NHS. [43487]

Mr. Milburn: We are in regular contact with dentists and their representatives on a wide range of issues.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Western Sahara

Mr. Lepper: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment the Government have made of the current state of voter identification being undertaken by the United Nations Mission for a Referendum in Western Sahara; and what plans he has to provide a UK military contingent or other logistical support to MINURSO. [41773]

Mr. Fatchett: We are satisfied with progress made by MINURSO since the resumption of the Voter Identification Process in December 1997. The UN Secretary General reported on 13 April that 101,772 applicants have been identified, that fewer than 60,000 remain to be convoked, but the issue of the disputed tribes remains unresolved. We agree with the assessment of the UN Special Representative, Mr. Charles Dunbar, that delays mean it is possible that the Referendum will take place in 1999 rather than as originally scheduled on 7 December 1998.

We have no current plans to contribute personnel or logistical support to MINURSO at the current time.

Indonesia

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what mechanisms are in place to monitor the end use of British-made military equipment in Indonesia, separately identifying those relating to water cannon. [41545]

Mr. Fatchett [holding answer 11 May 1998]: No formal mechanisms exist at present for systematically monitoring the use that has been made of British defence equipment once it has been exported. Our Embassy in Jakarta does however report on the use of British-supplied defence equipment in the light of any information that they obtain.

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to review his policy on arms sales to Indonesia. [43485]

Mr. Fatchett: All applications for defence sales to Indonesia, and to other countries, are considered case by case against the new criteria we introduced last year. In accordance with the criteria, we keep the situation in recipient countries under review.

Sierra Leone

Mr. Howard: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the letters which his Department has received from Sandline's solicitors indicating in each case (i) the date, (ii) the date of the response, (iii) to whom it was sent and (iv) who replied to it. [41726]

Mr. Robin Cook [holding answer 12 May 1998]: S. J. Berwin & Co, acting for Sandline International, wrote to me on 24 April. The Permanent Under-Secretary replied on 1 May. S. J. Berwin & Co also wrote to me on 8 May clarifying a reference in their letter of 24 April.

S. J. Berwin & Co wrote to the Permanent Under-Secretary on 8 May to say that they were releasing their letter of 24 April to the press.

I have also been sent a copy of a letter from S. J. Berwin & Co to the Chairman of Customs and Excise, and the Permanent Under-Secretary has been sent copies of letters to the editors of The Sunday Telegraph and The Observer.

Arms Exports

Mr. Coaker: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress has been made towards an agreed EU Code of Conduct on arms sales; and if he will make a statement. [43865]

Mr. Fatchett: On 25 May, the General Affairs Council reached agreement on the text of an EU Code of Conduct for Arms Exports, which will be formally adopted at a future meeting of the Council. The text is annexed to the Council Conclusions, a copy of which will be placed in the House Library.

Agreement on the Code of Conduct is an important achievement, and fulfils the commitment given by my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary to my. hon. Friend the Member for East Ham (Mr. Timms) on 28 July 1997, Official Report, columns 26–29. The detailed elaboration of the eight EU Common Criteria agreed in 1991 and 1992 is a major step towards the establishment of high common standards for arms exports from all Member States. In addition the mechanism that requires Member States to circulate information on licence refusals and to consult before undercutting another Member State's denial is the first of its kind ever applied by a group of states to their conventional arms exports. It will help to ensure the criteria are applied in a consistent fashion and to produce a level playing field for British companies.

Our efforts to promote responsibility and transparency in conventional arms transfers will not end with agreement on the Code of Conduct. We will continue to take steps in support of these principles at both national and international level. Member States will have the opportunity to review the operation of the Code itself after a year and agree any necessary improvements.

I will make a further statement on the national implementation of the provisions of the Code following its formal adoption by the General Affairs Council.

Colombia

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the recent trends in human rights violations in Colombia; and what representations he has made to the Colombian Government on this issue. [43948]

Mr. Fatchett [holding answer 1 June 1998]: The recent upwards trend in violence in Colombia is of serious concern, as is the increasing number of attacks on human rights workers. We take every opportunity to express our concerns to the Colombian Government. Most recently, as EU Presidency, we made a demarche to the Colombian Government following the murders of two more human rights workers at the end of April. The new British Ambassador will take advantage of his introductory calls to raise again our human rights concerns with the Colombian Government.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received on action being taken to implement the arrest warrants against Fidel and Carlos Castano Gil, in respect of the assassinations of two CINEP human rights workers on 19 May 1997; and if he will make a statement. [43973]

Mr. Fatchett: We have received no representations with regard to the arrest warrants issued against Fidel and Carlos Castano Gil for their part in the murders of the CINEP human rights researchers. Britain, both as EU Presidency and bilaterally, has strongly urged the Colombian Government to pursue the arrest of these people with the utmost vigour.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports he has received on the search of the Justice and Peace Office in Bogota on 13 May by the Colombian Army's Special Anti-Guerrilla Forces. [43946]

Mr. Fatchett [holding answer 1 June 1998]: We understand that the search of the offices of the human rights NGO, Justicia y Paz, was carried out under the supervision of the Colombian Fiscalia, the Prosecution Service. A local NGO has confirmed that the paperwork for the search was in order and that the Fiscalia, a civilian body, stopped the search from progressing to eight other organisations named on the warrant. Officials at the British Embassy in Bogota are in close touch with a number of local NGOs about this issue.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what measures have been taken by the Colombian Government to implement the recommendations made in the report by the High Commissioner for Human Rights at the 54 Session of the UNCHR. [43947]

Mr. Fatchett [holding answer 1 June 1998]: The Colombian Government have taken a number of steps in pursuit of objectives outlined in the recommendations of the UNCHR 54th Session. These include measures to further the peace process, such as authorising a number of Departmental Governors to negotiate regional peace agreements with guerrillas. The armed forces Commander has sent written and verbal instructions to regional commanders to desist from any form of cooperation with paramilitary groups—another recommendation by the UNCHR. The 20th Intelligence Brigade, subject of numerous allegations of human rights violations, has also been disbanded. However, a number of other recommendations made by the High Commissioner for Human Rights are unlikely to be addressed until the new Colombian Government are installed in August. In the meantime, we shall continue to monitor the situation through our Embassy in Bogota and by other means.

Nuclear Tests (South Asia)

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on actions taken to reduce nuclear testing in South Asia following the Indian nuclear test. [43945]

Mr. Tony Lloyd [holding answer 1 June 1998]: As my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary made clear in his statement to the House on 1 June 1998, Official Report, columns 21–22, the UK nationally and through the G8, EU and UN Security Council has exerted and continues to exert strong diplomatic pressure on India to adhere to the CTBT and NPT without conditions, and enter into negotiations on a global treaty to end the production of fissile material for nuclear weapons. We have called upon Pakistan to do the same and made it clear that the best way to reduce tension in the region is to cease nuclear testing.

In addition to issuing EU Presidency statements immediately following the first Indian and Pakistani tests, we recalled our High Commissioners in New Delhi and Islamabad for consultations, and summoned the Indian and Pakistani High Commissioners here. Heads of EU Troika missions made demarches in New Delhi and Islamabad on 12 and 13 May respectively. The UN Security Council issued Presidential statements on 14 and 29 May, strongly deploring the Indian and Pakistani actions. The G8 Heads of Government issued a statement on 18 May condemning the Indian tests. In the wake of the subsequent Pakistani tests we have invited G8 Foreign Ministers to meet in London on 12 June.

The GAC issued a declaration on 25 May calling on India to take a number of arms control and non-proliferation measures. In addition, Member States of the EU have agreed to work for deferral of consideration of International Financial Institution loans to India and to consider further measures should India not accede to the relevant non-proliferation agreements. The UK has additionally suspended certain high-level military visits and is reviewing contacts in the defence field.

We expect comparable measures to be agreed for Pakistan, following their tests.

Palestinian Authority

Mr. Faber: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action he has taken during the United Kingdom presidency of the EU to increase the prosperity of the Palestinian people. [43833]

Mr. Doug Henderson [holding answer 1 June 1998]: The EU remains the single largest donor of aid to the Palestinian Authority, contributing 444 million mecu (about £290 million) in financial assistance to the Palestinian Authority in the period 1993–1998. The UK Presidency is working to ensure that this commitment is maintained in future. At the instigation of the UK, the EU has engaged Israel in a dialogue on ways to improve the Palestinian economy. The Minister of State co-chaired a plenary session of the dialogue during his visit to the region in January.

Dependent Territories

Mr. Gordon Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to review the procedures whereby grant support to the Dependent Territories is administered. [43474]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: We are establishing a new Overseas Territories Department within the FCO which will provide a single focus and a direct point of contact for all our Overseas Territories. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for International Development also plans to establish an Overseas Territories Unit which will administer DFID assistance to Anguilla, the British Virgin Islands, Montserrat, the Turks and Caicos Islands and St. Helena. The Dependent Territories Regional Secretariat in Barbados will be closing later this year.

Mr. Gordon Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received on support for the Turks and Caicos Islands to assist them in dealing with large-scale unauthorised immigration from Haiti; and what response he has made. [43424]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: Following representations from the Turks and Caicos Islands (TCI) Government, HMG contributed £200,000 towards a project managed by the International Organisation for Migration (IOM) to regularise the immigration status of Haitians living in the TCI and to assist with the orderly repatriation of illegal immigrants. Under this project, which ended in April 1998 having achieved its objectives, 2,654 illegal migrants have been returned to Haiti since January 1997 and 973 others have had their immigration validated. Those returned to Haiti have been assisted with relocation expenses, skills training and small business grants. The TCI Department of Immigration has received assistance with training and a computerised migrant management system.

Congo

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he is making to the United Nations regarding the withdrawal of the United Nations investigation team from the Democratic Republic of Congo. [43727]

Mr. Fatchett: The UK and our European Partners fully endorsed the UN Secretary General's decision to withdraw the Investigative Team, although we did so with regret. We believe a thorough and impartial investigation into human rights violations could make a valuable contribution to the process of reconciliation, leading to long term stability, security and economic development in the Great Lakes region and as a whole.

The investigative team has continued its inquiries outside the Democratic Republic of Congo, and is currently drafting a report for the UN Secretary General. On the strength of the report and the Secretary General's recommendations, we will consider what further action might be appropriate.

Ponsonby Rule

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Great Grimsby (Mr. Mitchell), of 13 February 1998, Official Report, column 406, on the Ponsonby rule, if he will provide the same information for those treaties laid before Parliament since 1 February. [43300]

Mr. Tony Lloyd [holding answer 2 June 1998]: A total of 9 treaties subject to the Ponsonby Rule have been laid before Parliament since 1 February 1998. They are listed. The last day of the 21 day period is indicated on the list. These treaties have all been laid with an Explanatory Memorandum (EM) bringing to the attention of Parliament the main features of the treaty with which it is laid.

Protocol to the agreement between the Government of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland and the Government of the Republic of South Africa for the promotion and protection of investments.

Publication reference—South Africa No. 1 (1998) Cm 3857

EM No. 21

Presented to Parliament—11 February 1998

Last date of 21 day period—13 March 1998

The European Charter of Local Self-Government

Publication reference—Miscellaneous No. 1 (1998) Cm 3884

EM No. 22

Presented to Parliament—2 March 1998

Last date of 21 day period—31 March 1998

Agreement between the Government of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland and the Government of the Republic of Trinidad and Tobago concerning mutual assistance in relation to crime

Publication reference—Trinidad and Tobago No. 1 (1998) Cm 3900

EM No. 24

Presented to Parliament—27 March 1998

Last date of 21 day period—7 May 1998

Protocol to the agreement on cooperation and customs union between the European Economic Community and the Republic of San Marino consequent upon the accession of the Republic of Austria, the Republic of Finland and the Kingdom of Sweden to the European Union with Final Act

Publication reference—European Communities No. 1 (1998) Cm 3899

EM No. 23

Presented to Parliament—3 April 1998

Last date of 21 day period—14 May 1998

Protocol to the North Atlantic Treaty on the accession of the Republic of Poland

Publication reference—Miscellaneous No. 2 (1998) Cm 3929

EM No. 25

Presented to Parliament—7 April 1998

Last date of 21 day period—18 May 1998

Protocol to the North Atlantic Treaty on the accession of the Czech Republic

Publication reference—Miscellaneous No. 3 (1998) Cm 3930

EM No. 26

Presented to Parliament—7 April 1998

Last date of 21 day period—18 May 1998

Protocol to the North Atlantic Treaty on the accession of the Republic of Hungary

Publication reference—Miscellaneous No. 4 (1998) Cm 3931

EM No. 27

Presented to Parliament—7 April 1998

Last date of 21 day period—18 May 1998

Agreement between the Government of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland and the Government of the Kingdom of Belgium relating to the transmission of natural gas through a pipeline between the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland and the Kingdom of Belgium

Publication reference—Belgium No. 1 (1998) Cm 3943

EM No. 28

Presented to Parliament—29 April 1998

Last date of 21 day period—9 June 1998

Agreement between the Government of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland and the Government of Japan for cooperation in the peaceful uses of nuclear energy

Publication reference—Japan No. 1 (1998) Cm 3948

EM No. 29

Presented to Parliament—8 May 1998

Last date of 21 day period—18 June 1998.

Iran

Jane Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is Her Majesty's Government's policy on the export of arms to Iran. [44492]

Mr. Fatchett: There has not been any change to current policy, as set out in the answer given by the Minister for State, my hon. Friend the Member for Manchester, Central (Mr. Lloyd), to my hon. Friend the Member for Rugby and Kenilworth (Mr. King) on 28 January 1998, Official Report, columns 273–74. We will not approve licences for any equipment where there is knowledge or reason to suspect that it would go to a military end-user to be used for military purposes.

However, this department has recently approved the issue by the Department of Trade and Industry of a licence for the export of industrial gas turbine parts to Iran for civil end use. This particular industrial engine has been developed from a military engine and is commonly used to drive pumps and electrical generators. The engine is not subject to export control when it is exported as a complete unit. However, when it is broken down into component form, a very small percentage of its parts are unchanged from their original form and, as military components, come within the scope of the UK's arms embargo and are controlled under Part III of Schedule 1 to the Exports of Goods (Control) Order 1994. However, we are satisfied that Iran does not possess any aircraft powered by the original military engine, and that the risk of the components being diverted to use by the Iranian military is minimal. We have therefore approved the export.

Hong Kong Elections

Jane Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment Her Majesty's Government have made of the Hong Kong legislative elections held on 24 May. [44493]

Mr. Fatchett: We welcome the fact that these elections have been held. The high turn-out demonstrates the determination of people in Hong Kong to play a full role in the democratic process. While we retain strong concerns about the framework for the elections, particularly the sharp reduction in the franchise for the functional constituencies, we believe that the conduct of the elections reflects well on the HKSAR Government and the independent Electoral Affairs Commission, which ensured strict adherence to the rules and fair treatment for all candidates.

These elections are a step towards a legislature elected entirely through universal suffrage. We hope that the HKSAR Government will build on this achievement and work towards early realisation of this goal.

Argentina

Jane Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what new exceptions there have been to the arms embargo on Argentina. [44494]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: We have recently granted two exceptions to the embargo, one in respect of the sale of two hunting rifle barrels to a private individual in Argentina, another in respect of the sale of twenty deactivated weapons to an Argentine importer. These represent exceptions but not changes to the embargo.

China

Jane Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what restrictions apply with respect to arms sales to China other than those general criteria announced on 28 July 1997. [44495]

Mr. Fatchett: The EU introduced a ban on arms sales to China on 26 June 1989, but the scope of that ban has, in the absence of agreement on a common interpretation, been left for national interpretation. The UK interprets this ban to include:

lethal weapons such as machine guns, large calibre weapons, bombs, torpedoes, rockets and missiles; specially designed components of the above, and ammunition;

military aircraft and helicopters, vessels of war, armoured fighting vehicles and other such weapons platforms;

any equipment which might be used for internal repression.

All applications are considered case by case in the light of these criteria as the overall criteria governing defence exports announced by my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary on 28 July 1997, Official Report, columns 26–29.

St. Helena

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he expects to change the Governor of St. Helena. [44059]

Mr. Fatchett: We expect the next Governor of St. Helena to take up his or her appointment in 1999, when the present Governor's tour of duty is due to end.

Ascension Island

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs under what terms and conditions (a) the BBC and (b) the United States of America operate on Ascension. [44060]

Mr. Fatchett: The BBC, which runs a World Service relay station on Ascension, and other organisations on Ascension operate there on the basis that they meet the costs of the Administration and the cost of providing common services. They do this by means of an annual contribution to the common services budget prepared by Ascension Islands Services JV, the main supplier of common services. The BBC is the joint owner, with Cable and Wireless, of Ascension Island Services.

The terms and conditions covering the presence of the United States of America on Ascension are set out in a series of bilateral Agreements and Exchanges of Notes, between Her Majesty's government and the Government of the United States of America. Copies are available in the Libraries of the House.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Bees

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much his Department plans to spend on research into the control of the varroa parasite in each of the next three years. [43398]

Mr. Rooker: Committed expenditure on research into the control of the varroa parasite over the next three years is as follows:

1998–99: £215,109

1999–2000: £240,118

2000–01: £122,813.

Requirements for further research will be considered as these projects near completion.

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what subsidies under the Common Agricultural Policy are available to bee-keepers; and if he will make a statement; [43394]

(2) how much money he received from the European Commission to support bee-keeping in the United Kingdom in each of the last five years; [43400]

(3) what regulations cover the distribution of funds allocated by the European Commission to bee-keeping. [43402]

Mr. Rooker: Council Regulation 1221/97 to improve the production and marketing of honey provides for reimbursement of up to 50 per cent. of Member States' expenditure on certain measures including technical assistance to bee-keepers and control of varroa and related diseases. The main aim of the Regulation is to alleviate the burden on industry caused by varroa. Commission Regulation 2300/97 (as amended) lays down the detailed rules to implement 1221/97.

The UK hopes to receive around 680,000 ecu (roughly £474,000) for 1997–98. This is the first year such funding has been available.

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what the funding allocated by the European Commission in 1997 to support bee-keeping in the United Kingdom will be spent on; [43401]

(2) how much of the funding allocated by the European Commission in 1997 to support bee-keeping in the United Kingdom has been distributed to bee-keepers in (a) the United Kingdom and (b) Scotland. [43403]

Mr. Rooker: Funds requested from the European Commission will be used partly to finance the Governments' bee health programme. In particular, this will cover inspection and testing arrangements for varroa, training and advice on bee husbandry and research and development. No funds have yet been received.

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what representations his Department has received concerning the funding allocated by the European Commission in 1997 to support bee-keeping in the United Kingdom; [43395]

(2) what representations his Department has received concerning the use of public funds to research the varroa parasite. [43396]

Mr. Rooker: We have received a number of representations on these issues.

Animal Welfare

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if it is his policy to seek to ensure that EU member states can introduce restrictions on exports in order to protect the health and welfare of animals. [42985]

Mr. Morley: I see no scope at present for a new initiative on these lines. Such restrictions have already been tested in the courts.

Chicken Imports

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what controls exist on the importation of chickens which have been fed on meat and bone meal. [43218]

Mr. Rooker: The UK is the only EC country to have prohibited the feeding of mammalian meat and bone meal (MBM) to all farmed livestock, including poultry. MBM produced to EC rendering standards can still be fed to non-ruminants in other Member States. All poultry must be imported into the UK in compliance with detailed animal health rules. These rules do not include any provisions directly relating to the feed given to the poultry in the country of origin.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the maximum percentage of water allowed in chickens imported for sale. [43219]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 2 June 1998]: For frozen whole chickens the standards laid down in the EC Poultrymeat Market Standards Regulations must be met by both domestic production and imports. These require that levels do not exceed the minium amounts technically unavoidable for water absorption during processing. These values are dependent upon the method of chilling and which of the two methods of analyses laid down in the Regulations are used. For the drip test method up to 1.5% of the weight of an air chilled chicken may be water; 3.3% for air spray chilling; and 5.1% for immersion chilling. For the chemical test, the weights are 0.1% air chilling; 2.0% for air spray chilling; and 4.5% for immersion chilling. If these limits are exceeded, the chicken must be labelled 'Water content exceeds EEC limit'.

Following the recent adoption of an amendment to the Council Regulation on poultrymeat marketing, the Commission is starting work on detailed rules on chicken cuts. Meanwhile the provisions of the Food Labelling Regulations apply which require that added water exceeding 5% of the finished product should be declared in the ingredients list.

Small Businesses

Mr. Page: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the regulations that have been removed or amended to help small businesses since 1 May 1997. [42782]

Mr. Morley: Between 1 May 1997 and 30 April 1998 one Statutory Instrument, the Potatoes Originating in The Netherlands Regulations 1997, resulted in a lower cost than under the previous regulations and another Statutory Instrument, the Animals and Animal Products (Examination for Residues and Maximum Residue Limits) Regulations 1997, in part led to reduced costs, while the Welfare of Animals (Transport) Order 1997, inter alia, simplified the legislative framework by removing 15 Statutory Instruments. These instruments were not targeted on businesses of a particular size but many affected are small ones. In addition, administrative changes to scheme forms and procedures were introduced to reduce the burden of paperwork on farmers.

Gluten-free Food

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to require that all gluten-free food products are so labelled. [43647]

Mr. Rooker: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave to him on 21 May 1998, Official Report, columns 509–10. The Government have no plans to make "gluten free" a compulsory statement on the labels of gluten free food products.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Vaccine Damage

Dr. Tony Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what would be the total cost of making an interim payment of £100,000 to all the vaccine-damaged children who received an original payment of £10,000. [43287]

Mr. Denham: The maximum total cost of making a payment of £100,000 to all recipients of the original £10,000 would be £79.5 million.

Income Support

Mr. Stinchcombe: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many applications for income support have been refused by reference to the habitual residence test in the last 12 months broken down by (a) ethnic background and (b) nationality. [43282]

Mr. Keith Bradley: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is set out in the table.

Number of income support claimants who failed the habitual residence test between May 1997 and April 1998

Categories	Number
European economic area nationals	933
United Kingdom nationals	2,891
Other nationals	973
Total	4,797

Household Income

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what proportion of households with children in Wales have a household income below the United Kingdom average. [43596]

Mr. Keith Bradley: It is estimated that in 1995/96, just over seven in ten households with children in Wales had a household income below the Great Britain average.

Notes:

1. A child is defined as an individual aged under 16 or an unmarried 16 to 18 year old on a course up to and including 'A' level standard.
2. The FRS does not include data for Northern Ireland and so the reply uses Great Britain average income and not the UK average income.
3. This figure relates to both the before and after housing costs measures, regardless of whether or not the self-employed are included.

Source:

The data are taken from Households Below Average Income (HBAI) based on the Family Resources Survey (FRS). The 1995/96 financial year is the latest period for which data are available.

Widowers

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if the Government will review the implications of the Human Rights Bill [Lords] for gender discrimination against widowers within the social security system; and if he will make a statement. [43847]

Mr. Denham: I refer my hon. Friend to the written answer I gave to the hon. Member for Edinburgh, West (Mr. Gorrie) on 23 June 1997, Official Report, column 415.

Means-tested Benefits

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people are currently dependent on means-tested benefits; and how many were in (a) 1978–79, (b) 1979–80, (c) 1981–82, (d) 1982–83, (e) 1986–87, (f) 1987–88, (g) 1991–92, (h) 1992–93, (i) 1996–97 and (j) 1997–98. [43919]

Mr. Keith Bradley: The information is not available in the format requested. Such data as are available are set out in the tables.

Beneficiaries of means tested benefits

Year	Supplementary Benefit[1]	Family Income Supplement[1]
1978–79	4,598,000	313,000
1979–80	4,370,000	n/a
1981–82	6,121,000	382,000
1982–83	7,070,000	526,000
1986–87	8,291,000	723,000
1987–88	8,205,000	794,000

[1] Family Credit replaced Family Income Supplement in April 1988. Income Support replaced Supplementary Benefit in April 1988

Beneficiaries of one or more means tested benefit

Year	Beneficiaries in benefit units with one or more means-tested benefit
1991–92	13,650,000
1992–93	14,550,000
1996–97	15,070,000

Notes:

1. Means tested benefits are Income Support, Income based Jobseeker's Allowance, Family Credit, Disability Working Allowance, Housing Benefit and Council Tax Benefit.
2. Beneficiaries are defined as the claimant, their partner and any dependants.
3. Figures for one or more means tested benefit are rounded to the nearest ten thousand. All other figures are rounded to the nearest thousand.
4. Figures on one or more means-tested benefit are for May of each year and refer to benefit units, which may be a single person or a couple. Family Income Supplement data is given as at December 1978 for 1978–79, and April of each year thereafter. Figures are not held for 1979–80. Supplementary Benefit figures are for November in 1978–79 and 1979–80, December for 1981–82 and 1982–83, February 1986 for 1986–87, and May 1987 for 1987–88.
5. Overlap between benefits has been taken into account.
6. Adult dependants are defined as the partner of the claimant.
7. Family Income Supplement figures include estimates. Housing Benefit/Council Tax Benefit figures include estimates due to the data collection procedures in Scotland.
8. Disability Working Allowance was introduced in April 1992.
9. Income-based Jobseeker's Allowance replaced Income Support for the unemployed from October 1996.
10. Council Tax Benefit replaced Community Charge Benefit in April 1993.
11. Housing Benefit and Council Tax Benefit figures exclude cases where there is no entitlement because of non-dependant deductions.
12. Council Tax Benefit cases do not include second adult rebate cases.
13. Figures are not available on all means-tested benefits for 1997 therefore no figure is quoted for 1997–98.
14. Data on Housing Benefit and previous schemes providing financial assistance with domestic rent and rates cannot be broken down prior to 1988. Prior to 1983 financial assistance with rent and rates was provided under two separate schemes-Supplementary Benefit and the Local Authority rent rebate allowance schemes. Data on the Local Authority schemes are not available.
15. Samples sizes:
Supplementary Benefit: Supplementary pension cases 1 in 200;
Supplementary Allowance cases 1 in 50;
Income Support: 1 per cent. up to and including 1992, 5 per cent. thereafter;
Family Income Supplement: 10 per cent.;
Family Credit: 5 per cent.;
Disability Working Allowance: 100 per cent.;
Housing Benefit & Council Tax Benefit: 1 per cent.
16. n/a denotes not available.

Source:

1. Supplementary Benefit Annual Statistical Inquiries, 1978, 1979, 1981, 1982, 1986 and 1987.
2. Income Support Statistics Quarterly Inquiries, May 1991, May 1992 and May 1996.
3. Family Credit Statistics Quarterly Inquiry, November 1997.
4. Disability Working Allowance 100 per cent. count of claims.
5. Housing Benefit Management Information Statistics, annual 1 per cent. sample inquiries without Income Support taken at the end of May in each year given. Social Security Statistics, 1978, 1981, 1982, 1987 and 1988.

War Pensioners

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what changes have been made to the granting of compensation to war pensioners suffering from hearing difficulties since October 1996; and what plans she has for further changes. [43917]

Mr. Denham: There have been no changes to war pensions legislation on hearing loss since January 1993. The approach to the assessment of service related noise-induced sensorineural hearing loss for war pensions purposes has, however, been changed to bring it in line with the current scientific understanding of the subject. This change in approach took place in December 1996 and was based on the current understanding that the combination of sensorineural hearing losses due to noise and age are not more than additive. Claims were previously assessed on the basis that losses due to noise were more than additive, which resulted in assessments for service related noise-induced sensorineural hearing loss being increased with time to reflect the supposed interaction with age related hearing loss.

The current understanding has been confirmed by independent experts who reviewed the scientific evidence at the request of my noble Friend, the Baroness Hollis of Heigham. The review team also recommended that the matter be reviewed again in a year. My noble Friend has therefore asked the medical policy adviser to review the position and report to her in February 1999.

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what changes have been made to rent allowances for war pensioners since October 1996; and what plans she has for further changes. [43916]

Mr. Denham: No changes have been made to this allowance since October 1996 apart from the uprating in line with the annual increase in the retail price index from April 1997 and April 1998. There are no plans for any changes to this allowance.

Under the War Pensions Scheme, a rent allowance may be payable in respect of the death of a member of the armed forces to a widow, widower or unmarried dependant who lived as the spouse of the member.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Roy: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will publish for each Great Britain local authority, a breakdown, for each of the last five years, of housing benefit overpayment, in terms of (a) numbers, (b) amounts for each category of claimant and fraudulent errors and (c) (b) expressed as a percentage of (a). [41653]

Mr. Field: The information requested can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Incapacity Benefit

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the average time taken to deal with claims for incapacity benefit submitted by people in receipt of the jobseekers' allowance in Warrington, North constituency in the latest period for which figures are available. [43386]

Mr. Denham: The administration of Incapacity Benefit is a matter for Peter Mathison, Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Helen Jones, dated 2 June 1998:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking what is the average time taken to deal with claims for Incapacity Benefit (IB) submitted by people in receipt of jobseeker's allowance (JSA) in the Warrington North constituency.

Information is not available in the form requested. Such information as is available relates to the average time taken to process all claims for IB. We are unable to identify claims made by customers transferring from JSA.

The following table compares the national average in days for actual clearance times for IB claims with that for the Benefits Agency's North Cheshire District, which includes the Warrington North parliamentary constituency, during the three month period ending March 1998.

	North Cheshire	National
January 1998	10.0	12.9
February 1998	12.1	10.1
March 1998	9.0	10.1
Average	10.4	11.0

Prior to January 1998, Districts were not obliged to hold details of average actual clearance times and many Districts, including North Cheshire, did not record this information.

I hope that this is helpful.

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people in Warrington, North in receipt of jobseeker's allowance have submitted claims for incapacity benefit over the past 12 months; and what percentage of those claims have been disallowed because the applicant had insufficient national insurance contributions. [43387]

Mr. Denham: The administration of Jobseeker's Allowance and Incapacity Benefit is a matter for Peter Mathison, Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Helen Jones, dated 2 June 1998:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking how many people in Warrington North in receipt of Job Seekers' Allowance (JSA) have submitted claims for Incapacity Benefit (IB) over the past 12 months; and what percentage of those claims have been disallowed because the applicant had insufficient national insurance contributions.

The information is not available in the form requested. Such information as is available is provided in the following tables. Please note that the areas covered by the Employment Services and Benefits Agency in Warrington are not co-terminus.

Table One: Flows from the Jobseekers Allowance (JSA) claimant count to Incapacity Benefit (IB)

September 96 to August 97	Flow
Great Britain	254,500
Warrington Employment Services	760

Notes:

Flows from JSA to IB are defined as all claims where a claim for IB is made within 28 days of ending a spell of JSA. Claims are also counted as flows when spells of IB and JSA overlap by up to seven days. The Claimant Count data is taken from the joint unemployment and Vacancies On-line System (JUVOS) Cohort file IB Link, which is a database consisting of a 5% sample of computerised claims for unemployment related benefits based on the customers National Insurance number. This count excludes a small number of clerically processed cases.

Table Two: IB claims allowed and disallowed (due to contribution conditions)

September 96 to August 97	Total Incapacity Benefit claims allowed (excluding Statutory Sick Pay cases)	Total Incapacity Benefit claims disallowed at outset (excluding Statutory Sick Pay cases)	Percentage of total claims disallowed due to insufficient National Insurance contributions (excluding Statutory Sick Pay cases)
Great Britain	418,920	447,349	52%
Warrington Benefits Agency office	3,573	3,217	47%

Notes:

Data source is the 100% scan of the Benefit Computer system and it therefore excludes a small number of clerically processed cases.

I hope this is helpful.

Pension Provision Group

Mr. Pond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when she will publish the report of the independent Pension Provision Group, chaired by Tom Ross. [44497]

Ms Harman: The Group's Report will be published tomorrow, Thursday 4 June. Copies will be placed in the library. A summary of the Report's findings will be issued to all hon. Members.

The Pension Provision Group was set up last summer as part of the Government's wider Pensions Review, to provide an independent analysis of current and future patterns of pension provision. Their Report provides a clear and authoritative statement which will serve as an important background document for the pensions Green Paper which will be published later in the year.

I am grateful to all members of the Group for the time, commitment and expertise they provided and particularly to Tom Ross for his chairmanship.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Information

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if his Department operates a monitoring exercise of persistent inquirers for information. [42633]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 19 May 1998]: From April 1997 to March 1998 the DfEE's Public Inquiry Unit handled over 150,000 telephone inquiries and over 25,000 items of correspondence.

The Department has no monitoring exercise of persistent inquiries for information. All requests for information are handled in line with the requirements of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information: second edition (1997) and the 6 Whitehall Standards. Procedures in place are outlined in 'Departmental Openness', DfEE's guidance on the Code. The guidance is comprehensive and is available to all staff. Some parts of the Department may have established named individuals as a first point of contact for frequent callers to facilitate an effective and efficient service.

New Deal (Young People)

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many people have had their benefits sanctioned under the New Deal for the Young Unemployed to date; what reasons have been given for the sanctioning; how many people his Department expects to sanction over the current financial year; and if he will make statement. [42569]

Mr. Andrew Smith [holding answer 20 May 1998]: Since the start of New Deal, around 170 cases have been referred to Independent Adjudication and approximately 35 sanctions have been applied. Main reasons for sanctions are failure to attend adviser interviews and leaving options early. New Deal is a client driven initiative and there are no estimates or targets for sanctions.

Rural Schools (Closures)

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment by what mechanisms his Department is informed of proposed closures of rural schools; if local education authorities are required to inform him of proposals to close such schools; what criteria he will use to assess the viability of such schools; and if he will make a statement. [43486]

Mr. Byers: If a local education authority proposes to close a school, it must publish a statutory proposal and send a copy of the published proposal to the Secretary of State. In the case of proposals to close a rural school, we announced in February that it was our policy to give notice to the local education authority that the proposals would need to be decided by the Secretary of State. In assessing the viability of the school, we will take into account the advice of Ofsted in relation to the standard of education provided at the school, and consider other relevant factors, including the capacity of the school and the projected demand for places. We shall, of course, take account of all relevant factors in reaching a decision but the presumption will be against closure, and proposals will therefore be approved only when we are convinced that this is the best option.

Grammar Schools (Admissions)

Mr. Salter: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what arrangements will be made, under the School Standards and Framework Bill, for the conduct of parental ballots on the admission arrangements of grammar schools. [44431]

Mr. Byers: The Department has today issued draft regulations for consultation which detail how parents will be able to petition and ballot over the future of grammar schools' selective admission arrangements. We are issuing at the same time the associated draft order designating grammar schools. Copies of the draft regulations and order are being sent to all grammar schools, all local education authorities, and a number of representative national organisations, seeking comments by 31 July. Copies have also been placed in the Library.

Student Loans

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on the second competition to sell more of the student loan portfolio. [44432]

Dr. Howells: I have today announced the launch of a second competition to sell student loan debt. This is the continuation of a policy first announced in September 1996, and follows the successful completion of the first sale in March 1998 when NatWest Markets was the chosen bidder for a loan portfolio in the region of £1 billion.

My right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer said in his statement of 10 July 1997, Official Report, columns 607–08, that we would continue the policy of student loan debt sales, underlining our commitment to developing a wide range of public-private partnerships which involve a transfer of risk to the private sector. This sale transfers to the private sector much of the risk of loans defaulting. It also helps us to meet our pledge to work within the spending plans already announced for the first two years of our term.

We have appointed the merchant bank N. M. Rothschild and Sons and the commercial lawyers Lovell White Durrant as advisers to the sale. It makes sense to do so as they also acted as advisers to the first debt sale and have extensive knowledge and experience of these types of transactions. They will assist us in running a vigorous competition and help ensure the participation of some of the world's most prestigious financial institutions so that we obtain the most competitive bid possible.

We aim to sell loans of a similar value or greater than in the first sale. All the loans sold will have been made under the current scheme. None of the new income contingent loans available from the beginning of the 1998–99 academic year will be involved.

Playgroups

Mr. Dawson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what support he plans to make available to playgroups in the current financial year. [43422]

Ms Estelle Morris [holding answer 1 June 1998]: I refer my hon. Friend to my reply to the hon. Member for Runnymede and Weybridge (Mr. Hammond) on 12 May 1998, Official Report, column 86. In addition, pre-schools and playgroups have benefited from the extra £6 million for childcare places announced by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State on 6 May, and the Pre-School Learning Alliance will receive a grant of £1.6 million for training and other support for pre-schools.

SCOTLAND

Consultation Papers

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the consultation papers published since 1 May 1997 giving the date of publication, closing date for submissions and the number of respondents. [42253]

Mr. Dewar [holding answer 1 June 1998]: The Scottish Office and Associated Departments have issued a total of 24 consultation papers since 1 Mary 1997, as summarised in the table.

	Number
The Scottish Office
Agriculture, Environment and Fisheries Department	151
Constitution Group	1
Department of Health	6
Development Department	36
Education and Industry Department	17
Finance Group	1
Home Department	26
Executive Agencies
Scottish Fisheries Protection Agency	1
Student Awards Agency for Scotland	2

A comprehensive list has been deposited in the House Library.

Prestwick Airport

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much money from public funds has been allocated to Prestwick Airport since BAA sold it in 1992. [42853]

Mr. McLeish [holding answer 19 May 1998]: The following amounts have been allocated to Prestwick Airport from public funds since 1992:

Enterprise Ayrshire

£974,000: environmental improvements to airport surrounds/car parks (includes money for works which were not of direct benefit to the operation of the airport itself);

£426,000: contribution to link between railway station and airport; and

£97,000: contribution to freight development activity including consultancy/market feasibility studies.

Approval has also been given for funding of up to £1.5 million in relation to the development of airfreight facilities. No sum has yet been paid.

Strathclyde Passenger Transport/Strathclyde Regional Council

£500,000: contribution to railway station.

European Regional Development Fund

£367,033: contribution to railway station; and

£63,260: contribution to airport approach radar.

Regional Selective Assistance

£240,000: contribution by October 1994 to acquisition and operation of Prestwick Airport.

Other assistance

Other local authority assistance was provided in the form of loans/shares. These have all been repaid/redeemed for the same amount.

Special Advisers

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many special advisers, political advisers and other political appointees are working in his Department; and what was the position in the last full year of the last Government. [43331]

Mr. Dewar: There are currently three Special Advisers in my Department. In the last full year of the previous administration there were two.

Smoking

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what percentage of teenage (a) boys and (b) girls in Scotland was smoking tobacco (i) in 1988 and (ii) at the most recent date for which figures are available. [44021]

Mr. Galbraith: The information requested is detailed in the table. The most recent year for which figures are available is 1996.

Percentage of teenage smokers in Scotland by sex: 1988 and 1996

Percentage

	1988	1996
Boys
Regular smokers	10	14
Occasional smokers	4	8
Girls
Regular smokers	14	14
Occasional smokers	6	9

Source:
Social Survey Division of the Office for National Statistics

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what the estimated gross cost of anti-smoking campaigns in Scotland aimed at children and young people has been since 1988; and what assessment he has made of the impact of the campaigns on teenage (a) boys and (b) girls. [44020]

Mr. Galbraith: Since its inception in 1991, the main responsibility for mounting national anti-smoking campaigns has rested with the Health Education Board for Scotland (HEBS)—information on expenditure prior to that is not held centrally. Details of expenditure in this area since 1991–92 are set out in the table, which shows the total amount spent on all anti-smoking activities and the proportion attributable to the teenage population (many of the campaigns are not targeted at any specific age group).

Expenditure by HEBS on anti-smoking campaigns aimed at teenagers since its inception

£

Year	Total expenditure on smoking (actual)	Expenditure attributable to teenage smoking
1991–92	431,020	Not available
1992–93	2,254,513	993,000

Expenditure by HEBS on anti-smoking campaigns aimed at teenagers since its inception

£

Year	Total expenditure on smoking (actual)	Expenditure attributable to teenage smoking
1993–94	1,469,816	883,000
1994–95	790,424	432,000
1995–96	851,616	341,000
1996–97	702,077	270,000
1997–98	743,504	330,000
1998–99	[1]708,000	236,000

[1] Intended

Activities and outputs by HEBS are subject to extensive developmental research and are implemented only if the approaches in question have been proven to be effective. Activities are also the subject of post-implementation evaluation to confirm that the message has been communicated successfully. The relatively high response rate to the HEBs Smokeline by teenagers suggests that the messages are being received and responded to. There has been no gender-based assessment by HEBS of the impact of its campaigns on teenagers.

European Structural Funds

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what the costs were in each year since 1990 of administering European Structural Fund programmes in Scotland. [43843]

Mr. Macdonald: The information is set out in the table.

Expenditure £ million

Financial year	The Scottish Office[1]	Programme Executives[2]	Objective 3 Sector Managers[3]
1990–91	0.285	nil	nil
1991–92	[4]0.409	nil	nil
1992–93	[4]0.573	0.134	nil
1993–94	[4]0.788	0.233	nil
1994–95	[4]1.114	0.541	0.119
1995–96	1.045	1.098	0.486
1996–97	1.005	1.449	0.493
1997–98	0.965	1.528	0.328

[1] The Scottish Office: Implementing Authority responsibility and programme management for three 5b Programmes in Borders, North and West Grampian and Rural Stirling and Upland Tayside

[2] Programme Executives: Responsibility for implementation of Highlands and Islands Objective 1, Eastern and Western Scotland Objective 2, and Dumfries and Galloway Objective 5b Programmes

[3] Objective 3: Organisations contracted to undertake certain implementation activities for Objective 3 in Scotland (Scottish Enterprise; Scottish Council for Voluntary Organisations; Further Education College Sector for Scotland; and Convention of Scottish Local Authorities)

[4] For these years the expenditure includes work carried out on general European issues. It is not possible to identify costs relating solely to Structural Funds activities.

Royal Deeside Partnership

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many requests he has received to meet the Royal Deeside Partnership; and if he will make a statement. [43210]

Mr. Wilson [holding answer 1 June 1998]: None.

Education Expenditure

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was his Department's budget for primary and secondary education (i) in cash terms and (ii) in real terms in 1998–99 prices and (iii) as a percentage of Scottish gross domestic product in each year since 1978–79; and how much was spent per (a) primary and (b) secondary pupil in Scotland in (1) cash terms and (2) real terms, in 1998–99 prices, in each of these years. [43391]

Mr. Dewar [holding answer 2 June 1998]: Direct expenditure by The Scottish Office on the education of school pupils in public sector schools is limited to grants made available to Jordanhill School, a grant-aided school; and Dornoch Academy and St. Mary's Episcopal Primary School, which are both self-governing schools. The annual recurrent grant for these schools in financial year 1997–98 totalled £3.283 million.

Details of actual expenditure per primary and secondary pupil in local authority schools in Scotland are given in the table. Financial year 1996–97 is the latest year for which information is currently available. The figures, which are derived from local authority financial returns, do not include the cost of home to school transport, school meals, education authority central administration costs and loan charges.

Net current expenditure per pupil in Scotland

£

Year	Outturn prices		1998–99 prices
	Primary	Secondary	Primary	Secondary
1978–79	409	698	1,328	2,267
1979–80	488	811	1,358	2,256
1980–81	636	1,021	1,496	2,401
1981–82	746	1,165	1,600	2,498
1982–83	816	1,266	1,633	2,534
1983–84	877	1,366	1,678	2,613
1984–85	913	1,466	1,663	2,670
1985–86	958	1,562	1,654	2,697
1986–87	1,036	1,764	1,736	2,957
1987–88	1,143	1,996	1,819	3,176
1988–89	1,247	2,263	1,860	3,375
1989–90	1,385	2,496	1,931	3,480
1990–91	1,508	2,683	1,947	3,463
1991–92	1,633	2,834	1,982	3,439
1992–93	1,766	2,914	2,057	3,393
1993–94	1,773	2,846	2,006	3,221
1994–95	1,797	2,874	2,003	3,204
1995–96	1,854	2,942	2,012	3,192
1996–97[1]	[1]1,846	[1]2,937	[1]1,949	[1]3,101

[1] Provisional figures

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was (a) the standard spending assessment and (b) actual spending per pupil in (1) primary and (2) secondary education in (i) 1978–79, (ii) 1979–80, (iii) 1986–87, (iv) 1987–88, (v) 1996–97 and (vi) 1997–98 for Scotland as a whole and each local authority. [43900]

Mr. Dewar: The term Standard Spending Assessment reflects arrangements in England. The equivalent in Scotland is the Grant Aided Expenditure Assessment. GAEs are available only from financial year 1986–87 but not all of the components of the Education GAE are in a form which identifies separately primary and secondary education. Information on each Scottish local authority's GAE assessment for all services, including all relevant Education sub-services, is published by The Scottish Office annually in "Grant-Aided Expenditure" (the Green Book).

Details of actual expenditure for the years requested (except for 1997–98 which is not yet available) are given in the tables. Table 1 reflects the former local authority structure in Scotland, and table 2 the unitary structure which came into effect in 1996–97. The figures, which are derived from local authority financial returns, do not include the cost of home to school transport, school meals, education authority central administration costs, and loan charges.

Table 1—net current expenditure per pupil

£

Region	1978–79		1979–80		1986–87		1987–88
	Primary	Secondary	Primary	Secondary	Primary	Secondary	Primary	Secondary
Borders	448	601	542	726	1,091	1,601	1,170	1,777
Central	384	676	447	776	961	1,644	1,082	1,894
Dumfries and Galloway	365	682	456	798	946	1,712	1,071	1,971
Fife	412	675	486	782	1,017	1,705	1,136	1,992
Grampian	407	730	508	835	1,021	1,724	1,101	1,939
Highland	n/a	n/a	n/a	n/a	1,029	1,618	1,169	1,866
Lothian	421	722	507	880	1,030	1,844	1,109	2,044
Strathclyde	413	697	487	795	1,059	1,781	1,163	2,008
Tayside	374	677	450	812	981	1,766	1,100	2,029
Orkney	565	658	731	820	1,249	2,007	1,565	2,125
Shetland	407	901	543	1,151	1,391	2,503	1,551	2,874
Eilean Siar (Western Isles)	486	840	570	988	1,079	2,121	1,402	2,410
Scotland	409	698	488	811	1,036	1,764	1,143	1,996

Table 2—net current expenditure per pupil

£

Council	1996–97 (provisional)
	Primary	Secondary
Aberdeen City	1,805	2,971
Aberdeenshire	1,857	2,759
Angus	1,799	2,835
Argyll and Bute	2,382	3,003
Clackmannanshire	1,761	2,932
Dumfries and Galloway	1,766	2,905
Dundee City	1,793	3,142
East Ayrshire	1,820	2,747
East Dunbartonshire	1,659	2,599
East Lothian	1,764	2,923
East Renfrewshire	1,571	2,611
Edinburgh City	1,774	3,011
Falkirk	1,755	2,751
Fife	1,754	2,674
Glasgow City	2,007	3,322
Highland	1,966	3,135
Inverclyde	1,780	2,844
Midlothian	1,882	2,880
Moray	1,513	2,799
North Ayrshire	1,750	2,776
North Lanarkshire	1,836	2,854
Perth and Kinross	1,750	2,751
Renfrewshire	1,785	2,909
Scottish Borders	1,896	3,039
South Ayrshire	1,723	2,780
South Lanarkshire	1,893	2,863
Stirling	1,947	2,987
West Dunbartonshire	1,912	2,833
West Lothian	1,830	2,945
Orkney	2,711	3,778
Shetland	2,497	5,777
Eilean Siar (Western Isles)	2,531	4,553
Scotland	1,846	2,937

NHS Trusts (Expenditure)

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the value of capital expenditure (i) in real terms, (ii) in cash terms and (iii) as a percentage of total NHS expenditure in Scotland undertaken by National Health Service trusts in (a) 1991–92, (b) 1992–93, (c) 1993–94, (d) 1994–95, (e) 1995–96, (f) 1996–97 and (g) 1997–98. [43905]

Mr. Galbraith: The information requested is set out in the table.

	Real terms £000	Cash terms £000	Percentage of total NHS expenditure
1991–92	0	0	0
1992–93	15,429	13,596	0.3
1993–94	85,611	77,632	1.9
1994–95	166,678	153,420	3.6
1995–96	223,358	211,296	4.8
1996–97	167,091	162,698	3.7
1997–98	123,948	123,948	3.1

Executive Search Agencies

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much his Department has spent in (a) real and (b) cash terms on executive search agencies for appointments to non-departmental bodies in each year since 1991–92, broken down by non-departmental body. [43914]

Mr. Dewar: The information is as follows:

£

Body	Expenditure Cash terms	Expenditure Real terms
1994–95
Water Authorities	38,590	41,814
1995–96
Scottish Homes	7,159	7,548
1996–97
Crofters Commission	6,462	6,618
Scottish Homes	7,339	7,516
Royal Botanic Garden	6,462	6,618
Macaulay Land Use Research Institute / Scottish Crop Research Institute	12,995	13,309
Caledonian MacBrayne	6,462	6,618
1998–99
Royal Botanic Garden	7,352	7,352

There was no significant expenditure in the other years covered by the Question.

Standard Grade Examinations

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many 16-year-olds gained five standard grades in each year since 1993. [43897]

Mr. Dewar: Information on presentations and awards at Standard Grade is held for school year cohorts and this does not always correspond with pupil age. The tables show how many pupils in S4 were presented for five or more Standard Grade examinations in each year since 1993 and how many S4 pupils gained five or more Standard Grade awards in each year since 1993 at levels 1–3.

S4 Pupils presented for five or more Standard Grades

1993 : 54,897

1994 : 55,698

1995 : 60,483

1996 : 62,097

1997 : 60,871

S4 Pupils who gained five or more Standard Grades at levels 1–3

1993 : 28,472

1994 : 30,665

1995 : 33,553

1996 : 34,884

1997 : 35,489.

NHS Administration Costs

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what were the total costs associated with administration in the NHS in Scotland (1) in real terms, (2) in cash terms and (3) as a percentage of total NHS expenditure in Scotland in (a) 1978–79, (b) 1979–80, (c) 1982–83, (d) 1983–84, (e) 1986–87, (f) 1987–88, (g) 1991–92, (h) 1992–93, (i) 1993–94, (j) 1994–95, (k) 1995–96, (l) 1996–97 and (m) 1997–98. [43906]

Mr. Galbraith: The information requested is set out in the table.

Year	Real terms (£000)	Cash terms (£000)	Percentage of total NHS expenditure
1978–79	240,722	78,266	9.7
1979–80	182,601	69,288	7.3
1982–83	243,025	128,191	7.4
1983–84	238,283	131,518	7.1
1986–87	293,124	184,639	8.9
1987–88	287,049	190,437	8.4
1991–92	390,592	339,839	9.3
1992–93	390,469	353,996	9.1
1993–94	429,121	400,344	9.7
1994–95	493,781	467,611	10.8
1995–96	500,471	486,964	11.1
1996–97	490,077	490,077	11.2
1997–98	n/a	n/a	n/a

n/a = not available

The introduction of capital charges in 1991–92, to reflect the costs of using capital resources, is reflected in that and subsequent years' expenditure.

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much was paid (i) in real terms, (ii) in cash terms and (iii) as a percentage of total NHS expenditure in Scotland to NHS trust chairs and non-executive directors in each year since 1991–92. [43912]

Mr. Galbraith: The information is set out in the table.

Year	Real terms (£000)	Cash terms (£000)	Percentage of total NHS expenditure
1992–93
Chairman	38	36	0.001
Non executive directors	77	70	0.002
1993–94
Chairman	330	308	0.008
Non executive directors	799	745	0.018
1994–95
Chairman	754	714	0.017
Non executive directors	1,778	1,684	0.039
1995–96
Chairman	879	855	0.020
Non executive directors	2,047	1,992	0.045
1996–97
Chairman	854	854	0.020
Non executive directors	1,982	1,982	0.045

Departmental Publicity

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the total expenditure in (a) real and (b) cash terms of his Department and its agencies on publicity for (1) 1996–97 and (2) 1997–98; what estimate he has made of such expenditure for 1998–99; and if he will break these figures down to indicate expenditure on (i) advertising and (ii) press and public relations. [43931]

Mr. Dewar: The details are:

£ million

	Cash terms	Real terms
1996–97
Advertising	4.8	5.0
Press and public relations[1]	1.8	1.9
Total	6.6	6.9
1997–98
Advertising	3.7	3.8
Press and public relations[1]	1.8	1.9
Total	5.5	5.7

[1] These figures are the running costs of The Scottish Office Information Directorate, the Press Office of Historic Scotland and the Communications Branch of the Scottish Prison Service

Advertising budgets for 1998–99 have not been finalised. The total estimated running costs for The Scottish Office Information Directorate, Historic Scotland and the Scottish Prison Service for 1998–99 is £2m.

Nursery Education

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) how many four-year olds were in (a) private, (b) voluntary and (c) local authority pre-school provision in each (i) pilot area of the nursery voucher scheme and (ii) local authority area in each year since 1995–96; [43892]

(2) how many (a) parents and (b) eligible children in each (i) pilot nursery area of the nursery voucher scheme and (ii) local authority area have not taken up the entitlement to apply for a voucher in each year since 1995–96; [43893]

(3) what proportion of nursery vouchers have been redeemed in (a) the public, (b) the private and (c) the voluntary sector in each year since 1995–96. [43894]

Mr. Dewar: Pre-school education vouchers were piloted in the school year 1996–97 and are operating on a simplified basis across Scotland for school year 1997–98 only. The voucher information requested is set out in the tables. Information on nursery places in 1995–96 is given in the answer to questions 43895 and 43898.

Voucher redemption statistics for pilot year 1996–97

Local authority	No. of eligible children[1] for whom application for vouchers was not received	No. of eligible children attending LA centres[2]	No. of eligible children attending private sector centres[3]	No. of eligible children attending voluntary sector centres[3]	No. of eligible children attending other centres[4]	% share of voucher redemption within LA centres[5]	% share of voucher redemption within private sector centres	% share of voucher redemption within voluntary sector centres	% share of voucher redemption within other centres
Argyll & Bute	+32(2)	216	48	162	0	52	11	37	0
East Renfrewshire	86	650	142	207	22	64	14	20	2
Highland	23	319	0	121	0	73	0	27	0
North Ayrshire	28	986	198	504	0	58	12	30	0
Total	105	2,171	388	994	22	61	11	27	1

[1] Eligible children were those born between 1 March 1993 and 28 February 1994 and those born between 1 September 1992 and 28 February 1993 whose entry to primary school had been deferred

[2] The estimated number of children was derived from an estimate (particularly in the part local authority areas of Argyll & Bute) by the pilot authorities—more applications were received from Argyll and Bute than estimated

[3] The split between the private and voluntary sectors is based on information provided by the centres about the sector to which they belong

[4] Other centres in the pilot areas were represented by one independent school

[5] Some children attended more than one centre in more than one sector

[6] The percentage share of redemption is based on the number of voucher parts redeemed by each sector

Voucher redemption statistics for transitional year 1997–98[1]

Local authority	No. of eligible children[2] for whom application for vouchers was not received	No. of children attending LA centres[3]	No. of children attending private sector centres[3]	No. of children attending voluntary sector centres[3]	No. of children attending other centres[4]	% share of voucher redemption within LA centres[5]	% share of voucher redemption within private sector centres	% share of voucher redemption within voluntary sector centres	% share of voucher redemption within other centres
Aberdeen City	160	2,001	348	50	155	80	12	2	6
Aberdeenshire	151	2,395	696	843	54	70	14	15	1
Angus	65	1,211	95	24	0	92	7	1	0
Argyll and Bute	68	539	163	340	41	55	15	25	5
Clackmannanshire	17	563	50	11	0	91	7	2	0
Dumfries and Galloway	73	1,692	86	85	4	94	3	3	1
Dundee City	94	1,528	263	14	0	85	14	1	0
East Ayrshire	53	1,296	117	113	0	87	7	6	0
East Dunbartonshire	38	664	346	221	79	54	25	14	7
East Lothian	36	1,109	52	19	18	94	4	1	1
East Renfrewshire	26	776	148	212	20	69	12	17	2
Edinburgh City	242	3,994	652	103	367	79	12	2	7
Falkirk	36	1,640	61	4	0	97	3	1	0
Fife	168	4,023	91	0	29	97	2	0	1
Glasgow City	587	5,811	740	245	244	84	10	3	3
Highland	138	1,943	373	563	0	74	10	16	0
Inverclyde	42	729	165	153	20	72	12	14	2
Midlothian	36	952	41	25	0	94	4	2	0

Voucher redemption statistics for transitional year 1997–98[1]

Local authority	No. of eligible children[2] for whom application for vouchers was not received	No. of children attending LA centres[3]	No. of children attending private sector centres[3]	No. of children attending voluntary sector centres[3]	No. of children attending other centres[4]	% share of voucher redemption within LA centres[5]	% share of voucher redemption within private sector centres	% share of voucher redemption within voluntary sector centres	% share of voucher redemption within other centres
Moray	63	749	89	218	47	70	8	18	4
North Ayrshire	52	1,014	432	272	0	61	21	15	0
North Lanarkshire	221	2,830	828	250	3	75	20	5	1
Orkney Islands	11	235	48	41	0	82	11	7	0
Perth and Kinross	71	1,204	285	78	54	79	15	3	3
Renfrewshire	67	1,547	288	166	2	79	13	8	1
Scottish Borders	45	941	132	113	3	83	9	7	1
Shetland Islands	16	245	0	114	0	79	0	21	0
South Ayrshire	52	987	145	71	31	81	11	5	3
South Lanarkshire	250	2,032	1,204	671	28	58	29	13	1
Stirling	28	809	108	56	47	86	8	2	4
West Dumbartonshire	47	1,090	65	14	0	94	5	1	0
West Lothian	56	2,055	117	0	0	95	5	0	0
Western isles	16	24	76	200	0	10	24	66	0
Total	3,025	48,628	8,304	5,289	1,246	80	12	6	2

[1] Information based on take up of vouchers for the spring term as at 1 May 1998
[2] Eligible children are those born between 1 March 1994 and 28 February 1995 and those born between 1 September 1993 and 28 February 1994 whose entry to primary school had been deferred
[3] The split between the private and voluntary sectors is based on information provided by the centres about the sector to which they belong
[4] Other centres include independent, grant aided special and self governing schools
[5] Some children attend more than one centre in more than one sector
[6] The percentage share of redemption is based on the number of voucher parts redeemed by each sector
[7] Less than

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many nursery places have been made available to (a) three and (b) four-year olds in (i) public, (ii) private and (iii) voluntary sectors in each local authority area in each year since 1995–96. [43896]

Mr. Galbraith: The latest available information is for November 1996 and is set out in the table. Details are not available on the ages of children using the places, but a survey in 1994 showed that, of all children attending Day Nurseries, Private Nursery Schools, Nursery Centres and Community Nurseries, around 32 per cent. were aged 3 and 28 per cent. aged 4. At that time the average number of children attending was about 45 per cent. higher than the number of places, as some children attended part-time.

Nursery places by local authority and sector at November 1996

	Sector
Local authority	Local authority Termtime places	Private Termtime places	Voluntary Termtime places	Other/not known Termtime places	Total Termtime places
Aberdeen, City	0	33	0	1,286	1,319
Aberdeenshire	0	495	0	15	510
Angus	0	386	44	0	430
Argyll and Bute	18	109	68	0	195
Clackmannanshire	110	112	0	0	222
Dumfries and Galloway	0	142	42	0	184
Dundee, City	0	590	104	0	694
East Ayrshire	134	200	0	0	334
East Dunbartonshire	0	259	0	0	259
East Lothian	0	206	69	0	275
East Renfrewshire	529	0	0	271	800
Edinburgh, City of	0	2,705	131	0	2,836
Eilean Siar	0	10	10	0	20
Falkirk	276	388	0	0	664
Fife	0	425	0	0	425
Glasgow, City of	1,080	2,185	365	13	3,643
Highland	0	452	40	0	492
Inverclyde	224	233	0	112	569
Midlothian	0	206	0	0	206
Moray	0	124	0	0	124
North Ayrshire	290	612	96	0	998
North Lanarkshire	363	838	133	0	1,334
Orkney Islands	0	38	0	0	38
Perth and Kinross	0	634	0	24	658
Renfrewshire	603	413	48	37	1,101
Scottish Borders	0	298	44	0	342

Nursery places by local authority and sector at November 1996

Local authority	Sector: Local authority Termtime places	Private Termtime places	Voluntary Termtime places	Other/not known Termtime places	Total Termtime places
Shetland Islands	0	24	0	0	24
South Ayrshire	63	378	0	0	441
South Lanarkshire	893	805	97	0	1,795
Stirling	588	303	0	0	891
West Dunbartonshire	269	235	0	0	504
West Lothian	0	433	49	0	482
Scotland	5,440	14,271	1,340	1,758	22,809

Note:
This table does not include places in Children and Family Centres and other centres where the focus of the work is normally the provision of special support to children and parents

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) how many (a) three and (b) four-year olds were in receipt of pre-school education in each year since 1995–96; and how many have registered in each year since August 1996, broken down by (i) type of provision and (ii) unitary authority; [43895]

(2) how many (a) three and (b) four-year olds there were in nursery schools and classes in each education authority in each year since 1991–92; what estimates he has made of the numbers in (i) 1998–99 and (ii) 1999–2000; and what percentage each of these figures represent of all children in the authority area. [43898]

Mr. Dewar: The Government's target is to provide a place for every child in the pre-school year whose parents want one by this winter with staged targets for children in the ante-pre-school year thereafter. The information requested about the number of three and four year old children in nursery schools and classes in each local authority area since 1991–92 is set out in the table. Information on the pre-school year children who have received education from registered non-school providers since 1996–97 has been provided in response to questions 43892–94 which I have answered today. Projected participation rates for 1998–99 and 1999–2000 cannot be confirmed until authorities have finalised plans for the expansion of places through partnership with centres in the voluntary and private sectors. Preliminary returns from local authorities for 1998–99 however indicate that they expect to educate approaching 90% of grant eligible pre-school year children in their own registered centres. Information on the number of children who have registered for a place is not held centrally.

Education authority and independent nursery schools and classes Total number of three and four year old pupils by EA[1]

	1991–92[2]				1992–93				1993–94
	3 year olds	% of all 3 year olds	4 year olds	% of all 4 year olds	3 year olds	% of all 3 year olds	4 year olds	% of all 4 year olds	3 year olds	% of all 3 year olds	4 year olds	% of all 4 year olds
Scotland	12,921	20	33,117	50	12,886	20	34,783	53	13,822	21	34,738	54
Aberdeen City	—	—	—	—	653	26	1,832	72	644	25	1,826	73
Aberdeenshire	—	—	—	—	157	5	1,550	49	203	7	1,636	53
Angus	—	—	—	—	108	8	559	42	79	6	626	47
Argyll & Bute	—	—	—	—	83	8	108	10	83	8	146	14
Clackmannanshire	—	—	—	—	178	29	472	73	199	31	427	71
Dumfries & Galloway	—	—	—	—	172	10	1,070	59	175	10	1,061	60
Dundee City	—	—	—	—	720	39	1,382	72	744	39	1,431	78
East Ayrshire	—	—	—	—	517	31	1,128	66	493	30	1,104	66
East Dunbartonshire	—	—	—	—	91	6	186	13	83	6	162	11
East Lothian	—	—	—	—	317	29	868	79	360	32	829	74
East Renfrewshire	—	—	—	—	165	13	469	39	199	17	447	36
Edinburgh, City of	—	—	—	—	1,696	34	3,571	71	1,739	34	3,664	74
Eilean Siar[4]	—	—	—	—	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	0
Falkirk	—	—	—	—	323	19	1,170	67	366	20	1,216	71
Fife	—	—	—	—	879	20	3,710	81	754	17	3,651	81
Glasgow City	—	—	—	—	3,299	42	5,430	68	3,526	45	5,496	71
Highland	—	—	—	—	129	5	762	29	114	4	720	27
Inverclyde	—	—	—	—	191	16	467	39	239	21	443	38
Midlothian	—	—	—	—	244	23	721	65	360	34	755	72
Moray	—	—	—	—	67	6	667	60	95	8	559	49
North Ayrshire	—	—	—	—	100	6	345	18	103	6	337	19
North Lanarkshire	—	—	—	—	538	13	1,649	38	657	15	1,558	37
Orkney Islands	—	—	—	—	49	18	143	51	37	14	172	61
Perth & Kinross	—	—	—	—	235	16	577	37	248	16	673	44
Renfrewshire	—	—	—	—	374	17	1,122	50	373	16	994	44
Scottish Borders	—	—	—	—	50	4	433	35	28	2	453	37
Shetland Islands	—	—	—	—	94	29	161	50	84	25	180	55
South Ayrshire	—	—	—	—	105	8	506	37	152	11	463	34
South Lanarkshire	—	—	—	—	258	7	820	21	287	7	752	19
Stirling	—	—	—	—	171	18	544	56	167	17	624	65
West Dunbartonshire	—	—	—	—	419	32	932	67	523	41	927	70
West Lothian	—	—	—	—	504	25	1,429	69	708	35	1,406	68

	1994–95				1995–96
	3 year olds	% of all 3 year olds	4 year olds	% of all 4 year olds	3 year olds	% of all 3 year olds	4 year olds	% of all 4 year olds
Scotland	13,622	20	36,214	56	13,193	20	36,278	54
Aberdeen City	539	20	1,873	74	580	22	1,826	70
Aberdeenshire	155	5	1,667	54	144	5	1,763	56
Angus	86	6	747	55	109	8	835	59
Argyll & Bute	61	6	149	14	91	9	130	12
Clackmannanshire	209	32	495	79	171	25	495	76
Dumfries & Galloway	187	10	1,305	72	178	10	1,352	74
Dundee City	795	42	1,392	74	721	39	1,426	75
East Ayrshire	500	29	1,097	67	466	28	1,094	65
East Dunbartonshire	133	9	173	12	115	9	195	14
East Lothian	293	24	979	86	340	28	918	75
East Renfrewshire	177	15	440	37	189	16	408	35
Edinburgh, City of	1,711	33	3,711	73	1,727	33	3,642	70
Eilean Siar[4]	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	0
Falkirk	342	18	1,292	70	344	18	1,324	69
Fife	766	17	3,749	83	793	18	3,539	79
Glasgow City	3,602	44	5,357	69	3,259	40	5,546	68
Highland	125	5	779	26	130	5	705	25
Inverclyde	206	18	471	41	183	16	445	38
Midlothian	311	28	866	82	321	31	845	76
Moray	91	8	642	55	53	4	687	58
North Ayrshire	134	7	316	18	150	8	325	17
North Lanarkshire	637	14	1,583	37	590	14	1,430	32
Orkney Islands	45	17	178	64	41	16	160	60
Perth & Kinross	278	17	845	54	279	17	915	56
Renfrewshire	422	18	1,106	47	392	16	1,072	44
Scottish Borders	31	2	450	35	39	3	530	40
Shetland Islands	67	19	173	50	91	26	197	55
South Ayrshire	112	8	465	34	152	11	483	36
South Lanarkshire	478	12	773	20	355	9	848	21
Stirling	157	16	629	64	212	21	661	65
West Dunbartonshire	445	34	914	72	428	33	887	69
West Lothian	527	25	1,598	79	550	26	1,595	76

	1996–97[5]				1997–98[5]
	3 year olds	% of all 3 year olds	4 year olds	% of all 4 year olds	3 year olds	% of all 3 year olds	4 year olds	% of all 4 year olds
Scotland	13,243	21	37,182	57	14,316	23	39,351	62
Aberdeen City	553	22	1,948	75	628	25	1,822	72
Aberdeenshire	147	5	1,991	63	273	9	2,084	68
Angus	157	11	919	65	127	10	1,063	77
Argyll & Bute	77	8	192	19	134	14	269	27
Clackmannanshire	147	22	499	73	197	31	450	69
Dumfries & Galloway	221	12	1,362	75	253	15	1,422	79
Dundee City	757	42	1,424	78	691	40	1,312	73
East Ayrshire	428	27	985	60	455	30	1,054	67
East Dunbartonshire	92	7	168	13	344	27	615	48
East Lothian	345	30	983	81	445	40	923	80
East Renfrewshire	249	22	499	43	230	21	616	54
Edinburgh, City of	1,540	30	3,676	71	1,627	33	3,506	69
Eilean Siar[4]	0	0	0	0	0	0	25	8
Falkirk	266	15	1,246	66	201	11	1,364	75
Fife	781	18	3,555	81	782	19	3,520	81
Glasgow City	3,357	44	5,151	64	3,104	41	4,814	63
Highland	124	5	917	34	268	11	1,515	57
Inverclyde	188	18	405	36	225	21	433	41
Midlothian	281	28	842	80	287	29	783	78
Moray	68	6	671	56	89	8	683	59
North Ayrshire	151	8	685	37	172	10	798	45
North Lanarkshire	638	15	1,330	31	875	21	1,706	41
Orkney Islands	49	20	212	83	38	16	214	89
Perth & Kinross	356	23	1,058	66	348	24	1,067	69
Renfrewshire	376	16	1,115	47	319	15	1,079	47
Scottish Borders	36	3	535	41	127	10	794	63
Shetland Islands	85	25	208	58	63	19	197	58
South Ayrshire	190	14	756	55	200	16	831	63

	1996–97[1]				1997–98[2]
	3 year olds	% of all 3 year olds	4 year olds	% of all 4 year olds	3 year olds	% of all 3 year olds	4 year olds	% of all 4 year olds
South Lanarkshire	339	9	846	20	523	14	1,250	31
Stirling	225	23	680	67	311	33	683	70
West Dunbartonshire	453	36	756	59	504	41	787	63
West Lothian	567	27	1,568	74	476	23	1,672	80

[1] Source—schools census
[2] Information collected in September with age as at 31 December. It is intended that the information will, in future, be collected on the basis of the ante pre-school and pre-school year
[3] New education authority breakdowns unavailable
[4] Formerly known as Western Isles
[5] Account should also be taken of the pre-school year children who were receiving pre-school education at registered non-school providers

Bees

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much money he received from the European Commission to support bee-keeping in Scotland in each of the last five years. [43399]

Mr. Macdonald: I refer the hon. Member to the reply by my hon. Friend the Minister of State, Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food today, Official Report, column 247.

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much his Department plans to spend on research into the control of the varroa parasite in each of the next three years. [43397]

Mr. Macdonald: Research and development on the control of varroasis is dealt with by the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food on a UK basis.

Student Loans

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much his Department has received in repaid student loans from SED grant-awarded students in each year since the inception of student loans in (a) cash terms and (b) real terms based on 1998–99 prices. [43901]

Mr. Dewar: Receipts in respect of student loan repayments are aggregated on a UK-wide basis. The proportion representing repayments by Scottish domiciled students is set out in the table, on a financial year basis.

Student Loan Repayments

£000

Financial Year	Actual receipts	Receipts at 1998–99 prices
1991–92	104	127
1992–93	572	665
1993–94	1,464	1,661
1995–96	2,858	3,195
1996–97	5,435	5,912
1997–98	10,523	11,120

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many mandatory student awards were paid by his Department in each academic year since 1978–79; how many student loans were paid in each year since their inception; and what is the total value of those awards and loans in (a) cash terms and (b) real terms based on 1998–99 prices. [43899]

Mr. Dewar: It is not possible to provide the information in precisely the form requested. Statistics on student awards and loans offered are held on the basis of academic years, but aggregate information on actual payments is available only in financial years. Subject to that, the information requested is set out in the following table:

	Student awards			Student loans
Year	Award holders (academic year) Awards	Grant (actual) (financial year) £000	Grant (1998–99 prices) (financial year) £000	Number (academic year) loans	Loan payments (actual) (financial year) £000	(1998–99 prices) (financial year) £000
1978–79	53,150	44,600	145,224	—	—	—
1979–80	53,600	54,500	152,053	—	—	—
1980–81	54,925	60,600	142,894	—	—	—
1981–82	56,986	64,900	139,537	—	—	—
1982–83	57,465	65,300	131,059	—	—	—
1983–84	58,460	68,300	131,004	—	—	—
1984–85	58,196	64,100	117,067	—	—	—
1985–86	58,555	61,000	105,617	—	—	—
1986–87	58,220	63,200	106,221	—	—	—
1987–88	59,041	64,800	103,404	—	—	—
1988–89	61,531	71,200	106,492	—	—	—
1989–90	65,872	79,700	111,422	—	—	—
1990–91	70,742	90,100	116,630	22,200	8,134	9,897
1991–92	80,535	117,300	142,728	29,300	13,861	16,866
1992–93	89,618	136,900	159,863	39,600	22,182	25,903
1993–94	99,181	162,700	184,626	50,100	34,787	39,475

Year	Student awards: Award holders (academic year) Awards	Grant (actual) (financial year) £000	Grant (1998–99 prices) (financial year) £000	Student loans: Number (academic year) loans	Loan payments (actual) (financial year) £000	(1998–99 prices) (financial year) £000
1994–95	105,621	170,900	191,052	58,600	55,231	61,744
1995–96	107,263	163,200	177,519	66,900	81,268	88,398
1996–97	110,587	152,300	160,948	73,000	93,302	98,600

Notes:
1. Student loan payments are aggregated on a UK-wide basis with the Scottish share representing a pre-determined proportion.
2. From academic year 1991–92 the award holder figures include the extension of the scheme to include full-time Higher National Certificate courses.

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what estimate he has made of the full loan per SED student in (a) 1998–99, (b) 1999–2000 and (c) 2000–2001, in (i) cash terms and (ii) real terms based on 1998–99 prices. [43903]

Mr. Dewar: The maximum rates at which student loans are payable are determined annually and are the same for all home students, regardless of their domicile within the United Kingdom. The rates for academic year 1998–99 are set out in the table, those for subsequent years have yet to be determined. There are two separate groups of rates—one for students who entered higher education in or before academic year 1997–98 or fall to be treated as having done so, and another for new entrants in academic year 1998–99.

Student loan rates for 1998–99

	£
Continuing students
Full year students living:
at home	1,325
elsewhere	1,735
elsewhere[1]	2,145
Final year students living:
at home	970
elsewhere	1,265
elsewhere[1]	1,565
New students
Full year students living:
at home	2,325
elsewhere	2,735
elsewhere[1]	3,145
Final year students living:
at home	1,970
elsewhere	2,265
elsewhere[1]	2,565

[1] London

Private Finance Initiative

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what private finance initiative schemes his Department has approved in each year since their inception; and on what date each of these schemes were approved. [43921]

Mr. Dewar: The information requested is set out in the table.

PFI projects approved by the Secretary of State for Scotland

Procuring agency	Project description	Date approved
The Scottish Office	The Skye Bridge	1992
Law Hospital NHS Trust	Hospital Information Support System	October 1995
Falkirk College	Stirling Further Education Centre	July 1996
Perth and Kinross Healthcare NHS Trust	Integrated Healthcare Information System	December 1996
Yorkhill NHS Trust	Hospital Information Support System	December 1996
The Scottish Office	M6 DBFO	December 1996
Grampian Health Board	Stonehaven Community Hospital	January 1997
West Lothian College	Livingston Further Education Centre	June 1997
Dundee City Council	Baldovie Waste to Energy Plant	July 1997
Scottish Prison Service	Bowhouse Prison	July 1997
Hairmyres and Stonehouse Hospitals NHS Trust	Hairmyres Hospital	August 1997
Royal Infirmary of Edinburgh NHS Trust	Royal Infirmary of Edinburgh	August 1997
Ayrshire and Arran Community Healthcare NHS Trust	Cumnock Community Hospital	August 1997
Law Hospital NHS Trust	Law Hospital	September 1997
Highlands and Islands Airports Ltd.	Inverness Airport	February 1998

Notes:
1. All Health Board projects with a capital value above £500,000, NHS Trust Information Management and Technology projects over £1 million and NHS Trust non-IM&T projects with a capital value above £4 million require to be approved by the Management Executive for the NHS in Scotland on behalf of the Secretary of State. This list does not include those projects which are within Trust and Health Board delegated limits
2. This list does not include water and sewerage projects which are not approved by the Secretary of State at project level

Legal Aid

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the 20 firms earning most from (a) civil and (b) criminal legal aid in (i) 1996–97 and (ii) 1997–98, the number of fee earners per firm and the fees per fee earner. [43909]

Mr. Dewar: The total earnings for the 20 solicitors' firms earning most from legal aid in 1996–97 is shown in the Scottish Legal Aid Board's Annual Report. The breakdown of these figures for 1996–97 and 1997–98 is not available in the form requested. However, the Scottish Legal Aid Board have provided figures on the basis of sums due to solicitors' firms in 1996–97. These vary from the total figures in the Annual Report which show sums actually paid and include Advice and Assistance. The figures are shown in the tables. The figures for 1997–98 are not yet available.

The Scottish Legal Aid Board does not hold information on the number of fee earners in a firm. This may well be larger than the number of practitioners registered with the Board for legal aid purposes. The figure shown for average fee per practitioner in the table is simply the total of fees earned by the firm divided by the number of practitioners listed with the Board. It is not a measure of the fees earned per practitioner in that firm.

Firm	No. of practitioners[1] listed with board who undertook civil legal aid	Fees[2] payable £	Average fees per practitioner £
Civil
Drummond Miller	24	827,017	34,459
Ross Harper and Murphy	32	561,122	17,535
Balfour and Manson	15	474,333	31,622
Brodies	17	465,323	27,372
Caesar and Howie	22	317,607	14,437
Blair and Bryden	27	308,911	11,441
Unwin Rasmusen	7	258,407	36,915
Robert Carty	15	195,212	13,014
Livingstone Brown	6	176,281	29,380
Trainor Alston	13	154,722	11,902
Mckay and Norwell	8	133,027	16,628
Lockharts	5	126,372	25,274
Aberdein Considine	8	113,268	14,159
George Mathers and Co.	8	98,917	12,365
Ness Gallagher and Co.	9	88,947	9,883
The McKinstry Company	5	86,620	17,324
Hughes Dowdall	7	81,357	11,622
Fleming and Reid	2	80,252	40,126
W. G. Boyle	5	76,836	15,367
A. C. Miller and Mackay	5	72,913	14,583
Criminal
Ross Harper and Murphy	36	2,101,828	58,384
More and Co.	17	1,513,436	89,026
Bruce Short and Co.	8	1,008,064	126,008
Gilfedder and McInnes	15	945,915	63,061
Adams	10	941,813	94,181
Ian McCarry	28	928,725	33,169
Sinclairs	7	831,764	118,823
Gallen and Co.	9	781,429	86,825
Robert Kerr	5	740,857	148,171
J. C. Hughes and Co.	8	733,353	91,669
McAfee	3	723,479	241,160
George Mathers and Co.	15	687,944	45,863
Milligan Telford and Morrow	6	676,217	112,703
Grady and Co.	3	661,300	220,433
Turnbull McCarron	2	617,749	308,875
McCourts	11	616,063	56,006
Blair and Bryden	23	596,633	25,941
Beltrami and Co.	6	591,594	98,599
Guarino and Kirk	4	579,119	144,780
Ness Gallagher and Co.	10	573,975	57,398

Notes:

[1] Where a firm wishes a qualified solicitor to act as a "nominated solicitor" for the firm, that solicitor must have his details recorded in the Board's Practitioner System, and payments to be made to that solicitor for legal aid work done can then be directed to the firm. The "number of practitioners" therefore represents the number of solicitors in the firm recorded in the Board's practitioner system. The Board is aware that not all solicitors who perform legal aid work are recorded with it as practitioners

[2] Including VAT and excluding outlays

Medical Negligence

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many outstanding medical negligence claims there are currently in each health board area; for what amount; and if he will make a statement. [43918]

Mr. Galbraith: The number of outstanding medical negligence claims for each health board area is set out in the table:

Health Boards	Number of cases
Argyll & Clyde	125
Ayrshire & Arran	76
Borders	12
Dumfries & Galloway	34
Fife	72
Forth Valley	70
Grampian	77
Greater Glasgow	404
Highland	62
Lanarkshire	136
Lothian	212
Orkney	3
Shetland	6
Tayside	129
Western Isles	7
State Hospital	1
Common Services Agency	15
Scottish Ambulance Service	2
Total	1,443

It is not possible to predict the actual amounts as the level of settlement is generally not known until an agreement between the parties has been reached. It is for individual health authorities to determine the annual provision for claims likely to be settled against them in any one year. Details of that provision will be provided in Trusts and Health Board annual accounts. The accounts for 1997–98 are currently in the process of being completed and have yet to be submitted to the Department.

Prisoners

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the average prison population of each Scottish prison in (a) 1978–79, (b) 1979–80, (c) 1986–87, (d) 1987–88, (e) 1996–97 and (f) 1997–98; and what percentages of inmates were incarcerated for (i) violent and (ii) non-violent offences. [43910]

Mr. McLeish: Financial year information on prison population in the Scottish Prison Service estate is available only from 1983–84. Moreover, statistical information by offence was not collected historically in relation to the average daily prison population; details of main offence were previously recorded only in the reception information. However, an investigation of recent data suggests that an estimated 40–50% of sentenced prisoners have a main crime which would be defined as a 'violent' offence. For the purposes of this response 'violent' offences include, for example, homicide, serious assault, possession of an offensive weapon, robbery, threats and petty assault.

The tables provide details of the available information.

Table 1: Average daily prison population, Scotland, 1986–87, 1987–88, 1996–97 and 1997–98

Year	Number
1986–87	5,566
1987–88	5,421
1996–97	5,992
1997–98	[1]6,059

[1] Provisional

Table 2: Average daily prison population in Scottish penal establishments, 1986–87, 1987–88, 1996–97 and 1997–98, by establishment

Establishment	1986–87	1987–88	1996–97	[1]1997–98
Aberdeen	183	178	180	201
Barlinnie (incl. Unit)	1,195	1,036	1,213	1,208
Castle Huntly	103	126	105	107
Cornton Vale	187	177	173	166
Dungavel	136	137	93	100
Dumfries	149	130	144	147
Edinburgh	772	638	725	728
Friarton[2]	64	72	71	60
Glenochil[2]	506	566	563	585
Greenock	192	166	250	242
Inverness	105	102	126	140
Longriggend	278	259	166	151
Low Moss	351	350	357	362
Noranside	73	89	127	118
Penninghame	70	69	58	60
Perth	575	482	452	472
Peterhead (incl. Unit)	178	141	202	221
Polmont	384	415	478	473
Shotts (incl. Unit)	65	286	466	471
Shotts (National Induction Centre)	—	—	43	46
Legalised police cells	2	1	1	1
Total[3]	5,566	5,421	5,992	6,059

[1] Figures for 1997–98 are provisional

[2] Young offenders serving detention centre sentences are included in the figures for 1986–87 and 1987–88. Such sentences were abolished in Scotland on 1 November 1988

[3] Components may not add to totals due to rounding

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many women were committed to the Scottish prison system in (a) 1978–79, (b) 1979–80, (c) 1986–87, (d) 1987–88, (e) 1996–97 and (f) 1997–98; and what percentages were incarcerated for (i) violent and (ii) non-violent offences. [43911]

Mr. McLeish: The information provided in the table relates to female direct sentenced receptions to the Scottish prison system by category of main crime. For the purposes of this response 'violent' offences include, for example, homicide, serious assault, possession of an offensive weapon, robbery, threats and petty assault.

Direct sentenced female receptions to Scottish prison system, 1978–79, 1979–80, 1986–87, 1987–88, 1996–97 and 1997–98, by main crime category

Year	Total number of direct sentenced female receptions	Percentage violent	Percentage non-violent
1978–79	350	15	85
1979–80	364	13	87
1986–87	522	8	92
1987–88	593	7	93
1996–97	603	17	83
1997–98	566	16	84

Class Sizes

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many and what percentage of children were taught in classes of more than 31 pupils in (a) 1991–92, (b) 1992–93, (c) 1993–94, (d) 1994–95, (e) 1995–96, (f) 1996–97 and (g) 1997–98; and if he will estimate how many will be taught in such classes in 1998–99. [43904]

Mr. Dewar: Statistics on class size in primary schools are collected biennially. The available information is given in the table. Schools have been allocated to their current Education Authority. Information on individual class sizes in secondary schools is not collected centrally. There are no estimates held centrally of class sizes for 1998–99.

Education authority primary schools
Number and percentage of pupils in primary mainstream classes with more than 31 pupils[1]

Year	Number of pupils in classes of more than 31 pupils	Percentage of pupils in classes of more than 31 pupils
1991–92	44,617	10.1
1993–94	47,203	10.8
1995–96	51,204	11.7
1997–98[2]	58,141	13.2

[1] Includes a small number of classes with more than one teacher

[2] Provisional

Pupils

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list (a) the total number of pupils on school rolls and (b) the pupil-teacher ratio for (i) primary and (ii) secondary schools in each local authority area in Scotland for each academic year from 1978–79 to 1997–98. [43902]

Mr. Dewar: The available information for years in which the data were collected is set out in the tables.

Education authority secondary schools
Number of pupils and pupil/teacher ratios by education authority

	1997		1996		1995		1994		1993		1992
	Total primary pupils	pupil/ teacher ratio	Total primary pupils	pupil/ teacher ratio	Total primary pupils	pupil/ teacher ratio	Total primary pupils	pupil/ teacher ratio	Total primary pupils	pupil/ teacher ratio	Total primary pupils	pupil/ teacher ratio
Scotland	314,223	13.2	315,912	13.1	316,253	12.9	314,779	12.9	311,176	12.8	302,986	12.6
Standard Code for Education Authority
Aberdeen City	11,138	12.9	11,074	12.9	11,071	13.0	11,038	12.6	10,844	12.5	10,578	12.0
Aberdeenshire	15,114	13.6	15,231	13.8	15,341	14.0	15,148	13.5	15,031	13.7	14,650	13.4
Angus	7,262	12.8	7,287	13.0	7,208	12.8	7,127	12.6	7,089	12.8	6,925	13.0
Argyll and Bute	5,614	12.6	5,639	12.4	5,730	12.6	5,687	12.5	5,605	12.3	5,511	12.3
Clackmannanshire	2,951	13.4	2,927	13.4	2,944	13.3	2,934	13.3	2,904	13.1	2,979	12.6
Dumfries and Galloway	9,600	12.1	9,584	12.7	9,522	11.9	9,467	12.2	9,400	12.3	9,105	12.0
Dundee City	8,983	13.1	8,978	12.3	8,842	11.8	8,811	11.8	8,649	11.9	8,457	11.9
East Ayrshire	7,926	13.5	7,963	13.5	7,938	13.0	7,868	13.3	7,665	13.0	7,848	12.6
East Dunbartonshire	8,664	14.1	8,754	13.9	8,794	14.0	8,756	13.9	8,585	13.7	8,442	13.7
East Lothian	4,853	13.5	4,751	13.4	4,745	13.1	4,609	13.2	4,594	13.0	4,498	13.1
East Renfrewshire	6,789	14.0	6,758	14.1	6,687	13.9	6,652	14.0	6,498	13.8	6,261	13.7
Edinburgh, City of	18,714	13.5	18,706	13.4	18,350	12.8	18,209	12.9	18,031	12.7	17,528	12.7
Eilean Siar	2,030	9.3	2,113	9.5	2,145	9.5	2,242	9.8	2,225	9.6	2,249	9.9
Falkirk	8,619	13.4	8,667	13.5	8,701	13.6	8,736	13.7	8,635	13.7	8,409	13.7
Fife	22,938	13.4	23,095	13.4	23,149	13.4	22,699	13.4	22,413	13.5	21,652	13.3
Glasgow City	29,380	13.5	29,222	12.4	29,357	12.3	29,464	12.1	29,274	12.0	28,793	11.7
Highland	14,743	11.8	14,960	11.8	15,253	12.0	15,154	12.2	14,916	12.2	14,446	11.8
Inverclyde	5,906	13.5	5,948	13.6	6,018	13.1	6,032	12.9	6,045	13.0	5,956	12.8
Midlothian	5,368	13.2	5,403	13.6	5,361	13.3	5,357	13.3	5,256	13.2	5,163	12.7
Moray	5,700	12.5	5,664	12.2	5,659	11.8	5,635	12.1	5,511	12.1	5,382	11.5
North Ayrshire	9,155	13.6	9,183	13.4	9,283	13.4	9,331	13.2	9,156	13.3	8,494	13.0
North Lanarkshire	23,057	13.5	23,407	13.4	23,757	13.3	23,948	13.2	23,731	13.2	23,031	13.3
Orkney Islands	1,425	10.5	1,440	10.9	1,459	10.9	1,439	10.7	1,448	10.8	1,412	10.5
Perth and Kinross	7,507	12.6	7,627	12.5	7,497	12.2	7,405	12.1	7,248	12.2	6,998	11.9
Renfrewshire	11,641	13.9	11,824	13.7	11,764	13.3	11,767	13.2	11,673	13.4	11,148	13.0
Scottish Borders	6,494	12.3	6,454	12.1	6,436	12.2	6,296	12.3	6,182	12.5	5,989	12.0
Shetland Islands	1,594	7.6	1,626	8.1	1,681	8.5	1,764	8.6	1,761	9.0	1,757	9.2
South Ayrshire	7,875	13.6	7,994	13.6	7,983	13.4	7,829	13.3	7,801	13.4	7,513	13.2
South Lanarkshire	20,705	13.9	21,200	13.7	21,310	13.7	21,149	13.6	20,931	13.6	20,205	13.6
Stirling	5,598	13.1	5,623	13.3	5,688	13.1	5,615	12.9	5,673	13.0	5,629	13.0
West Dunbartonshire	6,871	14.4	6,813	13.9	6,760	13.3	6,766	13.0	6,642	12.8	6,520	12.9
West Lothian	10,009	13.6	9,997	13.5	9,920	13.0	9,845	13.3	9,760	12.9	9,458	12.6

	1991		1990		1989		1988		1987
	Total primary pupils	pupil/ teacher ratio	Total primary pupils	pupil/ teacher ratio	Total primary pupils	pupil/ teacher ratio	Total primary pupils	pupil/ teacher ratio	Total primary pupils	pupil/ teacher ratio
Scotland	296,367	12.4	293,501	12.2	298,394	12.4	311,500	12.7	327,012	13.0
Standard Code for Education Authority
Aberdeen City	10,522	12.6	10,365	12.6	10,599	12.4	11,313	12.6	11,883	12.8
Aberdeenshire	14,102	13.5	13,693	13.3	13,621	13.4	13,849	13.5	14,044	13.5
Angus	6,865	13.1	6,780	12.7	6,839	12.3	7,164	12.8	7,481	12.9
Argyll and Bute	5,487	12.1	5,379	11.8	5,530	12.3	5,778	13.0	5,974	13.2
Clackmannanshire	3,017	12.4	2,969	11.8	3,073	12.4	3,261	12.7	3,496	13.0
Dumfries and Galloway	8,922	11.7	8,889	11.4	9,015	11.6	9,345	11.5	9,802	12.0
Dundee City	8,393	11.7	8,439	11.5	8,683	11.2	8,901	11.4	9,233	11.4
East Ayrshire	7,826	12.4	7,945	12.1	8,191	12.4	8,742	13.2	9,298	13.5
East Dunbartonshire	8,141	13.4	8,093	13.4	8,188	13.6	8,242	14.2	8,203	14.3
East Lothian	4,303	12.7	4,275	12.7	4,454	12.9	4,672	13.4	4,816	13.4
East Renfrewshire	5,990	13.3	5,825	13.1	5,765	13.3	5,848	13.7	5,931	13.5
Edinburgh, City of	17,290	12.5	17,353	12.1	18,071	12.3	18,921	12.7	19,913	12.8
Eilean Siar	2,303	9.9	2,298	9.9	2,335	9.9	2,397	10.1	2,476	10.2
Falkirk	8,107	13.6	8,017	13.5	8,117	13.6	8,501	13.7	8,865	13.7
Fife	21,247	13.2	21,035	13.0	21,026	12.9	21,727	13.2	22,454	13.4
Glasgow City	28,401	11.2	28,368	11.0	29,016	11.2	31,194	11.2	34,313	11.9
Highland	13,937	11.7	13,572	11.9	13,604	12.0	13,980	11.2	14,304	12.6
Inverclyde	5,780	12.3	5,737	12.3	5,907	12.4	6,207	12.7	6,558	13.1
Midlothian	5,080	12.9	5,004	12.6	5,228	12.8	5,508	13.2	5,775	13.5
Moray	5,364	11.8	5,344	11.6	5,369	11.6	5,669	12.3	5,863	12.9
North Ayrshire	8,221	12.8	8,163	12.7	8,388	12.9	8,870	13.8	9,257	14.1
North Lanarkshire	22,608	13.0	22,385	12.7	22,849	13.0	24,155	13.7	25,673	14.0
Orkney Islands	1,386	10.6	1,329	10.1	1,332	10.3	1,281	10.2	1,338	11.1
Perth and Kinross	6,787	11.8	6,743	11.4	6,750	11.5	6,920	11.3	7,287	11.7
Renfrewshire	10,855	12.5	10,743	12.3	10,963	12.2	11,347	12.4	12,301	13.0
Scottish Borders	5,905	12.2	5,814	11.8	5,846	11.8	5,990	12.1	6,326	12.6
Shetland Islands	1,651	9.2	1,635	9.2	1,623	9.2	1,643	9.5	1,663	9.9

	1991		1990		1989		1988		1987
	Total primary pupils	pupil/ teacher ratio	Total primary pupils	pupil/ teacher ratio	Total primary pupils	pupil/ teacher ratio	Total primary pupils	pupil/ teacher ratio	Total primary pupils	pupil/ teacher ratio
South Ayrshire	7,283	13.0	7,223	12.8	7,236	13.2	7,392	13.6	7,627	13.6
South Lanarkshire	19,548	13.3	19,182	13.1	19,412	13.3	20,257	13.9	21,296	14.2
Stirling	5,575	12.9	5,551	12.9	5,627	13.1	5,879	13.4	6,018	13.4
West Dunbartonshire	6,053	12.5	5,977	12.1	6,129	12.2	6,516	13.0	6,861	13.0
West Lothian	9,418	12.2	9,356	12.0	9,608	12.2	10,031	12.4	10,683	12.8

	1986		1985		1984		1983		1982
	Total primary pupils	pupil/ teacher ratio	Total primary pupils	pupil/ teacher ratio	Total primary pupils	pupil/ teacher ratio	Total primary pupils	pupil/ teacher ratio	Total primary pupils	pupil/ teacher ratio
Scotland	344,369	13.2	360,645	13.5	376,071	13.7	390,368	14.0	399,075	14.3
Borders	6,684	13.3	6,907	13.3	7,140	14	7,417	14.0	7,501	14.4
Central	19,300	13.8	20,120	13.8	20,866	14	21,479	14.3	21,910	14.3
Dumfries/Galloway	10,204	12.9	10,747	13.1	11,181	13	11,569	13.4	11,814	14.0
Fife	23,606	13.6	24,371	14.0	25,208	14	26,194	14.4	26,665	14.7
Grampian	33,247	13.5	34,216	13.6	34,635	14	35,366	13.8	34,866	13.8
Highland	14,853	12.7	15,183	12.9	15,629	13	15,958	13.6	16,021	13.7
Lothian	43,328	13.0	45,415	13.4	47,685	14	48,981	13.8	50,240	13.7
Strathclyde	162,258	13.5	171,505	13.7	180,499	14	189,219	14.3	195,428	14.7
Tayside	25,221	12.5	26,388	12.9	27,293	13	28,131	13.5	28,667	13.8
Orkney	1,376	11.7	1,414	11.7	1,443	12	1,464	12.0	1,496	12.5
Shetland	1,709	10.0	1,740	10.5	1,760	11	1,797	11.5	1,715	11.5
Western Isles	2,583	10.4	2,639	10.7	2,732	11	2,793	11.3	2,752	11.6

	1981		1980		1979		1978
	Total primary pupils	pupil/ teacher ratio	Total primary pupils	pupil/ teacher ratio	Total primary pupils	pupil/ teacher ratio	Total primary pupils	pupil/ teacher ratio
Scotland	404,575	14.4	407,844	14.4	410,242	14.4	410,378	14.6
Borders	7,423	14.1	7,411	14.2	7,351	14.2	7,203	14.1
Central	22,209	14.4	22,283	14.4	22,236	14.2	21,955	14.5
Dumfries/Galloway	11,838	14.1	11,611	14.3	11,403	14.2	11,234	14.2
Fife	26,847	14.9	26,792	14.7	26,624	14.7	26,622	14.6
Grampian	34,603	13.8	34,444	13.4	34,471	13.4	34,183	13.6
Highland	16,119	13.7	16,128	13.9	16,113	14.0	15,981	14.5
Lothian	51,515	13.4	52,316	13.3	52,720	13.5	52,949	13.9
Strathclyde	198,957	15.0	201,712	15.0	203,995	15.0	204,974	15.1
Tayside	29,064	13.9	29,248	14.0	29,666	14.0	29,720	14.0
Orkney	1,521	12.9	1,541	13.2	1,496	13.0	1,506	12.8
Shetland	1,702	12.5	1,631	12.5	1,618	13.2	1,547	12.9
Western Isles	2,777	12.2	2,727	12.4	2,549	12.1	2,504	12.3

Education authority primary schools

Number of pupils and pupil/teacher ratios by education authority

	1997		1996		1995		1994		1993		1992
	Total primary pupils	pupil/ teacher ratio	Total primary pupils	pupil/ teacher ratio	Total primary pupils	pupil/ teacher ratio	Total primary pupils	pupil/ teacher ratio	Total primary pupils	pupil/ teacher ratio	Total primary pupils	pupil/ teacher ratio
Scotland	440,089	19.9	441,215	19.6	440,112	19.5	437,964	19.5	438,345	19.5	438,914	19.3
Standard Code for Education Authority
Aberdeen City	15,921	20.0	16,069	19.9	15,892	19.7	15,688	20.2	15,729	20.2	15,598	20.0
Aberdeenshire	21,526	19.1	21,500	18.6	21,444	18.7	21,382	18.7	21,218	18.6	21,191	18.3
Angus	9,381	19.1	9,433	19.0	9,446	18.5	9,468	18.7	9,476	19.7	9,389	20.1
Argyll and Bute	7,792	17.5	7,809	17.3	7,780	17.3	7,734	17.5	7,754	17.4	7,756	16.7
Clackmannanshire	4,542	21.0	4,498	21.2	4,402	21.0	4,377	20.6	4,437	20.1	4,406	20.2
Dumfries and Galloway	12,944	19.1	12,880	18.9	12,977	18.8	12,820	18.6	12,882	18.6	12,936	18.6
Dundee City	12,360	19.0	12,573	18.0	12,697	18.8	12,824	19.2	12,794	19.8	12,962	20.3
East Ayrshire	11,449	21.3	11,487	21.0	11,428	20.8	11,425	20.6	11,400	20.5	11,371	20.0
East Dunbartonshire	10,653	22.2	10,505	22.2	10,374	22.2	10,271	22.1	10,168	21.5	10,184	21.6
East Lothian	7,942	19.9	7,765	20.6	7,494	20.0	7,229	19.9	7,078	20.4	6,671	19.6
East Renfrewshire	8,596	22.4	8,560	22.3	8,475	22.4	8,424	23.1	8,271	22.3	8,072	22.4
Edinburgh, City of	30,590	20.5	30,642	20.7	30,288	20.4	29,479	19.8	29,148	20.2	28,510	20.2

Education authority primary schools
Number of pupils and pupil/teacher ratios by education authority

	1997		1996		1995		1994		1993		1992
	Total primary pupils	pupil/ teacher ratio	Total primary pupils	pupil/ teacher ratio	Total primary pupils	pupil/ teacher ratio	Total primary pupils	pupil/ teacher ratio	Total primary pupils	pupil/ teacher ratio	Total primary pupils	pupil/ teacher ratio
Eilean Siar	2,556	13.0	2,588	13.0	2,619	13.3	2,684	13.4	2,641	14.2	2,633	13.8
Falkirk	12,334	21.0	12,287	21.3	12,219	21.8	12,078	21.4	12,219	21.2	12,306	20.9
Fife	30,870	19.0	31,070	19.1	31,145	19.0	30,965	19.3	31,082	19.3	31,140	19.3
Glasgow City	48,980	20.1	49,993	19.2	50,398	19.0	51,019	18.8	51,422	18.8	51,788	18.6
Highland	19,149	17.8	19,194	17.3	19,111	17.3	19,001	17.1	19,152	17.4	19,369	17.0
Inverclyde	7,826	21.5	7,945	21.4	8,004	20.8	8,071	21.0	8,038	20.6	8,130	20.3
Midlothian	7,433	19.7	7,393	19.9	7,281	19.8	7,164	19.7	7,215	19.4	7,110	19.4
Moray	8,078	19.3	8,036	18.9	7,970	18.7	7,936	18.4	7,848	18.5	7,777	18.3
North Ayrshire	12,614	21.2	12,627	21.1	12,631	21.0	12,644	20.8	12,809	20.6	12,931	20.0
North Lanarkshire	29,831	20.3	29,990	20.2	29,942	20.2	29,984	20.3	30,187	20.4	30,752	20.0
Orkney Islands	1,846	14.9	1,848	15.1	1,879	15.1	1,841	14.7	1,821	14.8	1,832	14.5
Perth and Kinross	10,776	18.9	10,668	18.7	10,554	18.2	10,554	18.4	10,414	18.8	10,307	18.6
Renfrewshire	15,796	22.1	15,693	22.0	15,784	21.7	15,594	21.9	15,542	21.6	15,539	21.4
Scottish Borders	8,969	18.5	8,963	18.5	8,838	18.5	8,610	18.3	8,613	18.4	8,551	18.0
Shetland Islands	8,335	12.7	2,304	12.6	2,286	12.8	2,231	12.7	2,206	12.4	2,189	12.3
South Ayrshire	9,490	21.1	9,530	21.0	9,611	20.5	90,598	20.6	9,562	20.4	9,711	20.0
South Lanarkshire	26,846	20.9	26,922	20.7	27,026	20.7	27,057	20.6	27,236	20.7	27,487	20.4
Stirling	6,851	19.7	6,697	19.6	6,613	19.9	6,599	19.8	6,537	19.2	6,616	18.6
West Dunbartonshire	8,890	20.9	9,016	20.3	9,065	20.5	9,159	20.2	9,373	20.1	9,431	20.2
West Lothian	14,923	20.4	14,730	20.4	14,439	19.9	14,134	19.7	14,073	19.5	14,069	19.4

	1991		1990		1989		1988		1987
	Total primary pupils	pupil/ teacher ratio	Total primary pupils	pupil/ teacher ratio	Total primary pupils	pupil/ teacher ratio	Total primary pupils	pupil/ teacher ratio	Total primary pupils	pupil/ teacher ratio
Scotland	440,752	19.5	440,534	19.5	437,018	19.7	432,707	20.3	430,865	20.4
Standard Code for Education Authority
Aberdeen City	15,484	20.0	15,299	20.2	15,029	19.9	14,922	20.0	14,907	20.2
Aberdeenshire	21,062	18.4	21,019	18.8	20,852	18.6	20,550	18.6	20,528	18.8
Angus	9,353	19.7	9,288	19.4	9,075	19.5	9,108	19.8	9,023	19.6
Argyll and Bute	8,116	17.5	8,280	17.4	8,233	17.7	8,201	19.6	8,224	19.8
Clackmannanshire	4,374	20.9	4,379	20.0	4,379	19.9	4,276	20.3	4,304	20.5
Dumfries and Galloway	12,772	18.5	12,848	18.6	12,733	19.2	12,405	19.3	12,302	19.1
Dundee City	12,923	20.4	12,807	20.4	12,584	20.4	12,391	20.4	12,382	20.2
East Ayrshire	11,365	20.3	11,225	20.1	11,196	20.3	11,043	21.3	10,976	21.6
East Dunbartonshire	10,383	21.7	10,511	22.0	10,503	21.9	10,533	23.1	10,554	23.1
East Lothian	6,814	19.6	6,802	19.1	6,682	20.1	6,468	19.8	6,477	20.0
East Renfrewshire	8,096	21.8	7,973	22.0	7,918	21.9	7,779	22.9	7,484	23.0
Edinburgh, City of	28,172	20.3	27,851	19.9	27,300	20.2	26,940	20.3	26,767	20.3
Eilean Siar	2,648	14.0	2,756	14.6	2,799	15.0	2,796	15.4	2,928	15.6
Falkirk	12,394	21.2	12,546	21.1	12,474	20.9	12,499	20.9	12,383	21.0
Fife	31,188	19.3	31,208	19.3	30,988	19.6	30,555	20.0	30,554	20.3
Glasgow City	51,901	18.7	51,440	18.6	50,723	19.2	50,219	20.7	49,673	20.5
Highland	19,653	17.4	19,549	17.6	19,527	18.2	19,331	18.6	19,278	18.5
Inverclyde	8,262	20.2	8,332	20.1	8,308	20.3	8,285	21.7	8,314	21.8
Midlothian	7,154	19.5	7,204	19.3	7,247	19.6	7,214	19.9	7,262	19.9
Moray	7,857	18.7	7,580	18.7	7,493	19.1	7,513	18.8	7,606	19.0
North Ayrshire	13,150	20.7	13,220	20.3	13,213	20.9	13,013	21.5	12,974	21.8
North Lanarkshire	31,482	20.2	31,909	20.6	31,936	20.7	31,742	21.5	31,727	21.7
Orkney Islands	1,801	14.1	1,787	14.4	1,783	15.4	1,827	16.3	1,787	15.9
Perth and Kinross	10,191	18.5	10,217	18.5	10,110	18.1	9,876	18.8	9,703	18.6
Renfrewshire	15,628	21.3	15,588	21.2	15,451	21.0	15,389	22.4	15,331	22.2
Scottish Borders	6,520	18.2	8,525	18.1	8,411	18.1	8,327	18.1	8,164	18.6
Shetland Islands	2,244	12.7	2,230	12.8	2,257	12.9	2,338	13.6	2,370	13.7
South Ayrshire	9,748	20.4	9,726	20.0	9,684	20.5	9,577	21.6	9,491	21.5
South Lanarkshire	27,977	20.4	28,254	20.4	28,198	20.9	27,788	21.8	27,646	22.0
Stirling	6,604	18.8	6,727	19.3	6,775	19.3	6,692	19.7	6,775	19.6
West Dunbartonshire	9,506	20.4	9,415	20.5	9,265	20.6	9,144	21.4	9,114	21.5
West Lothian	14,130	19.7	14,041	19.3	13,972	19.5	13,966	19.6	13,857	19.7

	1986		1985		1984		1983		1982
	Total primary pupils	pupil/ teacher ratio	Total primary pupils	pupil/ teacher ratio	Total primary pupils	pupil/ teacher ratio	Total primary pupils	pupil/ teacher ratio	Total primary pupils	pupil/ teacher ratio
Scotland	433,459	20.4	435,454	20.4	437,538	20.4	448,009	20.3	467,971	20.4
Borders	8,213	18.2	8,246	17.7	8,219	18.2	8,353	17.9	8,686	18.2
Central	23,754	20.4	24,158	19.3	24,287	18.9	24,897	18.7	25,850	18.6
Dumfries/Galloway	12,321	19.1	12,313	19.3	12,285	19.1	12,480	19.1	12,799	19.4
Fife	30,602	20.2	31,105	20.2	31,005	20.1	31,388	19.9	32,257	20.4
Grampian	42,941	19.4	43,156	19.3	43,274	19.4	43,827	18.8	45,767	19.0
Highland	19,394	18.8	19,290	18.7	19,168	18.8	19,460	18.9	19,822	19.0
Lothian	54,386	20.1	54,964	20.2	55,745	20.1	58,327	19.9	61,461	19.8
Strathclyde	203,337	21.6	203,521	21.6	204,311	21.6	208,934	21.6	219,231	21.6
Tayside	31,298	20.0	31,335	20.2	31,871	20.3	32,757	20.5	34,278	20.6
Orkney	1,826	15.8	1,825	15.9	1,866	16.0	1,910	16.7	1,910	17.2
Shetland	2,387	13.7	2,386	14.4	2,388	14.0	2,478	14.4	2,564	14.3
Western Isles	3,000	16.8	3,155	17.3	3,119	16.7	3,198	16.2	3,346	16.4

	1981		1980		1979		1978
	Total primary pupils	pupil/ teacher ratio	Total primary pupils	pupil/ teacher ratio	Total primary pupils	pupil/ teacher ratio	Total primary pupils	pupil/ teacher ratio
Scotland	492,645	20.3	518,492	20.3	545,161	20.3	569,124	21.4
Borders	9,156	18.2	9,643	18.4	10,135	18.3	10,460	19.1
Central	27,258	19.1	28,559	19.5	29,737	19.7	30,843	20.0
Dumfries/Galloway	13,457	19.2	14,223	19.1	15,069	19.2	15,831	20.2
Fife	33,733	20.6	35,103	20.7	36,766	21.0	37,715	21.7
Grampian	47,128	18.9	48,352	18.9	49,831	19.0	50,852	19.7
Highland	20,568	19.1	21,275	19.1	22,000	19.1	22,673	19.7
Lothian	64,688	18.6	68,112	18.5	71,816	18.9	74,798	19.7
Strathclyde	232,691	21.6	247,143	21.6	261,721	21.4	276,110	22.9
Tayside	35,164	20.6	37,925	20.8	39,694	20.3	41,408	21.1
Orkney	1,886	16.9	1,923	17.2	2,000	17.3	2,026	18.0
Shetland	2,681	15.0	2,705	15.7	2,711	16.8	2,646	17.3
Western Isles	3,435	16.7	3,529	16.5	3,681	17.1	3,762	17.7

Knee and Hip Replacements

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what estimate he has made of the current average waiting time for each Scottish health board for (a) knee and (b) hip joint replacement operations; and if he will list the five hospitals which have the longest waiting times. [43913]

Mr. Galbraith: The mean waiting time for knee and hip joint replacement operations at 31 March 1998 for each Health Board in Scotland is provided in Table 1. The five hospitals in Scotland with the longest mean waiting time for knee and hip joint replacement operations at 31 March 1998 is provided in Table 2.

Table 1: Knee and hip joint replacement operations carried out by the NHS in Scotland

Mean waiting times by area of residence at 31 March 1998[1]

Area of residence	Knee replacement days	Hip joint replacement days
Argyll & Clyde	189	144
Ayrshire & Arran	108	113
Borders	90	86
Dumfries & Galloway	204	137
Fife	131	115
Forth Valley	237	175
Grampian	94	82
Greater Glasgow	217	181
Highland	182	182
Lanarkshire	125	116
Lothian	145	133

Table 1: Knee and hip joint replacement operations carried out by the NHS in Scotland

Mean waiting times by area of residence at 31 March 1998[1]

Area of residence	Knee replacement days	Hip joint replacement days
Orkney	74	55
Shetland	109	92
Tayside	141	123
Western Isles	75	59
Other/Not Known	106	96
Scotland	155	131

[1] Provisional

Source:

ISD Scotland

Table 2: Knee and hip joint replacement operations carried out by the NHS in Scotland

Hospitals with the longest mean waiting times at 31 March 1998[1]

	Knee operations days	Hip joint operations days
Victoria Infirmary, Glasgow	307	253
Stirling Royal Infirmary	256	193
Royal Alexandra Hospital	215	186
Falkirk & District Royal Infirmary	215	180
Dumfries & Galloway Royal Infirmary	213	168

[1] Provisional

Source:

ISD Scotland.

Mortgage Repossession Orders

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many mortgage repossession orders there were to each court district in each quarter since the first quarter of 1995 to the first quarter of 1998. [43930]

Mr. Dewar: Figures in relation to repossession of property by mortgage lenders have been collected by the courts since a revised system of collected Civil Judicial Statistics was instituted on 1 January 1994. The figures since the first quarter of 1995 to the first quarter of 1998 are shown in the tables. Not all lenders who are granted decree actually enforce them.

Court	1Q 1995	2Q 1995	3Q 1995	4Q 1995	Total
Aberdeen	5	5	24	56	90
Airdrie	23	26	29	28	106
Alloa	8	9	9	11	37
Arbroath	0	3	4	0	7
Ayr	37	26	26	17	106
Banff	1	5	5	6	17
Campeltown	1	3	2	6	12
Cupar	11	7	8	6	32
Dingwall	4	4	5	13	26
Dornoch	1	1	1	1	4
Dumbarton	36	26	36	27	125
Dumfries	16	16	10	16	58
Dundee	28	14	17	35	94
Dunfermline	24	26	40	34	124
Dunoon	5	8	1	0	14
Duns	2	1	5	2	10
Edinburgh	111	73	126	109	419
Elgin	7	9	5	9	30
Falkirk	30	32	25	25	112
Forfar	2	1	0	5	8
Fort William	4	0	0	0	4
Glasgow	155	179	179	176	689
Greenock	0	1	1	6	8
Haddington	13	6	27	18	64
Hamilton	45	60	64	67	236
Inverness	14	17	14	17	62
Jedburgh	5	6	7	3	21
Kilmarnock	44	43	50	57	194
Kirkcaldy	28	45	28	31	132
Kirkcudbright	1	2	5	3	11
Kirkwall	0	1	3	0	4
Lanark	9	14	10	16	49
Lerwick	1	0	2	1	4
Linlithgow	45	43	52	40	180
Lochmaddy	0	2	0	0	2
Oban	2	2	3	1	8
Paisley	22	37	65	79	203
Peebles	2	2	1	4	9
Perth	8	24	25	19	76
Peterhead	4	11	9	11	35
Portree	0	0	2	0	2
Rothesay	0	2	0	3	5
Selkirk	2	5	6	3	16
Stirling	8	11	11	9	39
Stonehaven	9	5	8	10	32
Stornoway	0	0	0	1	1
Stranraer	3	6	7	4	20
Tain	2	0	3	2	7
Wick	0	4	6	0	10
Grand Total	778	823	966	987	3,554

Court	1Q 1996	2Q 1996	3Q 1996	4Q 1996	Total
Aberdeen	54	55	47	46	202
Airdrie	36	26	38	38	138
Alloa	13	5	7	6	31
Arbroath	0	0	4	10	14
Ayr	27	17	25	29	98
Banff	5	5	4	2	16
Campeltown	1	2	1	3	7
Cupar	18	12	14	8	52
Dingwall	3	10	1	0	14
Dornoch	0	1	0	0	1
Dumbarton	32	33	24	16	105
Dumfries	13	23	7	11	54
Dundee	33	47	42	33	165
Dunfermline	39	31	32	30	132
Dunoon	0	0	8	5	13
Duns	4	5	5	2	16
Edinburgh	136	125	139	101	501
Elgin	14	17	16	11	58
Falkirk	40	27	38	37	142
Forfar	8	10	5	6	29
Fort William	0	2	2	2	6
Glasgow	245	215	234	178	872
Greenock	16	15	14	5	50
Haddington	23	24	18	17	82
Hamilton	54	81	76	42	253
Inverness	21	18	15	10	64
Jedburgh	3	9	2	7	21
Kilmarnock	68	60	50	38	216
Kirkcaldy	42	38	36	39	155
Kirkcudbright	7	5	5	2	19
Kirkwall	6	3	4	0	13
Lanark	24	10	16	8	58
Lerwick	2	0	0	1	3
Linlithgow	72	54	39	44	209
Lochmaddy	1	2	1	3	7
Oban	8	2	2	0	12
Paisley	89	46	2	39	176
Peebles	3	1	4	2	10
Perth	34	23	29	23	109
Peterhead	17	22	15	11	65
Portree	3	2	1	2	8
Rothesay	0	0	0	2	2
Selkirk	3	5	5	4	17
Stirling	12	10	8	4	34
Stonehaven	15	13	9	5	42
Stornoway	9	2	1	1	13
Stranraer	2	8	5	5	20
Tain	4	4	4	1	13
Wick	0	0	2	0	2
Grand Total	1,269	1,125	1,056	889	4,339

Court	1Q 1997	2Q 1997	3Q 1997	4Q 1997	Total
Aberdeen	62	37	39	48	186
Airdrie	49	46	47	58	200
Alloa	6	11	12	7	36
Arbroath	16	11	5	5	37
Ayr	36	31	40	35	142
Banff	5	1	6	3	15
Campeltown	1	2	1	3	7

Court	1Q 1997	2Q 1997	3Q 1997	4Q 1997	Total
Cupar	10	11	13	10	44
Dingwall	5	1	9	2	17
Dornoch	0	1	0	0	1
Dumbarton	32	32	26	16	106
Dumfries	10	6	14	12	42
Dundee	38	41	43	27	149
Dunfermline	51	32	31	43	157
Dunoon	2	5	6	5	18
Duns	3	2	3	3	11
Edinburgh	112	140	155	129	536
Elgin	12	6	8	9	35
Falkirk	14	27	35	42	118
Forfar	5	6	3	5	19
Fort William	0	0	3	1	4
Glasgow	184	252	204	229	869
Greenock	9	7	8	22	46
Haddington	20	16	28	24	88
Hamilton	72	52	35	12	171
Inverness	10	28	14	28	80
Jedburgh	8	0	7	7	22
Kilmarnock	55	20	77	69	221
Kirkcaldy	47	54	35	40	176
Kirkcudbright	6	3	6	1	16
Kirkwall	2	0	1	1	4
Lanark	15	15	12	10	52
Lerwick	0	0	2	0	2
Linlithgow	32	42	32	54	160
Lochmaddy	1	0	0	0	1
Oban	5	3	2	2	12
Paisley	3	49	81	65	198
Peebles	2	2	1	2	7
Perth	23	19	25	17	84
Peterhead	13	15	12	13	53
Portree	0	0	1	3	4
Rothesay	2	2	1	2	7
Selkirk	5	10	5	4	24
Stirling	13	14	12	8	47
Stonehaven	10	12	13	5	40
Stornoway	0	4	0	1	5
Stranraer	6	5	7	3	21
Tain	0	4	8	3	15
Wick	0	0	0	0	0
Grand Total	1,012	1,077	1,128	1,088	4,305

Court	1Q 1998
Aberdeen	56
Airdrie	50
Alloa	11
Arbroath	14
Ayr	31
Banff	2
Campeltown	4
Cupar	8
Dingwall	4
Dornoch	1
Dumbarton	53
Dumfries	10
Dundee	32
Dunfermline	45
Dunoon	8
Duns	4
Edinburgh	142
Elgin	9
Falkirk	26
Forfar	7
Fort William	1
Glasgow	208
Greenock	17
Haddington	17
Hamilton	10
Inverness	27
Jedburgh	4
Kilmarnock	66
Kirkcaldy	41
Kirkcudbright	0
Kirkwall	1
Lanark	12
Lerwick	4
Linlithgow	49
Lochmaddy	2
Oban	2
Paisley	101
Peebles	2
Perth	29
Peterhead	22
Portree	1
Rothesay	3
Selkirk	11
Stirling	13
Stonehaven	6
Stornoway	4
Stranraer	4
Tain	3
Wick	0
Grand Total	1,177

Written Answers to Questions

Thursday 4 June 1998

CHURCH COMMISSIONERS

Investments

Mr. Baker: To ask the hon. Member for Middlesbrough, representing the Church Commissioners, for what reasons the format of investment holdings in the 1997 Annual report and Accounts has been changed from that in the 1996 edition in respect of information concerning overseas trusts. [44231]

Mr. Stuart Bell: The list of larger investments in the 1997 Annual Report and Accounts adopted a higher threshold (£6 million) than that in the 1996 Report (which applied a threshold of £3 million for UK equities and £1 million for overseas investments with overseas trusts listed as a separate category under the list of overseas investments). This focuses clearly on the largest holdings, which contribute the greater part of the fund's performance, and also reflects the overall increase in the Commissioners' investments since the threshold was last reviewed. No overseas investments over £6 million were held.

In view of the Commissioners' decision to increase its overseas equities in 1997 and to outsource the management of the overseas portfolio to three separate external fund managers during 1997, with a consequent large increase in the number of individual overseas equity holdings, it was considered opportune to align the disclosure threshold for overseas holdings with that for UK equities.

The overseas investment trusts held at 31 December 1996 represented the Commissioners' only exposure to the markets of the Far East. As a result of the appointment of external overseas equity managers during 1997, many of the overseas investment trust holdings were disposed of by the end of 1997.

Mr. Baker: To ask the hon. Member for Middlesbrough, representing the Church Commissioners, if he will list in tabular form (a) the investment holdings in pounds at 31 December (1) 1996 and (2) 1997 and (b) the sums realised in pounds from the disposal of holdings between 1 January 1997 and 31 December 1997 in (i) Edinburgh Dragon Trust, (ii) Fidelity Japanese Values, (iii) Fleming Japanese Investment Trust, (iv) Fleming Select Japanese Fund, (v) Fleming Select Pacific Fund, (vi) Foreign and Colonial Pacific Investment Trust, (vii) Govett Oriental Investment Trust, (viii) JF Fledgeling Japan, (ix) Mercury European Privatisation Trust, (x) Old Mutual South Africa Trust, (xi) Pacific Assets Trust, (xii) Schroder Asia Pacific Fund, (xiii) Schroder Emerging Countries, (xiv) Schroder Japan Growth Fund, (xv) Schroder Pacific Growth Fund, (xvi) Schroder Tokyo Fund, (xvii) TR European Growth Trust and (xix) Templeton Emerging Markets. [44230]

Mr. Stuart Bell: The relevant information to the question is as follows. The information given provides market valuation at specific dates only, and does not indicate gains or losses.

£

Company	Date	Market value	Total proceeds
i. Edinburgh Dragon Trust	31 December 1996	4,225,000.00
	31 December 1997	0.00	2,723,789.75
ii. Fidelity Japanese Values	31 December 1996	1,299,375.00
	31 December 1997	0.00	768,459.75
iii. Fleming Japanese Investment Trust	31 December 1996	6,514,324.00
	31 December 1997	4,749,684.00
iv. Fleming Select Japanese Fund	31 December 1996	3,354,565.00
	31 December 1997	0.00	2,721,183.92
v. Fleming Select Pacific Fund	31 December 1996	2,775,689.00
	31 December 1997	0.00	1,881,573.14
vi. Foreign and Colonial Pacific Investment Trust	31 December 1996	3,460,063.00
	31 December 1997	2,370,688.00
vii. Govett Oriental Investment Trust	31 December 1996	4,074,000.00
	31 December 1997	0.00	2,488,137.50
viii. JF Fledgling Japan	31 December 1996	2,239,050.00
	31 December 1997	1,228,200.00
ix. Mercury European Privatisation Trust	31 December 1996	1,080,000.00
	31 December 1997	1,914,000.00	includes purchases
x. Old Mutual South Africa Trust	31 December 1996	1,207,500.00
	31 December 1997	1,361,500.00
xi. Pacific Assets Trust	31 December 1996	2,552,000.00
	31 December 1997	0.00	1,235,024.75

£

Company	Date	Market value	Total proceeds
xii. Schroder Asia Pacific Fund	31 December 1996	2,572,075.00
	31 December 1997	[1]1,382.975.00
xiii. Schroder Emerging Countries	31 December 1996	1,625,000.00
	31 December 1997	[1]1,439,000.00
xiv. Schroder Japan Growth Fund	31 December 1996	1,170,000.00
	31 December 1997	[1]1,040,000.00
xv. Schroder Pacific Growth Fund	31 December 1996	4,968,164.00
	31 December 1997	0.00	2,904,068.53
xvi. Schroder Tokyo Fund	31 December 1996	5,540,129.00
	31 December 1997	0.00	4,861,229.78
xvii. TR European Growth "C" Conversion to Ordinary	31 December 1996	1,485,000.00
	31 December 1997	0.00	1,782,973.65
xix. Templeton Emerging Markets	31 December 1996	1,869,146.00
	31 December 1997	1,672,763.00

[1] Indicates a transfer to an Overseas Fund Manager

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Dorchester Road Relief Road

Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when a decision will be made on the financing of the Dorchester Road Relief Road in Weymouth. [43341]

Ms Glenda Jackson [holding answer 1 June 1998]: The Dorchester Road Relief Road scheme was submitted by Dorset County Council for consideration as a PFI scheme for the February 1998 list of local authority PFI projects. Announcing decisions on the list, the Government made it clear that decisions on support for a number of local road schemes (including the Weymouth road scheme) had been deferred until the approach to the appraisal and prioritisation of road schemes had been clarified in the national Roads Review.

Fire Safety

Kate Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) if he will introduce measures to limit the generation of smoke from building products; [44025]

(2) if he will make a statement on the timetable for implementing individual member state's new European Union standards relating to test methods used to determine the fire resistance of construction products; [44023]

(3) if the test method in British Standard 476 Part 33 permits the evaluation of the generation of smoke from building products; and what assessment he has made of the suitability of this as a performance standard for regulatory purposes. [44024]

Mr. Raynsford: The Building Regulations 1991 are intended to secure the health and safety in and around buildings, and paragraph B of Schedule 1 to the Regulations makes functional requirements to cover fire safety. Guidance on how these requirements may be met are given in Approved Document B, and, as far as materials used in construction are concerned, performance standards are set based on recognised test methods.

With regard to the generation of smoke from building products, the only recognised method of test available that measures smoke production is BS 476: Part 33 which relates to a full scale room test for surface products. This test gives an indication of the toxic hazard by the measurement of certain toxic gases and also the hazard of reduced visibility can be estimated by the measurement of the production of light-obscuring smoke. Because of the size of this test, it is not considered practicable to introduce it as a performance standard for regulatory purposes.

Approved Document B (Fire Safety) makes reference to a number of BS 476 parts that are considered to give acceptable methods of test and the key parameters usually considered in fire tests are the heat release rate and flame spread. These in themselves will also have an effect on smoke production. I therefore have no proposals at present to introduce the large-scale test given in BS 476 Part 33 as part of the performance standard for regulatory purpose. However, the use of a fire engineering approach is recognised in Approved Document B and the BS 476: Part 33 method of test could be used as part of the justification for a particular fire engineering solution.

The Single Burning Item (SBI) test being developed in support of the Construction Products Directive, does also address smoke production and we will need to take account of this when revising Approved Document B in the light of any future harmonised European Standards.

The European standards for resistance to fire have been passed to National Standards bodies (in the United Kingdom, the British Standards Institution) by CEN, the European Standards Organisation, for a formal vote, expected to be completed by the end of this month. If there is a positive vote, the test will be ratified and published towards the end of this year by the national standards bodies. Decisions have yet to be taken on the period for which European and national standards will co-exist but a reasonable period will be allowed for industry to adjust before the latter are withdrawn.

Environmental Standards (Prosecution)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many businesses have been prosecuted successfully since 1990 for violating environmental standards in (a) the West Midlands and (b) the United Kingdom. [43223]

Angela Eagle: This information is not held centrally. The Environment Agency took on responsibility for managing and regulating the water environment and controlling industrial pollution and wastes in England and Wales on 1 April 1996. Between then and 31 March 1998, it undertook 1,233 successful prosecutions, of which 229 were in its Midlands region. Local authorities and other bodies also have responsibility for enforcing some environmental controls.

Carbon Dioxide Emissions

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what progress has been made in devising a regulatory framework for the carbon dioxide emissions trading regime outlined in the Kyoto agreement. [43303]

Angela Eagle: Negotiations began on 2 June, at the 8th session of the Subsidiary Bodies of the Framework Convention on Climate Change, on a framework for the international emissions trading regime outlined in the Kyoto Protocol, with a view to developing the necessary principles, modalities and guidelines at the Fourth Conference of the Parties to the Convention in November this year.

Litter Offences

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many on-the-spot litter fines have been issued by Chelmsford Borough Council in each of the last three years; and how many warnings for litter offences were issued in each of the last three years. [44176]

Angela Eagle: Chelmsford Borough Council litter wardens warned 302 people for litter offences in 1995–96 and 347 people in 1996–97. Figures for warnings given in 1997–98 are not yet available. No fixed penalty fines have been issued by Chelmsford Borough Council over the last three years.

Private Landlords

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions which local authorities operate voluntary accreditation schemes for private landlords. [44302]

Mr. Raynsford: My Department does not collect information on this. However, we encourage local authorities, through the Housing Investment Programme guidance, to consider initiatives such as accreditation schemes for private landlords as part of their enabling role in securing an effective private rented sector in their areas. We are aware that a growing number of local authorities are operating such schemes.

"Policy Guidance on Policy Appraisal and the Environment"

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what procedures have been put in place in the Government Office for the Eastern Region to ensure that Policy Guidance on Policy Appraisal and the Environment is implemented. [42660]

Mr. Meacher: The document "Policy Appraisal and the Environment" was sent last month to the Government Office for Eastern Region, as to all Government Offices for the Regions. They are currently establishing the mechanisms to ensure that these criteria are systematically applied in all their investment and programme evaluations.

PRIME MINISTER

Technique LLC

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Prime Minister (1) what information is held by Government departments on Technique LLC; [38551]

(2) what was the nature of any relationship between Her Majesty's Government and Technique LLC in the period 1995 to 1998; [38549]

(3) on what date Her Majesty's Government were informed of the commission payments made by Astra and related companies to Technique LLC; [38548]

(4) on what date Her Majesty's Government were informed of commission payments made to Technique LLC in relation to contracts to supply goods by Astra. [38544]

The Prime Minister: Technique LLC has been the agent in Oman for several UK companies for a number of years. In view of this, HMG officials have had some contact with company staff, primarily through the British Embassy in Muscat. From information readily available within Government, I am not aware of any evidence that HMG was informed of any commission payments to Technique LLC by Astra. Any commission payment made by a non-state company such as Astra, or companies related to it, to a foreign company such as Technique LLC, would have been a matter solely for the companies concerned.

Correspondence

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Prime Minister if he will instruct Ministers to sign their letters to hon. Members. [43421]

The Prime Minister: It is the responsibility of individual Ministers to determine how correspondence is dealt with in their departments. However, I am not aware of any Minister adopting a policy of deliberately not signing their correspondence.

Sierra Leone

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Prime Minister on what date he first became aware of the HM Customs and Excise investigation of allegations against Sandline. [43622]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 2 June 1998]: As has already been made public, I was briefed by the Cabinet Secretary on this matter on 30 April.

Telephone Tapping

Mr. Baker: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Walsall, North (Mr. Winnick) of 30 October 1997, Official Report, column 861, what action is taken in circumstances where a member of the public who is subject to telephone interception makes a telephone call to an hon. Member; and if he will make a statement. [43604]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 3 June 1998]: The Secretary of State may issue a warrant only if he is satisfied that it is necessary for one of the purposes in the Interception of Communications Act 1985; namely, in the interests of national security, for the purpose of preventing or detecting serious crime or for the purpose of safeguarding the economic well-being of the United Kingdom. It is then for the responsible Service to decide how to respond to any communications lawfully intercepted under the warrant, having regard to the safeguards provided in section 6 of the Act.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Legal Aid

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many of the responses received to the Consultation on Legal Aid Reform were from (a) lawyers or lawyers' organisations, (b) members of the public or consumers' organisations and (c) hon. or right hon. Members; and if he will make a statement. [43291]

Mr. Hoon: We have now received 238 responses to the consultation paper Access to Justice with Conditional Fees; 145 from lawyers and lawyers' associations, 28 from members of the public or consumers' organisations and one from an hon. Member, although many hon. and right hon. Members have passed on responses which have been sent to them by constituents.

Community Legal Service

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what plans he has for pilots for the Community Legal Service; and if he will make a statement. [43292]

Mr. Hoon: The Lord Chancellor has announced that proposals for a Community Legal Service will be finalised by the beginning of next year. A consultation paper will be issued in January 1999. Until the Lord Chancellor and I reach our final decisions based on the responses to that consultation paper, I cannot predict whether any pilot projects will be appropriate.

Stephen Lawrence Case

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what amount of legal aid was given to those charged with the murder of Stephen Lawrence. [44177]

Mr. Hoon: The total amount of legal aid paid in respect of proceedings in the magistrates' court was £76,962. A further £129,007 was paid in respect of proceedings in the Crown Court.

Court Payments

Maria Eagle: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what steps he is taking to ensure that courts pay out within a reasonable time scale moneys they hold on behalf of parties. [42750]

Mr. Hoon: The Charter for Court Users states that court staff are expected to instruct the Court Funds Office (where moneys are held on interest-bearing accounts) within 10 working days of the court order, to arrange payments to the parties. Management information systems are in place to identify any work not dealt with within 5 working days. Once the requests are received, the Court Funds Office aims to process them within 5 working days.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Youth Clubs

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what representations he has received on the proportion of Lottery funding awarded to youth clubs. [43607]

Mr. Banks: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State receives many representation on Lottery funding, but he has received none specifically relating to youth clubs. However, over 1,300 awards worth in excess of £170 million have been made to projects which are specifically designed to benefit young people and youth groups.

S4C

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what was the level of subsidy provided to S4C Welsh Television Channel, for the 1997–98 financial year. [44109]

Mr. Fisher: S4C is funded on a calendar year basis, under a statutory formula, and the level of funding from 1998 is linked to the Retail Prices Index (RPI). The grant in 1997 was £72.223 million; the grant for 1998 is £74.895 million.

Elgin Marbles

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what representations he has received from the Government of Greece since 1 May 1997 requesting the return of the Elgin Marbles. [44332]

Mr. Fisher: There have been no formal representations from the Government of the Hellenic Republic requesting the return of the Elgin Marbles.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Drivers (Mobile Telephones)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prosecutions of motorists for driving a motor vehicle while using a mobile telephone there were in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [43632]

Mr. Michael: The information requested is not available.

There is no separate offence of driving a vehicle while using a mobile telephone, and any prosecution is likely to be driving without due care and attention, for which there were 66,858 prosecutions in England and Wales in 1996 (73,015 in 1995, 76,251 in 1994 and 79,415 in 1993). Figures for 1997 are not yet available.

It is also possible for such drivers to be prosecuted or issued with a fixed penalty for not being in proper control of a vehicle (Regulation 104 of the Road Vehicles (Construction and Use) Regulations 1986), but such cases cannot be separately identified in the statistics collected centrally.

Curfew Orders

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many curfew orders backed by electronic tagging have been made by the courts in the pilot areas of (a) Norfolk and East Anglia, (b) Greater Manchester and (c) Reading and Berkshire since the trial commenced in July 1995; how many have been (i) completed satisfactorily and (ii) breached; and how many are still current. [43880]

Ms Quin: The following table shows the position in relation to curfew orders made in the seven pilot areas as of 26 May 1998.

Trial area	Total offenders sentenced	Sentences completed	Total sentences revoked	Revoked through breach [1]	Revoked for other reasons	Currently being monitored
Berkshire	96	68	14	6	1	15
Greater Manchester	843	542	105	36	8	192
Norfolk	354	231	31	23	8	92
Cambridgeshire[2]	20	2	1	1	0	17
Middlesex	29	3	3	3	0	22
Suffolk	13	1	1	1	0	11
West Yorkshire	22	5	1	1	0	15
Total	1,377	852	156	71	17	364

[1] Separate figures on the reasons for breaches were only collected in all trial areas from August 1997
[2] The trials in Cambridgeshire, Middlesex, Suffolk and West Yorkshire began in January 1998

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when it is planned to extend curfew orders on a national basis; and which companies will be competing for the contract. [43878]

Ms Quin: Further to my answer to my hon. Friend the Member for Gedling (Mr. Coaker), of 17 March 1998, Official Report, columns 559–60, four bidders have been short-listed for the electronic monitoring services contracts. They are General Security Services Corporation, Securicor Custodial Services, Premier Prisons Limited and Group 4 Prison and Court Services Limited. National roll-out of court-ordered curfews is unlikely to be before late 1999.

Sex Offenders

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what categorisation his Department has made of sex offenders to indicate the estimated degree of risk each one poses to the public; and if he will make a statement. [43711]

Mr. Michael: Agencies are increasingly co-operating to pool the information they hold so that they can asses the risk presented by any individual sex offender and devise plans to monitor the offender's behaviour and reduce risk to the public. The Government are encouraging this multi-agency approach to both assessment and management in the community.

Sex offenders are subject to a risk assessment by the agency (or agencies) responsible for them on release from prison and/or whilst under supervision in the community. In the case of offenders subject to restrictions under the Mental Health Act, this assessment takes place before consent is given to their being granted leave of absence or transferred or discharged from hospital.

Because most of these assessments are made on a case-by-case basis, there are no all-inclusive central statistics or categorisations of them.

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action he is taking to prevent sex offenders from being employed in occupations with access to children and to prevent children being abused by people who are in a position of trust over them. [44827]

Mr. Michael: There are a number of statutory safeguards already in place. Criminal record checks are available on people working in the statutory sector where they have substantial unsupervised access to children. They are also available on teachers in the private and voluntary sectors. The Police Act 1997 contains provisions which will widen access to criminal record checks when they are implemented. The Sex Offenders Act 1997 imposes a requirement on those convicted or cautioned for sex offences against children and other serious sex offences to notify the police of their name and address and any changes to these. This allows the police to monitor sex offenders in the community and to take action where appropriate to warn potential employers of any risk they might present. The Government have made it clear that such information must not just sit on a computer or gather dust on a file and the police and probation services have responded positively and responsibly using this information for the protection of children and vulnerable adults, as intended. The Government are also introducing sex offender orders in the Crime and Disorder Bill [Lords] which will apply to sex offenders if their behaviour indicates a possible threat to the public. The courts will be able to make an order to impose prohibitions necessary to protect the community. There are also a number of other measures in place to prevent those considered unsuitable to work with children from gaining employment with them. The Department for Education and Employment maintains "List 99" which contains information about people whom the Secretary of State has barred from working in schools; the Department of Health operates a Consultancy Service Index which enables local authorities and private and voluntary childcare organisations in England and Wales to check on suitability of those they propose to employ; and many professional bodies have codes of conduct which set out members' responsibilities in this area and provide for disciplinary action to be taken when these codes are breached.

We are concerned that these safeguards are not fully integrated and that there is a need for a more streamlined approached to ensure that there are no loopholes. For this reason, the Government are setting up an inter-departmental working group of officials to consider additional safeguards to prevent those who are unsuitable from working with children, including the possibility of a central register backed up by a new criminal offence to prevent those on the register applying for work with children. In looking at this subject, the group will draw upon the consultation exercise "Sex Offenders: A Ban on Working with Children"; and on recommendations made in the report of Sir William Utting's review of safeguards for children living away from home (particularly those recommendations dealing with choosing the right staff) and the Government's response to this review which is expected to be published by the Ministerial Task Force on the Children's Safeguards Review in the summer. The group will also consider whether further measures are necessary to protect 16 and 17 years olds who may be vulnerable to abuse by those in a position of trust, such as carers, teachers and leaders of organised residential activities. It is expected that the group will make its final recommendations to Ministers by the end of the year.

Metropolitan Police Force (Ethnic Minorities)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) men and (b) women from ethnic minorities were serving in the Metropolitan Police Force on 1 May. [43657]

Mr. Michael: The Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis tells me that the closest date for which it is possible to provide these figures is 5 May, as figures are collated on the first Monday of each month. The numbers of ethnic minorities serving in the Metropolitan Police on 5 May were (a) 665 men and (b) 190 women. The current percentage of ethnic minority officers is 3.2 per cent. During the 1996–97 financial year, 694 new officers were recruited, of whom 6.7 per cent. came from ethnic minority backgrounds. The following table shows how the percentage of ethnic minority officers has increased steadily from 1.98 per cent. in 1991–92.

Financial year	Ethnic minorities strength	Percentage of force
1991–92	563	1.98
1992–93	614	2.2
1993–94	671	2.4
1994–95	730	2.6
1995–96	797	2.9
1996–97	822	3.0
1997–98	856	3.2

Note:
Figures from Commissioner's annual reports

Prison Suicides

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) men and (b) women committed suicide in prisons in England and Wales in each of the last three years. [43664]

Ms Quin: The term used by Prison Service to refer to an apparent suicide is "self-inflicted death". This is a broader definition and includes all those deaths where it is clear that the person has acted specifically to take his or her own life. It is not restricted to the official verdict from the Coroner's inquest, where verdicts of "suicide", "open" or "misadventure" may be recorded in cases where there was doubt about a person's intent to end their life.

The information requested is shown in the table.

Self-inflicted deaths in prisons in England and Wales 1995–97

Year	Women	Men	Total
1995	2	57	59
1996	2	62	64
1997	3	67	70

UK Visa Applications (Nigeria)

Mr. Godsiff: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many Nigerian nationals applied for entry clearance to come to the United Kingdom as visitors; how many visitor visas were issued; and how many recipients of those visas returned to Nigeria before their visas expired in (i) 1994, (ii) 1995, (iii) 1996 and (iv) 1997. [43336]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Information on the number of Nigerian nationals applying for entry clearance to come to the United Kingdom as visitors, and the number of recipients of such visas who return to Nigeria before their visas expire, is not collected centrally.

The total number of entry clearance applications to the United Kingdom for temporary purposes made in Nigeria in 1994 to 1997, and the total numbers granted, initially or on appeal, are shown in the table. Visitor applications are not separately identified, but they form the main part of applications for temporary purposes: also included are applications from students.

Applications received in Nigeria for entry clearance to the United Kingdom for temporary purposes, and applications granted, 1994 to 1997

	1994	1995	1996	1997
Applications received	53,362	41,580	49,438	49,471
Applications granted	36,089	28,466	38,680	33,365

Prison Service Property, Freckleton

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish the prices received by the Prison Service for each of its properties sold in the Mede, Freckleton, this year to date and in each of the last five years, identifying the house concerned by number and indicating if it was bricked or unbricked. [43870]

Ms Quin: The Prison Service has sold only one property on the Mede estate within the last five years; the property concerned was 6, The Mede. The District Valuer placed a value of £38,000 on the property as at 6 April 1993. It was purchased under the discount sale scheme and the applicant was entitled to 59 per cent. discount; the purchase price therefore was £15,580.

The property was of Cornish type construction or "unbricked".

Road Traffic Offences

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department in what percentage of road accidents involving one or more (a) fatal, (b) serious and (c) slight injuries at least one driver or rider was convicted of a road traffic offence, in the latest year for which figures are available. [44000]

Mr. Michael: The information requested is not available. The Department of Environment, Transport and the Regions collects statistics of road accidents, but its records do not show whether persons involved are subsequently convicted of a road traffic offence.

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of convictions for road traffic offences heard in (a) magistrates courts and (b) Crown courts related to incidents involving one or more fatal, serious or slight injuries, in the latest year for which figures are available. [44001]

Mr. Michael: The available information relates to convictions for offences of causing death by dangerous or careless driving, by aggravated vehicle taking and causing bodily harm in England and Wales in 1996.

Convictions for offences of causing death numbered ten at magistrates' courts and offences of causing bodily harm three. The total number of convictions for motoring offences at magistrates' courts was 1,476,991. The Crown Court figures were 329 and 28 respectively, and the total convictions for motoring offences 15,397.

The information held centrally does not enable other offences involving injury to be identified.

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) male and (b) female motorists aged (i) 17 to 24, (ii) 25 to 59 and (iii) 60 years and over were convicted in relation to motoring of (1) causing death or bodily harm, (2) dangerous driving, (3) alcohol or drug-related offences, (4) careless driving, (5) speed limit offences and (6) offences related to neglect of traffic directions, in the latest year for which figures are available. [43997]

Mr. Michael: The following table gives the information in relation to offences of causing death or bodily harm, dangerous driving and driving etc. after consuming alcohol or taking drugs. The figures relate to the number of offences for which persons of the relevant age and sex were convicted, not the number of persons involved.

Findings of guilt at all courts for selected offence groups, by age and sex of offender, England and Wales—1996

	Male				Female
	All ages[1]	17–24	25–59	60+	All ages[1]	17–24	25–59	60+
Causing death or bodily harm	348	157	169	14	22	2	20	—
Dangerous driving	5,584	2,801	2,454	42	166	63	92	6
Driving etc. after consuming alcohol or taking drugs	87,956	22,018	63,119	2,373	7,749	1,565	6,014	147

[1] Includes offences committed by persons under 17

The exact age of persons over 20 is not collected centrally for offences of careless driving, speed limit offences or offences of neglect of traffic directions, but the following table gives the nearest information to that requested.

Findings of guilt at all courts for selected offence groups, by age and sex of offender, England and Wales—1996

	Male			Female
	All ages[1]	Under 21	21 and over	All ages	Under 21	21 and over
Careless driving	48,790	7,796	40,994	8,632	992	7,640
Speed limit offences	115,388	6,854	108,535	14,651	666	13,985
Neglect of traffic directions	30,223	2,549	27,674	5,083	264	4,819

[1] Includes offences committed by persons under 17

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many random roadside checks on motorists were carried out by police; and how many of these motorists were driving while disqualified, in the latest year for which figures are available. [43996]

Mr. Michael: Information is not available on the number of random roadside checks carried out by the police on motorists. There were 42,508 convictions for driving while disqualified in England and Wales in 1996.

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many fines were issued for motoring offences; and of these how many (a) were paid without a reminder, (b) were paid after a reminder and (c) remained unpaid after 12 months in 1996. [43994]

Mr. Michael: 1,032,897 fines were issued in England and Wales during 1996, but it is not known how many were paid or unpaid.

Fines are collected from the courts by the Lord Chancellor's Department for passing to the Treasury, and it is not possible to distinguish the offences for which the fines were given.

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) on how many occasions motorists were found guilty of a motoring offence for which they had (a) already received a written warning during the previous three years and (b) already been convicted in the previous three years, in the latest year for which figures are available; [43999]

(2) on how many occasions motorists were issued with a written warning for a motoring offence for which they had already received a written warning during the latest year for which figures are available and the previous three years. [43998]

Mr. Michael: The information held centrally does not enable the previous records of motorists to be compared with the latest offence committed or dealt with. The Home Office Offenders' Index covers the criminal history of offenders, but this is limited to convictions for standard list offences and covers very few motoring offences.

Alcohol (Young Persons)

Mr. Gareth Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what steps he has taken to clarify the law on the use of children in test purchases of alcohol; [44032]

(2) what steps he has taken to introduce legislation to prevent adults from buying alcohol on behalf of unsupervised children. [44033]

Mr. George Howarth: The Government's statement of 17 July 1997 on alcopops and alcohol misuse by those under age included commitments to legislate on both these subjects. We shall do so as soon as there is a suitable opportunity.

Firearms

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish on the same date, in the Welsh and English languages, the firearms and shotgun application forms and certificates that are currently under revision. [44097]

Mr. Michael: The Government's priority in revising the Firearms Rules is to implement the changes to firearms licensing provided for in the Firearms (Amendment) Act 1997 and as recommended by Lord Cullen in his report on the Dunblane tragedy. Because of the pressing need to introduce the new Rules, the prescribed firearms licensing forms will be published in English in the first instance but we have discussed with the Welsh Language Board our wish to produce these complex forms in Welsh as well as English. We will publish Welsh language versions of the forms as soon as possible.

Prisoners (Drugs)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what are the total numbers of prisoners who have been found in random tests to have taken (a) cocaine, (b) methadone, (c) amphetamines, (d) benzodiazepines, (e) barbiturates and (f) LSD, since the tests were introduced; what percentage of prisoners had taken the drugs in each case; and what changes have taken place in the proportions of these six categories of drugs. [44345]

Mr. George Howarth: Table A shows how many samples tested positive for each drug since all prisons began testing in April 1996, and the percentage of all samples tested that represents, calculated to one decimal place. It is not possible to say how many different prisoners tested positive because the data are anonymised when collated centrally.

Tables B and C show the percentage of random samples positive for all drug types tested for in each month of the last two financial years. There has been no significant change in the percentages of samples testing positive for the drug types named in this question.

Random mandatory drug test samples testing positive by drug type, 1 April 1996 to 31 March 1998

Table A

Drug type	Number of tests positive	Percentage of samples tested positive
Cocaine	311	0.3
Methadone	211	0.2
Amphetamines	298	0.3
Benzodiazepines	1,664	1.4
Barbiturates	45	0
LSD	0	0

Monthly percentage of random samples taken testing positive: April 1996—March 1997

Table B

Drug group	April	May	June	July	August	September	October	November	December	January	February	March
Cannabis	20.9	19.7	18.5	19.3	19.6	19.7	20.2	20.4	20.5	20.8	19.6	19.2
Opiates	5.1	5.1	4.6	6.0	5.9	6.0	5.4	5.6	6.4	5.3	4.4	4.6
Cocaine	0.2	0.3	0.2	0.2	0.3	0.3	0.2	0.3	0.2	0.3	0.2	0.2
Benzodiazepines	1.5	2.1	1.9	1.3	1.3	1.4	1.2	1.2	1.1	1.5	1.2	1.4
Methadone	0.2	0.2	0.2	0.2	0.3	0.2	0.2	0.1	0.4	0.2	0.2	0.2
Amphetamines	0.2	0.2	0.2	0.1	0.2	0.2	0.2	0.1	0.2	0.4	0.4	0.4
Barbiturates	0.0	0.0	0.1	0.1	0.0	0.1	0.0	0.1	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0
LSD	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0

Monthly percentage of random samples taken testing positive: April 1997—March 1998

Table C

Drug group	April	May	June	July	August	September	October	November	December	January	February	March
Cannabis	20.3	19.8	17.8	16.6	15.4	15.9	15.8	15.3	16.7	15.8	13.8	15.1
Opiates	4.3	3.8	3.8	4.2	3.7	4.0	4.2	4.1	4.6	4.3	4.3	4.6
Cocaine	0.2	0.4	0.2	0.2	0.2	0.2	0.2	0.2	0.4	0.3	0.3	0.3
Benzodiazepines	1.2	1.1	1.4	1.3	1.3	0.8	1.0	1.6	1.5	1.4	1.5	1.3
Methadone	0.2	0.2	0.1	0.1	0.2	0.1	0.2	0.1	0.1	0.2	0.1	0.1
Amphetamines	0.3	0.4	0.3	0.3	0.2	0.1	0.2	0.2	0.1	0.2	0.3	0.4
Barbiturates	0.0	0.0	0.1	0.1	0.0	0.0	0.1	0.0	0.1	0.0	0.0	0.0
LSD	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0

Human Rights

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which body will monitor the United Kingdom's adherence to the European Convention on Human Rights. [44564]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: A person claiming to be a victim of a violation of the Convention rights may petition the European Commission of Human Rights in Strasbourg. A case may then go from the Commission to the European Court of Human Rights, whose decision is binding. The Committee of Ministers of the Council of Europe supervises the execution of the Court's judgment.

The Human Rights Bill does not change this position, but it will additionally enable people in the United Kingdom to assert their Convention rights in domestic legal proceedings.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the effect of the incorporation into United Kingdom law of the European Convention on Human Rights on individuals' privacy. [44565]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The United Kingdom is already under an international obligation, as a party to the European Convention on Human Rights, not to violate Article 8 of the Convention which guarantees the right to respect for private and family life.

The Human Rights Bill will make it possible for this and the other Convention rights to be invoked in domestic proceedings in the United Kingdom. Decisions will be for the courts.

DEFENCE

Armed Service Personnel

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many women are currently serving in each of the three armed services. [44117]

Dr. Reid: As at 1 April 1998, the number of women serving in the Armed Forces was:

	Officers	Other ranks	Total
Naval Service	453 (7.3%)	2,809 (7.7%)	3,262 (7.3%)
Army	1,172 (8.4%)	6,260 (6.5%)	7,432 (6.8%)
Royal Air Force	939 (9.4%)	4,067 (9.1%)	5,006 (9.0%)
All Services	2,564 (7.9%)	13,136 (7.4%)	15,700 (7.5%)

National Data Centre

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) when the contract to run the United Kingdom National Data Centre was put out to tender; [44340]

(2) the contract to run the United Kingdom National Data Centre was advertised; [44342]

(3) if the United Kingdom National Data Centre has responsibility for monitoring data provided by the United Nations on nuclear testing. [44341]

Mr. Spellar: Invitations to tender for the contract to establish the UK National Data Centre were issued in June 1997, the project having been advertised in the MOD Contracts Bulletin on 15 January 1997. Tenders were received from the British Geological Survey, BGS, and a consortium comprising AWE, Serco and Assessment Services. The contract was subsequently awarded to the BGS and took effect in January 1998. When operational, the National Data Centre will be responsible for evaluating technical data supplied by the International Data Centre, IDC, which is being established in Vienna under the provisions of the Comprehensive Test Ban Treaty. The technical data will be provided by the IDC from monitoring stations established throughout the world as part of the International Monitoring System, IMS.

Procurement Contracts

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what percentage of defence manufacturing contracts in the United Kingdom in terms of the (a) number and (b) value of contracts were undertaken for (i) the United Kingdom Government, (ii) other EU states and (iii) states outside the EU in the years 1991–92 to 1997–98. [43412]

Mr. Spellar: The information is not available in the form requested, but:

UK Defence Statistics 1997—Table 1.5 gives net expenditure for equipment procurement for production and repair and spares for 1997–98 of £7,173 million as an estimate of the value of manufacturing contracts placed by UK Government in total.

Statement on the Defence Estimates 1996—Figure 8 shows that the proportion of equipment expenditure over the previous five years in the UK and on collaborative projects was 91 per cent. of the total equipment expenditure.

UK Defence Statistics 1997—Table 1.13 shows exports of defence equipment (deliveries) for 1996 to NATO and other Western European countries at £1,055 million and to other countries at £2,347 million.

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what EU rules and regulations govern the competitive tendering of defence procurement contracts by his Department; [43414]

(2) what EU rules and regulations govern the competitive tendering of defence procurement contracts by member state Governments of the EU; [43413]

(3) if defence procurement contracts in all EU member states are open to competitive tendering to manufacturing companies in other EU member states. [43415]

Mr. Spellar: Procurement contracts for Defence goods and services in all EU member states are open to competitive tendering by companies in other EU member states, in accordance with the four EC Directives:

Supplies Directive: 93/36/EEC

Works Directive: 93/37/EEC

Services Directive: 92/50/EEC

Compliance Directive: 89/665/EEC.

The Directives have been implemented in UK law by Regulations made by the Treasury under Section 2(2) of the European Communities Act 1972, as follows:

The Public Supply Contracts Regulations 1995 (SI 1995/201)

The Public Works Contracts Regulations 1991 (SI 1991/2680)

The Public Services Contracts Regulations 1993 (SI 1993/3228).

The fundamental principles of the Directives are that there should be an equal opportunity to bid for work without discrimination on grounds of nationality, that the award criteria should be stated clearly at the outset, and that there should be transparency in the award decision.

There is an exemption under the Directive for those goods and services to which the provision of Article 223 of the Treaty of Rome apply.

Sierra Leone

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 1 June 1998, Official Report, column 103, on awards of the Military Cross, how many United Kingdom forces were serving in Sierra Leone in the two weeks either side of the occasion in which a service man was awarded the Military Cross in 1997; and which units they served in. [44232]

Dr. Reid: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given to the hon. Member for Spelthorne (Mr. Wilshire) on 18 May 1998, Official Report, column 255–57, and to my subsequent letter of 1 June 1998, a copy of which has been placed in the Library of the House.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Widow's Pension

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many women were widowed aged under 45 years in each of the last three years; what percentage of these received (a) the widowed mother's allowance and (b) widow's pension and in each case at what cost; and if she will make a statement. [41630]

Mr. Denham: Information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is set out in the table.

The number of new widows under 45 years receiving Widowed Mother's Allowance and associated cost

£ million

Year widowed	Number	Overall cost
October 1994-September 1995	4,640	18
October 1995-September 1996	4,480	19
October 1996-September 1997	3,920	17

Notes:

1. The table is based on the Pension Strategy Computer System and only includes cases in Great Britain. The percentage figures are based on information from the Family Resources Survey 1995–96
2. Women widowed aged under 45 since 1988 are not entitled to a Widows Pension
3. Monetary amounts are rounded to the nearest £1 million and are in cash prices
4. Percentages are rounded to the nearest one per cent.

The percentage of all widows aged under 45 who received Widowed Mothers Allowance in 1994–95 was 62 per cent.

The percentage of all widows aged under 45 who received Widowed Mothers Allowance in 1995–96 was 65 per cent.

Lone Parents

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what assumptions about the rate of response to initial letters to lone parents underlay the budgeting for the Parent Plus pilots; and what has been the actual response rate to initial letters under the New Deal for lone parents. [40209]

Mr. Keith Bradley: Budgeting for the Parent Plus pilots was based on the assumption that 35 per cent. of lone parents sent a letter would attend an initial interview and, of those, 50 per cent. would agree to participate, giving a take-up rate of 17.5 per cent. The same assumptions were made in the initial plans for the New Deal for Lone Parents.

Lone parents have attended interviews in response to various contacts: directly in response to letters of invitation, and indirectly in response to publicity, and word of mouth. As of 24 April 1998, there were 25,805 contacts with lone parents, which includes 22,402 lone parents who had been sent letters. 5,508 lone parents have attended an interview in response to a letter or other publicity; and 4,901 have agreed to participate in the New Deal for Lone Parents, following an interview. This means that approximately 90 per cent. of those attending an interview have agreed to participate; and produces a take-up rate of 19 per cent., higher than the original assumption.

A full independent evaluation of the New Deal for Lone Parents is being undertaken, to report in Autumn 1999. This will assess the overall effectiveness of the programme.

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will estimate the average income of an unemployed lone mother with three dependent children in (a) London, (b) Birmingham, (c) Manchester, (d) Glasgow and (e) Edinburgh in each year between 1993–94 and 1998–99 broken down by benefit. [43915]

Mr. Keith Bradley: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is set out in the tables.

Data on the average incomes of unemployed lone mothers in each of the cities named in the question are not available.

There may be unemployed lone mothers with income (from other sources, for example child maintenance) of a level which will affect their entitlement to Income Support or JSA, Free School Meals and Welfare Food. Child Benefit is payable in full irrespective of income.

Social Security (SS) benefit entitlement—1993–94 to 1997–98 and (existing claimants only) 1998–99 for an unemployed lone mother with three dependent children

£

Year	IS/JSA	Child benefit	Free school meals and welfare foods	SS benefit entitlement
1993–94	78.55	32.25	10.49	121.29
1994–95	82.30	32.85	10.84	125.99
1995–96	83.65	33.60	11.40	128.65
1996–97	85.95	34.70	10.76	131.41
1997–98	88.35	35.10	10.90	134.35
from April 1998	90.35	35.70	10.96	137.01
from November 1998	95.35	35.70	10.96	142.01

Note:

From 6 April 1998, new claimants receive different rates.

Social Security (SS) benefit entitlement—1998–99 for an unemployed lone mother with three dependent children

£

	IS/JSA	Child benefit	Free school meals and welfare foods	SS benefit entitlement
from April 1998	85.65	35.70	10.96	132.31
from July 1998	91.30	30.05	10.96	132.31
from November 1998	96.30	30.05	10.96	137.31

Notes:

1. These tables show lone parents' Social Security benefit entitlements (excluding Housing Benefit and Council Tax Benefit)
2. An unemployed lone mother's Social Security benefit entitlement (excluding Housing Benefit and Council Tax Benefit) is made up of (a) Income Support (IS) or, for some lone mothers, JSA; (b) Child Benefit (ChB); and (c) Free School Meals and Welfare Foods (FSM & WF). There is no regional variation in the rates of these benefits
3. Lone mothers who are unemployed and in receipt of Income Support (IS) or JSA may receive help with their housing costs—through Housing Benefit (HB) or Income Support Mortgage Interest (ISMI)—and with their council tax—through Council Tax Benefit (CTB)
4. Gross benefit entitlement figures for lone mothers (ie before housing costs) would show a variation by city, since rents and Council Tax (and therefore Housing Benefit and Council Tax Benefit) vary by city
5. IS claimants are entitled to welfare foods (free milk tokens and vitamins) for any children they have under 5 years old and free school meals for children they have aged 5 and over. The value of free school meals is based on the January 1991 figure uprated by the RPI food component each year. The value of welfare foods is an estimate based on the average cost of a pint of milk
6. The figures assume:

(a) take up of full benefit entitlement, and

(b) the family has no capital or disregarded income

7. The figures shown assume one child to be under 5, another between 5 and 10 years old and the third between 11 and 15 years old
8. The removal of the lone parent rate of Child Benefit, which is reflected in table 2, is subject to Parliamentary approval of the necessary regulations

Concessionary Television Licences

Mr. Peter Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people qualify for concessionary television licences under the Chronically Sick and Disabled Persons Acts; and how many are currently claiming their entitlement. [43803]

Mr. Boateng: I have been asked to reply.

Concessionary television licences are not provided under the Chronically Sick and Disabled Persons Act 1970, but under the Wireless Telegraphy (Television Licence Fees) Regulations 1997 (made under the Wireless Telegraphy Act 1947) which is the responsibility of the Department for Culture, Media and Sport. Under these Regulations, a concessionary television licence costing £5 is available to people living in residential homes and certain types of sheltered accommodation. There are currently 651,000 beneficiaries under this scheme. It is not known how many people qualify for the concession and fail to claim, but the number is likely to be low, since applications for the concession have to be submitted by housing managers, who are generally well aware of the existence of the concessionary scheme.

Registered blind people are also eligible for a reduction of £1.25 in the television licence fee. Approximately 34,400 people are currently claiming this reduction. At 31 March 1997, there were 158,590 registered blind people in England.

The Chronically Sick and Disabled Persons Act 1970 (Section 2(1)(b)) places a duty upon local authorities to make arrangements to provide a disabled person with, or to assist that person in obtaining, wireless, television, library or similar recreational facilities, where the authority is satisfied that this is necessary in order to meet that person's needs. The number of persons receiving such provision is not known.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Ministerial Papers

Mr. Redwood: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what instructions she has given on the information which she wishes to be drawn to her attention (a) in red boxes and (b) otherwise; and if she will indicate when and how these instructions have been modified. [42587]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 18 May 1998]: I expect information to be drawn to my attention by my Private Office, according to its urgency and importance. The only instructions I have given on handling such information are that I prefer to deal with papers as and when possible throughout the day, rather than having them put aside to go in red boxes if this is unnecessary. These instructions are unchanged.

Sierra Leone

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the President of the Board of Trade at what time and on what date she first saw a copy of the letter addressed to the Foreign Secretary from S J Berwin & Co. on behalf of Sandline International dated 24 April. [42130]

Mrs. Beckett: My Department provided advice to Ministers on this letter on Wednesday 6 May 1998, when I was overseas. Following my return I saw the text of the letter on Tuesday 12 May.

Mr. Blunt: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) on what dates since 1 May 1997 the Restricted Enforcement Unit has met; and on how many occasions the Unit has invited Her Majesty's Customs and Excise to commence an investigation into illegal arms exports in breach on UN Security Council resolutions; [42693]

(2) if she will list the officials who attended the Cross-departmental Restricted Enforcement Unit on 18 February. [42695]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 19 May 1998]: I refer the hon. Member to the statement by the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs in the House during the debate on 18 May 1998, Official Report, columns 606–08, in which he announced the investigation by Sir Thomas Legg KCB QC into allegations about Government involvement with the supply of arms to Sierra Leone by UK citizens and firms, and said that the Terms of Reference would be placed in the Library of the House. The Foreign and Commonwealth Secretary intends to publish the report of the investigation.

Restricted Enforcement Unit

Mr. Blunt: To ask the President of the Board of Trade which departments are represented on the Restricted Enforcement Unit. [42692]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 19 May 1998]: The following Departments are represented at the Restricted Enforcement Unit:

The Foreign and Commonwealth Office
The Department of Trade and Industry
The Ministry of Defence
HM Customs and Excise
The Security Service
The Secret Intelligence Service
Government Communications Headquarters.

Printing, Packaging and Graphics Industry

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what fiscal steps her Department has taken to encourage entrepreneurial investment in the United Kingdom printing, packaging and graphic communications industry. [43693]

Mr. Battle: The Government have taken a number of steps to encourage long-term investment and enterprise in all our industries. These include measures to promote economic stability, cuts in corporation tax, increased first-year capital allowances for SMEs, and the reform of capital gains tax and the Enterprise Investment Scheme. The Government have also published a document, "Innovating for the Future: Investing in R&D" as the basis for a wide-ranging consultation to see how we can improve our record on investment in research and development. Furthermore, the Chancellor recently announced three new venture capital funds totalling £240 million to support small and medium businesses.

Straw Burning

Mr. Oaten: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans she has to develop straw burning as an alternative form of energy in the United Kingdom. [43551]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 1 June 1998]: A 31 MW straw-powered project at Ely, Cambridgeshire, was contracted under the third non-fossil fuel obligation, NFFO-3, and is now at an advanced stage of development. I shall monitor the progress of this project in order to inform decisions resulting from my review of new and renewable energy policy on the prospects for straw as a fuel, and on the eligibility of this energy source in any future NFFO arrangements.

County Courts

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans she has for the re-division of county courts between official receivers' officers; if she will list which courts are to be moved to which official receivers' offices; and when these changes will be implemented. [43848]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: This is an operational matter for the Inspector General and Chief Executive of the Insolvency Service. I have asked him to reply direct to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Joyce to Mr. David Chidgey, dated 4 June 1998:

Mr. Nigel Griffiths MP, Minister for Competition and Consumer Affairs, has asked me as Inspector General and Chief Executive of The Insolvency Service Executive Agency to reply to your question about the re-division of county courts between official receivers' offices.

The Insolvency Service is implementing a new grading and pay system to come into effect on 1 August 1998. As part of that, it is looking at some adjustments to the case loads of some official receivers' offices, which will be achieved by the re-allocation of the work of some county courts between those offices. Consideration of those re-allocations has yet to be concluded, and I am therefore not yet in a position to provide a full list of the changes. I have however given an undertaking to supply the list to the Trade Union Side of the Agency National Whitley Committee by 2 July, and a copy will be made available to relevant staff: that timetable is expected to be met. The changes will take place over a period of time. The timing will be dependent on a number of factors, including current staffing levels in offices, but I do not see them involving any redundancies, compulsory transfers or office closures.

Post Office Review

Mr. Boswell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many contacts she has had with private sector carriers in the context of the Post Office review. [43807]

Mr. Ian McCartney: I met several leading private sector carriers, and a representative organisation (AICES), during the first phase of the review last year. I am also aware of the evidence presented to the Trade and Industry Select Committee last Autumn by certain private sector carriers. Since the announcement of the second phase of the review, my officials have had contact with a number of carriers and have met some of them.

Population Statistics

Ms Atherton: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will list the populations of South Yorkshire, Merseyside, Wales, Northern Ireland, NUTS II regions and Cornwall NUTS III region. [43627]

Mrs. Roche: The latest published regional population estimates for these NUTS areas are for 1995:

	Population
South Yorkshire	1,303,900
Merseyside	1,427,200
Glwyd, Dyfed, Gwynedd, and Powys	1,132,700
Gwent, and Mid, South, and West Glamorgan	1,784,100
Northern Ireland	1,649,000
Cornwall	482,700

Note:
The boundaries and names of the two Welsh NUTS level II areas are based on the former counties
Source:
Regional Trends

Objective 1 Funding

Ms Atherton: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will list the populations of those regions currently receiving Objective 1 structural funds from the European Union. [43626]

Mrs. Roche: The population in regions covered by current Objective 1 programmes in each EU Member State is:

	million
Austria	0.269
Belgium	1.279
Germany	16.447
Greece	10.209
Spain	23.269
France	2.546
Ireland	3.500
Italy	21.133
Netherlands	0.217
Portugal	9.868
United Kingdom	3.414

Source:
European Commission, Structural Funds and Cohesion Fund 1994–99 Regulations and Commentary

ACPO Ltd.

Mr. William Ross: To ask the President of the Board of Trade whether the Directors of ACPO Ltd. are being considered for prosecution for non-compliance with the Companies Acts in respect of (a) their appointments as directors of ACPO Ltd. and (b) the contents of their Memorandum and Articles of Association. [44104]

Mr. Ian McCartney: No. As far as Companies House is aware, the requirements of the Companies Act in respect of appointment of directors and Memorandum and Articles have now been met. In this situation Companies House would not consider prosecution. This is on the basis of advice applicable to such situations that it would not be in the public interest to prosecute.

Mr. William Ross: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what steps Companies House have taken to ensure that the directors of ACPO Ltd. comply fully with the disclosure requirements of Companies Act Form 288a. [44103]

Mr. Ian McCartney: Companies House has no information which leads it to the view that the directors of ACPO Ltd. have not now complied fully with the disclosure requirements of Companies Act form 288a. Companies House accepts documents in good faith. If, however, it is brought to notice that information disclosed under section 288 of the Companies Act is in any way inaccurate or incomplete, the directors concerned would be asked to provide corrected information. Failure to do so could lead to consideration of prosecution.

EZ Test

Mr. Clappison: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what communication her Department has had with the UK distributors of the ecstasy kit, EZ Test. [44171]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: As far as I am aware, there have been no communications between this Department and the UK distributors of this product.

Agenda 2000

Mr. Casale: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment she has made of the impact on rural communities of the Commission's Agenda 2000 proposals for reform of the structural funds. [42724]

Mrs. Roche: It will not be possible to make such an assessment until the Commission publishes its detailed financial plans for individual Member States. The Commission's Agenda 2000 proposals are complex; we will also need further details from the Commission on the new Structural Fund framework, the related rural development measures, and proposed rural Community Initiative before we are able to make an assessment. One of the Government's objectives is to see that there is a sensible balance between rural and urban areas, which will be helped if Member States have flexibility in administering the funds.

Genetic Engineering

Miss Melanie Johnson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what steps the Government have taken to act on the recommendation of the Review of the Inter-Relationships between the Science, Engineering and Technology Expenditure of Government Departments that they should review their mechanisms for inter-departmental co-ordination in respect of genetic modification. [44792]

Mr. Battle: The Government have recently completed a review of the role, membership, and operation of the Interdepartmental Group on Genetic Modification Technology (IGGMOT), the official level committee for the co-ordination of policy on genetic modification. Copies of the outcome of the review, which found that IGGMOT remains the best way to co-ordinate policy on genetic modification at official level across Government and should continue to exist with no change to its terms of reference, are available in the Library.

Export Credits

Helen Jones: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what has been the response to the ECGD's consultation paper, Finance for UK Capital Goods and Project Exports; and what action the Government propose. [44791]

Mrs. Beckett: ECGD has received an excellent response from the UK exporting and financial community to its Consultation Paper. The Minister for Trade will be leading discussions which ECGD will be having with banks and exporters to consider the various suggestions made. The focus will be on ways of enhancing exporter competitiveness and improving the cost-effectiveness of ECGD interest rate support. This work will inevitably take several months and extend beyond the scheduled 30 June expiry date of ECGD's current support facility, the Fixed Rate Export Finance scheme. Therefore, to ensure continuity of service to exporters and banks while this work is being undertaken, the Government have decided to extend the validity of the current scheme for six months until 31 December 1998.

International Market Council

Mr. Derek Twigg: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what topics were discussed at the EU Ministerial Council on the Internal Market on 18 May; and what matters were voted upon. [44790]

Mrs. Beckett: My noble Friend the Minister for European Trade and Competitiveness chaired the Internal Market Council in Brussels on 18 May 1998.

The Council considered three elements of the Single Market Action Plan, which aim to improve the operation of the Single Market. Council adopted conclusions on standardisation, which open the way to making the production of European standards quicker and more efficient; the Presidency drew conclusions following a discussion on how to improve transposition and enforcement of the Single Market legislation; and the Commission presented the latest Single Market Scoreboard, which showed that Member States are improving their performance on the transposition of Single Market directives into their national laws: at 1 May 1998 over 80% of Single Market Directives had been adopted in all 15 Member States compared with only 65% in June 1997.

The Council reached political agreement on a Regulation for a Commission intervention mechanism for the elimination of certain obstacles to the free movement of goods, and an associated Council Resolution which reaffirmed Member States' political commitment to preserving the free movement of goods. This includes notifying their economic operators, each other, and the Commission, of such obstacles and steps being taken to overcome them, and respecting tight deadlines imposed by the Commission in dealing with related infraction proceedings.

The Council discussed a new Regulation on the labelling of genetically modified soya and maize, which aims to provide information to consumers. It reached political agreement on much of the substance of the company law Regulation, which forms part of the European Company Statute. It reached political agreement on three common positions. It agreed (by a qualified majority with Sweden and Portugal voting against and Ireland abstaining) on a Directive on mutual recognition of qualifications, which consolidates the existing legislation providing for certain professionals to work in Member States other than their own. It agreed common positions by unanimity on draft Directives on the legal protection of conditional access services, ie, that is, services where access is conditional upon prior authorisation and payment, such as pay-per-view TV; and on the classification, packaging and labelling of dangerous preparations, which consolidates existing health and safety legislation in this field, extending its scope slightly and promoting environmental protection.

The Council adopted four other sets of formal conclusions. These were on the Single Market for pharmaceutical products, asking the Commission to develop proposals to tackle Single Market problems; on public procurement, taking forward Commission proposals for modernisation of the rules; on Commercial Communications, endorsing a new Commission-chaired committee furthering the Single Market in advertising services; and on the improvement of the EU preferential tariff regime for certain developing countries.

Council also discussed the draft Directive on chocolate; and the Commission reported on the progress of the negotiations of a draft Directive extending product liability to primary agricultural products.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Methadone Deaths

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the number of deaths in Northern Ireland from methadone in each of the last four years; and if she will make a statement. [44012]

Mr. Worthington: None.

Smoking

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what percentage of teenage (a) boys and (b) girls in Northern Ireland was smoking tobacco (i) in 1988 and (ii) at the most recent date for which figures are available. [44014]

Mr. Worthington: The information is not available in the format requested. Available data are shown in the following table:

	Year	Age	% Smokers
Boys	1986	11–15	17
	1988	16–19	25
	1994	11, 13 and 15	12
	1996–97	16–19	23
Girls	1986	11–15	13
	1988	16–19	20
	1994	11, 13 and 15	14
	1996–97	16–19	23

Occupational Health

Dr. Stoate: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps are being taken to make occupational health services available to staff working in primary care in the National Health Service. [43600]

Mr. Worthington: Primary care staff who are employed by HSS Trusts receive an appropriate occupational health service as defined in guidance issued by the Department of Health and Social Services. General medical and dental practitioners and their staff are not covered by such arrangements but any general practice may contract with a HSS Trust for the provision of an occupational health service.

WALES

Smoking

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what percentage of teenage (a) boys and (b) girls in Wales was smoking tobacco (i) in 1988 and (ii) at the most recent date for which figures are available. [44017]

Mr. Win Griffiths: Details of the percentage of teenagers (11–16 year old) who regularly (weekly) smoke tobacco in 1998 and 1996, the most recent date for which figures are available, are set out as follows:

Percentage

Year	Boys	Girls
1988	8.00	11.30
1996	11.90	16.20

Source:
Health Promotion Authority for Wales

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what the estimated gross cost of anti-smoking campaigns in Wales aimed at children and young people has been since 1988; and what assessment he has made of the impact of the campaigns on teenage (a) boys and (b) girls. [44016]

Mr. Win Griffiths: The main body in Wales responsible for undertaking anti-smoking campaigns is the Health Promotion Authority for Wales (HPAW), whose role is to work with others to promote good health in Wales.

The cost of anti-smoking campaigns since 1990–91 undertaken by HPAW aimed at children and young people is set out in the table. Detailed information is not available prior to 1990–91.

£000

Year	Expenditure
1990–91	86
1991–92	350
1992–93	343
1993–94	345
1994–95	281
1995–96	240
1996–97	369
1997–98	219
1998–99	(estimated) 227

Source:
Health Promotion Authority for Wales

The information relates to initiatives directed solely at smoking. Smoking cessation advice also features strongly in other general health promotion initiatives funded by HPAW.

Research by HPAW indicates that there has been some success in delaying the age at which young people begin to experiment with tobacco.

Dairies

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what criteria the Welsh Office uses to decide which individual dairies in Wales receive grant aid; to what extent such grant aid relates to (a) the provision of new jobs and (b) the securing of existing jobs; and what consideration is given to the possible distortion of competition by such grants. [44052]

Mr. Win Griffiths: Assistance to dairies is available through a number of Welsh Office grant schemes such as Regional Selective Assistance, Processing and Marketing Grant and the Marketing Development Scheme.

The criteria used depend on the grant scheme in question. I have arranged for copies of the literature relating to the schemes to be sent to the right hon. Gentleman.

Creating and safeguarding jobs is an important factor in deciding which grant applications to support but the Marketing Development Scheme and the Processing and Marketing Grant are specifically geared to improving the marketing and processing infrastructure of companies. Such projects will not necessarily lead to job creation but will assist in the expansion of business. However, for grants such as Regional Selective Assistance, the level of employment generated or retained is a crucial factor and due weight is given to this element when assessing applications.

Applications for grant aid are considered from any eligible business and all applications are considered on their individual merits.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Sierra Leone

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much money was provided by her Department to President Kabbah's Government in exile. [42691]

Clare Short: The Department for International Development provided £50,000 to support the basic services of President Kabbah's Government in exile. This was in addition to £250,000 for a workshop and seminar in the United Kingdom to plan for the restoration of Government and for communications equipment.

Sir Alastair Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assistance her Department is currently providing in Sierra Leone. [41751]

Clare Short: The Department for International Development is currently supporting the work of NGOs in the provision of emergency seeds and tools, community healthcare, and reconstruction in Sierra Leone. We are also funding two Sierra Leoneans in key advisory posts.

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what support and advice, other than financial assistance, was rendered to President Kabbah of Sierra Leone between 25 May 1997 and 10 March 1998 by her Department. [42690]

Clare Short: The Department for International Development assisted President Kabbah's planning for a return to government by supporting basic services in exile, providing communications equipment, and through a workshop and seminar in the United Kingdom in October 1997.

North Korea

Mr. Donald Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on the current humanitarian situation in North Korea. [43712]

Clare Short: The report of the UK-led European Union Technical Mission to the Democratic People's Republic of Korea (DPRK) and discussions at the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) Round Table on DPRK in May indicate that nutrition has improved and the immediate emergency has abated. However there are selective humanitarian needs, especially in health, and the population remains at risk from possible future disasters. My Department is discussing with relevant authorities in DPRK, UN agencies and partners in the European Union how targeted support can help to promote sustainable recovery and reduce future vulnerability. I will place a copy of the report on this mission in the Library.

Mr. Donald Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what revision of her current policies towards North Korea will result from the recent visit to that country by officials from her Department leading an EU team. [43713]

Clare Short: I have considered the report of the UK-led Technical Mission and the conclusions of the United Nations Development Programme Round Table on Agricultural Recovery and Environmental Protection (AREP). The emphasis for future assistance to North Korea is to support a transition from food aid dependency to food security and rehabilitation of the rural sector within the context of promoting peace and stability on the Korean Peninsula. We will support a common European Union approach to target assistance to help poor households, reduce vulnerability to future disasters, promote confidence and trust between North Korea and the outside world and gain greater access for international agencies to implement their humanitarian activities more effectively. We support the implementation of the European Commission's 1998 programme. In addition we will consider proposals for support from NGOs and UN agencies, within the above framework. I will place a copy of the report on this mission in the Library.

TREASURY

Brewing Industry (Duty Changes)

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what assessment his Department has made of the duty lost to the Inland Revenue as predicted by the model used by Oxford Economic Forecasts to assess changes in duty on the brewing industry; [42969]

(2) what assessment his Department has made of the impact of reducing duty on the (a) brewing industry, (b) gross domestic product, (c) the retail prices index, (d) the total duty collected and (e) levels of employment. [44119]

Dawn Primarolo: There would be no tax lost to the Inland Revenue. Moreover, we do not believe that any cut in duty on beer would provide a sustainable benefit to the economy.

Staff Car Mileage Allowance

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the total real terms value of (a) staff car mileage claims paid and (b) staff rail fares paid; and what was the total amount of staff car mileage for which reimbursement was made and the percentage change year on year, for each year since 1989–90. [44083]

Mrs. Liddell: The real terms value of Treasury staff travel is:

	Staff car mileage costs £000	Staff UK rail/air fares £000	Staff car mileage
1995–96	8	153	n/a
1996–97	6	135	n/a
1997–98	6	89	7,841

Figures for years prior to 1995 are in summary form and a breakdown at the level required could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Israeli Exports

Mr. Faber: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the current status of Her Majesty's Customs and Excise investigation into the origin of certain Israeli exports to the United Kingdom; and if he will publish the results. [43863]

Dawn Primarolo: The outcome of investigations co-ordinated by the European Commission into the origin of orange juice exported from Israel is being analysed by the Member States. In line with normal procedure, the detailed results are notified to the individual importers, who are liable under Community law for any customs duty liability. They are not published generally. Investigations by HM Customs and Excise into the origin of other products have so far revealed duty liabilities in excess of £100,000.

Tobacco

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much revenue was raised from each of the taxes payable on each category of tobacco product in the last year for which figures are available. [44006]

Dawn Primarolo: The table shows receipts in 1997 and 1997–98:

Duty receipts

£ million

Year	Cigarette	Cigar	Hand rolling tobacco	Other smoking and chewing tobacco	[1]VAT
1997	8,035	139	166	50	1,915
1997–98	8,009	140	158	48	n/a

[1] Value added tax has been estimated using non-seasonally adjusted figures for consumers' expenditure at current prices on tobacco (from ONS publication Consumer Trends-Quarter 4 1997, Table 4.1). It is not possible to calculate the VAT for 1997–98 because the ONS estimate for consumers' expenditure on tobacco in Quarter 1 1998 is not yet available.

EU Debt

Mr. Gill: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if the statistics produced by the International Monetary Fund for the purposes of measuring the ratio of debt to Gross Domestic Product are on the same basis for each EU country. [43871]

Mrs. Liddell: The International Monetary Fund published the ratio of government debt to GDP for EU countries in their May 1998 World Economic Outlook. The outturn data were from national sources and the IMF noted they were not in all cases based on the same definition.

Housing (VAT)

Mr. Tom King: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much revenue would be lost by reducing the rate of VAT on refurbishment and conversions of existing dwellings from 17.5 per cent. to 5 per cent. [43860]

Dawn Primarolo: The cost of reducing VAT on all house repair and maintenance to 5 per cent. is estimated to be £1.1 billion. From the source data, it is not possible to separate refurbishment from repairs and maintenance.

Mr. Tom King: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much revenue would be generated by introducing value-added tax on (a) new construction and (b) new housing at a rate of 5 per cent. [43859]

Dawn Primarolo: The additional revenue yield from introducing VAT at 5 per cent. on the construction of new dwellings is estimated to be £550 million. There is no official estimate of the expected yield from introducing VAT on the construction of other new buildings currently qualifying for zero-rating.

Duty Free

Dr. Ladyman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will draw up plans to support the ferry industry and the ports of Ramsgate and Dover if duty-free sales are abolished in the European Union. [43795]

Dawn Primarolo: Responsibility for the transport industry lies with my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister. However, the impact on the ferry industry and on the ports of Ramsgate and Dover of the abolition of duty free will depend on the nature of the successor regimes which are being discussed at official level in Brussels.

Mail

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the liability to customs checks is of (a) mail sent by national postal administrations to the United Kingdom and (b) mail carried by express couriers to the United Kingdom. [43800]

Dawn Primarolo: The liability to customs checks for anti-smuggling purposes is the same for mail sent by a National Postal Administration and that carried by express couriers. Provision for such checks is contained in the Customs and Excise Management Act 1979. Checks on both types of traffic are also undertaken for fiscal and regulatory purposes under the Community Customs Code, which is European legislation. However, some differences apply to the treatment of postal packets, which is subject to national provisions under the Post Office Act 1953 and the Postal Packets (C&E) (Amendment) Regulation 1992.

Lloyd's of London

Mr. Hammond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 7 April 1998,

Official Report, column 151, regarding discussions between officials of the British Embassy in Washington and the United States authorities concerning Lloyd's of London, who initiated those discussions; what matters were discussed; who was present on each occasion; what requests were made to the United States authorities by the British representatives present; and what requests were made to the British representatives present by the United States authorities. [44339]

Mrs. Liddell: The discussions were initiated by the British Embassy and concerned the case of Richards et al v Lloyd's of London then before the US Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit. Only one such meeting took place at which a First Secretary from the Embassy met four Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) attorneys. The Embassy asked the SEC to recognise that any intervention by them in the Richards case should take account both of the British Government's interest in protecting policyholders by insurers continuing to meet their insurance obligations and the regulatory role of Lloyd's in protecting the interests of policyholders. The SEC made no requests to the British Government.

Monetary Policy Committee

Mr. Timms: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the remit of the Bank of England's Monetary Policy Committee. [44793]

Mr. Gordon Brown: In accordance with Section 12 of the Bank of England Act 1998, I have written to the Governor re-stating the Monetary Policy Committee's remit and how it will be held accountable for meeting the remit.

My letter has been laid before Parliament today and a copy has been sent to the Chairman of the Treasury Committee. Copies are also being deposited in the Libraries of both Houses.

Economic and Monetary Union

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how banking regulations and supervision of participant members of the euro will be brought into line; and who is responsible for ensuring this occurs. [44457]

Mrs. Liddell: The supervision of European Union credit institutions is already subject to a series of harmonising Directives, which impose minimum standards in a wide range of areas and help facilitate the Single Market. The Commission is responsible for ensuring that they remain up to date, and take account of developments in financial markets. The advent of Stage 3 of EMU does not change this responsibility.

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on his Department's responsibility to protect bank deposits in circumstances when banks lend transnationally under Economic and Monetary Union. [44448]

Mrs. Liddell: Deposits in UK banks, along with those in banks of other EU members, are covered by arrangements drawn up under the Deposit Guarantee Directive, which sets out minimum standards that apply throughout the Union. Stage 3 of Economic and Monetary Union has no effect on those arrangements.

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer who will supervise and regulate transnational banks under Stage 3 of Economic and Monetary Union. [44458]

Mrs. Liddell: The European Banking Directives, which harmonise standards of supervision of credit institutions within the EU, are based on the principle of Home State supervision. Although they may operate or offer services anywhere in the Union, credit institutions are required to have their registered office and head office in the same Member State, and the supervisory authorities there are responsible for its supervision throughout the EU. Stage 3 of Economic and Monetary Union will not change these arrangements.

SCOTLAND

Housing

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what percentage of homes in Scotland were (i) council owned and (ii) owned by publicly financed bodies in each year since 1978–79. [43393]

Mr. Macdonald [holding answer 2 June 1998]: The information available is set out in the table.

Financial year	Council stock as at 31 March (thousands)	Stock owned by other publicly financed bodies[1,4] as at 31 March (thousands)	Estimated total stock[2] as at 31 December (thousands)	Council stock as percent of all stock (col 2/col 4) (%)	Stock owned by other publicly financed bodies as percent of all stock (col 3/col 4) (%)
1978–79	901	144	1,964	45.9	7.3
1979–80	904	147	1,982	45.6	7.4
1980–81	902	146	1,997	45.2	7.3
1981–82	896	145	1,970	45.5	7.4
1982–83	886	143	1,983	44.7	7.2
1983–84	871	139	1,998	43.6	7.0
1984–85	862	135	2,015	42.8	6.7
1985–86	853	132	2,032	42.0	6.5
1986–87	842	128	2,050	41.1	6.2
1987–88	824	124	2,067	39.9	6.0
1988–89	795	114	2,084	38.1	5.5
1989–90	764	105	2,104	36.3	5.0
1990–91	738	100	2,124	34.7	4.7
1991–92	711	94	2.160	32.9	4.4
1992–93	675	90	2.175	31.0	4.1

Financial year	Council stock as at 31 March (thousands)	Stock owned by other publicly financed bodies[1,4] as at 31 March (thousands)	Estimated total stock[2] as at 31 December (thousands)	Council stock as percent of all stock (col 2/col 4) (%)	Stock owned by other publicly financed bodies as percent of all stock (col 3/col 4) (%)
1993–94	649	82	2.193	29.6	3.7
1994–95	596	73	2.210	27.0	3.3
1995–96	632	43	2.229	28.4	1.9
1996–97	622	29	2.246	27.7	1.3
1997–98[3]	613	19	[5]—	[5]—	[5]—

[1] Figures for the years up to and including 1988–89 are for the Scottish Special Housing Association (SSHA) and New Towns. From 1989–90 to 1995–96, figures are for stock owned by Scottish Homes and New Towns. For 1996–97, figures are for Scottish Homes stock only—New Town stock was transferred to councils, Scottish Homes and Housing Associations during the course of 1995–96 and 1996–97
[2] Estimates from December 1991 onwards are based on the 1991 Population Census. Estimates for earlier years are based on the 1981 Census and are not strictly comparable
[3] The council stock figure for 1997–98 is as at September 1997
[4] Housing associations, although not public bodies, receive public subsidy from Scottish Homes. At 31 March 1997, the latest date for which information is available, housing associations owned around 105,000 dwellings, 4.7 per cent. of the total estimated housing stock at December 1996
[5] Not yet available

Mr. Chisholm: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to introduce a full system of licensing for houses in multiple occupation. [44654]

Mr. Macdonald: We are committed to protecting the rights of tenants, and those in shared accommodation are no exception. We have issued a consultation paper today proposing the introduction of a full system of licensing for Houses in Multiple Occupation (HMOs), in line with our Manifesto commitment.

We value the contribution of the private rented sector, and HMOs play their part by accommodating a wide range of households including mobile workers and other single people. However, while many HMO landlords are providing perfectly acceptable accommodation, there is concern about both the physical condition and management of some HMOs.

Licensing would allow authorities to refuse a licence where an applicant is not a fit and proper person to hold an HMO licence. This will provide a powerful mechanism for preventing exploitation of tenants. For example, licences could be refused for those with relevant criminal convictions. Depending on the circumstances of the particular case, this could include Housing Benefit fraud.

Licensing would also enable local authorities to take a co-ordinated approach to regulating HMOs across departments. This should be a benefit for landlords.

We therefore propose to make it mandatory for all local authorities in Scotland to introduce HMO licensing. Councils were given discretionary powers to licence in 1991, but so far only seven have used them.

A consultation paper setting out our proposals has been sent today to a wide range of bodies with an interest in HMOs, with a request for comments by 30 October 1998. Copies of the consultation paper have been placed in the House Libraries.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish the criteria under which the New Housing Partnership schemes were assessed. [44044]

Mr. Dewar: The criteria were set out in a letter issued by the Scottish Office Development Department to Chief Executives of local authorities on 5 December 1997 inviting local authorities to submit bids and also in a summary report issued on 5 May 1998 explaining how the bids were assessed. Copies of both documents have been placed in the House of Commons Library.

Unemployment

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the percentage change in the number of registered unemployed amongst 18 to 25-year-olds in (a) Dundee, (b) Perth and Kinross and (c) Angus in (i) January, (ii) February, (iii) March and (iv) April in each year since 1986. [43409]

Mr. Dewar: A full analysis of the claimant count statistics by age (and duration) is available quarterly for the months of January, April, July and October. An analysis excluding clerical claims (which currently represent about 1 per cent. of all claims) is available monthly. Information is not readily available for those aged 18 to 25. Information for those aged 18 to 24 is available through the Nomis database in the House of Commons Library. Library staff are ready to assist in accessing the information.

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the percentage change in the number of registered unemployed in (a) Dundee, (b) Perth and Kinross and (c) Angus in (i) January, (ii) February, (iii) March and (iv) April in each year since 1986. [43410]

Mr. Dewar: Information is available through the Nomis database in the House of Commons Library. Library staff are ready to assist in accessing the information.

Moray College

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what representations he has had from BARMAC Fabrication Yard concerning the training in welding and fabrication at Moray College; [43416]

(2) what representations he has had from trade union representatives at Moray College concerning the plans to discontinue the welding and fabrication course. [43417]

Mr. Dewar: I have received no such representations from either source.

Each further education college in Scotland has a Board of Management which is responsible for ensuring the provision of suitable and efficient further education. I understand that Moray College decided not to offer welding provision in 1997–98 in view of the small number of students who had presented for enrolment. After reviewing the demands and costs, the College has since decided to withdraw welding provision.

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what meetings has he had with the principal or members of the Board of Directors of Moray College concerning its involvement in the University of the Highlands and Islands project. [43418]

Mr. Dewar: My Ministerial colleagues and I have not had any such meetings but officials of the Scottish Office have twice met the Principal and members of the Board of Management concerning Moray College's involvement in the University of the Highlands and Islands Project.

Housing Rents

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what weekly rental levels he proposes for the rented housing elements of each of the successful New Housing Partnership bids. [44042]

Mr. Dewar: It is for each New Housing Partnership landlord to determine appropriate, affordable rental levels for the rented housing element of successful New Housing Partnership bids. I would expect these levels to be in line with existing rental levels for comparable types of housing in the local area.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what weekly rental levels he proposes for the rented housing elements of the New Housing Partnership bid from Glasgow City Council. [44043]

Mr. Dewar: The rental levels of the rented housing elements of the New Housing Partnership bids in Glasgow are a matter for each New Housing Partnership landlord to determine. However, I would expect these to be in line with rents for comparable types of housing in the city.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what information in a systematic form is held in respect of each of the New Housing Partnership in relation to (a) rental levels for all the rented housing elements of the New Housing Partnership bids, (b) tenancy agreements for all the rented housing elements of the New Housing Partnership bids and (c) allocation priorities of non-local authority housing providers for the rented housing elements of the New Housing Partnership bids; and if he will make such information available. [44045]

Mr. Dewar: Matters relating to rental levels, tenancy agreements and allocation arrangements will be settled locally as New Housing Partnerships are developed. The Scottish Office will be commissioning research to assess the impact of partnership projects, and this will include information on the characteristics of each project. The results of the research will be published.

HEALTH

Consultation Papers

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the consultation papers published since 1 May 1997 giving the date of publication, closing date for submissions and the number of respondents. [42244]

Ms Jowell: Copies of a table containing the information requested have been placed in the Library.

Wheelchairs

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will make a statement on the provision of wheelchairs to those who become long-term or permanently disabled; [43159]

(2) if he will list for each health authority the average waiting time for provision of a wheelchair to those who become long-term or permanently disabled. [43158]

Mr. Boateng: Wheelchairs are provided free on loan by the National Health Service to anyone who has a clinical need for one due to limited mobility. People who require a wheelchair are usually referred by their general practitioner or other local health care professional to their local wheelchair service centre for assessment of their needs.

Information on the provision of wheelchairs specifically to those who become long-term or permanently disabled and any waiting time is not collected centrally. However, information on the total provision of wheelchairs is reported to the NHS Executive by providers and health authorities. The number of wheelchairs issued by providers covers all wheelchairs supplied through consultant clinics and through physiotherapy departments. The figures for England are in the table.

Year	Number of wheelchairs issued by providers
1994–95	203,160
1995–96	200,073
1996–97	195,606

Note:
1996–97 figures include estimates for Richmond, Twickenham and Roehampton NHS Trust who failed to submit a return

Copies of the information that health authorities report on wheelchairs have been placed in the Library.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the office responsible for the performance of wheelchair services in (a) each health authority, (b) each NHS region, (c) the NHS Executive and (d) central Government. [43208]

Mr. Boateng [holding answer 1 June 1998]: The information requested for health authorities is not held centrally. All communications with the National Health Service are conducted through the chief executives concerned. Responsibility for wheelchair policy in the NHS Executive rests with the Continuing Health Services branch of the Health Services Directorate. Performance is measured through the regional offices of the NHS Executive.

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if the budget for the voucher scheme for manual wheelchairs is ring-fenced. [43569]

Mr. Boateng [holding answer 1 June 1998]: Additional funding has been made available to health authorities specifically to meet the cost of the introduction of the National Health Service wheelchair voucher scheme since it began in 1996. The additional funding has been allocated in phased amounts each year as services have built up over time.

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what measures have been taken to monitor spending on (a) indoor/outdoor powered wheelchair funding schemes and (b) the voucher funding schemes for manual wheelchairs. [43568]

Mr. Boateng [holding answer 1 June 1998]: Spending on the indoor/outdoor powered wheelchair funding schemes and the voucher funding scheme for manual wheelchairs is monitored centrally through the routine quarterly return process.

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to extend the voucher scheme for manual wheelchairs to the provision of indoor outdoor powered wheelchairs. [43567]

Mr. Boateng [holding answer 1 June 1998]: When the voucher scheme was introduced, guidance made it clear that it was not intended that vouchers should be issued for powered indoor/outdoor wheelchairs in the short term. Any decision to extend the scheme will be reviewed locally once the scheme for manually operated chairs has been fully established.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what discussions Ministers and officials have had with user organisations on their concerns about performance management of the wheelchair service; [43216]

(2) what action he has taken to address the concerns of user organisations about the management performance of the separate funding schemes for indoor and outdoor powered wheelchairs and vouchers. [43215]

Mr. Boateng [holding answer 1 June 1998]: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State held a meeting with representatives of the Limbless Association on 2 December 1997 at which they expressed their concerns about the wheelchair service. I will shortly be holding a meeting with representatives of the users consortium emPOWER at which they are expected to raise similar concerns. Officials regularly exchange information and views with representatives of user organisations.

Progress on implementation of the wheelchair initiatives is performance managed through National Health Service Executive regional offices. Regional directors of performance management have been reminded of the importance of ensuring implementation of these changes for service users.

An evaluation study of the operation of the powered indoor/outdoor wheelchair and voucher schemes will be conducted later in the year. We have set up a steering group, whose membership includes representatives of user organisations, to oversee the evaluation.

Mr. Healey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what consultations were held with user groups in advance of communication of the Health Service Circular, Wheelchair Voucher Scheme: funding in 1997–98 and 1998–99 (HSC 1998/004). [43867]

Mr. Boateng: The circular authorised health authorities to use surplus funds from the National Health Service wheelchair voucher scheme for powered indoor/outdoor and other wheelchair provision. It was a short-term initiative which ensured that available funds were kept within wheelchair services in 1997–98. It did not affect the funding available for the NHS wheelchair voucher scheme and powered indoor/outdoor wheelchair provision in subsequent years and did not involve any change in policy towards the two schemes.

No consultations with user groups were therefore held in advance of the issue of the circular.

Mr. Berry: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action his Department is taking to implement the recommendations of the Department of Health-funded paper, "National Prosthetic and Wheelchair Services Report 1993–96", with particular reference to those for (a) a mechanism to provide a national focus on wheelchair services and (b) an auditing procedure by which wheelchair services can measure their effectiveness. [43370]

Mr. Boateng: The Department funded the national prosthetic and wheelchair services project to give continued support to wheelchair services for a three-year period following their devolution to the National Health Service. A number of professional groups (including a Wheelchair Managers Committee) continue to provide a national focus, and the Department supports this work. For example, the Department is funding work on a national training framework for wheelchair services.

The audit of service effectiveness is a matter for individual health authorities and their providers. Standards were recommended in the national prosthetic and wheelchair services project. These may form the basis for local audit.

Mr. Berry: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action his Department is taking to (a) monitor and (b) address disparities between health authorities in the provision of (i) indoor/outdoor powered wheelchairs and (ii) vouchers by wheelchair services. [43441]

Mr. Boateng: Health authorities routinely report to the National Health Service Executive on the provision of indoor/outdoor wheelchairs and vouchers for wheelchair services as part of the quarterly monitoring process. Regional directors of performance have recently been reminded of the importance of ensuring that the wheelchair voucher scheme is implemented. An evaluation study of the operation of the powered indoor/outdoor wheelchair and voucher schemes will be conducted later in the year.

Drug Treatment Services

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what sums the Government have allocated to drug treatment services specialising in (a) alcohol and (b) illegal drugs in each of the last five years. [43670]

Ms Jowell: The Department has given £555,000 in 1998/99, £1,055,000 in 1997/98, £1,055,000 in 1996/97, £555,000 in 1995/96 and £968,000 in 1994/95 to Alcohol Concern to run a grants programme specifically for alcohol treatment services.

The Department provides a cash contribution to health authorities to purchase drug services under a special allocation. In each of the last five years, the special allocation for drug services was £41.3 million in 1998/99, £37.19 million in 1997/98, £33.39 million in 1996/97, £26.75 million in 1995/96 and £25.50 million in 1994/95.

The Department also administers the specific grant for making payments to voluntary organisations providing services for drug and alcohol misusers, which will distribute £2.5 million in 1998/99, and has previously distributed £2.5 million in 1997/98, 1996/97 and 1995/96, and £2.4 million in 1994/95.

Paediatric Cardiac Services

Mrs. Browning: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will order an immediate public inquiry into the paediatric cardiac surgery services at the United Bristol Healthcare NHS Trust. [44293]

Mr. Milburn: We have made clear our commitment to holding an inquiry into the paediatric cardiac surgery services at the United Bristol Healthcare National Health Service Trust prior to 1996. The exact form, timing and scope of the inquiry and the membership of the inquiry team are currently under consideration. A final decision will be made after the General Medical Council have completed their proceedings later this month.

Nurses

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions he has had about protecting the use of the title, nurse; and if he will make a statement. [44207]

Mr. Milburn: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave on 21 May 1998, Official Report, column 503.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Crown Prosecution Service

31. Mr. Beard: To ask the Attorney-General what progress is being made in associating the work of the Crown Prosecution Service more closely with local police forces and magistrates courts. [42755]

34. Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Attorney-General if he will make a statement on the progress of his plans to reorganise the Crown Prosecution Service. [42758]

The Attorney-General: I announced in May last year the decision to divide the CPS into 42 areas coterminous with police areas. The report of the Review of the Crown Prosecution Service which I published on Monday endorses that decision and makes detailed proposals as to how that should be effected, and they are being considered. A first major step will be the selection of the 42 chief crown prosecutors and the new DPP will proceed with that once in post.

32. Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Attorney-General how many prosecutions initiated by the Crown Prosecution Service in 1996 and 1997 were discontinued subsequently; and if he will make a statement. [42756]

The Attorney-General: In 1996, proceedings were discontinued in respect of 153,274 defendants, or 12 per cent. of completed cases. In 1997, proceedings were discontinued in respect of 161,461 defendants, or 12.2 per cent. of completed cases.

35. Mr. Lock: To ask the Attorney-General if he will make a statement on the use of information technology in the Crown Prosecution Service. [42759]

The Attorney-General: The CPS is using information technology to increase the speed and efficiency of its internal communications, facilitate its case tracking and performance management and, through a Private/Public Partnerships Initiative, is examining a possible solution for its future IT needs in close collaboration with CJS partners.

Company Collapses (Phoenix Operations)

33. Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Attorney-General what is his Department's policy in relation to the prosecution of individuals who mount phoenix operations following the collapse of companies in which they have been previously involved. [42757]

The Attorney-General: A so called "Phoenix Operation" does not, in itself, constitute a criminal offence. However, where there is evidence that a "Phoenix Operation" may have involved an offence or offences—for example there has been fraudulent trading—then the prosecuting authorities adopt the same policy as with other suspected offences, namely, to assess whether there is enough evidence to provide a realistic prospect of conviction; and if so, to assess whether it is in the public interest that there should be a prosecution.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Set-aside

14. Mr. Leigh: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on reform of the set-aside scheme. [42735]

Mr. Morley: In the current discussions on CAP reform, the Government have said that they would like to see compulsory set-aside abolished and the rules on voluntary set-aside made more flexible.

Egg Production

15. Mr. Baldry: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received on the EU Commission's proposals on egg production. [42736]

Mr. Rooker: I have received a number of representations and my officials have met industry representatives, at their request, to hear their views on the proposals.

County Council Small Holdings

16. Mr. Drew: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the Government's policy on county council small holdings. [42737]

Mr. Morley: The Government recognise the important role of county council smallholdings as a first rung on the farming ladder. I congratulate those local authorities which pursue policies to develop their estates, but emphasise that such decisions are properly taken at local level.

Unpasteurised Milk

17. Mr. Spring: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on his Department's proposals for unpasteurised milk products. [42738]

Mr. Rooker: I have no proposals relating to unpasteurised milk products.

Gang Masters

18. Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what measures his Department is taking to control the activities of gang masters in the horticulture and agriculture industries. [42739]

Mr. Morley: We have a number of measures in hand and will be making a detailed announcement shortly.

Food Standards Agency

19. Mr. Prior: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the implementation of his policy in respect of the Food Standards Agency. [42740]

Mr. Rooker: We are making excellent progress with fulfilling our manifesto commitment to establish a Food Standards Agency. More than 1,000 responses were received to our consultation on the White Paper "The Food Standards Agency: A Force for Change" and a summary has been placed in the Library. It is our intention to publish a draft Bill before the Summer Recess for further consultation and pre-legislative scrutiny by this House.

Beef Export Ban

20. Mrs. Lait: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what progress has been made in lifting the EU ban on exports of British beef; [42741]

24. Ms Ward: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on progress towards lifting the ban on British beef. [42745]

Mr. Rooker: We expect the Commission to set a date next week for the resumption of exports from Northern Ireland under the Export Certified Herds Scheme.

Following constructive discussions with Commission officials the Commission are now preparing their proposal for a Date Based Export Scheme, which would permit the export of beef and beef products from animals born after 1 August 1996. I hope that the proposal will be discussed in the Standing Veterinary Committee in June.

Consumer Information

21. Miss Geraldine Smith: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what proposals his Department has to improve the information on food made available to consumers. [42742]

Mr. Rooker: The Food Labelling Regulations 1996 will be amended on 1 July this year to introduce new EC requirements for quantitative ingredient declarations. They will also require starch and modified starch used as ingredients of foods to indicate their specific vegetable origin if they are likely to contain gluten. These changes will become compulsory with effect from 14 February 2000. The UK has taken the lead in the EC on guidelines to explain the new rules on quantitative ingredient declarations so that consumers are given consistent and uniform information on food labels.

Organic Farming

22. Mr. Gareth Thomas: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he is taking to promote organic farming, with particular reference to less-favoured areas. [42743]

Mr. Morley: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given to him by my right hon. Friend the Minister on 2 April 1998, Official Report, columns 655–56.

Whaling

23. Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the role of the consultative forum on whaling. [42744]

Mr. Morley: We have had very positive and supportive feedback about the first meeting of the Consultative Forum held in April. We look forward to building on this encouraging beginning.

Mr. Canavan: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement about the latest meeting of the International Whaling Commission. [42748]

Mr. Morley: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given to my hon. Friend the Member for Wyre Forest (Mr. Lock) on 2 June 1998, Official Report, columns 199–201.

Farm Incomes

25. Mr. Steen: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the change in farm income levels since 1 May 1997. [42746]

Mr. Morley: Government statistics published in "Farm Incomes in the United Kingdom" show that, in 1997 as a whole, farm incomes fell by an average of 37 per cent. in real terms. The fall in total income from farming in 1997 is largely due to lower prices received by farmers for all major commodities. The relative strength of sterling compared with 1996 has been a major factor underlying the fall in prices.

Milk Quotas

26. Mr. Evans: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received concerning milk quotas and the current levels of income of dairy farmers. [42747]

Mr. Rooker: I receive regular representations on a range of milk quota issues and on current levels of farm income, including that of dairy farmers, from farming organisations and individual milk producers. Milk quota still has a considerable positive value which demonstrates that the market believes that there is still sufficient profitability to justify this expenditure. The incomes of dairy farmers in 1998–99 are expected to be lower than in 1997–98, mainly as a result of lower milk prices.

Sea Levels (South-East)

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food pursuant to his oral answer of 22 January 1998, Official Report, column 1132, on sea levels in the Thames Estuary and River Medway, what progress the Environment Agency has made in respect of its surveys into projected sea level rises. [42749]

Mr. Morley: I regret that my reply of 22 January 1998, Official Report, column 1132, may have been misleading. The Environment Agency undertakes surveys of areas at risk of flooding and as preliminary studies for proposed defences. The interpretation of such surveys and studies take into account Ministry guidance on sea level rise. However the Agency is not carrying out surveys relating solely to projected sea level rise.

International Horticultural Event, China

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on his recent visit to China; and what United Kingdom participation there will be in the 1998 International Horticultural Event in Kunming, Yunnan. [42349]

Dr. John Cunningham: During April, I led a UK agricultural trade mission to China and our participation in the agricultural trade exposition AGRO EXPO China '98. I also had bilateral meetings with senior representatives of the Chinese government including Vice Premier Li Lanqing and Minister of Agriculture Chen Yaobang and representatives from the Hong Kong administration. I was highly impressed by the wide range of UK technical expertise on the mission and understand that new commercial business was agreed during the visit.

The Government hope that the International Horticultural Exposition due to be held in Kunming in 1999 will include a United Kingdom exhibit. A proposal for an exhibit is currently the subject of discussion between the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and the Royal Botanic Garden, Edinburgh.

Abattoirs

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) in how many cases reports of bullying, intimidation and threats by staff or employees of abattoirs against veterinarians and Meat Hygiene Service staff have been referred to officers of the Crown Prosecution Service with a view to prosecution; and in how many cases prosecutions have taken place in the last year; [43379]

(2) how many incidents of intimidation, threats and bullying by owners or employees of abattoirs of Meat Hygiene Service staff and veterinarians have been referred to the police in the last year. [43378]

Mr. Rooker: Cases of intimidation against Meat Hygiene Service (MHS) staff are referred to the Investigations Branch of MAFF Legal for investigation with a view to prosecution for obstruction or assault under the Fresh Meat (Hygiene and Inspection) Regulations 1995. Two successful prosecutions have been taken for obstruction.

The first successful prosecution for assault has been taken. I referred to this case when winding up the Common Agricultural Policy debate on 21 May 1998, Official Report, column 1174.

One case of alleged assault against a former MHS employee has been referred to the police by MAFF Investigation Officers. This case is now being investigated with a view to consideration of prosecution by the Crown Prosecution Service in the criminal courts.

Other allegations of intimidation are currently under consideration by MAFF Investigation Officers.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make it his policy to close down abattoirs where Meat Hygiene Service staff or veterinarians have been subject to intimidation, bullying, or threats from abattoir owners or employees. [43377]

Mr. Rooker: Any form of intimidation of Meat Hygiene Service (MHS) staff, and in particular that which prevents staff from carrying out their duties to protect public health, is totally unacceptable and will not be tolerated. All available measures are used against those responsible, and, in all possible cases, the MHS refers incidents for investigation with a view to prosecution. Obstruction of MHS staff in the performance of their duties is an offence under section 33 (1) of the Food Safety Act 1990. Various cases of assault are referred to the police.

In accordance with EU rules, current GB meat hygiene legislation provides for the mandatory licensing (by the GB Agriculture Departments) of all abattoirs, cutting plants and cold stores producing meat which is intended for sale for human consumption. Although this legislation provides powers for Ministers to revoke such licences in certain specified circumstances, notably in respect of hygiene failures, these circumstances do not include intimidation, bullying or threats to MHS staff from the owners or operators of licensed premises or from their employees.

Nevertheless, the assault of MHS staff in the course of carrying out their duties at licensed premises would probably amount to the hampering of adequate health inspection for the purposes of the GB meat hygiene legislation. In such circumstances MHS staff have powers to serve a notice on the operator of the premises prohibiting the use of the part or parts of the premises concerned until such time as it is clear that the safety of MHS staff is secured. The effect of such action could result in the stopping of some or all of the production of the premises involved. Because the Government will not tolerate assaults on MHS staff, I have instructed the MHS to remind the industry of the powers available, and that where the MHS exercises those powers, it will do so with the full support of Ministers.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) how many incidents of intimidation, threats and bullying against representatives of the Meat Hygiene Service veterinarians by employees or owners of abattoirs have occurred in the last year; [43375]

(2) if he will establish an inquiry into the scale of bullying, threats and intimidation by abattoir owners or staff against Meat Hygiene Service staff or veterinarians. [43380]

Mr. Rooker: No information is available on the number of instances of intimidation, threats and bullying against Meat Hygiene Service (MHS) staff which have occurred in the last year.

However, to get a better understanding of the true extent of instances of intimidation of its staff, the Meat Hygiene Service, together with UNISON, has sent out a Violence/Intimidation at Work Questionnaire to all its operational staff. The survey sought information on the number of instances of threats, verbal abuse and harassment as well as physical attack or injury that MHS staff had been subject to since 1 April 1995.

The questionnaire was sent to the 1,500 operational staff of the MHS. The provisional results of the survey indicate that staff have reported 403 instances of some form of intimidation and violence since 1 April 1995, the date the Agency was launched. This comprises 273 instances relating to verbal threat or abuse and 130 to more serious instances of injury to MHS staff, physical threat with a weapon, racial and sexual harassment and damage to personal property.

The results of the survey will inform future policy on the issue of intimidation/violence in the workplace.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received from staff of the Meat Hygiene Service and veterinarians concerning bullying by owners and staff of abattoirs. [43381]

Mr. Rooker: The Meat Hygiene Service (MHS) Chief Executive has expressed his concern to me about these unacceptable instances of intimidation and threats against MHS staff. The MHS takes the health and safety and welfare of its staff very seriously and will take any and all necessary action to prevent intimidation in the workplace.

At my request, the MHS keeps me fully aware of all instances of intimidation, abuse and assault against MHS staff by abattoir owners and staff.

As my hon. Friend will note from other answers I have given him today, we are taking the issue seriously and support and encourage the MHS to take a robust line on behalf of MHS staff carrying out their vital duties on behalf of the public.

Tobacco

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much was paid by the EU to subsidise the growing of tobacco in the last year for which figures are available. [44034]

Mr. Rooker: In 1997 the EU spent 998 million ecu (£725 million)[1] on subsidies under the EU tobacco regime. None of this was spent in the United Kingdom.

[1] 1997 exchange rate used: £1 = 1.3758 ecu

Flood and Coastal Defences

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to remove coast protection functions from coastal local authorities. [43939]

Mr. Morley: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for West Dorset (Mr. Letwin) on 6 April 1998, Official Report, column 85.

Bees

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will introduce a compensation scheme for professional bee keepers whose hives have been subject to attack from the varroa mite. [44089]

Mr. Rooker: The Government take the threat to beekeeping from varroa very seriously and this year are spending around £1.5 million on a range of measures to tackle this problem. The emphasis is on training and education to help bee keepers become more self-reliant. We consider this to be the best use of the available resources.

Drift Nets

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what estimate he has made of the annual number of non-target species that would avoid death through trapping if an EU ban on drift nets were introduced. [43221]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 2 June 1998]: Observers on the UK drift net boats in 1995 recorded 46 dolphin casualties over 9 fishing trips. This implies that 165 dolphins were killed by the UK fleet in that season. A number of other species including sharks are also caught.

France, Ireland and Italy also have active drift net fleets.

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what progress is being made on phasing out the use of those drift nets which are dangerous to dolphins. [42726]

Dr. John Cunningham: Preparations have been made for a decision at the Fisheries Council on 8 June.

Milk Producers (Italy)

Mr. Steen: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much the Italian Government have failed to collect by way of super-levy from over-quota milk producers in each of the last five years; when the Commission initiated infraction proceedings;

how much they are for and over what period; and how many Commission officials are currently employed in enforcing milk quotas. [43166]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 3 June 1998]: In 1995–96 of a total superlevy bill of 316 billion lire, 42 billion lire was paid by the Italian Authorities and the remainder was withheld by the Commission from FEOGA payments to Italy; in 1996–97 the total superlevy bill of 155 billion lire was withheld from FEOGA payments. No superlevy was payable by Italy with respect to the previous three years. The Commission initiated infraction proceedings against Italy on 12 January 1998 for their failure to definitively close the periods 1995–96 and 1996–97 by obliging purchasers to pay over superlevy due to the competent authority. The number of Commission officials dealing with enforcement fluctuates according to the requirements at a given time.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Sierra Leone

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the occasions on which he and the Minister of State, the hon. Member for Manchester, Central (Mr. Lloyd), have met President Kabbah of Sierra Leone since 1 May 1997; and if he will publish the minutes of such meetings. [42094]

Mr. Robin Cook [holding answer 14 May 1998]: Officials from the High Commission had numerous meetings with President Kabbah in Conakry. Officials also met him when he visited the UK in October 1997.

My hon. Friend the Minister of State met President Kabbah on 20 October, when he addressed the seminar "Restoring Sierra Leone to Democracy"; on 25 October, with the Under-Secretary of State for International Development; and on 31 March 1998, when he visited Sierra Leone as a member of the Commonwealth Ministerial Action Group mission.

My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister met him informally during the Commonwealth Heads of Government Meeting in Edinburgh in October 1997. I met the Foreign Minister of Sierra Leone in the margins of the UN General Assembly meeting in September 1997.

It is not normal practice to release the records of discussion with foreign governments, but all relevant documents will be available to Sir Thomas Legg for his investigation.

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the application of Security Council Resolution 1132 to the Nigerian-led military observers group of the Economic Community of West African States at the time it was seeking to restore democracy in Sierra Leone. [42560]

Mr. Robin Cook [holding answer 18 May 1998]: Operative paragraph 6 of Security Council Resolution 1132 provides that the Security Council

"Decides that all States shall prevent the sale or supply to Sierra Leone, by their nationals or from their flag vessels or aircraft, of petroleum and petroleum products and arms and related material of all types, including weapons and ammunition, military vehicles and equipment, paramilitary equipment and spare parts for the aforementioned, whether or not originating in their territory".

No exceptions were made to the embargo.

Now that the conditions set out in SCR 1132 for the lifting of the embargo have been met United Nations Security Council Members have agreed that a new resolution is required. This should lift the arms embargo on the Sierra Leone Government and ECOMOG but maintain it on non-governmental forces. Urgent discussions on the precise terms of the resolution are underway in New York.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the role of his Department was in drafting United Nations Security Resolution 1132; what representations his Department made to ensure clarity of definition in determining the target of the embargo; and when the possibility of misinterpretation was first brought to his attention. [42712]

Mr. Robin Cook [holding answer 20 May 1998]: The UK took a leading role in negotiating the text of Resolution 1132, in September and October 1997. We were satisfied that there were no exceptions to the arms embargo. Differences in interpretation did not emerge until May 1998.

Mr. Hogg: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 21 May 1998, Official Report, column 525, on what dates the telegram of 6 February was copied to (a) his private office and (b) the Minister of State, the hon. Member for Manchester, Central (Mr. Lloyd); and if it was drawn to (i) his and (ii) the Minister of State's attention. [43976]

Mr. Robin Cook [holding answer 1 June 1998]: From 6 February onwards, a number of telegrams referring to the ECOMOG intervention in Sierra Leone were received within the FCO. These telegrams were seen in my Private Office and the Private Office of the Minister of State, and, as is standard practice, the key ones were drawn to my, and his, attention. None made any reference to Sandline.

Visas

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the African countries in which there are no local facilities for applicants for United Kingdom visas to be interviewed, indicating in each case the country to which applicants must travel for interview. [43690]

Mr. Fatchett: Those African countries in which there are no local facilities for applicants for United Kingdom visas to be interviewed are listed. Applicants for visit visas may apply at any designated British diplomatic or consular Post offering a full entry clearance service. Applicants for other categories of visa should apply at the designated Post as stipulated.

Country	Designated Country/(Post)
Rwanda[1]	Kenya (Nairobi) or Tanzania (Dar Es Salam)
Algeria[2]	Tunisia (Tunis) or France (Paris)
Libya[3]	Malta (Valletta)
Benin	Nigeria (Lagos)
Burkina Faso	Cote d'Ivoire (Abidjan)
Burundi	Most accessible Post
Cape Verde	Senegal (Dakar)

Country	Designated Country/(Post)
Central Africa Republic	Cameroon (Yaounde)
Chad	Nigeria (Lagos or Abuja)
Congo	Democratic Republic of Congo (Kinshasa)
Djibouti	Ethiopia (Addis Ababa)
Equatorial Guinea	Cameroon (Yaounde) or most accessible Post
Eritrea	Ethiopia (Addis Ababa)
Equatorial Guinea	Cameroon (Yaounde) or most accessible Post
Eritrea	Ethiopia (Addis Ababa)
Gabon	Cameroon (Yaounde) or most accessible Post
Guinea	Senegal (Dakar)
Guinea-Bassau	Senegal (Dakar)
Liberia	Cote d'Ivoire (Abidjan)
Mali	Senegal (Dakar)
Mauritania	Morocco (Casablanca)
Niger	Cote d'Ivoire (Abidjan)
Sao Tome and Principe	Angola (Luanda)
Togo	Ghana (Accra)
Somalia	Kenya (Nairobi) or Ethiopia (Addis Ababa)
Sierra Leone[4]	Senegal (Dakar), The Gambia (Banjul), Cote d'Ivoire (Abidjan)

[1] Rwanda is designated to offer a limited visa service to members of the Diplomatic and Consular Corps (including international Organisations) there and officials of the host country

[2] Algeria is designated to offer a limited visa service to diplomats, government officials and representatives of major companies travelling on official business

[3] Libya is designated to offer a limited service to Libyan diplomats and officials, travelling on official business only; certain business applications sponsored by UK companies, urgent medical cases and compassionate family applications, including family reunion cases where the applicant can demonstrate that it is not possible to leave Libya in order to apply in a third country

[4] Sierra Leone has been temporarily closed

Israel

Mr. Faber: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement during the United Kingdom presidency of the EU on the European Union's position on the export by Israel to Europe of goods originating in Jerusalem. [43834]

Mr. Doug Henderson [holding answer 1 June 1998]: The Commission issued a Communication to the Council on 13 May on the implementation of the EC/Israel agreement, including the export to the EU of goods originating in Jerusalem. The UK Presidency is discussing the issues raised in the communication at technical level with other member states and the Commission. The Commission is also in consultation with Israeli officials, and will report back to the Council in due course. The EU position on the status of Jerusalem remains unchanged.

Mr. Faber: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made during the United Kingdom presidency of the EU to the Governments of (a) France and (b) Belgium concerning domestic ratification of the EU-Israel Association Agreement. [43832]

Mr. Doug Henderson [holding answer 1 June 1998]: Parliamentary ratification procedures are a matter for individual member states. The United Kingdom has not made any representations to the French or Belgian governments on this issue, though our officials remain in close contact on the progress of the ratification procedure.

Mr. Faber: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to review the operation of the EU-Israel association agreement during the United Kingdom presidency of the EU. [43828]

Mr. Doug Henderson [holding answer 1 June 1998]: The EU/Israel Association Agreement has not been ratified by all EU member states, and is therefore not yet in force. Its trade provisions are in operation under a separate EC/Israel Interim Agreement. The EU is now studying questions raised by the Commission in its Communication of 13 May about the implementations of the Interim Agreement.

Mr. Faber: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made during the UK presidency of the EU to the European Commission concerning Israeli implementation of the EU-Israel association agreement. [43829]

Mr. Doug Henderson [holding answer 1 June 1998]: The EU/Israel Association Agreement is not yet in force. As EU Presidency, the UK is in close contact with the Commission and other member states about the implementation of the EC/Israel Interim Agreement, on which the Commission issued a Communication on 13 May.

Mr. Faber: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made during the United Kingdom presidency of the EU to Israel concerning the EU-Israel Association Agreement. [43830]

Mr. Doug Henderson [holding answer 1 June 1998]: The EU/Israel Association Agreement is not yet in force, pending ratification by individual Member States. The United Kingdom has therefore made no formal representation to the Israeli government on this issue. We remain in close contact with Israel on the implementation of the EC/Israel Interim Agreement.

Mr. Faber: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has held with other EU Governments during the United Kingdom presidency concerning the EU-Israel Association Agreement; and if he will make a statement. [43831]

Mr. Doug Henderson [holding answer 1 June 1998]: The EU/Israel Association Agreement is not yet in force. As Presidency of the EU, the UK holds regular discussions with EU governments on the EC/Israel Interim Agreement, including on the Commission Communication on implementation of that agreement.

Dependent Territories

Mr. Gordon Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list each visit made to the Turks and Caicos Islands by (a) Ministers and (b) officials of his Department since 1990. [43425]

Mr. Fatchett: Records are unavailable for the period dating back to 1990. However, since 1992 there have been six Ministerial visits to the TCI:

Date
July 1992	Mr. Mark Lennox-Boyd, PUSS, FCO
September 1993	Mr. Anthony Nelson, Economic Secretary to the Treasury
October 1994	Mr. Tony Baldry, PUSS, FCO
April 1995	Sir Derek Spencer, Solicitor-General
April 1996	Sir Nicholas Bonsor, FCO Minister
May 1997	Lord Hardie, Lord Advocate

Since 1994 there have been at least eight visits by officials from the relevant political Department of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office. There have also been numerous visits by officials from the Dependent Territories Regional Secretariat in Bridgetown and from DFID/ODA.

Mr. Gordon Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much grant support was given to the Turks and Caicos Islands in each year since 1994–95. [43426]

Mr. Fatchett: The figures, including Good Government Fund disbursements, are as follows:

1994–95: £4.618 million

1995–96: £3.045 million

1996–97: £4.110 million.

Figures for 1997–98 are not yet available.

Afghanistan

Mr. Pollard: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if the United Kingdom continues to impose an arms embargo on Afghanistan in line with the EU's Common Position of 17 December 1996. [44655]

Mr. Fatchett: We remain committed to the EU arms embargo against Afghanistan.

Following discussions with this Department and the Ministry of Defence, the Department of Trade and Industry recently approved a licence for the export of mine-clearance suits for use by the United Nations Office for the Co-ordination of Humanitarian Assistance to Afghanistan in its demining operations. The grant of this licence is for humanitarian purposes, and is consistent with the purpose of the embargo.

Arms Sales

Mr. Pollard: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what restrictions in addition to the overall criteria governing arms exports announced on 28 July 1997, Official Report, columns 26–29, apply to sales to Taiwan. [44656]

Mr. Fatchett: We restrict the export to Taiwan of licensable defence-related equipment. Applications for export licences to supply defence-related equipment and technology are considered case by case. All decisions are made in the light of the criteria announced by my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary on 28 July 1998, Official Report, columns 26–29. In scrutinising applications for Taiwan, we also give particular weight to the implications for regional stability.

Regional and Minority Languages

Mr. McWalter: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if the United Kingdom will sign the Council of Europe Charter for Regional and Minority Languages. [44657]

Mr. Fatchett: We have given thorough consideration to the merits of the United Kingdom becoming a signatory to the Charter, which entered into force on 1 March 1998. We have concluded that it would be appropriate to do so. Part II of the Charter sets out general principles of recognition and support for indigenous minority languages and removal of discrimination against them. We readily subscribe to these principles. We also intend to specify the Welsh Language in Wales and, when the necessary procedural arrangements are in place, the Gaelic language in Scotland under the provisions of Part III which require adherence to a number of specific measures taken to promote the use of these languages in public life. It is also intended to specify the Irish language in Northern Ireland at an early date. Part II of the Charter will apply to the Scots language. We will be considering which, if any, other languages should be bound by the general principles in Part II and might be specified under Part III in due course.

European Union Council

Mr. McWalter: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the forthcoming business in the Council of the European Union for June; and if he will list the major European Union events for the next six months. [44658]

Mr. Doug Henderson: The following Councils are scheduled:

Date	Venue	Event
June 1998
3–4	Luxembourg	Education and Social Affairs Council
5	Luxembourg	ECOFIN Council
8	Luxembourg	Fisheries Council
8–9	Luxembourg	General Affairs Council
15–16	Cardiff	European Council
16–17	Luxembourg	Environment Council
17	Luxembourg	Joint Environment and Transport Council
18	Luxembourg	Transport Council
22	Luxembourg	Research Council
22–23	Luxembourg	Agriculture Council
29–30	Luxembourg	General Affairs Council

3–4 June 1998: Joint Education and Social Affairs Council

Adoption of the Agenda.

A points—Draft Directive extending the Burden of Proof Directive to the UK—Draft Regulation amending 1408/71 (various amendments 1997).

Preparation of the Cardiff European Council: Debate.

Commission proposals for draft decisions for the new generation of education, training and youth programmes: Presentation by the Commission and debate.

Draft decision on European Pathways including Apprenticeship.

Presidency information on a pilot project on European Teacher Mobility.

Draft Directive on the Transferability of Supplementary Pension Rights of migrant workers.

Draft Regulation amending Regulation 1408/71 and 574/72 on social security rights of migrant workers.

Draft Directive amending the Directive safeguarding the rights of workers in the event of the transfer of undertakings.

Draft Directive on employee involvement in the European Company Statute: Political agreement.

Communication on the future of the Social Dialogue: Commission presentation.

Social Policy Action programme: Commission presentation.

5 June 1998: ECOFIN Council (provisional agenda)

Commission and EIB report on the loan guarantee system for lending to third countries.

Council draft of Broad Economic Policy Guidelines.

Preparation of Cardiff European Council.

Preparation of Stage 3 of EMU.

Adoption of ECB legislation under Article 106(6): Collection of statistical information by the ECB—minimum reserves of financial institutions at the ECB—Powers of the ECB to impose sanctions on institutions failing to comply with monetary regulations.

Appointment of ECB auditors.

Rules and composition of Economic and Financial Committee.

8 June 1998: Fisheries Council

Post-Amsterdam enforcement proposal: debate, (possible) adoption.

Commission report on the follow-up to the 1997 Bergan Inter-Ministerial meeting: Council conclusions.

Commission progress report on the 2002 Review: Progress report.

Proposal for revision of Structural Funds: Adoption (possible item).

Revision of basic Marketing Regulation (3759/1992): Policy debate.

Proposal on rules for mesh size combinations: Policy debate.

8–9 June 1998: General Affairs Council (provisional agenda)

Korea: Council Decision on Conclusion of EU/Korea framework Agreement (possible A point).

China: Council conclusions (possible A point).

Additional Protocols concerning the IAEA "93+2" Programme (possible A point).

Schengen.

Agenda 2000.

Preparations for Cardiff European Council: Procedural.

Enlargement.

Lomé.

Mediterranean Policy (possible item).

South Africa.

Western Balkans.

Middle East Peace Process.

Great Lakes.

EU/Mercosur and EU/Chile (possible item).

Renegotiation of Industrial GSP Regulation.

15–16 June 1998: European Council

Not yet available.

16–17 June 1998: Environment Council

Proposal for a Council Directive relating to limit values for sulphur dioxide, oxides of nitrogen, particulate matter and lead in ambient air: Common position, cooperation procedure Art. 189c.

Proposal for a Council Directive relating to a reduction of the sulphur content of certain liquid fuels and amending Directive 93/12/EEC: Common position, cooperation procedure Art. 189c.

Amended proposal for a Council Directive establishing a framework for a Community action in the field of water policy: Orientation debate, cooperation procedure Art. 189c.

Proposal for a Council recommendation relating to the keeping of wild animals in zoos: Common position, cooperation procedure Art. 189c.

Proposal for a Council Directive amending Directive 90/220 on the deliberate release into the environment of genetically modified organisms: Orientation debate.

Proposal for a Council Directive on emissions from heavy goods vehicles: Orientation debate.

Community strategy on climate change: Council conclusions.

Community strategy on biological diversity: Council conclusions (possible item).

Carbon dioxide emissions from cars: Council conclusions (possible item).

17 June 1998: Joint Transport and the Environment Council

Transport and Environment: Orientation debate and Council conclusions.

18 June 1998: Transport Council (provisional agenda)

EASA: Adoption.

Air traffic management: Adoption.

EU/US aviation: Debate.

Denied Boarding Compensation: Agreement of Conclusions.

Hush-kits: Debate, political agreement.

Computer reservation systems: Common position.

NOx: Agreement of conclusions.

Random checks: Debate, political agreement.

Dangerous goods safety adviser training: Debate, political agreement.

Railways: Progress report.

Transport safety: Debate.

Ferry Operators: Debate, political agreement.

Manning conditions: Debate.

Ports green paper: Report by Commission.

22 June 1998: Research Council

Fifth EC Framework Programme—specific programmes: Thematic programmes—International cooperation—Innovation and participation of SMEs—Improving human research potential and the socio-economic knowledge base: (possible) agreement.

Fifth EURATOM Framework Programme—EURATOM part of specific programmes: (possible) Agreement.

JRC programmes: (possible) Agreement.

Rules of participation and dissemination of results (Article 130j decisions): (possible) Common position (EC)/decision (EURATOM).

22–23 June 1998: Agriculture Council

Not yet available.

29–30 June: General Affairs Council (provisional agenda)

Enlargement.

Follow-up to Cardiff European Council.

Lomé.

Transatlantic Relations.

Western Balkans.

Middle East Peace Process.

Iran.

Pakistan (possible item).

European Calendar: June—November 1998

This calendar is primarily concerned with European Union matters, but certain other relevant events are also included. Events and dates quoted are based on the information available on the date of issue.

Date	Venue	Event
June 1998
2	Luxembourg	Political Committee
3–4	Palermo	Ad-hoc meeting of Euro-Mediterranean Foreign Ministers
3–4	Luxembourg	Education and Social Affairs Council
4	Luxembourg	Euro X
5	Luxembourg	ECOFIN Council
8	Luxembourg	Fisheries Council
8–9	Luxembourg	General Affairs Council
8–9	Glasgow	Regional Policy/Spatial Planning Ministers' (Informal)
15–16	Cardiff	European Council
15–19	Strasbourg	European Parliament Plenary
16–17	Luxembourg	Environment Council
17	Luxembourg	Joint Environment and Transport Council
18	Luxembourg	Transport Council
19	Glasgow	Energy and Environment Conference
22	Luxembourg	Research Council
22–23	Luxembourg	Agriculture Council
25	Brussels	Presidency Biotechnology Round Table
29	Luxembourg	General Affairs Council
July 1998
1–2	Brussels	European Parliament Plenary
6	Brussels	ECOFIN Council
6–7	Luxembourg	Political Committee
8–10	Innsbruck	Employment/Social Affairs/Women (Informal)
13	Luxembourg	Political Committee
13–14	Luxembourg	General Affairs Council
17	Brussels	Budget Council
17–19	Luxembourg	Environment Council (Informal)
20–21	Brussels	Agriculture Council
23	Luxembourg	Political Committee
August 1998
There are no Councils scheduled for this month
September 1998
3	Brussels	Political Committee
5–6	Salzburg	Foreign Ministers (Informal)
7–8	Brussels	Special Committee on Agriculture
10–11	Linz	Culture Council
15–16	Bregenz	Transport Council (Informal)
21	New York	Political Committee
19–22	St. Wolfgang, Austria	Agriculture Council (Informal)
24	Brussels	Justice and Home Affairs
24	Brussels	Internal Market
25–27	Brussels	ECOFIN Council (Informal)
28–29	Brussels	Agriculture Council
October 1998
1–2	Luxembourg	Transport Council
2–3	Luxembourg	Industry/Research and Technology Council (Informal)
5	Luxembourg	Work and Social Affairs Council
5–6	Luxembourg	General Affairs Council
6	Luxembourg	Environment Council
12	Luxembourg	ECOFIN Council
13	Luxembourg	Research Council
13	Luxembourg	Political Committee
16–17	Vienna	European Council
19–20	Luxembourg	Agriculture Council
22	Luxembourg	Fisheries Council
23–24	Luxembourg	Education Council (Informal)
26	Luxembourg	Political Committee
26–27	Luxembourg	General Affairs Council
28–29	Luxembourg	Transport Council
29–30	Luxembourg	Justice and Home Affairs Council
November 1998
9	Brussels	Political Committee
9	Brussels	Internal Market Council
9–10	Brussels	General Affairs Council
12	Brussels	Health Council
16	Brussels	Industry Council
17	Brussels	Culture Council
20	Brussels	Budget Council
23	Brussels	ECOFIN Council
23–24	Brussels	Agriculture Council
25	Brussels	Telecommunications Council
26	Brussels	Youth Council
30	Brussels	Development Council
30–1 December 1998	Brussels	Transport Council

General Affairs Council

Mr. McWalter: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will report on the outcome of the General Affairs Council in Brussels on 25 May. [44659]

Mr. Doug Henderson: The General Affairs Council met in Brussels on 25 May. The Council adopted the A Points, and noted the European Parliament Resolutions of 29–30 April and 2 May listed in document 8115/98. A copy will be placed in the House Library as soon as it becomes available.

My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary provided a Presidency progress report on Agenda 2000 negotiations. Foreign Ministers set out their positions on a wide range of issues. The GAC agreed the proposed outline of the structure for a draft report to Cardiff. Foreign Ministers also agreed that COREPER should report back to the next GAC on how to respond to the latest letter from EP President Gil-Robles about European Parliament involvement.

The Council reached agreement on the text of the EU Code of Conduct for arms exports, which will be formally adopted at a future Council meeting. The Code aims to set high common standards for arms exports from all EU Member States. It develops the EU Common Criteria agreed in 1991 and 1992 and includes a mechanism under which a Member State will have to consult a Partner which has denied a licence for a particular export, before granting an essentially identical licence.

The Council took note of the reports of the EU/US and EU/Canada Summits. It agreed that the EU/US Summit, which made substantial progress towards resolving the problems of US sanctions legislation and endorsed the Transatlantic Economic Partnership, represented an important step.

The Council agreed a Declaration condemning the Indian nuclear tests and setting out the steps India has to take to rejoin the mainstream of international efforts on non-proliferation.

The Council underlined EU support for Indonesia, called on President Habibie to continue political reform, welcomed the release of two political prisoners and called on the Indonesian authorities to cooperate constructively with the efforts under the auspices of the UN Secretary-General on East Timor.

My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary briefed partners on his visit to Ankara on 19 May, and reported Turkey's decision not to attend the Association Council which had been planned for 25 May.

The Council discussed preparations for the ad hoc meeting of Euro-Mediterranean Foreign Ministers in Palermo on 3–4 June. This should give renewed impetus to the Euro-Mediterranean Partnership and prepare the ground for the third Euro-Mediterranean Ministerial Conference in Stuttgart in April 1999. The Council endorsed the Presidency's handling, and reaffirmed its commitment to ensuring that the meeting is a success.

The Council took note of developments in the Middle East Peace Process in the light of on-going US efforts. The French Foreign Minister briefed colleagues on the Franco-Egyptian "Call for Peace".

The Council heard a report from Mr. Felipe Gonzalez, the EU and OSCE Special Representative from the FRY. It noted with concern recent developments in the FRY affecting the freedom of the media. It welcomed the opening of a dialogue between Belgrade and the leadership of the Kosovar Albanian community, while expressing grave concern about the escalating violence in the province. It underlined the need for the parliamentary elections in Montenegro on 31 May to be free and fair and for their results to be respected by all.

The Council agreed to consider on 29 June whether Croatia should continue to benefit from Autonomous Trade Measures in the light of that country's performance on refugee returns and other important issues such as democratisation and independent media.

The Council endorsed the principle of financial support for Azerbaijan (beyond that provided under TACIS), as proposed by the Commission, subject to technical examination by Financial Counsellors.

My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary drew attention to the EU/Russia Summit (15 May) and reported on the outcome of the G8 Birmingham Summit.

East Timor

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on what date the EU Troika visit to East Timor is expected to take place. [44343]

Mr. Fatchett: We still hope that the visit, to which Indonesia has agreed, will take place during the UK Presidency.

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the visits by (a) ministers and (b) officials of his Department to East Timor (i) undertaken since 1 May 1998 and (ii) planned for the next six months. [44301]

Mr. Fatchett: No Ministers or officials have visited East Timor since 1 May 1998. The only visit so far planned for the next six months is one by the British Ambassador in Jakarta as part of an EU Troika Mission. The date is not yet settled.

Land Mines

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which countries have ratified the Ottawa convention on land mines. [44209]

Mr. Fatchett: By 31 May, the following had ratified the Ottawa Convention on anti-personnel land mines:

Belize

Canada

Croatia

Djibouti

The Holy See

Ireland

Hungary

Mauritius

Niue (a Protectorate of New Zealand)

San Marino

Switzerland

Trinidad and Tobago

and Turkmenistan.

St. Helenians

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many St. Helenians were working on Ascension in the last 10 years for which figures are available. [44061]

Mr. Fatchett: The total numbers of St. Helenians working on Ascension Island in the last 10 years are as follows:

Year
1989	549
1990	569
1991	530
1992	620
1993	599
1994	612
1995	579
1996	563
1997	587
1998	576

Entry Clearance Officers

Fiona Mactaggart: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the complement of extra entry clearance officers provided to deal with the increased volume of summer entry clearance work for (a) Islamabad, (b) New Delhi, (c) Moscow, (d) Peking, (e) Lagos, (f) Bogota and (g) Colombo; how many of these have already gone to each post; when the others are expected to travel to each post; and when they will be recalled from each post. [44229]

Mr. Fatchett: The information requested is contained in the following table:

Additional entry clearance officers deployed to deal with increased volume of summer entry clearance work

Post	Total number of ECOs	Number already at post	Dates others expected to travel	Dates of expected departure from post
Islamabad	5	2	3 early June	2 early September 3 late September
New Delhi	8	6	1 early July	2 early/ mid June 1 end July 2 early August 1 late August 2 early/late September
Moscow	8	7	—	1 already returned 2 early June 1 late June 2 end July 2 late August
Peking	3	1	2 early July	2 end August 1 end September
Lagos	4	1	2 early July 1 early August	2 end August 2 end September
Bogota	1	1	—	1 end July
Colombo	No additional Entry Clearance Officers

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Derringham School

Mr. Alan Johnson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what representations he has received opposing the proposed closure of Derringham School in Hull. [43151]

Ms Estelle Morris: Proposals to close Derringham School were first submitted on 8 December 1997. The Secretary of State received 19 letters and a petition containing 2,975 signatures opposing the closure. The proposals were then withdrawn and new proposals were submitted on 9 March 1998. The Department has received two letters opposing the new proposals; the formal objection period ended on 9 May and the LEA has until 9 June to send copies of further objections, plus the LEA's own comments, to the Secretary of State. All relevant representations will be taken into account by the Secretary of State in reaching a final decision.

Training and Enterprise Councils

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what steps he is taking to improve the efficiency and effectiveness of TECs in (a) raising skill levels and (b) fostering enterprise. [43111]

Dr. Howells: The Government introduced a package of measures in September to raise TEC performance to the level of the best, which includes sharing good practice. As announced in The Learning Age, we have also set up a Training Standards Council to supervise a Training Inspectorate to drive up the standards of training funded through TECs.

In addition, on 13 May, the Secretary of State announced a review of the future role, purpose and funding framework for TECs in delivering the Government's education, skills and enterprise objectives. The review will consider how we will give a clear focus to the role of TECs, and will develop proposals for improving efficiency and effectiveness. The review will lead to the publication of new Strategic Guidance in the Autumn which will set out the future role of TECs and the Government's expectations of them.

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what was the surplus achieved by Staffordshire TEC on trading accounts in (a) 1995–96 and (b) 1996–97. [43113]

Dr. Howells: The surplus in 1995–96 was £385,000 and in 1996–97 was £1,548,000.

Medical Retirement

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) how many teacher ill health retirement cases have been (a) approved and (b) turned down since April 1997 in each local education authority area; [43117]

(2) how many (a) heads and (b) deputy heads have (i) sought ill health retirement and (ii) had their applications for ill health retirement rejected since April 1997 in each local education authority. [43118]

Dr. Howells: The table shows the number of teachers in each local education authority who were awarded ill-health retirement in financial year 1997–98. The table covers the maintained nursery, primary, secondary and special education sectors in England. Information is not held by LEA of the number of applications which are rejected. The rejected rate is approximately 30 per cent. of all applications received.

Ill-health retirees whose last known service was in the maintained nursery, primary, secondary or special sector—England 1997–98 provisional

	Last known grade on or before 31 March 1997
Last known LEA	Headteachers	Deputy Headteachers	Classroom Teachers	Total
City of London	0	0	0	0
Camden	*	0	6	7
Greenwich	*	0	9	11
Hackney	*	0	5	7
Hammersmith and Fulham	*	5	14	21
Islington	0	0	16	16
Kensington and Chelsea	0	0	*	*
Lambeth	*	0	10	11
Lewisham	0	0	7	7
Southwark	0	*	8	9
Tower Hamlets	0	*	11	13
Wandsworth	*	5	5	13
City of Westminster	0	*	5	6
Barking and Dagenham	*	*	8	10
Barnet	*	0	14	15
Bexley	*	*	6	10
Brent	0	0	9	9
Bromley	0	*	6	8
Croydon	*	0	10	11
Ealing	0	0	9	9
Enfield	0	0	9	9
Haringey	*	0	*	7
Harrow	*	0	5	7
Havering	*	0	13	14
Hillingdon	*	0	6	7
Hounslow	*	*	5	7
Kingston upon Thames	*	*	7	9
Merton	*	*	6	8
Newham	0	*	11	12
Redbridge	*	*	*	6
Richmond upon Thames	0	0	6	6
Sutton	0	*	6	7
Waltham Forest	*	*	9	13
Birmingham	8	7	64	79
Coventry	*	0	18	19
Dudley	*	*	12	17
Sandwell	*	0	15	17
Solihull	*	0	12	14
Walsall	*	0	17	20
Wolverhampton	*	0	23	25
Knowlsey	*	*	11	13
Liverpool	7	*	29	38
St. Helens	*	*	12	14
Sefton	*	*	24	31
Wirral	*	0	21	23
Bolton	5	*	26	33
Bury	*	0	7	8
Manchester	6	0	27	33
Oldham	*	*	20	25
Rochdale	*	*	13	15
Salford	*	*	13	19
Stockport	*	*	18	23
Tameside	*	0	11	13
Trafford	*	0	14	16
Wigan	*	*	21	23
Barnsley	*	*	11	19
Doncaster	*	0	13	14
Rotherham	*	*	14	17
Sheffield	5	*	25	34
Bradford	*	*	29	36
Calderdale	*	*	13	16
Kirklees	*	0	33	37
Leeds	8	*	50	62

Ill-health retirees whose last known service was in the maintained nursery, primary, secondary or special sector—England 1997–98 provisional

	Last known grade on or before 31 March 1997
Last known LEA	Headteachers	Deputy Headteachers	Classroom Teachers	Total
Wakefield	*	*	13	16
Gateshead	*	*	13	15
Newcastle upon Tyne	*	0	14	16
North Tyneside	0	*	7	8
South Tyneside	*	*	18	20
Sunderland	*	*	23	29
Isles of Scilly	0	0	0	0
Bath and North East Somerset	*	*	5	8
City of Bristol	*	*	21	24
North Somerset	*	*	10	13
South Gloucestershire	*	*	8	10
Hartlepool	*	*	*	7
Middlesbrough	*	0	7	10
Redcar and Cleveland	*	*	16	19
Stockton-on-Tees	0	*	20	21
City of Kingston upon Hull	*	*	14	16
East Riding of Yorkshire	*	*	12	15
North East Lincolnshire	*	*	10	14
North Lincolnshire	*	*	12	15
North Yorkshire	9	*	20	31
York	*	0	9	11
Bedfordshire	*	0	9	12
Luton	0	0	8	8
Buckinghamshire	*	*	11	14
Milton Keynes	*	0	*	*
Derbyshire	6	*	20	30
City of Derby	*	*	8	10
Dorset	*	*	14	17
Poole	*	0	*	*
Bournemouth	0	*	*	5
Durham	0	*	35	37
Darlington	0	0	5	5
East Sussex	*	*	18	21
Brighton and Hove	*	*	7	10
Hampshire	*	*	40	47
Portsmouth	0	0	10	10
Southampton	0	0	*	*
Leicestershire	*	*	16	19
Leicester City	*	0	10	11
Rutland	0	0	*	*
Staffordshire	*	*	31	36
Stoke on Trent	*	*	22	25
Wiltshire	*	*	11	17
Swindon	*	0	*	*
Berkshire	6	*	30	37
Cambridgeshire	*	*	27	35
Cheshire	*	5	34	43
Cornwall	7	*	32	40
Cumbria	9	*	25	35
Devon	9	*	70	82
Essex	8	8	52	68
Gloucestershire	*	*	21	27
Hereford and Worcester	*	*	25	31
Hertfordshire	*	5	45	52
Isle of Wight	*	*	7	10
Kent	14	*	72	90
Lancashire	9	10	104	123
Lincolnshire	6	*	29	36
Norfolk	6	5	43	54
Northamptonshire	*	*	28	32
Northumberland	*	*	18	26
Nottinghamshire	*	*	54	62
Oxfordshire	*	*	23	29
Shropshire	9	*	19	29
Somerset	5	*	24	31
Suffolk	*	6	24	34
Surrey	*	*	31	37

Ill-health retirees whose last known service was in the maintained nursery, primary, secondary or special sector—England 1997–98 provisional

	Last known grade on or before 31 March 1997
Last known LEA	Headteachers	Deputy Headteachers	Classroom Teachers	Total
Warwickshire	*	*	20	27
West Sussex	*	*	44	49
Not known	27	16	163	206
Total	349	227	2,477	3,053

Notes:
1. Includes all retirees whether or not retiring directly from teaching service.
2. The LEA shown is the last known before retirement.
3. To avoid disclosure of sensitive information on individuals, numbers less than 5 are shown as asterisks.
4. Not known category includes teachers whose last known LEA no longer exists due to local government re-organisation.

Source:
DfEE Database of Teacher Records and Pensioner statistics database.

Teacher Training

Mr. Michael J. Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many students undertook teacher training courses in each year since 1979. [43676]

Ms Estelle Morris: The table shows the number of new entrants to initial teacher training for the years 1981–82 to 1997–98. Information for 1979–80 and 1980–81 is not available.

Recruitment to initial teacher training (ITT) courses[1] in England and Wales, 1981–82 to 1997–98

Year	Primary	Secondary	[2]Total
1981–82	6,171	12,512	18,683
1982–83	6,435	10,493	16,928
1983–84	7,422	8,796	16,218
1984–85	8,257	8,450	16,707
1985–86	8,794	7,931	16,725
1986–87	8,964	7,925	16,889
1987–88	10,104	9,076	19,180
1988–89	11,373	8,810	20,183
1989–90	12,814	8,943	21,757
1990–91	14,331	9,464	23,795
1991–92	16,263	12,529	28,792
1992–93	18,364	13,616	31,980
1993–94	17,486	14,556	32,042
1994–95	15,087	16,407	31,494
1995–96	14,932	16,086	31,018
1996–97	13,817	16,842	30,659
1997–98[3]	13,020	16,912	29,932

[1] Includes School Centred ITT and Open University

[2] Where figures have been rounded, there may be discrepancies between the sum of the constituent items and the totals shown

[3] Data for 1997–98 are provisional

Sources:

England:

1981–82 to 1993–94: DFE ITT Annual Recruitment Survey

1994–95: Higher Education Funding Council for England's (HEFCE) Early Statistics Survey

1995–96 to 1997–98: TTA ITT recruitment survey

Wales:

1981–82 to 1993–94: DFE ITT Annual Recruitment Survey

1994–95 to 1997–98: Higher Education Funding Council for Wales (HEFCW) Early Statistics Survey

Nursery Education

Mr. Ennis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many and what proportion of (a) three year olds and (b) four year olds currently have nursery places in (i) Barnsley and (ii) Doncaster. [43360]

Ms Estelle Morris: 1,264 three year olds, 1,732 four year olds and 49 per cent. of children under 5 were in maintained nursery schools and nursery classes in maintained primary schools in the Barnsley Local Education Authority area in January 1997.

2,364 three year olds, 1,200 four year olds and 44 per cent. of children under 5 were in maintained nursery schools and nursery classes in maintained primary schools in the Doncaster Local Education Authority area in January 1997.

Training

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what steps his Department has taken to encourage the establishment of a stable training infrastructure for the United Kingdom printing, packaging and graphic communications industry. [43444]

Dr. Howells: The Department is establishing a network of National Training Organisations (NTOs), employer led bodies with the key responsibility for developing education and training arrangements in their sectors. The independent NTO Recognition Panel has recently considered a bid from the Printing and Graphics Industry. The Secretary of State will be considering advice from the Panel and making a decision shortly on whether to grant NTO status.

Welfare to Work

Mr. Berry: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what action his Department is taking to enable severely disabled people to participate in Welfare to Work. [43374]

Mr. Alan Howarth: Severely disabled people, including those in receipt of Severe Disablement Allowance, are part of the client group for the New Deal for Disabled People. They will be invited to meet a Personal Adviser to explore ways to overcome the particular barriers to work they may face. The Government are consulting widely to ensure that appropriate help and support are in place to enable severely disabled people to benefit from the programme.

Mr. Berry: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what contact his Department has had with the Department of Health concerning inter-departmental co-operation to enable severely-disabled people to participate in Welfare to Work. [43371]

Mr. Alan Howarth: The Department for Education and Employment has close contact with the Department of Health on a range of issues. The Department of Health were represented on the inter-departmental working group which set the policy framework for the New Deal for Disabled People. They continue to contribute to the development of the New Deal for Disabled People.

Wheelchairs

Mr. Healey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) what procedures exist to monitor the receipt, processing and outcome of applications for financial assistance to purchase wheelchairs through Access to Work; [43934]

(2) how much financial assistance was given to purchase wheelchairs through Access to Work (a) in total and (b) broken down by Employment Service district in each of the last five years; [43936]

(3) how many applications have been (a) received and (b) accepted for financial assistance to purchase wheelchairs through Access to Work (i) in total and (ii) broken down by Employment Service district in each of the last five years; [43935]

(4) what proportion of the financial assistance to purchase wheelchairs through Access to Work during the past five years has been spent on (a) indoor/outdoor powered wheelchairs and (b) manual wheelchairs; [43937]

(5) what was the average cost of (a) all wheelchairs, (b) manual wheelchairs and (c) indoor/outdoor powered wheelchairs obtained through Access to Work in each of the last five years. [43938]

Mr. Alan Howarth: Responsibility for the question has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its Chief Executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply.

Letter from Peter Collis to Mr. John Healey, dated 2 June 1998:

The Secretary of State for Education and Employment has asked Leigh Lewis, the Chief Executive of the Employment Service, to reply to your questions about applications for Access to Work, and the financial assistance given towards the purchase of wheelchairs through the programme during the last five years. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to Mr. Lewis. I am replying in his absence.

I must start by saying that we do not monitor separately the number of applications for wheelchairs or their cost. We do, of course, note details of equipment provided in individual case files but the Employment Service does not analyse information to the level of detail you requested. However, we can supply the following related information.

The Employment Service does monitor regularly the receipt, processing and outcomes of all applications for Access to Work. In addition, the Placing, Assessment and Counselling Teams have standards to meet when dealing with applications. For all applications for the 12 months ending in March, 93% of applicants had a decision on help within the standard of 12 working days, and 83% received at least initial help within 60 working days.

The Employment Service analyses cost information by broad categories. Wheelchairs come within the Special Aids and Equipment category but their cost cannot be separately identified. Expenditure on Special Aids and Equipment is not broken down below regional level and is available only for the last four years. This is since the introduction of Access to Work in June 1994. Table 1 below offers a regional breakdown.

Table 2 sets out the total number of people benefiting nationally over the past five years under Access to Work (and the previous Special Schemes), which include people given help with wheelchairs. We do not identify applications for wheelchairs separately but we have details, for the past two years, of the number of people making applications for Special Aids and Equipment. Again, we have a regional, but not a district, breakdown.

I am sorry I have not been able to answer your questions more fully. However, if you would like to discuss this further, you may care to contact Tom Gawn from the Disability Services Division, with policy responsibility for Access to Work. He can be contacted at Rockingham House, 123 West Street, Sheffield, S1 4ER or on 0114 259 6960.

I hope this is helpful.

Table 1: Cost of special aids and equipment by region: 1994–95 to 1997–98

£ million

	1994–95	1995–96	1996–97	1997–98
East Midlands	1.1	1.1	0.6	0.4
London and South East	3.2	4.2	2.0	2.0
North West	1.2	1.3	0.7	0.8
Northern	0.6	0.7	0.3	0.3
Scotland	0.8	1.0	0.3	0.5
South West	0.9	1.2	0.6	0.6
Wales	0.5	0.5	0.2	0.3
West Midlands	1.2	1.2	0.5	0.7
Yorkshire and the Humber	1.2	1.2	0.4	0.6
Total (rounded)	10.7	12.5	5.5	6.2

Table 2: Number of people helped through Access to Work 1993–94 to 1997–98; number of people receiving special aids and equipment (SAE) by region: 1996–97 and 1997–98

	1993–94	1994–95	1995–96	1996–97	1997–98
East Midlands	—	—	—	389	447
London and South East	—	—	—	1,443	2,421
North West	—	—	—	759	1,098
Northern	—	—	—	252	498
Scotland	—	—	—	350	429
South West	—	—	—	450	611
Wales	—	—	—	235	298
West Midlands	—	—	—	551	828
Yorkshire and the Humber	—	—	—	618	753
Total SAE	—	—	—	5,047	7,383
All applications	8,172	10,394	13,577	10,119	12,825

Learning Support Assistants

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to introduce a national training framework for learning-support assistants. [43884]

Ms Estelle Morris: The Green Paper, "Excellence for all children: meeting special educational needs", sought views on the action we might take to improve the training of learning support assistants, including the option of a national training framework. In the light of the responses to the Green Paper, we expect to publish proposals on this and other issues shortly after the Summer recess.

School Exclusions (Warrington)

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many children at (a) primary and (b) secondary level in Warrington, North constituency were excluded from school in each of the past five years. [44208]

Ms Estelle Morris: Information on the number of pupils permanently excluded from schools in the Warrington, North constituency is shown in the table. Information on permanent exclusions was not collected prior to 1994/95. The Department does not currently collect information on fixed period exclusions:

Permanent exclusions from maintained schools in the Warrington North constituency

Type of school	1994/95	1995/96
Primary	3	4
Secondary	17	12
Special	0	0
Total	20	16

Exclusions data for 1996/97 are currently being collated and will be published later this year.

Job Vacancies (Chelmsford)

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many job vacancies were notified to the Chelmsford jobcentre in each of the last six months. [44175]

Mr. Alan Howarth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its Chief Executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Leigh Lewis to Mr. Simon Burns, dated 4 June 1998:

The Secretary of State for Education and Employment has asked me to reply to your question in which you asked for information about the number of job vacancies notified to Chelmsford Jobcentre in each of the last six months. This is something that falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of the Employment Service.

Vacancies notified to the Jobcentre were as follows:

November 1997: 782

December 1997: 584

January 1998: 248

February 1998: 591

March 1998: 549

April 1998: 483

I hope this is helpful.

Autism

Mr. Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many children of school age in West Sussex are currently statemented on account of problems relating to autism. [43283]

Ms Estelle Morris: The national figures which the Department collects on the number of children with special educational needs are not disaggregated by type of special need; it is for West Sussex—as for other individual local education authorities—to identify children with autism and other types of special educational needs in their areas and to make appropriate provision. West Sussex LEA estimates that approximately 150 children with autism, including Asperger's Syndrome, currently have statements in the county. There may be other children with autistic spectrum disorders whose statements relate primarily to other types of special education needs.

Written Answers to Questions

Friday 5 June 1998

PRIME MINISTER

Older People

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Prime Minister what plans he has to co-ordinate Government policy for older people. [44582]

The Prime Minister: I have established a Ministerial Group which will be chaired by the Under-Secretary of State for Social Security my hon. Friend the Member for Southampton, Itchen (Mr. Denham). The terms of reference for the group are as set out:

1. To ensure that Government strategy and policy affecting older people is effectively co-ordinated, avoids duplication, and takes account of the needs of older people;
2. To develop a better understanding of the lives and aspirations of older people and how they are affected by Government policy by:
   - undertaking an audit of cross-Government initiatives to identify all those that may affect older people;
   - working with non-governmental groups representing older people's interests, to gain a better understanding of their lives and the implications of an ageing population; and
   - developing a statement of values and principles which reflect the findings of the audit and wider discussions.
3. To co-ordinate the presentation and promotion of Government policy affecting older people.

Membership of the group will comprise Ministers who have particular responsibilities for policy areas which affect older people. It will include the Minister without Portfolio, the Under-Secretary of State for Women and Ministers from the Department of Health, the Department for Culture, Media and Sport, the Cabinet Office (Office of Public Service), the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions, the Department for Education and Employment, the Home Office, HM Treasury, the Department of Trade and Industry, the Scottish Office, the Welsh Office and the Northern Ireland Office.

The group will make its first report to me before the Summer Recess.

Northern Ireland Assembly Elections

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Prime Minister if he will issue guidance on the conduct of Government business during the election campaign for the Northern Ireland Assembly. [44924]

The Prime Minister: The business of Government must, of course, continue during the election campaign period, including the implementation of the Good Friday Agreement now endorsed in the referendums. Nevertheless, it is important that the Government conduct business in a way which does not interfere with the electoral contest between the participating candidates and parties.

With that in mind, I have endorsed the issue of guidance to Government Ministers and Departments in Northern Ireland and I am arranging for copies to be placed in the Libraries of the House.

Indebted Countries

Mr. Reed: To ask the Prime Minister what plans he has for future relations with poor indebted countries following the G8 summit. [43468]

The Prime Minister: Debt was one of the main themes at Birmingham. The conclusions of the discussions mark a significant step forward, both in recognising the need for progress in debt relief by the year 2000, and in endorsing proposals put forward by the UK for faster debt relief to post conflict countries.

The British Government will be pressing for this work to be advanced urgently amongst other creditors and in the international financial institutions. The Department for International Development will also continue to build partnerships with developing countries as set out in its recent white paper.

Sierra Leone

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer of 1 June 1998, Official Report, column 92, when the workshop and seminar were held in the United Kingdom to help President Kabbah restore the legitimate Government of Sierra Leone; and what assessment he has made of the contributions of the workshop and seminar. [44346]

The Prime Minister: The workshop took place from 5 to 12 October 1997 and the seminar on 20 October 1997. The workshop produced a 90-day programme for implementation by President Kabbah's government on their return to Sierra Leone.

The plan was presented by President Kabbah at the seminar, attended by representatives from the United Nations, the Organisation for African Unity, the Commonwealth Secretariat, the European Commission, the US Embassy in Sierra Leone, and my hon. Friend the Member for Manchester, Central (Mr. Lloyd) the Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Office.

The plan has provided the basis for immediate actions now being taken by the Government as they re-establish their functions and services in Sierra Leone.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Sites of Special Scientific Interest

Mr. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the number of sites of special scientific interest in the area covered by the Lancashire (Wigan) local team office of English Nature; how many new sites were (a) added and (b) removed in each of the last five years; how many of the sites were damaged in the last 12 months; how many of the sites were subject to meetings with the Environment Agency concerning (a) pollution, (b) coastal defences and (c) water table levels in the last year; and what steps are being taken in the area to identify new sites of special scientific interest in industrial and urban areas by the local team. [44114]

Angela Eagle: English Nature's Lancashire Team, based in Wigan, is responsible for 107 Sites of Special Scientific Interest (SSIs).

Twelve new sites were added in the last five years, none were removed.

In the last 12 months, nine sites suffered some damage by activities such as costal defence works, agricultural operations and emergency works. The Team maintains frequent contact with the Environment Agency over a range of site-specific issues where a number of topics may be discussed. It is not possible to specify each meeting where pollution, coastal defences and water table levels were specifically discussed.

No specific steps are taken by the Team to identify new sites in industrial and urban areas. However, if they become aware of the special interest of a site during the normal course of business these would be considered for notification.

River Tame

Mr. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many storm overflows allow untreated sewage to pass into the River Tame; if he will list the grid references of each overflow point; and how many are planned to be fixed by North West Water during each of the next five years. [44112]

Angela Eagle: There are 67 storm water overflows which have outfalls affecting the River Tame. The following table shows the location of the outfalls by name and national grid reference.

There are no plans for improvement of storm overflows into the River Tame during the remaining two years of North West Water's Asset Management Plan 2 (AMP2), agreed in 1994 with the then National Rivers Authority. However, in 1996, three unsatisfactory storm overflows in Audenshaw were abandoned and replaced by one of modern design.

The Asset Management Plan for the five years from March 2000 (AMP3) is currently under consideration as part of the Periodic Review of water company price limits from 2000–2005, and the unsatisfactory storm water overflows discharging into the River Tame will be considered as part of this process.

Number	Location by name	Discharge area	Grid reference
1	Delph New Road/Station	River Tame	SD 9873 0743
2	Dob Cross New Road	River Tame	SD 9903 0632
3	Clifton Holmes, Delph	River Tame	SD 9818 0804
4	Chew Valley Road	River Tame	SD 9935 0435
5	Royal George Pumping Station	River Tame	SD 9802 0385
6	Armit Road, (Grasscroft sewage scheme)	River Tame	SD 9802 0393
7	Dacres, Greenfield	River Tame	SD 9890 0416
8	St. Anne's Square, Delph	River Tame	SD 9861 0788
9	East Greenfield	River Tame	SD 9929 0429
10	Horest Lane	River Tame	SD 9705 0952
11	Brinnington Rise, Brinnington	River Tame	SJ 9064 9185
12	Manor Road, Pumping Station, Woodley	River Tame	SJ 9333 9288
13	Grimesbottom, Portwood (near pylon adjacent to Penny Lane)	River Tame	SJ 8975 9134
14	Grimesbottom, Portwood (recreation ground near Penny Lane)	—	—
15	Meadow Lane, Haughton Green	River Tame	SJ 9341 9298
16	Sheridan Way/Dark Lane Farm Estate No. 3	River Tame	SJ 9272 9452
17	Raglan Street near Peak Forest	River Tame	SJ 9426 9474
18	Roaches Lock, Mossley	River Tame	SD 9796 0313
19	Disused Railway Station in Rassbottom Street/Bayley Street	River Tame	SJ 9590 9855
20	Wharf Street	River Tame	SJ 9347 9822
21	Turner Lane/Alexandra Road	River Tame	SJ 9394 9877
22	Lower Wharf Street (manhole 482)	River Tame	SJ 9406 9875
23	Lower Wharf Street/Scotland Street (manhole 447)	River Tame	SJ 9391 9876
24	Hyde Road	River Tame	SJ 9371 9536
25	Wakeling Road/Stockport Road	Tributary River Tame	SJ 9223 9388
26	Two Trees Lane/Marina Avenue	Culvert to River Tame	SJ 9316 9438
27	Dukinfield Road/Throstle Bank Street	Tributary River Tame	SJ 9417 9561
28	Manchester Road	Culvert to River Tame	SD 9740 0166
29	Dark Lane	River Tame	SD 9765 0261
30	Waggon Road	River Tame	SD 9753 0197
31	Buckton Vale Road	Culvert to River Tame	SD 9768 0005
32	Grove Road/Spring Bank Lane	River Tame	SJ 9748 9995
33	Knowle Street	River Tame	SJ 9666 9860
34	Huddersfield Road	Culvert to River Tame	SJ 9723 9881
35	Corporation Street	River Tame	SJ 9655 9855
36	Market Street/Trinity Street	River Tame	SJ 9635 9860
37	Cumberland Street	Culvert to River Tame	SJ 9590 9880
38	Trinity Street/Dean Street	River Tame	SJ 9636 9853
39	Trinity Street	River Tame	SJ 9639 9853
40	Melbourne Street	River Tame	SJ 9628 9853
41	Caroline Street/Castle Street	River Tame	SJ 9606 9848
42	Tame Street/Park Road	River Tame	SJ 9539 9816
43	Park Road/Sandy Lane	River Tame	SJ 9510 9822

Number	Location by name	Discharge area	Grid reference
44	Hanover Street	Culvert to River Tame	SJ 9590 9882
45	Stamford Street/Astley Street	River Tame	SJ 9564 9843
46	Clarence Street South	River Tame	SJ 9534 9843
47	St. George Street/Hanover Street	River Tame	SJ 9591 9854
48	St. George Street/West Avenue	River Tame	SJ 9591 9854
49	St. George Street/Hanover Street	River Tame	SJ 9591 9854
50	Ridge Hill Lane/St. George Street	River Tame	SJ 9591 9854
51	Binns Street	River Tame	SJ 9534 9813
52	Copley Street	River Tame	SJ 9712 9924
53	Hough Hill Road	River Tame	SJ 9645 9830
54	Hough Hill Road/High Street	River Tame	SJ 9645 9825
55	Hough Hill Road/Grasscroft Street	River Tame	SJ 9645 9818
56	Walmsley Street 1	River Tame	SJ 9646 9811
57	Walmsley Street 2	River Tame	SJ 9646 9805
58	Walmsley Street 3	River Tame	SJ 9646 9798
59	Dukinfield Outfall Sewer	River Tame	SJ 9327 9670
60	Off St. Lawrences Road	River Tame	SJ 9335 9509
61	ASDA (manhole 773) Park Parade	River Tame	SJ 9383 9865
62	Caroline Street (North of Bridge)	River Tame	SJ 9610 9855
63	Illingworth Avenue	River Tame	SJ 9727 9843
64	Off Mill Lane	River Tame	SJ 9406 9478
65	Off Gibralter Lane	River Tame	SJ 9395 9378
66	Off Manor Road	River Tame	SJ 9415 9415
67	Broomstairs Road combined sewer overflow	River Tame	SJ 9304 9652

Housing (Wandsworth)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what discussions he has had with the London Borough of Wandsworth on its policy of providing affordable housing within the borough. [44116]

Mr. Raynsford: Ministers have had no discussions with the London Borough of Wandsworth about its policy of providing affordable housing within the borough. However, as part of the Housing Investment Programme, the Government Office for London, in conjunction with the Housing Corporation, regularly discuss with the authority its housing strategy and policy for assisting the supply of affordable housing.

The Government's policy on planning and affordable housing is set out in the revised PPG3: Housing and circular 6/98, which replaces circular 13/96. This policy advocates a needs-based, plan-led approach to securing affordable housing in new private housing proposals. This requires that planning authorities carry out rigorous and up-to-date assessments of need for affordable housing in their boroughs, as a basis for preparing their planned policies. Therefore, where there is evidence of need for affordable housing, as is the case in all London authorities, including Wandsworth, we would expect the authority to seek the inclusion of affordable housing in all new housing proposals on suitable sites.

American Bull Frog

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to ban the import and sale of the giant American bull frog; and if he will make a statement. [44300]

Angela Eagle: The EC Wildlife Trade Regulation (Council Regulation 338/97), which implements the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species of Wild Fauna and Flora (CITES) within the European Union, contains provisions for the suspension of imports of species on the grounds that they pose an ecological threat to European wildlife. On 15 December 1997, imports into the EU of Rana catesbeiana (American bull frog) were suspended on these grounds. The sale of specimens already legally within the EU are not affected by this ban.

Common Land

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he intends to publish the Good Practice Guide on Managing the Use of Common Land. [44652]

Mr. Meacher: We have today published the Good Practice Guide on Managing the Use of Common Land, which has been produced for us by the Countryside and Community Research Unit of the Cheltenham and Gloucester College of Higher Education. Copies of the Guide have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

The Guide provides practical advice and solutions to problems experienced in the management of common land and highlights examples of good practice. It is designed for all involved in governing and managing common land. We are therefore distributing copies of the Guide widely to interested organisations and individuals.

Council Tax Debt Collection

Mr. Stringer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will change the way in which non-domestic rate debt is enforced following the recent changes to council tax debt collection procedures; and if he will make a statement. [44911]

Ms Armstrong: Many of those who respond to our consultation exercise on council tax debt collection expressed the view that similar changes should be made to the non-domestic rating regime. We have decided that, where appropriate, the non-domestic collection and enforcement regulations should be brought into line with those for council tax. I am publishing today a consultation paper "Changes to the enforcement and levying of distress for non-domestic rate debts" setting out our proposals.

It is important that local authorities pursue unpaid business rates rigorously. At the same time, the system needs to operate as fairly as possible for ratepayers. Debtors need to be aware what the procedures are and why they are being pursued for payment. The changes we are proposing will make the system clearer and more effective.

A copy of the consultation document has been placed in the Library of the House.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Smoking

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the estimated gross cost of anti-smoking campaigns in Northern Ireland aimed at children and young people has been since 1988; and what assessment she has made of the impact of the campaigns on teenage (a) boys and (b) girls. [44013]

Mr. Worthington: The estimated expenditure on such campaigns by the Health Promotion Agency for Northern Ireland since its inception in October 1990 is £315,300.

Campaigns to reduce smoking among young people appear to have had a greater impact upon boys. Post-campaign quantitative and qualitative research among the target group has identified a number of issues which the Department of Health and Social Services will address in the context of the Government's forthcoming White Paper on tobacco control.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Transperience, Low Moor

Mrs. Ann Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will take steps to ensure that the collection of public transport vehicles at present housed at Transperience, Low Moor, Bradford, remains on public display in the Bradford District. [38555]

Mr. Fisher [holding answer 21 April 1998]: Coopers and Lybrand, the administrators dealing with the assets of the West Yorkshire Transport Trust Limited, have a legal duty to administer the assets, of which this collection forms a significant part, in order to recover moneys owed to the Trust's creditors.

I have met my hon. Friend to discuss the situation, and I understand that the Keighley Bus Museum Trust will be approaching the Yorkshire and Humberside Museums Council to discuss the heritage value of the collection.

WALES

Advisory Committee on Drug and Alcohol Misuse

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the members of the Welsh Advisory Committee on Drug and Alcohol Misuse; what their qualifications are; and when their terms of office expire. [44007]

Mr. Win Griffiths: The Welsh Advisory Committee on Drug and Alcohol Misuse (WACDAM) comprises a Chair and up to 26 members appointed by the Secretary of State for Wales. Members accept a time commitment of two days per month and receive no remuneration. The Committee is currently chaired by Dr. William Clee, a General Practitioner from Cardiff; his period of appointment extends to March 2000. A list of members of WACDAM, their residence/occupation and periods of appointment is as follows:

Member	Residence/Occupation	Start Date	End Date
Dr. Morfydd Rozella Keen, OBE	Cardiff Consultant Psychiatrist	1 November 1996	31 October 1999
Mrs. Sandra Mary Skinner	Brecon Powys Officer, Duke of Edinburgh Award Scheme	1 November 1996	31 October 1999
Dr. Howard John Williamson	Pontypridd Rhondda Cynon Taff Senior Research Associate	1 November 1996	31 October 1999
Mr. Roger Bruce De Wisset Duncan	Penarth Vale of Glamorgan Director of Drugs Project	1 November 1996	31 October 1999
Mr. Arthur Graham Williams	Pontardawe Neath Port Talbot Director of Personal Services	1 November 1996	31 October 1999
Dr. Edward Coyle	Cardiff Director of Public Health Medicine	1 March 1997	28 February 2000
Mr. Dewi Tegla Williams	Carmarthen Carmarthenshire Director of Nursing Services	1 November 1996	31 October 1999
Mr. Richard Martin Pates	Monmouth Monmouthshire Consultant Clinical Psychologist	1 November 1996	31 October 1999
Mr. David Jonathan Temple	Penarth Vale of Glamorgan Director, Postgrad Pharmaceutical Studies	1 November 1996	31 October 1999

Member	Residence/Occupation	Start Date	End Date
Miss Marilyn Haydn Jones	Conwy Lecturer in Education	1 November 1996	31 October 1999
Dr. Michael Stanhope Shooter	Abergavenny Monmouthshire Consultant, Child and Adolescent Psychiatry	1 November 1996	31 October 1999
Mr. Ray Singh	Neath Neath Port Talbot Barrister	1 November 1996	31 October 1999
Mr. Tony Burden	South Wales Police	24 April 1998	31 October 1999
Mrs. Siân Rees	Clunderwen Carmarthenshire Manager of Health Promotion Centre	1 November 1996	31 October 1999
Mr. Rory Annesley	Presteigne Powys Retired	1 November 1996	31 October 1999
Mr. Owen Aneurin Owen	Denbigh Denbighshire Voluntary Agency Director	1 November 1996	31 October 1999
Mrs. Susan Marie Allerston	Bridgend Advisory Teacher for Health Education	1 November 1996	31 October 1999
Ms Rhoda Briony Emlyn-Jones	Cardiff Principal Social Services Officer	1 November 1996	31 October 1999
Mr. Jeffrey Anthony Collins	Swansea Chief Probation Officer	1 November 1996	31 October 1999
Dr. John Michael Browne	Reigate Surrey Deputy Director, Portman Group	1 November 1996	31 October 1999
Dr. Peter John Priddle Higson	Llanrwst Conwy Deputy Chief Executive	1 November 1996	31 October 1999
Dr. John Robert Kemm	Birmingham Director of Public Health Services	1 November 1996	31 October 1999
Dr. Duncan Meredydd Williams	Ammanford Carmarthenshire General Medical Practitioner	1 November 1996	31 October 1999

There are currently three vacancies on WACDAM.

Continence Services

Ms Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many people in Dyfed/Powys Health Authority area by unitary authority area are provided with continence services; and what budget has been allocated to continence care in real terms for each year since 1990–91. [43472]

Mr. Win Griffiths: The funding for continence services is unhypothepothecated and is within each health authority's discretionary allocation. It is not possible, therefore, to give precise figures for budgets for these services for the years in question. Figures that are available for 1997/98 in the Pembrokeshire and Derwen NHS Trust show that it spent £198,000 on community-based continence care.

The GP Morbidity Database Project estimated a rate of 3.8 per 1,000 people in Wales suffering from incontinence during 1996. This would imply a total for Wales of around 11,000. This is likely to be an underestimate of the number of people provided with services because the data record those patients consulting their GP about incontinence in 1996; patients coded as suffering from incontinence in previous years would not appear in the data.

Estimates at more detailed geographical levels are not robust. Data collected from NHS Trusts situated in the Dyfed Powys area indicate that Continence Nurses made a total of 995 contacts during the financial year 1996–97. This does not equate with people seen, since more than one contact during the year may well have been made.

HOME DEPARTMENT

EU Justice and Home Affairs Council

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the outcome of the Justice and Home Affairs Council held in Brussels on 28 and 29 May. [44991]

Mr. Straw: I chaired the Council on behalf of the Presidency. The Minister of State, my hon. Friend the Member for Gateshead, East and Washington, West (Ms Quin) represented the United Kingdom.

This was a very successful Council, where agreement was reached on a number of outstanding issues. There was also full discussion of a range of issues relating to the justice and home affairs aspects of the enlargement process. The main matters dealt with were as follows.

Ministers signed the Convention on Jurisdiction and the Recognition and Enforcement of Judgments in Matrimonial Matters (known as the 'Brussels II Convention') and its Protocol relating to the European Court of Justice. This convention establishes grounds for court jurisdiction in cases of divorce, nullity and separation, as well as related parental responsibility orders securing care for any children involved.

The Council agreed as 'A' points, among other things, a report on terrorist funding aimed at combating terrorism by cutting off sources of funding and countering terrorist fund raising; a report on football hooliganism; a report on the exchange of DNA analysis results; conclusions on encryption and law enforcement; a recommendation seeking to establish uniform levels of expertise and equipment for detecting forged documents at points of entry into the European Union; and a Council Communication concerning a uniform format for residence permits.

The Council held a wide-ranging open debate on organised crime, in which Ministers stressed concerns about the growing threat posed by criminal organisations and the need for member states to act both individually and collectively to combat the threat. The Council agreed that environmental and economic crime in particular were activities on which more work should be taken forward.

The Council noted a report on progress in implementing the Action Plan on Organised Crime which, subject to appropriate updating, will now be submitted to the Cardiff European Council.

Political agreement was reached on the Convention on Driving Disqualification, which will now be finalised and made ready for early signature. This convention is an important road safety measure which will enable a driving disqualification imposed in one member state to be enforced in another.

A Joint Action was agreed on good practice in mutual legal assistance. A further Joint Action establishing a European Judicial Network was also agreed, which will help to speed up gathering of evidence across jurisdictions and facilitate contacts between magistrates and prosecutors. This was one of the recommendations in the Action Plan on Organised Crime.

The Council noted progress in the preparations for Europol to begin working. The ratification by all member states of the Convention is expected to be completed soon. The Council agreed that the activities of Europol should be extended to terrorism in principle from 1 January 1999 and that the necessary preparatory work should be put in hand. We also agreed the Europol budget for 1999.

The Council had a wide-ranging discussion on the Convention on Mutual Legal Assistance, and reached agreement on some of the outstanding issues. However, further work remains to be done on several important issues including data protection, interception of communications and the role of the European Court of Justice.

The Council agreed a Joint Action establishing a mechanism for collective evaluation of applicant states' implementation of the acquis in the Justice and Home Affairs field. A new expert group will be able to draw on the wide range of information already available and feed the results of its evaluations into the wider enlargement process. Conclusions on the 'rule of law' were also agreed, which will provide guidelines to the applicant states on what they need to do to build democratic and accountable institutions as a necessary pre-condition for European Union membership. There was also a discussion of ways in which the applicant states might be associated with the practical application of the Justice and Home Affairs (JHA) acquis before their formal accession, and this issue will be considered further.

The Council held a joint meeting with Interior and Justice Ministers from the applicant countries to approve the Pre-Accession Pact on Organised Crime, which was another of the recommendations of the Action Plan on Organised Crime; its approval six months ahead of the timetable set by the Amsterdam Council represents a significant achievement. Ministers also had a useful discussion covering organised crime, implementation of the pre-accession pact and the rule of law. There was full agreement on the importance placed on these issues, and members of the JHA Council emphasised that they stood ready to assist the candidate countries in these areas.

The Council agreed arrangements for the exchange of information and best practice in crime prevention, in advance of the coming into force of the Treaty of Amsterdam. A report on European Union drugs activities was approved and will be forwarded to the European Council in Cardiff. This included elements of a post-1999 European Union drugs strategy.

The Council discussed, on the basis of proposals from Italy, the varying data protection provisions which exist in different Justice and Home Affairs instruments. Further work was commissioned to examine the scope and need for greater harmonisation of approach.

A progress report was presented on the Action Plan on the influx of migrants from Iraq and the neighbouring region. The incoming Austrian Presidency agreed to pursue the implementation of the Action Plan and to report to the next meeting of the Council in September.

There was a full discussion of outstanding issues on the Eurodac convention, which is concerned with fingerprinting of asylum applicants. It was agreed that a Protocol should be drawn up to extend the convention to fingerprints of illegal immigrants. This is extended to be adopted by the end of 1998, when the other outstanding issues on the Convention itself should also be resolved.

After the Council, the first meeting was held of the Committee of Ministers set up under article 18 of the Dublin Convention, which lays down criteria for determining the State responsible for deciding asylum applications. The Committee agreed on a Decision and a Programme of Action aimed at improving the operation of the Dublin Convention.

Prison Service

Mr. Heppell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish the Prison Service's Business Plan for 1998–99. [44992]

Ms Quin: I am publishing today the Prison Service Business Plan for 1998–99, including the key performance targets I have set. The majority will require some improvement on the Prison Service's very creditable performance in 1997–98.

They are:

Escapes:

to ensure no Category A Prisoners escape to ensure that the number of escapes from prisons and from escorts, expressed as a proportion of the prison population, is lower than in 1997–98

Assaults:

to ensure that the number of assaults on staff, prisoners and others, expressed as a proportion of the average population, is lower than 9 per cent.

Drugs:

to ensure that the rate of positive testing for drugs (the number of random drug tests that prove positive expressed as a percentage of the total number of random tests carried out) is lower than 20 per cent.

Overcrowding:

to ensure that the percentage of the prison population above the uncrowded capacity of the estate is no more than 12 per cent.

Purposeful Activity:

to ensure that prisoners spend on average at least 24 hours per week engaged in purposeful activity

Time Unlocked:

to ensure that at least 60 per cent. of prisoners are held in establishments which normally unlock all prisoners on the standard or enhanced regime for at least 10 hours per weekday

Offending behaviour programmes:

to ensure that there are at least 3,000 completions by prisoners of programmes accredited as being effective in reducing re-offending, of which 680 should be completions of the Sex Offender Treatment Programmes

Cost per place:

to ensure that the average cost of a prison place does not exceed £24,615

Staff training:

to ensure that, on average, staff spend at least 6.5 days in training.

I will publish a long-term strategy for the Prison Service, including new objectives and targets, once the Comprehensive Spending Review is completed.

Chief Police Officers

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will place in the Library a copy of the full accounts of the Association of Chief Police Officers of England, Wales and Northern Ireland for the last year for which the accounts are available; [44096]

(2) which grades so entitled within the police service have refused to join (a) the Association of Chief Police Officers of England, Wales and Northern Ireland and (b) ACPO Ltd; [44098]

(3) if the members of ACPO who became directors of ACPO Ltd. informed their respective police authorities that ACPO was a limited company. [44102]

Mr. Michael: None of those entitled or invited to join have refused to join the Association of Chief Police Officers of England, Wales and Northern Ireland or ACPO Limited.

I have arranged for a full copy of the accounts for 1996/97 for the Association of Chief Police Officers of England, Wales and Northern Ireland (ACPO) to be placed in the Library.

The Association of Chief Police Officers of England, Wales and Northern Ireland is not part of the Home Office, nor is it accountable to the Secretary of State for the Home Department. The appointment of chief officers of police as directors of ACPO is a matter for those chief officers and their police authorities.

Prisoners (Self-harm)

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what research is being evaluated by his Department into the reporting of incidents of self-harm by young prisoners. [43875]

Ms Quin: A Prison Service Headquarters research and development group on suicide and self-injury acts as a forum for formulating and co-ordinating research into suicide and self-injury in forensic settings. A range of research has been conducted, including developing risk screening procedures amongst young offenders. Current commissioned research includes a project being undertaken at the University of Kent at Canterbury, examining current practices of recording and monitoring self-injury and suicidal behaviours, with the objective of identifying more effective methods of management.

The 1997 publication "Suicide and Self-Injury in Prisons" (by the British Psychological Society) includes an overview of recent and current research in the area.

In addition, Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Prisons, Sir David Ramsbotham, is currently preparing an independent thematic review on suicides and self-injury in prisons, which is expected to be completed later this summer.

Prisoners

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) males and (b) females aged (i) 14, (ii) 15, (iii) 16, (iv) 17 and (v) 18 years were held in prisons on 1 May. [43656]

Ms Quin: The latest available information is for 30 April 1998 and is given in the table. Information on the population of young persons, by age and type of custody is published in successive volumes of "Prison statistics, England and Wales" (Table 3.2 of the 1996 edition—Cm 3732), copies of which are in the Library.

Population of young persons in prisons in England and Wales by sex and age on 30 April 1998[1]

Age	Male	Female
14	—	—
15	224	5
16	685	21
17	1,501	61
18	2,309	102

[1] Provisional figures

Private Prisons

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what arrangements are made when assistance is provided by state prisons to private prisons for (a) controlling riot situations and (b) other purposes. [44008]

Ms Quin: The arrangements made for providing assistance from public sector prisons to a contracted-out prison for dealing with a serious incident are no different from those between public sector prisons. These arrangements are reciprocal between public and private sectors and staff from a contracted-out prison could be used in support of a public sector prison.

A serious incident is one which:

- poses a threat to the control of the whole or part of an establishment; and/or
- involves concerted hostile activities by a group or groups of prisoners; and/or
- may result in the evacuation of the whole or part of the establishment; and/or
- causes the governor/director to require assistance from other establishments and/or the emergency services.

Should a serious incident occur in a contracted-out prison, trained support and specialist staff from the public sector would be provided at the same level as for a similar incident in a public sector prison.

The provision of assistance to a contracted-out prison in the above circumstances does not incur a financial charge to the contractor. Where assistance is provided for other purposes, the cost would be charged to the contractor as appropriate.

SCOTLAND

Students (Tuition Fees)

Mr. Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the estimated total of tuition fees which will be payable in the final year of four-year honours courses at Scottish universities and colleges by United Kingdom students from outside Scotland. [44427]

Mr. Wilson: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Edinburgh, West (Mr. Gorrie) on 24 November 1997, Official Report, column 422.

Students

Mr. Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many United Kingdom students from outside Scotland are in the final year of four-year honours degree courses at Scottish universities or colleges. [44428]

Mr. Wilson: Statistics on the numbers of students in the final year of an honours course are not held centrally.

The number of United Kingdom honours graduates from outside Scotland who qualified on first degree courses in Scotland in 1997 is given in the table.

1997 Non-Scottish United Kingdom honours graduates from Scottish higher education institutions, by mode of study and years on course

Years on course	Full time	Part time	All students
Three or fewer	508	2	510
Four	2,891	5	2,896
Five or more	635	12	647
Unknown	2	0	2
All graduates	4,036	19	4,055

Appointments

Mr. Moore: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the names of those people whom he has appointed since 1 May 1997, indicating (a) the positions to which they have been appointed, (b) the dates of their tenure, (c) their professions, (d) their salaries, (e) the name of the person they replaced and (f) the profession of the person they replaced. [44071]

Mr. Dewar: The information at (a) to (d) is available in the public appointments section of the Scottish Office website on the Internet (http://www.scotland.gov.uk). It is not possible to provide a meaningful response to (e) and (f) since individual members of public bodies—other than Chairmen—are not normally appointed in direct replacement for others.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Statistics (Boundary Maps)

Mr. Wigley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to her answer of 5 May 1998, Official Report, column 265, if she will make a statement on the basis on which the map for European NUTS II submitted to Eurostat was compiled, and if the map is being used to determine structural fund allocations. [43615]

Mrs. Roche: The criteria used by the UK Government Statistical Service in formulating proposals for changes to the NUTS classification are set out in the consultation document issued by the Office for National Statistics in June 1996. A copy of this was placed in the House of Commons Library.

The extent to which NUTS boundaries could be used for structural fund allocations will be set out in the relevant regulations. The European Commission made its proposals on 18 March 1998; these now need to be negotiated in the Council of Ministers and where appropriate approved by the European Parliament. The NUTS boundaries for the UK which might then be used may depend on the timing of the conclusion of discussions between the Government Statistical Service and Eurostat.

Insolvencies

Mr. Sarwar: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what has been the cost to public funds of the processing of insolvencies in each of the past eight years. [44206]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths:

£000

Year	Total cost
1990–91	49,611
1991–92	56,897
1992–93	63,466
1993–94	69,350
1994–95	71,814
1995–96[1]	99,199
1996–97[1]	76,009

[1] The costs for 1995–96 and 1996–97 are from the agency's audited accounts. The 1995–96 accounts include an exceptional item of £12.502 million.

Annual accounts for the year ended 31 March 1998 are currently being audited.

The Department of Trade and Industry receives the income generated by the fees charged to insolvent estates administered by Official Receivers and insolvency practitioners. Additionally, HM Treasury receives investment income from the Insolvency Services Account and Insolvency Services Investment Account. Since March 1990, these have been:

£000

	1990–91	1991–92	1992–93	1993–94	1994–95	1995–96	1996–97
Fees paid to Department of Trade and Industry	22,385	35,403	45,849	38,661	25,957	41,308	30,076
Investment income paid to HM Treasury	26,545	27,367	26,509	31,775	41,415	47,079	37,994
Total income	48,930	62,770	72,358	70,436	67,372	88,387	68,070
Net (cost)/surplus to public funds	(681)	5,873	8,892	1,086	(4,442)	(10,812)	(7,939)

Arms Exhibitions

Ann Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will list those officials from her Department who attended the Contingency and Operational Procurement Exhibition (COPEX) in Jordan in April, indicating the costs of their attendance and the total amount of public funds extended by her Department to companies attending this event. [44506]

Mrs. Roche: No DTI officials attended the 1998 edition of COPEX in Jordan, and we did not subsidise UK firms to exhibit at or visit the event.

Dounreay

Dr. Moonie: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what recommendations she has received about the future of Dounreay. [44559]

Mr. Battle: The UKAEA have advised me that there is no economic case for supporting commercial reprocessing at Dounreay over the longer term. The Government have therefore decided that Dounreay should take on no further commercial reprocessing work. Reprocessing at Dounreay will therefore come to an end when the plant has completed reprocessing its own fuel, the Georgian Highly Enriched Uranium (HEU) and its existing commercial contracts.

In carrying forward this remaining work, the UKAEA has assured my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland and me that safety will be paramount and, for as long as their fuel reprocessing plans remain, they will continue to be maintained to the standards needed to satisfy all regulatory requirements. The Government believe that nothing is more important than safety in the management of nuclear facilities. That is why we welcome the audit of safety procedures and management currently being taken forward by the Health and Safety Executive and the Scottish Environment Protection Agency at Dounreay, which will ensure that the highest standards of safety are maintained.

TREASURY

Income Tax

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 20 April 1998, Official Report, columns 400–02, concerning income tax, national insurance and child benefits, if he will provide comparable figures for (a) the tax year 1998–99 and (b) the second half of 1999–2000 on the basis of the figures used in the Financial Statement and Budget Report. [42670]

Dawn Primarolo: The information requested, including Family Credit or Working Families Tax Credit for the different family types, is contained in the table. The childcare tax credit within the WFTC will also provide substantial help for working families. For example, a family with one child could receive up to £70 per week towards childcare costs, and up to £105 a week for families with more than one child.

Gross income	150	200	250	300	400
For the 1998–99 tax year
Single Person—no children
National Insurance	9.88	14.88	19.88	24.88	34.88
Income Tax	13.87	24.96	36.46	47.96	70.96
Tax and NICs, as a percentage of gross earnings	15.8	19.9	22.5	24.3	26.5
Net income	126.25	160.16	193.66	227.16	294.16
Equivalised Net Income	206.97	262.55	317.47	372.39	482.22
Lone Parent (1 child aged 4 years)—new lone parent since April 1998, not receiving lone parents benefit
National Insurance	9.88	14.88	19.88	24.88	34.88
Income Tax	8.38	19.48	30.98	42.48	65.48
Child Benefit	11.45	11.45	11.45	11.45	11.45
Family Credit	37.54	13.80	0.00	0.00	0.00
Tax and NICs, less child benefit and family credit, as a percentage of gross earnings	–20.5	4.6	15.8	18.6	22.2
Net Income	180.72	190.89	210.59	244.09	311.09
Equivalised Net Income	228.76	241.63	266.56	308.97	393.78

Gross income	150	200	250	300	400
Lone Parent (1 child aged 4 years)—lone parent from before April 1998, so still receiving lone parent benefit
National Insurance	9.88	14.88	19.88	24.88	34.88
Income Tax	8.38	19.48	30.98	42.48	65.48
Child Benefit	17.10	17.10	17.10	17.10	17.10
Family Credit	37.54	13.80	0.00	0.00	0.00
Tax and NICs, less child benefit and family credit, as a percentage of gross earnings	−24.2	1.7	13.5	16.8	20.8
Net Income	186.37	196.54	216.24	249.74	316.74
Equivalised Net Income	235.91	248.79	273.72	316.12	400.93
Lone Parent (2 children aged 4 years and 6 years)—new lone parent since April 1998, not receiving lone parent benefit
National Insurance	9.88	14.88	19.88	24.88	34.88
Income Tax	8.38	19.48	30.98	42.48	65.48
Child Benefit	20.75	20.75	20.75	20.75	20.75
Family Credit	52.39	28.65	5.20	0.00	0.00
Tax and NICs, less child benefit and family credit, as a percentage of gross earnings	−36.6	−7.5	10.0	15.5	19.9
Net Income	204.87	215.04	225.09	253.39	320.39
Equivalised Net Income	204.87	215.04	225.09	253.39	320.39
Lone Parent (2 children aged 4 years and 6 years)—lone parent from before April 1998, so still receiving lone parent benefit
National Insurance	9.88	14.88	19.88	24.88	34.88
Income Tax	8.38	19.48	30.98	42.48	65.48
Child Benefit	26.10	26.10	26.10	26.10	26.10
Family Credit	52.39	28.65	5.20	0.00	0.00
Tax and NICs, less child benefit and family credit, as a percentage of gross earnings	−40.1	−10.2	7.8	13.8	18.6
Net Income	210.22	220.39	230.44	258.74	325.74
Equivalised Net Income	210.22	220.39	230.44	258.74	325.74
Single Earner Married Couple (1 child aged 4 years)
National Insurance	9.88	14.88	19.88	24.88	34.88
Income Tax	8.38	19.48	30.98	42.48	65.48
Child Benefit	11.45	11.45	11.45	11.45	11.45
Family Credit	37.54	13.80	0.00	0.00	0.00
Tax and NICs, less child benefit and family credit, as a percentage of gross earnings	−20.5	4.6	15.8	18.6	22.2
Net Income	189.66	192.53	210.59	244.09	311.09
Equivalised Net Income	160.73	163.16	178.46	206.85	263.63
Single Earner Married Couple (2 children aged 4 and 6)
National Insurance	9.88	14.88	19.88	24.88	34.88
Income Tax	8.38	19.48	30.98	42.48	65.48
Child Benefit	20.75	20.75	20.75	20.75	20.75
Family Credit	52.39	28.65	5.20	0.00	0.00
Tax and NICs, less child benefit and family credit, as a percentage of gross earnings	−36.6	−7.5	10.0	15.5	19.9
Net Income	214.10	216.95	225.09	253.39	320.39
Equivalised Net Income	154.03	156.08	161.94	182.29	230.49
With Budget measures coming into effect in 1999
These figures include the effect of Budget measures coming into effect in 1999—using otherwise non-uprated 1998–99 tax and benefit rates
Single Person—no children
National Insurance	8.6	13.60	18.60	23.60	33.60
Income Tax	13.87	24.96	36.46	47.96	70.96
Tax and NICs, less child benefit and WFTC, as a percentage of gross earnings	15.0	19.3	22.0	23.9	26.1
Net Income	127.53	161.44	194.94	228.44	295.44
Equivalised Net Income	209.07	264.65	319.57	374.48	484.32
Lone Parent (1 child aged 4 years)—new lone parents since April 1998, not receiving lone parents benefit
Equivalisation Factor	0.79	0.79	0.79	0.79	0.79
National Insurance	8.60	13.60	18.60	23.60	33.60
Income Tax	10.21	21.31	32.81	44.31	67.31
Child Benefit	13.95	13.95	13.95	13.95	13.95
WFTC	51.80	33.15	14.73	0.00	0.00
Tax and NICs, less child benefit and WFTC, as a percentage of gross earnings	−31.3	−6.1	9.1	18.0	21.7
Net Income	196.93	212.19	227.27	246.04	313.04
Equivalised Net Income	249.28	268.60	287.68	311.44	396.25
Lone Parent (1 child aged 4 years)—lone parent from before April 1998, so still receiving lone parent benefit
National Insurance	8.60	13.60	18.60	23.60	33.60
Income Tax	10.21	21.31	32.81	44.31	67.31
Child Benefit	17.10	17.10	17.10	17.10	17.10
WFTC	51.80	33.15	14.73	0.00	0.00
Tax and NICs, less child benefit and WFTC, as a percentage of gross earnings	−33.4	−7.7	7.8	16.9	21.0
Net Income	200.08	215.34	230.42	249.19	316.19
Equivalised Net Income	253.27	272.58	291.66	315.43	400.24

Gross income	150	200	250	300	400
Lone Parent (2 children aged 4 years and 6 years)—new lone parents since April 1998, not receiving lone parents benefit
National Insurance	8.60	13.60	18.60	23.60	33.60
Income Tax	10.21	21.31	32.81	44.31	67.31
Child Benefit	23.25	23.25	23.25	23.25	23.25
WFTC	66.65	48.00	29.58	11.15	0.00
Tax and NICs, less child benefit and WFTC, as a percnetage of gross earnings	–47.4	–18.2	–0.6	11.2	19.4
Net Income	221.08	236.34	251.42	266.49	322.34
Equivalised Net Income	221.08	236.34	251.42	266.49	322.34
Lone Parent (2 children aged 4 years and 6 years)—lone parent from before April 1998, so still receiving lone parent benefit
National Insurance	8.60	13.60	18.60	23.60	33.60
Income Tax	10.21	21.31	32.81	44.31	67.31
Child Benefit	26.10	26.10	26.10	26.10	26.10
WFTC	66.65	48.00	29.58	11.15	0.00
Tax and NICs, less child benefit and WFTC, as a percentage of gross earnings	–49.3	–19.6	–1.7	10.2	18.7
Net Income	223.93	239.19	254.27	269.34	325.19
Equivalised Net Income	223.93	239.19	254.27	269.34	325.19
Single Earner Married Couple (1 child aged 4 years)
National Insurance	8.60	13.60	18.60	23.60	33.60
Income Tax	10.21	21.31	32.81	44.31	67.31
Child Benefit	13.95	13.95	13.95	13.95	13.95
WFTC	51.80	33.15	14.73	0.00	0.00
Tax and NICs, less child benefit and WFTC, as a percentage of gross earnings	–31.3	–6.1	9.1	18.0	21.7
Net Income	196.93	212.19	227.27	246.04	313.04
Equivalised Net Income	166.89	179.82	192.60	208.51	265.29
Single Earner Married Couple (2 children aged 4 and 6)
National Insurance	8.60	13.60	18.60	23.60	33.60
Income Tax	10.21	21.31	32.81	44.31	67.31
Child Benefit	23.25	23.25	23.25	23.25	23.25
WFTC	66.65	48.00	29.58	11.15	0.00
Tax and NICs, less child benefit and WFTC, as a percentage of gross earnings	–47.4	–18.2	–0.6	11.2	19.4
Net Income	221.08	236.34	251.42	266.49	322.34
Equivalised Net Income	159.05	170.03	180.87	191.72	231.90

The figures in the table are weekly amounts for the 1998–99 tax year. The figures for 1998–99 include the effect of increasing child credits in income related benefits for under 11s which will be introduced in November 1998.

The data assume that the earner in the household is working over 30 hours a week for Family Credit and Working Families Tax Credit purposes; that earnings are from employment; and that there are no other sources of income. Two versions of each lone parent example are shown: one with new lone parents since April 1998; and one set with those who have been lone parents since 1998, and so will still be receiving lone parent benefit.

The standard McClements scales have been used to determine equivalised income. This is the same process that is used in the DSS's Households Below Average Income publication.

Income tax and NICs, less child benefit and family credit, are shown as a percentage of gross earnings, with negative figures where the family is a net gainer overall from direct taxes and benefits.

Some of these families may also be entitled to housing benefit and council tax benefit. However, as this will depend upon the composition of the housing costs (between mortgage payments, council tax, and rent) housing benefit and council tax benefit have been left out of these figures.

Tax Reclaims

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what amount of tax was reclaimed on bank and building society interest by (a) all people and (b) people aged 65 years or over in 1996–97, indicating (i) the average, (ii) the medium, (iii) the smallest and (iv) the largest amount reclaimed. [43338]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 1 June 1998]: The latest information is derived from the 1995–96 Survey of Personal Incomes. It is estimated that claims were received for the repayment of £110 million tax deducted from bank and building society interest that was paid or credited in 1995–96. The average amount claimed per claimant was £130 and the median was £60.

People aged 65 or over accounted for £65 million of these claims; for these people the average amount of tax claimed back was £140 and the median was £75.

Information is not available about the smallest and largest amounts claimed.

Tax was deducted from bank and building society interest at 25 per cent. in 1995–96.

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the number of (a) people of all ages and (b) people aged 65 years or over who did not reclaim tax paid on bank and building society interest in 1996–97 and who were entitled to do so; and if he will indicate the average amount not reclaimed. [43340]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 1 June 1998]: The Inland Revenue have no way of identifying most non-taxpayers, so estimates of the numbers of eligible people who have not claimed back tax on their bank or building society interest are not available from Inland Revenue sources. The external sources that have been used in the past to help provide rough estimates are now out of date.

People who know that they are likely to be non-taxpayers are able to register their bank and building society accounts to receive their interest without tax deducted.

Double Tax Relief

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if the parameters of the review into double tax relief for companies are that the relief should be revenue neutral. [43572]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 1 June 1998]: The Government attach great importance to the relief of double taxation, as indicated in the Inland Revenue press release of 17 March 1998. The current review will examine the functioning and fairness of the present system, its effectiveness in meeting the objectives for which it is provided and the compliance costs that it involves for business. Its purpose is to consider the case for structural reform in the context of international developments and the organisation of multinational businesses. The cost of the relief is influenced by a number of factors, including the amount of foreign income that is taxed in the UK and relative tax rates in the UK and other countries. A consultation document will be issued in due course.

Tax Credit

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the number of (a) non-taxpayers and (b) non-taxpayers aged over 65 years who did not reclaim a tax credit to which they were entitled on dividends paid in 1996–97; and if he will indicate the average amount not reclaimed and the saving to the Treasury. [43339]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 1 June 1998]: The Inland Revenue have no way of identifying most non-taxpayers, so estimates of the numbers of eligible people who have not claimed payments of tax credits on dividends are not available from Inland Revenue sources. Neither are there external sources that could provide reliable estimates.

Public Sector Pay

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if it is his policy to pay in full the recommendations of the public sector review bodies for pay settlements in the year 1999–2000; and if he will make a statement. [44295]

Mr. Darling [holding answer 4 June 1998]: The recommendations are being paid in full this year, although staged. We will consider next year's recommendations at the time.

Child Benefit

Mr. Flight: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has for taxing child benefit. [44574]

Dawn Primarolo: My right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer indicated in his Budget statement that, if Child Benefit were raised, there must be a case in principle for higher rate taxpayers paying tax on it.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Kashmir

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the current United Nations Resolutions which apply to Kashmir and the date on which each was agreed; and if he will take steps to ensure that each is updated. [44221]

Mr. Fatchett: The United Nations Security Council has adopted the following resolutions on Kashmir:

Resolution number	Date	Resolution
38(1948)	17 January 1948	Calls on India and Pakistan not to aggravate Kashmir dispute
39(1948)	20 January 1948	Establishes Commission (UNCIP) to investigate and mediate in Jammu and Kashmir
47(1948)	21 April 1948	Recommends plebiscite to decide sovereignty of Jammu and Kashmir
51(1948)	3 June 1948	Urges Commission to speed up work on SCR 47
80(1950)	14 March 1950	Calls for demilitarisation of Jammu and Kashmir and appoints UN Representative to the region
91(1951)	30 March 1951	Reaffirms need for demilitarisation and plebiscite in Jammu and Kashmir
96(1951)	10 November 1951	Approves India and Pakistan's willingness to observe ceasefire and work for plebiscite in Jammu and Kashmir
98(1952)	23 December 1952	Urges India and Pakistan to negotiate two outstanding proposals of UN Representative
122(1957)	24 January 1957	Denies recognition for decisions of "All Jammu and Kashmir National Conference"
123(1957)	21 February 1957	SC President asked to discuss Jammu and Kashmir dispute with India and Pakistan
126(1957)	2 December 1957	Notes report of SC President; urges India and Pakistan to refrain from aggravating situation

We believe that it is primarily for India and Pakistan to find a solution to the problem. In doing so, we believe that the two sides should build on both the UN Resolutions and the 1972 Simla agreement.

Correspondence

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when the Minister of State, the hon. Member for Manchester, Central (Mr. Lloyd) expects to reply to the letter from the hon. Member for Spelthorne dated 8 May. [44105]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: I replied to the hon. Member on 1 June.

DEFENCE

NATO Exercise (Macedonia)

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the code name of the NATO exercise in Macedonia in September; when he decided to commit British troops; and when (a) he or (b) his officials consulted (i) ministers and (ii) officials in the Foreign and Commonwealth Office. [41182]

Mr. George Robertson [holding answer 8 May 1998]: The NATO Partnership for Peace exercise due to take place in the Former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia this September is called Cooperative Best Effort 98. My Department has decided, in consultation with the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, that British troops will participate in the exercise. We will announce our contribution shortly.

Married Quarters

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many married quarters or commercial hirings he estimates would be required if a single Divisional HQ was established to cover Scotland and the north of England; what would be the capital value of these quarters if such an HQ were located in Scotland; and if the capital cost of the married quarters will be included in the estimates of the relative costs of establishing such an HQ in Scotland and in England. [43991]

Dr. Reid [holding answer 1 June 1998]: These are matters to be studied during the course of the review that is being undertaken; and I should expect them to be reflected in the cost estimates of the options, when presented to Ministers, to the extent that they materially affect the options.

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many married quarters and commercial hirings there are currently for soldiers working at UK Land Command's (a) 2 Div HQ and (b) Scottish District HQ; and what is the estimated capital value of the married quarters used by soldiers at the Scottish District HQ. [43990]

Dr. Reid [holding answer 1 June 1998]: Service Families Accommodation (SFA) in mainland UK is provided and allocated on a tri-service basis by the Defence Housing Executive. Houses are not generally provided for the exclusive use of particular formations or units. Currently, about 50 personnel at 2 Div HQ in York occupy SFA, mainly leased from Annington Homes which currently attract no capital charge. About 30 Service personnel at Scottish District HQ in Edinburgh occupy SFA, all owned by MOD, the capital value of which is approximately £2.5 million.

Helicopters

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) Sea Harrier, (b) Lynx and (c) Sea King were (i) allocated to frontline Fleet Air arm units, (ii) fully serviceable, (iii) undergoing major maintenance and (iv) held as in use reserve on 1 June. [44126]

Dr. Reid: On 1 June 1998, 24 Sea Harriers, 51 Lynx and 83 Sea King aircraft were allocated to front line Fleet Air Arm Units. The number fully serviceable were 20, 43 and 66 respectively. Those undergoing major maintenance were 4, 7 and 13 respectively, and these, together with 2 additional Lynx, form the In Use Reserves.

Defence Explosive Ordnance Disposal School

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to the letter sent to the hon. Member for Rochford and Southend, East by the Minister for the Armed Forces on 18 May, if a decision has now been made on the relocation of the Defence Explosive Ordnance Disposal School; and if he will make a statement. [44222]

Dr. Reid: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 6 April 1998, Official Report, column 51. I expect to be able to announce, before the summer recess, the findings of the study into the possible relocation of the Defence Explosive Ordnance Disposal School from its present site in Kent.

Skills Shortages

Mr. Wills: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what were the levels of skills shortages as regards his Department's technical civilian staff in (a) 1995, (b) 1996 and (c) 1997. [44390]

Mr. Spellar: The information requested is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. However, recruitment campaigns have been necessary in recent years across a range of technical specialisms. Difficulties have been experienced primarily with computer sciences, satellite communications, electrical/electronic engineering, mathematicians and physicists. Shortages have also occurred in specialisms, such as naval architects and in the aeronautical, stress and mechanical engineering areas.

Defence Medical Training Organisation

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what key targets have been set for the Defence Medical Training Organisation for 1998–99. [45106]

Dr. Reid: Key targets have been set for the Chief Executive of the Defence Medical Training Organisation for financial year 1998–99. The targets build on the progress already made by the Agency since it formed in April 1997 and are as follows:

Key Target 1

To achieve the following academic success rate for the categories of training shown:

Common Core Course (CCC)—92 per cent.

Specialist Register (SpR)—95 per cent.

Pre Registration Nurses (Pre Reg Nurses)—96 per cent.

Key Target 2

The following per cent. of trainees achieving academic success to be delivered on time agreed with the customer:

CCC—95 per cent. (remainder to be delivered within 6 weeks of expected completion date)

SpR—96 per cent.

Pre Reg Nurses—98 per cent.

Key Target 3

Establish and agree with customers the baseline requirement for individual medical services training by 31 March 1999.

Key Target 4

Ensure that availability meets the requirement as defined in the Agreed Annual Training Requirement (AATR)—100 per cent.

Key Target 5

Develop and implement a corporate index of efficiency be 31 March 1999 that will then form a baseline for measuring year on year efficiency improvements.

Key Target 6

Ensure comprehensive application of the Systems Approach to Training to a minimum of 33 per cent. of all appropriate courses.

Key Target 7

Achieve satisfactory rating of customer satisfaction.

Medical Supplies Agency

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what key targets have been set for the Medical Supplies Agency for 1998–99. [45107]

Dr. Reid: Key Targets have been set for the Chief Executive of the Medical Supplies Agency for financial year 1998–99. The targets build on the progress already made by the Agency since it formed in March 1996 and are as follows:

Key Target 1

To build, completely and to time and within budget, for all 3 services, 95 per cent. of the programme for kits, outfits and packs, as defined in endorsed Equipment Tables and as directed by D Med Prog & Plans.

Key Target 2

To meet 100 per cent. of the Service's requirements for stocked medical material and blood products for operations.

Key Target 3

To meet 98 per cent. of the Services' requirements for stocked medical material and blood products for exercises and training.

Key Target 4

To meet 85 per cent. of demands for Category B items, within MSA's new charter standard (next day delivery of priority demands; 72 hours for routine) and 95 per cent. within one week.

Key Target 5

To improve the ratio of stock issued to stock held from 1.30 to 1.72.

Key Target 6

By the 31 December 1998, the MSA will have set in place a mechanism which communicates the full cost of the drugs and medical material supplied. The communicated costs will be in a format which is acceptable to the Agency's major customers, whether or not they have an SLA.

Defence Secondary Care Agency

Ms Buck: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what key targets have been set for the Defence Secondary Care Agency for 1998–99. [45108]

Dr. Reid: Key Targets have been set for the Chief Executive of the Defence Secondary Care Agency for financial year 1998–99. The targets build on the progress already made by the Agency since it formed in April 1996 and are as follows:

Key Target 1—The Operational Requirement

From within the personnel resources provided to the DSCA by the single Services, to meet 100 per cent. of the Commanders in Chief's requirements for secondary care trained personnel for operational deployments.

Key Target 2—Outpatient Waiting Times

To ensure that 55 per cent. of Service patients referred to the Agency are offered a first outpatient appointment within four weeks of receipt of a referral and 95 per cent. within 13 weeks.

Key Target 3—Inpatient Waiting Times

To ensure that 80 per cent. of Service patients are offered a treatment date which is within three months of the decision to give inpatient treatment.

Key Target 4—Financial Efficiency

To develop, by 31 December 1998, a target for DSCA which represents a measure of the Agency's efficiency in achieving its corporate targets and to have set measurable Performance Indicators for subsequent years.

Key Target 5—Quality and Patient Care

By 31 December 1998, the DSCA will link the management systems introduced for Clinical and Non-Clinical risks and Health and Safety, with Clinical Audit and quality improvement programmes in order to determine a Quality Strategy for 1999–2000 and will have set measurable Performance indicators for subsequent years.

Key Target 6—Military Training

To ensure that 80 per cent. of all DSCA personnel, whose medical category permits, receive their respective Service's annual mandatory military training.

Key Target 7—Exercises

To ensure that 80 per cent. of the posts detailed for each Field Unit's exercise requirement are to be filled by the DSCA, are filled.

Key Target 8—Clinical Training

To have compiled, by 31 December 1998, a table by specialty of the total of approved years of Specialist Registrar training at each of the DSCA Units and to set measurable targets for subsequent years.

Defence Dental Agency

Ms Kingham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what key targets have been set for the Defence Dental Agency for 1998–99. [45109]

Dr. Reid: Key targets have been set for the Chief Executive of the Defence Dental Agency for the financial year 1998–99. The targets build on the progress already made by the Agency since it formed in March 1996 and are as follows:

Key Target 1

From within available personnel resources, achieve 100 per cent. of required professionally and militarily trained personnel, at the specified readiness required for deployment in support of the National Contingency Force.

Key Target 2

To achieve an overall increase in dental fitness to 75 per cent.

Key Target 3

Measures are to be implemented to target dental treatment towards clinical priority groups leading to a zero increase in the Treatment Needs performance indicator.

Key Target 4

To reduce the percentage of failed appointments with dental officers and the time wasted by such failures by 10 per cent. To reduce the percentage of failed appointments with dental hygienists and the time wasted by such failures by 25 per cent.

Key Target 5

To limit the number of personnel in dental fitness Category D4 to 15 per cent. of the total Service population.

Key Target 6

To achieve a success rate for Dental Support Specialist (DSS) Part II training of 95 per cent.

Naval Bases and Supply Agency

Mrs. Gilroy: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what key targets have been set for the Naval Bases and Supply Agency for 1998–99. [45110]

Dr. Reid: The Chief Executive of the Naval Bases and Supply Agency has been set the following key targets:

Key Target 1

Complete 95 per cent. of the Fleet Time Maintenance Loading programme to time, budget and standard.

Key Target 2

Complete 95 per cent. of the agreed Maintenance Requirements at Assisted Maintenance Periods start date to time, budget and standard.

Key Target 3

Utilise the Fleet Time Maintenance Loading programme to establish the baseline for the NBSA shipwork element of the overall cost per Materially Available Vessel Day, and then set targets for reduction.

Key Target 4

Supply 95 per cent. of available material to rectify high priority (A1-B1) Operational Defects within Required Delivery Dates.

Key Target 5

Establish the Agency account via the CAPITAL Project, including the provision of an Executive Information System to meet business requirements, by March 2000.

Key Target 6

To ensure Year 2000 Information Systems compliance by completing 100 per cent. plans by 30 June 1998.

Key Target 7

Achieve year on year Efficiency improvement of 2.2 per cent.

Key Target 8

Achieve full accreditation of Investors in People by December 1999.

Ships Support Agency

Mrs. Gilroy: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what key targets have been set for the Ships Support Agency for 1998–99. [45111]

Dr. Reid: The Chief Executive of the Ships Support Agency has been set the following key targets:

Performance indicator	Targets
Materially Available Vessel Days (MAVDs)
To provide the Royal Navy with the agreed percentage of materially available vessel days	66 per cent.
Pounds per Standard MAVD
To provide the agreed Fleet available cost-effectively	£38k per Standard MAVD
Upkeep Period Timeliness
To deliver programmed Upkeep Periods within the specified percentage tolerance of the agreed programme upkeep time	+10 per cent.
Upkeep Period Costs
To contain the cost of Upkeep Periods completed during the year within the specified percentage tolerance of predicted costs	+/-3 per cent.
Fleet Time Material Performance (Quality)
To limit the average number of outstanding Operational Defects per vessel in Fleet Time	6
Fleet Time Material Performance (Duration)
To limit the percentage of Fleet Time during which vessels are unable, for material reasons, to perform their programmed task	8 per cent.
Efficient Stockholding
To improve the stockholding to issue ratio	2.9:1
Resource Accounting
To produce accruals based accounts to meet Accounts Direction	March 1999

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Higher Education Staff

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if his Department will publish statistical data for each of the last five academic years on (a) academic and (b) non-academic staff in higher education institutions to include a breakdown of employment by (i) age band, (ii) gender, (iii) ethnicity, (iv) mode of employment to include (A) part-time and (B) casual and hourly-paid employees and (v) grading; and if he will arrange for these statistics to be published annually within six months of the end of each academic year. [42388]

Dr. Howells: Up to and including the 1993–94 academic year, data on staff in higher education institutions were published by the Universities Statistical Record (USR), covering the former UFC-funded universities, in "University Statistics: Volume 1", and the Polytechnics and Colleges Funding Council (PCFC), covering the former PCFC funded establishments, in "The Academic Staff of Polytechnics and Colleges". Copies of these publications are available in the Library.

Since 1994–95, information covering all higher education establishments has been published by the Higher Education Statistics Agency (HESA) in "Resources of Higher Education Institutions". Editions are currently available for the years 1994–95 and 1995–96 and copies of these are also in the Library. The data requested for academic staff are contained in tables 17 and 21, but these tables do not separately identify casual and hourly paid employees. The following tables show casual and hourly paid employees by gender, ethnicity, age and grade corresponding to the figures in the published tables. In summary, between 1994–95 and 1995–96 total academic staff numbers increased by over 10 per cent. In the same period, hourly paid/casual staff went up by around 23 per cent. but in both years accounted for less than 2 per cent. of the total staff in numbers. It should also be noted that ethnicity breakdowns are available only for staff of known UK nationality.

Information for the 1996–97 academic year will be published by HESA next month. We will pursue with HESA whether casual and hourly paid staff can be separately identified in future years.

Data on non-academic staff are not collected centrally. This will be reviewed for the academic year 1999–2000.

The HESA volume giving staff data is currently published in June following the end of the academic year. This period is necessary to allow institutions to return the raw data to HESA (by 30 September), HESA to finalise the data (by 1 December) and then compile and publish the volume.

Hourly paid/casual academic staff of known UK nationality in all UK HE institutions by ethnicity and gender

	1994–95			1995–96
	Female	Male	Total	Female	Male	Total
White	274	384	658	452	668	1,120
Black Caribbean	0	1	1	0	2	2
Black African	0	0	0	1	0	1
Black other	0	0	0	0	1	1
Indian	0	3	3	1	5	6
Pakistani	0	0	0	0	0	0
Bangladeshi	0	0	0	0	0	0
Chinese	0	0	0	2	0	2
Asian other	2	1	3	4	3	7
Other	4	0	4	19	10	29
Total known ethnicity	280	389	669	479	689	1,168
Information refused	71	85	156	50	50	100
Total	351	474	825	529	739	1,268

Hourly paid/casual academic staff in all UK HE institutions by age and grade

	Professors	Senior lecturers and researchers	Lecturers	Researchers	Other grades	Total
1994–95
Under 26	0	0	1	0	84	85
26–30	0	0	8	1	173	182
31–35	0	0	5	3	206	214
36–40	0	1	10	1	216	228
41–45	0	0	18	1	218	237
46–50	0	0	11	0	193	204
51–55	0	0	11	0	148	159
56–60	0	1	12	0	138	151
61–65	1	0	9	0	95	105
66+	0	0	6	0	26	32
Unknown	0	0	0	0	232	232
Total	1	2	91	6	1,729	1,829
1995–96
Under 26	0	0	0	1	77	78
26–30	0	0	7	4	196	207
31–35	0	0	22	4	247	273
36–40	0	0	22	2	244	268
41–45	0	0	34	0	240	274
46–50	2	0	17	0	240	259
51–55	1	0	23	0	185	209
56–60	3	2	17	0	184	206
61–65	0	0	9	0	99	108
66+	1	0	11	0	42	54
Unknown	0	0	0	0	317	317
Total	7	2	162	11	2,071	2,253

Schools (Co-operation)

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many applications were submitted under the Government's proposals for co-operation between maintained and private schools; and what was the success rate for proposals submitted by (a) local education authorities and (b) the independent sector. [44139]

Mr. Byers: We received 294 applications; we are supporting 48 projects. Each application had to involve at least one maintained and one independent school and specify a lead organisation. Five successful projects currently involve LEAs, and in one of those the LEA is acting as the lead organisation. The information requested is set out in the table:

Lead organisation	Number of applications	Number of successful applications	Percentage of successful applications
Maintained school	179	38	21
Independent school	89	8	9
Local education authority	12	1	8
Other[1]	14	1	7
Total	294	48	16.3

[1] 'Other' lead organisations are organisations that are not a school or a local education authority, e.g. universities, charitable trusts, and associations of schools.

Class Sizes (Essex)

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many children in (a) Essex and (b) Mid-Essex at (i) primary schools and (ii) secondary schools were in classes with 31 or more children at the latest available time; and what the corresponding figures were for 12 months earlier. [44174]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 4 June 1998]: The information for Essex Local Education Authority area is shown in the table.

Numbers of pupils in classes of 31 or more pupils taught by one teacher in maintained primary and secondary schools

Essex Local Education Authority area

Position in January each year

Year	Primary schools	Secondary schools
1996	34,741	8,064
1997	38,831	8,263

We do not hold information for Mid-Essex.

St. Austell College

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when he will publish Professor Newby's report on St. Austell College. [45098]

Mr. Blunkett: I am quite clear that there are important lessons to be learnt from this episode. These lessons extend beyond the FE sector and indeed beyond the world of education. I therefore consider that there is a clear public interest to be served by publishing the report, which I am doing today. Copies have been placed in the Library.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Family Resources Survey

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to her answer of 21 January 1998, Official Report, columns 565–66, how many higher-rate taxpayers have children aged (a) under five years, (b) from five to 10 years, (c) 11 to 16 years and (d) 17 years and over. [44323]

Mr. Keith Bradley: An estimate for 1998–99 from the 1995–96 Family Resources Survey-based Policy Simulation Model suggests there are 350,000 higher rate taxpayers with children aged under 5 years, 435,000 higher rate taxpayers with children aged five to 10 years, 420,000 higher rate taxpayers with children aged 11 to 16 years, and 110,000 higher rate taxpayers with children aged 17 years and over.

Notes:

1. The estimates show how many benefit units with at least one higher rate taxpayer have at least one child in each of the age categories. However, these figures cannot be added up to give the total number of higher rate taxpayers with children since a number of these families have two or more children of differing ages and so will be represented in more than one category.

2. The estimates should be treated with some caution as they are based on survey data which use current weekly income to model tax liability which may not accurately represent current annual tax liabilities. Estimates may also be influenced by sampling error and response rates.

Child Benefit

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what the total (a) gross and (b) net savings will be in 1998–99 from not having uprated child benefit in line with prices since 1979; and what the current rate per child would be had it been uprated in line with prices without any additional payment for the eldest child. [44322]

Mr. Keith Bradley: If Child Benefit had been subject to annual uprating as described, the level of the benefit in April 1998 would have been £12.70 per week per child. The gross additional cost in 1998–99 is estimated to be £1.5 billion. The cost net of income-related benefit offsets would be around £1.1 billion.

Notes:

1. Cost estimates are rounded to the nearest £10 million.

2. Figures are calibrated to the caseload and expenditure forecasts underlying the 1998 Departmental Report.

3. The uprating calculation assumes rounding to the nearest 5p at each annual uprating.

4. Estimates apply only to Child Benefit, and exclude any changes made to One Parent Benefit.

Source:

Based on data taken from the 1995–96 Family Resources Survey and the May 1996 Income Support Quarterly Statistical Inquiry uprated to 1998–99 prices, benefits and earnings level.

Winter Fuel Payments

Miss Kirkbride: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how much of the £400 million budgeted for winter fuel payments has been spent on this year's payments. [44575]

Mr. Denham: Winter Fuel payments are one of a number of initiatives the Government have taken to help vulnerable people, especially the elderly, keep warm in the winter. A total of £400 million has been committed for two years (1997/98 and 1998/99), to help pensioners with fuel bills to pay.

Overall, almost ten million eligible pensioners in over seven million households received a payment between January and March 1998 at a total cost of nearly £200 million.

Lone Parents

Mr. Quentin Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will make it her policy to make attendance at an interview compulsory for those invited to take part in the New Deal for Lone Parents. [44572]

Mr. Keith Bradley: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Chingford and Woodford Green (Mr. Duncan Smith) on 25 November 1997, Official Report, column 540.

Widows Pension

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans she has to extend the widows pension to women aged under 45 years; what estimate she has made of the cost of that extension; and if she will make a statement. [41629]

Mr. Denham: Modernising the Social Security system is a key priority of the Government. In our examination of the current Social Security structure, we will take account of the needs and responsibilities of widows in pursuit of our aim of reducing poverty and welfare dependency, promoting work incentives and providing better, simpler and more efficient services to clients.

The estimated gross cost in 1998/99 of extending widows pension to women aged under 45 years would be £58 million.

Note:

It is assumed that widows under 45 would be paid at the current minimum rate for a widow aged 45.

HEALTH

Paediatric Physiotherapists (London)

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many paediatric physiotherapists are employed by each NHS trust in London; and how many posts are currently vacant. [43882]

Mr. Milburn: Information about the number of paediatric physiotherapists employed by National Health Service trusts in London is not available centrally as the Department's non-medical workforce census does not separately identify them from other physiotherapists; the table gives the information that is available. Figures on physiotherapist vacancies are collected by the Office of Manpower and Economics and published in the annual reports of the Review Body for Nursing staff, Midwives, Health Visitors and Professions Allied to Medicine, copies of which are in the Library.

NHS Hospital and Community Health Services: physiotherapists employed by London NHS trusts as at 30 September 1997

Equivalents	Whole-time
Barnet Healthcare NHS Trust	30
BHB Community Healthcare NHS Trust	50
The Bethlem and Maudsley NHS Trust	10
Bromley Hospitals NHS Trust	40
Camden and Islington Community Health Services NHS Trust	30
Central Middlesex Hospital NHS Trust	20
Chase Farm Hospitals NHS Trust	20
Chelsea and Westminster Healthcare NHS Trust	50
City and Hackney Community Services NHS Trust	40
Croydon Community Health NHS Trust	20
Ealing Hospital NHS Trust	10
Enfield Community Care NHS Trust	30
Forest Health Care NHS Trust	50
The Great Ormond Street Hospital for Children NHS Trust	20
Greenwich Healthcare NHS Trust	40
Guy's and St. Thomas' Hospital NHS Trust	70
The Hammersmith Hospitals NHS Trust	60
Harefield Hospital NHS Trust	10
Harrow and Hillingdon Healthcare NHS Trust	20
The Hillingdon Hospital NHS Trust	20
Hounslow and Spelthorne Community & Mental Health NHS Trust	30
Kings Healthcare NHS Trust	60
Kingston and District Community NHS Trust	20
Kingston Hospital NHS Trust	20

NHS Hospital and Community Health Services: physiotherapists employed by London NHS trusts as at 30 September 1997

Equivalents	Whole-time
Lambeth Healthcare NHS Trust	10
Lewisham and Guys Mental Health NHS Trust	[1]—
The Lewisham Hospital NHS Trust	20
Lifecare NHS Trust	[1]—
Mayday Healthcare NHS Trust	50
Merton and Sutton Community NHS Trust	[1]—
Moorfields Eye Hospital NHS Trust	[1]—
Mount Vernon and Watford Hospitals NHS Trust	40
Newham Community NHS Trust	40
North Middlesex Hospital NHS Trust	50
North West London Mental Health NHS Trust	[1]—
Northwick Park St. Marks NHS Trust	50
Optimum Health Services NHS Trust	30
Parkside NHS Trust	40
Pathfinder Mental Health Services NHS Trust	10
Queen Mary's Sidcup NHS Trust	30
Ravensbourne NHS Trust	20
Redbridge Health Care NHS Trust	40
Richmond Twickenham and Roehampton Healthcare NHS Trust	20
Riverside Mental Health NHS Trust	[1]—
Royal Brompton Hospital NHS Trust	20
The Royal Free Hampstead NHS Trust	50
The Royal Hospitals NHS Trust	10
Royal London Homeopathic Hospital NHS Trust	[1]—
The Royal Marsden Hospital NHS Trust	10
Royal National Orthopaedic Hospital NHS Trust	40
St. George's Healthcare NHS Trust	90
The St. Helier NHS Trust	50
St. Mary's NHS Trust	40
Teddington Memorial Trust	10
Tower Hamlets Healthcare NHS Trust	80
University London College Hospitals NHS Trust	40
Wandsworth Community Health NHS Trust	[1]—
Wellhouse NHS Trust	40
West London Healthcare NHS Trust	20
West Middlesex University Hospital NHS Trust	10
Whittington Hospital NHS Trust	30
Total	2,950

[1] less than 5 and greater than zero

Note:

1. Figures are rounded to the nearest ten.
2. Due to rounding the total will not be equal to the sum of component parts.

Source:

Department of Health Non-Medical Workforce Census

Breast Feeding

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps are currently being taken to promote a higher rate of breastfeeding. [43609]

Ms Jowell: We are fully committed to the promotion of breastfeeding, which is universally accepted as the best form of nutrition for infants. Nevertheless, it is important that women are able to make a fully informed choice based on accurate and consistent information on the benefits of breastfeeding.

The Department funds the National Network of Breastfeeding Co-ordinators (NNBC). The NNBC has been established to promote breastfeeding at a local level and to share ideas nationally with a view to increasing both the number of mothers breastfeeding and the length of time they continue to breastfeed.

Each year, the four United Kingdom Health Departments support national breastfeeding awareness week to increase public awareness of the benefits of breastfeeding, which this year took place between 17–23 May. This year, as in other years, the Department funded and provided the publicity materials used during the week. These included posters and postcards aimed at promoting breastfeeding with the slogan "free fast food for babies".

The Department also provides financial support to the three main voluntary organisations in this area, the National Childbirth Trust, La Leche League and the Association of Breastfeeding Mothers. Close links are also kept with United Nations Children's Fund Baby-friendly Initiative which includes a Departmental observer sitting on the Steering Committee of the UK Baby Friendly Initiative.

The Department offers support for research into breastfeeding through the Quinquennial Surveys of Infant Feeding Practice, the report of the 1995 survey was published last year. The Department also receives and publishes expert advice on breastfeeding through its advisory committees, such as Committee on Medical Aspects of Food and Nutrition Policy Panel on Child and Material Nutrition.

We are concerned about the apparently low breastfeeding rates in this country, especially when compared with some other European countries such as Norway, Sweden and Denmark. The low incidence of breastfeeding is especially marked in low-income groups. That is why, as part of the Department's research initiative on health inequalities, we are planning to support a study aimed at identifying the barriers to breastfeeding in low-income groups. This should help us to understand what influences a woman's decision whether to breastfeed or not. In turn, this will help us to develop and test new interventions aimed at increasing breastfeeding levels and improving the health of babies from low-income families.

Occupational Health

Dr. Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many whole-time equivalent consultants in occupational health are employed in each National Health Service region. [43741]

Mr. Milburn: The latest information is shown in the table.

Whole-time equivalents of consultants in occupational health by region on 30 September 1996

Region	Number
Anglia and Oxford	5
North Thames	9
North West	6
Northern and Yorkshire	4
South and West	8
South Thames	9
Trent	4
West Midlands	5

Notes:

1. The census is a snapshot at 30 September each year
2. All figures are rounded to the nearest whole number

Source:

The Medical and Dental Workforce Census 30 September 1996.

Dr. Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many unfilled (a) consultant and (b) approved training posts there are in occupational health in each National Health Service region. [43740]

Mr. Milburn: The information requested is not available centrally.

NHS Trusts (Health and Safety)

Dr. Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list all National Health Service trusts that have been found to be in breach of the Health and Safety at Work, etc. Act 1974 since 1991; and if he will make a statement. [43738]

Mr. Milburn: Between 1991 and 1994, not all hospitals were National Health Service trusts, and the relevant health authority was liable for prosecution where a hospital was in breach of the Health and Safety at Work Act. Information from the Health and Safety Executive shows that the following trusts and health authorities have been prosecuted under the Health and Safety at Work, etc. Act since 1991:

1991

South West Durham Health Authority
Riverside Health Authority
Cornwall and Isles of Scilly Health Authority
Trafford Health Authority
Oxford Health Authority

1992

South Birmingham Health Authority
Norwich Health Authority

1993

South Derbyshire Health Authority
Airedale NHS Trust
North Staffordshire Health Authority

1994

Salford Community Healthcare
Loddon NHS Trust
Parkside Health NHS Trust
North Staffordshire Hospitals NHS Trust
West Suffolk Hospitals NHS Trust

1995

Frenchay Healthcare Trust
Dorset Community NHS Trust
Forest Healthcare NHS Trust
Stockport Healthcare NHS Trust

1996

City Hospitals Sunderland NHS Trust
Bedford Hospital NHS Trust

1997

Surrey Heartlands NHS Trust
Premier Health NHS Trust
Community Health Sheffield NHS Trust
Leeds Community and Mental Health Services (Teaching) NHS Trust
Gloucestershire Ambulance Service NHS Trust
Eastbourne Hospital NHS Trust
Swindon and Marlborough NHS Trust

1998

Horton General Hospital Trust.

NHS Staff (Ill-health)

Dr. Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many retirements on the grounds of ill-health there have been from the NHS Pension Scheme in each of the last five years. [43885]

Mr. Milburn: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the National Health Service Pensions Agency under its Chief Executive, Mr. A. F. Cowan. I have asked him to reply to the hon. Member.

Letter from A. F. Cowan to Dr. Evan Harris, dated June 1998:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question, as it falls within my area of responsibility.

The number of ill-health retirement awards made by the NHS Pension Scheme in each of the last five years was:

Year	Number of ill-health retirement awards
1993–94	9,520
1994–95	9,030
1995–96	8,082
1996–97	6,928
1997–98	6,510

Histopathology Services (Kent and Canterbury Hospital)

Dr. Ladyman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish the terms of reference for the recently announced review of histopathology at the Kent and Canterbury Hospital; and if he intends to widen the scope of the review. [43794]

Mr. Boateng: The terms of reference for the review of histopathology services provided by Kent and Canterbury Hospital have been agreed with the Royal College of Pathologists and have been published. There are no plans to widen the scope of this review.

Homicide Inquiries

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what factors underlie the differences between his answers of 16 February 1998, Official Report, column 494, and 13 March 1998, Official Report, column 377, in respect of the number of inquiries under way into homicides committed by mentally-ill people. [43977]

Mr. Boateng: The reply given on 16 February 1998, Official Report, column 494, showed that the total number of independent inquiries currently underway was 24.

In the reply given on 13 March 1998, Official Report, column 377, the list showed only those inquiries which were nearing completion. The total number remains 24 although the dates of publication have not all been settled yet.

Epilepsy

Mr. Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will provide resources for research into sudden unexpected death in epilepsy; [44092]

(2) if he will set up an inquiry into sudden unexpected death in epilepsy. [44093]

Mr. Boateng: I met a delegation led by the organisation Epilepsy Bereaved?, on 2 June to discuss their concerns about sudden unexpected death in epilepsy (SUDEP). The delegation, which included epilepsy specialists who have conducted research into SUDEP, has been invited to design and submit a bid for a national sentinel audit of epilepsy services. This will involve working closely with several relevant national organisations.

The Department supports Epilepsy Bereaved? through a Section 64 core grant of £45,000 in total for the years 1997–2000.

Disabled People

Mr. Hurst: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the number of adults with severe learning disabilities residing in (a) long-stay hospitals and (b) the community. [44077]

Mr. Boateng: It is estimated that there are about 160,000 adults with severe learning disabilities in England. We estimate that approximately 5,000 of these are placed in continuing National Health Service care. There are also about 3,000 other people in old long-stay learning disability hospitals. This means that there are approximately 152,000 people with severe learning disabilities living in the community outside long-stay NHS care. A significant number of the approximately 3,000 people currently in old long-stay learning disability hospitals are also likely to move into the community over the next few years.

NHS Trusts (London)

Mr. Duncan Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what financial transitional support has been made available in the years (a) 1994–95, (b) 1995–96, (c) 1996–97 and (d) 1997–98 to London trusts, excluding the London teaching hospitals. [43891]

Mr. Milburn [holding answer 2 June 1998]: The information requested is provided in the table.

Transitional support to London trusts, excluding the London teaching hospitals 1994/95–1997/98

Year	Total £000
1994/95	11,622
1995/96	13,309
1996/97	8,291
1997/98	8,631

Notes:

1. Trusts included in total are: Lewisham, Greenwich, Lambeth and Southwark, Kingston Hospitals, Royal Free, Royal National Throat Nose and Ear Hospital, Central Middlesex, National Hospital for Neurology and Neurosurgery, Northwick Park, Eastman Dental, Royal London Homoeopathic Hospital, Tavistock and Portman, Whittington
2. In addition to these, financial transitional support has been made available over the period to other London trusts and to London health authorities. The total central funding for London was included in the Turnberg Report, copies of which are available in the Library

Residential Child Care Workers

Mr. Dawson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to review the pay, conditions, training and qualifications of residential social workers working with children in care. [44550]

Mr. Boateng: The pay and conditions of all staff are matters for their individual employers.

We are jointly with the Central Council for Education and Training in Social Work developing a new post qualifying award in child care and the relevant training for that award. In addition, we have put aside £2 million in 1998–99 to secure the training of significant numbers of child care staff leading to national vocational qualification in care at level III.

Foster Carers

Mr. Dawson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to review the fees, reimbursement of costs, training and support of foster carers. [44551]

Mr. Boateng: The level of allowances paid to foster carers is not set by central Government, but is determined by individual local authorities. It is for each authority to decide what amount it pays according to prevailing local requirements. Many authorities base the allowances they pay on those recommended and published each year by the National Foster Care Association, copies of which are available in the Library.

Training and support for foster carers is one of the issues being considered by the United Kingdom Joint Working Party on Foster Care. The group's broad aim is to develop national standards for foster care. It began work in October 1997 and expects to publish a good practice guide in the spring of 1999. The Department is helping to fund this work. The training and support for foster carers was also addressed in the report 'People Like Us' by Sir William Utting, published in November 1997. We established a Ministerial task force to prepare its response to the recommendations contained in the report. Our response will be published later in the summer.

The Department is also funding work being undertaken by the National Foster Care Association to develop training materials for use by foster carers who are relatives and friends of the children being cared for, and for social work staff. The launch of the training pack is scheduled for March 1999.

Trust Mergers

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many management posts have been abolished, and how much money has been saved, as a result of his approving the merger of Ashford (Middlesex) and St. Peter's Hospital NHS Trusts. [44106]

Mr. Milburn: To date, five management posts have been removed as a consequence of the merger resulting in a saving of £400,000.

Written Answers to Questions

Monday 8 June 1998

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Public Trust Office

Mr. Faber: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what guidelines are followed by the Public Trust Office on consulting relatives when a transfer of receivership is proposed. [43673]

Mr. Hoon: The guidelines followed by the Public Trust Office to consult relatives when a transfer of receivership is proposed are set out in the Court of Protection Rules 1994 at rule 27.

Mr. Faber: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many clients under the supervision of the Public Trust Office have suffered financial losses under its supervision in each year since 1990. [43671]

Mr. Hoon: No client under the supervision of the Public Trust Office has suffered a financial loss since 1990. Any loss that has occurred as a result of a mistake by the Public Trust Office is made good.

Mr. Faber: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will list the number of clients under the supervision of the Public Trust Office in each year since 1990. [43672]

Mr. Hoon: It is only from the 1993/94 financial year that caseload figures in the Public Trust Office have been monitored on the same basis year on year. Although figures prior to 1993/94 exist, they have not been formulated in the same manner as those available from that date. On this basis, I am able to provide the figures from 1993/94 which include those cases in the Trust and Funds Sector of the Public Trust Office, as well as the Mental Health Sector caseload:

1993–94—261,603;

1994–95—262,409;

1995–96—284,619;

1996–97—297,195;

1997–98—302,506.

Mr. Faber: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will list how many times a complaint against the Public Trust Office has been referred to the Parliamentary Commissioner; and how many were upheld, for each year since 1990. [43685]

Mr. Hoon: No separate records are available before 1995 as, prior to the Public Trust Office being established as an executive agency on 1 July 1994, complaints referred to the parliamentary Commissioner were not separately recorded. Since 1995, one formal complaint has been received from the Parliamentary Commissioner which he is currently investigating and he has made preliminary inquiries into three complaints which were taken no further.

Mr. Faber: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many complaints were received by (a) the Public Trust Office and (b) his Department in respect of the operation of the Public Trust Office in each year since 1990. [43674]

Mr. Hoon: I am able to supply the figures for each financial year from 1990–91. However, it should be noted that the introduction of Charter Standards by the Public Trust Office, to coincide with the launch of the Office as an executive agency on 1 July 1994, together with the recommendations made by the Citizen's Charter Complaints Task Force, meant that, from 1994–95, complaints were monitored in a more rigorous and consistent fashion across the Office.

The figures for each year from 1990–91, showing the number of complaints received by the Public Trust Office, and the number of complaints received by the Lord Chancellor's Department in respect of the operation of the Public Trust Office, respectively are as follows:

1990–91: 64 and none;

1991–92: 101 and none;

1992–93: 115 and none;

1993–94: 136 and 13;

1994–95: 169 and 8;

1995–96: 331 and 21;

1996–97: 443 and 33;

1997–98: 512 and 20.

Magistrates Court, Worcester

Mr. Michael J. Foster: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what progress is being made on the building of a new magistrates court in Worcester. [43724]

Mr. Hoon: A new magistrates court for Worcester is being procured though the Private Finance Initiative. Final offers have been submitted by two bidders. It is hoped that a preferred bidder will be announced shortly with the contract finalised later this year. The new accommodation is expected to be available in 2001.

Legal Aid

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what percentage of legal aid cases are solely for parental access. [43888]

Mr. Hoon: The Legal Aid Board is unable to provide the information in the format requested. Legal aid cases relating solely to parental access are not separately recorded by the Board. Such cases could be covered by a certificate issued in response to applications for residence and contact orders; or by combined certificates including injunctions ancillary relief, residence and contact orders. Applications for residence and contact orders are not solely covered by civil legal aid. Work relating to such orders could also be included under Legal Advice and Assistance (Green Form Scheme) and ABWOR.

The table sets out the figures available for certificates issued and ABWOR bills paid which related specifically to residence and contact orders, as reported in the Board's annual report (Tables Civil 6, Civil 6A and Civil 7 refer). However, these figures do not include combined civil legal aid certificates or any green form bills paid, as neither are separately recognised.

Proceedings	Total civil legal aid certificates issued 1996/97	Certificate issued for residence and contact orders	Percentages of all certificates issued which relate to residence and contact
Matrimonial proceedings	91,911	12,099	13.16
Private Law proceedings[1]	69,889	58,072	83.09
Non-matrimonial proceedings	162,752	n/a	n/a
Public Law proceedings[1]	21,434	n/a	n/a
Total certificates	345,986	70,171	20.28
ABWOR bills paid	7,703	6,272	81.42

[1] Applications for the various different orders available under the Children Act 1989 can be made under either Public or Private law proceedings. Applications for residence and contact orders made under the Children Act 1989 are specifically included under Private law proceedings above.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what plans he has to review the training of administrators on the Legal Aid Board. [43889]

Mr. Hoon: The Legal Aid Board is an independent body and I do not interfere in the day-to-day running of the organisation. There are two executive members of the Legal Aid Board who are administrators, the Chief Executive and the Director of Resources and Supplier Development. Their training is monitored by the Board's Top Management and Personnel Committee. The Committee is chaired by the Chairman of the Board and oversees the performance of all senior executives and is responsible for ensuring that they are adequately trained. We have no plans to review arrangements.

Adult Protective Legislation

Mr. O'Hara: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department when he expects to introduce legislation to reform (a) adult protective legislation and (b) enduring power of attorney. [43959]

Mr. Hoon: Consultation on the Green Paper "Who Decides—Making Decisions on Behalf of Mentally Incapacitated Adults" has not closed. Well over 3,000 responses have been received and are being collated for analysis by an interdepartmental working group of officials. No decision has yet been made as to a timetable for taking matters forward if it is decided to proceed to legislation in these areas.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Nuclear Deterrence

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 18 May 1998, Official Report, column 218, what factors underlie the delay in replying to the letter from the hon. Member for New Forest, East. [43624]

Mr. Prescott: I responded to the points raised in the letter in my answer of 18 May 1998, Official Report, column 218, and I now consider the matter closed.

Bicycle Lanes (Greater London)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many miles of cycle lanes there are currently within the Greater London area. [44120]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Taking together the London Cycle Network, the Thames Cycle Route, the Priority (Red Routes) programme, and other measures on London's trunk roads, approximately 225 miles of cycle lanes had been introduced by March 1998. Highway authorities have also provided cycle lanes on local roads, outside of the London Cycle Network and the Red Routes, but mileage figures are not held centrally.

Nuclear Materials (Transportation)

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what reports he has received from his French counterpart, concerning her decision to halt movement of spent irradiated nuclear fuel transport flasks on 6 May; how many flasks of this type have been transported into the United Kingdom; and if he will place the safety of spent fuel transportation on the Agenda for the next European Environment and Transport Council meetings. [44108]

Ms Glenda Jackson: I understand that consignments of irradiated nuclear fuel from power stations are currently suspended in both France and Germany following revelations of high levels of non-fixed radioactive contamination arising during shipments to the reprocessing facility at La Hague. I am not aware of any shipments from European power stations to Sellafield revealing similarly high levels of contamination in the United Kingdom. I further understand that my counterparts in France and Germany have set up a working group of the representatives of their safety authorities, charged to organise the bilateral co-operation of the specialists in the disciplines concerned. My officials have offered to participate in this working group. I believe it would be appropriate to await the findings and recommendations of this working group before consideration is given to putting this item on to the Agenda for the European Environment and Transport Council meeting.

New Parishes

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many applications for the creation of new parishes under the Local Government and Rating Act 1997 his Department has received; what is the average time taken to determine the applications; and what were the outcomes of such determinations. [44391]

Mr. Raynsford: Since 1 May 1997, my right hon. Friend has received seven requests for new parishes in the form of petitions and 13 from district councils following parish reviews. To date, he has decided that three new parishes should be created; he has yet to decide on the other requests.

The three parishes for East Cowes, Beverley and Cottingham were all requested by petition and took, on average, around six months from receipt of paperwork to the decision being made.

Air Pollution

Mr. Levitt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions on how many days during May the Government's ozone health safety guideline in atmospheric air was breached in High Peak; and if he will make a statement. [44376]

Angela Eagle: My Department measures air quality at the Ladybower site in Derbyshire.

There were six days during May when the National Air Quality standard for ozone (50 parts per billion (ppb) as an 8-hour running mean) was exceeded at Ladybower. The levels on these days reached the "moderate" air pollution band. There were no days during May when air pollution reached "high" (greater than 90ppb as an hourly mean). The highest hourly ozone concentration recorded during May at Ladybower was 69ppb.

Mr. Levitt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what targets he has set and measures he has put in place to reduce atmospheric ozone to below the Government's ozone health safety limit. [44377]

Angela Eagle: The Government have adopted a provisional objective for ozone of 50 parts per billion as a running 8-hour mean, to be achieved at the 97th percentile level, i.e. on all but 10 days per year assuming perfect operation of the monitoring station with 100 per cent. data capture throughout the year, by 2005.

Ozone is a secondary pollutant found in the atmosphere from the reaction of Volatile Organic Compounds (VOCs) and nitrogen oxides (NOx) in the presence of sunlight. It is a transboundary pollutant in that precursors emitted in one country can contribute to ozone formation in others. Action to tackle ozone formation needs, therefore, to be taken in a coherent fashion at a European scale in order to optimise the cost effectiveness of abatement measures.

The United Kingdom has implemented many measures aimed at reducing ozone precursor emissions. These include ratification of the UNECE-CLRTAP (United Nations Economic Commission for Europe-Convention on Long Range Transboundary Air Pollution) Protocol to reduce emissions of VOCs by 30 per cent. relative to 1988, ratification of a UNECE-CLRTAP Protocol to stabilise emissions of nitrogen oxides at 1987 levels, implementation of several European Community Directives to reduce exhaust emissions of VOCs and nitrogen oxides from road vehicles, implementation of an EC Directive to reduce emissions of VOCs from the storage and distribution of petrol and implementation of the European Community Directive limiting the emissions from Large Combustion Plant.

In addition, the Government are currently actively participating in discussions on further European measures to reduce emissions of VOCs from the use of solvents and further measures to reduce emissions from road vehicles planned for the years 2000 and 2005. Furthermore, and due to the international nature of ozone formation, the Government are actively participating in discussions to develop a further UNECE-CLRTAP protocol and a European Community Strategy to address ozone.

Highways Maintenance (Cumbria)

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will publish the Highways Maintenance Budget for Cumbria for each of the last 10 years. [44859]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Figures for Cumbria County Council's net current expenditure on highways maintenance are only available for the last eight years, as listed.

Year	£000
1990–91	23,460
1991–92	24,031
1992–93	24,358
1993–94	22,607
1994–95	23,558
1995–96	22,066
1996–97	23,974
1997–98	22,365

[1] Provisional outturn

The budget estimate for 1998–99 is £22,781,000.

Disabled Facility Grants

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what was the expenditure in 1996–97 and 1997–98 on disabled facilities grants; how many such grants were awarded in each of these years; and what was the average cost of a disabled facilities grant in each year. [44664]

Mr. Raynsford: In 1996–97, more than 22,000 mandatory and discretionary disabled facilities grants were given at a cost of over £90 million in public expenditure. The average grant was just over £4,100. No figures are yet available for 1997–98.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 1 June 1998, Official Report, column 17, concerning disabled facility grants, if he will set out the timetable for developing policy; and what plans he has to consult on the matter. [44618]

Mr. Raynsford: We will be considering policy on disabled facilities grants during the forthcoming year. We have no current plans to consult formally.

Prison Planning Inquiry, Morecambe

Miss Geraldine Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what questions were asked in the telephone survey mentioned in the planning inspector's report carried out on holidaymakers to Middleton Sands, Morecambe, relating to the proposed prison there; if he will provide a breakdown of the results; and if he will make a statement. [44395]

Mr. Raynsford [holding answer 5 June 1998]: I will write to my hon. Friend.

Duty Free

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what estimate his Department has made of the increase in the costs of transporting freight on the cross-Channel ferries that will arise from the abolition of the duty-free trade and consequent increase in ticket prices. [44810]

Ms Glenda Jackson: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 13 May 1998, Official Report, columns 117–18.

National Air Quality Strategy

Mr. Pound: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what account he will take of the findings of the Atmospheric Particles Expert Group on the extent of pollution from coal-fired and oil-fired power stations in his review of the National Air Quality Strategy. [44639]

Angela Eagle: We will be considering information from a variety of experts, including the Airborne Particles Expert Group, during the process of the review of the National Air Quality Strategy. The report of the Airborne Particles Expert Group has yet to be published. A draft of the report will be circulated for peer review in the summer. The final report is due to be published towards the end of this year.

Genetically Modified Organisms

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what research has been carried out into the effects of genetically modified crops planted in England on (a) surrounding areas and (b) those who consume the food and into the risks of cross-fertilisation with non-genetically modified crops planted nearby. [44581]

Angela Eagle: The Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions funds a research programme to support the risk assessment of proposed releases of genetically modified organisms into the environment. Copies of all our published research reports have been placed in the House of Commons Library. Six completed reports are awaiting publication and seven projects are currently under way. Our assessment of the likely effects of the GMOs always includes the surrounding area. This would include, for example, gene transfer to wild relatives and other crops, effects on Sites of Special Scientific Interest, and the safety of those living in the vicinity of the release. Therefore, all our research projects contribute to our assessment of applications for consent in this respect.

The Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food are responsible for safety of GMOs and products derived from GMOs which may be consumed as food and animal feed. MAFF are currently funding 25 research projects which address specific risk assessment issues with respect to use for food. Completed reports are publicly available in the MAFF library.

With respect to cross fertilisation, the risk assessment for applications for consent to release GMOs always considers firstly, the likelihood of gene transfer occurring and secondly, the consequences of gene transfer for human health or the environment. In coming to a view on gene transfer, we also take into account internationally agreed standards for seed purity which have been developed over years of plant breeding experience. These set out required isolation distances to achieve the required level of seed purity for seed certification.

A number of research projects have been carried out by both my Department and the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food to investigate transgene movement.

- Gene flow in natural populations of Brassica and Beta (DETR)
- Genetically Modified crops and their wild relatives (DETR)
- Investigation of feral oilseed rape populations (DETR—to be published shortly)
- Local and regional scale movement of an oilseed rape transgene (MAFF);
- Risk assessment of transgene movement (MAFF).

In addition to this research, my Department has commissioned monitoring of releases of genetically modified oilseed rape being planted for seed production under a marketing consent. This includes field sampling and testing for evidence of gene transfer. A report of the first three years' work will be published in due course.

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many acres in England have been given over to genetically modified crops; and if he will make a statement as to the acreage of the different crops involved. [44580]

Angela Eagle: Currently, there are 64 experimental trials of genetically modified crops in progress covering a total of approximately 841 acres. Of these, one site is 494 acres, with the remainder consisting of small size plots with an average area of less than 2 acres. In addition to the sites for experimental releases, there is one oilseed rape trial for commercial seed production covering 17.5 acres.

The majority of the experimental trials are for oilseed rape (27), sugar beet (16), and potatoes (14), although GM wheat (3), maize (2), chicory (1) and barley (1) are also grown.

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what will be done with genetically modified crops sown in Staverton and under the control of his Department once they have been harvested. [44579]

Angela Eagle: The genetically modified maize crop sown at Staverton has animal feed safety clearance from the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, and it is normal practice for such material to be used as animal fodder after harvest. In addition, some of the crop may be used for analysis of seed production and yield, as it forms part of the National List Trials for maize.

Kent County Council

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what was the salary bill for Kent County Council for the years (a) 1995–96, (b) 1996–97, (c) 1997–98 and (d) 1998–99 anticipated. [44211]

Mr. Raynsford: Kent County Council have reported employee expenses in 1995–96 and 1996–97 as £539 million and £558 million respectively. Employee expenses are not separately identified within the available data on 1997–98 provisional outturn and 1998–99 budgeted expenditure.

The above figures for employee expenses include indirect expenditures such as relocation and training expenses as well as the direct salary bill.

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many staff were employed by Kent County Council in (a) 1995–96, (b) 1996–97, (c) 1997–98 and (d) 1998–99. [44210]

Mr. Raynsford: The available information refers to the position at June each year, so data for 1998 are not yet available. The figures for earlier years are as follows:

Staff employed by Kent County Council at June of each year

Year	Full-time	Part-time	Total staff
(a) 1995	19,300	21,000	40,300
(b) 1996	19,000	21,100	40,100
(c) 1997	18,700	20,200	38,900

Source:
Joint staffing watch for England

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many staff left the employ of Kent County Council in 1997–98 to join the staff at the Medway Unitary Authority. [44212]

Mr. Raynsford: I understand from Kent County Council that 5,873 staff transferred from their employment to that of the Medway Unitary Authority in 1997–98.

Waste Strategy

Mr. Pound: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what progress has been made in developing a new waste strategy for England and Wales. [45124]

Mr. Meacher: I promised earlier this year that I would begin the process of preparing a new national waste strategy with a wide ranging public consultation. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales and I will be launching tomorrow, at the Institute of Waste Management Centenary Conference in Torbay, a consultation paper: "Less Waste: More Value", which sets out the key principles underlying our approach, and seeks views on how to improve the way our society deals with its waste.

The consultation exercise will last through the Summer. We will be looking for views from a wide range of people and organisations, and want to provoke a wide debate on the options open to us and the best way to take waste management into the twenty-first century. The consultation period will end on 25 September, after which we will carefully study all the views presented to us and start drafting the new waste strategy.

Copies will be sent to hon. Members, and will also be available tomorrow morning in the Library of the House.

Derbyshire County Council

Mr. Pond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is his decision on the final cap for Derbyshire County Council; and if he will make a statement. [45125]

Mr. Prescott: I have today laid before the House a draft Order, under section 57 of the Local Government Finance Act 1992, setting out our decision on the final cap for Derbyshire County Council.

We have considered very carefully all the available relevant information, including the case made by the Council in support of a higher cap, before taking our decision. We have decided to increase the cap proposed for Derbyshire, by £2.9 million.

Derbyshire's cap is, in our view, reasonable, appropriate and achievable in all the circumstances of the County Council. This decision will reduce public expenditure and the burden on council taxpayers in the County by £1 million in 1998–99. This will result in a council tax reduction (at Band D) of around £4.31.

Paper Pulp Disposal

Mr. Levitt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many breaches of regulations in respect of the disposal of paper pulp on agricultural land there have been in the last three years; and what action was taken against those responsible. [43640]

Angela Eagle [pursuant to her reply, 1 June 1998, c. 28]: Under section 33 of the Environmental Protection Act 1990, it is unlawful to deposit, recover or dispose of controlled waste without a waste management licence, contrary to the conditions of a licence or in a way which causes pollution of the environment or harm to human health. Where someone purports to be carrying out an activity which is exempt from waste management licensing but fails to comply with the terms of the exemption, that person may be prosecuted under section 33 of the 1990 Act for carrying out a licensable activity without a licence. The Environment Agency is responsible for the enforcement of these provisions in England and Wales.

Most landspreading of waste is carried out under the terms of the exemption from waste management licensing in paragraph 7 of Schedule 3 of the Waste Management Licensing Regulations 1994. I understand that the Environment Agency is developing a central prosecution database. However, I am advised that, at present, the Agency does not maintain a central record of occasions or sites on which waste may have been landspread in a manner which is inconsistent with the terms of the exemption in the 1994 Regulations.

DEFENCE

Territorial Army

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which Territorial Army headquarters Ministers have visited since 1 May 1997. [43644]

Dr. Reid: No visits have yet been made to Territorial Army Headquarters by any Ministers in my Department. Ministers have, however, met both senior TA officers and representatives of the TVRAs on a number of occasions since 1 May 1997.

Aircraft

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) Tornado, (b) Tornado F3, (c) Harrier, (d) Jaguar, (e) Hawk, (f) Nimrod, (g) Sentry, (h) TriStar, (i) Puma, (j) Sea King and (k) Chinook were (i) allocated to frontline RAF units, (ii) fully serviceable, (iii) undergoing major maintenance and (iv) held as in use reserve on 1 June. [44130]

Dr. Reid: I will write to the hon. and learned Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library.

C-17 Aircraft

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will make a statement on the procurement of C-17; [44467]

(2) how many companies are involved in the production of C-17s; and what guidelines are being used for the purchase of C-17. [44468]

Mr. Spellar: Our future air transport requirement is being scrutinised closely in the Strategic Defence Review and no decisions have yet been taken. Any future airlift procurement will be subject to normal procurement rules. In reply to the specific question on C-17, the aircraft is produced by the Boeing Company.

Future Large Aircraft

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the British Government's commitment to the Future Large Aircraft. [44469]

Mr. Spellar: A provisional request for proposals has been issued to Airbus, Turkish Aerospace Industries, Alenia and FLABEL pending the formation of Airbus Military Company, AMC. We are still discussing with our partners when Requests for Proposals will be issued to potential suppliers under competitive arrangements. A procurement decision will be made in the light of the conclusions of the Strategic Defence Review and of the responses to the Request for Proposals.

Defence Exports

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence at what rate commercial exploitation levies are normally levied against the export of defence equipment whose development has been funded by his Department. [44511]

Mr. Spellar: Commercial Exploitation Levy rates are negotiated case by case, either on the basis of fixed percentage rates according to the nature of the equipment, or through profit sharing schemes. Details of levy arrangements for individual equipments are commercially confidential, as are the amounts of levy received in respect of specific sales.

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what was the cost to public funds for each year since 1990 incurred by branches of his Department other than DESO in the promotion of British defence exports; [44435]

(2) what was the cost to his Department of the attendance of (a) Ministers and (b) officials at defence and aerospace shows and trade fairs in each of the last eight years; what other costs were incurred in each year; and which bodies have funded these costs. [44437]

Mr. Spellar: This information is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the value of the commercial exploitation levies paid by Vickers to the Government as a result of each of the contracts from the Government of Oman for the export of Challenger II tanks; and what percentage of the contract this represents. [44509]

Mr. Spellar: Disclosure of this information would harm the competitive position of contractors and I am therefore withholding it under Exemption 13 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

Military Assistance Fund

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the purpose of the Defence Military Assistance Fund; when it was set up; and what was its budget in the last year. [44434]

Dr. Reid: The Defence Military Assistance Fund is a cash fund which is available to subsidise the cost of overseas military assistance in support of defence objectives, including training, loan service personnel and other support activities. It was introduced on 1 April 1996 to replace the Defence Policy Fund and the Defence Sales Fund. The budget allocated for the Defence Military Assistance Fund last year was £10.506 million.

Ex-Service Men (Mental Welfare)

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much his Department has provided in financial assistance to the Ex-Services Mental Welfare Society (Combat Stress) in each of the last five years. [44386]

Dr. Reid: In keeping with the practice that central Government do not provide funding in support of charities' core activities, the Ex-Services Mental Welfare Society (Combat Stress) does not receive any financial support from the Ministry of Defence and is responsible for raising its own funding.

Service Families Quarters (Kingston)

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans his Department has made for the disposal of The Keep in Kingston; and if he will make a statement. [44563]

Mr. Spellar: My Department has no plans to dispose of Service Families Quarters at The Keep in Kingston.

Joint Command and Staff Training

Mr. Alan Keen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on joint command and staff training matters. [45105]

Mr. George Robertson: The establishment of the Joint Services' Command and Staff College at its interim site at Bracknell has highlighted the considerable benefits to be had from a joint approach to command and staff training within a multinational environment. Opportunities for the common understanding of warfare and Defence as a whole are maximised. Specially selected officers have their command, analytical and communication skills tested against challenging scenarios ranging from Peace Support Operations to modern warfare. As part of our commitment to joint training, my Department has signed a PFI contract with Defence Management (Watchfield) Ltd. to build a new Joint College at Shrivenham (Watchfield) and to provide a range of facility management services. The new College is scheduled to open in September 2000.

Equipment Exhibition

Mr. Sedgemore: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement about the Royal Navy and British Army Equipment Exhibition. [45141]

Mr. Spellar: Following consultations with the UK Defence Trade Associations, we propose to change the future arrangements for the exhibition of naval and land systems equipment. In future, the Royal Navy and British Army Equipment Exhibition will be replaced by an international defence exhibition, run by a professional exhibition company, in a partnership to be formed with the Trade Associations. Subject to the conclusion of satisfactory arrangements, including a decision on the venue, the first exhibition will be held in September 1999. The Ministry of Defence will ensure that the exhibition is run fully in line with Government policy on defence exports and MOD officials will be closely involved to ensure that comprehensive security and emergency arrangements are in place. The move to an international format reflects the wide involvement of UK industry in collaborative projects and joint ventures and the Government's encouragement of these trends.

Land Mines

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps his Department is taking to assist in the global elimination of anti-personnel land mines. [45140]

Mr. George Robertson: I have on a number of occasions underlined my commitment to doing as much as possible to achieve this objective. My hon. Friend will recall my letter of 27 January, in which I set out our plans to destroy all of the Army's operational stockpiles of anti-personnel land mines by 1 January 2000—well ahead of the deadline set by the Ottawa Convention. I am delighted to say that plans have now also been put in place to destroy the HB 876 anti-personnel submunition of the RAF's JP233 Airfield Denial Weapon by the same date.

The MOD is also heavily involved in addressing the problem of the millions of mines that are the legacy of devastating conflicts around the world. We have made good progress in implementing the five point action plan on humanitarian demining I announced in October last year—in particular, the Mine Information and Training Centre at Minley is now fully operational—and we continue to look for ways to do more; the recent gifting of 10 demining tractors to the HALO Trust is one example of our commitment in this area.

Aircraft Noise Measurement Trial (Tewkesbury)

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what were the results of the noise measurement trial relating to low-flying aircraft in the Tewkesbury area; and if he will make a statement. [44403]

Mr. Spellar: A paper on the results of the noise monitoring trial is in preparation. It is our intention that this paper will be submitted for consideration for critical peer review at an international noise conference due to take place in New Zealand later this year. I will arrange for copies to be sent to the hon. Member, and placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

PRIME MINISTER

Rebuttal Officers

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Prime Minister on what dates each Government and agency rebuttal officer was thus designated. [43552]

The Prime Minister: The early and effective response to criticism of Government policy has always been an important and non-political duty of all departmental and agency press officers under all administrations. Titles of officers is a matter for Departments and agencies and is not centrally determined.

As my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Health said in his reply to the hon. Member for Gordon (Mr. Bruce) of 11 May 1998, Official Report, column 40, one officer in his Departments has been designated a rebuttal officer.

Evacuees Reunion Association

Mr. Fallon: To ask the Prime Minister what steps the Government are taking to promote the 1999 anniversary celebrations of the Evacuees Reunion Association. [44591]

The Prime Minister: The Evacuees Reunion Association (ERA) contacted me last year seeking Government support for their proposal to mark the 60th anniversary of wartime evacuation with a church service and rally in central London. The Home Office, which has responsibility for remaining civilian wartime matters, has taken a lead on this issue and will be seconding an official to provide help and guidance with the preparations.

Sierra Leone

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Prime Minister which (a) Ministers in HM Government and (b) parliamentary private secretaries have spoken to the Chairman of the Foreign Affairs Committee on matters relating to the Committee's First Special report of Session 1997–98 (HC 760) Sierra Leone: Exchange of Correspondence with the Foreign Secretary. [44321]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 5 June 1998]: I would expect Ministers and parliamentary private secretaries to have spoken both formally and informally to members of the Foreign Affairs Committee from all parties over the last few weeks on issues relating to Sierra Leone. This is part of the normal interface between Select Committees and Government.

Child Pornography

Ms Beverley Hughes: To ask the Prime Minister what progress has been made by the G8 countries in preventing the international production and distribution of child pornography, with particular reference to the Internet; if this matter was considered at the Birmingham Summit; and if he will make a statement. [43951]

The Prime Minister: At our summit in Birmingham last month, we agreed to implement rapidly the Principles and 10-point Action Plan against high-tech crime adopted by our Justice and Interior Ministers in Washington last December. Our governments are engaged in co-ordinated discussions with relevant industries in our countries, including Internet Service Providers, to develop better arrangements for obtaining electronic evidence of crimes and making it available to investigators and prosecutors in other jurisdictions. This will help us to combat a wide range of crimes including abuse of the Internet for the distribution of child pornography.

The UK has an absolute prohibition on the production, circulation and possession of child pornography and these stringent laws equally apply to the Internet.

The Government support the work of the Internet Watch Foundation which was established in September 1996 by Internet Service Providers primarily in response to growing concern about child pornography on the Internet. The Foundation passes all child pornography reports to the National Criminal Intelligence Service who route these to the relevant enforcement agency of the country concerned when the material appears to have originated outside the UK.

The UK Government are committed to tackling the problem of child pornography and will continue to support initiatives to curb this gross misuse of our computer networks.

Mr. Stephen Kock

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Prime Minister what sums of money were paid (a) by Her Majesty's Government and (b) by those acting on their behalf in salary and expenses to Mr. Stephen Kock between 1985 and 1992. [44809]

The Prime Minister: None.

WALES

European Structural Funds

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what the costs were in each year since 1990 of administering European Structural Fund programmes in Wales. [43844]

Mr. Hain: The separately identifiable administrative costs to the Welsh Office from 1992–93 onwards are set out in the following table. Information on a comparable basis is not readily available for earlier years.

£

Financial year	Expenditure
1992–93	501,457
1993–94	588,834
1994–95	623,738
1995–96	601,340
1996–97	706,973
1997–98	590,200

The Welsh European Programme Executive Ltd. was incorporated on 15 October 1996. The financial transactions of the company commenced on 1 January 1997. Responsibility for most Structural Funds programme management was delegated to the company by the Welsh Office from 1 July 1997.

The administration costs for the company from 1 January 1997 to 31 December 1997 amounted to £854,384. These costs are not directly comparable to those given for the Welsh Office as they include setting-up costs and a range of overheads not included in the Welsh Office figures.

European Affairs Forum

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what progress he has made in establishing a Welsh Forum on European Affairs; if he will list the names of those who attended the meeting of the preparatory group on 7 May; and if he will make a statement. [44062]

Mr. Hain: No such meeting was held on that date. The future relationship between Wales and Europe is, however, under review by Ministers.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Historic Properties

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans he has to provide new resources to repair historic properties; and if he will make a statement on the recent English Heritage report on neglected historic properties. [44005]

Mr. Banks: The majority of Government funding for the repair of historic properties is channelled through English Heritage (EH), which will receive £102.0 million in funding this year from my Department. EH plans to offer £34.5 million in conservation grants for 1998–99. This includes £2 million for a new fast track grants scheme for repairs needed to limit further deterioration, and a further £5.3 million for grants schemes under its new Buildings at Risk initiative. The Government welcome EH's Register of Buildings at Risk, which highlights the most important historic buildings in need of repair. Combined with the new grants scheme, it marks the start of a new strategy to encourage best practice in the preservation of historic buildings, in accordance with the Government's planning and policy guidance note 15—"planning and the historic environment".

Bradenstoke Priory Barn

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) what representations he has received from the villagers of Bradenstoke in Wiltshire concerning their attempt to repatriate the mediaeval barn of Bradenstoke Priory from California; and if he will make a statement; [44331]

(2) what applications the National Lottery has received from the villagers of Bradenstoke concerning the mediaeval barn of Bradenstoke Priory. [44330]

Mr. Banks: My Department has received no representations concerning the barn, although I am aware of the proposal to restore it to its original site. The Government have no locus to intervene in the matter. I understand that no application for Lottery funding in respect of the barn has so far been made. The Heritage Lottery Fund would in principle be prepared to consider such an application. Its success would depend upon the Trustees' assessment of the project against their normal funding criteria, which centre on heritage merit and benefit to the public.

SCOTLAND

Hunts

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if hunts which are licensed to hunt on Forestry Commission land have to follow the same rules as members of the public with respect to control of dogs and use of authorised routes only. [43747]

Mr. Macdonald: The subject of the question relates to matters undertaken by Forest Enterprise. I have asked its Chief Executive, Dr. Bob McIntosh, to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Bob McIntosh to Jackie Ballard, dated 8 June 1998:

The Secretary of State for Scotland has asked me to reply to your question regarding the licensing of hunts on Forestry Commission land and whether hunts have to follow the same rules as members of the public with respect to the control of dogs and use of authorised routes only.

As you will be aware, the Forestry Commission welcomes members of the public to its estate through a policy of freedom of access on foot where there are no legal or other restrictions. To help manage this freedom of access the Forestry Commission's Byelaws 1982 apply to all land managed by the Forestry Commission to which access is provided.

The control of dogs is specifically mentioned in the Byelaws. Under Byelaw 5 (xiii) it is an offence for a person to permit any animal in his charge to be out of control, while Byelaw 5 (xiv) makes it an offence for a person to permit any dog for which he is responsible to disturb, worry or chase any bird or animal or, on being requested by an officer of the Commissioners, fail to keep the dog on a leash.

Fox hunting is an activity which is controlled by licence on the Forestry Commission estate, the licences restricting the areas where hunting can take place and the activities which can be carried out.

The licences which are used to authorise hunting all contain enforceable conditions, including one requiring compliance with the Forestry Commission byelaws, except as expressly authorised by the licence. I would like to assure you that the conditions are designed to ensure that hounds and terriers are kept under control, and it is the Forestry Commission's intention to tighten these conditions further in the near future.

At present, the licences include conditions which:

- Designate the specific areas of land over which the Hunt may operate
- Provide specific instructions for Masters of Foxhounds on the use of terriers
- Require Masters of Foxhounds to ensure compliance with requirements relating to the protection and welfare of animals including the Protection of Badgers Act 1992
- Require Masters to call off hounds in the event of them starting to hunt deer
- Provide for monitoring of the activities of Hunts by Forest District Managers to ensure compliance with all the terms and conditions. In the event of non compliance, the licence may be revoked.

I hope that this reassures you that the activities of fox hunts and in particular hounds and terriers associated with hunting are rigorously controlled.

Higher Education Students

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish a document for the guidance of students and higher and further education institutes setting out the new arrangements on fees, grants, loans, access funds and hardship loans; and if he will do so in consultation with students and institutions to ensure that it answers the questions frequently asked. [43874]

Mr. Wilson: In October 1997, we published the booklet "Scottish Higher Education for the 21st Century" which gave those proposing to enter higher education in 1998–99 and beyond a guide to the new arrangements. The arrangements have also been the subject of discussions with representatives of institutions.

The annual information booklet, "Student Support in Scotland—A Guide for Undergraduate Students 1998–99", was subsequently published by the Student Awards Agency for Scotland at Easter and has been widely available to both students and institutions. The booklet is part of the student support applications package and it provides full details of the assistance available to meet tuition fees, together with the grant and loan entitlements of new students entering higher education in session 1998–99. It also explains how students can apply for hardship loans and assistance form the Access Funds.

We will be publishing additional factsheets this month which set out in bullet format answers to the questions most frequently asked in relation to specific types of students.

Further information will be published later in the year and we will be happy to consider suggestions about the content.

Derelict and Contaminated Land

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make it his policy to collect statistics on the acreage of (a) derelict and (b) contaminated land in each constituency in Scotland; and if he will make a statement. [43332]

Mr. Macdonald [holding answer 1 June 1998]: Information on derelict and contaminated land is collected for the Scottish Vacant and Derelict Land Survey by local authorities and is supplied to the Scottish Office who publish this in aggregated form. Further development of the survey would be required in consultation with the data providers before analyses could be provided at Parliamentary Constituency level. While the information supplied to the Scottish Office provides a grid reference for each affected site, assembling and publication of the information by Parliamentary Constituency would require geographic coding of sites and additional preparatory work by local authorities. As with all official statistics, the Survey is kept under review.

Secure Accommodation

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many places currently exist in Scotland for secure accommodation for children; how many there were in each year since 1988; how many children are waiting for secure accommodation to become available; and if he will make a statement. [44026]

Mr. Galbraith: There are currently 86 secure places for children in Scotland, proportionately twice the number of secure places available in England and Wales. We therefore have no plans to increase significantly the number of places. Information on the number of secure places has been collected since 1991 and is noted in the table.

Year	Number
1991	84
1992	84
1993	84
1994	84
1995	88
1996	88
1997	86
1998	86

Details of the number of children waiting for a secure place are not held centrally, but peaks and troughs of demand arising from the combined needs of Courts and Children's Hearings mean that from time to time there will be situations where a secure place may not be available. A National Planning Group was set up in June last year to advise on the planning, management and development of secure accommodation and its alternatives. A report on its work to date is expected in the next few months.

Housing Budget

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what his Department's budget was for council and other publicly financed housing (i) in cash terms and (ii) in real terms, in 1998–99 prices and (iii) as a percentage of Scottish GDP each year since 1978–79; and how much was spent per council tenant and publicly financed housing tenant in Scotland in (i) cash terms and (ii) real terms, in 1998–99 prices, in each of these years. [43392]

Mr. Macdonald [holding answer 2 June 1998]: The available information is set out in the table. To provide meaningful information relating expenditure on housing to GDP, it would be necessary to include not only housing expenditure by the Scottish Office but also other public housing expenditure including, in particular, Housing Benefit which has increased substantially over the period.

Given that Scottish Homes' grant in aid is used largely to support housing development by housing associations and private developers, it is not meaningful to divide the totals in the table by the numbers of public sector tenants in each year.

£ million

Year	Scottish Office housing budget in cash terms [1]	Column 2 at estimated 1998–99 prices
1978–79	542	1,760
1979–80	691	1,922
1980–81	738	1,736
1981–82	667	1,430
1982–83	616	1,233
1983–84	535	1,023
1984–85	516	940
1985–86	430	742
1986–87	457	766
1987–88	504	802
1988–89	434	647
1989–90	459	640
1990–91	539	696
1991–92	604	733
1992–93	536	624
1993–94	541	612
1994–95	552	615
1995–96	497	539
1996–97	449	474
1997–98	531	546
1998–99	508	508

[1] The figures for the Scottish Office housing budget in columns 2 and 3 include Housing Support Grant, Housing Revenue Account capital allocations, Scottish Homes grant-in-aid (prior to 1989–90, expenditure on the Housing Corporation and Scottish Special Housing Association), allocations to the former New Town Development Corporations, and resources made available in 1997–98 and 1998–99 under the capital receipts initiative.

[2] The figures exclude, however, repairs and improvement grants made by local authorities to owner occupiers, expenditure on Housing Benefit, local authorities' capital receipts and local authority capital funded from current revenue. They also exclude private sector investment levered in as a result of Scottish Homes' grants to housing associations and private developers.

Chief Police Officers

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland which grades so entitled within the police service have refused to join the Association of Chief Police Officers in Scotland. [44099]

Mr. McLeish: I am not aware of any eligible grades so entitled who have refused to join the Association of Chief Police Officers in Scotland.

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will place a copy of the full accounts of the Association of Chief Police Officers in Scotland for the last year for which the accounts are available in the Library. [44095]

Mr. McLeish: The accounts of the Association of Chief Police Officers in Scotland are contained in the Association's annual report. I have arranged for a copy of the 1997–98 report to be placed in the Library of the House.

Firearms

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland on what dates his Department held consultative meetings on the Review of the Firearms Forms and Rules with (i) the British Medical Association and other professional medical representative bodies, (ii) the National Farmers Union (England and Wales), (iii) the National Farmers Union (Scotland), (iv) the Country Landowners Association (England and Wales), (v) the Country Landowners Association (Scotland), (vi) firearms clubs and associations, (vii) the British Deer Society, and the Deer Commission for Scotland and (viii) the British Sports Association for the Disabled; when he plans to conclude the review of firearms forms and rules; when he plans to implement the proposed new forms and rules; for what reasons the Home Office Note of the main issues raised at the meeting on 19 February to discuss the forms, was not sent to all consultees when requesting further written submissions; and when he intends to meet consultees to discuss these matters. [44100]

Mr. McLeish: These are matters for my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary who has overall responsibility for policy in relation to firearms in Great Britain.

Free School Meals

Mr. Sarwar: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many children received free school meals in each year since 1979; and what proportion of children this represents. [44205]

Mr. Wilson: The information requested is shown in the table.

Education authority schools: number and percentage of pupils receiving free school meals in Scotland 1979–80 to 1996–97

Year	Number of pupils present on census day	Number of pupils taking free school meals	Percentage of pupils taking free school meals
1979–80	867,816	122,618	14.1
1980–81	867,786	114,711	13.2
1981–82	823,646	124,547	15.1
1982–83	814,506	132,953	16.3
1983–84	756,735	129,335	17.1
1984–85	752,07[illegible]	136,669	18.2
1985–86	735,54[illegible]	136,627	18.6
1986–87	729,869	143,194	19.6
1987–88	729,505	145,219	19.9
1988–89	713,034	105,232	14.8
1989–90	704,357	99,303	14.1
1990–91	698,554	101,915	14.6
1991–92	695,201	107,186	15.4
1992–93	687,081	107,709	15.7
1993–94	727,101	121,479	16.7
1994–95	729,089	121,123	16.6
1995–96	730,835	121,318	16.6
1996–97	731,096	115,421	15.8

Insolvencies

Mr. Sarwar: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many (a) individual and (b) corporate insolvencies there have been in each of the last eight years. [44202]

Mr. Wilson: Statistics on insolvencies are produced by statisticians in the Department of Trade and Industry. The information requested is shown in the table:

Insolvencies in Scotland

	Individuals	Companies
	Sequestrations	Total	Compulsory liquidations	Creditors' voluntary liquidations
1990	4,350	470	251	219
1991	7,665	616	304	312
1992	10,845	670	310	360
1993	6,828	551	286	265
1994	2,182	444	242	202
1995	2,188	441	252	189
1996	2,503	441	266	175
1997	2,502	447	254	223

Education Funding (Argyll and Bute)

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what proportion of his Department's funding for education has been allocated to Argyll and Bute; for what purpose; and under what headings since May 1997. [44576]

Mr. Wilson: The Department's funding for education extends principally to the further and higher education sectors, including grants to students. Such expenditure is not readily identifiable for particular geographical areas. Responsibility for school education in the Argyll and Bute area lies with Argyll and Bute Council and is funded through the general arrangements for local authority resources. Resources have also been allocated to Argyll and Bute Council since May 1997 for the following specified purposes related to school education:

£

	1997–98	1998–99
Early Intervention	118,289	107,450
Alternatives to Exclusion	23,663	54,000
School Security	239,000	239,000
In-Service Training for SEN	21,437	17,278
In-Service Training for Pre-school	21,693	—
Pre-School capital	70,008	—
New Deal for Schools	202,090	607,000
School Rationalisation	—	440,000
Spend to Save	—	341,000
Main Pre-school Grant	—	758,480
Additional Pre-school Grant	—	388,430

NORTHERN IRELAND

Lisnevin Disturbances (Children)

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many (a) Catholic and (b) Protestant children were held in Lisnevin at the time of each disturbance there in 1994; how many of each group were prosecuted and convicted arising out of the disturbances; and how many were transferred to the Young Offenders Centre, Hydebank. [31626]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 27 February 1998]: There have been no serious disturbances in Lisnevin since 1994. In that year, two incidents occurred. The first in April and the second in November. The details requested are as follows:

	Protestant	Catholic	Total
April 1994
Population	16	16	32
Transferred to YOC	6	11	17
Prosecuted	5	8	13
Convicted	4	5	9
November 1994
Population	14	27	41
Transferred to YOC	1	8	9
Prosecuted	1	6	7
Convicted	1	6	7

HOME DEPARTMENT

Non-custodial Sentences

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the estimated annual cost of running (a) home detention orders and (b) community curfew orders backed by electronic tagging. [43876]

Ms Quin: The proposals in the Crime and Disorder Bill relating to Home Detention Curfew are estimated to cost up to £35 million per year, but are expected to avoid the need for estimated expenditure of up to £180 million a year on new prison places. Research conducted on the current trials of curfew orders estimated that a national roll-out of curfew orders could cost up to £22 million per year. However, this estimate does not take account of the effect of providing electronic monitoring for curfew orders simultaneously with Home Detention Curfew.

The Home Office is currently letting contracts for electronic monitoring services under which contractors will be responsible for providing a range of applications of electronic monitoring. The final cost of electronic monitoring services will depend on the outcome of the procurement process.

Ecstasy

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action he proposes to take in respect of the supply of ecstasy testing kits; and if he will make a statement. [44169]

Mr. George Howarth: Kits which test for the presence of ecstasy are, in our view, of doubtful value in reducing risks to users. Ecstasy itself is a drug with well-documented short-term risks; and there are worries about its long-term effects. Ecstasy tablets seized in this country which have been tested by the Forensic Science Service have not been contaminated by substances more harmful than ecstasy itself. While the situation will be kept under review, there is no present intention to introduce specific controls on the supply of these kits. But it should be noted that possession of a substance for the purpose of testing it would be an offence if the substance was a controlled drug or a preparation or product containing one.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received from the UK Drugs Tsar regarding the E-Z ecstasy testing kits. [44167]

Mr. George Howarth: My officials anticipated such representations and advised the United Kingdom Anti-Drugs Co-ordination Unit on 28 May that it appeared that the E-Z Test kit did not contain any controlled substance which would require it to be licensed.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what advice his Department has given to the distributors of the E-Z Test ecstasy testing kits; [44170]

(2) what communications his Department has received from the United Kingdom distributor of the E-Z Test ecstasy testing kits; and when they were received. [44168]

Mr. George Howarth: The Department was asked by E-Z Limited on 23 March for its view of the ecstasy testing kit it proposed selling. In reply, officials explained that the Home Office did not endorse such products, and that the Government believed that testing could give a false sense of security and would not help to reduce the risks involved in taking the drug.

Nightclubs (Illegal Drugs)

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many night clubs have (a) had their licence revoked and (b) been refused a renewal of their licence by local authorities following receipt of a report from a chief police officer concerning problems with illegal drugs on their premises under recent legislation; [44161]

(2) how many club licences have been (a) revoked and (b) refused a renewal as a result of conviction of the licensee for operating in breach of conditions as a result of problems with illegal drugs in each of the last five years; [44159]

(3) how many night clubs have been the subject of reports from chief police officers concerning problems with illegal drugs on their premises in each of the last five years. [44160]

Mr. George Howarth: This information is not held centrally.

In practice, many clubs are already doing a good deal to tackle drugs misuse in partnership with the police, local authorities and other agencies. For those not able or willing to do so, the Public Entertainments Licences (Drugs Misuse) Act 1997 was brought into effect on 1 May 1998. This gives local authorities new powers of immediate closure where there are serious problems with the supply or use of controlled drugs at premises controlled by a club licence holder.

Drivers (Drugs)

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Barnsley, East and Mexborough (Mr. Ennis)

on 21 May 1998, Official Report, column 454, regarding driving under the influence of drugs, what is the most recent estimate made by the Forensic Science Service regarding the prevalence of drug/driving cases; and what were estimates for each of the last 10 years. [44200]

Mr. Michael: The Forensic Science Service (FSS) has not made such an estimate. Figures are available for the last three years on cases submitted to the FSS by police forces. These are:

Year	Number
1995–96	1,218
1996–97	1,343
1997–98	1,700

Forensic Science Service

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the average time taken for fingerprint analysis to be carried out by the Forensic Science Service at the request of the police. [44166]

Mr. Michael: It should be remembered that the Forensic Science Service (FSS) is involved in a minority of cases, where the technology is complex and technical/chemical enhancement of fingerprints is requested, not in the vast bulk of routine cases. The average turn-around time (taken over the year 1997–98) is 50 days. Where a result is needed urgently, the FSS endeavours to respond accordingly and fast-track responses are included in these overall figures.

Greyhounds

Mr. Fitzpatrick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what factors underlie the priority which the Government have given to introducing legislation to cover the welfare of greyhounds; [44156]

(2) if he will provide independently funded vets to attend all greyhound tracks; [44154]

(3) if he will implement a levy on betting on greyhound racing to provide a fund for improving tracks, veterinary support and greyhound welfare; [44155]

(4) what plans he has to implement the recommendations contained in the Sixth report of the Home Affairs Committee of Session 1990–91 (HC 463) on the Financing of Greyhound Racing (a) relating to the increase in the registration fee to owners (paragraph 44) and (b) a requirement on track owners and on and-off course bookmakers to donate a part of their profits to the Retired Greyhound Trust (paragraph 44). [44157]

Mr. George Howarth: The present law, principally the Protection of Animals Act 1911, makes it an offence to ill-treat any animals, including greyhounds. We have no plans for further legislation in this area. The greyhound racing industry already takes greyhound welfare most seriously—both during and after the dogs' racing careers.

Neither the 1978 Royal Commission on Gambling nor the 1991 Home Affairs Committee report recommended a levy on greyhound betting. Both regarded this as a commercial activity that did not demand direct Government involvement. We take the same view.

Mr. Fitzpatrick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will include independent greyhound tracks within the legislation which oversees standards for dogs in competitive sport. [44153]

Mr. George Howarth: Independent greyhound tracks are already covered by the animal protection and gambling laws—in particular, the Protection of Animals Act 1911 and the Betting, Gaming and Lotteries Act 1963. There are no plans to make separate provision for them.

Mr. Fitzpatrick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will establish a statutory body concerned with greyhound racing. [44152]

Mr. George Howarth: There are no plans to establish such a body.

Public Safety Radio Communications Project

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to (i) promote and (ii) support the public safety radio communications project in North Yorkshire. [44220]

Mr. Michael: The Public Safety Radio Communications Project (PSRCP) is intended to replace all radio infrastructures for the police service with the new generation of digital radio communication systems from 1999 onwards. The project is being managed by the Police Information Technology Organisation (PITO) which became a Non-Departmental Public Body in April this year. Under the PSRCP, a national co-ordinated approach is being taken to the planning, design and implementation of the new communications systems, and PITO has been supporting North Yorkshire Police, along with all other forces in England and Wales, to achieve this. A Business Case for the implementation of the project will be completed this year, and a decision taken on whether to proceed. If a contract is awarded, the North Yorkshire Police force is scheduled to be one of the first forces to receive the new service.

Members of the European Parliament

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the procedures which will apply when vacancies for UK MEPs occur. [44194]

Mr. George Howarth: Our intention is that, where a vacancy arises from the death or resignation of an MEP who was a candidate on a party list, the vacancy will be filled by the next eligible and willing candidate on that list, provided that the party concerned is still content to be represented by that person.

Where a party list has been exhausted or where the person whose death or resignation has caused the vacancy stood as an independent candidate, a by-election will be held.

If a vacancy occurs in Northern Ireland it will, as now, be filled by means of a by-election.

Emergency Services

Mr. Bill Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answers of 20 April 1998, Official Report, columns 524–27, if he will list for each fire and civil defence authority the total amount of grant aid given to such authorities for emergency planning in 1995–96, 1996–97, 1997–98 and the provision for 1998–99, identifying where applicable any allocations transferred to fire and civil defence authorities by metropolitan district or London borough councils. [44562]

Mr. George Howarth: The information required is given in the table.

Civil Defence Grant Allocations (£000s)

Fire and Civil Defence Authorities	1995/96	1996/97	1997/98	1998/99
London	388	388	338	318
Greater Manchester	[1]364	[2]229	[2]204	[2]194
Merseyside	[3]369	[3]369	[3]342	[3]335
South Yorkshire	[4]229	[4]229	[4]204	159
Tyne and Wear	[5]369	[5]369	[5]345	[5]335
West Midlands	194	194	169	159
West Yorkshire	194	194	169	159

Metropolitan Districts transferring their allocations to FCDA:

[1] Salford, Stockport, Tameside and Wigan

[2] Stockport

[3] All Districts in Merseyside

[4] Sheffield

[5] All Districts in Tyne and Wear

Police Staffing

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what research his Department has evaluated into staffing demands for the police during bank holiday periods. [44179]

Mr. Michael: The Home Office has not commissioned or evaluated any research into staffing demands for the police during bank holiday periods and we are not aware of any research in this area. The allocation of resources and the deployment of officers is decided locally by chief constables.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures he has taken to increase the number of police officers since 1 May 1997. [44178]

Mr. Michael: The last Government removed from Ministers any direct control over police numbers or the deployment of police officers. Under the Police and Magistrates' Courts Act 1994, it is for individual chief constables to determine the number of police officers in their force within the resources available to them. Resources for the police in England and Wales this year increased by 3.7 per cent., or £258 million, to £7.15 billion.

We are working with the police to ensure that these resources are used as effectively as possible, and to reduce administrative burdens in order to enable chief constables to put more officers back into the community.

Asylum Seekers

Sir Norman Fowler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many current applicants for political asylum have been granted work permits pending consideration of their cases; and if he will make a statement; [44633]

(2) how many applications for political asylum are currently pending; what is the average length of time for consideration of an application; and if he will make a statement; [44632]

(3) what plans he has for speeding up the process of dealing with applications for political asylum; and if he will make a statement. [44634]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: At the end of April 1998, there were 51,465 asylum applications awaiting an initial decision, a reduction on the previous year. Applications are currently estimated to be taking, on average, 14 months to reach an initial decision in cases lodged after the Asylum and Immigration Appeals Act 1993, and 58 months for those lodged prior to that Act. Both these figures reflect the proportion of inherited old cases within the system. But figures for 1997 show that 38 per cent. of initial decisions on asylum applications were taken within six months, as against only 10 per cent. in 1992.

We are committed to bringing a fresh approach to asylum: one that is fairer, faster and firmer than the one we inherited. We will make announcements on the way ahead as soon as we can.

I regret that information on the number of asylum applicants granted permission to work is not available.

Firearms Compensation

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many claims under the firearms compensation scheme currently remain outstanding under each of options A, B and C; and by what dates he expects all claims under each option to be settled. [44470]

Mr. Michael: Payments under Options A and B of the large calibre handgun compensation scheme and the parallel ex gratia scheme for small calibre pistols were completed by the end of May, as planned. The only exceptions are around 300 cases involving firearms dealers and individual owners where payment cannot be finalised because of outstanding queries over the eligibility of items claimed for, difficulties in obtaining the required details to enable payment to be made, or where the claimant has declined to complete the required Declaration on the claim form. Payment on these remaining claims will completed as soon as the necessary information and signatures are provided.

The Firearms Compensation Section (FCS) is now devoting the bulk of its resources to processing the Option C claims, which are fewer in number but more complicated. There are around 24,500 Option C claims to be processed, the great majority of which are mixed claims on which payments have been made already under Option A or B. The rate of payment on these claims will increase now that we have more staff allocated to this task. In the interests of fairness, Option C claims are being dealt with in the order in which the guns were surrendered to the police, so that the claimant will not be penalised by any subsequent delay in forwarding the claim to the Home Office. The target is to complete most of these payments by the end of the year, if not all, and we will do everything that can be done to clear these claims in a shorter time if at all possible.

Around 11,000 claims were submitted during February under the statutory surrender scheme for small calibre pistols. These are being registered on the FCS computer system by data-processing staff, and substantive work will begin on them when the overall work position permits. Until the claims have been examined in detail, it is not possible to give a firm date for completion.

The FCS Information Line on 0171 271 8977 gives regularly updated details of the current processing times for all classes of claim, to enable claimants to monitor the progress of their claims.

Closed Circuit Television

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when a decision will be made on the application by Wootton Bassett Town Council for funds to install closed circuit television. [44708]

Mr. Michael: The results of round 4 of the Closed Circuit Television challenge competition will be announced shortly.

Wymott and Garth Prisons

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what initiatives he is taking to extend the prison accommodation at the HM Wymott and Garth Prison sites. [44624]

Ms Quin: The Prison Service has no immediate plans to extend prisoner accommodation at these prisons. A programme of general maintenance and building repair works continues at the prisons.

The Prison Service keeps under regular review the need to house the rising prison population. The issues taken into account when determining how to meet this demand are strategic need, timing, cost and implications for the establishment concerned.

Prisons (Illegal Substances)

Mr. Pearson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will estimate the number of visitors to prisons found to be in possession of illegal substances in the last year; and how many were subsequently charged with an offence. [44715]

Mr. George Howarth: In the 12 months ending 31 May 1998, a total of 1,071 people visiting prisons were arrested by the police in connection with possible drug-related offences.

The Prison Service does not record what action was subsequently taken by the police.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Mobile Telephones

Ms Walley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will require mobile telephones to be sold and labelled with a health warning; and if she will make a statement. [43698]

Mrs. Roche: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given by my hon. Friend the Minister for Public Health on 8 December 1997, Official Report, column 456.

The Department is aware of public concern on this subject, which is taken seriously. Advice on the health implications of exposure to electromagnetic fields from mobile telecommunications equipment is discussed with the National Radiological Protection Board (NRPB) and also with the Department of Health.

The exposure guidelines of the NRPB for fields associated with mobile telecommunications equipment are based on well-established thermal effects. NRPB's view is that mobile phones currently used in the United Kingdom comply with the recommended exposure limit. There are no plans to require mobile phones to have a health warning.

I would add that Type Approval of mobile phones is required before they can be connected to a mobile telecommunications network. This includes testing of the power output to the antenna. Mobile telecommunications equipment must also comply with the EU Directive on Electromagnetic Compatibility.

Indonesia

Ann Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if ancillary equipment in (a) standard individual export licences and (b) open individual licence categories, may be included with the delivery of Hawk aircraft to Indonesia in 1998. [44436]

Mr. Spellar: I have been asked to reply.

Ancillary equipment in standard individual export licences and open individual licence categories has been approved for supply to Indonesia in support of the sale of Hawk aircraft. The timing of delivery of any equipment is a matter for the exporter subject to the conditions of any export licence necessary.

TREASURY

Departmental Energy Use

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proportion of the Department's energy usage was from (a) renewable energy and (b) combined heating in each year since 1989–90. [44081]

Mrs. Liddell: The Treasury does not use energy (a) from a renewable source or (b) combined heat and power.

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much (a) oil, (b) gas and (c) electricity was purchased for the heating, lighting and powering of accommodation occupied by his Department within the United Kingdom in each year since 1989–90; and what was the total cost in real terms of each in each year. [44086]

Mrs. Liddell: The table shows the costs and quantity of oil, gas and electricity purchased for heating, lighting and power in Treasury accommodation since 1989–90.

Fuel	Actual expenditure (£)	Annual consumption units k Wh
1990–91
Gas	46,951	1,438,663
Oil	37,536	2,724,116
Electricity	245,470	4,423,000
Whitehall District Heating System[1]	43,272	5,751,128
1991–92
Gas	59,674	1,847,046
Oil	84,855	806,088
Electricity	230,835	4,123,618
Whitehall District Heating System[1]	45,872	5,930,656
1992–93
Gas	12,942	813,156
Oil	5,251	19,714
Electricity	242,357	3,094,580
Whitehall District Heating System[1]	48,468	6,203,602
1993–94
Gas	6,066	331,358
Oil	Nil	—
Electricity	219,911	3,555,058
Whitehall District Heating System[1]	40,143	5,977,659
1994–95
Gas	12,995	1,087,116
Oil	6,785	40,869
Electricity	218,583	3,553,202
Whitehall District Heating System[1]	47,864	5,987,000
1995–96
Gas	22,734	1,192,052
Oil	1,844	14,053
Electricity	161,086	3,474,725
Whitehall District Heating System[1]	47,535	4,596,833
1996–97
Gas	20,810	843,163
Oil	Nil	—
Electricity	215,958	3,994,845
Whitehall District Heating System[1]	194,081	5,292,210

[1] Whitehall District Heating System (WDHS) is run by Property Advisers Civil Estate (PACE) and provides heating to Government buildings in Whitehall including GOGGS.

Economic and Monetary Union

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer which body will guarantee the value of notional euro in Phase B of Stage Three of EMU from January 1999 to July 2002. [44459]

Mrs. Liddell: On 1 January 1999, the euro will become the actual and sole currency of participating member states. The old national currencies of these member states will continue only as denominations of the euro. The conversion rates between these currencies and the euro will be legally fixed. The European Central Bank will become responsible for euro monetary policy from this date onward.

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what profits he estimates will derive to the United Kingdom from seigniorage if the United Kingdom participates in Stage Three of Economic and Monetary Union. [44456]

Mrs. Liddell: If the UK participated in Economic and Monetary Union, its share of the monetary income accruing to the national central banks would depend on a number of factors, including the number of other Member States in EMU, the level of note issue by the European Central Bank, and the level of ECB reserve requirements. It is impossible to estimate with any degree of certainty now the size of the UK's allocation if and when it joined the single currency.

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how profits of seigniorage on euro notes and coins will be distributed among participants. [44453]

Mrs. Liddell: The method for allocating monetary income between national central banks in Stage Three of EMU is described in the Statute of the ESCB. The sum of monetary income accruing to the national central banks in the performance of the ESCB's monetary policy function will be allocated in proportion to each central bank's paid-up share in the capital of the ECB. National central banks' contributions to the capital of the ECB will be based on Member States' relative population and GDP.

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent changes have been made to the remit of the European Union Monetary Committee; and what is its role in relation to (a) the EMI and (b) the ECB. [44455]

Mrs. Liddell: The remit of the Monetary Committee continues to be as set out in Article 109c(1) of the Treaty. In accordance with Article 109c(2) of the Treaty, the Monetary Committee will be replaced by an Economic and Financial Committee at the start of Stage Three of EMU. The ECB shall appoint two members of the Economic and Financial Committee. The Monetary Committee and the Economic and Financial Committee contribute to the preparation of the work of the Council, including with respect to matters involving the EMI and the ECB.

Population Statistics

Ms Walley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what are the estimated or projected numbers of people aged (a) 65 years or over, (b) 75 years or over and (c) 85 years or over in (i) North Staffordshire Health Authority area (ii) the West Midlands and (iii) the United Kingdom for (1) 1996, (2) 2001 and (3) 2006; and in each case what the figures are as a percentage of the total population. [44327]

Mrs. Liddell: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Chief Executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Tim Holt to Ms Joan Walley, dated 8 June 1998:

As Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS), I have been asked to reply to your parliamentary question asking for the estimated or projected numbers of people aged (a) 65 years or over, (b) 75 years or over, (c) 85 years or over in North Staffordshire Health Authority area, the West Midlands and the United Kingdom for (1) 1996, (2) 2001 and (3) 2006 and in each case, what the figures are as a percentage of the total population.

The table provides the information requested.

Resident population of North Staffordshire Health Authority, West Midlands Health area and the UK in 1996, 2001 and 2006

	All ages (thousands)	Age 65 and over (thousands)	Age 75 and over (thousands)	Age 85 and over (thousands)	Percentage aged 65 and over of all persons	Percentage aged 75 and over of all persons	Percentage aged 85 and over of all persons
North Staffordshire Health Authority
1996	471.2	76.1	32.5	7.8	16.2	6.9	1.7
2001	484.9	74.0	34.1	8.3	15.3	7.0	1.7
2006	492.6	73.7	34.7	9.0	15.0	7.1	1.8
West Midlands Health area
1996	5,316.6	828.1	363.0	86.5	15.6	6.8	1.6
2001	5,375.0	831.6	390.9	100.7	15.5	7.3	1.9
2006	5,417.2	849.4	406.4	111.4	15.7	7.5	2.1
United Kingdom
1996	58,801.5	9,250.8	4,192.5	1,067.2	15.7	7.1	1.8
2001	59,618.1	9,298.7	4,405.6	1,162.5	15.6	7.4	1.9
2006	60,286.6	9,467.4	4,504.1	1,208.4	15.7	7.5	2.0

Sources:
Population Estimates Unit, ONS
Migration & Subnational Population Projections Unit, ONS
Government Actuary's Department

Jersey

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what are the fiscal and monetary responsibilities of (a) the Government and (b) the Bank of England in relation to the financial institutions and affairs of Jersey; to what extent the liabilities of the Jersey financial institutions are underwritten by each; and if he will make a statement. [43922]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 3 June 1998]: The responsibilities of the UK Government in relation to Jersey and the other Crown Dependencies were last set out in the Kilbrandon report in 1973. In essence, the Government are responsible for Jersey's external relations and defence, and the Crown has ultimate responsibility for the good governance of the Bailiwick.

Although Jersey is in monetary union with the UK, neither the Government nor the Bank of England have responsibility for the fiscal or monetary affairs of the Bailiwick, nor for underwriting the liabilities of Jersey's financial institutions.

Thyroid Cancers

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many incidents of thyroid cancer in young people under the age of 18 years there were in each health authority for each of the last 10 years for which figures are available. [44319]

Mrs. Liddell: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Chief Executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Nigel Jones, dated June 1998:

As Director of the Office for National Statistics, I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary question on thyroid cancer.

The number of newly diagnosed cases in persons aged under 18 by regional health authority in England and Wales, 1982–91 (the latest ten year for which data are available), are shown in the following table.

New cases of thyroid cancer (International Classification of Diseases, 9th Revision, ICD9, 193) in children aged under 18, diagnosed in 1982–91, by regional health authority of residence, England and Wales

	1982	1983	1984	1985	1986	1987	1988	1989	1990	1991
Northern	0	0	0	0	1	2	0	0	1	2
Yorkshire	0	0	4	0	1	1	0	0	4	1
Trent	2	3	0	0	1	1	2	3	0	0
E. Anglian	0	2	0	0	0	0	0	0	1	0
N.W. Thames	0	2	1	1	0	1	1	2	0	1
N.E. Thames	0	0	0	0	2	2	1	0	1	2
S.E. Thames	2	2	1	1	2	1	1	2	1	1
S.W. Thames	0	0	1	0	1	1	0	0	0	0
Wessex	3	2	2	1	2	1	4	1	0	0
Oxford	0	1	1	0	1	3	0	0	1	0
S. Western	0	0	0	0	2	0	1	1	1	2
W. Midlands	2	2	2	2	1	1	0	0	1	0
Mersey	0	2	1	0	1	0	0	0	0	0
N. Western	2	0	1	2	0	0	2	0	0	0
Wales	0	1	0	4	2	0	3	1	1	0
England and Wales	11	17	14	11	17	14	15	10	12	9

Interest Rates

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 5 May 1998, Official Report, column 454, if he will list the real interest rates in (a) the United Kingdom, (b) the USA, (c) Germany and (d) Japan, defined as actual interest rates less the rate of inflation for these countries. [43443]

Mrs. Liddell: These approximate measures can be readily calculated using actual interest rates and rates of inflation, both of which are listed for the named countries in OECD Main Economic Indicators and in other publications available in the House of Commons library.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Sierra Leone

Sir Alastair Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what was the level of United Kingdom bilateral aid for basic social services in Sierra Leone (a) in the year before and (b) in the period since the 1997 coup d'état; and what efforts her Department made to ensure that these services were maintained for particularly vulnerable groups following the coup. [44172]

Clare Short: (a) In financial year 1996–97 the level of UK bilateral aid for basic social services (water and sanitation, education, health and welfare, and humanitarian aid) in Sierra Leone was £2.87 million.

(b) Since the military coup on 25 May 1997, we provided £3.24m to support the humanitarian work of the International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC), NGO programmes in neighbouring countries for Sierra Leonean refugees, and NGO relief and development work restarted since the return of President Kabbah's Government.

Following the coup, DFID provided funds to ICRC and contributed to EU humanitarian programmes. We contributed funds for the UN Humanitarian Aid Co-ordination Unit (HACU) which co-ordinated humanitarian activities of the UN agencies and NGOs working in Sierra Leone and neighbouring countries. HACU produced a code of conduct to ensure that humanitarian aid reached targeted groups. DFID officials also joined the EU humanitarian assessment mission to Conakry, Guinea, in September 1997.

Sir Alastair Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what British Government co-funded NGO projects were cancelled or postponed as a result of the decision to suspend aid to Sierra Leone following the 1997 coup d'état. [44173]

Clare Short: The following projects were suspended when aid to Sierra Leone was discontinued following the 1997 Coup:

Action Aid—Water and Sanitation project

Cause Canada—Water and Sanitation project

Primary Health Care—Medical Research Centre, Bo

Christian Children's Fund—Children affected by war/ Community based support

Concern Universal—Assistance to Children Affected by War Programme.

Sir Alastair Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what resources her Department provided to the Kabbah Government in exile; and for what purposes. [44199]

Clare Short: The Department for International Development (DFID) provided £240,000 to President Kabbah's government in exile. £50,000 of this was to enable them to pursue activities to promote the return of the democratically elected government, and £190,000 for a workshop and seminar in the United Kingdom in October 1997 to plan for the restoration of government after their return.

European Development Assistance

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will list the names and positions of her Department's officials who are currently working in the external development Directorate-Generals of the EC. [44314]

Clare Short: My Department currently has 10 staff on secondment to the external development directorates of the EC.

Name	Directorate-General	Specialism
Guy Mustard	DGIA	Administrator
Matthew Wyatt	DGIA	Administrator
David Daniels	DGIB	Health
Andrew Hall	DGIB	Economist
Alex Kremer	DGIB	Economist
Andy Roby	DGIB	Environment—(Forestry)
Sean Conlin	DGVIII	Social Development
Michael Parkes	DGVIII	Urban Development
John Roberts	DGVIII	Economist
Digby Swift	DGVIII	Education

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps the United Kingdom Government are taking to increase access to information in Europe and recipient countries on projects funded by the European Commission's development assistance programme. [44311]

Clare Short: The UK Government are committed to increasing transparency in EU decision making, including the activities of the EU institutions. During our Presidency, I have taken part in a debate at the European Parliament on development assistance and given evidence on two occasions to its Development Committee. The UK has supported the Commission's proposals on Information and Communication programmes for TACIS and Phare and the Department for Trade and Industry maintains a database of projects being funded by major multilateral agencies, including the EC.

Some progress has been made on our initiatives to improve openness in the EU. We have also begun preparatory work with the European Commission and European Parliament on implementing the openness provisions in the Amsterdam Treaty. These provisions will cover all areas of EU activity, including development assistance programmes.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what plans she has to increase the number of her Department's officials working in the external development Directorate-Generals of the EC. [44315]

Clare Short: My officials frequently talk to the Commission in Brussels and in delegations about the opportunities for placing secondees in the external development Directorate-Generals.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on the meeting of the European development ministers on 18 May. [44313]

Clare Short: I refer the hon. Member to my answer to my hon. Friend the Member for Burton (Mrs. Dean) of 3 June 1998, Official Report, column 236.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development (1) what is Government policy in respect of environmental impact assessments of projects within the European Commission's aid programme; [44308]

(2) what is the Government's policy on the integration of environmental and social considerations into European Commission-funded infrastructure development projects. [44306]

Clare Short: As stated in the White Paper Eliminating World Poverty: a Challenge for the 21st Century, this Government are committed to encouraging all multilateral developments institutions—including the European Commission—to integrate environmental and social sustainability into their projects and devote more attention to evaluating and monitoring their activities. DFID worked closely with the European Commission to develop procedural guidelines for this purpose. However, continuing efforts are required to ensure the Commission's guidance is always fully reflected in the design and implementation of projects and programmes. My Department continues to work with the Commission to seek to improve effectiveness in this area.

I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Under-Secretary to one of his previous questions on 11 May 1998, Official Report, column 24, for details of the ways my Department has been doing this.

Cameroon

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what representations her Department has made to the European Commission regarding the implementation of an Environmental Impact Assessment of the Commission's road rehabilitation programme in Cameroon. [44307]

Clare Short: My Department made representations to the European Commission regarding implementation of an Environmental Impact Assessment when notification of the new road rehabilitation programme was received last year. The EC has assured us that appropriate environmental protection measures will be clearly spelt out in the project document. The project will be considered towards the end of this year by the European Development Fund Committee on which my Department sits.

Lomé Convention

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development (1) if she will place in the Library records of decisions and approvals of Government disbursements to the EDF; [44310]

(2) if she will list with dates the amounts of the United Kingdom's disbursements to the EDF under the current Lomé Convention; and when the next disbursements are due to be called from the Commission. [44309]

Clare Short: Disbursements against the Lomé Convention began under the Seventh European Development (EDF) in 1994. The Commission calls down funds from Member States as it needs them. There are usually four quarterly payments each year, normally in January, April, July and October. The table sets out the payments for each quarter under the seventh EDF.

Year	Quarter	Payment (£)
1994	Third	82,902,220
	Fourth	70,505,090
1995	First	25,759,245
	Second	53,782,341
	Third	82,158,009
	Fourth	60,110,159
1996	Second	27,013,201
	Third	39,493,366
	Fourth	58,673,835
1997	First	11,768,512
	Second	40,895,789
	Third	44,363,144
	Fourth	39,042,589
1998	First	21,603,431
	Second	31,848,249

The next disbursement is expected in July.

Stabex Projects

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development, (1) pursuant to her answer of 5 May 1998, Official Report, column 276, on Stabex, what steps she has taken to press for the reform or abolition of the Stabex programme; [44317]

(2) what mechanisms exist to ensure that the European Commission takes account of her Department's views on environmental and social impact in Stabex funding proposals; [44316]

(3) if she will place in the Library records of the Government's recommendations to the European Commission on Stabex funding proposals. [44312]

Clare Short: The UK clearly set out its position on Stabex for the Commission and other Member States in the Government's paper on the future of Lomé in October 1997. I have placed a copy of this paper in the Library. There has been strong opposition to the abolition of Stabex from some Member States in subsequent discussions on the EU's negotiating mandate for the successor to the Lomé Convention. However, the UK has been negotiating vigorously to reform this instrument, most recently at the Development Council on 18 May which my hon. Friend the Under-Secretary of State and I attended.

I refer the hon. Member to my answer to him of 5 May 1998, Official Report, column 276, on the procedures my Department uses to assess Stabex projects. There are no formal mechanisms under the Lomé Convention to ensure the UK's views are taken account of by the Commission. Information on the views my Department has fed to the Commission on Stabex proposals could be gathered only at disproportionate cost.

Sudan

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what financial aid has been given by Her Majesty's Government to alleviate child hunger in Southern Sudan; and what estimate she has made of the annual cost of feeding one child for a year. [44709]

Mr. Foulkes: The British Government allocated £6.2 million for the crisis in Southern Sudan during May bringing our overall assistance to Sudan since February to £10.2 million. This assistance is in support of vulnerable groups and families, including children. There is no useful estimate of the costs of feeding one child for a year since the figure can vary a great deal depending on the circumstances.

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what plans she has to increase aid from her Department to help people in the Sudan suffering from famine; and if she will make a statement. [44335]

Clare Short: Since 1991, my Department has provided £145 million in humanitarian assistance for Sudan.

Since my statement to the House on 29 April 1998, Official Report, columns 331–38, the Government of Sudan have been gradually improving access to the worst affected areas, particularly in Bahr El Ghazal. I approved further British contributions during May totalling £6.23 million which brings our overall assistance to Sudan since February to £10.23 million. I have made it clear since the beginning of the current emergency that we alongside other governments will provide the funding needed for the Sudanese emergency and that the problem is one of access rather than resources. The EU General Affairs Council on 25 May again called for a ceasefire for humanitarian purposes, which remains the most urgent requirement. This is why we have been pressing for a ceasefire for humanitarian purposes, which remains the most important requirement in order to provide help to the people in need.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

New Deal (Thanet)

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) how many eligible participants have to date registered interest in the New Deal within the Thanet travel-to-work area; [44472]

(2) how many eligible participants are currently undergoing Gateway preparation for the New Deal within the Thanet travel-to-work area to date; [44473]

(3) how many eligible participants have within the Thanet travel-to-work area currently obtained New Deal placements with (a) the private and (b) the public sector. [44474]

Mr. Andrew Smith: New Deal was launched nationally on 6 April and it is of course early days for this ambitious undertaking. I am encouraged by the start in the Canterbury Unit of Delivery which includes the Thanet travel-to-work area. 223 young people have attended their initial New Deal interview and of these 115 have requested early entry. 62 clients are currently participating in the Gateway process and 26 have found work in the Private Sector.

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many (a) private and (b) public sector employers have expressed interest within the Thanet travel-to-work area in offering New Deal placements; and if he will list them. [44475]

Mr. Andrew Smith: Within the Employment Service Canterbury District, which forms the major part of the Thanet travel-to-work area, 71 employers have so far signed formal agreements to enable them to offer jobs under the New Deal employer option to young unemployed people.

Of these, 68 employers are from the private sector and three are from the public sector. I have asked the local Employment Service District Manager to supply the list of employers.

Education and Social Affairs Council

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on the Education and Social Affairs Council of Ministers meeting on 4 June. [43020]

Mr. Andrew Smith: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, my hon. Friend the Minister of State, Department of Trade and Industry and I chaired the joint Council of Education and Social Affairs Ministers on 3–4 June. My hon. Friend the Scottish Office Minister of State for Education and Industry and my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Wales also attended.

The Council discussed National Employment Action Plans which all Member States have provided in accordance with the process agreed at last November's Luxembourg 'Jobs Summit', and completed its assessment of the Plans in preparation for the European Council at Cardiff on 15–16 June.

The Council reached political agreement on a Regulation extending Regulation 1408/71 (social security for migrant workers) to civil servants in special schemes and adopted a package of annual amendments to Regulations 1408/71 and 574/72. The Council also reached political agreement on a Directive safeguarding the supplementary (i.e. occupational and private) pension rights of migrant workers, subject to the lifting of a Danish Parliamentary scrutiny reserve and a Portuguese linguistic reserve.

The Council adopted a Recommendation on a Parking Card for people with disabilities.

The Council reached political agreement on the text of a common position on the promotion of European pathways for work-linked training (Europass).

The Council reached a common position on a Directive amending the Acquired Rights Directive, subject to the lifting of a German Parliamentary scrutiny reserve. The Council made further progress on the employee involvement aspects of the proposed European Company Statute.

The Council heard presentations from the Presidency on a pilot project to promote teacher mobility across the EU and from the Commission on its proposals for a new generation of programmes on education, training and youth. A copy of the Council minutes will be placed in the Library when it becomes available. The Commission also made presentations on its Communication on developing the social dialogue at Community level; its Communications on a new Social Action Programme (1998–2000); and on the proposed ILO Declaration on Fundamental Rights.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Correspondence

Mr. Cran: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the system used in his Department to monitor correspondence from hon. Members; and what plans he has to improve it. [43004]

Dr. John Cunningham [holding answer 21 May 1998]: Letters from hon. Members and Peers are recorded on a computerised database. Correspondence is carefully monitored to ensure letters are dealt with as soon as possible after receipt.

Abattoirs

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will issue guidance as to arrangements for the reporting of acts of intimidation by abattoir employers and owners against Meat Hygiene Service staff and veterinarians. [43376]

Mr. Rooker: Meat Hygiene Service (MHS) operational staff (Official Veterinary Surgeons, Meat Hygiene Inspectors and Meat Technicians) have been instructed to inform their Senior Managers immediately of any instances of intimidation which prevent them from carrying out their duties to protect public health. A confidential helpline has been set up to assist any MHS employee who feels intimidated or subject to threatening behaviour from plant operators or employees.

Information on prosecutions relating to instances of intimidation, obstruction and aggression against MHS staff is published in the Meat Hygiene Enforcement Report, a copy of which is placed in the Library of the House each month.

All successful prosecutions relating to acts against MHS staff will be published immediately via a separate Press Notice.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many slaughterhouses there are in Great Britain; and how many of these slaughter (a) poultry, (b) pigs, (c) cattle and (d) horses. [44236]

Mr. Rooker: At 1 May, there were 607 slaughterhouses in Great Britain licensed to produce meat for sale for human consumption. Of these, 153 were licensed to slaughter poultry, 310 pigs, 399 cattle and 12 horses. Licences are generally not required for slaughterhouses with an annual production of less than 10,000 birds for sale for human consumption.

Suffolk Farmers (Subsidy)

Mr. Blizzard: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list, by crop, the total amount of subsidy paid to farmers in Suffolk for each of the past five years. [44292]

Mr. Rooker: The following table gives information for payments to farmers in Suffolk under the Arable Area Payments Scheme (AAPS).

£

	1993	1994	1995	1996	1997
Simplified Scheme[1]	857,573	962,047	1,257,807	1,174,990	1,064,093
Main Scheme:
Cereals	17,558,515	24,991,146	36,871,045	38,482,551	37,831,102
Oilseeds	4,319,060	4,272,686	4,818,064	4,834,745	5,999,961
Proteins	6,026,268	4,244,039	3,771,947	3,269,814	3,202,411
Linseed	—[2]	1,384,788	1,376,113	1,052,701	1,803,395
Set-aside	6,864,098	9,367,276	9,281,101	7,343,384	4,152,753

[1] All eligible crops under the Simplified Scheme are paid at the cereals rate

[2] In 1993 linseed growers received subsidy under the linseed subsidy scheme but this cannot be broken down by county

Subsidy was also paid on hemp as follows:

Year	£
1993	7,090
1994	79,241
1995	176,484
1996	125,638
1997	234,432

In addition farmers in Suffolk will have benefited indirectly from a number of other EU support measures but this cannot be quantified on a county basis.

Knackers

Mr. Levitt: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what measures he proposes to take to encourage farmers to make better use of the knackers' trade. [44358]

Mr. Rooker: It is for the livestock industry to take responsibility for disposing of its waste in a safe and sustainable manner. Nevertheless, the Department will continue to urge the industry to use knackers' yards and hunt kennels to dispose of fallen stock wherever possible. Officials will also continue to liaise with representatives of the knacker and farming industries over future arrangements for the disposal of fallen stock.

EU Support Payments

Dr. Cable: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the impact of the euro on (a) EU support payments, (b) farm incomes and (c) United Kingdom agricultural exports. [44143]

Mr. Rooker: The European Commission is expected to make proposals during June on the future of the EU agrimonetary arrangements. A detailed examination of the impact of the Euro on UK agriculture will need to be made in the light of those proposals.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to give United Kingdom farmers the choice of receiving EU support payments in sterling or euros; what assessment he has made of the impact of such a system; and if he will make a statement. [44144]

Mr. Rooker: We intend to examine this question in the light of the proposals on the future of the EU agrimonetary system which we expect from the European Commission in June.

Novel Foods

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on Article 8 of the Novel Foods Regulations (258/97/EC), with particular reference to the substantial equivalence criteria; and what plans he has to review those criteria. [44291]

Mr. Rooker: The labelling rules in the Novel Foods and Novel Food Ingredients Regulation (258/97) apply to all foods and food ingredients covered by the regulation including those considered under the simplified criteria on the grounds of substantial equivalence. There are no plans to review this regulation at this time. However, last month, detailed rules for labelling of genetically modified (GM) soya and maize ingredients were agreed which require all foods to be labelled where any material arising from the genetic modification process is present. These rules are expected to set a precedent for the way all future GM foods will be required to be labelled in Europe.

Milk Prices

Mr. Hurst: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of reasons for the decrease in milk prices over the last year; and if he will make a statement. [44122]

Mr. Rooker: In March this year, milk producers received an average of about 19.7p per litre, which was nearly 4p lower than for the same period in 1997. The main factor was probably the strength of sterling and the related revaluations of the green pound. More generally, at the request of the Director General of Fair Trading, the Monopolies and Mergers Commission is currently investigating the supply of raw milk in Great Britain. It is due to report to the President of the Board of Trade in October.

Canadian Pedigree Friesians

Mr. Letwin: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if meat from Canadian pedigree Friesians of over 30 months old slaughtered in the United Kingdom is permitted to be sold in the United Kingdom. [44717]

Mr. Rooker: No. The Fresh Meat (Beef Controls) (No 2) Regulations 1996, as amended, prohibit the sale for human consumption of any meat from a bovine animal over 30 months of age at the time of slaughter, whether in Great Britain or elsewhere, unless it is from a herd registered under the Beef Assurance Scheme or from one of the 14 countries exempted under the Regulations.

Brandy Butter

Mr. Letwin: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if it is permitted to describe brandy, rum and whisky butters offered for retail sale as butter if they contain less then 34 per cent. milk fat; and if he will make a statement. [44712]

Mr. Rooker: From April 1999, only alcoholic butters (including brandy, rum and whisky butters) containing a minimum of 34 per cent. milk fat will be permitted to be described as such. This results from the adoption of Commission Regulation (EC) No. 623/98, which further amends Commission Regulation (EC) No. 577/97 relating to standards for spreadable fats. During the negotiations in Brussels, the UK did not support this particular rule which arbitrarily limits the milkfat content of products described using the term "butter".

Officials are working with the relevant companies to find ways to minimise the problems for UK manufacturers.

Hemp

Mr. Letwin: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the advantages of hemp as a source for paper; and if it is his policy to promote the growing of hemp for that purpose. [44718]

Mr. Rooker: Hemp is a useful alternative crop, producing renewable raw material for a variety of uses including paper. The paper and hemp industries are best placed to examine and develop the market for hemp as a constituent of paper.

Subsidies

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the total sum spent on subsidies for the sale of food, fruit and vegetables from the EU in the most recent annual period for which figures are available. [44325]

Mr. Rooker: The total sum spent on directly subsidising sales of fruit and vegetables in 1997 through export refunds was 67 mecu (£49m at an average 1997 exchange rate of £1 = 1.3758 ecu). In addition, 6,214 mecu (£4,516m) was spent on directly subsidising the sale of other CAP commodities through export refunds and aid under subsidised food programmes, although it is not possible to determine what proportion of export sales were for human consumption.

Food Destruction Costs

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the total sum spent by the EU on the destruction of food, fruit and vegetables in the most recent annual period for which figures are available. [44326]

Mr. Rooker: The total sum spent on withdrawals of fruit and vegetables from the market in 1997 was 293 mecu (£213m at an average 1997 exchange rate of £1 = 1.3758 ecu). Statistics on the destination of produce withdrawn in 1997 are not available, but an average 62 per cent. of withdrawn fruit and vegetables was destroyed between the 1989/90 and 1993/94 marketing years. In addition, £1.5m was spent on the disposal of 6,000 tonnes of intervention beef in 1997. This beef was purchased and stored before the restrictions on beef from animals over thirty months old were introduced in March 1996.

Livestock Support

Mr. Paice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will give the levels of (a) suckler cow, (b) ewe premium and (c) HLCA payments for beef and sheep per animal in cash prices and at 1997 prices for each of the last five years and his proposals for 1998–99. [23484]

Mr. Rooker [pursuant to his reply, 19 January 1998, c. 450]: The information requested is set out in the following table. The proposed rates for 1998–1999 are not yet available.

Payment rates (£ per head)—Sheep Annual Premium Scheme, Suckler Cow Premium Scheme, Hill Livestock Compensatory Allowances

	Cash prices	1997 prices
Sheep annual premium:
Including LFA supplement
1993	24.41	27.32
1994	22.21	24.28
1995	26.95	28.47
1996	19.04	19.64
1997	n/a	n/a
Excluding LFA supplement
1993	19.25	21.55
1994	16.96	18.54
1995	21.26	22.46
1996	13.66	14.09
1997	n/a	n/a
Suckler cow premium:
Including extensification premia
1993	93.90	105.12
1994	115.12	125.83
1995	143.04	151.10
1996	155.15	160.03
1997	[1]159.48	[1]159.48
1997	[2]146.52	[2]146.52

Payment rates (£ per head)—Sheep Annual Premium Scheme, Suckler Cow Premium Scheme, Hill Livestock Compensatory Allowances

	Cash prices	1997 prices
Excluding extensification premia
1993	65.73	73.58
1994	87.49	95.63
1995	114.43	120.88
1996	124.12	128.02
1997	117.36	117.36
Hill livestock compensatory allowances:
SDA beef cow
1993	63.30	70.86
1994	47.50	51.92
1995	47.50	50.18
1996	47.50	48.99
1997	[3]97.50	97.50
DA beef cow
1993	31.65	35.43
1994	23.75	25.96
1995	23.75	25.09
1996	23.75	24.50
1997	[4]69.75	69.75
SDA high rate ewe
1993	6.50	7.28
1994	5.75	6.28
1995	5.75	6.07
1996	5.75	5.93
1997	5.75	5.75
SDA lower rate ewe
1993	3.60	4.03
1994	3.00	3.28
1995	3.00	3.17
1996	3.00	3.09
1997	3.00	3.00
DA ewe rate
1993	2.86	3.20
1994	2.44	2.67
1995	2.44	2.58
1996	2.65	2.73
1997	2.65	2.65

[1] Rate less than 1 livestock unit per hectare
[2] Rate greater than 1 livestock unit and less 1.4 livestock units per hectare
[3] Includes Beef special aid of £50.00
[4] Includes Beef special aid of £46.00
LFA = Less Favoured Area
SDA = Severely Disadvantaged Area
DA = Disadvantaged Area
Final Sheep Annual Premium rate for 1997 not yet fixed

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Sierra Leone

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Norwich, South (Mr. Clarke), of 19 May 1998, Official Report, column 362, if the briefings supplied to ministers on Sierra Leone contained information pertaining to the five intelligence reports on the supply of military equipment to Sierra Leone. [44036]

Mr. Robin Cook: I refer to my statement in the House during the debate on 18 May 1998, Official Report, columns 604–11, in which I announced the investigation by Sir Thomas Legg KCB QC into allegations about the Government involvement with the supply of arms to Sierra Leone by UK citizens and firms, and said that the Terms of Reference would be placed in the Library of the House. I intend to publish the report of the investigation.

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if his Department's officials in Canada reported to his Department in London the allegations in the Toronto Globe and Mail of 31 July 1997 referred to by the hon. and learned Member for North-East Fife (Mr. Campbell) on 18 May 1998, Official Report, column 613. [43617]

Mr. Robin Cook [holding answer 2 June 1998]: The High Commission in Ottawa faxed the press article in question to the FCO under a letter summarising its substance in early August. There was no UN arms embargo on Sierra Leone at the time, nor did the article specify the possible supply of arms to that country.

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which (a) Ministers and (b) parliamentary private secretaries in his Department have spoken to the Chairman of the Foreign Affairs Committee on matters relating to the Committee's First Special report of Session 1997–98 (HC 760), Sierra Leone: Exchange of Correspondence with the Foreign Secretary. [44320]

Mr. Robin Cook [holding answer 5 June 1998]: I refer to the written answer given by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister today, Official Report, column 425. I met the Chairman of the Committee on 1 June. Among other issues, we discussed the Committee's request for the release of telegrams relating to Sierra Leone. I wrote to the Chairman of the Committee on this subject later the same day.

Schools Information (European Union)

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if the information provided by the Government to schools on (a) the EU and (b) the euro, seeks to set out both the costs and the benefits of each. [43790]

Mr. Doug Henderson: We do not systematically provide schools with information about the EU or euro, although there are a number of Government publications which individual schools can request and all schools received a pack which included information about our EU Presidency at the start of this year. In general, literature produced by Government departments about the EU takes a factual approach, explaining particular policies and the UK's views rather than weighing up arguments for and against EU action. But the Treasury booklet "The Pros and Cons of EMU" sets out the main potential costs and benefits of the euro.

Cyprus

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the current situation in Cyprus and the initiatives being taken by his Department to resolve the conflicts on that island. [43743]

Mr. Doug Henderson: We continue to lend our full support to the United Nations Secretary-General's search for a settlement to the Cyprus problem, including through regular contacts with the parties and other members of the international community involved in working to end the tragic division of the island of Cyprus.

Colombia

Mr. Fitzpatrick: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what representations he has made to the Colombian Government regarding the assassination of the human rights lawyer, Eduardo Umana Mendoza, on 18 April 1998; [44149]

(2) what representations he has made to the Colombian Government regarding the assassination of the former leader of the Communist Party, Maria Arrango Fonnegra, on 16 April. [44150]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: The British Ambassador, representing the EU presidency, made representations to the Colombian Government on 29 April unreservedly condemning the murders of the human rights defenders Eduardo Umana and Maria Arrango.

Mr. Fitzpatrick: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action the United Kingdom is taking to protect human rights workers in Colombia. [44151]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: At a political level, we raise the issue of the safety of human rights workers with the Colombian Government whenever the opportunity arises. At a practical level, officials at the British Embassy in Bogota have a regular dialogue with human rights NGOs, and the Ambassador and his Deputy carry out high-profile visits to areas of conflict to demonstrate their support for the work of human rights workers. These visits, in particular, are highly valued by NGOs. The UK and EU partners are also pressing the Colombian Government to make early and practical use of the US$1.2 million they have earmarked for the protection of human rights workers.

Mr. Fitzpatrick: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports he has received on the links between sections of the Colombian Armed Forces and the paramilitary groups who are responsible for human rights violations in Colombia. [44148]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: We have received numerous reports of collaboration between Colombian paramilitary groups and certain units of the Armed forces at local level. The Colombian Government have recently announced the disbanding of a particular Army Unit thought to have been involved in such collaboration.

Human Rights

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list those countries which are currently party to the Lomé convention which his Department has assessed as failing in human rights terms. [44228]

Mr. Doug Henderson: No such assessment has been made. But the Government attach great importance to the human rights provisions of the Lomé Convention. We have been working during the UK Presidency to agree an internal procedure allowing the EU to implement the human rights suspension clause introduced by the Mid Term Review of the fourth Lomé Convention. We hope this procedure will come into force in the autumn.

Bulgaria

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assistance he is giving to Bulgaria to aid its preparations for eventual membership of the European Union. [44381]

Mr. Doug Henderson: The Luxembourg European Council last December agreed to enhance the pre-accession strategy for the Central European EU applicants to help them prepare for membership. The principal new element of this strategy are the Accession Partnerships, which identify the main priority areas for each candidate where progress is necessary to meet the Copenhagen Criteria for membership. The UK Presidency implemented the remit from Luxembourg to conclude the Accession Partnerships by the end of March.

The EU's Phare programme will target the priorities identified in the Accession Partnerships. Between 1995 and 1999, Phare spending on Bulgaria will be 415 mecu. (UK share approximately £49 million). In addition, the Department for International Development's Know How Fund has provided approximately £15 million of assistance to Bulgaria since 1991. This has been designed to help the transition to democratic pluralism and a market economy, in particular, by supporting the strengthening of civil society and promoting social inclusiveness, paying particular attention to the needs of vulnerable groups.

Mercenaries

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans the Government have to sign the UN convention against the recruitment, use, financing and training of mercenaries; and if he will make a statement. [44560]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: We have no plans at present to sign the UN Convention against the Recruitment, Use, Financing and Training of Mercenaries. We have doubts concerning its legal enforceability in the UK. We are looking at options for national domestic regulation of private military companies.

Nigeria

Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on United Kingdom policy on the supply of arms to Nigeria. [44617]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: The EU agreed a Common Position on Nigeria on 20 November 1995 which includes a full-scope arms embargo. The UK interprets the embargo to include all goods and technology on the Military List (part III of Schedule 1 of the Export of Goods (Control) Order 1994). The Government enforce the embargo rigorously.

Algeria

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many visitor's visas have been granted to Algerian citizens in each of the last five years. [44463]

Mr. Fatchett: Information is held centrally on the visas issued by each entry clearance issuing Post, not by nationality.

Because visit visa applications may be made at any visa issuing Post irrespective of applicant's nationality, the figures requested can be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Sudan

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to sponsor a resolution against Sudan in the UN Security Council as a result of the recent evidence of genocide in the northern area of Bahr Al Ghazal. [44829]

Mr. Fatchett: We are deeply concerned about the distressing human tragedy in the Sudan, particularly the current crisis in Bahr Al Ghazal region. On hearing of reports of killings in Northern Bahr Al Ghazal, I instructed our Embassy in Khartoum to convene a meeting of EU Ambassadors and arrange for collective EU views and comments. The Sudanese Ambassador was also called by the Foreign Office and asked for the GoS's explanation of what had taken place.

We will look at any proposals for new UNSCRs against the GoS on their merits and in light of the views of other Security Council members.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he plans to make to the Government of Sudan in respect of recent evidence of genocide in the northern area of Bahr Al Ghazal. [44828]

Mr. Fatchett: The Sudanese Ambassador was called on 29 May by a senior Foreign Office official. The official expressed our grave concern at the reports of killings in Northern Bahr Al Ghazal and asked for an explanation from the Government of Suden (GoS).

We will continue to be active in trying to find a solution to problems in the Sudan. As a next step, we have pressed for an early meeting of the Inter-Governmental Authority on Development Partnership Forum. I shall represent the UK at a meeting in The Hague on 18 June.

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with the Government of the Sudan in relation to the civil war in that country; and if he will make a statement. [44400]

Mr. Fatchett: The UK has long supported the Inter-Governmental Authority on Development (IGAD) peace process as the best chance to bring an end to the civil war in Sudan through a comprehensive negotiated settlement and this Government are active in promoting and reinvigorating the peace process.

As Presidency we issued an EU Declaration on 1 May which voiced European concerns and called upon all parties to implement an immediate cease-fire. It also urged parties to make every effort to come to a comprehensive negotiated settlement. At the UK's instigation, Sudan was discussed at the United Nations Security Council on 5 May and we have lobbied countries in the region, including the Government in Khartoum, to facilitate a negotiated settlement. In order to maintain the momentum of the peace process, we pressed for an early meeting of the IGAD Partnership Forum, as a result of which the Netherlands will host a meeting on 17/18 June in The Hague. I will represent the UK. The Sudanese Government and Opposition are well aware of our views and my officials are in touch with all parties.

Afghanistan

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Government in Afghanistan regarding human rights in that country; and if he will make a statement. [44397]

Mr. Fatchett: We do not consider there to be an effective government in Afghanistan. We remain deeply concerned by the continuing human rights abuses in Afghanistan. At the instigation of the UK, the EU adopted a Common Position on Afghanistan in January which included calls for an improvement in human rights. We regularly make representations to all the warring factions on the issue. We also urge Afghanistan's neighbours, both bilaterally and in the UN, to use their influence over the warring Afghan factions to bring the fighting and the human rights abuses to an end.

Cardiff Summit Table

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which suppliers of standard conference furniture were asked to submit quotations for the supply of a standard conference table for the European Summit in Cardiff; and what prices they quoted. [44620]

Mr. Doug Henderson: The conference table forms part of the overall event production contract for the European Council. Our event production company established from the major UK conference furniture suppliers that no table which fully met the specification was available for hire, (their researches showed that a conference table which was the right size, not the right configuration, for Cardiff City Hall could be hired, but would still cost more than half as much as having a table made which could be used in Cardiff and subsequently). They put all carpentry involved in the European Council and G8 contracts (for which they were also responsible) out to tender to three companies as a package in order to keep costs to a minimum. The company judged by our event production company to have the capacity to manage this scale of project at lowest cost was awarded the carpentry subcontract. They are making the frame of the table, but have further subcontracted the veneer top and cable management system to a specialist cabinet maker regularly used by them for this type of contract.

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs for what reasons the conference table ordered by his Department for the European Summit in Cardiff is not made of British materials. [44622]

Mr. Doug Henderson: The table for the European Council meeting in Cardiff is being made by a UK company, with a UK sub-contractor, who are responsible for sourcing materials for the table against cost and quality criteria. Of the major materials used, the steel is from the UK. The MDF is from the Republic of Ireland, on grounds of cost and availability. The oak for the veneer top comes from the USA. There are two reasons for using American rather than British oak: it is cheaper (British oak would cost 40 per cent. more); and the knotting grain pattern usually found in British oak would make a consistent veneer finish significantly more difficult to make.

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many designers were invited to submit proposals for the conference table ordered by his Department for the European Summit in Cardiff; how many different designs were costed; and if the cheapest design was selected. [44621]

Mr. Doug Henderson: The overall event production contract for the European Council (of which the conference table forms part) was awarded on the basis of an evaluation of the whole package put forward in the tender, not any single element. Six event production companies were invited to tender. Two declined to bid, and two others merged and submitted a joint bid. The three bids were evaluated against a comprehensive set of criteria, including cost and quality. Of those judged to meet an acceptable standard, the cheapest bidder was appointed.

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what was (a) the originally quoted price and (b) the price paid for the conference table ordered by his Department for the European Summit in Cardiff. [44619]

Mr. Doug Henderson: In the original tender for the overall event production contract for the European Council (which includes the conference table) in August 1997, the company which won the contract quoted £38,640 for the table. We have not yet received a bill for the table, but expect it to cost about £50,000. We understand from the event production company that the cost has risen (i) because specialist advice on the acoustics of the Assembly room in Cardiff City hall has led to a sound system being built into the table (which was not part of the original specification), and (ii) because we asked the company to have the table made in adaptable modular format so as to be usable in different rooms (the original specification applied only to City Hall in Cardiff)—this involved making two extra endpieces.

HEALTH

Emergency Contraception

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health from what sources emergency contraception can currently be obtained. [43701]

Ms Jowell: The emergency contraceptive pill is classified as a prescription-only medicine under United Kingdom and European Community legislation. It is available from most general practitioners and against a prescription from pharmacies, family planning clinics, some accident and emergency units and many genitourinary clinics.

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health for what reasons emergency contraception pills are classified as prescription-only medicines. [43700]

Ms Jowell: The emergency contraceptive pill is classified as a prescription-only medicine under criteria embodied in United Kingdom and European Community legislation. It is considered to be a product which is likely to present a direct or indirect danger to human health, even when used correctly, if used without the supervision of a doctor. There is also concern about the potential for the emergency contraceptive pill to be used incorrectly, if used without medical supervision.

Benzodiazapines

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many cases of harm caused to unborn babies from their mothers taking benzodiazapines during their pregnancy there have been in each of the last five years. [44073]

Ms Jowell: Information on the number of babies born to mothers taking benzodiazepines during pregnancy who have congenital abnormalities or experience complications is not available. The number of congenital anomalies and neonatal complications reported to the Committee on Safety of Medicines through the United Kingdom's spontaneous adverse drug reaction scheme from 1 January 1992 to 31 December 1997 suspected as associated with benzodiazepines is shown in the table.

Year	Number of suspected adverse reaction reports of congenital anomalies and neonatal complications associated with benzodiazepines
1993	5
1994	0
1995	0
1996	1
1997	5

A report of a suspected adverse drug reaction does not necessarily mean that it was caused by the drug, as factors such as underlying disease and concomitant medication may be contributory. The level of reporting of adverse drug reactions with particular drugs is influenced by the scale of drug usage, the period of time the drug has been on the market and publicity about the drug.

Private Residential and Nursing Homes

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what assessment he has made of the way in which social services departments interpret the regulations and guidance issued by his Department concerning eligibility for funding elderly people in private residential and nursing homes; [44831]

(2) what plans he has to issue further guidance to all local authority social services departments setting out their responsibilities to ensure a common approach to eligibility for funding of private residential and nursing homes for older people; [44830]

(3) what representations his Department has received concerning elderly people in private residential and nursing homes mistakenly using their own savings to pay for accommodation and treatment which should be funded by local authorities. [44832]

Mr. Boateng: The contribution to be made by people placed by local authorities in residential or nursing homes towards the costs of their care is governed by the National Assistance (Assessment of Resources) Regulations 1992 No. 2977. We update these Regulations annually and issue clarifying guidance which takes account of points raised in representations made to the Department in the course of the year about the operation of the system. The most recent guidance, Local Authority Circular b(98)8, was issued in March 1998, copies of which are available in the Library. In order to receive local authority support, a person must undergo an assessment of their care needs by the local authority to determine the type and level of care needed, and if residential and nursing home care is arranged, a financial assessment to determine their contribution towards the cost. Concerns have been expressed about the way the elderly residents' savings have been treated in residential care and nursing homes. The Community Care (Residential Accommodation) Bill, will ensure that once a person has been assessed as needing residential or nursing home care they will not have to use savings below the capital threshold set out in the Regulations to contribute towards the costs. Subject to this becoming law, we will issue guidance to accompany it.

Cannabis

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make available the research his Department has commissioned into the effects of cannabis. [44970]

Ms Jowell: Reports of literature reviews addressing the following aspects have now been submitted to the Department in their final form following peer review:

Clinical and Pharmacological Aspects—Professor Heather Ashton (Newcastle University)

Psychological and Psychiatric Aspects—Dr. Andrew Johns (Institute of Psychiatry)

Therapeutic Aspects of Cannabis and Cannabinoids—Dr. Philip Robson (Oxford University).

These reviews were commissioned by the Department but intellectual property right lies with the authors. The views are their own, and are not necessarily those of the Department of Health. Copies have been placed in the Library.

Heroin

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the recent Swiss pilot scheme for the provision of injectable heroin to addicts; and if his Department will be represented in the conference on this subject in the USA in June. [44215]

Ms Jowell: There is already experience in the United Kingdom of prescribing the diamorphine (pharmaceutical heroin) albeit only for a small number of people in drug treatment. The Swiss trials indicate that it is feasible to use diamorphine under strictly controlled conditions as part of a comprehensive social and psychological intervention. In the absence of any comparative trials it is difficult to determine the value of the diamorphine provision as distinct from other aspects of the treatment package.

We will look carefully at the outcome of the New York conference on heroin maintenance that took place on 6 June 1998 and will be represented at the United General Assembly Special Session on drugs in New York this month.

Smoking

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to tackle the current increase in smoking amongst young women. [42962]

Ms Jowell: In 1998/99, we are funding a Health Education Authority run adult smoking education campaign costing £5.5 million, which identifies five key target groups—two of these groups are adults in the 16–24 age group and women and pregnant women.

We also fund a teenage smoking campaign costing £1 million which especially focuses on teenage girls (ages 11–15). I recently launched the latest phase of the campaign, the "Respect" roadshow, which aims to reach out to teenagers in settings that are attractive to them and involve them in lively, absorbing presentations which illustrate that life without cigarettes is not only possible but desirable.

We are currently considering possible ways in which to reduce tobacco consumption and our conclusions will form part of the Tobacco Control White Paper, which will be published later this year.

Prescriptions

Mr. Letwin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if it is his policy to limit NHS prescriptions to cover a maximum period of 28 days; and if he will make a statement. [44714]

Mr. Milburn: No. Prescribers determine the period of a prescription, taking into account the clinical condition of patients and the need to minimise waste.

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to review the powers of health authorities to rule out prescribing drugs with proven clinical benefits on the grounds of cost; and if he will make a statement. [44399]

Mr. Milburn: Health authorities are responsible for using their resources to the best effect to meet the health needs of their populations. We are proposing a national, authoritative source of guidance to help the National Health Service assess the clinical and cost effectiveness of new treatments including new medicines.

Primary Care Groups

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance he is giving to health authorities on setting up primary care groups in natural communities which have populations of less than 80,000 people. [44402]

Mr. Milburn: Health Service Circular 1998/065, which we published in April, said that primary care groups will be based on natural geographical communities of people, typically covering around 100,000 population. However, we have made clear that it is the functions which a primary care group will carry out that will determine its size, shape and configuration.

Nurses and Doctors

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many (a) nurses and (b) doctors were recruited to the National Health Service in (i) 1995–96, (ii) 1996–97 and (iii) 1997–98; [44477]

(2) how many (a) nurses and (b) doctors were employed in the National Health Service in (i) 1995–96, (ii) 1996–97 and (iii) 1997–98. [44476]

Mr. Milburn: The information requested about the numbers of doctors and nurses employed by the National Health Service can be found in the Department's statistical bulletins: "Hospital, Public Health Medicine and Community Health Service Medical and Dental Staff in England: 1986 to 1996" (the latest year for which information is available) and "NHS Hospital and Community Health Services Non-medical Staff in England: 1987–1997", copies of which are available in the Library. Information about the number of nurses joining the NHS is collected by the Office of Manpower and Economics and published in the annual reports of the Review Body for Nursing staff, Midwives, Health Visitors, copies of which are in the Library. Information about the recruitment of doctors is not collected centrally.

Bed Occupancy

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many NHS beds were occupied by people who were waiting to be transferred to either nursing homes, residential care homes or their own homes in (a) 1995–96, (b) 1996–97 and (c) 1997–98. [44396]

Mr. Boateng: Information on the number of patients aged 75 and over, ready for discharge but still occupying a hospital bed, has been collected through the routine quarterly monitoring system since April 1996. Before then, it was collected at six monthly intervals.

Copies of the information available have been placed in the Library.

NHS Waiting Lists

Mr. Letwin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if it is his policy to establish targets for the average number of months waited by patients; and if he will make a statement. [44716]

Mr. Milburn: No. Our commitment over the lifetime of the Parliament is to reduce National Health Service waiting lists by 100,000 from the record level we inherited. Bringing down waiting lists—and keeping them down—will in turn bring down waiting times.

As a first step, we have achieved our target of eliminating long waits. At the end of March 1998, for the first time in the history of the National Health Service, no English resident has been waiting more than 18 months for treatment.

We are also committed to ensuring that—by the year 2000—everyone with suspected cancer will be able to see a specialist within 2 weeks of urgent practitioner referral. This guarantee will apply from April 1999 for breast cancer.

SOCIAL SECURITY

New Deal (Lone Parents)

5. Mr. Letwin: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans she has to introduce an element of compulsion into the new deal for lone parents. [42932]

Mr. Keith Bradley: The New Deal for Lone Parents is a voluntary programme. There is no question of us trying to compel lone parents to go out to work rather than looking after their children.

Pensions

6. Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will make a statement on the proportion of the population which will be covered by the extension of second-tier pensions. [42933]

Ms Harman: For the second pensions, the Government have two objectives:

All those who could be paying into a second pension do so, and;

when they do pay into a second pension they get good value for money.

Today, we are publishing a draft bill, 'Pension Sharing on Divorce' which will ensure that, on divorce, women will get a fair share of pension rights.

32. Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what recent representations he has received from organisations representing pensioners on pension levels. [42959]

Mr. Denham: The Department does not maintain information in the form requested. However, the Pensions Review has received over 2,000 written responses as part of its public consultation exercise; 652 of these responses commented on the uprating of State pensions. In addition, Ministers have personally met Pensioner Groups—such as National Pensions Convention, Public Service Pensioners Council, Pensioners Voice, British—Pensioners Trade Union Action Association, National Association of Retired Police Officers, National Federation of British Telecom and Post Office Pensioners and Southwark Pensioners Action Group—as well as groups representing the interests of pensioners—such as Age Concern and Help the Aged—to listen to their views.

As we promised in our manifesto, we have uprated the basic pension at least in line with prices. From April, the basic pension is £103.40 a week for a couple and £64.70 for a single pensioner. We have also provided additional help of £400 million to help pensioners with their fuel bills for last winter and next winter.

The Government's pensions review is examining the value of the basic State pension including the future uprating of pensions. The Review will report later this year.

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what would be the effect on current revenues from employee and employer national insurance contributions if all those currently accruing rights to a SERPS pension were to contract out into an approved personal pension. [44629]

Mr. Denham: The additional revenue forgone in terms of National Insurance rebates for the tax year 1998/99 is estimated to be £4 billion.

Pensioners (Income Support)

20. Mr. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will make a statement about the number of pensioners receiving income support. [42947]

Mr. Denham: The latest available figures show there are around 1.7 million pensioners receiving income support. In addition, there are an estimated 1 million pensioners who are entitled to Income Support but not claiming it. These figures represent in total around one in four pensioners.

A key objective of the pensions review is to ensure that pensioners should have an adequate income in retirement; that they should share fairly in rising national prosperity and that public finances should be both sustainable and affordable.

For today's pensioners, we have commissioned research to find out why so many pensioners fail to claim their Income Support entitlement, and we are running pilots in nine areas to find the best ways of getting help to them.

Mr. Peter Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many (a) pensioners living alone and (b) pensioner households aged (i) between the state retirement age and 75 years, (ii) 75 and 85 years and (iii) above 85 years are dependent on income support. [43801]

Mr. Denham: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is set out in the table.

Pensioners claiming income support, November 1997

Marital status	State retirement age to 74	75 to 84	Age Group 85 years and over
Couple	103,000	56,000	18,000
Single	436,000	444,000	250,000
All	539,000	501,000	268,000

Notes:

1. Figures for single claimants are based on claimants without a partner.
2. Pensioners are defined as men aged 65 and over, and women aged 60 and over. The age of a couple is determined by the age of the eldest partner.
3. Numbers are rounded to the nearest thousand cases.
4. Figures are based on a 5 per cent. sample, and are subject to a degree of sampling error.
5. This analysis excludes pensioners in residential care and nursing homes.

Source:

Income Support Statistics Quarterly Inquiry, November 1997.

Benefits Appeals

23. Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what steps she proposes to introduce within her Department to enable benefits appeals to be dealt with more speedily. [42950]

Mr. Keith Bradley: The Social Security Act 1998, which received Royal Assent on 21 May, paves the way for modernising the delivery of social security, including the handling of appeals. A wide range of measures—some of which we are introducing immediately—will streamline the administration of appeals and ensure appeals are dealt with more speedily. In particular, the Act enables the Secretary of State to assume responsibility for the administration of the appeals system. She will set and publish demanding targets for the administration of appeals and report on the results.

Benefits (Marriage and Illegitimacy)

24. Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what assessment her Department has made of the likely impact on marriage and illegitimacy of her proposed changes in the benefit system. [42951]

Mr. Field: The social implications of all proposed benefit changes are considered carefully. We believe that the family remains the fundamental building block of society and the new welfare system will offer support to families on the basis of the needs of children rather than on family structure or marital status. The Budget announcements of increases to benefits for children, the Childcare Tax Credit and the Working Families Tax Credit are clear evidence of our commitment to supporting families with children.

Pension Schemes

26. Mr. Flight: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when the new guidelines for the calculation of the minimum funding requirement for pension schemes will be published. [42953]

Mr. Denham: The actuarial profession's proposals for a change to the valuation method have been agreed, and their guidance note is being revised. There is an ongoing review of the minimum funding requirement's methodology.

34. Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what factors underlay her decision not to initiate a review of the minimum funding requirement immediately after the July Budget. [42961]

Mr. Denham: The methodology and actuarial assumptions in the minimum funding requirement were devised by the Faculty and Institute of Actuaries. We were informed that they would be carrying out a review following the July Budget. We fed into that review a report by the Government Actuary, whose views we had sought on a number of issues.

Disabled People

25. Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans the Government have to tax benefits for people with disabilities. [42952]

Mr. Denham: We have made it clear in our Green Paper that Disability Living Allowance and Attendance Allowance will remain national and universal benefits and as such they will not be subject to a means test. Taxation is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Chancellor, but we have no current plans to tax DLA: there were no such proposals in the Green Paper. Equally, there are no plans to tax Income Support (the income-related benefit paid to many people with disabilities) War Pensions or Industrial Injuries Disablement Benefit.

30. Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will make a statement on the number of people with some level of disability in the United Kingdom; and how many of them receive state benefits. [42957]

Mr. Denham: There is no generally agreed formula for defining disabled people. The Disability Survey suggests that there are some 8.6 million disabled adults in private households. The numbers who receive benefits as a result of their disability are shown in the table.

Benefit	Recipients[1,6]	Date
Income Support	[2,4,5]892,000	August 1997
Disability Working Allowance	14,813	September 1997
Disability Living Allowance	2,096,000	February 1998
Attendance Allowance	1,279,000	February 1998
Industrial Injuries Disablement Benefit	[7]272,000	—
War Disablement Pensions	258,363	April 1998
Severe Disablement Allowance	369,000	November 1997
Incapacity Benefit	1,701,000	November 1997
Jobseeker's Allowance	17,000	August 1997

[1] These figures do not take into account any benefit overlap
[2] Numbers for Income Support, Jobseeker's Allowance, Incapacity Benefit and Severe Disablement Allowance are rounded to the nearest thousand
[3] Figures are taken from a 5 per cent. sample except Industrial Injuries Disablement Benefit which is 10 per cent., Disability Working Allowance and War Disablement Pension which are 100 per cent.
[4] The Income Support figure excludes cases who transferred to Income-based Jobseeker's Allowance with effect from October 1996
[5] Income Support and Jobseeker's Allowance are based on claims receiving disability premium when either the claimant or partner is disabled
[6] All figures are for United Kingdom except War Disablement Pensions which is United Kingdom plus Overseas, Severe Disablement Allowance, Incapacity Benefit and Jobseeker's Allowance are for Great Britain
[7] Figures for Industrial Injuries Disablement Benefit are for Great Britain at April 1997 and Northern Ireland figures are at February 1998

Disability Living Allowance

27. Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when she will respond to the fourth report of the Social Security Committee on disability living allowance (HC 641). [42954]

Mr. Denham: We will be making a full response to the Social Security Select Committee's report in due course and in doing so we will adhere to the usual conventions set out by the Procedure Committee.

31. Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people have been taken off disability benefit in the last 12 months for which figures are available. [42958]

Mr. Denham: The information is not available in the format requested. 269,000 Attendance Allowance awards and 145,000 Disability Living Allowance awards ceased in the 12 months ending April 1998.

Information is not available on the reasons for cessation, but these will include death, absence abroad, and non-renewal of a fixed period award, as well as withdrawal where the benefits agency found that the conditions of entitlement were no longer satisfied.

Note:

Figures based on 100 per cent. data, rounded to the nearest thousand.

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what assessment she has made of the percentage of people who, following a review, are denied the care component payments of the disability living allowance; how many of these people are terminally ill; and if she will make a statement. [44398]

Mr. Denham: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is set out in the tables.

Disability living allowance review decisions in 1997–98

Decisions	Amount
All Decisions	370,054
Review allowed[1]	44,288
Award increased[2]	90,075
Other decisions[3]	235,691

Notes:
[1] Reviews within three months of the original decision determined in the claimant's favour
[2] Reviews where there are relevant changes in circumstances and the rates of either component increased
[3] Cases where benefit is disallowed, decreased or unchanged
Source:
Analytical Services Division: 100 per cent. data

DLA terminally ill cases[1]

Cases	1996–97[2]	[2]1997–98
Cleared[3]	26,890	23,907
Awarded on initial claim[4]	24,830	22,160
Awarded on review[4]	5,760	4,380

[1] Figures relate to terminally ill cases which are classed as 'special rule'. For these cases the three month qualifying period is not required and processing takes priority over other cases
[2] Figures relate to 12 months ending February
Note:
The cleared figure which relates to initial claims only, includes people awarded benefit, disallowed benefit and also cases withdrawn before being decided. These figures indicate that the success rate for terminal ill claimants is high
Sources:
[3] Analytical Services Division: 100 per cent. data
[4] Analytical Services Division: 5 per cent. data

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what discussions she has had with medical authorities regarding terminally-ill people who are denied the care component element of disability living allowance; and if she will make a statement. [44404]

Mr. Denham: None. When a claim is received and the information contained on the medical condition is not sufficient to determine the claim, advice is sought from Benefits Agency Medical Service doctors. They will consult with the claimant's General Practitioner, Consultant or other health professional to ascertain the nature of the condition and the effects on that person's needs.

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans she has to reform the process of awarding the care component element of disability living allowance; and if she will make a statement. [44405]

Mr. Denham: The Green Paper, "New ambitions for our country: A new contract for welfare", published on 26 March makes clear our commitment to the principle of providing special allowances to help with the extra costs of disability. We will maintain Disability Living Allowance and Attendance Allowance as universal national benefits for those who meet the conditions of entitlement. These benefits will not be means tested.

We have also given a clear commitment that, in taking forward any proposals to change these benefits, we will consult disabled people, their organisations and others with an interest. For this reason, we are setting up a new Disability Benefits Forum with organisations of and for disabled people, to discuss how the system can be reformed to ensure that benefits go to those who need them. Details of the Forum will be published shortly.

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what assessment she has made of the impact of the review system for terminally ill people receiving the care component of disability living allowance; and if she will make a statement. [44406]

Mr. Denham: Procedures are already in place to fast track initial claims and any subsequent review requests from people who are terminally ill.

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what factors are taken into account when assessing whether a claimant is entitled to receive the care component of disability living allowance. [44407]

Mr. Denham: The factors taken into account are the effects of a person's disability on their day to day life as described in their self-reporting claim form. Information provided by a person's General Practitioner and/or hospital consultant or other health professional is also factored into these considerations. Adjudication Officers consult Benefits Agency Medical Services doctors on the nature and effects of disabilities. Information is also available to Adjudication Officers in the Disability Handbook which is compiled by senior doctors of this Department and approved and monitored by the Disability Living Allowance Advisory Board.

Benefit Advisers

28. Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans she has to increase the number of benefit advisers working in the Benefits Agency. [42955]

Mr. Keith Bradley: Staff throughout the Agency offer a range of advice to customers. In line with Ministers' aims of achieving welfare reform and providing an Active Modern Service, we are developing an integrated approach to provision of advice, both in respect of benefit entitlement and in terms of broader welfare considerations. This approach reflects the principle that customers can be better served by greater co-ordination of services which have traditionally been provided by wholly separate organisations.

We are currently evaluating the ways in which such co-ordination might best be achieved. This may involve the deployment of more caseworkers, not only within the Benefits Agency, but also in partner organisations such as Employment Services, Local Authorities, other DSS Agencies and the wider welfare community including the private sector.

Children

29. Mr. Derek Twigg: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will make a statement on the action the Government have taken to improve the support for children through the social security system. [42956]

Mr. Keith Bradley: In his Budget Statement, my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer set out a number of measures for families with children. From November 1998, there will be a £2.50 increase in the under-11 child allowance in Income Support (IS), Jobseeker's Allowance (JSA), Housing Benefit (HB), Council Tax Benefit (CTB), Family Credit and Disability Working Allowance. From April 1999, Child Benefit for the eldest child and the family premium in IS, JSA, HB and CTB will be increased by £2.50.

Support for children will also be substantially improved by the introduction of a childcare tax credit which is designed to make support for children through the tax system more generous and more transparent.

In addition to these measures, increases in the childcare disregard for in-work benefits came into force from 1 June. The maximum disregard is now £100 a week for families incurring childcare costs for two or more children of qualifying age and the upper age limit for children has been extended by a year.

Long-term Sick and Disabled People

33. Mr. Purchase: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what steps she has taken to help the long-term sick and disabled into work. [42960]

Mr. Denham: The Government are committed to improving opportunities and incentives for disabled people who want to work, whilst providing appropriate support to those who cannot. There are four strands to our strategy for helping people with disabilities or long-term sickness who want to work; taking action to help make work pay; providing the active help and encouragement people with disabilities need to move into work; removing obstacles to work from the benefits system; and promoting radical change in the work place to ensure equality and opportunity.

Specific initiatives include the New Deal for Disabled People, under which we will pilot a new Personal Adviser Service and fund a number of innovative schemes to test ways of helping disabled people who want to work; changes to benefit rules, including a new 52 week linking rule for incapacity benefits to be introduced from this October; the Disabled Persons Tax Credit, which we are developing to replace and enhance Disability Working Allowance; and the Disability Rights Task Force, which we have set up to advise on the best ways to secure civil rights and maximise the benefits of the Disability Discrimination Act (the remaining provisions of which we are committed to implementing). We are also setting up a Disability Rights Commission, to promote, protect and enforce the rights of disabled people.

Ministers for Women

35. Caroline Flint: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will make a statement on the priorities of the Ministers for Women during the UK presidency of the European Union. [42963]

Ms Harman: The theme of the UK Presidency is employability. We have been clear from the outset that this means the employability of women as well as men. The importance of child care and family friendly employment policies—two of the priorities of the Ministers for Women—are key to this.

On 5–6 May we called a meeting of the EU Ministers for Women to discuss women's employability—at this highly successful conference.

- a consensus was reached on the importance of affordable, accessible and high quality child care and family friendly working policies;
- it was agreed that the Ministers for Women would meet at least once a year in the future to exchange ideas and best practice in these areas; and
- the need to include women's concerns through all employment policies, both at a national and EU level, has been firmly placed on the EU agenda.

Ms Kingham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will make a statement on the outcome of the meeting in Belfast on the EU Presidency Conclusions on Women and Employability. [42927]

Ms Harman: The theme of the UK Presidency is employability. We have been clear from the outset that this means the employability of women as well as men. That is why we called the meeting of EU Ministers for Women which we held in Belfast on 5–6 May.

The meeting focused in particular on the importance of child care and family friendly employment policies, and provided a valuable opportunity to share best practice with our EU partners. The meeting reached a consensus on the following key points.

- Affordable, accessible, and high-quality child care, parental and other leave schemes, and family-friendly working policies are essential for women and men to combine work and family responsibilities.
- Equality between women and men must be included in all employment polices, both at national and EU level; so that measures to improve employability and support the unemployed take the rights and needs of women and men fully in account.
- Meetings of Ministers for Women and for Equality provide useful opportunities for the exchange of ideas and best practice and developing strategies. They intend to meet at least once a year in future.

Member states expressed their commitment to drive forward these initiatives and will use proposed future meetings to do so.

Benefits (Young People)

36. Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many representations she has recently received on the inability of 16 and 17-year-olds to claim benefits; and if she will make a statement. [42964]

Mr. Keith Bradley: As well as informal approaches, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has received 28 letters in the last year relating to the benefit entitlement of 16 and 17-year-olds. Sixteen of these related to Income Support and 12 to Jobseeker's Allowance. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Education and Employment has received four letters and one Parliamentary Question on this topic in the last year.

Service Delivery

37. Mr. Caplin: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will make a statement on Government actions to improve the quality of service delivery in the social security system during the last year. [42965]

Mr. Keith Bradley: Improved service delivery is central to our approach to welfare reform. Our services must actively help people to move off welfare and into work.

In December 1997, we launched our Active Modern Service programme to transform Social Security by building a system that commands the support and confidence of those who use it, those who administer it and those who fund it, providing a better, simpler, more efficient service to clients.

The focus of our effort will be to provide services that clients need. We will achieve a much better outcome if we include them in the debate. On 18 June 1998, we will be speaking to client representatives to begin to tell them of our plans and consult them about the way forward.

Much has begun to be put in place, enhanced quality of service delivery by improving decision making, closer working initiatives with Local Authorities, pilots to test the automatic delivery of benefit for pensioners and personal advisors for Lone Parents and the Disabled.

Social Security Expenditure

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to her answer of 27 February 1998, Official Report, column 380, if she will provide a breakdown of the figures for non-cyclical social security expenditure between benefits for the (a) elderly and (b) non-elderly. [44653]

Mr. Field: The information requested is set out in the table.

Non-cyclical social security expenditure

£ million

Year	Elderly	Non-elderly
1978–79	26,918	16,882
1979–80	26,718	18,277
1980–81	27,025	17,392
1981–82	29,157	18,926
1982–83	30,532	19,626
1983–84	31,627	21,328
1984–85	31,943	22,213
1985–86	33,082	22,694
1986–87	34,453	23,774
1987–88	34,475	24,085
1988–89	33,423	23,802
1989–90	33,958	23,903
1990–91	34,835	25,139
1991–92	36,517	27,735
1992–93	37,673	31,283
1993–94	39,196	34,333
1994–95	39,456	35,661
1995–96	39,826	37,007
1996–97	40,799	38,312
1997–98	41,311	38,740
1998–99	41,820	39,212
1999–2000	42,274	39,819

Notes:

1. Figures have been taken from the 1997 Social Security Departmental Report as well as earlier equivalent publications. The figures exclude the cost of Administration
2. The figures for 1996–97 are estimates of expenditure in that year. Revised figures for the years 1996–97 to 1998–99 have been included in the 1998 Social Security Departmental Report. Figures for subsequent years are not included as they are subject to the findings of the Comprehensive Spending Review, the results of which are expected later this year
3. Benefits have been allocated according to the main reason they are paid in order to provide figures consistent with tables in the Social Security Departmental Report. This means that some benefits, such as Attendance Allowance, have been included in the non-elderly totals shown in the table, even though they may be paid to elderly people.

Family Income

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimates she has made of the level of income required to support a family with children relative to a family with no children. [44630]

Mr. Keith Bradley: There are many factors which affect the financial needs of a family, including the presence of children. These are reflected in the structure of allowances in the income-related benefits.

The new welfare system will provide better support to families with children. That is why we have announced a £2.50 increase in Child Benefit for the eldest child and a £2.50 increase in the family premium in the income-related benefits. We have announced further help for vulnerable families with young children through a £2.50 increase in the under 11 child allowances.

These measures will help families to give every child a better start.

Incapacity Benefit

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people have lost their entitlement to incapacity benefit because of the all work test since its introduction; and what percentage of those were (a) over 50 and (b) over 55 years. [43046]

Mr. Denham: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is set out in the table.

Incapacity Benefit recipients found capable of work following application of the all work test

	Number
13 April 1995 to 31 August 1996
Numbers (all ages)	178,000
1 September 1996 to 30 November 1997
Numbers (all ages)	251,000
Percentage aged 50 and over	31
Percentage aged 55 and over	18

Notes:

1. Figures are rounded to the nearest thousand
2. Due to initial data collection problems, the proportion of recipients found capable of work broken down by age is not available from 13 April 1995 to 31 August 1996
3. Figures include recipients found capable after initial referral for the all work test and after re-referrals
4. The all work test is not applicable to Incapacity Benefit recipients aged 58 or over on 13 April 1995 who had been in receipt of Invalidity Benefit continuously between 1 December 1993 and 12 April 1995

Source:
13 April 1995 to 31 August 1997. 100 per cent. count of the computer system; excludes a small number of cases not on the system
1 September 1996 to 30 November 1997. 5 per cent. sample of the computer system; excludes a small number of cases not on the system

Domestic Violence

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what support her Department gives to those fleeing domestic violence. [42928]

Ms Ruddock: Income-related benefits are available to women fleeing domestic violence. However, we are aware that women are not always offered the full range of support services they may need.

As Ministers for Women, tackling violence against women is one of out three key priorities. In drawing up our National Strategy, we are consulting with experts in the field of domestic violence, and listening to the views of women who have suffered domestic violence, to build a strategy to help prevent domestic violence; protect those who suffer it; and bring to justice those who perpetrate it.

Pensioners (Scotland)

Mr. Gorrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people and what proportion of those over 60 years old in Scotland receive (a) income support, (b) housing benefit, (c) council tax benefit and (d) income from disability benefits. [43812]

Mr. Denham: The information is set out in the table.

Benefit	Number	Proportion of population per cent.
Income Support[1]	172,000	16.6
All Housing Benefit[2]	230,000	22.2
All Council Tax Benefit[2]	292,000	28.2
Income Support claimants receiving a disability related premium[1,3]	79,000	7.6
Housing Benefit recipients with income from disability benefits[2,4]	81,000	7.9
Council Tax Benefit recipients with income from disability benefits[2,4]	91,000	8.8
Attendance Allowance[5]	122,000	11.7
Disability Living Allowance[5]	83,000	8.0
War Disablement Pensioners[6]	25,000	2.4
Industrial Injuries Disablement Benefit[7]	12,000	1.1
Incapacity Benefit[8]	56,000	5.4
Severe Disablement Allowance[8]	6,000	0.6

[1] Claimants as at November 1997. Number of claimants aged 60 or over is based on benefit units who receive a pensioner premium. It may therefore include some claimants who are under 60 years whose partner is aged 60 or over
[2] Figures as at May 1996. The information refers to benefit units which may be a single person or a couple. The data do not include second adult rebate cases
[3] Claimants with a disability premium are also included in the total of 172,000 IS claimants in Scotland aged 60 or over. Claimants with disability related premiums are claimants aged 60 to 79 with a Higher Pensioner Premium or claimants with Severe Disability Premium
[4] Information for recipients with income from disability benefits refers to benefit units where there is either a disability premium or a higher pensioner premium in payment
[5] Figures relate to November 1997
[6] Figures as at February 1998
[7] Figures as at April 1997
[8] Recipients as at November 1997

Notes:
1. As at October 1997 there were only a negligible number of Disability Working Allowance recipients in Scotland aged 60 or over
2. Figures rounded to the nearest thousand

Sources:
1. Income Support Statistics Quarterly Enquiry—a 5 per cent. sample
2. Housing Benefit, Council Tax Benefit, Housing Benefit with income from disability benefits and Council Tax Benefit with income from disability benefits are from Housing Benefit Management Information System—a 1 per cent. sample with and without Income Support
3. Attendance Allowance, Disability Allowance figures are based on a 5 per cent. sample of data from the Analytical Services Division
4. War Disablement Pensioner figures are derived from a 5 per cent. sample from the War Pensions Computer System
5. Industrial Injuries Disablement Benefit figures are based on a 10 per cent. sample of data from the Analytical Services Division which includes an adjustment for late statistical returns
6. Incapacity Benefit and Severe Disablement Allowance figures are taken from a 5 per cent. sample of the PSCS(INCAP) system which excludes a small number of cases held clerically
7. Population figures are from the Office of National Statistics as at June 1996

Mr. Gorrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate her Department has made of the number of people of pensionable age in Scotland in each year to 2010. [43809]

Mr. Denham: The information is set out in the table.

Projected numbers of people of pensionable age for Scotland 1998—2010

000s

Year	Population estimate
1998	918
1999	920
2000	922
2001	923
2002	925
2003	930
2004	935
2005	938
2006	942
2007	956
2008	968
2009	980
2010	984

Notes:
1. The table is based on population projections for Scotland provided by the Government Actuary's Department based on population estimates for 1996
2. The estimates take account of the equalisation of State Pension Age from 2010
3. All figures are rounded to the nearest thousand

Mr. Gorrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what proportion of people aged (i) 64 to 74 years and (ii) 75 years and over in Scotland live alone. [43813]

Mr. Denham: The proportion of people aged 64 to 74 years and 75 years and over in Scotland who live alone is 32 per cent. and 55 per cent. respectively.

Notes:

1. The figures are based on information from the Family Resources Survey 1995–96.

2. Figures are rounded to the nearest 1 per cent.

3. Calculations for the number of people living alone are based on the number of people who report no other adults or children in their household. For this reason figures may be subject to misreporting.

4. The Family Resources Survey does not cover those pensioners who are in hospital or residential care and therefore these people are not included in the estimates.

Mr. Gorrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many and what percentage of pensioners in Scotland currently receive the state retirement pension. [43814]

Mr. Denham: The number and percentage of people above State pension age in Scotland currently receiving the State Retirement Pension is 863,500 and 94 per cent. respectively.

Notes:

1. The figures are based on information from the Pensions Strategy Computer System and from the Scottish Registrar's population estimates.

2. Figures for the number in receipt of State Retirement Pension are rounded to the nearest one hundred. Figures are rounded to the nearest 1 per cent.

Housing Benefit Fraud

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will make a statement on the level of fraud in housing benefit. [42941]

Mr. Field: We have made it clear in our Green Paper that rooting out fraud is an essential part of welfare reform. We are undertaking a fundamental review of the Department's counter-fraud strategies to ensure a coherent, well-prioritised programme to reduce overall fraud levels through earlier prevention, more effective deterrence and better detection.

Written Answers to Questions

Tuesday 9 June 1998

NORTHERN IRELAND

European Structural Funds

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the costs were in each year since 1990 of administering European Structural Fund programmes in Northern Ireland. [43842]

Mr. Paul Murphy: The information for the Northern Ireland Office and the Northern Ireland Departments is as follows:

Year	£000
1990–91	3,484
1991–92	3,831
1992–93	3,999
1993–94	4,007
1994–95	4,169
1995–96	4,731
1996–97	5,332
1997–98	5,528

Notes:

1. The figures relate to the salary costs of staff who are directly involved in administering the EU Structural Fund Programmes.
2. Information for the Northern Ireland Office and the Department of Health and Social Services was not readily available and could only be provided at disproportionate cost.
3. The figure for 1990–91 is not consistent with the following years as some records were not available in that year.

Belfast Agreement

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many copies of the Belfast Agreement were printed in (a) the English and (b) the Irish language; what was the cost of producing each version (i) in total and (ii) per copy; and what is the sale price. [44094]

Mr. Paul Murphy: A total of 835,000 copies of the Agreement were printed in English and 10,000 in Irish. the production cost of the English version was £563,750 and the Irish version cost £6,550. The English version cost 67.5p per copy and the Irish version 65.5p. The document was made available free of charge to the public.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Vulnerable or Intimidated Witnesses

Angela Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if the inter-departmental review of the Treatment of Vulnerable or Intimidated Witnesses announced on 13 June 1997 has now been completed; and if he proposes to publish its findings. [45260]

Mr. Straw: The review of the Treatment of Vulnerable or Intimidated Witnesses has now been completed and copies of the report of the Interdepartmental Working Group, which is being published for consultation purposes, will be placed in the Library tomorrow.

Correspondence

Mr. Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he intends to reply to the letters dated 18 February, 18 March and 30 April from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton with regard to Mr. R. H. Malik, of 15 The Avenue. [45097]

Mr. Straw: I wrote to my right hon. Friend on 8 June.

Community Sentence Orders

Mr. Hurst: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his estimate of (a) the number of warrants issued by magistrates' courts in England and Wales in the last year for which figures are available in respect of breaches of community sentence orders and (b) the number of such warrants which remained unexecuted after six months from date of issue. [44123]

Ms Quin: I regret that this information is not available centrally.

Young Offenders

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his most recent estimate of the period he intends to set as a time limit between arrest and first appearance in court for a person under 18 years under section 22A(1) of the Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 as amended by section 41 of the Crime and Disorder Bill. [44348]

Mr. Michael: A decision on the level at which the statutory time limits should be set will be taken after piloting and once we have assessed the impact of new measures contained in the Crime and Disorder Bill [Lords] on time taken through the criminal justice system. Our plans for introducing a statutory time limit between arrest and first appearance in court, and for introducing statutory time limits for other stages in proceedings for a person under 18 years, are set out in chapter 10 of the White Paper 'No More Excuses—A New Approach To Tackling Youth Crime in England and Wales' (CM3809: November 1997). We intend first to pilot certain of the procedural changes introduced by the Crime and Disorder Bill, in particular provisions in section 46 (powers of magistrates' courts exercisable by single justice) and section 47 (early administrative hearings). Sites for these 'Narey' pilot areas were announced in the reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Portsmouth, North (Mr. Rapson) on 3 June 1998, Official Report, column 219. The six areas are: Tyneside; Croydon; Blackburn and Burnley; Northamptonshire; North Staffordshire; and North Wales. Two of these areas—Blackburn and Northamptonshire—will also operate the final warning scheme and youth offending teams, since these arrangements will have an effect on speed through the system and procedures in young offender cases. We aim to begin the pilots in October this year to run for six months. These will be followed by pilots of statutory time limits which we aim to begin in autumn 1999 and run for 12 months. A decision on the level at which time limits should be set, including the time limit from arrest and the date of first appearance in court, will be made for pilot purposes in the light of the initial 'Narey' pilots and for national rollout in the light of the statutory time limit pilots.

Ms Keeble: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many juveniles have been held overnight on remand in police custody in police stations in England and Wales, broken down by (a) police authority and (b) charges, during the last six months. [44671]

Mr. Michael: Information on the remand of juveniles in police custody in police stations is not collected centrally.

Section 38(6) of the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 requires arrested juveniles under the age of 17 who are detained by the police to be moved to local authority accommodation unless:

(i) the custody officer certifies that, by reason of such circumstances as are specified in the certificate, it is impractical to move the youth; or

(ii) in the case of a juvenile who has attained the age of 12, no local authority security accommodation is available and holding the juvenile in other local authority accommodation would be inadequate to protect the public from serious harm from him.

Police Complaints and Discipline

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to bring forward proposals to change the internal police complaints and discipline process; and if he will make a statement. [44502]

Mr. Michael: My right hon. Friend announced the Government's response to the Home Affairs Committee report into police disciplinary and complaints procedures in England and Wales on 23 March 1998, Official Report, columns 21–37. New arrangements will be brought into effect on 1 April 1999 which will make significant changes to the current arrangements for dealing with misconduct by police officers, as well as providing, for the first time, formal provisions for tackling poor performance by individual officers. As far as complaints by members of the public are concerned, a number of Committee recommendations which have been accepted will require primary legislation. These will be made when suitable opportunities arise, whilst other measures will be taken forward in consultation with interested parties. New discipline arrangements applying to senior officers will be introduced as soon as possible after 1 April 1999 and will mirror, as far as possible, those which will apply to the rest of the police service.

Cardiff and Parc Prisons

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what were the running costs in the past two years, and what are the forecast running costs over the next four years, of (a) Cardiff Prison and (b) Parc Prison, Bridgend. [44009]

Ms Quin: The running costs of Cardiff prison were £10.97m in 1996/97 and £11.079m in 1997/98. In 1998/99 the figure is forecast to be £11.09m. The budget for the following three years will not be set until the outcome of the Comprehensive Spending Review is known.

Parc prison opened on 15 November 1997. From then until 30 April 1998, payments of nearly £7m plus value added tax were made to the managing contractor. This figure relates to the provision of the whole custodial service, including prison capital and financing costs, and cannot be compared with the running costs of an existing directly managed prison.

Prison Site, Middleton Sands

Miss Geraldine Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the estimated cost of conversion of the former holiday camp at Middleton Sands, Morecambe, to a temporary prison, separately identifying costs of improvements to the access road and environmental improvements to the site. [43658]

Ms Quin: As at December 1997, the estimated costs for converting the camp to a prison for a three-year period varied between £18.7 million to £25.7 million, the variation depending on the number of prisoners to be held and the level of facilities to be provided.

The estimated costs for works to the access road, £150,000, and for permanent environmental improvements, £815,000, are included in the overall costs.

Figures are subject to inflation and additional costs due to deterioration of the existing buildings since the Prison Service's feasibility study was carried out in December 1997.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Cottage Industries

Mr. Steen: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make it his policy to issue guidance to local authorities to ensure that rules and regulations affecting the operation of cottage industries are enforced at the least burdensome level possible. [44918]

Mr. Kilfoyle: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Scarborough and Whitby (Mr. Quinn) on 4 March 1998, Official Report, columns 692–94, announcing the publication of the Enforcement Concordat. I wrote to all local authorities in England on 5 March 1998 to commend the Concordat to them and encourage its adoption.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Magistracy (Ethnic Minorities)

Mrs. Humble: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, what percentage of magistrates are from an ethnic minority; and what percentage of magistrates appointed in the last five years are from an ethnic minority. [45159]

Mr. Hoon: A recent survey (excluding the Duchy of Lancaster) showed that, of the 94 per cent. of magistrates who responded, 4.1 per cent. were from an ethnic minority. The percentage of magistrates appointed in the last five years (excluding the Duchy of Lancaster) who were from an ethnic minority is:

1993: 5.7 per cent.

1994: 5 per cent.

1995: 6 per cent.

1996: 6.5 per cent.

1997: 6.5 per cent.

Correspondence

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department when he expects to give a substantive reply to the letter of 22 December 1997 from the hon. Member for Eastbourne relating to Judge Hasan. [45025]

Mr. Hoon: The Lord Chancellor has today given a substantive letter to the hon. Member.

Fines (Greater Manchester)

Mr. Bennett: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will list for each magistrates court in Greater Manchester for the last available 12 month period (a) the total amount of fines imposed, (b) the percentage of that money collected, (c) the amount of fines written off as uncollectible and (d) the criteria used for writing that money off; and if he will list for Stockport and Tameside courts (i) the number of attachment of earnings orders issued by each court to collect (1) fines and (2) reparation orders and (ii) the number of orders made by each court to deduct fines and other money from social security payments. [44113]

Mr. Hoon: (a) and (c): available figures with explanations are shown in the table. (b): the table shows amounts collected. The percentage figure requested has not been calculated because the amounts collected do not relate directly to the amounts imposed. (d): write off is authorised only when all realistic steps to enforce the sums due have been taken without success, and the circumstances fall within one of those listed in note (d) to the table.

(i) attachment of earnings orders issued by Stockport and Tameside are recorded for combinations of fines, compensation orders and costs, and fines cannot be given separately. In Tameside, there were 18 attachment of earnings orders, one of which is for reparation only. In stockport, there were 79 combination orders. (ii) there were 107 deductions from social security payments orders made in Stockport. Tameside do not have a record of deductions from benefit for the financial year, but currently have 264 orders.

Fine enforcement in Greater Manchester, financial year ended 31 March 1998

£

	(a) Fines imposed April 1997–March 1998	(b) Amounted collected April 1997–March 1998	(c) Written off April 1997–March 1998
Bolton	1,801,383	1,483,528	309,804
Bury	1,537,487	1,735,555	209,364
Wigan	3,353,711	1,931,838	969,962
City of Salford	1,967,127	1,451,724	515,082
Rochdale	1,700,999	1,422,680	165,240

Fine enforcement in Greater Manchester, financial year ended 31 March 1998

£

	(a) Fines imposed April 1997–March 1998	(b) Amounted collected April 1997–March 1998	(c) Written off April 1997–March 1998
Manchester	5,379,016	2,651,005	3,213,474
Oldham	1,728,821	1,120,522	663,025
Stockport	1,488,313	1,230,576	446,333
Tameside	1,740,336	1,699,110	355,742
Trafford	1,583,768	895,112	798,673
Grand Total	22,281,961	15,621,650	7,646,699

Notes:

(a) Fines imposed includes fines, costs, compensation awards and contributions to Legal Aid. Also included are fines etc. imposed at other courts which have been transferred to this court for enforcement. Fines etc. imposed locally but transferred out to other courts for enforcement have been excluded

(b) Amount collected includes payments against amounts imposed in previous years as well as the current year, and amounts remitted by the courts, but exclude amounts written off

(c) Amounts written off may have been imposed in previous years as well as the current year

(d) Criteria for write off

The defendant's/defaulter's whereabouts are unknown and cannot be traced

The defendant/defaulter is known to have emigrated or gone abroad and there is very little real prospect of return or recovery of the sum

The defendant/defaulter has died. However if a fine was involved and the fine itself was particularly high, the justices clerk may wish to consider whether the estate has benefited from the crime. Only if it is clear that it has, should consideration be given to lodging a claim against the estate and any subsequent request to write off should show this has been done and the outcome of the action

The defendant has been sent to a mental health institution for a period of 12 months or more

The court has despatched a notice to a defendant who was not present in court informing him in error of a lesser fine, contribution to costs order that the court imposed—in such cases the balance would be considered for write off

The sum outstanding is less than £5 and is considered to be not worth pursuing

As a result of subsequent proceedings the defendant is sentenced to imprisonment for a period of 12 months more

The sum was imposed or awarded against a limited company which has subsequently been wound up or, where there are no goods on which to levy distress, the company has ceased trading and it is not considered financially worthwhile for the court to initiate

A serviceman has been sentenced to a period of military corrective training

The defendant has moved permanently to Scotland

Other, where circumstances for write off are not covered by any of the above criteria, and grounds for write off are provided in a separate note

Source:

Magistrates' Courts Management Information System 1997–98.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Sierra Leone

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what facilities for representation and consular services on behalf of Her Majesty's Government operate in Conakry, in Guinea; and if staff or premises were made available to Britain's High Commissioner to Sierra Leone during his evacuation to Conakry. [43691]

Mr. Fatchett: The British Ambassador accredited to Guinea is resident in Senegal. Her Majesty's Government have an Honorary Consul in Conakry, who provided assistance during the evacuation from Sierra Leone. In the absence of official accommodation in Conakry, the British High Commissioner to Sierra Leone operated from a hotel room while in Conakry.

Indonesia

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what support is being provided to Indonesia in 1998–99 under the Assistance to Support Stability with In-Service Training scheme; and at what cost. [44333]

Mr. Fatchett: No expenditure has been authorised so far.

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 21 May 1998, Official Report, columns 520–22, on support for police and military forces, if he will provide a breakdown of the 1997–98 expenditure under the United Kingdom Military Training Assistance Scheme in support of the military in Indonesia; and if he will list the training establishments involved and the nature of the training. [44336]

Mr. Fatchett: Half of the £225,000 funding for Indonesia military training for 1997–98 represented carry-over costs from 1996–97.

The remainder represented English language training in Indonesia and the following courses in the UK:

Army: 1 student on a Disaster Management Course (RCMS Shrivenham); 1 student on a Command and Staff Course (Joint Service Command and Staff-College, Bracknell); 2 students on English language training (Defence School of Languages, Beaconsfield).

Navy: 1 Student on an International Anti-Submarine Warfare Course (HMS Dryad); 1 student on an International Navigation Officers Course (HMS Dryad).

Ethnic Minority Employees

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 7 May 1998, Official Report, columns 487–88, if he will place in the Library a copy of the strategy document, "Bridges into the Future"; what organisations and individuals were consulted in its preparation; and what databases he is using under his initiative to inform minority ethnic communities and prospective applicants about the role and activities of the Foreign Office. [44201]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary is delighted to place in the Library a copy of the strategy document "Bridges into the Future".

This document was drawn up by Linbert Spencer, an expert in race and community relations, in consultation with those in the FCO concerned with equal opportunities, recruitment and staff development.

The FCO informs minority ethnic communities and prospective applicants about its role and activities through its website and through contact with all UK University careers advisers and cultural societies, as well as though its database of contacts supplied by Hobsons Publishing, The Windsor Fellowship, Project Fullemploy, the African and Caribbean Finance Forum and the Race Equality Councils.

Ottawa Treaty

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when the Government expect to ratify the Ottawa Treaty. [44800]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: We intend to ratify the Ottawa Convention as soon as the Parliamentary schedule allows for the legislation necessary to enable us to meet all our commitments under the Convention.

Arms Exports

Mr. Casale: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to discuss with his European Union counterparts a strengthening of the European Code of Conduct on arms exports. [44430]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: The EU Code of Conduct on Arms Exports was formally adopted by the General Affairs Council on 8 June. It would be premature to discuss changes to the Code at such an early stage. The Code provides for an annual meeting within the framework of the Common Foreign and Security Policy to review the operation of the Code and identify any improvements which need to be made.

DEFENCE

Pay and Personnel Agency

Lorna Fitzsimons: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what performance targets have been set for the Pay and Personnel Agency for 1998–99. [45261]

Mr. Spellar: The Chief Executive of the Pay and Personnel Agency (PPA) is responsible for providing pay and personnel services for the Ministry of Defence as defined in the Agency Framework Document. During 1998–99, the PPA will be set the following challenging key performance targets:

1. (a) while making 100 per cent. of payments of pay by the due date, the number of errors not to exceed 12 per 1,000 payments of weekly industrial pay;

   (b) while making 100 per cent. of payments of pay by the due date, the number of errors not to exceed 6 per 1,000 payments of monthly non-industrial pay;

   (c) while authorising 100 per cent. of awards of pensions by the due date, the number of errors not to exceed 20 per 1,000 awards;

   (d) while making 100 per cent. payments of expenses within 10 days of receipt, the numbers of errors not to exceed 15 per 1,000 payments;

   (e) to pay 100 per cent. of claims for fees and personal payments within 9 working days of receipt.

2. By 31 March 1999, to adopt the use of the Business Excellence Model as a means of benchmarking the Agency.

3. By 31 March 1999, to achieve efficiency savings to meet the Departmental target of 2 per cent. efficiency savings of annual operating costs.

4. By 31 December 1998, to ensure that all IT systems are millennium compliant.

5. To gain IIP accreditation before 31 March 1999.

Arms Tactical Training Centre

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the future role of the new arms tactical training centre in Germany. [45030]

Dr. Reid: The role of the Combined Arms Tactical Trainer (CATT) simulation system is primarily to assist in the training of an armoured Battle Group (BG). It will allow a BG to practice both its tactical and command procedures without having to deploy onto a training area. CATT will realistically simulate a warfighting environment with its inherent friction. All training will be closely monitored, thus allowing mistakes to be immediately rectified and thereby more fully preparing the BG for the culmination of its training at BATUS in Canada and in Poland. Additionally, like all simulation systems, CATT should reduce the costs of BG deployments as a result of reduced track mileage and equipment support, whilst alleviating environmental pressure on training areas. Due to the flexibility of the system, as well as current main equipments being simulated, there is scope for equipments such as helicopters and future equipments such as the Multi-Roled Armoured Vehicle to be incorporated into the system. Ultimately, with the ability to network with CATT UK, there will also be the opportunity for an armoured brigade HQ to train two BGs simultaneously, thus practising another level of command.

Territorial Army

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the TA infantry units which were committed to a role in Germany prior to the fall of the Berlin Wall; and if he will state the Field Force, Brigade or Division of 1 BR Corps to which they were assigned. [44839]

Dr. Reid: The Territorial Army infantry units committed to a role in Germany in 1989, prior to the fall of the Berlin Wall, are shown in the table.

Territorial Army Infantry Unit	Formation
4RGJ	1 Armd Div (7 Armd Bde)
4 Para	1 Armd Div (Div tps)
10 Para	1 Armd Div (Div tps)
15 Para	1 Armd Div (Div tps)
1/51 Highland	4 Armd Div (11 Armd Bde)
2/51 Highland (Milan Pln)	4 Armd Div (11 Armd Bde)
1/52 Lowland (Milan Pln)	4 Armd Div (11 Armd Bde)
5 Queens	4 Armd Div (20 Armd Bde)
5/8 Kings (Milan Pln)	4 Armd Div (20 Armd Bde)
3 RRW (Milan Pln)	4 Armd Div (20 Armd Bde)
6 RRF	2 Inf Div (15 Inf Bde)
1 Y&C	2 Inf Div (15 Inf Bde)
2 Yorks	2 Inf Div (15 Inf Bde)
7 Li	2 Inf Div (15 Inf Bde)
8 Li	2 Inf Div (15 Inf Bde)
5 R Anglian	2 Inf Div (49 Inf Bde)
7 R Anglian	2 Inf Div (49 Inf Bde)
3 Staffords	2 Inf Div (49 Inf Bde)
5 Li	2 Inf Div (49 Inf Bde)
5 RRF	2 Inf Div (49 Inf Bde)
5 RGJ	2 Inf Div tps/Corps tps
4 R Irish (Milan Pln)	2 Inf Div tps
5 R Irish (Milan Pln)	2 Inf Div tps
4 QLR	2 Inf Div tps/Corps tps
4 WFR	Corps tps

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the cost of each Territorial Army battalion in 1997–98. [43643]

Dr. Reid: The 33 Territorial Army infantry battalions are set out in the following list, together with their identifiable costs for the year 1997–98. The figures given are manpower costs only, and include the costs of TA, Regular and Civilian staff employed at the units; other costs incurred are not separated from wider Army financial provision and cannot therefore be directly attributed to particular TA units.

Cost of territorial army infantry battalions 1997–98

£ million

Unit	1997–98
3rd (Volunteer) Battalion The Royal Welsh Fusiliers	0.994
3rd (Volunteer) Battalion The Duke of Wellington's Regiment (West Riding)	1.06
3rd (Volunteer) Battalion The Prince of Wales's Own Regiment of Yorkshire	1.091
4/5th Battalion The Green Howards (Alexandra Princess of Wales's Own Yorkshire Regiment) (Yorkshire Volunteer)	0.796
4th (Volunteer) Battalion The Parachute Regiment	1.393
6th (Volunteer) Battalion The Royal Anglian Regiment	0.992
6th Northumberland Battalion The Royal Regiment of Fusiliers	1.207
7th Battalion The (Durham) Light Infantry	0.976
7th (Volunteer) Battalion The Royal Anglian Regiment	0.991
4th (Volunteer) Battalion The Devonshire and Dorset Regiment	2.301
6th Battalion the Light Infantry (Volunteer)	2.435
2nd (Volunteer) Battalion The Royal Gloucester Berkshire and Wiltshire Regiment	1.43
5th (Volunteer) Battalion The Royal Green Jackets	1.793
5th (Volunteer) Battalion The Princess of Wales's Royal Regiment	1.82
6/7th (Volunteer) Battalion The Princess of Wales's Royal Regiment	2.087
3rd (Volunteer) Battalion The Staffordshire Regiment (The Prince of Wales's)	2.027
4th (Volunteer) Battalion The Queen's Lancashire Regiment	2.078
4th (Volunteer) Battalion The Kings Own Border Regiment	1.213
5/8th (Volunteer) Battalion the King's Regiment	2.225
5th (Volunteer) Battalion The Royal Regiment of Fusiliers	2.003
5th Battalion The Light Infantry (Volunteer)	2.126
3rd (Volunteer) Battalion The Cheshire Regiment	1.992
2nd (Volunteer) Battalion The Royal Regiment of Wales	2.208

Cost of territorial army infantry battalions 1997–98

Unit	£ million 1997–98
3rd (Volunteer) Battalion The Royal Welsh Fusiliers	2.044
4th (Volunteer) Battalion The Royal Green Jackets	2.067
10th (Volunteer) Battalion The Parachute Regiment	2.206
The London Regiment	2.143
3rd (Volunteer) Battalion The Highlanders (Seaforths Gordons and Camerons)	2.173
3rd (Volunteer) Battalion The Royal Highland Fusiliers (Princess Margaret's Own Glasgow and Ayrshire Regiment)	2.053
3rd (Volunteer) Battalion The Black Watch Regiment (The Royal Highland Regiment)	1.851
7/8th (Volunteer) Battalion The Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders (Princes Louise's)	2.034
The Lowland Volunteers	2.148
4/5th (Volunteer) Battalion The Royal Irish Rangers	2.504

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what evaluation he has made of the role assigned to TA infantry units operating alongside regular units in the BAOR prior to the collapse of the Berlin Wall. [44840]

Dr. Reid: The Strategic Defence Review has examined the current and future strategic situation, seeking to identify our future defence tasks and the necessary force mix of both Regular and Reserve Armed Forces to meet those tasks. It would be of only limited value to review a historical allocation of roles and units within a setting which is no longer relevant.

Armed Service Personnel (Germany)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many British armed service personnel are currently stationed in Germany. [44118]

Dr. Reid: As at 31 May 1998, some 28,100 posts were directly administered or associated with the garrison in Germany. This excludes the various NATO headquarters and other posts distinct from the garrison itself but includes those troops who are based in Germany and deployed elsewhere, for example, in the Former Yugoslavia.

Land Disposal

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the disposal of land at RAF 14MU. [44893]

Mr. Spellar: The disposal of the core sites of 14MU RAF Carlisle jointly to Cumbria and Carlisle is ongoing. While land quality issues remain a sensitive matter, it is our aim to conclude contract terms shortly.

A separate marketing campaign for the open market sale of the four outlying sites is to be initiated this month.

Reserve Forces

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what evaluation he has made of the current (i) use, (ii) deployment and (iii) role of reserve infantry forces amongst the United Kingdom's NATO allies. [44896]

Dr. Reid: We are in regular contact with our NATO Allies on Reserve issues. Most NATO nations rely on conscript Reserves or are undergoing a period of change in their Reserve force structures. In the context of the Strategic Defence Review, we have, in particular, consulted the United States of America on a range of Reserve issues, including matters relevant to the role, use and deployment of infantry.

Departmental Energy Use

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 1 June 1998, Official Report, column 107, what recognised performance indicators are used at each site for which an energy manager has been appointed; and, for each, what practical savings have been achieved in respect of each indicator in each of the last five years. [44899]

Mr. Spellar: The performance indicators used across the services are the published Government Energy Consumption Targets. MOD's Energy Consumption is reported to DETR by energy focal points and Departmental results are announced annually, usually in January/February. Last year's figures have recently been announced and indicate that MOD are ahead of the Government targets.

Employees (Wales)

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his current estimate of the number employed in defence establishments in Wales; and if he will make a statement. [45004]

Mr. Spellar: The most recent date for which comprehensive figures are available is 1 July 1997. At that time, the number employed in defence establishment in Wales was 8,450. Of these, 3,350 were service personnel and 5,100 were civilians.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

BBC

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will require the BBC to distinguish between its public service broadcasting and its commercial ventures in its accounts. [44214]

Mr. Fisher [holding answer 8 June 1998]: The BBC's accounts, in its forthcoming Annual Report, due to be laid before Parliament on 15 July, will incorporate a number of measures to increase their transparency, including showing clearly the £90 million cash flow benefit of BBC

Worldwide to the licence fee payer. The financial statements will also include BBC Worldwide's statutory accounts and a segmental analysis of its activities.

We welcome these measures and in the light of them have no plans to impose further accounting requirements.

Departmental Energy Use

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what proportion of the Department's energy usage was from (a) renewable energy and (b) combined heating in each year since 1989–90. [44084]

Mr. Tom Clarke: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave on 5 May 1998, Official Report, column 262.

English Tourist Board

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans he has to abolish the English Tourist Board. [44623]

Mr. Tom Clarke [holding answer 8 June 1998]: As part of the Government's Comprehensive Spending Review, we are looking at all aspects of the Department's work and its related bodies, but no final decisions have yet been made.

Tourism (National Lottery)

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport, pursuant to his oral answer to the right hon. Member for Cities of London and Westminster (Mr. Brooke) on 1 June 1998, Official Report, column 11, when he expects to conclude discussions about National Lottery funding for English tourism; and what representations he has received on this subject. [44631]

Mr. Tom Clarke [holding answer 8 June 1998]: Discussions on all subjects relating to the comprehensive spending review will be completed in the summer.

The National Lottery has provided, and will continue to provide, significant funding for projects in England which will benefit tourism. We received responses from several organisations in the tourism industry to our proposals to reform the Lottery, which were set out in the White Paper, The People's Lottery.

TREASURY

Quarrying Tax

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has for a quarrying tax. [43250]

Dawn Primarolo: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the Financial Statement and Budget Report (HC 620), paragraph 5.59.

Government-guaranteed Loans

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will set out the Treasury's guidelines on whether loans guaranteed by the Government form part of the PSBR. [44965]

Mr. Darling: Borrowing by the public sector forms part of the PSBR whether guaranteed or not. Market borrowing by the private sector guaranteed by the Government does not form part of the PSBR. The guarantee is a contingent liability. Only if the guarantee is called in would there be any public expenditure and thus an impact on the PSBR.

International Debt

Mr. Lilley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the value of loans including unpaid interest to developing countries made or guaranteed by the British Government which have been forgiven or written off since 1979 broken down by (a) country, (b) year and (c) type of debt; and what has been the total value of loans forgiven or written off since (i) 1979 and (ii) 5 May 1997. [42043]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 14 May 1998]: (a) The table shows the value (in millions of pounds) of the principal of export credit loans which has been written off by ECGD, broken down by year and by country. The value of unpaid interest forgiven or written off is not available.

£ million

Country	1992–3	1993–4	1994–56	1995–6	1996–7	1997–8	Total
Benin	3.77	—	3.83	—	—	—	7.6
Bolivia	3.56	—	3.74	5.79	—	—	13.09
Burkina Faso	—	—	0.57	—	0.56	—	1.13
Egypt	—	—	70.79	—	96.23	4.22	171.24
Ethiopia	—	—	—	—	—	2.32	2.32
Guyana	—	—	—	—	—	72.25	72.25
Mali	—	—	—	—	7.06	—	7.06
Mauritania	—	—	—	0.39	0.08	—	0.47
Mozambique	—	—	—	—	—	0.79	0.79
Nicaragua	0.4	—	0.4	—	—	—	0.8
Niger	—	—	—	—	0.06	0.13	0.18
Poland	—	—	346.24	—	—	—	346.24
Senegal	0.03	—	0.18	0.08	0.03	—	0.33
Tanzania	17.6	—	19.01	—	—	0.76	37.36
Togo	—	—	—	1.76	1.98	0.49	4.23
Uganda	—	—	—	6.05	—	—	6.05
Vietnam	—	—	5.84	—	—	—	5.84
Yemen	—	—	—	—	6.26	—	6.26
Zambia	—	—	—	—	6.65	0.28	6.93
Total	25.36	0	450.59	14.07	118.9	81.24	690.16

No export credit loans were written off before 1991/2, making the total written off since 1979 £690.16 million. The total written off in the financial year 1997/8 (ie including April 1997) is £81.24 million.

(b) The table shows the value (in millions of pounds) of aid loans, including unpaid interest, which has been written off by DFID, broken down by year and by country.

£ million

Country	Year Granted	Amount
Botswana	1979	20.68
Lesotho	1979	0.4
Malawi	1979	30.7
Sierra Leone	1979	10.35
Sudan	1979	9.87
Tanzania	1979	3.4
The Gambia	1979	5.15
Egypt	1979	17.57
Afghanistan	1979	0.98
Bangladesh	1979	15.36
India[2]	1979	564.16
Indonesia	1979	39.85
Nepal	1979	1.97
Pakistan	1979	76.03
Sir Lanka	1979	25.21
West. Samoa	1979	0.2
Zimbabwe[1]	1980	22.9
Uganda	1981	16.45
Uganda[1]	1981	5.64
Mozambique	1983	21.81
EAC[3]	1984	2.33
Ethiopia	1984	2.5
Ghana	1985	50.85
Senegal	1988	1.07
Egypt	1991	7.02
Guyana[1]	1991	5.46
Bolivia	1992	0.14
Honduras	1992	5
Jamaica[1]	1992	6.1
Zambia	1993	55.91
Guyana	1993	53.43
Jordan	1994	43.79
Jordan[1]	1994	2.35
Nicaragua	1995	0.53
Nicaragua[1]	1995	0.05
Peru	1995	1.63
Peru[1]	1995	3.46
Cote d'Ivoire	1996	3.45
Laos	1997	0.03
Tonga	1997	0.46
Dominica	1997	6.6
Grenada	1997	3.31
St. Lucia	1997	2.83
Mauritius	1998	1.1
Barbados	1998	0.23
Jamaica	1998	7.3
TCI[4]	1998	1.88
Total	1979–98	1,157.5

[1] These countries received Special Debt Cancellation (SDC) rather than Retrospective Terms Adjustment (RTA). However, both mechanisms operate in the same manner.

[2] For India, an equivalent amount of cost aid was granted instead of normal RTA

[3] East African Community

[4] Turks and Caicos Islands

The total value of aid loans that has been written off since 1979 is £1,157.5 million. Of this amount, £23.74 million has so far been written off since the beginning of 1997.

Economic and Monetary Union

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if Her Majesty's Government will treat the euro as a medium of exchange having value or as a unit of account. [44505]

Mrs. Liddell: The euro will be the currency of participating Member States and will be treated as such in the United Kingdom, in the same way as any other foreign currency.

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how lender of last resort operations will be co-ordinated during Stage Three of Economic and Monetary Union; and which individuals or bodies will be responsible for this. [44454]

Mrs. Liddell: The Treaty of Maastricht does not cover lender of last resort responsibilities. Under the Treaty, Member States and their national authorities therefore remain solely responsible for such matters.

EU Contributions

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will provide a breakdown of the United Kingdom's contributions to the European Union for (a) 1996–97 and (b) 1997–98, and the estimated contributions for (i) 1998–99 and (ii) 1999–2000. [44022]

Mrs. Liddell: Details of the United Kingdom's gross and net contributions in 1996–97 and 1997–98 together with the Government's estimate of the trended net contribution for 1998–99 were set out in the Departmental Report of the Chancellor of the Exchequer's Department's published in April. These figures are reproduced in the following table:

£ million

Year	Gross contribution	Abatement	Public sector receipts	Net contribution
1996–97	9,278	–2,418	–4,567	2,293
1997–98	8,523	–1,582	–4,636	2,305
				Trended net contribution
1998–99	—	—	—	3,025

The Government are, in the light of latest information, currently assessing the trended net contribution for 1999–2000 and more detailed cash flow figures for 1998–99. These will be published as part of the Comprehensive Spending Review.

Low Pay

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many (a) men and (b) women working (i) full-time and (ii) part-time in (1) Pendle and (2) Lancashire earn less than (x) £3 per hour, (y) £3.60 per hour, and (z) £4 per hour; and, in each case, what is the percentage of the total number employed. [44380]

Mrs. Liddell: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Chief Executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Gordon Prentice, dated 9 June 1998:

As Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS), I have been asked to reply to your parliamentary question on earnings.

As with my reply on 22 May 1997, Official Report, column 117, I can give estimates of the percentage of employees in Pendle and Lancashire earning less than the hourly rates you mention, but not the number.

The latest information, from the New Earnings Survey 1997, is contained in the attached table:

Employees on adult rates, whose pay for the survey pay-period was unaffected by absence—New Earnings Survey—April 1997

	£3.00	£3.60	£4.00
Pendle[1]
Full-time men	0.0	1.3	1.3
Part-time men	[2]—	[2]—	[2]—
Full-time women	2.2	13.0	19.6
Part-time women	3.7	33.3	48.1
All employees	1.3	10.9	16.0
Lancashire
Full-time men	0.5	3.7	6.7
Part-time men	6.1	32.3	37.4
Full-time women	1.4	7.9	12.2
Part-time women	6.0	26.3	41.6
All employees	1.9	9.9	15.5

[1] Parliamentary constituency

[2] denotes an estimate which is unavailable because the sample size is too small

Education Qualifications

Yvette Cooper: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what are the percentages of those in each occupational classification whose highest educational attainment is (a) post-graduate, (b) higher education (excluding post-graduate), (c) further education and (d) GSCE; [44289]

(2) what were the rates of unemployment according to educational attainment at the most recent available date. [44290]

Mrs. Liddell: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Chief Executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Tim Holt to Yvette Cooper, dated 9 June 1998:

As Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS), I have been asked to reply to your parliamentary questions about occupation by highest qualification and unemployment rates by highest qualification.

The information requested, using estimates from the Labour Force Survey, is shown in the attached tables.

ILO Unemployment rate of working age[1] people by highest qualification United Kingdom, winter 1997/98, not seasonally adjusted

Highest qualification	ILO unemployment rate per cent.
Post-graduate	2.8
Higher education	3.3
Further education	4.9
GCSE grades A-C or equivalent	6.8
Below GCSE grades A-C	8.1
Other—level unknown	4.7
No qualifications	12.0
All[2]	6.4

[1] Working age is men aged 16–64 and women aged 16–59

[2] Unemployment rate for all those of working age includes those who did not state their highest qualification

Source:

Labour Force Survey; ONS

People of working age[1] in employment by occupational group and highest qualification United Kingdom, winter 1997/98, not seasonally adjusted

Percentage

	Post-graduate	Higher Education	Further Education	GCSE grades A-C or equivalent	Below GCSE grades A-C	Other-level unknown	No qualifications	Total	Total in employment[2] (thousand)
1. Managers and administrators	4.6	28.8	28.1	20.9	3.3	7.0	7.3	100.0	4,207
2. Professional occupations	23.5	59.5	9.1	4.1	0.4	3.0	0.4	100.0	2,705
3. Associate professional & technical occupations	5.5	50.4	21.5	14.2	1.9	4.5	1.9	100.0	2,623
4. Clerical, secretarial occupations	0.7	12.3	22.2	40.2	9.3	6.3	9.1	100.0	3,883
5. Craft and related occupations	0.3	6.4	52.8	14.7	6.3	5.4	14.0	100.0	3,251
6. Personal, protective occupations	0.4	9.3	23.7	31.0	8.2	12.0	15.4	100.0	2,794
7. Sales occupations	0.6	8.9	22.8	36.1	8.2	6.6	16.8	100.0	2,102
8. Plant and machine operatives	[4]—	3.3	22.2	20.7	10.0	20.6	23.0	100.0	2,489
9. Other occupations	[4]—	2.5	14.5	23.6	11.1	12.5	35.7	100.0	2,010
All in employment[3]	4.0	20.8	25.1	23.1	6.3	8.2	12.5	100.0	26,143

[1] Working age is men aged 16–64 and women aged 16–59

[2] Totals include a few people who did not state their highest qualification, but percentages calculated using valid responses only

[3] Includes those who did not specify their occupation

[4] Sample size too small for reliable estimate

Source:

Labour Force Survey; ONS

Breast Cancer

Ms Perham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will give a breakdown by age range of the incidence of breast cancer in women in England in each of the last five years. [44936]

Mrs. Liddell: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Chief Executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from John Fox to Ms Linda Perham, dated 9 June 1998:

In the absence of the Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS), I have been asked to reply to your recent question on breast cancer in England.

The numbers of newly diagnosed cases and incidence rates per 100,000 females of breast cancer (International Classification of Diseases 9th Revision, ICD9, 174) in England, 1989–1993 (the last five years for which data are available), are shown in the table.

Incidence of breast cancer, England, 1989–1993

	Number of newly diagnosed cases					Rate per 100,000
	1989	1990	1991	1992 [1]	1993 [1]	1989	1990	1991	1992 [1]	1993 [1]
Under 1	1	1	0	0	4	0.3	0.3	0.0	0.0	1.3
1–4	0	0	0	0	0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0
5–9	0	0	0	0	0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0
10–14	0	0	0	0	0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0
15–19	2	1	2	1	3	0.1	0.1	0.1	0.1	0.2
20–24	29	26	24	18	20	1.5	1.4	1.3	1.0	1.1
25–29	145	148	129	152	141	7.6	7.6	6.5	7.7	7.2
30–34	407	398	440	486	460	24.6	23.3	25.0	26.8	24.7
35–39	945	873	921	945	882	59.5	55.4	58.3	59.0	54.1
40–44	1,867	1,720	1,829	1,744	1,577	109.0	99.2	105.0	105.2	97.9
45–49	2,272	2,246	2,432	2,797	2,707	166.4	159.6	165.4	174.9	162.0
50–54	2,393	2,694	2,995	3,093	2,946	186.6	208.9	234.6	241.2	225.2
55–59	2,754	3,081	3,468	3,313	2,984	221.2	251.0	285.1	271.9	242.0
60–64	3,259	3,801	3,976	3,855	3,447	259.1	304.5	320.8	314.2	284.7
65–69	3,431	3,343	3,128	3,047	2,698	255.6	260.1	251.7	251.5	226.8
70–74	2,584	2,647	2,863	3,033	3,006	259.6	255.1	265.2	270.8	257.5
75–79	2,693	2,618	2,697	2,611	2,336	278.9	271.2	282.6	281.5	265.7
80–84	2,055	1,998	2,154	2,258	2,052	292.6	281.4	300.9	315.1	286.0
85+	1,936	1,915	2,092	2,204	2,129	360.2	343.7	360.8	364.7	337.0
All ages	26,773	27,510	29,150	29,557	27,392	109.5	112.2	118.4	119.7	110.7
DAS[2]	—	—	—	—	—	95.2	98.9	105.2	105.7	97.2

[1] Provisional data
[2] Directly age standardised using the European standard population to take account of the changing age structure of the population

SCOTLAND

Towns (City Status)

Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what criteria are used in Scotland to award city status to towns; and if he will make it his policy to create a new city by 2000. [44683]

Mr. McLeish: There are no settled criteria for the award of city status to towns in Scotland. Such an award has not been made since Dundee was awarded city status in 1889. Any further award would be a matter for Her Majesty The Queen acting under the Royal Prerogative on the advice of the Government of the day. There are no plans to recommend such an award in Scotland at present.

Procurator Fiscal Service

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the procurator fiscal posts in respect of which decisions have been taken not to replace an existing fiscal since 1 May 1997; and if he will state the reason for this decision in each case. [44818]

Mr. McLeish: The Crown Office and Procurator Fiscal Service is an independent Government Department under the direction of my noble and learned Friend the Lord Advocate.

The only Procurator Fiscal post in respect of which a decision has been taken not to replace an existing fiscal since 1 May 1997 is at Alloa. This decision was taken in May 1998.

The reason for this decision was to ensure good management and operational effectiveness.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the total number of working days and cost thereof in (a) 1996–97 and (b) 1997–98 in respect of which ad hoc deputies were engaged by the Procurator Fiscal Service in each regional area of the service. [44812]

Mr. McLeish: The Crown Office and Procurator Fiscal service is an independent Government Department under the direction of my noble and learned Friend the Lord Advocate.

The total number of working days and cost of ad hoc Procurator Fiscal deputies by region for 1996–97 and 1997–98 were:

	1996–97		1997–98
	Days	Cost (£)	Days	Cost (£)
Grampian	242	31,509	81	10,575
Tayside	890	115,678	113	14,681
Lothian	67	8,752	164	21,337
Glasgow	556	72,359	605	78,727
N. Strathclyde	291	37,887	194	25,272
S. Strathclyde	121	15,755	52	6,836

The number of days are approximate and have been derived by dividing the known total cost by an average daily cost.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what expenditure was incurred in 1997–98 in respect of the operational running costs of the Procurator Fiscal Service. [44814]

Mr. McLeish: The Crown Office and Procurator Fiscal service is an independent Government Department under the direction of my noble and learned friend the Lord Advocate.

Departmental running costs in 1997–98 were £44,237,000, of which £36,064,000 represented the operational costs of the Procurator Fiscal Service.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many legally-qualified members of staff were employed in each regional area of the Procurator Fiscal Service on 31 March in (a) 1996, (b) 1997 and (c) 1998; and what was the agreed complement of such staff for each area on these dates. [44811]

Mr. McLeish: The Crown Office and Procurator Fiscal Service is an independent Government Department under the direction of my noble and learned Friend the Lord Advocate.

The numbers of legally qualified staff employed in each regional area of the Procurator Fiscal Service are as follows:

Region	Date	Legal staff employed
Grampian, Highland Island	31 March 1996	30
	31 March 1997	32
	31 March 1998	30
Tayside, Central and Fife	31 March 1996	39.3
	31 March 1997	46.1
	31 March 1998	44.5
Lothian and Borders	31 March 1996	38.5
	31 March 1997	36.9
	31 March 1998	40.7
Glasgow	31 March 1996	62.7
	31 March 1997	66.5
	31 March 1998	63.9
North Strathclyde	31 March 1996	34.4
	31 March 1997	37
	31 March 1998	36.5
South Strathclyde	31 March 1996	39.2
	31 March 1997	41.9
	31 March 1998	42.7

There is no fixed complement staff.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the case-related expenditure in each regional area of the Procurator Fiscal Service in (a) the financial year immediately prior to the implementation of the Criminal Procedure (Scotland) Act 1995 and (b) each complete financial year since its implementation in respect of (i) solemn proceedings in the High Court, (ii) solemn proceedings in the Sheriff Court and (iii) summary proceedings. [44815]

Mr. McLeish: The Crown Office and Procurator Fiscal service is an independent Government Department under the direction of my noble and learned Friend the Lord Advocate.

The case-related expenditure in each region prior to the implementation of the Criminal Procedure (Scotland) Act 1995 and then subsequent to the Act was:

£000

	Prior 1995–96	Subsequent 1996–97	1997–98
Grampian	746	754	711
Tayside	1,476	1,705	1,517
Lothian	1,113	1,115	1,282
Glasgow	1,682	1,391	1,174
North Strathclyde	973	849	802
South Strathclyde	1,104	1,124	949

The specific information requested on solemn and summary proceedings is not readily available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. Further details of operations and costs are contained in the Department's Annual Report, a copy of which is in the House Library.

School Books

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will state in respect of each local education authority area in Scotland the average amount allocated for the purchase of books in each (a) primary and (b) secondary school in 1996–97 and 1997–98. [44817]

Mr. Wilson: The information is not collected centrally.

Legal Aid

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much was spent on (a) criminal legal aid and (b) the administration of the Scottish criminal legal aid scheme in 1997–98. [44813]

Mr. Dewar: The Scottish Legal Aid Board will shortly be publishing its full accounts on an accruals basis in its Annual Report and the hon. and learned Member will be sent a copy. In cash terms, the provisional expenditure on criminal legal aid in 1997–98 was £82.054 million. The Board also spent £7.583 million on advice and assistance in criminal matters and £2.438 million on Advice by Way of Representation (ABWOR), most of which was spent on criminal cases. The estimated cost, in cash terms, of administering criminal legal aid in 1997–98 was £2.340 million and that of the criminal elements of advice and assistance and ABWOR was £0.841 million.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Seaward Petroleum Licensing

Mr. Blizzard: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when the 18th round of seaward petroleum licensing will take place. [45364]

Mr. Battle: The 18th Seaward Petroleum Licensing Round has opened with the publication of the formal offer notice in the Official Journal of the European Communities.

The notice invites applications for unlicensed acreage in the northern, central, and southern North Sea and in the northern half of the Irish Sea, Liverpool Bay, and Morecambe Bay. These are established oil and gas provinces where licences were last offered in 1994.

Interest is expected, in particular, from companies keen to use new data acquisition and processing techniques to locate structures similar to recent finds in other sectors of the North Sea or elsewhere in the world, or to identify new resources close to producing fields which may extend the life of their existing offshore infrastructure.

The offer includes blocks relinquished by previous licencees in response to the fallow blocks initiative, which has encouraged companies to hand back acreage for which they have no current exploration or development plans, and so to make it available for others to explore and exploit where possible.

A number of unlicensed blocks in the broad areas covered by the round have been excluded from this round, either for environmental protection reasons on the advice of the Joint Nature Conservation Committee, or to protect the interests of other sea users.

Drilling and development activity under licences awarded in this round will be subject to the requirements of regulations to implement the Environmental Impact Assessment Directive (85/337/EEC) as it applies to the offshore oil and gas industry which came into effect on 30 April 1998. The regulations apply to all relevant projects, irrespective of the date of the licence under which they are carried out, and will give the public access to project Environmental Statements on which they can comment to the Government.

The closing dates for the receipt of applications will be 10 and 11 September. I hope the industry will take full advantage of the licensing opportunities available to them.

Parcel Services

Mr. Boswell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what complaints she has received about arrangements which provide for transatlantic carriage of parcels by the Post Office to United States destinations at a lower rate than those destinations can be served by United States domestic services. [43805]

Mr. Ian McCartney: None. If the hon. Member provides details I will look into the issue.

Electricity

Mr. Caplin: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what measures she will take to ensure that poorer families gain from the benefits of competition in the electricity industry, with particular reference to those using prepayment keys. [43057]

Mr. Stunell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to her answer of 11 June 1997, Official Report, column 466, what steps she proposes to take to reduce the cost of electricity charges for small consumers on low incomes. [43149]

Mr. Battle: In our Green Paper, A Fair Deal for Customers, the Government have asked the gas and electricity regulators to prepare an action plan on ways to ensure that the regulatory regime works to the benefit of all domestic customers including those who are less well off financially. The plan should enable progress in assisting such customers to be judged against measurable targets.

The Government are considering the case for legislation to require the gas and electricity networks to make differential charges to supply companies in favour of prepayment meter customers. As part of the regulators' plan, therefore, the regulators should advise on whether and how such a proposal might operate and the appropriate level for such charges.

The arrangements currently being put in place for electricity supply competition by OFFER and the electricity industry are designed to ensure that prepayment meter customers will be able to switch supplier like any other electricity customer.

Arms Exhibitions

Ann Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade which officials from her Department attended the Eurosatory arms fair in Paris in June; what were the costs of their attendance; and what funding her Department provided to defence companies attending this event. [44507]

Mrs. Roche: The DTI provided support for twenty UK firms exhibiting at Eurosatory in the form of grants towards the cost of participation. A preliminary grant has been paid to the Defence Manufacturers Association who were managing the UK group. Remaining payments are subject to claims not yet received, but the overall budget for the event has been set at £85,000. Two more firms were part of the UK group but are ineligible for grant. I have been informed that no DTI officials attended the event.

Export Credits

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) what percentage of export credits to each country in each year since 1970–71 was allocated to defence contracts; [43404]

(2) what estimate she has made of how much in (a) cash terms and (b) real terms, in 1998–99 prices, each country receiving export credits will receive in (i) 1999–2000 and (ii) 2000–2001; [43405]

(3) how much in (a) cash terms and (b) real terms, in 1998–99 prices, each country receiving export credits (i) paid back and (ii) had written off in each year since 1970–71; [43406]

(4) if she will list the countries which have been recipients of export credits from the Exports Credits Guarantee Department since 1970–71; [43407]

(5) how much in (a) cash terms and (b) real terms, in 1998–99 prices, each country receiving export credits accepted in each year since 1970–71. [43408]

Mrs. Roche [holding answer 3 June 1998]: The information requested is in large part either no longer available or could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

I am however sending today by way of reply a report that details new ECGD-supported business broken down by country for each year since 1986, which sets out the element of defence-related business for each year and each market.

I am placing a copy of the report in the library of the House.

Miners

Caroline Flint: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many interim payments have been made to ex-miners suffering from respiratory disease; and if she will make a statement. [45366]

Mr. Battle: To date, 259 payments have been made.

At the High Court hearing on 27 March, solicitors acting for the plaintiffs were granted a three-month adjournment to allow for further discussions to take place with the Department's agents to seek to agree arrangements for the administration of outstanding claims.

Given this further delay, we undertook to make interim payments of £2,000 to a minimum of 5,000 elderly claimants currently in receipt of Industrial Injuries Disablement Benefit for chronic bronchitis and emphysema. We have now extended this offer to all claimants currently in receipt of this benefit, as well as to the widows of those previously in receipt of the benefit. We estimate that this could be as many as 13,000. The speed at which offers can be made is still reliant on the co-operation of the claimants' solicitors who need to submit evidence of receipt of benefit.

Discussions are continuing between the Department's representatives and the plaintiffs solicitors on suitable arrangements for assessing and compensating valid claims. To help facilitate speedy resolution of these discussions, we have agreed that Small Airways Disease (SAD) compensation should be paid even though no clear finding was made in relation to it in the High Court judgment.

Tobacco Products

Mr. Flynn: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the total value of sales of tobacco products sold in the United Kingdom by each category of tobacco product in the last year for which figures are available. [44076]

Mrs. Roche: Statistics on the UK market for tobacco products are available in the Office for National Statistics publication "Product Sales & Trade PRA13, Tobacco Products". A copy of the latest publication, with data for 1993 to 1996, can be found in the Library of the House. These figures exclude Excise duties and Value Added Tax.

UK Investors (Russia)

Mr. Fraser: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what advice her Department currently offers to United Kingdom investors seeking to investigate commercial opportunities in (a) Russia and (b) other countries formerly part of the USSR. [44803]

Mrs. Roche: We point out to UK investors seeking to investigate commercial opportunities in Russia that there are now a large number of successful UK investments. However, companies wishing to invest continue to face many obstacles, primarily resulting from the lack of transparency in the legal and fiscal framework for doing business and, therefore, good preparation is essential. As far as the remainder of the old USSR is concerned, the investment situation is very variable. As a general rule, at the present time, we would not encourage UK companies to seek out investment opportunities in Belarus, Moldova or Ukraine. The countries of Central Asia and Transcaucasia (with the exception of Tadjikistan) do present investment opportunities in a limited range of sectors but, again, the overall lack of transparency means good preparation is essential. The situation in the three Baltic States is different as the investment framework is now much more amenable to doing business.

Internet Watch Foundation

Ms Beverley Hughes: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what firm of consultants has been appointed to undertake the review of the Internet Watch Foundation; and how they intend to seek views from interested parties. [43932]

Mrs. Roche [holding answer 8 June 1998]: Work is well under way in preparing to appoint consultants to undertake the review. Discussions have been held with interested parties over detailed terms of reference and expressions of interest will be invited shortly. We will expect the winners of that tender to use a variety of research methods to obtain views from interested parties, including inviting written representations. In the meantime, anyone wishing to offer views should address them to officials in the Communications and Information Industries Directorate of my Department who are commissioning the review.

Wind Farming

Mr. Oaten: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans she has further to develop wind farming in the United Kingdom. [43550]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 1 June 1998]: The Government consider that wind energy is one of the most promising renewables and has the prospect to contribute substantially to UK energy supplies.

In line with the Government's manifesto commitment to a new and strong drive to develop renewable energy sources, in June 1997, I initiated a review of new and renewable energy policy including what would be necessary and practicable to achieve 10 per cent. of UK's electricity needs from renewables by the year 2010 and what contribution new and renewables could make to the Government's target of a 20 per cent. reduction in CO_2 emissions by 2010. The Review is considering all forms of New and Renewable Energy including the prospects for onshore and offshore wind energy.

In November 1997, I announced outline policy proposals for the fifth Non-Fossil Fuel Obligation Renewables Order in England and Wales (NFFO-5), and which included provision for onshore wind energy with new separate technology bands for small and larger scale windfarms. The purpose of these Orders is to secure additional generating capacity from renewables in order to help them enter the commercial generating market. There are currently fifty-five NFFO wind energy projects generating electricity with a combined capacity of 132.28 MW and I look forward to seeing this contribution grow in coming years.

Gas-fired Power Stations

Mr. Pound: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) what assessment she has made of the impact on investment in the United Kingdom of a five-year moratorium on building gas-fired power stations; [44635]

(2) if she will publish the Government's estimates of the level of emissions of sulphur dioxide, carbon dioxide, nitrogen oxide and particulates from power stations over the period 1999 to 2008 on the assumption that (a) a five-year moratorium on building gas-fired power stations is introduced and (b) that the current moratorium on building gas-fired power stations ends forthwith; [44638]

(3) what will be the impact on the National Air Quality Strategy targets of a five-year moratorium on gas-fired power stations; and what additional measures would be required to meet these targets following the introduction of such a moratorium; [44637]

(4) what assessment she has made of the economic impact of a five-year moratorium on building gas-fired power stations on those generators which own coal-fired power stations; [44636]

(5) what assessment she has made of the impact on employment, by sector, of a five-year moratorium on the building of gas-fired power stations. [44625]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 8 June 1998]: The Government are engaged in a review of energy sources for power generation. An announcement will be made when a conclusion has been reached.

Renewables

Mr. Stunell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment she has made of the impact of measures set out in the EU White Paper on Renewables on job creation in the United Kingdom; and if she will make a statement. [43667]

Mr. Battle: The Commissioner's White Paper recognises that net employment figures in the renewable energy sector are difficult to predict and calculate. It would be very difficult to disaggregate the various estimates for EU as a whole to determine a UK figure. The White Paper envisages a capital investment in renewable energy of around ecu 165 billion by 2010 and estimates that this might create between 500,000 and 900,000 jobs across Europe. Clearly this presents a significant business opportunity for UK companies.

European Structural Funds

Mr. Gareth Thomas: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1), pursuant to the answer of 1 June 1998, Official Report, column 4, what discussions the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions has had with (a) Ministers and (b) officials in other departments relating to the review of EU structural funds in respect of Wales; and what was the nature and scope of such discussions; [44393]

(2), pursuant to her answer of 21 May 1998, Official Report, columns 543–44, what has been the nature and content of her discussions with Welsh Office (a) officials and (b) Ministers on the subject of (i) Objective One funding for Wales and (ii) other aspects of Agenda 2000. [44394]

Mrs. Roche [holding answers 5 June 1998]: Since the Department co-ordinates UK policy on the Structural Funds, both I and other DTI Ministers have frequently discussed the Structural Funds aspects of Agenda 2000 with colleagues, including those in the Welsh Office. Officials from the relevant departments are also in regular touch.

Mrs. Betty Williams: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when she expects the review of European Structural Funds to be completed. [43253]

Mrs. Roche: As part of the Agenda 2000 package, the Commission published their proposed draft regulations for the Structural and Cohesion Fund policies for the years 2000 to 2006 on 18 March 1998.

The proposals will have to be agreed by the Council of Ministers and, where appropriate, approved by the European Parliament. We do not expect the regulations for the Structural and Cohesion Funds to be adopted until early 1999.

Crown Post Office, Watford

Ms Ward: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will make a statement on the provision of a Crown Post Office in Watford. [44667]

Mr. Ian McCartney: I understand from the Post Office that the Crown post office in Watford was converted to a franchise office in February 1997 under a five-year contract. The franchise office continues to provide the full range of services previously provided at the Crown post office. In May 1997, at my request, the Post Office suspended its Crown office conversion programme, except where irreversible contractual commitments existed, until decisions on this programme could be made on an informed basis in the wider context of our review of the Post Office.

Printing, Packaging and Graphics Communications Industry

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what steps her Department has taken to encourage workforce flexibility to create and sustain jobs in the United Kingdom printing, packaging and graphic communications industry. [43445]

Mr. Ian McCartney: The Government recognise the benefits for competitiveness and employment of workforce flexibility, and encourage generally the spread of flexible working practices such as varying patterns of work, multi-skilling, and teleworking. Workforce flexibility will be amongst the issues to be addressed in a forthcoming joint industry/union/DTI study on the competitiveness of the industry.

PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL

Reviews

Mr. Allan: To ask the President of the Council if she will list, for each of the last four years, the departmental inquiries and reviews instigated by Ministers which have been chaired by individuals outside her Department; and in each case if she will give the date of establishment and the name of the chairman. [44362]

Mrs. Ann Taylor: No such inquiries or reviews have been instigated by Ministers in the Privy Council Office.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Regional Development Agencies

10. Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the progress made towards setting up the boards of the new regional development agencies. [43235]

Angela Eagle: We are currently considering applications for chairmen or chairwomen, and board members of Regional Development Agencies. We cannot formally make appointments to boards until the Regional Development Agencies Bill has received Royal Assent but hope to identify the prospective chairs as advisers before then to help with the preparation for the RDAs.

20. Maria Eagle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will site the north-west regional development agency office in Liverpool. [43246]

Angela Eagle: Decisions about the locations of Regional Development Agency offices will be for the RDAs. They will need to take account of all relevant factors, including the requirement on non-departmental public bodies to secure best value for money.

Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if there will be a net increase in resources going to the South West Region after the setting up of the Regional Development Agency. [43243]

Angela Eagle: It is too early to say what resources the South West will receive once the Regional Development Agencies are up and running next April. Plans for expenditure in 1999–2000 will depend on the outcome of the Comprehensive Spending Review. However, RDAs will provide a more cohesive approach, which will lead to more effective use of the available funding.

Council Tax (Second Homes)

11. Mr. Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the impact of providing a 50 per cent. discount on council tax for second homes. [43236]

Ms Armstrong: Around 500,000 households in England qualify for the 50 per cent. council tax discount at a cost of some £170 million. Not all of the dwellings which receive the discount are second or holiday homes. The 50 per cent. discount applies to all unoccupied dwellings and to certain occupied dwellings such as those where all of the residents are disregarded, for example, households consisting of someone who is severely mentally impaired and their carer.

Inland Waterways

12. Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to improve planning and co-ordination of responsibilities for navigation rights as part of overall management of inland waterways. [43237]

Angela Eagle: The country's inland waterways are managed by over 30 navigation authorities. The Association of Inland Navigation Authorities enables them to share information and co-ordinate navigation issues.

Brown-field Sites

13. Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he expects to publish the locations of identified brown-field sites in the United Kingdom. [43238]

Mr. Caborn: Work starts this summer to gather information about previously developed land in England which may be available for redevelopment. My Department is working on this with the Local Government Management Board, English Partnerships, Ordnance Survey and Local Authorities. English Partnerships intends to publish information on an initial set of sites suitable for redevelopment, by the end of the year; summary results for all sites should be available by March 1999.

19. Mr. John M. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what recent representations he has received on his current target for development on brown-field sites. [43245]

Mr. Caborn: The Government expect local authorities to be able to raise the national proportion of new homes to be built on previously developed land, including conversions of existing buildings, to 60 per cent. over the next 10 years. We also expect the regional conferences of local authorities to bring forward regional recycling targets.

24. Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what progress he has made in his review of policy concerning new housing numbers and development on green-field and brown-field sites. [43251]

Mr. Caborn: We are taking forward the further action outlined in Planning for the Communities of the Future. In particular, the Urban Task Force has started its work and we have started work on the development of a National Land Use Database.

Social Housing

14. Mr. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what estimate he has made of the number of social houses to be built in each of next three years. [43239]

Mr. Raynsford: We expect over 53,000 new social lettings to be created during 1998/99 through a mixture of new build, renovation, conversion and assisted exit from the social rented sector. Future levels of social housing provision are dependent on the outcome of the Comprehensive Spending Review.

Local Government Finance

15. Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to reform local government finance; and if he will make a statement. [43240]

Ms Armstrong: On 30 March, the Government published three consultation papers:

Improving local financial accountability;

Business rates; and Capital finance.

The consultation period closed on 1 June and we are currently considering the responses. A White Paper on Modernising Local Government will be published in the summer.

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list for each council which has set a budget above its capping limit since the introduction of the capping regime (a) its provisional capping limit, (b) the budget set by the council, (c) the confirmed capping limit and (d) the final budget following appeal. [44462]

Ms Armstrong: Copies of the information requested have been placed in the Library of the House.

Housing Benefit

16. Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what action he is taking to equalise the arrangements for paying housing benefit to council tenants with that for other tenants. [43241]

Mr. Raynsford: We are currently reviewing all aspects of housing finance including personal subsidies to tenants.

Sports Grounds (Housing Development)

17. Mr. Pearson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what representations he has received concerning the loss of sports grounds to housing development. [43242]

Mr. Raynsford: We consulted local authorities on the 12 February on our proposals to tighten planning controls in respect of development on all local authority-owned playing fields where the English Sports Council advises against the proposals. We received 100 responses. We continue to receive correspondence about our "Planning for the Communities of the Future" policy document some of which has raised this matter.

Greenhouse Gases

18. Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what measures he will introduce to meet the Kyoto target for reductions in emissions of greenhouse gases. [43244]

Mr. Meacher: We intend to issue a consultation paper in the summer on measures to deliver our climate change targets. This will largely focus on delivering our legally binding commitment from Kyoto as well as considering how we might move towards our 20 per cent. domestic aim. We will be looking at the scope for savings from improved energy efficiency by business and in the home; lower transport emissions; and an increase in the electricity generated from renewables and combined heat and power.

23. Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on progress towards meeting the Government's target for reduction in carbon dioxide emissions by 2010. [43249]

Mr. Meacher: The United Kingdom is one of only a few countries on target to meet its Rio commitment to return greenhouse gas emissions to 1990 levels by the year 2000. In fact, for carbon dioxide, the UK is projected to be more than 5 per cent. below 1990 levels and for all greenhouse gases we expect to be 10 per cent. below 1990 levels by 2000.

We intend to issue a consultation paper in the summer on measures to deliver our climate change targets. This will largely focus on delivering our legally binding commitment from Kyoto as well as considering how we might move towards our 20 per cent. domestic aim. We will be looking at the scope for savings from improved energy efficiency by business and in the home; lower transport emissions; and an increase in the electricity generated from renewables and combined heat and power.

Heathrow Airport

21. Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the timetable for the Heathrow terminal 5 inquiry. [43247]

Mr. Caborn: The public inquiry into the proposed Terminal 5 at Heathrow Airport began in May 1995 and is currently expected to end in November 1998. The timetable for the inquiry is a matter for the Inspector.

Standard Spending Assessment

22. Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the level of SSA in Leicestershire. [43248]

Ms Armstrong: Leicestershire's SSA for 1998–99 is £352.825 million, an increase of £10.960 million or 3.2 per cent. on the equivalent figure for 1997–98. The SSA per head figure is £590.71.

26. Mrs. Laing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the expected level of change in SSAs for shire counties between 1997–98 and 1998–99. [43254]

Ms Armstrong: Details of the 1998–99 Local Government Finance Settlement were announced in February. The overall change in SSAs for shire counties is a 2.9 per cent. increase compared with the equivalent figure for 1997–98. Figures for individual authorities are available in the Library.

Greater London Authority

25. Sir Paul Beresford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what role the proposed Greater London authority will play in influencing planning decisions; and if he will make a statement. [43252]

Mr. Raynsford: The Mayor will be responsible for ensuring that planning decisions on matters of importance to London as a whole take account of the broader strategic interest. He or she will do this through informal advice to the boroughs and through two formal mechanisms:

(i) Strategic planning—The Mayor will be required to draw up a Spatial Development Strategy in place of the current guidance issued by the Secretary of State. The London boroughs will continue to produce detailed Unitary Development Plans for their areas, but these must be "in general conformity" with the Mayor's strategy.

(ii) Development Control—London boroughs will remain the primary planning authorities for their areas. For a limited number of classes of development with significant strategic implications, the borough will have to consult the Mayor before reaching its decision. In the last resort the Mayor will be able to direct a borough to refuse permission where this is necessary on genuine strategic grounds. The applicant would have the right of appeal to the Secretary of State in the normal way. The criteria for applications falling into this category will be strictly drawn and the Government will be consulting on these in due course.

Rail Fares

35. Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what discussions he has had with the regulatory bodies in respect of the level of rail fares. [43263]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Ministers meet with the Franchising Director on a regular basis and with the Rail Regulator from time to time to discuss a range of railways issues. The regulation of fares is a statutory responsibility of the Franchising Director. He has prescribed that annual increases in the price of key fares rise by no more than increases in the Retail Prices Index (RPI) based on June 1995 fare levels. From January 1999, these fares will be pegged to one per cent below the increase in the RPI.

Rail Performance Standards

37. Mr. Rhodri Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what consultations he has had with the rail regulators in relation to new performance standards for rail operating companies. [43265]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Franchising Director is responsible for setting performance standards for train operators. Ministers meet regularly with the Franchising Director to discuss a range of passenger railway issues.

National Rail Inquiry Service

38. Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what representations he has received about the service provided by the national rail inquiry service. [43266]

Ms Glenda Jackson: My Department and the Office of Passenger Rail Franchising have received 127 representations about the service provided by the National Rail Inquiry Scheme.

Bicycling

39. Mr. Bradshaw: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to mark National Bike Week. [43268]

Ms Glenda Jackson: We welcome National Bike Week and we are encouraged by the number of events in which people are taking part up and down the country. The week offers an excellent opportunity for raising awareness and drawing attention to the value of cycling. Making it easier for people to cycle will be a key element of our Integrated Transport White Paper.

The Department is planning a Bike Breakfast at its main London headquarters for staff who cycle to work on National Bike to Work Day on 10 June. Ministers took part in the Great Parliamentary Bike Ride on 9 June and are supporting other events during the week.

48. Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the role of bicycling in his transport policy. [43277]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Government fully recognise the value of cycling as a means of transport. We have already announced that cycling will have an important role in our integrated transport policy, details of which will be announced in the White Paper we plan to publish later this month.

Bus Companies

40. Dr. Whitehead: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to encourage the benchmarking of environmental performance by bus companies. [43269]

Dr. Strang: The Government are already introducing tax changes to encourage greener buses; and progressively higher emission standards have been required across the EU. I welcome voluntary benchmarking by the bus industry.

Leeds-Harrogate-York Line

41. Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to ensure an improvement in the quality of service on the Leeds-Harrogate-York line. [43270]

Ms Glenda Jackson: On 6 November 1997, the Minister for Transport issued to the Franchising Director new objectives, instructions and guidance which require him to manage the existing railway franchise contracts in the interest of passengers and to secure a progressive improvement in the quality of services. In the case of Leeds suburban services, the Franchising Director works with the West Yorkshire Passenger Transport Executive (PTE), which is also a signatory to the franchise contract, to achieve that. I understand that Railtrack is undertaking a project to increase a capacity on the western approaches to Leeds station and that Railtrack and the PTE regularly review available station capacity for peak services at Leeds. We propose to strengthen the powers available for the regulation of the railway to ensure the improvements in performance and service quality which we want to see.

British Road Federation

43. Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he last met representatives from the British Road Federation to discuss road expenditure and motoring taxation. [43272]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The British Road Federation met my noble Friend the Minister for Roads in July 1997 at which the subject of road expenditure and motoring taxation was one of a number of subjects discussed. In addition, my right hon. Friend the Minister of Transport gave the keynote speech at the BRF's conference on 25 September 1997.

The British Road Federation have made a full contribution to the consultation exercise which is informing our current fundamental review of transport policy.

M74 Motorway

44. Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what representations he has received on the start date for construction of the M74 between Carlisle and the Scottish borders. [43273]

Dr. Strang: Since the start of the Roads Review consultation exercise, I have received seven representations regarding the proposed construction of the extension of the M6/M74 between Carlisle and the Scottish Border, all of them in support.

Car Parking

45. Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to regulate privately owned car parking facilities. [43274]

49. Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to discourage parking in urban areas. [43279]

Dr. Strang: The Government's views on the use of parking controls and charges as part of an integrated transport policy will be set out in the forthcoming Transport White Paper.

London Underground

46. Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the progress towards establishing a public-private partnership for London Underground. [43275]

Ms Glenda Jackson: We are working closely with London Transport to ensure that the Public/Private Partnership is progressed as quickly and efficiently as possible, and in a way which delivers the best result for taxpayers, passengers and staff.

Changes have been made to the London Transport Board to provide the new structure needed to meet the challenging agenda we have set for the next two years. Denis Tunnicliffe has been appointed London Transport Chief Executive with effect from 1 June, and recruitment of a new part-time Chairman (and a new Managing Director for London Underground) is under way.

Price Waterhouse and Freshfields have been selected to provide, respectively, financial and legal advice jointly to the Government and London Transport. Competitions for other advisers are at an advanced stage.

London Transport are also close to finalising an enhanced investment programme for the next two years incorporating the additional funding my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister announced on 20 March as part of our Public/Private Partnership proposals.

Vintage Motor Vehicles

47. Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what action he is taking to ensure that effective additives are available for older and vintage motor vehicles following the withdrawal of leaded petrol. [43276]

Dr. Strang: Effective substitutes for lead are available that can provide adequate protection from engine wear in older vehicles. With a significant residual market demand for leaded petrol, estimated at 18 per cent. of total petrol sales when the ban comes into effect on 1 January 2000, most major oil companies are actively planning to market a special grade of unleaded petrol containing these lead substitute additives from the middle of 1999. Availability of this fuel will continue for as long as there is a market demand.

Trunk Roads

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what representations he has received regarding spending on trunk roads. [43271]

Dr. Strang: I have received many representations on spending on trunk roads, including some 14,000 representations as a result of the Roads Review.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the current levels of investment in Britain's motorway and trunk road network; and when he plans to complete his review of Britain's road programme. [43267]

Ms Glenda Jackson: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave the right hon. Member for Wealden (Sir G. Johnson Smith), on 5 May 1998, Official Report, column 313.

Stray Dogs

Mr. Blizzard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what estimate he has made of the number of stray dogs in the United Kingdom; and what monitoring his Department undertakes of the number (a) recovered and (b) put down and the cost to public funds of dealing with stray dogs. [44409]

Angela Eagle: These figures are not collected centrally. The National Dog Wardens' Association has estimated that about 139,000 strays were handled by local authorities in 1995–96, of which 16,000 were put down. Where the owner is known, local authorities are able to recover the costs.

Sewage Treatment

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he expects to announce his decision on the need for secondary treatment of sewage; and if it will be in time to allow water companies to comply with the deadline set in the EU Urban Waste Water Directive. [44392]

Angela Eagle: My Department is considering the Government's policy options in relation to implementation of the Urban Waste Water Treatment Directive. Decisions will be made in the context of the current Periodic Review of water prices, which aims to strike a proper balance between the need for environmental improvement and the resulting impact on water bills. An announcement will be made as soon as possible.

The Urban Waste Water Treatment Directive contains a number of deadlines for different levels of sewage treatment according to both the size of the discharge and the nature of the receiving waters. The vast majority of work necessary to meet these deadlines will not be influenced by decisions whether to allow primary treatment at comparatively few coastal locations.

Chrysolite

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what account he will take of the French ban on the use and import of chrysolite when determining UK policy. [44422]

Angela Eagle: The UK has taken into account the bans in nine EU Member States, including France, when formulating our own policy. Any decision by the UK Government to proceed with further restrictions on the importation, supply and use of chrysolite will be based on robust scientific evidence, thereby fulfilling obligations under World Trade Agreement.

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the French ban on the use and import of chrysolite. [44424]

Angela Eagle: The UK has considered the bans in nine EU Member States, including France, especially their effectiveness, when formulating our own policy.

Hammersmith Bridge

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what consultations his Department has undertaken over the possible reopening of Hammersmith Bridge; with which bodies; and what representations he has received on this subject. [44566]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Consultations on the future of Hammersmith Bridge are a matter for the London Borough of Hammersmith & Fulham, as bridge owner and local highway authority. Representations so far received amount to 11 Parliamentary Questions, 24 letters from hon. Members and Lords, and 51 letters from members of the public. Within these representations there have been straightforward requests for information, along with expressions of view for or against re-opening the bridge. Members of the public with views on the subject have been encouraged to make them known to the local highway authority.

New Forest

Dr. Whitehead: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) what plans he has to award national park status to the New Forest under the terms of the National Parks and Access to the Countryside Act 1949; and what would be the impact of these plans on existing New Forest legislation; [44460]

(2) what plans he has to designate the New Forest a national park authority under the terms of the Environment Act 1995; and what would be the impact of these plans on existing New Forest legislation. [44466]

Angela Eagle: The Countryside Commission has been considering the most appropriate arrangements for the continued protection of the New Forest. The Commission intends to present its formal advice to Ministers on this and a number of other issues relating to the protection of nationally important landscapes later this month. We will need to look at the Commission's recommendations very carefully, together with all the information available, before taking any final decisions. Any plans for the New Forest will need to take into account any possible impact on existing New Forest legislation. We hope to be able to announce our conclusions in the autumn.

National Parks

Dr. Whitehead: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions under what statutory authority a national parks authority designated under the terms of the Environment Act 1995 could delegate its planning functions to a relevant local authority. [44465]

Angela Eagle: Under sections 101–102 of the Local Government Act 1972, as applied to National Park Authorities by Schedule 7(13)(1) of the Environment Act 1995.

Walkers

Mr. Levitt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what changes to the law he plans following the recent court case in which a walker injured by cattle successfully sued the farmer for damages. [44446]

Angela Eagle: The Government are not proposing to make any changes to legislation following this incident. Present law is adequate, both in terms of protecting members of the public and enabling farmers to operate effectively.

Fuel Storage Tanks

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what advice the HSE gives concerning the maintenance of liquid petroleum gas and other fuel storage tanks located underground at domestic properties. [44379]

Angela Eagle: HSE has published guidance covering maintenance of underground tanks for the storage of liquefied petroleum gas, petrol and other flammable fuels. While primarily aimed at industrial installations, the guidance is also applicable to the storage of these fuels at domestic premises.

Carlisle Airport

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what representations he has received on the development of Carlisle airport. [44838]

Ms Glenda Jackson: None. I am however aware of proposals for the development of the airport by a private sector consortium.

Motorway Service Areas

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the Government's review of the 15-mile rule for the siting of motorway service areas, including details of the timetable for the review and for publication of its results. [44670]

Ms Glenda Jackson: There are several aspects of Government policy on motorway service areas (MSAs) which we have said we wish to review. On spacing, we will want to consider in particular whether existing policy, which allows MSAs at roughly fifteen mile intervals, strikes the right balance between the needs of motorway users and other considerations including the need to avoid unnecessary development in the countryside. We hope to make a further announcement later this year.

Motor Cycles

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to permit powered two-wheel vehicles to use taxi and bus lanes. [44804]

Ms Glenda Jackson: I refer the right hon. Member to the reply given to my hon. Friend the Member for Hemel Hempstead (Mr. McWalter) on 19 May 1998, Official Report, column 299.

District Council Wards (Northamptonshire)

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he will announce his conclusions on the implementation of the recent report on district council wards for Northamptonshire. [44958]

Mr. Raynsford: We have concluded our consultation on a draft Order implementing the Local Government Commission's recommendations on Daventry and intend shortly to begin a similar consultation for Northampton. For all other districts in Northamptonshire, we are currently in the process of consulting on draft Orders. At present, it is intended that the new arrangements will be established in time for the elections in May 1999.

Special Needs Transport

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what measures he is taking to protect the provision of special needs transport in (a) the West Midlands and (b) Coventry. [44401]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Department is conducting a review of voluntary and community transport operators across the country to assess their needs and problems. The review, which will be completed this autumn, will include recommendations on both the protection and development of these important transport services. Specific schemes, such as those in the West Midlands and Coventry, are a matter for the local authority concerned.

Threatened Plants

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to the oral answer from the President of the Council of 18 May 1998, Official Report, column 593, on threatened plants, if he will make a statement on the steps which have been taken to ensure co-operation between Government departments on matters relating to the International Unit for Conservation of Nature and Natural Resources. [43342]

Angela Eagle: The Department of Environment, Transport and the Regions holds the UK State Membership of IUCN. In this capacity, we disseminate information and advice from IUCN Headquarters to other Government Departments, and consult them about particular IUCN issues which impinge on their interests. The Departments concerned are: Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, Department of the Environment for Northern Ireland, Department for International Development, Foreign and Commonwealth Office, Ministry of Defence, the Welsh Office and the Scottish Office. IUCN matters are also addressed whenever appropriate in wider discussions on biodiversity issues within the Department and in relevant inter-Departmental fora.

West Coast Main Line

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what representations he has received on investment levels on the West Coast main line. [43343]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The development of the West Coast Main Line modernisation and upgrade programme continues to generate considerable interest and I met the West Coast Rail 250 group on 20 May. We have had no representations recently on the level of investment on the line. However, I understand that Railtrack has invested £200 million on the route modernisation since 1995, mainly on repairs and renewals.

Respirable Quartz

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions on how many occasions in each year since a maximum exposure limit was assigned to respirable quartz the Health and Safety Executive has instigated formal enforcement actions against employers who have controlled personal exposures to respirable quartz to below the maximum exposure limits but where exposures were not as low as reasonably practicable and exceeded 0.1 mg/m^3; and if he will make a statement. [43714]

Angela Eagle: The Health and Safety Executive can take formal enforcement action against employers by Prosecution, Prohibition and Improvement Notices.

It is not possible to relate HSE's formal enforcement actions to improve the control of respirable quartz (silica) to specific personal exposures. Action to improve the control of silica is not dependent on exposure measurements. Nevertheless in 1995 there was one prosecution where the Maximum Exposure Limit (MEL) was exceeded.

In 1996–97, there were 25 Improvement Notices and in 1997–98, there were 24 Improvement Notices in relation to the inadequate control of silica.

In 1996, ACTS reviewed the effect of the MEL on industry, and HSE will publish a report shortly.

Asbestos

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) how many (a) mesotheliomas and (b) lung cancers in (i) smokers and (ii) non-smokers per million persons exposed are assumed to result from environmental exposures to amosite asbestos at airborne fibre concentrations of (a) 0.01, (b) 0.005 and (c) 0.001 fibres/millilitre for 40 hours per week for 20 years; and if he will make a statement; [43715]

(2) what health consequences, expressed in terms of numbers of mesotheliomas or lung cancers in smokers and non-smokers per million persons exposed are assumed to result from environmental exposures to crocidolite asbestos at airborne fibre concentrations of (a) 0.01, (b) 0.005, (c) 0.001 and (d) 0.0001 fibres/millilitre for 40 hours per week for 20 years; and if he will make a statement; [43716]

(3) what health consequences, expressed in terms of numbers of mesotheliomas or lung cancers in smokers and non-smokers per million persons exposed are assumed to result from occupational exposures to crocidolite asbestos at airborne fibre concentrations of (a) 0.2, (b) 0.1, (c) 0.05 and (d) 0.005 fibres/millilitre for 40 hours per week for 20 years; and if he will make a statement; [43718]

(4) what health consequences, expressed in terms of numbers of mesotheliomas or lung cancers in smokers and non-smokers per million persons exposed are assumed to result from occupational exposures to (a) amosite asbestos at airborne fibre concentrations of (a) 0.2, (b) 0.1 and (c) 0.05 fibres/millilitre for 40 hours per week for 20 years; and if he will make a statement. [43722]

Angela Eagle: The available evidence is insufficient to make a precisely quantified estimate of the risks presented by exposure to amosite and crocidolite. In a written answer to my hon. Friend on 2 April 1998, Official Report, columns 599–601, I indicated a range of quantified risk estimates for chrysotile. The risks presented by exposure to amosite and crocidolite appear to lie above this range, moderately so for lung cancer, substantially so for mesothelioma. The HSE is preparing a review of the relevant evidence, and will publish this before the end of the year. A copy will be placed in the Library of the House of Commons.

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) on how many occasions in each year between 1975 and 1 March 1998 the Health and Safety Executive instigated formal enforcement actions against employers who had controlled personal exposures to asbestos primarily by the use of respiratory protective equipment contrary to the requirements of Regulation 7 of the Asbestos Regulations 1969; and if he will make a statement; [43719]

(2) on how many occasions in each year since 1988 the Health and Safety Executive has investigated whether manufacturers or importers have (a) produced and (b) imported products incorporating asbestos to assess compliance with the requirements of Regulation 8(1A) of the Control of Asbestos at Work Regulations 1987; and if he will make a statement; [43720]

(3) on how many occasions in each year since 1988 the Health and Safety Executive instigated formal enforcement actions against employers who had controlled personal exposures to asbestos primarily by the use of respiratory protective equipment contrary to the requirements of Regulation 8(1b) of the Control of Asbestos at Work Regulations 1987; and if he will make a statement; [43721]

(4) on how many occasions in each year since 1990 the Health and Safety Executive instigated formal enforcement actions against employers who had controlled personal exposures to below (a) the relevant maximum exposure limits and (b) the relevant control limits but where exposures have not been as low as reasonably practical; and if he will make a statement. [43723]

Angela Eagle: The information requested is not readily available at the level of detail required and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

This Government, the Health and Safety Commission and the Health and Safety Executive are committed to ensuring the risks from asbestos and hazardous substances are controlled.

The Commission published a Consultative Document in April 1998 proposing amendments to the asbestos regulations and supporting Approved Codes of Practice to strengthen the approach to the use of, and work with, asbestos.

This Government and the Health and Safety Commission are committed to the advancement of further restrictions on the importation and use of asbestos as soon as the scientific evidence on the safety of substitutes has become clear.

Hazardous Substances

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what health consequences, expressed in terms of deaths per million persons exposed are assumed to result from occupational exposures to (a) kaolin, (b) respirable quartz, (c) welding fume, (d) cement dust, (e) styrene, (f) isocyanates and (g) xylene at the current relevant occupational exposure limits for 40 hours per week for 20 years; and if he will make a statement. [43717]

Angela Eagle: Occupational Exposure Standards have been set under the control of Substances Hazardous to Health Regulations (1994) (COSHH) for kaolin, welding fume, cement dust and xylene, such that repeated exposure by inhalation at that level should not cause any adverse health effects.

For respirable quartz, isocyanates and styrene, a level of exposure which is both safe and reasonably practicable to achieve cannot be identified and Maximum Exposure Limits (MEL) have been set under COSHH. Employers are required to ensure that exposure is kept as far below the MEL as is reasonably practicable. For isocyanates and styrene, there is no evidence to suggest that death could result from exposures at these levels.

The Health and Safety Executive has published statistics on the incidence of silicosis, which is the key health effect from exposure to respirable quartz. However, there are no precise data on the numbers of deaths which result from silicosis; nor is it possible to determine how many deaths might result from exposure to respirable quartz at the level of the MEL, although we expect the figure to be small (Health & Safety Commission Health and Safety Statistics 1996/1997).

Train Services

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the adequacy of passenger compensation for late trains. [45028]

Ms Glenda Jackson: This is a matter for the Franchising Director. He is required by his objectives, Instructions and Guidance from the Government to require each franchisee to publish a Passenger's Charter which includes payment of compensation to passengers in the event of poor performance. The Franchising Director requires that the compensation offered under each franchisees' Charter is no less than that offered under the former British Rail Passenger's Charter. Some operators offer significantly more than BR. The Franchising Director continues to look for improvements in Passenger Charters when suitable opportunities arise.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the current levels of passenger complaints relating to train services. [45027]

Ms Glenda Jackson: I understand that the Central Rail Users' Consultative Committee (CRUCC) has reported an increase of 94% in the number of complaints received in the first three months of 1998 compared with the same period 1997. It is clear that passengers are still not getting the best deal from the privatised railway and we are determined to put that right, starting with our forthcoming White Paper. In the meantime, I expect train operators to listen to what their passengers are telling them and act on it. Poor performance has undoubtedly contributed to the increase and the House will know of my determination to see the Franchising Director act over that.

Air Traffic Control

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) what assessment he has made of the effect on the safety of air travellers of the delay to the opening of the new en-route air traffic control centre at Swanwick; and if he will make a statement; [44919]

(2) if he will make a statement on the severe overload which occurred on the Blackton Sector of the Area Control Operations Room at the London area and terminal control centre, Air Traffic Control, West Drayton, on Thursday 23 April. [44920]

Ms Glenda Jackson: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given by my noble Friend the Minister for Roads in another place on 4 February 1998, Official Report, House of Lords, column 118.

The Civil Aviation Authority is not aware of any incidents on 23 April but is aware of the overload that occurred on the Clacton Sector of the London Area and Terminal Control Centre on 28 April 1998.

An independent investigation by the Air Traffic Services Investigation Section of the Authority's Safety Regulation Group into the circumstances surrounding the occurrence is continuing. An interim report addressing the causes and making recommendations aimed at avoiding a recurrence is now being considered by the Chairman of the Authority. The final results will be published to the Industry in due course.

In addition, National Air Traffic Services Ltd. are carrying out their own internal investigation.

Housing (South Devon)

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he plans to send a reply to the letter dated 8 May from the hon. Member for Totnes requesting a meeting with him, the hon. Member for South-West Devon (Mr. Streeter), South Hams district councillors, South Devon county councillors and the South Hams Amenity Federation to discuss the effect on South Hams, of the projected new housing requirement for South Devon to the year 2001. [44981]

Mr. Caborn: I replied yesterday to the hon. Member's letter of 8 May addressed to the Deputy Prime Minister's Parliamentary Private Secretary, my hon. Friend the Member for Mansfield (Mr. Meale).

Connex South Central

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on his policy with regard to Connex South Central exercising their option to extend their franchise from seven years to 15. [43278]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The franchising agreement for Connex South Central provides for the Company and the Franchising Director to agree an extension of the term up to a maximum of fifteen years. I understand that the Company has presented a proposal to the Franchising Director and that he is presently evaluating it. He is under no obligation to accept the proposal on any particular terms or at all.

Genetically Modified Organisms

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what compensation will be offered to Riverford Farm, Staverton Bridge, as a result of loss of trade resulting from the consent by his Department to a test site for herbicide-resistant maize; and if he will withdraw his consent for the growing of herbicide-resistant maize in the proximity of Riverford Farm. [45121]

Angela Eagle: It has not been established that any loss of trade will occur from the proximity of the GM maize trial to Riverford Farm and in view of this it is inappropriate to consider compensation. I hope the matter will be resolved satisfactorily.

Regarding the request to withdraw the consent for the GM maize trial I refer the hon. Member to the answer given recently to the hon. Member for Lewes (Mr. Baker) on 14 May 1998, Official Report, column 156.

Tritium Waste

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how much tritium waste was released into the River Thames by Aldermaston Weapons Establishment in each of the last 10 years. [44138]

Mr. Spellar: I have been asked to reply.

Discharges of appropriate treated tritium waste from the Atomic Weapons Establishment at Aldermaston to the River Thames are made in line with specific authorisations issued by the Environment Agency. Annual discharge levels for the last 10 years are as follows:

Discharges of Tritium waste from AWE Aldermaston to the River Thames 1987–1997

Year	GigaBequerels (GBq)
1987	60
1988	10
1989	21
1990	599
1991	17
1992	27
1993	32
1994	28
1995	10
1996	2
1997	2

Since 1993, this information has been published annually in the Atomic Weapons Establishment's "Environment, Safety and Health Report", copies of which are available in the Library of the House.

Marine Dredging

Mr. Ennis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement about the procedures for authorising marine dredging. [45262]

Mr. Caborn: I have today announced the introduction of new non-statutory procedures for authorising marine dredging. They are intended to address concerns raised previously by the Crown Estate, environmental organisations and the dredging industry about the present arrangements and are intended as an interim arrangement until such time as statutory procedures can be introduced. The interim procedures, copies of which have been placed in the House Library, will apply in England and Wales and have been developed following extensive consultation with Government Departments, the Crown Estate, the dredging industry and environmental organisations. I hope that they will lead to more open and quicker consideration of applications for dredging licences, whilst still enabling full public consultation and protection of the environment.

I also announced that the Government intend to introduce statutory procedures for authorising the extraction of minerals by marine dredging by March 1999. These will implement the requirements of EEC Directive 85/337/EEC (as amended by EEC Directive 11/97/EEC) on Environmental Impact Assessment insofar as it applies to the extraction of minerals by marine dredging. There will be appropriate consultation on the provisions.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Staff Car Mileage Allowance

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the total real terms value of (a) staff car mileage claims paid and (b) staff rail fares paid; and what was the amount of staff car mileage for which reimbursement was made and the percentage change year on year, for each year since 1989–90. [44082]

Mr. Morley: The total real terms value of (a) staff car mileage claims paid and (b) staff rail fares paid for each year since 1989–90 is as detailed in the tables. The amount of staff car mileage for each of these years could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Staff car mileage

Year	Historic cost (£)	Index factor	Current cost (£)
1989–90	3,173,007	1.35	4,273,986
1990–91	3,253,215	1.25	4,066,518
1991–92	3,049,895	1.18	3,603,373
1992–93	3,257,575	1.13	3,665,139
1993–94	3,555,068	1.09	3,867,567
1994–95	3,709,999	1.07	3,984,105
1995–96	3,444,990	1.05	3,624,779
1996–97	3,222,498	1.02	3,285,581
1997–98	3,370,115	1.00	3,370,115

Staff rail fares

Year	Historic cost (£)	Index factor	Current cost (£)
1989–90	[1]—	1.35	[1]—
1990–91	231,216	1.25	289,020
1991–92	400,336	1.18	472,986
1992–93	522,874	1.13	588,292
1993–94	623,886	1.09	678,727
1994–95	669,498	1.07	718,963
1995–96	768,559	1.05	808,669
1996–97	687,747	1.02	701,210
1997–98	796,485	1.00	796,485

[1] Figures for Rail Fares for this Financial Year are not available as this item was not accounted for separately until 1990–91

Departmental Energy Use

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what proportion of the Department's energy usage was from (a) renewable energy and (b) combined heating in each year since 1989–90. [44079]

Mr. Morley: The Department's energy is purchased in the main through The Buying Agency, whose terms represent good value for money for the tax payer. We do not know what proportion of the energy is from renewable sources.

Over the years we have looked at a number of schemes to provide combined heat and power but so far none has been implemented, either because it did not represent value for money or because of physical constraints. We are, however, now looking at a combined heat and power scheme to serve part of the Central Veterinary Laboratory at Weybridge. We have recently introduced at the Central Veterinary Laboratory a system whereby a waste heat boiler is linked to the main incinerator to provide a large proportion of the heating and hot water for the site.

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much (a) oil, (b) gas and (c) electricity was purchased for the heating, lighting and powering of accommodation occupied by the Department within the United Kingdom in each year since 1989–90; and what was the total cost in real terms of each in each year. [44087]

Mr. Morley: Information for 1989–90 is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. The information for subsequent years, which brings together energy consumption for the Department's main estate and its agencies, is as follows.

	1990–91	1991–92	1992–93	1993–94	1994–95	1995–96	1996–97
Consumption:
Electricity (kWh)	34,249,049	38,883,236	43,058,478	42,986,112	43,655,007	45,527,009	37,786,870
Gas (kWh)	51,983,258	51,058,770	42,337,530	45,116,093	47,822,314	57,660,765	59,623,879
Oil (kWh)	44,188,474	41,769,240	42,364,511	46,799,010	47,085,226	24,623,842	9,093,363
Total (kWh)	130,420,781	131,711,246	127,760,519	134,901,215	138,562,547	127,811,616	106,504,112
Expenditure (in cash terms):
Electricity (£)	2,138,870	2,517,250	2,824,110	2,907,650	2,785,872	2,821,752	2,196,843
Gas (£)	598,808	619,560	579,910	559,460	542,057	519,646	463,989
Oil (£)	506,370	491,690	509,620	596,400	514,188	320,243	141,628
Total (£)	3,244,048	3,628,500	3,913,640	4,063,510	3,842,117	3,661,641	2,802,460

Figures for 1997–98 have not yet been collated.

Agricultural Gangmasters

Mrs. Fiona Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what action is being taken to combat exploitative activities by agricultural gangmasters. [45123]

Mr. Rooker: The Government have been very concerned about the activities of certain agricultural gangmasters who exploit workers, defraud the Government and undermine the businesses of those gangmasters who work fairly within the law providing an essential service to the agricultural industry and ultimately the consumer. We therefore set up an interdepartmental working party to investigate the issue. Its report has now been placed in the Library of the House.

In light of the findings and recommendations of the interdepartmental working party and discussions with the industry we are putting in place a set of measures to tackle the abuses by a significant minority of gangmasters of workers' rights and of non-compliance and fraud against taxation, National Insurance, benefit and immigration systems.

The Government are launching "Operation Gangmaster". This cross-departmental initiative will bring together the work of up to 8 different enforcement agencies. The core of this pilot operation will be joint visits concentrating initially on illegal practices in Lincolnshire and East Anglia. Such visits have already occurred this season and one is in train today. This will be supported by general co-operation between enforcement officers alerting other departments to possible illegal activities. Departments will also co-operate in in-depth investigations into illegal gangmaster activities.

In addition, enforcement officers in all relevant Government departments throughout the country are being briefed on the legislative framework applicable to gangmasters; this will greatly assist strong enforcement and further cement co-operation between departments.

Additional support to Operation Gangmaster will be provided through the Government's Business Anti-Fraud Hot Line. Here the drive to identify fraudulent employers will be helpful in identifying those gangmasters who knowingly employ benefit claimants. Other measures being taken by the Government, including implementing the Working Time Directive and the National Minimum Wage, will contribute to improving the position of casual workers.

Importantly, for the first time, gangmasters, farmers and workers will be informed of their rights and obligations through leaflets which are being issued widely today. These provide a comprehensive picture of all the relevant aspects of law relevant to gangmasters and the people they employ, covering responsibilities of several different government departments. No one should be in doubt as to their rights or obligations under the law, or be able to claim ignorance of the law, if caught abusing their workers.

I am delighted also that the agricultural and horticultural industries are taking their responsibilities seriously too. The Code of Practice being launched by the National Farmers' Union and the Fresh Produce Consortium today is an important step. It will be of great assistance to all farmers, growers and pack house operators in understanding the relevant law and best practice to be adopted. I very much welcome that the retail sector have given their support to this code as an initial stage towards controlling gangmasters.

For the longer term, the Government are continuing to examine the scope for registration of agricultural gangmasters and ways to assist the unemployed to take up seasonable agricultural employment more easily, reducing the temptation to work while on benefit and laying individuals open to exploitation by gangmasters.

This comprehensive approach combining the strength of the several enforcement agencies, providing full information on rights and obligations to workers and employers and the role the industry themselves are playing to tackle the problem of abuse by gangmasters, is breaking new ground.

Countryside Stewardship Scheme

Mr. Bennett: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many sites of special scientific interest are covered by the countryside stewardship scheme. [44115]

Mr. Morley: Based on the data currently readily available, all or part of the land in at least 400 Sites of Special Scientific Interest is subject to a Countryside Stewardship agreement. However, this figure does not include some early Countryside Stewardship agreements or agreements established in 1997 in Devon and Cornwall, for which information cannot readily be aggregated at present.

Tuberculosis

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what action he is taking in respect of developing a vaccine to protect badgers and cattle from TB. [44796]

Mr. Rooker: The Krebs report concluded that the development of a vaccine for cattle was the best long-term prospect for the control of bovine TB, but saw a badger vaccine as an alternative option if cattle vaccine requirements cannot be met. Following the publication of the report, we have reviewed our research requirements for bovine TB, and in April published a document inviting proposals. These include work to develop a cattle vaccine and to take forward work on a badger vaccine which started in 1994. If suitable proposals are forthcoming, contracts will be awarded for work to start in April 1999.

Bees

Dr. Cable: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what research he has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated into the value of pollination activity by bees to British agriculture. [44147]

Mr. Rooker: Over the years, the Government have funded work on the role and benefits of honey bees on crops. More recently, the Ministry asked ADAS for a report on the impact of varroa on the pollination of horticultural crops. The report was produced in September 1996 and revised in January 1998. Copies of both reports have been placed in the Library of the House.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to (a) promote training in apiculture and (b) extend the role of his Department's Bee Unit to reflect the agricultural importance of the bee and the threat of disease to the bee population. [44158]

Mr. Rooker: The Government support the beekeeping sector through the bee health programme which is delivered in England and Wales by the National Bee Unit, part of the Central Science Laboratory. The total UK programme is costing around £1.5 million this year in addition to the cost of research into bee diseases. Education and training are already important elements of the programme and the emphasis is on helping beekeepers to become more self-reliant.

The work of the National Bee Unit was included within the Comprehensive Spending Review, the conclusions of which are to be made public shortly.

Milk Quotas

Mr. Todd: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is HM Government's policy on the continuance or otherwise of milk quotas; and what is their response to the European Commission's proposal published on 18 March on the extension of, and increase in, quotas. [44499]

Mr. Rooker: The Government broadly welcome the Commission's proposals for reforming the dairy sector as a step in the right direction. However, we are pressing for a clear date for the removal of milk quotas. Whilst welcoming, in principle, an increase in milk quotas in line with the price cuts, we do not accept the proposed discriminatory allocation of additional quota in favour of producers in mountain areas.

Mr. Levitt: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if the proposed scheme to increase some milk quotas will apply to the Peak District. [44355]

Mr. Rooker: Part of the Commission's proposals would involve a 1 per cent. quota increase for each Member State with priority to be given to young farmers and 1 per cent. for producers in mountain areas. The UK would not benefit from the latter allocation but the former would in principle apply to the Peak District just as to any other part of the UK.

Dogs (Worming)

Mr. Levitt: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to extend the standards of worming required in respect of dogs kept on meat-producing farms to other dogs in rural areas. [44444]

Mr. Rooker: I have no plans to require dogs kept in rural areas to be wormed. Effective wormers are available for dogs either under veterinary prescription or from registered agricultural merchants, saddlers or other outlets, and it is good practice for them to be used on a regular basis.

Tobacco

Mr. Levitt: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he is taking to secure a reduction in the EU subsidy on tobacco crops. [44356]

Mr. Rooker: My Ministerial colleagues and I, and our officials, continue to raise our concerns about the tobacco regime at every opportunity in meetings with the Commission and other Member States.

The Commission's proposal for reform of the EU tobacco regime is scheduled to be discussed again in the Agriculture Council later this month. Medium and long-term savings are likely if the Commission's proposal can be agreed largely in its current form.

Sheep

Mr. Levitt: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will assess the advantages of moving sheep head counts for EU purposes from spring to autumn to minimise the risk of ewes becoming separated from their lambs by the process. [44445]

Mr. Rooker: Flock counts are needed for a minimum 10 per cent. of claims under the Sheep Annual Premium (SAP) scheme and the Hill Livestock Compensatory Allowances (HLCA) scheme. At present, these counts must all be carried out during the scheme retention period, which for SAP and HLCA has been combined and fixed at 4 February to 15 May in consultation with the industry. The scope for changing these arrangements is currently limited. In particular, EU rules do not permit an autumn retention period for SAP.

They do allow for a proportion of flock inspections to be undertaken outside the retention period, if the general standard of on-farm record keeping is satisfactory. Unfortunately this is not yet the case in the UK. It is recognised that a spring retention period is not ideal from the welfare point of view but in practice it has not led to major difficulties. In carrying out their duties, the field staff are sensitive to potential welfare concerns and every effort is made to schedule inspections to minimise the disruption that may be caused to normal flock management.

Ecu

Mr. Levitt: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the advantages to United Kingdom agriculture of the recent revaluation of the ecu. [44354]

Mr. Rooker: It is difficult to assess precisely the impact of changes in the green rates used to convert Common Agricultural Policy support payments into sterling. The Government are well aware of the ways in which movements in sterling may influence UK farming.

Tallow

Mr. Levitt: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the prospects for the lifting of current EU restrictions on the non-food use of British tallow. [44359]

Mr. Rooker: Conditions for the export of tallow derived from bovine animals slaughtered in the UK for use in human food, animal feed, cosmetics and medical and pharmaceutical products are laid down in Council Decision 98/256/EC. However, exports may not recommence until the European Commission has inspected the implementation in the UK of the controls laid down in the Decision and set a date for this, after consulting the Standing Veterinary Committee. We invited the Commission to carry out the required inspection as far back as October 1997. We hope they will do so soon.

Tallow derived from bovine animals slaughtered in the UK can already be exported for uses other than in human food, animal feed, cosmetics and medical and pharmaceutical products.

Beef Export Ban

Mr. Levitt: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the consequences for the British beef market if the ban on the export of British beef has not been lifted by the time the current calf slaughter programme ends in November. [44353]

Mr. Rooker: In the 12 months ending 31 May, 608,666 calves were slaughtered under the Calf Processing Aid Scheme. It is by no means evident that, in the absence of a scheme, all these calves would have been reared for beef. If the Scheme were terminated, we would expect UK beef production to increase some 18 months to 2 years after termination and the absolute upper limit of that increase would be of the order of 200 thousand tonnes per annum. The Government are confident that the ban on the export of British beef will have been lifted for animals born after the end of the current slaughter programme, before they are ready for slaughter as finished animals. The ban on the export of live calves is however likely to remain in place for the foreseeable future because of concerns about maternal transmission.

Barley

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations the EU has received from the US authorities about the subsidised sale of barley in the US; what is the total amount of barley involved; what is the sale price; what is the amount of subsidy offered per tonne; and if he will make a statement. [44324]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 8 June 1998]: I understand that the EU has received a number of representations from the US authorities about this sale, which involved the sale of Finnish barley to a buyer in California. The total amount of barley involved was 31,570 tonnes, of which 31,520 tonnes received an EU export subsidy of 47 ecus/tonne and the remaining 50 tonnes a subsidy of 21.96 ecus/tonne. The sale price was a matter of private commercial contract. The transaction concerned did not infringe WTO rules.

Slaughterhouses

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many of the slaughterhouses in Great Britain have full-time veterinary supervision during their hours of operation. [44237]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 8 June 1998]: The Meat Hygiene Service (an Executive Agency of the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food) is responsible for the enforcement of meat hygiene, inspection and animal-welfare-at-slaughter legislation in slaughterhouses licensed under the meat hygiene regulations in Great Britain.

In most slaughterhouses, an MHI or OVS is present during the slaughterhouse operating hours, although in some small slaughterhouses this will not always be the case. The precise length of time spent in slaughterhouses by an OVS will depend on several factors including the size and throughput of the premises, the complexity and standard of hygiene of operations, and the type of animal being slaughtered. However, no meat intended for sale for human consumption may leave any licensed slaughterhouse until it has been subjected to a post mortem inspection by an MHI, under the supervision of the OVS, has been passed as fit for human consumption, and been duly heath marked.

There are 31 full-throughput and 7 low-throughput licensed slaughterhouses in Great Britain with full-time veterinary supervision (ie full-time presence of a qualified veterinarian during ante mortem and post mortem inspections).

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many slaughterhouse operators were prosecuted in 1997 for failure to observe the statutory provisions about welfare at slaughter; and how many official warnings were given in 1997 about failure to comply with those statutory provisions. [44238]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 8 June 1998]: Three slaughterhouse operators were prosecuted in 1997 in respect of offences under the Welfare of Animals (Slaughter or Killing) Regulations 1995. These Regulations do not provide for the issue of statutory warning notices and enforcement action may be verbal or written. Information on enforcement other than prosecution is not held centrally. Where possible, Official Veterinary Surgeons will act on the spot to correct problems. Evidence of cruelty or persistent disregard of welfare will result in prosecution action being taken.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if it is the policy of the Government to permit the export of slaughter pigs to Spain only where the authorities in Spain have confirmed that the slaughterhouse of destination complies fully with EU provisions relating to the welfare of animals at slaughter; and if he will make a statement. [44297]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 8 June 1998]: The Department has maintained the list, first established at the beginning of 1993, of slaughterhouses confirmed by the Spanish authorities as meeting Community welfare requirements. This would enable us to consider the position carefully if slaughter animals of any species were shown on a route plan as destined for a slaughterhouse not on the list.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Broxtowe (Dr. Palmer) of 5 May 1998, Official Report, columns 303–04, concerning live animal exports, if all the sheep exported to Spain for slaughter in 1997 were subsequently declared on the route plans as being transported to slaughterhouses notified to him by the Spanish authorities as complying with EU provisions on welfare at slaughter; and if he will make a statement. [44298]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 8 June 1998]: Yes, save in two instances where failure to return a route plan was recorded for future consideration in relation to the exporter's authorisation to operate. Once route plans have been returned, they are available to help establish whether a false declaration has been made in the event that evidence emerges from any source that the journey details may have been other than as declared.

Live Animal Transport

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what recent assessment he has made of the animal welfare implications of the provisions within the Welfare of Animals (Transport) Order 1997 which allows animal hauliers to assess themselves as competent to transport farm animals and horses over eight hours. [44239]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 8 June 1998]: When we made the 1997 Order five weeks after 1 May 1997, in fulfilment of a Community obligation which had previously been neglected, we made clear that we would review its provisions after they had been in force for a year. We will do this, thoroughly, after 1 July 1998.

The provisions regarding the assessment of transport staff are among those I shall wish to consider very carefully in the review. There was no practical alternative to allowing employers to assess their own staff (which can mean the self-employed assessing themselves) given the Order requires the assessments to be done by 1 July 1998. However, I shall be very happy to improve these arrangements if our planned public consultation indicates a practical way of doing this.

Pig Farms

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many (a) official warnings were issued to pig farmers by his Department, (b) prosecutions of pig farmers were made by his Department, (c) complaints about poor welfare on pig farms were investigated by his veterinary staff and (d) welfare inspections were made to pig farms by his Department, in respect of breaches of statutory welfare provisions in 1997, or the most recent period for which figures are available. [44235]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 8 June 1998]: During 1997, veterinary staff of the Department's State Veterinary Service carried out 649 welfare inspections of pig farms, 145 of which followed complaints about poor welfare. Violations of legislation were found during 56 inspections and, in each case, warnings were given that legal action would be considered if improvements were not made. Prosecutions against pig farmers for welfare offences were initiated by the Department in 7 cases. The State Veterinary Service also co-operated closely with local authorities and other bodies over prosecutions they initiated against pig farmers for welfare offences.

Goat's Milk

Mr. Steen: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he will take to prevent the gold-plating of EU rules and regulations covering the production of goat's milk in cottage industries. [45017]

Mr. Rooker: The production of goat's milk is governed by the terms of the European Community's milk and milk products hygiene directive, which is implemented and enforced in England and Wales through the Dairy Products (Hygiene) Regulations 1995 (as amended). Enforcement should be proportionate to the public health risks, and there is no intention to gold-plate.

Food Poisoning

Mr. Steen: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will seek to establish an inquiry into food production methods in each European country to examine trends in the incidence of food poisoning across the EU. [45021]

Mr. Rooker: The Department has invited applications for research on the variations in prevalence of food poisoning both between and within countries with a view to identifying whether there are specific factors responsible. More detail can be found in MAFF's Food Research Requirements Document 1999–2000.

Genetically Modified Organisms

Mr. Steen: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what public opinion surveys he has evaluated into public attitudes towards genetically modified crops. [45122]

Mr. Rooker: The Department has evaluated a wide range of surveys on public attitudes to genetically modified crops. Many of these surveys show that the public wish to decide for themselves whether to purchase foods containing genetically modified material. I am delighted that the recent agreement in Brussels on genetically modified soya and maize labelling will enable consumers to do just this.

Food and Drink Regulations

Mr. Steen: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will instruct his inspectors involved with enforcing rules and regulations in relation to food or drink to do so in the least burdensome manner. [44917]

Mr. Rooker: MAFF Inspectorates and Agencies are already working to incorporate the Enforcement Concordat, launched by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary, Office of Public Service on 4 March 1998, Official Report, columns 692–94, into their Codes of Enforcement or Service Standards to achieve better, and inter alia proportionate, enforcement which is nevertheless consistent with protecting consumers. Further, in the light of the voluntary approach to good enforcement which the Concordat promotes, we are reviewing enforcement procedures made under section 5 of the Deregulation and Contracting Out Act 1994 and applied through legislation to section 10 of the Food Safety Act 1990 as this has been found to be burdensome.

Artificial Insemination

Mr. Walter: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what consultation he has had with the cattle breeding industry regarding artificial insemination; and when he proposes to bring forward new regulations. [45026]

Mr. Rooker: A draft of new Artificial Insemination of Cattle Regulations was issued on 6 November 1997 for public consultation. A meeting to discuss responses to the consultation was held with interested parties on 20 March 1998. I regret, however, that the Department had to suspend work on the draft Regulations in April in order to allow the redeployment of staff to work connected with the relaxation of the EC beef export ban. I should emphasise that this is only a temporary step: the aim is to resume work on the draft Regulations in the autumn, subject to priorities at that time.

Sheep Dips

Mr. Levitt: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the impact of charging for the inspection and licensing of sheep dips on (a) sheep farmers and (b) the environment. [44442]

Angela Eagle: I have been asked to reply.

The Government have no plans to license sheep dipping. However we have recently published draft Groundwater Regulations which are designed to enhance protection of groundwater from a number of dangerous substances, including sheep dips. The outcome of public consultation, including the costs involved, is currently under consideration.

HEALTH

Chiropody Services

Angela Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what response he has made to the recommendations of Age Concern's report, On Your Feet, published in March 1998. [44004]

Mr. Boateng: On 8 May 1998, I wrote to Evelyn McEwan, Director of Age Concern England. The report provides valuable information about National Health Service chiropody services and the perceptions of its users and providers.

Officials in the NHS Executive are looking at ways in which chiropody services might be further developed and will be consulting Age Concern during this process.

Emergency Contraception

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he is taking to publicise the availability of emergency contraception. [43703]

Ms Jowell: The Health Education Authority ran a major public awareness campaign on emergency contraception in 1995 and 1996. The campaign was co-ordinated by the Contraceptive Education Service (CES), which is funded by the Department. CES continues to promote awareness of emergency contraception and made this its focus during contraceptive awareness week in February. Earlier this year, CES launched a new information pack containing leaflets, posters and "credit cards" giving key information, plus guidance for professionals providing an emergency contraceptive service.

NHS Frameworks (User Input)

Mr. Healey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he will announce what input users will have into the new National Health Service frameworks. [43866]

Mr. Milburn: National Service Frameworks will be developed with the assistance of an expert reference group which will bring together health professionals, service users and carers, health service managers, partner agencies, and others. The reference groups will adopt an inclusive process to engage a full range of views. Membership is currently under consideration and will be announced shortly.

Epilepsy

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to (a) support research into ways of mitigating the effects of epilepsy and (b) meet representatives of groups representing epilepsy sufferers. [44110]

Ms Jowell: The main agency through which we support bio-medical and clinical research is the Medical Research Council (MRC). The MRC is an independent body which receives its grant-in-aid from the Office of Science and Technology, which is part of the Department of Trade and Industry. The MRC funds a good deal of research into epilepsy, which amounted to some £600,000 in 1996/97. However, the MRC does not currently support any research specifically and exclusively into mitigating the effects of epilepsy.

The Department's policy research programme (PRP) and the central National Health Service research and development programmes are not currently supporting any research into epilepsy, due to pressure of other priorities. However, records are not held centrally of all research carried out in the NHS.

The Department is currently supporting several epilepsy organisations through its section 64 scheme of grants. Recently, it also contributed £10,000 to the costs of the annual conference of the British Epilepsy Organisation. We have met recently with one of the epilepsy organisations and officials from the Department are in regular contact with the main epilepsy organisations and the Joint Epilepsy Council, an umbrella organisation for epilepsy organisations.

Ambulance Response Times

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 20 May 1998, Official Report, column 431, on the Ambulance Service, if he will make it his policy for response times of ambulances to be monitored from the time the emergency service is called. [44329]

Mr. Milburn: No. This would not be sensible. The new requirements were developed by an expert advisory group and were widely supported in consultation.

Community Pharmacists

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he has taken to ensure that community pharmacists are fully represented and involved in the work of the proposed primary care groups. [44146]

Mr. Milburn: No final decisions on the proposed governance arrangements of primary care groups or primary care trusts have been made.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many and what proportion of Primary Care Group proposals currently under consideration incorporate community pharmacists. [44140]

Mr. Milburn: Proposals for establishing primary care groups are currently under discussion locally. We have made it clear in guidance that primary care groups, as well as involving general practitioners, community nurses and social services, should also ensure that they involve other health professionals, primary care contractors (including pharmacists), and secondary care clinicians on issues affecting their delivery of care.

Complementary Medicine

Mr. Tredinnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the research projects on alternative and complementary medicine included in the current NHS research and development programmes. [44347]

Ms Jowell: The following research has been prioritised for funding through the National Health Service research and development programme:

complementary therapies in the management of back pain,

acupuncture for the management of pain in primary care,

the effectiveness of different psychosocial interventions for patients and their families following cancer diagnosis and treatment, evaluating the effectiveness of acupuncture in defined aspects of stroke recovery, multi-centre study of acupuncture for episodic tension headaches,

a double blind, randomised, parallel group, study evaluating the efficacy of a homoeopathic remedy in asthma,

the use of complementary therapies by women with breast cancer in South Thames region, art therapy as an adjunctive treatment in severe mental illness,

non-pharmacological approaches to the management of irritable bowel syndrome (IBS), the efficacy of acupuncture versus local anaesthetic injection in the treatment of myofascial pain in the jaw muscles, assessing the effectiveness of hypnotherapy for pain relief in patients with chronic low back pain, the effect of abdominal massage on the bowel habit of adults with cerebral palsy,

Tea Tree oil as an aid to fighting infection, reflexology in the treatment of IBS in a primary care setting.

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance is being given to health authorities and primary care groups on the inclusion of alternative and complementary therapies in the treatments that may be provided within the NHS. [44369]

Ms Jowell: The Department has issued no guidance to health authorities or primary care groups on the National Health Service provision of alternative and complementary therapies.

Availability of alternative and complementary therapies within the NHS reflects the decisions taken locally by health authorities and general practitioners about the clinical and cost effectiveness of such services and the priority to be given to their provision in the light of other competing demands for the resources made available for local health needs.

Primary Pharmacy Groups

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to introduce primary pharmacy groups. [44504]

Mr. Milburn: None.

Learning Disabilities

Ms Southworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many health authorities with a database detailing information on those people within their area who have learning disabilities make aggregated data available to his Department for planning and evaluation purposes; and how many of them hold that database jointly with their social services department; [44350]

(2) how many health authorities hold a database detailing information on those people within their area who have learning disabilities; and how many of them are structured to provide information on incidence of different types of learning disability; [44349]

(3) how many health authorities hold a database detailing information on those people who have autism within their local area; how many such databases are held jointly with the local social services department; and how many such health authorities make aggregate data available to his Department for planning and evaluation purposes. [44351]

Mr. Boateng: The information requested is not held centrally. However, analysis of population needs, and the prevalence and incidence of different types of disability, are important aspects of the commissioning functions of local authorities and health authorities. In "Signposts for Success in Commissioning and Providing Health Services for People with Learning Disabilities", published by the Department in January this year and distributed to health and local authorities, commissioners are advised to have arrangements in place to use both local and national information to build up a picture of the health needs of people with learning disabilities and people with autism in their locality. We also encourage health authorities to work together closely with local authorities in profiling both the volume, and needs, of people with learning disabilities and people with autism.

Health Trusts

Mrs. Lait: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proposals he has to change the current responsibilities of health trusts for paying their own bills. [44425]

Mr. Milburn: None.

MRSA

Ms Jenny Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many methicillin resistant staphylococcus aureus incidents have occurred in hospitals in the (a) West Midlands and (b) London region in each of the past five years. [44438]

Ms Jowell: Information on the total number of cases of infection or colonisation with methicillin resistant Staphylococcus aureus (MRSA) is not collected centrally.

National epidemiological data on MRSA are compiled by the Public Health Laboratory service (PHLS) from isolates submitted voluntarily by hospitals in England and Wales for specialist microbiological tests. From these data, the number of incidents of MRSA—three or more patients infected or colonised by the same strain MRSA in a month from the same hospital—is recorded. The numbers of incidents for the years 199–1997 are in the table.

Year	West Midlands	London Region[2]
1992	35	216
1993	68	348
1994	169	649
1995	128	943
1996	121	960
1997[1]	[1]55	[1]491

[1] Data for six months only

[2] North Thames, North West Thames, South East Thames and South West Thames.

The Department is currently discussing with the PHLS ways of improving surveillance systems so as to provide more complete data on MRSA.

Hospital Beds (Liverpool)

Mrs. Ellman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many beds were available in (a) Liverpool Royal, (b) Broadgreen, (c) Walton and (d) Fazakerley hospitals in each year from 1990–91 to 1997–98; and what were the cumulative bed losses to Liverpool over that period. [44441]

Mr. Milburn: Information on bed availability has been collected at National Health Service trust level since 1991–92 and the data are published in the book "Bed Availability and Occupancy for England", copies of which are available in the Library. The latest available data are for 1996–97. Information for 1997–98 will be available in the autumn. A breakdown of the information between the hospitals is not available centrally, but may be available from the chief executives of the trusts.

Dental Services (Cumbria)

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many NHS dentists practise in North Cumbria; and what is the average number of patients registered with each dental practitioner (a) in North Cumbria and (b) nationally. [44797]

Mr. Milburn: The table shows the number of general dental service dentists and the average number of patients registered with each dentist in North Cumbria Health Authority and in England at 31 March 1998.

General dental service: number of dentists[1] and average number of registered patients per dentist at 31 March 1998

	Number of dentists	Average number of registered patients per dentist
England	16,830	1,477
North Cumbria	104	1,494

[1] Figures include principals, assistants and vocational trainees and exclude salaried, hospital and community dentists.

Bournewood Judgment

Mr. Blizzard: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will take steps, following the Bournewood judgment, to allow sufferers from Alzheimer's disease to continue to be admitted voluntarily to mental hospitals for respite care; [44585]

(2) if he will make a statement on the Bournewood judgment. [44584]

Mr. Boateng: Following the Court of Appeal's judgment in the case of L v Bournewood Community and Mental Health National Health Service Trust, the Department advised the NHS about the Court of Appeal ruling and issued guidance to the NHS on its practical application.

The trust was granted leave to appeal to the House of Lords, and the hearing took place on 2–8 June. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State was given leave to intervene in the case in the light of the wider implications of the Court of Appeal's judgment on the NHS and partner agencies. Further guidance will be issued once the House of Lords' judgment is known, and we will consider then what, if any, further action is needed.

Insulin Injection Pen Needles

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the outcome of his consideration as to whether general practitioners should be allowed to prescribe insulin injection pen needles on the NHS; and if he will make a statement. [45104]

Mr. Milburn: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to my hon. Friend the Member for Tynemouth (Mr. Campbell) on 28 April 1998, Official Report, column 121.

Health Authorities (Greater Manchester)

Lorna Fitzsimons: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has for consultation on the possible reconfiguration of health authority boundaries in the Greater Manchester area; and if he will make a statement. [45343]

Mr. Dobson: Having considered this issue and taken advice from those responsible for the management of health services across Greater Manchester, I have decided that no such re-organisation should take place. There is already a complex management agenda arising from the National Health Service White Paper, which includes the development of Primary Care Groups/Trusts and the Manchester, Salford and Trafford Health Action Zone, which must remain the key priorities for all concerned.

Waiting Lists (York)

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps his Department has taken to reduce waiting lists in respect of the York NHS Trust. [45024]

Mr. Milburn: For 1998–99, we have allocated £4.009 million to North Yorkshire Health Authority specifically to ensure that more elective patients are treated and that waiting lists for the health authority and local trusts are reduced significantly. The regional waiting list task force is providing expert advice and support to the trust in effective waiting list management.

NHS Pension Scheme

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will ensure that the staff of GPs working in co-operatives have access to the NHS pension scheme. [45023]

Mr. Milburn: We have no plans to open the National Health Service pension scheme to staff who are not directly employed by general practitioners, including staff employed by GP co-operatives.

Millennium Compliance

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the likelihood of litigation arising as a result of failures in the millennium compliance of NHS computer systems. [45022]

Mr. Milburn: There is no difference between liability resulting from year 2000 problems and liabilities resulting from ordinary day-to-day work of the National Health Service. As with ordinary day-to-day work however, the NHS intends to avoid potential liability by taking all reasonable steps to avoid problems in millennium compliance.

Sight Tests

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the alterations to entitlement conditions for free annual sight tests since 1 March. [45032]

Mr. Milburn: There have been no legislative changes but, in advice issued to health authorities and opticians in November 1997, we indicated that patients who have been advised by a consultant ophthalmologist to have regular sight tests because high intra-ocular pressures put them at risk of glaucoma, are eligible for a free National Health Service sight test in the same way as patients diagnosed with glaucoma.

NHS Executive Regions

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the cost of the reorganisation of the NHS Executive regions to make their boundaries coterminous with those of the Government Offices for the Regions. [44223]

Mr. Milburn: Any costs arising from the reorganisation of the National Health Service Executive regions will be managed within existing running costs.

West Kent Health Authority

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 1 June 1998, Official Report, column 136, if he will make a statement on how the national weighted capitation formula operates; in what ways the formula has changed since 1995–96; and how each of these changes has affected the funding of the West Kent Health Authority. [44640]

Mr. Milburn: The information requested has been placed in the Library.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

New Deal (Disabled People)

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment under what circumstances support from the access to work scheme will be available to disabled people taking part in the New Deal programme for disabled people. [44410]

Mr. Alan Howarth: Access to Work will be available for disabled people taking part in the New Deal for Disabled People in the same way and under the same conditions as for any other disabled people. Where an application is made before taking up employment or within 6 weeks of starting employment there will, of course, be no cost sharing.

New Deal

Sir Paul Beresford: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, pursuant to his answer of 6 April 1998, Official Report, column 92, which parliamentary constituencies are included in the Guildford unit of delivery for the New Deal; and, for each constituency, what is (a) the adult population, (b) the number of young persons aged 18 to 24 years unemployed, (c) the number of young persons aged 18 to 24 years unemployed who could be eligible to join the New Deal, (d) the number who have signed up under the New Deal, (e) the number placed in jobs under the New Deal since the scheme's commencement, (f) the number placed in unsubsidised jobs under the New Deal in the same period, (g) the number of young persons aged 18 to 24 years unemployed who found employment in 1997 and 1998, (h) the number of employers who have signed up to the New Deal and (i) the number of unemployed people who found employment in 1997 and 1998. [42568]

Mr. Andrew Smith: The parliamentary constituencies included in the Guildford unit of delivery are Aldershot; South-West Surrey; Surrey Heath; Bracknell; North-East Hampshire; Guildford; Mole Valley; Epsom and Ewell; Runnymede and Weybridge; Esher and Walton; and Woking. However, the information requested is not available by parliamentary constituency and so it is given for the Guildford New Deal unit of delivery or, where this is not possible, Guildford Local Authority district.

(a) According to the Census of Population, there were circa 100,000 people, aged 16 or over, resident in the Guildford local authority district in 1991. Figures for the adult population are not currently available by New Deal delivery unit. (b) As at April 1998, there are 941 18–24 year olds registered as unemployed in the Guildford New Deal delivery unit. (c) I refer the hon. Member to 25 February 1998, Official Report, column 292, which provides a list of indicative planning assumptions for Gateway entrants, by unit of delivery, in 1998–99. The table shows that the planning assumption for Guildford unit of delivery is that 543 young people could be eligible to join New Deal, however this should not be seen as a precise estimate or forecast. (d) New Deal for 18–24 year olds was launched in Guildford on 6 April. Since then, 132 young people have joined New Deal. (e) and (f) After only a month of the Gateway period, the individual difficulties and problems faced by young people in this unit of delivery are still being addressed by referral to Gateway providers and the other three options. It is vital to the success of New Deal that participants are 'job-ready' before referral to jobs. (g) In 1997, around 3,650 young people aged 18–24 were recorded as having left claimant unemployment for a job in the Guildford unit of delivery area. In addition, there will have been others, whose destination is recorded as unknown, some of whom would have left the register to take up a job. In the year to April 1998, the latest date for which figures are available, around 3,300 18–24 year olds left claimant unemployment for a job. (h) In the Guildford unit of delivery, 78 employers have signed Employer Agreements (i) In 1997, around 13,700 unemployed people of all ages left claimant unemployment for a job. The equivalent figure for the year to April 1998 is 12,300. As with answer (g) these figures will not include those whose destination is recorded as unknown.

Disability Discrimination Act

Mr. Berry: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when he will implement the remaining provisions of Part III of the Disability Discrimination Act 1995; and if he will make a statement. [45367]

Mr. Alan Howarth: We have decided to implement the remaining provisions of Part III of the Disability Discrimination Act in two stages.

From October 1999, service providers will have to take reasonable steps to change practices, policies or procedures which make it impossible or unreasonably difficult for disabled people to use a service; provide auxiliary aids or services which would enable disabled people to use a service; and overcome physical barriers by providing a service by a reasonable alternative method.

From 2004, service providers will have to take reasonable steps to remove, alter, or provide reasonable means of avoiding physical features that make it impossible or unreasonably difficult for disabled people to use a service.

In reaching our decision on the timetable for implementation, we have taken full account of advice from the National Disability Council, from organisations of and for disabled people and from business. We have also considered the responses to the 1996 consultation exercise.

I have today written to the National Disability Council asking them to review the Code of Practice in order to take account of the new duties on service providers. I anticipate that public consultation on the Council's revised Code of Practice and the Government's proposals for a small number of regulations under the Act will begin no later than the beginning of August 1998 and last for 3 months.

We are also publishing today the analysis of the responses to the 1996 consultation exercise on the timetable for implementation. Copies have been placed in the Library.

WALES

Cardiff Bay

Mr. Rhodri Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what rent is being paid by occupants of the Scott Harbour office project under the rent guarantee scheme operated between Cardiff Bay Development Corporation and Grosvenor Waterside. [45117]

Mr. Ron Davies: Rent paid by the occupants of buildings in Scott Harbour under the rental guarantee scheme is a commercial matter for Associated British Ports. The grant payable to ABP under the scheme is up to a maximum of £1.4 million.

Prescription Drugs

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will estimate the total of (a) benzodiazapines, (b) prozac, (c) neuroleptic drugs and (d) sleeping pills which were prescribed in Wales in each of the past 10 years; and if he will make a statement. [44074]

Mr. Win Griffiths: I will write to my hon. Friend as soon as the data have been compiled and will place a copy of my reply in the Library of the House.

Directors of Social Services

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many directors of social services there were in Wales in (a) 1988 and (b) 1998; and if he will make a statement. [45007]

Mr. Win Griffiths: In 1988, there were 8 directors of social services in Wales. In 1998, there were 22 directors of social services in Wales.

This increase was due to local government re-organisation in 1996. There is one director in each authority.

Local Government Reform

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his current estimate of the cost of the local government reforms in Wales; and if he will make a statement. [45008]

Mr. Win Griffiths: Estimates of the costs of my proposals for modernising local government in Wales are not yet available. I am currently in the process of consulting on the proposals. The closing date for comments on the final two consultation papers—Improving Services Through Best Value and the New Ethical Framework—is 12 June. While there may be additional costs, these would need to be set against the savings resulting from the more efficient and effective operation of local government.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Benefit Integrity Project

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, (1) pursuant to her answer to the hon. Member for Tayside, North (Mr. Swinney) of 5 May 1998, Official Report, columns 376–77, concerning the Benefit Integrity Project, what timescale the review is working to; and when she will be in a position to report its outcome; [45116]

(2) if she will list the operational and legal issues that have prevented a review of Benefit Integrity Project cases prior to 9 February. [45115]

Mr. Denham: The purpose of the Benefit Integrity Project is to collect up to date information from claimants receiving the higher rate of the mobility component, with either the highest or middle rate of the care component, to ensure they are receiving their correct entitlement. On 9 February, an additional safeguard was introduced to ensure that there is always independent evidence to support a decision to reduce or remove benefit. From that date, the new safeguard has been applied to all initial Project decisions and to cases where a review has been requested.

The safeguard was introduced because of concerns that some disabled people may not have understood fully what was required of them and, as a result, had not provided a complete picture of the help they need with personal care and mobility.

Representations have been received from the All Party Disablement Group and others that all decisions made without the benefit of the new procedures introduced on 9 February should be reviewed. We have already made it clear to the House that we are currently considering how to examine those cases where the claimant has not asked for a review of a decision, made before 9 February, to reduce or remove benefit and no independent additional evidence was submitted. We are considering what action should be taken on the 2,400 or so such cases.

Uprating

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to her answer of 13 March 1998, Official Report, column 394, if she will update the estimated costs of uprating the basic pension and linked benefits given in that answer. [44821]

Mr. Denham: The information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Working Benefits (Advertising)

Mr. Duncan Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the total cost of the advertising campaign for working benefits launched on 1 June. [44573]

Mr. Keith Bradley [holding answer 5 June 1998]: The Working Benefits campaign is part of the Government's welfare to work initiative. It is designed to help families beat the poverty trap by letting them know which benefits they can access when they get into work. It targets chiefly lone parents on Income Support, and couples with children who are either out of work, or on a low income. A lot of help exists in the form of in-work benefits, such as Family Credit, Council Tax Benefit and Housing Benefit—these make work affordable. The Working Benefits campaign should alert those in greatest need to the help available to facilitate the move from benefit into work. Lone parents moving off Income Support and into work not only means that they—and their children—can enjoy a better standard of living than they ever could on benefit, but can also help to reduce Social Security expenditure on lone parents—currently £10.5 billion a year.

Total cost of the advertising campaign is £2.15 million, which includes TV and radio production and airtime; design and production of print material; telephone response handling and fulfilment; direct mail to 580,000 lone parents; campaign website; campaign development research; and pre and post campaign effectiveness research.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Sarwar: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how much money was spent on housing benefit in each district council in Scotland in the 1996–97 financial year. [44204]

Mr. Keith Bradley: The information is set out in the table:

Housing benefit expenditure in Scotland 1996–97

Authority	£000
Aberdeen	[1]24,000
Aberdeenshire	16,200
Angus	10,400
Argyll-Bute	13,100
Clackmannanshire	6,900
Dumfries and Galloway	21,500
Dundee	42,100
East Ayrshire	[1]18,500
East Dunbartonshire	[1]7,700
East Lothian	[1]12,200
East Renfrewshire	[1]6,200
Edinburgh	98,900
Falkirk	[1]19,400
Fife	51,800
Glasgow	238,000
Highland	[1]29,100
Inverclyde	17,500
Midlothian	9,000
Moray	8,800
North Ayrshire	[1]22,800
North Lanarkshire	[1]56,700
Orkney	1,900
Perth and Kinross	13,700
Renfrewshire	30,300
Scottish Borders	11,700
Shetland	1,800
South Ayrshire	[1]18,300
South Lanarkshire	48,600
Stirling	12,100
West Dunbartonshire	[1]19,900
West Lothian	20,000
Western Isles	3,200

[1] Non audited figures

Source:

DSS Planning and Finance Division

Disability Living Allowance

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security over the last five years, and in the current year so far, how many recipients of disability living allowance have (a) had their eligibility reviewed by a medical examiner, (b) had allowance withdrawn as a result of the review, (c) taken the review to appeal and (d) won appeals. [44142]

Mr. Denham: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is set out in the table.

Entitlement to Disability Living Allowance is decided by adjudication officers, who take account of reports from medical practitioners.

Results of disability living allowance reviews and appeals

	Reviews decided		Appeals decided
Year	All decisions	Decided in favour of customer[1]	All decisions	Decided in favour of customer[1]
1993–94	293,199	135,187	18,459	10,132
1994–95	316,589	153,594	26,225	16,516
1995–96	332,961	146,766	28,225	17,822
1996–97	359,334	143,755	35,551	21,064
1997–98	370,054	134,363	38,194	19,683
1998–99	24,587	8,229	3,381	1,663

[1] Cases where an existing award is increased or an award is made following a review of a disallowance

Note:

Figures are for April 1998

Source:

Analytical Services Division: 100 per cent. data

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people aged (a) 65 years or over, (b) 75 years or over and (c) 85 years or over are claiming disability living allowance (i) at the higher level and (ii) at the intermediate level in, (1) North Staffordshire health authority area, (2) the West Midlands health authority area and (3) nationally; and in each case what these figures are as a percentage of the total population. [44328]

Mr. Denham: The information is set out in the table.

Disability Living Allowance comprises three rates of care component and two rates of mobility component.

Age	65 and over	75 and over	85 and over
North Staffordshire
Total population[1]	76,143	32,516	7,784
Numbers and percentage who receive DLA[2]
Highest rate care	940 (1.2%)	0 (0.0%)	0 (0.0%)
Middle rate care	860 (1.1%)	40 (0.1%)	0 (0.0%)
Higher rate mobility[3]	4,740 (6.2%)	480 (1.5%)	0 (0.0%)
West Midlands
Total Population[1]	741,622	496,476	111,715
Numbers and percentage who receive DLA[2]
Highest rate care	5,520 (0.7%)	220 (0.0%)	0 (0.0%)
Middle rate care	7,420 (1.0%)	440 (0.1%)	0 (0.0%)
Higher rate mobility[3]	32,400 (4.4%)	3,380 (0.7%)	40 (0.0%)
Great Britain
Total population[1]	7,990,121	5,408,847	1,273,204
Numbers and percentage who receive DLA[2]
Highest rate care	58,440 (0.7%)	3,340 (0.1%)	40 (0.0%)
Middle rate care	85,880 (1.1%)	5,940 (0.1%)	60 (0.0%)
Higher rate mobility[3]	360,440 (4.5%)	41,020 (0.8%)	440 (0.0%)

[1] Source: Office of National Statistics and Scottish Registrar, June 1996 estimates

[2] Source: Analytical Services Division 5 per cent. data relating to 28 February 1998

[3] Some awards comprise both care and mobility components and figures may overlap.

Mr. Peter Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many households of non-pensionable age are dependent on the higher rate of disability living allowance. [43802]

Mr. Denham: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is set out in the table.

People under pension age in receipt of the higher rate of Disability Living Allowance

Disability Living Allowance	Numbers in receipt
Highest rate care and higher rate mobility	943,000
Highest rate care and lower rate mobility	192,000
Highest rate care only	35,000
Higher rate mobility and middle rate care	187,000
Higher rate mobility and lower rate care	172,000
Higher rate mobility only	294,000

Notes:
1. The table includes women under 60 and men under 65
2. Disability Living Allowance comprises two components. The care component may be awarded at one of three rates and the mobility component may be awarded at one of two rates. Depending on the circumstances of the individual, awards may include either or both component paid at the appropriate rate
3. Figures rounded to the nearest thousand

Source:
Analytical Services Division. Provisional numbers at 28 February 1998, based on 5 per cent. data

Ms Hewitt: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what information material is provided on disability living allowance in (a) braille (b) audio type and (c) other formats accessible to people with visual impairments; [43462]

(2) what steps she is taking to ensure that (a) information, (b) claim forms and (c) other material relating to disability living allowance are provided in (i) braille, (ii) audio tapes and (iii) other formats that meet the needs of people with sensory disabilities. [43463]

Mr. Denham: The administration of Disability Living Allowance is a matter for Mr. Peter Mathison, the Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Ms Patricia Hewitt, dated 8 June 1998:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions asking what information material is provided on Disability Living allowance (DLA) in (a) braille, (b) audio type and (c) other formats accessible to people with visual impairments, and what steps she is taking to ensure that (a) information, (b) claim forms and (c) other material relating to DLA are provided in (i) braille, (ii) audio tapes and (iii) other formats that meet the needs of people with sensory disabilities.

The Disability Claim Pack, Charter Standard Statement and all other correspondence or forms issued to customers about DLA can be converted into braille via the Transcription Service provided by the Benefits Agency (BA)'s Benefit Enquiry Line (BEL). The Charter Standard Statement is also available on cassette tape. Further information about the Transcription service and copies of the Charter Standard Statement cassette can be obtained from the Disability Benefits Unit (DBU) Customer Services Team at Warbreck House, Blackpool, telephone 01253 337240.

Customers with hearing or speech difficulties, who have the use of a text phone and require information on DLA can use the Text Phone service which is provided by the Disability Benefits Directorate Customer Care Helpline. The contact number is 0345 224433. Minicom facilities and LOOP systems are also available at the BA's regional Disability Benefit Centre's and the DBU. A video incorporating British Sign language and subtitles, entitled DV3 (Sickness & Disabled), is currently available by contacting the British Deaf Association or the Royal National Institute for the Deaf Helpline. This provides information on DLA and other Sickness Benefits.

In addition to providing forms and correspondence in braille, the Transcription Service can also provide any information required in large print for those customers with a visual impairment. Information on DLA is not currently available on audiotape, however I have asked the DBU to actively consider whether this is possible and the Manager will write to you with the result of these deliberations. The BA is continually seeking to improve the service it offers to its customers in order to ensure that the needs of people with sensory disabilities are met in full.

You may also wish to know that the BA has an Internet site on the World Wide Web. This is available 24 hours a day, seven days a week at WWW.DSS.GOV.UK.

I hope that this is helpful.

Benefit Recovery

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the total amount of state benefits recovered from successful claimants who were in receipt of legal aid to fight personal injury cases in (a) 1994–95, (b) 1995–96 and (c) 1996–97. [44501]

Mr. Denham: The information requested is not available as there is no requirement for claimants who are awarded compensation for personal injury to tell this Department whether or not they were in receipt of legal aid.

National Insurance Fund

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the expected difference between the income and expenditure of the National Insurance Fund for (1) 1999–2000 and (2) 2000–01 (a) before and (b) after taking into account the changes in NI contributions announced in the Budget and assuming that the basic pension and linked benefits are uprated in line with (i) prices and (ii) average earnings. [44836]

Mr. Denham: The information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Vaccine Damage

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security which options she considered with regard to the scope of the Vaccine Damage Payments Scheme following representations from the Association of Parents of Vaccine Damaged Children; and if she will make a statement. [44054]

Mr. Denham: We are considering the Vaccine Damage Payment Scheme as part of the overall review of welfare, which includes disability benefits, in consultation with the Department of Health and groups representing the interests of vaccine damaged children and their families.

Pensioners

Mr. Gorrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the proportion of pensioner households in the lowest quintile of income distribution in Scotland. [43810]

Mr. Denham: It is estimated that in 1995–96, a quarter of pensioner households in Scotland were in the bottom quintile of the income distribution of households in Scotland before housing costs (BHC) and a fifth were in the bottom quintile after housing costs (AHC).

It is also estimated that just over a third of households in the bottom quintile of the Scottish income distribution BHC were pensioner households. On the AHC measure, this reduces to just over a quarter. By comparison, pensioner households make up 28 per cent. of all households in Scotland.

Notes:

1. The data are taken from Households Below Average Income (HBAI) based on the Family Resources Survey (FRS). The 1995–96 financial year is the latest period for which data are available.

2. The income measure used is weekly net (disposable) equivalised income. The figures are given both before and after housing costs in line with usual HBAI practice. However, these figures count households whereas HBAI normally counts individuals. The results are sensitive to the choice of equivalence scale used to adjust household income for the size and composition of the household.

3. A household is defined as one person living alone or a group of people living at the same address, who either share one meal a day together or share the living accommodation. A household will consist of one or more benefit units, where a benefit unit is a single adult or couple, together with any dependent children.

4. A pensioner household is defined as a single person over State Pension Age (SPA) or a couple where the man, defined as the head, is over SPA. The estimates are based upon the income and benefits of the pensioner unit, and do not include the income of any other household members.

Mr. Gorrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many pensioner units in Scotland currently receive payments from occupational pensions. [43811]

Mr. Denham: The information requested is not available.

Council Tax Benefit

Mr. Rhodri Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when her Department notified local authorities in Wales that the imposition of a limit on the amount of council tax benefit awarded to persons residing in council tax band E and above would not be applied to existing recipients of council tax benefits in such properties; and if she will make a statement. [45094]

Mr. Keith Bradley: From 1 April 1998, Council Tax Benefit (CTB) for new CTB claimants living in band F, G or H properties was restricted to the maximum available in band E properties. As an integral part of implementation regulations to protect existing recipients of CTB in properties valued in bands F, G and H were laid on 30 March. On the same day the Department issued guidance to all Local Authorities notifying and explaining the change.

This ensured that some 66,000 CTB recipients were protected at the point of change.

Pensions

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she expects to publish the green paper on pensions before the summer adjournment. [44835]

Mr. Denham: As set out in the Green Paper, "New Ambitions for our Country: A New Contract for Welfare" (Cm 3805), we will publish a Green Paper on pensions later this year. The precise timing is still to be determined. There will then be a period of further consultation before final proposals are developed.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when she received or expects to receive the report of the Pensions Committee chaired by Mr. Tom Ross; and when she will publish it. [44833]

Mr. Denham: The Report of the Pension Provision Group was published on Thursday 4 June. A copy has been placed in the Library. Copies can be obtained from The Stationery Office Bookshop, telephone 0171–873 9090, fax 0171–873 8200, priced £25 ISBN No. 0–11–762607–4.

A Summary of the Group's Report is available free of charge from: DSS Pensions, Freepost, BS 5555/1, Bristol, BS99 1BL. Telephone number 0345 31 32 33.

The Summary is also available on the Internet at: http://www.dss.gov.uk/hq/pubs/ppg/index.html.

The Report and Summary will be published in Welsh shortly.

Pensions Education Working Group

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when she received or expects to receive the report of the Pensions Education Working Group; and when she will publish it. [44834]

Mr. Denham: We have just received the final version of the Pensions Education Working Group Report. We will be publishing it shortly.

Correspondence

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people, in term of full-time equivalents, are engaged in preparing replies to letters from members of the public in her Department's Correspondence Unit; and what is the average number of replies sent per working day. [44819]

Mr. Field: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is set out

In 1997–98, 49,319 letters from members of the public were received in the correspondence section attached to Minsters' offices. Replies to 32,168 of these were prepared by the Policy Correspondence Unit (which also prepares draft replies to letters from MPs) which had 38 staff at 1 June 1998. The remainder, together with an unquantified number of letters sent to Departmental officials, were dealt with across the Department mainly by officials for who replying to correspondence is only part of their duties.

Note:

Staffing figures are based on whole time equivalents.

Child Support Agency

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what is the current rate of non-compliance with payment of maintenance assessments by the CSA for each region within the United Kingdom; [44567]

(2) what is the current backlog of cases at the CSA; how many of those have been outstanding for over one year; when the backlog is expected to be cleared for each region within the United Kingdom; [44568]

(3) what are the levels of outstanding debt in the CSA; and what percentage of that debt is unrecoverable for each region within the United Kingdom; [44569]

(4) what are the current levels of accuracy of settlements for the CSA for each region within the United Kingdom; [44570]

(5) what percentage of payments by absent parents are for wrong amounts; and what percentage of debt balances calculated by the CSA contain errors, for each region within the United Kingdom. [44571]

Mr. Keith Bradley: One of our key aims for the Child Support Agency is to ensure that more non-resident parents pay the maintenance they owe. We are looking closely at all aspects of the Child Support scheme to see where improvements can be made and we aim to bring forward a consultation document on our proposals later this year.

The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mrs. Faith Boardman. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Mrs. Faith Boardman to Mr. David Rendel, dated 5 June 1998:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Questions to the Secretary of State for Social Security about the Child Support Agency.

I cannot provide precisely all the information that you have requested, but have provided as much as possible from the most recent information available.

The Department of Social Security Analytical Services Division publish quarterly a summary of statistics relating to child support; the last report was published on 14 May 1998 and showed that nationally, 41% of non-resident parents were fully compliant, 29% were partially compliant and 30% were nil compliant. The full report is available in the House of Commons library. Analytical Services Division have provided details on a regional basis for Great Britain in relation to nil compliant cases and this information is shown in the table attached.

Where the Agency has taken-on cases, the length of time taken to complete a maintenance assessment is measured, and cases which exceed 52 weeks are considered to be a backlog; this backlog currently stands at approximately 110,000 down from 225,000 at 31 March 1997.

The Agency has developed and implemented a strategy for meeting its undertaking to clear this backlog. All Business Units have put in place operational plans which will guide them towards the achievement of our objective of clearing the backlog by 31 March 1999.

The amount of child support maintenance debt outstanding at the 31 May 1998, was £731,620,185.51. The Agency undertakes a Debt Analysis exercise at the end of each financial year. The analysis is performed at Agency level and cannot be broken down into regions within the United Kingdom. The Debt Analysis exercise for 1996/97 indicated that the percentage of full maintenance assessment debt regarded as probably uncollectable was 38%. Similar analysis is being carried out for 1997/98 and the results will be published in the Agency's 1997/98 Annual Report and Accounts in July 1998, in a format which will satisfy the Committee of Public Accounts recommendation that the Agency ". . . examine the scope for eliminating a significant amount of this debt, since it is unlikely ever to be collected . . . ".

The Agency measures the accuracy of maintenance assessments against targets set by the Secretary of State. For 1997/98, the target was for the cash value of all maintenance assessments checked in the year to be correct in at least 85% of cases. The Agency met this target scoring an accuracy rate of 86%.

In 1998–99, the Agency is measuring the accuracy more stringently be examining the last full assessment rather than just the last work carried out, which could have been a simplified review not requiring a full assessment. The revised methodology is similar to that used by the National Audit Office. The checks will be more reliable, measuring accuracy of assessments in earlier years as well as more recent changes to assessments. However, this may result in a larger number of inaccurate assessments being identified in the short term and as a result the accuracy target is lower for 1998–99, and requires the cash value of all assessments checked in the year to be correct in at least 75% of cases. The Agency will be looking to improve on the accuracy target in 1999–2000 and beyond.

The report of the Comptroller and Auditor General to the House of Commons which was published as part of the Agency's Annual Report for 1996/97 noted that when examining non-resident parents' maintenance balances, National Audit Office staff had identified errors in 85% of the cases examined. I am not able to update this assessment which was based on a sample of cases going back to the start of the Agency, but it is a matter of public record that during its first two years the Agency frequently made errors when assessing maintenance. We recognise the legacy of this problem and aim to tackle this by getting cases right first time and will review older cases as the opportunity arises, for example when a periodic review is being carried out. We estimate that by the end of 1998/99 we will have had the chance in our normal course of work and through periodic reviews to look at many of those individual accounts which stem from the start of the Agency.

I hope this is helpful.

Rates of nil compliance in the quarter to 28 February 1998, for Full Maintenance Assessment cases by region of the Parent with Care (Information taken from ASD 5% scan of Child Support Computer System at 28 February 1998)

Region	Percentage
North-east	22.8
North-west	27.2
Merseyside	26.6
Yorks & Humberside	32.6
East Midlands	31.8
West Midlands	31.8
Eastern	31.2
London	31.4
South-east	28.1
South-west	28.7
Wales	25.0
Scotland	26.9
Great Britain	30.3

Winter Fuel Payments

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many complaints the Benefits Agency has received regarding (a) over payment and (b) underpayment of Winter Fuel Payment since the scheme came into operation. [44901]

Mr. Michael J. Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what sums were paid to residents in Worcester as winter fuel payments in 1997–98. [43677]

Mr. Denham: Winter Fuel payments are one of a number of initiatives the Government have taken to help vulnerable people, especially the elderly, keep warm in the winter. A total of £400 million has been committed for two years (97/98 and 98/99), to help pensioners with fuel bills to pay. This is the first time any Government have provided additional help with heating costs to all pensioners living in the United Kingdom who receive a Retirement Pension or one of a number of other qualifying benefits.

The making of this year's payments has been an enormous and unprecedented exercise. In order to establish all eligible pensioners, correctly identify pensioner households, and determine the amount each should receive, it was necessary to correlate data in around 15 million computer records, involving 15 qualifying benefits, across nine computer systems. Overall, almost ten million pensioners, in over seven million households, have received a payment.

The administration of winter fuel payments is a matter for Peter Mathison, Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Gentleman and my hon. Friend.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Mark Oaten, dated 8 June 1998:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking how many complaints the Benefits Agency (BA) has received regarding over and underpayments of Winter Fuel Payments since the scheme came into operation.

The making of Winter Fuel Payments to almost ten million eligible pensioners in over seven million households, before the end of March 1998, has been a challenging task for the BA. This was achieved whilst maintaining normal benefit business.

Individual representations from customers are dealt with by each of the BA's 109 Districts. Information is not available relating to complaints about either over or underpayments of Winter Fuel Payments.

We are aware of 649 eligible pensioners who received two £50 payments. This includes 211 who erroneously received two payments due to being in receipt of both Income Support and income-based Jobseeker's Allowance for at least one day in the qualifying week. In accordance with legislation, only one payment should have been made. Also, due to a computer operator error, 40,801 invalid girocheques were sent out with an incorrect date of issue. The error was quickly identified and all the invalid payments were replaced within 72 hours. The letter which accompanied the replacement payment apologised for the error and advised the recipient to destroy the invalid girocheque or if they had encashed it, to return the replacement to the nearest Benefits Agency office. It appears that in 438 instances both the invalid and replacement girocheque were cashed.

In addition we are aware that 9,357 £50 payments have been made to customers who were not entitled to them. All other payments have been made in accordance with legislation which states that the amount payable will be based on official records and therefore are not regarded as overpayments.

I hope that this is helpful.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Michael J. Foster, dated 8 June 1998:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent parliamentary question asking what sums were paid to residents in Worcester as winter fuel payments in 1997/98.

The making of winter fuel payments to almost 10 million pensioners, in over seven million households, before the end of March 1998 has been a challenging task for the Benefits Agency (BA). This has been achieved whilst maintaining normal benefit business.

Around one and a half million of the poorest pensioners, those receiving Income Support (IS) or income-based Jobseeker's (JSA), received their payment of £50 during January. Other eligible pensioners were entitled to a payment of £20 where they lived alone or were the only eligible pensioner in a household, otherwise, they were entitled to £10 if they were in receipt of a qualifying benefit (including each person in a pensioner couple).

Not all of the information requested is available as the BA collates IS and JSA statistics by BA District Office. These Districts do not correspond to constituency boundaries. Such information as is available relates to the number of pensioners in the Worcester BA District who received a £50 IS payment.

Following a scan of the computer systems in January, 5,156 £50 payments totalling £257,800 were issued. It is likely that a small number of additional payments will also have been made locally because details for the eligible pensioner were not held on the computer system at the time the scans were completed.

The information relating to other pensioners who received payments of £20 or £10 could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

I hope that this is helpful.

Written Answers to Questions

Wednesday 10 June 1998

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Secondary Legislation

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the President of the Council if she will make a statement on trends in the use of secondary legislation. [43512]

Mrs. Ann Taylor: In the ten years to 1996–97 an average of 185 instruments have been laid each session under the affirmative procedure and 1,127 under the negative procedure. While there has been a slight growth in the number of instruments laid under the negative procedure, the number of affirmatives has not altered significantly and the total (including instruments not requiring parliamentary procedure) has declined slightly. No information is yet complete for the sessions since May 1997 but I have no reason to suppose there have been any significant changes. Although the Delegated Powers and Deregulation Committee in the House of Lords examines the order-making powers in legislation laid before Parliament, no statistics are compiled on the incidence of such order-making powers in primary legislation.

Spending Review

Ms Squire: To ask the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire, representing the House of Commons Commission, what plans the Commission has to commission a fundamental spending review of the departments of the House. [44583]

Mr. Kirkwood: The Commission will be reviewing the House's administrative spending plans for the coming three years shortly. In doing so, the Commission will seek to keep expenditure to a minimum, consistent with providing the quality of services required by Members. But the Commission has no plans for a separate review exercise.

Portcullis House

Ms Squire: To ask the Chairman of the Accommodation and Works Committee if he will estimate the (a) capital and (b) revenue expenditure on Portcullis House (i) for 1997–98 and (ii) in total to date. [44590]

Sir Sydney Chapman: Up to the end of 1997–98, a total of £98.3 million has been spent on Portcullis House, including £39.9 million in 1997–98, all of which is capital expenditure. In addition some £29,000 was spent in 1997–98 on electrical power supplies for the construction work classified as revenue expenditure.

Recycling Sacks

Mr. Brake: To ask the Chairman of the Administration Committee, pursuant to her answer of 18 May 1998, Official Report, column 246, on recycling sacks, how many sacks were sent to be recycled in 1997–98. [45416]

Mrs. Roe: Records of the number of sacks sent for recycling are not maintained. However, in the year ending 31 December 1997, 737 tonnes of mixed paper and cardboard were sent for recycling.

Government Announcements

Mr. Fabricant: To ask the President of the Council what steps she is taking to ensure that Government initiatives are announced in the House before being released to the Press. [25364]

Mrs. Ann Taylor: Due to the administrative error following the transfer of this Parliamentary Question, this answer is unacceptably late and apologies have been conveyed for this.

I can assure the hon. Member that I regularly remind Ministers that, as set out in the Ministerial Code (July 1997), they should bear in mind the desire of Parliament that the most important announcements of Government policy should be made in the first instance in Parliament.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Departmental Energy Use

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much (a) oil, (b) gas and (c) electricity was purchased for the heating, lighting and powering of accommodation occupied by his Department within the United Kingdom in each year since 1989–90; and what was the total cost in real terms of each in each year. [44085]

Mr. Tom Clarke: My Department was created in April 1992 by transferring certain areas of responsibility from six Departments. However, the following details of energy consumption and costs are only available from 1993 when the Department commenced occupation of its own buildings:

	Oil		Gas		Electricity
	KWH	Cost	KWH	Cost (£)	KWH	Cost (£)
1993–94[1]	Nil	Nil	221,808	3,810	586,372	49,400
1994–95	Nil	Nil	1,059,183	14,599	1,074,541	64,066
1995–96[2]	Nil	Nil	1,593,599	15,247	1,194,927	67,023
1996–97	Nil	Nil	1,450,385	11,967	1,342,571	78,655
1997–98[3]	Nil	Nil	1,593,731	12,939	1,206,320	78,634

[1] Occupation during part financial year

[2] Additional premises acquired part way through the financial year

[3] Replaces provisional 1997–98 figures included in my reply of 6 May 1998, Official Report, column 408.

Staff Car Mileage Allowance

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what was the total real terms value of (a) staff car mileage claims paid and (b) staff rail fares paid; and what was the amount of staff car mileage for which reminbursement was made and the percentage change year on year, for each year since 1989–90. [44080]

Mr. Tom Clarke: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave on 6 May 1998, Official Report, column 408.

Reviews

Mr. Allan: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will list, for each of the last four years, the departmental inquiries and reviews instigated by Ministers which have been chaired by individuals outside his Department; and in each case if he will give the date of establishment and the name of the chairman. [44360]

Mr. Tom Clarke: The information requested is as follows:

1995

Working Group on University Sports Scholarships. Sir Roger Bannister. October.

1996

National Reading Initiative. Joanna Trollope. October.

1997

Review of Area Museum Councils of England. Tony Pender. CBE. January.

Report into IT in Public Libraries. Matthew Evans. February.

Film Policy Review. Stewart Till (joint chairman with Right Hon. Tom Clarke, CBE MP) May.

Football Task Force. Right Hon. David Mellor. July.

England's World Heritage Sites, Tentative List Review. Oliver Pearcey. October.

Review of Lyric Theatre in London. Sir Richard Eyre. November.

1998

Working Group on Legal Deposit. Sir Anthony Kenny. January.

Report on the Bowes Museum, Barnard Castle Richard Foster. DL. April.

Libraries (Large Print Books)

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will issue guidance to local library authorities producing annual library plans not to reduce funding for large print books; and what guidance he has issued on this matter to date. [44368]

Mr. Fisher: The Government recognise the importance of specialist library services, and require library authorities to report on them in their Annual Library Plan. The actual level of expenditure on different types of book is for library authorities to determine, based on local priorities and resources.

Artefacts (Repatriation)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what discussions he has had with UNESCO concerning the repatriation of cultural artefacts. [44378]

Mr. Fisher: Neither my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State nor I have had discussions with UNESCO on this issue. Officials have taken part in meetings which have touched on the issue of restitution in the normal course of business.

Tourism Forum

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will list the Chairman and members of the Forum Working Group into Tourism. [44933]

Mr. Tom Clarke: There are 12 working groups attached to the Tourism Forum. The Chairmen and members are listed.

Members

Communications strategy working group members

Charles Allen—Chairman	Granada
Judith Anthony	Thames Valley Economic Partnership
Colin Browne	BBC
Gary Crosley	Reid Catering Titles
Sandie Dawe	British Tourist Authority
Dereck Dear	British Airways
Harvey Elliot	Consultant
Jim Graham	Border TV
David Harbourne	Consultant
Símon Johnson	Banque Credit Suisse
Ray Kelly	Carat UK
Lyn Lavers	Distinctive Publishing
Jeremy Logie	British Hospitality Association
Ken McCulloch	MHM
Prof. Peter Jones	Bournemouth University
Eve Pollard	Journalist, English Tourist Board
Ann Scott	Ann Scott Associates
Diane Summers	Financial Times
Clare Walker	Jannus Group
Roy Tutty	Department for Culture Media and Sport

Whitehall issues working group members

Ken Robinson—Chairman	Tourism Society
Peter Agar	Confederation of British Industry
Ailsa Blaire	Local Government Association
Colin Clark	Horwath and Horwath
Sue Garland	British Tourist Authority/English Tourist Board
Barry Goddard	Council for Travel and Tourism
Peter Hampson	British Resorts Association
Brian Handley	Yorkshire Tourist Board
Michael Hirst	Joint Hospitality Industry Congress
John Lee	Association of Leading Visitor Attractions
Jeremy Logie	British Hospitality Association
James Spencer	British Holiday and Home Parks Association
Barbara Phillips	Department for Culture Media and Sport (observer)

Members
Business tourism working group members
Michael Hirst—Chairman	Joint Hospitality Industry Congress
Peter Agar	Confederation of British Industry
Robert Ayling	British Airways
Barry Cleverdon	NEC
Sarah Dale	Sarah Dale Travel
Michael Edwards	AmEx
Sir John Egan	London Tourist Board
Carole Forman	British University Accommodation Consortium
David Hackett	The Marketing Organisation
Albert Hampson	Automobile Association
John Jarvis	Jarvis Hotels
Jack Monro	Glasgow Tourist Board
Mike Platt	Hogg Robinson
Peter Rand	Rand Group
Tony Rogers	British Association Conference Destinations
Georges Sampeur	Avis
Anthony Sell	British Tourist Authority
Michael Skapinker	Financial Times
Mike Toynbee	Executive Travel
Robert Watson	British Telecom
Ivor Warburton	InterCity West Coast
Roy Tutty	Department for Culture Media and Sport
Visitor attractions working group members
John Lee—Chairman	English Tourist Board, Association of Leading Visitor Attractions
Ken Robinson	Tourism Society
Michael Jolly	Tussauds
Brian Handley	Yorkshire Tourist Board
Michael Ann	English Tourist Board, Drusillas Park
Patricia Yates	Holiday Which, Consumers' Association
David Beeton	Historic Royal Palaces Agency
Martin Sandbach	English Tourist Board
John Murphy	Department for Culture Media and Sport, Tussauds
DCMS:
Nigel Pittman	Buildings, Monuments and Sites Division
Hugh Corner	Museums and Galleries Division
Richard Thomas	Lottery Policy Branch
Stephen Creigh-Tyte	Economics Branch
Human resources or "people" working group members
Peter Moore—Chairman	Center Parcs/English Tourist Board
David Wood	Hotel Catering and International Management Association
Pauline Wells	Tussauds Group
David Harbourne	Hospitality Training Foundation
Conrad Lashley	The Council for Hospitality Management Education
Elaine Noble	English Tourist Board/British Tourist Authority
Stephen Moss	Restauranteurs Association Great Britain
Nicola Hayward	Seaview Hotel
Mary Curnock-Cook	British Institute of Innkeeping
Matthew Farrow	Confederation of British Industry
Kim Parrish	Scottish and Newcastle
Presentation of heritage and culture group members
David Quarmby—Chairman	British Tourist Authority
Mary Allen	Arts Council
Anthony Sell	British Tourist Authority
David Beeton	Historic Royal Palaces Agency
John Tod	British Council
Sir Jocelyn Stevens	English Heritage
Graham Greene	British Museum
Robert Anderson	British Museum
James Joll	Museums and Galleries Commission
Timothy Mason	Museums and Galleries Commission
Damien Whitmore	Tate Gallery
Martin Drury	National Trust
Michael Taylor	National Trust
Strategic planning working group members
David Quarmby	British Tourist Authority
Michael Jolly	Tussauds Group
Charles Allen	Granada
Michael Hirst	Joint Hospitality Industry Congress
Ken Robinson	Tourism Society

Members
Michael Elliot	Heart of England Tourist Board
John Lee	Association of Leading Visitor Attractions
Peter Moore	CenterParcs
Jeremy Logie	British Hospitality Association
Councillor John Price	Local Government Association

Widening access to tourism working group members
Jeremy Logie—Chairman	British Hospitality Association
John Bamsey	Hilton UK
Roger de Haan	Saga Holidays
Peter Holland	The Disability Partnership
Sir William Lawrence	Heart of England Tourist Board
Stephen Mills	English Tourist Board
David Phillips	Holiday Care Service
Peter Taylor	Millennium and Copthorne Hotels
Maundy Todd	Tourism for All
Alan Bishop	National Caravan Council Ltd
Jenny How	Cheshire County Council
Tim Mason	Museums and Galleries Commission
Phil White	National Express Group
Roddy Watt	Berkeley Scott Group
Rosemary Griggs	Department for Culture Media and Sport

Domestic tourism working group members
Councillor John Price—Chairman	Chester City Council
Dorothy Naylor—Vice Chair	North West Tourist Board
Geoffrey Lipman	World Travel and Tourism Council
Jerry Fowden	Rank Group plc
Brendan Burns	Federation of Small Businesses
Peter Hampson	British Resorts Association
Bob Ackland	North Somerset Council
Tim Bartlett	English Tourist Board
Professor Victor Middleton	International Management Consultant in Tourism

Domestic tourism working group: quality sub-group members
Jerry Fowden—Chairman	Rank Group plc
Tim Bartlett	English Tourist Board
Peter Hampson	British Resorts Association
James Spencer	British Holiday and Home Parks Association
Nicola Hayward	Seaview Hotel, Isle of Wight
Patricia Yates	Holiday Which
Dorothy Naylor	North West Tourist Board

Domestic tourism working group: distribution sub-group
Brendan Burns—Chairman	Federation of Small Businesses
Bob Ackland	North Somerset Council
Brian Barrett	Virgin Rail Group
Peter Chappelow	Holiday Cottages
Nick Cust	Superbreak
Colin Doyle	Countrywide Holidays
Stephen Freudmann	Association of British Travel Agents
Ken Male	Bournemouth Tourism
Dorothy Naylor	North West Tourist Board
Martin Sandbach	English Tourist Board
Richard Tobias	British Incoming Tour Operators Association

Domestic tourism working group: sustainability sub-group members
Geoffrey Lipman—Chairman	World Travel and Tourism Council
Dorothy Naylor	North West Tourist Board
Tim Whitehead	English Riviera Tourist Board
Stephen Mills	English Tourist Board
Richard Wakeford	Countryside Commission
Alex Youel	National Trust
Margaret Clarke	Rural Development Commission
Jonathon Porritt	Forum for the Future
Bill Breakell	North Yorks Moors National Park
Victor Middleton	Oxford Brookes University
John Dawson	Automobile Association
David Lunn	Windsor District Council
Chris Collier	Cumbria Tourist Board
Stephen Hodgson	Department for Culture Media and Sport

Note:
Organisations listed were correct at the time the Working Groups were established.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Curfews (Electronic Monitoring)

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the current average cost of a curfew order backed by electronic tagging in (a) Norfolk, (b) Greater Manchester and (c) Reading. [43879]

Ms Quin: It is not possible on the grounds of commercial confidentiality to provide a breakdown of current average costs of a curfew order for different trial areas. Based on the experiences of the first two years of the trials of curfew orders with electronic monitoring, the cost per order for a national roll-out was estimated to be about £1,900. However, this cost does not account for any savings achieved through providing electronic monitoring for Home Detention Curfew simultaneously with curfew orders.

Cab Drivers (Offences)

Mr. Forth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many cab drivers convicted of assault and rape, were (a) taxicab drivers, (b) minicab drivers who had accepted fare-paying passengers illegally and (c) minicab drivers who had accepted fare-paying passengers legally in the Greater London area in the last year for which figures are available; [44688]

(2) how many minicab drivers convicted of assault and rape (a) had and (b) did not have previous convictions for a similar offence in the Greater London area in the last year for which figures are available; [44686]

(3) how many prosecutions of minicab drivers for illegally seeking or accepting fare-paying passengers there were in the Greater London area in the last year for which figures are available. [44687]

Mr. Michael: Information held centrally on the Home Office Court Proceedings database does not identify the profession of offenders convicted or re-convicted of violent and sexual offences.

In 1996 (latest available), there were 132 prosecutions in the Metropolitan Police (including City of London) area for offences under section 167 of the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994—Touting for hire car service without a Public Service Vehicle operator's licence.

There were also 19 prosecutions recorded under the Metropolitan Public Carriage Act 1869, but we cannot determine from the data held centrally whether any occurred under section 7 of the Act—illegally plying for hire (where a vehicle, which is not a licensed London taxi, is made available for immediate hire).

In theory, provincial taxi and Private Hire Vehicle drivers could commit either of the above offences. London taxi drivers may illegally ply for hire waiting at places which are not designated ranks, but this offence is under section 33 of the London Hackney Carriage Act 1843 and, again, we can only identify prosecutions under the whole of the Act, of which there were 71 within the Metropolitan Police (including City of London) area in 1996.

Animal Tests

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the amount spent by his Department in the two years prior to 1998–99 on research into alternatives to testing cosmetic products on animals. [44665]

Mr. George Howarth: Each year, the Home Office makes a budget available to the Animal Procedures Committee to fund research into replacement, reduction and refinement alternatives to the use of animals in all types of scientific procedures, not just cosmetic testing. In 1996–97, this budget amounted to £242,000 and in 1997–98 to £182,000.

Applications are invited from those who are seeking sponsorship for projects relating to the development or implementation of alternatives. The Animal Procedures Committee, through its Research Sub-Committee, provides independent advice about which of these projects should be funded. During the last two years, no applications have been received for research relating to alternatives to the use of animals in cosmetic product testing.

Cosmetic testing accounts for about 0.1 per cent. of all scientific procedures using animals in the United Kingdom. Available funds are best targeted at research projects which will benefit more animals.

The cosmetic industry itself allocates considerable resources to the development of alternative tests, partly to meet the requirements of the 6th amendment to the European Communities Cosmetics Directive 93/35/EEC. The companies licensed to use animals in testing finished cosmetic products agreed in November 1997 to end, with immediate effect, this work in the United Kingdom.

Hand Guns

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many cases of compensation for hand guns in each police force area made under (i) option A, (ii) option B and (iii) option C are currently outstanding; and what amount has been paid out to date in each force area. [44867]

Mr. Michael: The information is given in the table.

	Outstanding Claims
Name of force	Option A/B	Option C	Amount paid £
Avon and Somerset	14	627	1,404,135.90
Bedfordshire	0	251	402,982.43
Cambridgeshire	1	290	509,094.10
Central Scotland	1	81	100,256.10
Cheshire	9	334	1,495,079.80
City of London	0	6	24,892.20
Cleveland	0	194	326,891.36
Cumbria	1	197	350,173.51
Derbyshire	3	426	688,420.16
Devon & Cornwall	3	799	1,602,005.03
Dorset	0	434	898,257.57
Dumfries and Galloway	3	44	79,131.35
Durham	4	219	404,494.49
Dyfed	3	265	396,507.96
Essex	13	1,109	2,402,148.43
Fife	0	82	99,228.10
Gloucestershire	0	236	399,091.11
Grampian	0	207	324,828.05
Greater Manchester	6	844	1,740,952.71

Name of force	Outstanding Claims: Option A/B	Outstanding Claims: Option C	Amount paid £
Gwent	0	281	441,227.32
Hampshire	4	865	1,496,682.03
Hertfordshire	1	483	931,438.04
Humberside	3	317	563,867.62
Kent	4	998	1,587,223.61
Lancashire	1	601	1,674,785.43
Leicestershire	9	236	1,283,815.89
Lincolnshire	0	350	543,710.63
Lothian & Borders	2	211	414,950.32
Merseyside	3	541	1,090,965.34
Metropolitan MP1	0	141	310,062.30
Metropolitan MP2	4	658	1,806,678.30
Metropolitan MP3	17	766	1,371,445.05
Metropolitan MP4	8	848	1,553,036.46
Metropolitan MP5	9	744	1,203,243.53
Norfolk	5	420	841,820.92
North Wales	3	300	1,120,196.81
North Yorkshire	10	352	2,133,358.23
Northamptonshire	2	181	595,426.78
Northern	2	190	366,290.08
Northumbria	1	457	542,259.71
Nottinghamshire	4	459	1,183,314.05
South Wales	3	606	1,061,723.07
South Yorkshire	22	440	849,971.62
Staffordshire	2	444	824,134.20
Strathclyde	6	511	698,078.86
Suffolk	0	540	560,093.40
Surrey	3	571	1,256,143.54
Sussex	12	673	1,158,589.52
Tayside	0	131	215,043.15
Thames Valley	11	1,127	3,785,513.43
Warwickshire	1	260	297,773.69
West Mercia	8	598	1,188,137.34
West Midlands	8	680	1,640,524.38
West Yorkshire	17	640	1,734,827.23
Wiltshire	1	279	488,043.13

Mediation UK

Mr. Cotter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what level of financial and other support his Department plans to provide to Mediation UK in the current financial year. [44948]

Mr. Michael: No application has been made by Mediation UK for financial support for this financial year. Mediation UK have met Home Office officials to discuss a possible application for financial support for 1999–2000 and I have also listened to local representatives of Mediation UK to consider their work.

Foreign Nationals (Drug Offences)

Mr. Allan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many foreign nationals were serving a prison sentence in England and Wales in each of the last five years; and what percentage were serving prison sentences for drug offences. [45158]

Ms Quin: The available information is for the prison population as at 30 June each year and is given in the table. A more detailed breakdown of sentenced prisoners, by nationality, ethnicity and type of offence, is published annually in "Prison Statistics England and Wales" (Table 9.5 of the 1996 edition, CM 3732), copies of which are available in the Library.

Number of sentenced foreign nationals in prisons in England and Wales, and proportion serving sentences for drugs offences, as at 30 June 1993–97

As at 30 June	Number of sentenced foreign nationals	Proportion serving sentences for drugs offences (%)
1993	2,298	30
1994	2,309	34
1995	2,616	34
1996	2,867	35
1997[1]	3,250	36

[1] Provisional

PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL

Drug Testing Kits

Mr. Clappison: To ask the President of the Council what action has been taken during the UK Presidency of the European Union in respect of the manufacture and distribution of (a) ecstasy and (b) other drug testing kits. [44162]

Mr. George Howarth: I have been asked to reply.

No specific work on the general availability of drug testing kits for Ecstasy or other drugs has been undertaken at European Union level during the United Kingdom Presidency. The manufacture and distribution of such kits is essentially a matter for individual member states in accordance with their domestic legislation.

As far as the application of drug testing equipment to law enforcement purposes is concerned, the European Commission is taking forward a research project to identify the requirements for roadside drug testing equipment, which will make a comparative assessment of existing equipment or prototypes. The project is expected to start before the end of 1998.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Millennium Line

Mr. Linton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he plans to announce the preferred route for the Millennium Line. [44088]

Ms Glenda Jackson: I understand that the Chelsea–Hackney Line has been described as the Millennium Line.

The scheme will be examined in the light of our current work on transport integration, the development of a Greater London Authority incorporating a London Transport Authority and our consideration of transport priorities for London.

Leasehold Commercial Premises

Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what information he collates on the proportion of leasehold commercial premises which receive individual fuel bills based upon occupancy levels. [44382]

Mr. Raynsford: My right hon. Friend does not collate information on the proportion of leasehold commercial premises which receive individual fuel bills based on occupancy levels.

Housing Corporation

Ms Jenny Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is the current annual salary of (a) the Chief Executive of the Housing Corporation and (b) the regional directors of the Housing Corporation. [44421]

Mr. Raynsford: The salary of the Chief Executive of the Housing Corporation is derived from Pay Bands 7 and 9 for senior civil servants. The current annual salary is £96,456 (effective from 8 April 1998). In addition, the Chief Executive is eligible for consideration of an annual performance bonus of up to 15 per cent. of current salary, and provision of a car valued for tax purposes at £6,953.

The salaries for Regional Directors of the Housing Corporation are derived from Pay Bands 1 and 3 for senior civil servants and all fall within the range of £47,633 to £67,515. In addition they are each provided with the use of a car.

Ms Jenny Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the annual running costs of (a) the head office of the Housing Corporation and (b) the West Midlands regional office of the Housing Corporation in (i) 1994, (ii) 1995, (iii) 1996 and (iv) 1997. [44420]

Mr. Raynsford: The information requested is as shown:

Annual running costs outturn

£ million

	1994–95	1995–96	1996–97	1997–98
Headquarters	16.6	17.0	16.2	15.8
West Midlands	1.3	1.2	1.2	1.3

Pennine Bridleway

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on funding of the Pennine Bridleway route as far as Kirkby Stephen. [44854]

Angela Eagle: Funding for the Pennine Bridleway, including the proposed northern extension, comes from the Countryside Commission's budget.

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will place in the Library a complete list of all those in Cumbria who may be owners or have an interest in the land which may be subject to one of the possible routes of the Pennine Bridleway. [44857]

Angela Eagle: The Countryside Commission, for reasons of confidentiality, does not publicise the names of those participating in its informal consultations on National Trail proposals.

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will publish each of the possible routes for the Pennine Bridleway which has been identified by the Countryside Commission. [44858]

Angela Eagle: The Countryside Commission is still conducting informal consultations over possible routes for the Pennine Bridleway northern extension. Once the Commission begins its formal consultation, it will publish the proposed route. The route of the Pennine Bridleway between Carsington Reservoir, Derbyshire, and Kirkby Stephen, Cumbria, was approved by the Secretary of State in 1995.

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what information he has received from the Countryside Commission on their plans for the Pennine Bridleway in Cumbria; and if he will make a statement. [44855]

Angela Eagle: I understand that the Countryside Commission is currently undertaking informal consultations on the route of the proposed northern extension of the Pennine Bridleway in Cumbria with a view to identifying a single route for formal consultation later this year. We expect that a proposal will be put to the Secretary of State next year.

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the parish councils through which the proposed Pennine Bridleway might pass in Cumbria. [44856]

Angela Eagle: The route of the proposed Pennine Bridleway in Cumbria might pass through the following parish councils:

Midgeholme
Farlam
Castle Carrock
Cumrew
Ainstable
Kirkoswald and Renwick
Glassonby
Ousby
Culgaith
Milburn
Long Marton
Dufton
Murton
Warcop
Musgrave
Appleby
Bandleyside
Soulby
Waitby
Ravenstonedale.

Transport Council

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Crewe and Nantwich (Mrs. Dunwoody) of 24 March 1998, Official Report, columns 85–86, on the Transport Council, which delegates requested a study into the employment effect of the abolition of duty free; and which Ministers expressed regret at the reasoned opinions sent to the member states by the Commission on the EC/US air transport negotiations. [44891]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Discussion on the abolition of duty free was prompted by a proposal from the Irish delegation. The right hon. Member's question on EC/US air transport negotiations was not one on which formal votes were taken in the Council, and there is therefore no official record of the stance taken by delegations on it.

Housing Policy Guidance (Cumbria)

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will publish housing policy guidance for Cumbria including the Government's estimate of the additional housing required. [44860]

Mr. Raynsford: We have recently issued to all housing authorities guidance for the 1998 Housing Investment Programme round, which includes advice on housing policy, designed to assist authorities in developing their own strategies appropriate to the needs of their area.

Housing figures for Cumbria, based on 1992 household projections, were issued in Regional Planning Guidance for the North West (RPG13) in May 1996. These figures were an average annual net addition of 1,500 per year between 1991 and 2011, making a total of 30,000 new dwellings. These were allocated between the individual districts in Cumbria by the County Council in its Structure Plan which covers the years 1991–2006 and was adopted in July 1995.

Housing Stock Renovation

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what steps he is taking to assist with the renovation of housing stock in (a) Eden, (b) Carlisle and (c) Allerdale districts. [44845]

Mr. Raynsford: In common with housing authorities across the country, Eden, Carlisle and Allerdale receive resource allocations under the Housing Investment Programme for that purpose. In addition, Carlisle and Allerdale also benefit from the Capital Receipts Initiative. Allocations for the year 1998–99 are as follows:

£

	Housing investment programme	Capital receipts initiative
Allerdale	1,884,000	713,000
Carlisle	1,543,000	1,240,000
Eden	799,000	Nil

Eden does not receive resources from the Capital Receipts Initiative since it is a "debt free" authority, and is therefore, unlike most authorities, able to use any capital receipts it generates to invest directly according to its local priorities.

In addition, the Government have acknowledged the particular need to address investment on Allerdale's Salterbeck estate by this year approving Estates Renewal Challenge Fund bid, with provisional approval being given grant to just under £4m over the next three years.

Rivers (SSSI Status)

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list each river in England and Wales which is proposed for SSSI status. [44844]

Angela Eagle: I will ask the Chief Executives of English Nature and the Countryside Council for Wales to write to the right hon. Member.

Road Signs

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to (a) evaluate and (b) introduce the Scottish Strungbow type road signs. [44861]

Ms Glenda Jackson: These signs indicate that road users can leave and rejoin a main road via a bypassed town or village. They were included in the Traffic Signs Regulations 1994, and can therefore be used by English traffic authorities as appropriate.

Mr. Prior: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on proposals for reducing the number of road signs in rural areas. [44482]

Ms Glenda Jackson: It is for the relevant highway authority to decide how many signs are necessary or appropriate in the light of local circumstances. The hon. Member will know, from the debate he initiated on 18 March 1998, Official Report, column 1258–61, that studies are underway which are intended to produce researched recommendations on good design practice for rural traffic management. The CTMG demonstration projects, announced by the Minister for Transport on 31 March 1998, Official Report, column 494–95, include an assessment of the effects of removing or repositioning signs from roads on Dartmoor, but the results are not expected to be published before the end of next year.

Mr. Prior: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the restrictions on the use of fibre optic traffic signs. [44483]

Ms Glenda Jackson: All traffic signs used in this country must conform with the requirements of the Traffic Signs Regulations and General Directions 1994 (SI 1519) or be specially authorised by the Secretary of State. The TSRGD do not specify any particular technology for variable signs, but fibre optic and other light emitting signs are required to meet the Secretary of State's requirements for optical performance and safety. New designs of light emitting variable signs, actuated by vehicles travelling at excessive speed, have been specially authorised at sites in North Norfolk and elsewhere as part of a monitored experiment, which is still in progress, to assess their effect on reducing speeds and improving safety.

Carlisle Airport (Nuclear Material)

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what representations he has received on flights of nuclear material out of Carlisle airport. [44878]

Ms Glenda Jackson: My Department has received 6 such representations since May 1997.

Channel Tunnel Rail Link

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when the £140 million of new Government money for the Channel Tunnel Link becomes due, how much of it will depend on the completion of Phase II of the line. [44885]

Ms Glenda Jackson: LCR expect to complete the CTRL by 2007. The sum of £140 million, the payment of which depends on Eurostar revenues, would not be payable before 2010—so it is not linked to any particular phase of CTRL construction.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the benefits for Coventry and the West Midlands region, from the proposed Channel Tunnel Rail Link via Stratford. [44723]

Ms Glenda Jackson: My right hon. Friend took account of the evident enthusiasm for Regional Eurostar services including that from the West Midlands in reaching his recent agreement with LCR which he announced on 3 June 1998, Official Report, columns 367–70. He has asked the transport operator who will take responsibility for Eurostar (UK) Ltd to assess the feasibility of running regional services and report by the end of the year.

Mrs. Lait: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what are the terms of Railtrack's option to build the second phase of the CTRL through London. [45410]

Ms Glenda Jackson: It is intended that Railtrack shall be granted by LCR an exclusive option to commit to purchase the assets relating to the second phase of construction of the CTRL; that this option must be exercised no later than 1 July 2003; and that in the event that Railtrack does not exercise that option, LCR will be obliged to find another third party, or complete the second phase itself.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if the new agreement on the Channel Tunnel Rail Link makes provision for sleeper services running on the link; and if he will make a statement. [44672]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The deal announced by my right hon. Friend on 3 June 1998, Official Report, columns 367–70, does not involve provisions for sleeper services. In July 1997 European Night Services Ltd. announced that they had dropped their plans for services from the regions to Paris. I understand that the Joint Venture have no plans for sleeper services.

Heathrow-Paris Eurostar Service

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) how long it is estimated the journey time will take from Heathrow to Paris by the proposed new service announced by the Eurostar consortium; [44886]

(2) if the proposed rail service between Heathrow and Paris by the Eurostar consortium is intended to connect with any French airport; [44888]

(3) which rail lines the service between Heathrow and Paris by the Eurostar consortium will use; and what rail services currently use those rail lines; [44884]

(4) how frequent the rail service between Heathrow and Paris by the Eurostar consortium will be. [44887]

Ms Glenda Jackson: My right hon. Friend announced on 3 June 1998, Official Report, columns 367–70, that the Eurostar operator intends to run services from Heathrow through the Channel Tunnel from 2001. Precise routes, service patterns and journey times have yet to be defined.

Travellers

Ms Ward: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to amend legislation relating to travellers; and if he will make a statement. [44604]

Mr. Raynsford: My Department has no plans to amend sections 77 to 80 of the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 which give local authorities powers to deal with unauthorised camping, and which repealed local authorities' duty to provide sites and the Secretary of State's power to pay grant for such sites.

My Department is committed to issuing good practice advice to local authorities on unauthorised camping, and it is proposed to launch this on 29 October at a conference organised by the National Association of Gipsy and Traveller Officers in Coventry.

Energy Efficiency

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what steps he plans to take to impose obligations on fuel suppliers to give advice on energy efficiency; and if he will make a statement. [44881]

Angela Eagle: The relevant regulators already require electricity and gas suppliers to provide customers, on request, with advice on energy efficiency. For the future, the Government's Green Paper "A Fair Deal for Consumers" proposes that Ministers will issue statutory guidance to the regulators on social, environmental and energy efficiency matters, including matters (such as advice to customers on energy efficiency) which are already dealt with in the present regulatory framework.

Mobile Telecommunications

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many local authority refusals of planning permission for telecommunications masts were overturned on appeal by planning inspectors in the year 1997–98. [44951]

Mr. Raynsford: 54 out of a total of 122 appeals made against local planning authority refusals for telecommunications masts/towers were allowed in the year 1997–98.

Mr. Prior: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement regarding the future development of the mobile telecommunications industry in rural areas. [44484]

Mr. Raynsford: This Government's general policy on telecommunications development is to facilitate the growth of telecommunications systems while protecting the environment. Mobile services are important to an efficient modern national telecommunications network. This will help bring considerable economic and social benefits to all parts of the country, including rural areas. The establishment of such a network should not, however, happen at disproportionate cost to the environment. For that reason, we announced our expectation that operators would provide evidence to local planning authorities that they have carefully considered the use of existing masts, buildings and other structures before seeking to erect any new mast.

Local planning authorities continue to have the opportunity to exercise control over individual mast developments, whether that be through the consideration of a full planning application or the determination of a prior approval application under the Town and Country Planning (General Permitted Development) Order 1995.

Housing Benefit

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans she has to repeal those sections of the Local Government and Housing Act 1990 which require that housing benefit is paid from the housing revenue account of local authorities. [44946]

Mr. Raynsford: We are considering all aspects of housing finance as part of our Comprehensive Spending Review. We expect to announce conclusions from the Review in the summer.

Building Regulations

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) if, in the case of housing development, only the building regulations in force at the time of submission of a planning application apply to the construction, irrespective of the date of construction; [44902]

(2) if the Government plan to make Part M of the Building Regulations apply to all buildings constructed after the making of the regulations, irrespective of the date of the planning consent. [44903]

Mr. Raynsford [holding answer 8 June 1998]: I am aware of the cases in the hon. Member's constituency which have given rise to concern that housing developers may seek to use building control procedures to circumvent the changes I have announced that will apply Part M of the building regulations to new dwellings. I understand that two initial building control notices for a total of 12,000 houses will not now take effect. These related to land for which I understand there is no current prospect of planning permission for housing.

I share the hon. Member's concern that building control procedures should not be used to circumvent the new requirements for access and facilities for disabled people. The general position is that building work is subject to the requirements in force at the time the relevant building control notice is given.

I have previously announced in my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Basildon (Angela Smith) on 9 March 1998, Official Report, column 12, that I envisage an interval of one year between the publication of the new Part M requirements and the coming into effect of the Amendment Regulations. This would be to allow time for guidance to be developed in support of the new requirements and also to allow time for building workers to be trained in the new techniques that will be necessary.

Against that background, I am considering what steps to take to ensure an effective transfer to the new Part M requirements following the coming into force of the new regulations.

Second Homes

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made into the impact of second homes on the supply of local housing. [44932]

Mr. Raynsford: The Survey of English Housing conducted annually for my Department indicates that about 200,000 households with their main residence in England also own or rent a second home in England. That figure excludes households whose second home is the main residence of another household, and households with a second home which they intend to sell.

Local authorities should take account of second homes in their assessments of housing need. These assessments inform authorities' housing strategies (including empty homes strategies where they exist) and development plans.

Mr. Prior: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how much council tax is currently raised from second-home owners. [44488]

Mr. Raynsford: I refer the hon. Member to the answer my hon. Friend the Minister for Local Government and Housing gave to the hon. Member for St. Ives (Mr. George) on 9 June 1998, Official Report, column 509.

Mr. Prior: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the impact of the 50 per cent. reduction in council tax for second-home owners. [44487]

Mr. Raynsford: If a local authority has a high proportion of second homes that receive a 50 per cent. discount, and therefore a reduced tax base, it will receive more grant to compensate. Contrary to some of the concerns that have been expressed, the level of council tax bills paid by local residents will therefore not be affected unless the local authority is spending above the "standard spending" level fixed by Government as a basis for distributing grant. We have received a number of representations about the council tax and second/holiday homes. We are considering these and will set out our proposals in a White Paper this summer.

Kent County Council

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many staff have been made redundant by Kent County Council as a result of the creation of the new Medway Unitary Authority in the year 1997–98; and how many will be made redundant in 1998–99. [44213]

Mr. Raynsford [holding answer 8 June 1998]: I understand from Kent County Council that, as a result of local government reorganisation, 330 of their staff were made redundant in 1997–98 and fewer than 50 are expected to be made redundant in 1998–99.

Radioactive Material (Transport)

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many crashes occurred involving (a) road vehicles, (b) aircraft and (c) trains carrying radioactive material in the United Kingdom in 1997 and 1998 to date. [44986]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The numbers of such crashes notified to the Department are:

Year	Number
(a)
1997	3
1998	none to date
(b)
1997	none
1998	none to date
(c)
1997	none
1998	3 to date

In none of these crashes was there any loss of radioactive material from any package.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if it is the Government's policy not to limit the number of movements of radioactive material by air provided International Atomic Energy Agency standards are met. [44959]

Ms Glenda Jackson: I refer the hon. Member to my reply of 14 July 1997, Official Report, column 15.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what procedures are currently in place to ensure the safe transportation of mixed oxide plutonium within the United Kingdom. [44724]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Mixed Oxide Fuel and plutonium, in common with all radioactive materials, are subject to the following regulations:

Road

The Radioactive Material (Road Transport) (Great Britain) Regulations 1996 (SI 1996 No. 1350).

The Radioactive Substances (Carriage by Road) Regulations (Northern Ireland) 1983 (SR 1983 No. 344).

The Radioactive Substances (Carriage by Road) (Amendment) Regulations (Northern Ireland) 1986 (SR 1986 No. 61).

Sea

The Merchant Shipping (Dangerous Goods and Marine Pollutants) Regulations 1990 (SI 1990 No. 2605); Merchant Shipping Notice No. M 1620, "The Carriage of Dangerous Goods and Marine Pollutants in Packaged Form on Ships".

Air

The Air Navigation (No. 2) Order 1995 SI No. 1970. The Air Navigation (Dangerous Goods) Regulations 1994 SI No. 3187 and Amendment 1996 SI No. 3100.

Ports

The Dangerous Substances in Harbour Areas Regulations 1987 (SI 1987 No. 37).

Rail

The Packaging, Labelling and Carriage of Radioactive Material by Rail Regulations (RAMRail) 1996 (SI 1996 No. 2090): Approved Requirements for the packaging, labelling and carriage of radioactive material by rail 1996 Edition. The Carriage of Dangerous Goods (Classification, Packaging and Labelling) and Use of Transportable Pressure Receptacles Regulations (CDGCPL) 1996 (SI 1996 No. 2092).

Inland Waterways

British Waterways Board Terms and Conditions: Dangerous Goods BWB 1981, and Schedule of Dangerous Goods ("The Green Book") BWB 1981 (Class 7).

Merchant Seamen (Sickness)

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) what legal requirements merchant shipping employees on sick leave were required to fulfil in June 1991 when returning to work offshore after instructions from their employer; [45033]

(2) what legal requirements employers of merchant seamen were required to fulfil in June 1991 when instructing employees on sick leave to return to work offshore; [45034]

(3) if he will make a statement on amendments made since 1986 to Merchant Shipping Notice No. 1536 and Merchant Shipping Notice No. 1331 in respect of diseases of the oesophagus, stomach and duodenum; [45035]

(4) what Health and Safety Executive regulations, relating to record keeping, were in force in May 1991 in respect of the transfer of sick merchant seamen to oil platforms in the United Kingdom sector of the North Sea. [45037]

Ms Glenda Jackson: In terms of Merchant Shipping (Medical Examination) Regulations 1983, applicable in 1991, a seafarer cannot be employed on a ship covered by the Regulations unless he holds a valid medical fitness certificate. Under Merchant Shipping legislation, there are no specific or additional requirements relating to return to work after sick leave.

Merchant Shipping Notice M1536, which listed doctors approved by the Secretary of State to carry out seafarer medicals, and M1331, setting out the medical standards for seafarers, have both been updated. While the medical fitness standards have been kept under review by the Department's medical advisers, no change has been made in respect of diseases of the oesophagus, stomach and duodenum.

There were no regulations relating to record keeping for the transfer of sick merchant seamen to oil platforms in the United Kingdom sector of the North Sea, although the offshore installations (Logbooks and Registration of Deaths) Regulations 1972 required a record to be kept of all persons arriving at or departing from an installation.

LCR and Eurostar

Mrs. Lait: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many representatives of Government there will be on the Board of LCR and the Eurostar management company; and if their rights, duties and responsibilities will be the same in company law as the private sector directors. [45403]

Ms Glenda Jackson: It is not intended that there will be any Government appointments to the Board of either LCR or the Eurostar management company.

Areas of Outstanding Natural Beauty

Mr. Prior: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what steps his Department is taking to protect areas of outstanding natural beauty from overdevelopment; and if he will make a statement. [44478]

Mr. Raynsford: Planning Policy Guidance note 7 affords special protection from development to Areas of Outstanding Natural Beauty, along with other statutorily designated areas. Policies in structure and local plans and development control decisions should in general favour conservation of the natural beauty of the landscape. It would normally be inconsistent with the aims of designation to permit the siting of major industrial or commercial development in these areas. Only proven national interest and lack of alternative sites can justify an exception.

Sites of Special Scientific Interest

Mr. Prior: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the sites of special scientific interest in the United Kingdom distinguishing those which are in (a) England and (b) Norfolk. [44489]

Angela Eagle: As at 5 June 1998 there were 6,517 Sites of Special Scientific Interest in the United Kingdom. 3,991 in England and 155 in Norfolk. I shall arrange for a copy of the full list of sites to be placed in the Library of the House shortly.

Local Government Reorganisation

Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what resources he will make available under the local government reorganisation costs scheme to Redcar and Cleveland Borough Council for reorganisation costs incurred by them in 1998–99; and if he will make a statement. [45432]

Ms Armstrong: Redcar and Cleveland Borough Council did not submit a bid at the initial stage of the Local Government Reorganisation Costs Scheme for 1998–99. They have since identified £400,000 of costs that are eligible under the scheme. After careful consideration, I have decided that it would be appropriate to allocate a maximum amount of £400,000 to Redcar and Cleveland Council to cover these costs in full.

Regional Airports

Mrs. Ellman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what changes he has decided to make to his policy on international access to regional airports in the United Kingdom following the consultation exercise on this issue earlier in the year. [45433]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Government wish to encourage international access to regional airports by pursuing a policy of liberalisation. We have decided that open access to all UK airports, except Heathrow and Gatwick, should be offered to all of our bilateral air services partners, provided that UK airlines are also allowed to operate on the same routes. My officials will be writing to all of our bilateral partners where such access is not already available with details of this change of policy.

This change in policy will allow both UK airlines and the airlines of the country concerned to operate to and from that country on such routes without restrictions on capacity or frequency, and without the need for international aviation negotiations to establish such services. This will enable UK and foreign airlines to plan the development of services with confidence that future growth will not be limited by bilateral restrictions.

Air Quality Standards

Mr. Leslie: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what progress has been made on the finance, management and policy review of the Expert Panel on Air Quality Standards. [45745]

Mr. Meacher: My Department has completed the first stage of the review, and we have decided to continue to sponsor the Expert Panel on Air Quality Standards. In the light of new evidence emerging on the effects of air pollution, and of growing interest in pollutants not yet covered by the Panel, we believe that the need for expert advice on these issues remains. The Expert Panel is best placed to provide that advice. The Expert Panel has served the Department extremely well over the last five years, and we are grateful for its very significant contribution to the development of air quality policy over the last five years.

The Department will now review how the Panel should operate in future, looking at all aspects of its management, including its membership and working procedures and at its work programme for the next five years.

SCOTLAND

Direct Labour and Services Organisations

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will list by authority and service area the recorded deficits made by local authority direct labour or services organisations in Scotland that have failed to meet the rate-of-return requirements under the terms of the Local Government (Planning and Land) Act 1980 and the Local Government Act 1988 in (a) 1995–96, (b) 1996–97 and (c) 1997–98 in (i) cash and (ii) constant prices; [43907]

(2) if he will list by authority and service area the surplus achieved by local authority direct labour or services organisations in Scotland for those services covered under the terms of the Local Government (Planning and Land) Act 1980 and the Local Government Act 1988 in (a) 1995–96, (b) 1996–97 and (c) 1997–98 in (i) cash and (ii) constant prices. [43908]

Mr. Dewar [holding answer 3 June 1998]: I have arranged for a detailed list, taken from annual reports submitted by authorities, of the surpluses and deficits achieved by direct labour and direct service organisations of Scottish local authorities in 1995–96 to be placed in the Library. A partial list is provided for 1996–97. This covers the authorities for which annual reports have been received. Information for 1997–98 is not yet available.

I am committed to ensuring local authority direct labour and direct service organisations achieve efficiency and value for money. Direct labour and direct service organisations exist to provide quality services competitively and I shall not hesitate to use my powers to deal with those who fail to perform as they should.

Mr. Letwin: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what estimate he has made of the total cost of the investigation which he has ordered into the financial affairs of the direct labour organisations in all Scottish local authorities. [44707]

Mr. Dewar [holding answer 8 June 1998]: The cost of the inquiries which are being undertaken by my Department and by the Accounts Commission for Scotland will be met within existing public expenditure provision.

Arts Sponsorship

Mr. Sarwar: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what steps he is taking to promote business sponsorship of the arts. [44203]

Mr. Galbraith: The Government fully recognise the importance of business sponsorship of the arts, which brings a range of benefits both to the sponsor and to the sponsored organisation.

Active encouragement is given to businesses to sponsor the arts, mainly through Government funding of the Association for Business Sponsorship of the Arts Pairing Scheme, which provides financial awards to arts organisations which have secured sponsorship for individual projects. The Government also provide financial support for specific initiatives which aim to bring relevant business skills and improved management capabilities to arts organisations.

Unemployment

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many and what percentage of registered unemployed among 18 to 25 year olds in (a) Dundee, (b) Perth and Kinross and (c) Angus found work and signed off as unemployed in (i) January, (ii) February, (iii) March and (iv) April in each year since 1986. [43411]

Mr. Dewar [holding answer 4 June 1998]: Data on the destination of leavers from the claimant count are available from the Office for National Statistics for 1998 onwards for the areas requested. Information is not readily available on the numbers aged 18 to 25 claiming unemployment related benefits and so the numbers who found work, in the table, are given for those aged 18 to 24.

Number of 18 to 24 year olds, leaving the register and finding work[1]

Unitary Authorities

	Dundee	Perth and Kinross	Angus
January 1998	55	42	46
February 1998	146	108	145
March 1998	137	98	117
April 1998	139	93	95

[1] Excluding clerical claims and claims with missing or invalid postcodes

Source:
Office for National Statistics

The number of people aged 18 to 24 on the claimant count is available through the Nomis database in the House of Commons Library. Library staff are ready to assist in accessing the information.

Fisheries Research

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what research he has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated into stocks of monkfish and megrim; and if he will make a statement about the future of fisheries research funding. [44806]

Mr. Macdonald: The Government are committed to ensuring that the monkfish and megrim fisheries are exploited on a sustainable basis, and are therefore expanding their programme of scientific research in this particular area. The Fisheries Research Services (FRS) Marine Laboratory in Aberdeen routinely samples landings of monkfish and megrim into Scotland, and participates in the annual stock assessments undertaken by the Advisory Committee on Fishery Management (ACFM). In addition, the FRS is this year initiating a new biennial survey of deep-water species such as these in the West of Scotland; and is next year undertaking a dedicated monkfish and megrim survey. The FRS and Scottish Fishermens Federation (SFF) are also liaising on further data collection, and on a possible EU-funded research project on the distribution and exploitation of monkfish and megrim.

Overall the Government retain their commitment to the funding of fisheries research, as demonstrated by the introduction into service of the new research vessel Scotia.

Road Accident Deaths

Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what research his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on road accident deaths in Scotland. [44684]

Mr. McLeish: As part of a continuing programme of road safety research, The Scottish Office has commissioned, in the past 10 years, 6 research studies which have included consideration of road accident deaths. These studies, which are listed below, looked at all categories of road accident casualties from fatal to slight: none has looked only at deaths. All have been evaluated by The Scottish Office Central Research Unit except for the study on the circumstances of child pedestrian accidents, which is due for completion later this year.

"Must Do Better"—A Study of Child Pedestrian Accidents and Road Crossing Behaviour in Scotland, published 1989;

"The Pedestrian Casualty Problem in Scotland—Why So Many", published 1996;

"Accidents at Signal Controlled Junctions and Pelican Crossings in Glasgow", published 1996;

"Linking Road Traffic Accident Statistics to Census Data in Lothian", published 1996;

"Impact of the Road Network on Scotland's Accident Rates", published 1997;

"The Circumstances of Child Pedestrian Accidents", (not yet published).

A Review of The Scottish Office Road Safety Research Programme 1989–97 was published in 1997 by The Scottish Office Central Research Unit.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Conditional Fee Agreements

Mr. Cranston: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what net savings in legal aid will be achieved by the implementation of the Government's proposals to remove legal aid from personal injury work and other areas to which conditional fee agreements will apply. [44131]

Mr. Hoon: Our intention is neither to increase nor to reduce in real terms expenditure on legal aid. We have, of course, estimated what the effect on the fund's cashflow would be of removing legal aid from the categories suggested in the consultation paper, Access to Justice with Conditional Fees. These estimates are:

1998–1999 : £0 million

1999–2000 : –£69 million

2000–2001 : –£100 million.

The saving would diminish in later years, when case costs would be recovered to benefit the fund.

What we intend is, within a controlled legal aid budget overall, to re-focus limited resources on those most in need, particularly in the areas of social welfare law.

Mr. Cranston: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what investigations his Department has carried out into the capacity of the Bar to do conditional fee agreement work. [44132]

Mr. Hoon: Barristers are already taking cases on a conditional fee basis. I, and my officials, have had several meetings with the Bar Council during the development of the proposals to extend the availability of conditional fee agreements. They have responded in detail to the consultation paper "Access to Justice with Conditional Fees", as have a number of other organisations representing barristers. These, together with all the other responses, are being carefully considered before decisions are taken.

Fast-track System

Mr. Cranston: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department when the Government will make detailed proposals for the fast-track system. [44134]

Mr. Hoon: Detailed proposals for fast-track procedures were the subject of public consultation last summer. In the light of that consultation, rules of court have been drafted and considered by the Civil Procedure Rule Committee. Officials are currently placing the latest drafts of the rules on the website [http:www.open.gov.uk/lcd] of the Lord Chancellor's Department and these drafts should be available for viewing before the end of this month. I expect to make an announcement about a costs regime in the fast-track shortly.

Civil Justice Reforms

Mr. Cranston: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what resources the Government intends to provide to ensure adequate judicial training, management administration and technology for the effective implementation of Lord Woolf's proposals. [44133]

Mr. Hoon: The Judicial Studies Board estimated that it would require £400,000 this financial year to fund the training of the full-time judiciary in the civil justice reforms. The Board also bid for £256,000 in the next financial year to train the part-time judiciary. These sums have been allocated.

The introduction of IT to other areas of administrative work in the civil courts will release staff to support the introduction of the Civil Justice Reforms in April 1999.

The cost of technological support has been provided for in the Court Service's expenditure plans although the exact amounts have yet to be finalised. It is currently involved in negotiations with its IT supplier. I am not prepared to jeopardise those negotiations by disclosing indicative costs.

TREASURY

No. 11 Downing Street (Receptions)

Mr. Baker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many receptions have been held at No. 11 Downing Street for members of regional Labour parties; what was the total cost of such receptions; and who paid for them. [44218]

Mr. Gordon Brown: I refer to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Gordon (Mr. Bruce), on 26 February 1998, Official Report, column 358.

Economic and Monetary Union

Mr. Flight: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what steps his Department took to establish whether the adjusted Italian gross domestic product figures used in calculating Italy's convergence performance under the Maastricht criteria were accurate; [44371]

(2) what factors were taken into account by the European Commission in estimating the size of the underground economy in Italy when determining its gross domestic product to national debt ratio. [44370]

Mrs. Liddell: Under Council Directive 89/130/EEC, all Member States submit to the Commission (Statistical Office of the European Communities) data on gross domestic product according to the European System of Accounts (ESA 1979). As set out in Council Regulation (EC) No. 3605/93, these ESA 1979 data are used as the denominator for calculating the Maastricht definition of deficit and debt ratios.

Bank of England

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what profit the Bank of England has derived from seigniorage on notes and coin issued in each of the last 10 years. [44452]

Mrs. Liddell: Any profits 'derived' from the note issues are not retained by the Bank of England but are paid to the Treasury. The profits of note issue for each of the last ten years are:

Year	£ million
1988–89	1,368
1989–90	1,905
1990–91	2,546
1991–92	1,875
1992–93	1,556
1993–94	1,117
1994–95	967
1995–96	1,294
1996–97	1,218
1997–98	1,528

Note:
Year to end February

The Bank of England does not issue coins thus has no seigniorage on these.

Euro

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proposals his Department has to adopt the European Parliament's Captain Euro publicity in respect of the preparations for the introduction of the euro. [45154]

Mrs. Liddell: HM Treasury has no plans at present to adopt the Captain Euro publicity in respect of the preparations for the introduction of the euro.

Public Sector Borrowing Requirement

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when, and under what authority, the Office for National Statistics was given the duty of determining the allocation of expenditure to the PSBR. [44720]

Mrs. Liddell: In the mid-1960s, when estimates of borrowing started to be produced for the public sector as a whole, a joint technical group of officials from Treasury, the Central Statistical Office, the Bank of England and some other Government Departments was set up to consider issues of definition, classification and measurement. Such matters remain the responsibility of the technical committee. The Office for National Statistics determines what constitutes the public sector by reference to international standards for national accounts. The PSBR figures are produced jointly by the Office for National Statistics and the Treasury.

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish the guidance on the basis of which the Office for National Statistics determines whether expenditure incurred by or on behalf of the Government and any of its agents or partners is to be part of the public sector borrowing requirement. [44721]

Mrs. Liddell: The principles used are set out in Treasury Working Paper 61 of December 1993. To summarise them, cash expenditure by any part of the public sector determines the PSBR, except when such expenditure is the repayment of debt incurred by Government. As explained in my reply to an earlier question (ref: 3658N), the definition of the PSBR is the joint responsibility of the Office for National Statistics and the Treasury. The Office for National Statistics determines what constitutes the public sector by reference to international standards for national accounts.

Inheritance Tax

Mr. Derek Twigg: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to raise the limit below which delivery of an inheritance tax account is not required for administering a deceased person's estate. [45539]

Dawn Primarolo: The Inland Revenue has today laid Regulations increasing the limit from £180,000 to £200,000. The increased limit will come into operation on 1 July 1998, for estates of persons dying on or after 6 April 1998. It will simplify the administration of some 5,000 estates.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Sierra Leone

Sir Alastair Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development (1) when she was first informed of the involvement of Sandline International in Sierra Leone; [42300]

(2) when her Private Office was first informed of the involvement of Sandline International in operations in Sierra Leone; [42304]

(3) when she was first informed of the existence of the Customs and Excise investigation into the involvement of Sandline International in operations in Sierra Leone; [42302]

(4) when her Private Office was first informed of the existence of the Customs and Excise investigation into the involvement of Sandline International in operations in Sierra Leone; [42298]

(5) what meetings she or her officials have had with representatives of Sandline International since May 1997; [41940]

(6) when she was informed of possible breaches of the UN Security Council Resolution 1132 concerning Sierra Leone; [41942]

(7) what contacts officials in her Department have had with representatives of Sandline International. [41939]

Clare Short: I refer the right hon. Gentleman to the speech by the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs in the House on 18 May 1998, Official Report, columns 604–11, in which he announced the investigation by Sir Thomas Legg KCB QC into allegations about Government involvement with the supply of arms to Sierra Leone by UK citizens and firms, and said that the Terms of Reference would be placed in the Library. The Foreign Secretary intends to publish the report of the investigation.

Sir Alastair Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development (1) when her Private Office was first informed of the plan for military intervention to restore the Government of President Kabbah of Sierra Leone; [42303]

(2) when she was first informed of the plan for military intervention to restore the Government of President Kabbah of Sierra Leone. [42299]

Clare Short: The Government did not have prior knowledge of the military intervention by the Military Observer Group of the Economic Community of West African States (ECOMOG) of 5 February 1998.

Sir Alastair Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what (a) British aid to Sierra Leone was delivered by and (b) deliveries of British aid to Sierra Leone were assisted by Sandline International or organisations hired on behalf of Sandline International. [41941]

Clare Short: None. Neither Sandline International nor any organisation acting on their behalf have assisted the delivery of British aid to Sierra Leone.

Indigenous People

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on the role of her Department in assisting the World Bank group in the promoting of dialogue between indigenous people and (a) project organisers and (b) private sector organisations. [41042]

Clare Short: The World Bank's indigenous peoples policy—first introduced in 1982 and revised in 1991—is currently being revised again as part of the programme of revisions to the Bank's Operational Policies (OPs). We have strongly encouraged the Bank to undertake wide consultation on its OPs, as we have for other areas of policy development and project implementation. We have also played a leading role in helping the Bank to increase its capacity to address social development issues, including those relating to indigenous peoples.

The Bank has prepared an Approach Paper outlining the revision process, and is currently designing a consultation strategy for stakeholder input—including that from indigenous peoples and their organisations. Consultation will take place over several months. We expect the revised policy to include guidance for private sector investments, drawing on the experience of the recently established Social Unit in the International Financial Corporation (IFC) and the Bank's Social Development Department, which undertakes training for Bank, IFC and Multilateral Investment Guarantee Agency (MIGA) staff on indigenous peoples and economic development.

Debt Relief

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will list the progress made at the recent G8 summit in Birmingham in relation to the redemption of debt of developing countries; and if she will make a statement. [44993]

Clare Short: At the G8 Summit in Birmingham on 15–17 May, we made useful progress in speeding up the implementation of the Heavily Indebted Poor Countries (HIPC) debt Initiative. The Communiqué set out the objective of getting all those countries which need debt relief under the Initiative, likely to be around 20 in number, into the process by the year 2000. This constitutes a significant step towards meeting the aims of the Government's Mauritius Mandate. And following a British initiative, the Summit also agreed on the need to look at ways of providing more and earlier debt relief to help heavily indebted post-conflict countries. We shall be pressing in all appropriate forums for the implementation of these targets.

WALES

Reviews

Mr. Allan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list, for each of the last four years, the departmental inquiries and reviews instigated by Ministers which have been chaired by individuals outside his Department; and in each case if he will give the date of establishment and the name of the chairman. [44367]

Mr. Ron Davies: The information is listed as follows:

Name of inquiry/review	Name of chair	Date of establishment
Changing Roles Group (examining the prospective role of new health authorities)	Joint chairs Jeremy Hallett and David Pritchard	February 1995
Child Care Procedures and Practice in North Wales	Adrianne Jones	December 1995
The Environmental Impact of the Sea Empress Oil Spill (by the Sea Empress Environmental Evaluation Committee)	Professor Ron Edwards CBE	March 1996
North Wales Child Abuse Allegations: investigation of papers	Nicola Davies QC	June 1996
North Wales Child Abuse Tribunal	Sir Ronald Waterhouse	June 1996
Welsh at Key Stage 4 in 10 secondary schools	Rudi Plaut	July 1997

Name of inquiry/review	Name of chair	Date of establishment
Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy Inquiry (joint with other departments)	Lord Justice Phillips	December 1997
Review of the National Curriculum	Rudi Plaut	January 1998
Changing Roles Group (examining the prospective role of new health authorities)	Joint chairs Jeremy Hallett and David Pritchard	February 1995
Child Care Procedures and Practice in North Wales	Adrianne Jones	December 1995
The Environmental Impact of the Sea Empress Oil Spill (by the Sea Empress Environmental Evaluation Committee)	Professor Ron Edwards CBE	March 1996
North Wales Child Abuse Allegations: investigation of papers	Nicola Davies QC	June 1996
North Wales Child Abuse Tribunal	Sir Ronald Waterhouse	June 1996
Welsh at Key Stage 4 in 10 secondary schools	Rudi Plaut	July 1997
Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy Inquiry (joint with other departments)	Lord Justice Phillips	December 1997
Review of the National Curriculum	Rudi Plaut	January 1998

Economic and Monetary Union

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of the effect of economic and monetary union on (a) the Welsh farming industry, (b) small businesses in Wales and (c) the Welsh economy as a whole. [44035]

Mr. Win Griffiths: I am concerned that Welsh businesses and farmers should be well placed to meet the challenges and take advantage of the opportunities presented by the EMU. The Government are committed to helping businesses to adapt and are providing advice to businesses about the euro.

Arts Funding

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was his subvention to (a) the National Orchestra of Wales, (b) the National Museum of Wales and (c) the principal theatres in Wales in 1997–98; and if he will make a statement. [44595]

Mr. Ron Davies: The information requested by my hon. Friend is as follows:

(a) the Welsh Office does not provide direct support for the arts but does so through grant in aid to the Arts Council of Wales. In 1997–98 the Arts Council's grant to the BBC National Orchestra was £609,875;

(b) Welsh Office direct grant in aid to the National Museum and Galleries of Wales was £12.3 million;

(c) the Arts Council's grants to the mainstream producing theatres Wales in 1997–98 amounted to £1.4 million.

Orchestras

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his policy on support for regional orchestras; and if he will make a statement. [44593]

Mr. Ron Davies: Welsh Office support for music is channelled through the Arts Council of Wales. The Arts Council's music budget for 1998–99 has been set at £3.5 million. Out of this, the Arts Council funds the BBC National Orchestra of Wales and the orchestra of the Welsh National Opera.

Millennium Projects

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the millennium projects in North East Wales, indicating their locations and his Department's support for each; and if he will make a statement. [44597]

Mr. Ron Davies: My Department does not provide direct financial support for millennium projects. However, the following projects in North East Wales have been awarded grants by the Millennium Commission, which is sponsored by the Department for Culture, Media and Sport:

St. Cynfarch and St. Cyngar Church

Floodlighting, Wrexham: £16,882

Erbistock Village Hall, Wrexham: £27,300

Ceiriog Centenary Hall, Llanarmon, Wrexham: £143,000

Section of the Sustrans National Cycle

Network: £468,000.

Projects in North East Wales are also being considered for Millennium Commission grants for umbrella projects stretching across the United Kingdom.

Theatres

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what steps he has taken to assist regional theatre; and if he will make a statement. [44592]

Mr. Ron Davies: Welsh Office support for drama is channelled through the Arts Council of Wales. The Arts Council's drama budget for 1998–99 has been set at just over £3 million.

Tourism

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list his initiatives for the development of tourism in (a) Wales, (b) North Wales and (c) North East Wales; and if he will make a statement. [44596]

Mr. Hain: We continue to fund the Wales Tourist Board's section 4 capital grant programme. The Board has targeted grant at resorts and historic towns in North Wales generating investment of £11.75 million over the past three years and is also involved in developing a new North Wales Regional Tourism Strategy. In North East Wales the Board has allocated £600,000 to support development in Denbigh and Ruthin with new initiatives likely to come from the new regional strategy.

Government support also enables the Board to support tourism through marketing, product development, training, quality grading and research initiatives. The Board is soon to consult the industry on a new tourism strategy for the next century.

Museums

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what steps he has taken to assist the principal museums of Wales; and if he will make a statement. [44594]

Mr. Ron Davies: My Department provided funding of £12.3 million to the National Museums and Galleries of Wales in 1997–98. In addition, the Council of Museums in Wales, the body which represents non-national local museums throughout Wales, received £522,000 and a grant of £100,000 was made to the Big Pit mining museum at Blaenavon.

Cricket Clubs

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales in what ways he has assisted cricket clubs in North Wales; what grants he has made; and if he will make a statement. [44598]

Mr. Ron Davies: Further to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend on 19 May 1998, Official Report, column 31, I understand that the Chief Executive of the Sports Council for Wales has written to my hon. Friend with details of all grants made to cricket clubs in Wales over the last five years. A copy of his letter has been placed in the Library of the House.

Local Government Boundary Reviews

Mr. Livsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many local government boundary reviews being carried out under the current review process (a) have been completed and (b) are awaiting completion; when each of the outstanding reviews is due to be completed; and if the 1999 unitary council elections within all unitary authorities will take place within the new local government boundaries. [43491]

Mr. Win Griffiths: Following local government reorganisation 2 boundary reviews were completed in February 1996 by the Local Government Boundary Commission. A further boundary review is being undertaken by the Commission, and is expected to be completed by Spring 1999. The 1999 local government elections will take account of the 2 boundary reviews completed in February 1996. It will not be possible to take account of the most recent boundary review in time for these elections.

In addition to these boundary reviews the Commission is undertaking a review of the electoral arrangements in all Welsh local authorities following local government reorganisation. It has submitted 14 reports to the Secretary of State to date, and a further report is expected shortly. The final 7 reports have yet to be completed. The outstanding reports have to be submitted to the Secretary of State by 1 December 1999. The Secretary of State is still considering whether these reports should be implemented in time for the May 1999 elections, in the context of his consultation on the modernisation agenda for local government.

Housing

Mr. Livsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many local authority houses in Wales were assessed to be unfit for human habitation (a) in total and (b) by local authority in 1997. [43494]

Mr. Win Griffiths: Information is not available for 1997. The latest Welsh House Condition Survey was conducted in 1993. From this, it is estimated that 37,900 occupied local authority dwellings, 15.8 per cent. of the total, in Wales were unfit. Information on individual local authority areas is not available from the survey.

The 1997 Welsh House Condition Survey is in progress. Information from this survey which will provide results for local authority areas is expected to be available later this year.

House Renovation Grants

Mr. Livsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what sums were allocated by his Department to private sector renovation grants for the financial years (a) 1996–97 and (b) 1997–98. [43492]

Mr. Win Griffiths: The Department issued Supplementary Credit Approvals of £179.5 million in 1996–97 and £149.6 million in 1997–98 specifically for private sector renovation and disabled facilities grants. Further Supplementary Credit Approvals of £17 million in 1996–97 and £14 million in 1997–98 were issued for area renewal schemes. Authorities may additionally use part of their Basic Credit Approval or Supplementary Credit Approval issued under the Capital Receipts Initiative for individual grants and area renewal.

Mr. Livsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the level of spending by each local authority in Wales on (i) renovation grants, (ii) disabled facility grants, (iii) home repair grants, (iv) common parts grants, (v) conversional grants and (vi) empty home grants or their equivalent for the financial years (a) 1996–97 and (b) 1997–98. [43493]

Mr. Win Griffiths: The available information is given in the following table. Detailed information on the split of local authority expenditure for housing grants is not held centrally.

Local authority expenditure on renovation and other housing grants

£ million

	(a) 1996–97
	(b) Renovation grants	(c) Other housing grants	(b) (d) 1997–98 Renovation grants
Blanenau Gwent	5.3	0.0	4.9
Bridgend	6.0	0.0	5.8
Caerphilly	9.3	1.2	6.9
Cardiff	21.2	0.0	14.6
Carmarthenshire	13.2	0.0	13.2
Ceredigion	6.8	0.0	5.9
Conwy	4.0	0.0	4.4
Denbighshire	2.6	0.0	1.1
Flintshire	7.4	0.0	6.4
Gwynedd	7.8	1.9	9.0
Isle of Anglesey	3.8	0.0	4.4
Merthyr Tydfil	4.0	0.0	3.2
Monmouthshire	2.3	0.0	2.0
Neath Port Talbot	8.3	0.0	7.2
Newport	5.9	0.0	3.6
Pembrokeshire	7.2	0.0	7.7
Powys	7.3	0.0	7.6
Rhondda Cynon Taff	17.4	0.0	16.3
Swansea	11.0	0.0	10.2
Torfaen	2.5	0.8	2.9
The Vale of Glamorgan	5.0	0.0	4.2
Wrexham	5.5	0.0	5.8
Wales	163.8	3.8	147.2

(a) Provisional outturn

(b) Includes renovation, disabled facility, home repair, common parts grants and grants to homes in multiple occupancy

(c) Includes all other housing grants

(d) Local authority forecast. Information is not yet available for 'other' housing grants

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Export Credit Guarantees

Ms Walley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to her answer of 7 April 1998, Official Report, column 159, and her letter of 7 May, if she will list the ECGD exposure which was not included in the original figure but included in the revised figure of £848 million. [43699]

Mrs. Roche: In my answer to my hon. Friend of 7 April I quoted a figure of £654 million as the level of ECGD's current exposure on Indonesia which is in respect of defence equipment. It subsequently emerged that this figure understated the actual total by £194 million as a result of an error in the computer programme which ECGD used when converting foreign currency liabilities into the total current exposure in sterling.

As soon as the error was identified, I wrote to my hon. Friend advising her that the correct total was, in fact, £848 million.

Export Licences

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many licences have been (a) granted and (b) refused since 1 May 1997 for the export of military goods to (1) Algeria, (2) Angola, (3) Bahrain, (4) Botswana, (5) Cambodia, (6) China, (7) Colombia, (8) Egypt, (9) Eritrea, (10) Ethiopia, (11) Georgia, (12) India, (13) Indonesia, (14) Jordan, (15) Kuwait, (16) Kenya, (17) Malaysia, (18) Mexico, (19) Morocco, (20) Mozambique, (21) Namibia, (22) Oman, (23) Pakistan, (24) Peru, (25) Qatar, (26) Saudi Arabia, (27) Singapore, (28) Sri Lanka, (29) Syria, (30) Turkey, (31) UAE, (32) Uganda, (33) Yemen, (34) Zambia and (35) Zimbabwe; and if she will specify the number of licences granted in each of the categories set out under Part III of Schedule 1 to the Export of Goods (Control) Order 1989. [44040]

Mrs. Roche [holding answer 3 June 1998]: The Export Control Organisation's computer databases have been interrogated, and the results are contained in tables which have been placed in the Library of the House.

Post Office

Sir Sydney Chapman: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans she has to give the Post Office the commercial freedoms enjoyed by the (a) German Post Office and (b) Dutch Post Office. [44676]

Mr. Ian McCartney: As announced by my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade on 6 April 1998, Official Report, column 63, the current review of options that will best deliver greater commercial freedom for the Post Office is taking account of the ways in which overseas competitors and analogous organisations are facing, or being set up to face, the challenges of the changing market. We plan to present our proposals following the review in the Autumn; these will cover the extent and form of future commercial freedoms for the Post Office.

Dounreay

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will establish an inquiry into the workings of Dounreay with specific reference to the reported loss of highly enriched uranium; and if she will make a statement. [44873]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 9 June 1998]: As my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister reported to this House on 3 June 1998, Official Report, column 365, there is no evidence to suggest that enriched uranium from Dounreay has been stolen or has fallen into the hands of terrorists. The Safeguards Office of my department are studying the UKAEA report "Dounreay Shaft Inventory" and if they see any reason for further investigation I will of course ensure that the necessary work is put in hand. Since 1973, nuclear material accountancy at Dounreay and other nuclear sites in the UK has been subject to independent oversight by the Euratom Safeguards Directorate. In addition, the Health and Safety Executive (HSE) and Scottish Environment Protection Agency (SEPA) are already conducting a review of safety at Dounreay and I expect their findings to be made public.

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the current estimated cost of refurbishment of the reprocessing facility at Dounreay to be used to process the uranium fuel recently received from Georgia; when the plant is expected to be ready; and what further foreign customers she expects to use the plant. [40670]

Mr. Battle [pursuant to his reply, 11 May 1998, c. 32]: I need to amend the information that I gave to my hon. Friend then that unirradiated fuel amounts to 80 per cent. of the uranium fuel in the consignment received from Georgia.

The correct percentage is 70. I have now been informed that the full details of the material from Georgia are as follows:

The precise quantity of Highly Enriched Uranium (HEU) is: 4.125 kg of unirradiated material (which contains 3.7052 kg of Uranium-235); and 0.6191 kg of irradiated material (which contains 0.5537 kg of Uranium-235).

The balance of the material is approximately 9.5 kg of low enriched uranium (LEU), which is not immediately weapons useable and therefore of less proliferation concern. The LEU consists of 5.840kg of unirradiated material (which contains 0.584 kg of Uranium-235) and 3.7449 kg of irradiated material (which contains 0.3609 kg of Uranium-235).

In summary therefore, the total quantity of Uranium received from Georgia was 14.329 kg—made up of LEU of 9.5 kg and as previously stated HEU of 5.0 kg.

The irradiated material when it is eventually reprocessed will result in no more than two barrels of Intermediate Level Waste, again as previously stated.

Research Councils

Dr. Starkey: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to her answer of 14 May 1998, Official Report, columns 189–90, what percentage of applications from men, in relation to each of the research councils, was successful for (a) project grants, (b) programme grants, (c) special grants intended for new investigators, (d) studentships and (e) fellowships, in 1997 and in each of the two previous years. [44586]

Mr. Battle: The available data are shown in the table.

In answer to my hon. Friend's previous question on 14 May 1998, Official Report, columns 189–90, the figure for the percentage of applications from women who were successful for Medical Research Council fellowships for 1996 was wrongly stated. The figure should be 13 per cent., not 34 per cent.

Percentage

Research council and year	Project grants	Programme grants	Special grants	Studentships[1]	Fellowships
Biotechnology and Biological Sciences
1995	27.9	23.1	26.3	35	n/a
1996	29.8	25.8	16.7	54	8.25
1997	31.3	30.1	24.5	50	8.55
Engineering and Physical Sciences
1995	66.3	—	n/a	78.6	10.4
1996	46.0	—	n/a	78.4	9.5
1997	38.9	—	58.2	76.7	10.7
Economic and Social
1995	n/a	n/a	n/a	26	n/a
1996	n/a	n/a	n/a	25	n/a
1997	17	n/a	n/a	28	n/a
Medical
1995	37	61	n/a	46	20
1996	32	59	n/a	46	15
1997	26	57	n/a	43	16
Natural Environment
1995	n/a	n/a	n/a	n/a	10
1996	n/a	n/a	n/a	n/a	16
1997	26	21	n/a	n/a	17
Particle Physics and Astronomy
1995	59	—	n/a	79	9
1996	54	—	n/a	84	13
1997	67	—	n/a	85	9

[1] There are no data for the studentship applications because, with the exception of the ESRC research studentships, the Research Councils allocate studentships by quota to institutions which are responsible for the subsequent award. The figures given are therefore the percentage of studentships awarded to men, with the exception of the ESRC which shows the percentage of applications for research studentships by men which were successful

Notes:

1. The EPSRC and PPARC do not distinguish project from programme grants. In addition, the EPSRC figure for these grants and for the special grants is the percentage of applications by men in applications where the gender is known
2. NERC figures for project grants represent NERC non-thematic (responsive) grants, and for programme grants NERC thematic (directed) grants
3. The success rate for MRC programme grants relates to final applications rather than applications submitted
4. Some Councils do not run special grants intended for new investigators, or are in only the first year of doing so

Eureka Programme

Dr. Gibson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will make a statement on the impact of the Eureka programme on British industry. [44926]

Mr. Battle: Since 1985, 513 UK industrial organisations, 225 of them SMEs, have participated, or continue to participate, in 345 Eureka projects. DTI accepts the findings of the 1997 independent evaluation of Eureka, that 70 per cent. of industrial participants achieved new products or processes by the end of their projects.

Dr. Gibson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what has been the financial contribution of the United Kingdom towards the Eureka programme. [44927]

Mr. Battle: DTI has so far made offers totalling £155.08 million towards projects involving UK participants since Eureka began in 1985. Spend to the end of Financial Year 1997–98 was £130.71 million.

Dr. Gibson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans he has to revise the Eureka programme before the year 2000. [44925]

Mr. Battle: The UK will work with the other members of Eureka to adapt the initiative so that it continues to be relevant to all sectors of European industry. Any changes will take into account the increasing global nature of R&D, and the changed political and business environment since Eureka's inception. They will appear in the next Eureka Medium Term Plan in June 2000.

Human Genome Sequencing

Dr. Gibson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what estimate she has made of the share of the world's effort in human genome sequencing which is being undertaken in the UK. [44980]

Mr. Battle: We estimate that the UK undertake one third of the world's effort in sequencing the human genome. The UK contribution is made primarily through the work of the Wellcome Trust and the Medical Research Council.

Nuclear Weapons (Developing Countries)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what steps she has taken to ensure that no plutonium from the United Kingdom has been used in the production of nuclear weapons in developing countries. [44725]

Mr. Battle: I refer my hon. Friend to the detailed answer given to the hon. Member for Perth (Ms Cunningham) on 1 June 1998, Official Report, columns 119–20.

The stringent controls described in that answer would apply to any applications to export plutonium to a developing country.

Nuclear Power Stations (Health Risks)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what new proposals she has to improve transparency in respect of the health risks arising from nuclear power stations. [43511]

Mr. Battle: None. Existing arrangements already provide for a high degree of public openness about health, safety and environmental issues associated with the UK civil nuclear industry.

Nuclear operators publish annual reports which provide detailed information about both the environmental and the health and safety considerations associated with their activities. Those bodies responsible for the regulation of the civil nuclear industry, including the Health and Safety Executive, the Environment Agency, the Scottish Environment Protection Agency, the National Radiological Protection Board, and the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, also publish detailed annual reports. Where they believe there to be a matter of particular public interest to be addressed, regulators also published reports covering specific regulatory issues.

Independent expert consideration of the potential implications of the civil nuclear industry for public health is further provided for through the existence of the Committee on Medical Aspects of Radiation in the Environment (COMARE). COMARE was established by the Government in 1985 with a remit to investigate and advise on the health effects of both natural and man-made radiation and on the need for further research in this area. COMARE has undertaken investigations into the incidence of cancers in the vicinity of a number of UK nuclear installations and in each case has published a detailed report setting out its findings.

For safety and environmental issues associated with the UK civil nuclear industry, independent expert scrutiny is provided for through the existence of two advisory committees, the Nuclear Safety Advisory Committee (RWMAC). NuSAC publishes a biennial report setting out details of the work of the committee and its sub groups and of its future programme of work. RWMAC publishes a similar report on an annual basis.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

BSE

Mr. Levitt: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the effect of BSE on the knackers' trade. [44357]

Mr. Rooker: Cattle displaying clinical signs suggestive of BSE are not sent to knackers yards. They are slaughtered on farm and the carcases taken to incineration facilities contracted to the Department to deal with BSE suspects.

Following the announcement on BSE in March 1996, some £97 million was made available for the rendering industry in the financial year 1996–97. In return, renderers were required to maintain pre-crisis prices and charges to all their suppliers of animal waste. A further £59 million of aid, also designed to help the entire red meat/animal waste chain, was made available during the financial year 1997–98. The support was always intended to be temporary and was phased out gradually during 1997–98 to enable the chain to adjust to the changing economics.

The knacker industry is playing an important role in the collection and transport of Over Thirty Months Scheme casualty animals to incineration facilities. Over 140,000 have been handled to date. However, the Government are aware of the concern being expressed by the knacker industry about the increased costs of collecting other fallen stock following the removal of support. Officials are liaising with farming representatives to consider how farmers should, in future, dispose of fallen stock and to encourage the industry to put suitable arrangements in place.

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the incidence of BSE by cattle breed in 1997 and 1998 to date. [44897]

Mr. Rooker: The number of cattle confirmed as having BSE in Great Britain in 1997 and 1998 to date are listed by cattle breed in the table.

Number of confirmed cases by breed and year of slaughter as at 5 June 1998

Breed	1997	1998
Aberdeen Angus	8	1
Aberdeen Angus x	16	0
Aberdeen Angus x Charolais	1	0
Aberdeen Angus x Friesian	15	2
Ayrshire	23	4
Ayrshire x Shorthorn	1	0
Belgian Blue	1	1
Belgian Blue x	3	2
Black Hereford	1	0
Blonde d'Aquitaine	3	0
Blonde d'Aquitaine x	3	1
Blonde d'Aquitaine x Friesian	6	0
Blue Grey	1	0
British White	1	0
Brown Swiss	10	1
Brown Swiss x	5	0
Brown Swiss x Friesian	13	2
Brown Swiss x Guernsey	1	0
Canadian Holstein	1	0
Charolais	7	1
Charolais x	17	1
Charolais x Belgian Blue	1	0
Charolais x Friesian	7	2
Charolais x Guernsey	1	0
Charolais x Hereford	1	0
Charolais x Holstein	1	0
Charolais x Limousin	1	0
Charolais x Simmental	1	0
Charolais x South Devon	1	0
Devon x Friesian	1	0
Friesian	3,055	474
Friesian x	11	2
Friesian x Ayrshire	4	0
Friesian x Belgian Blue	2	0
Friesian x Galloway	0	1
Friesian x Holstein	322	59
Friesian x South Devon	1	0
Guernsey	37	6
Guernsey x Jersey	1	0
Guernsey x Merse Rhine Issel	1	0
Hereford	15	1
Hereford x	118	13
Hereford x Friesian	122	11
Hereford x Simmental	2	0
Highland	3	0
Holstein	90	21
Holstein x	2	0
Jersey	40	2
Jersey x	1	0
Jersey x Friesian	3	0
Limousin	17	2
Limousin x	64	9
Limousin x Friesian	37	3
Limousin x Hereford	0	1

Number of confirmed cases by breed and year of slaughter as at 5 June 1998

Breed	1997	1998
Limousin x Jersey	1	0
Limousin x Luing	1	0
Limousin x Simmental	1	0
Longhorn	1	0
Meuse Rhine Issel	2	0
Meuse Rhine Issel x Guernsey	1	0
Meuse Rhine Issel x Jersey	1	0
Montbelliarde	1	0
Murray Grey	1	0
Murray Grey x Friesian	1	0
Murray Grey x Jersey	1	0
Not recorded	61	90
Red Friesian	8	0
Red Friesian x	2	0
Red Poll	2	0
Saler x	1	0
Saler x Friesian	1	0
Shetland	1	0
Shorthorn	1	0
Shorthorn x	3	0
Shorthorn x Friesian	2	1
Simmental	19	4
Simmental x	56	9
Simmental x Friesian	33	4
Simmental x Holstein	2	0
Sioux	0	1
South Devon	2	1
South Devon x	0	1
Sussex x	1	0
Sussex x Friesian	3	1
Welsh Black	2	1
Welsh Black x	1	0
Total	4,313	736

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if Dr. Narang has supplied his Ministry with the information his scientists had requested in order to validate his BSE testing method; and if he will make a statement. [44866]

Mr. Rooker: The Department is not awaiting any information from Dr. Narang. Research funded by the Medical Research Council is underway at Leeds University to investigate the feasibility of diagnosing pre clinical BSE using cattle urine. Dr. Narang is collaborating in this work.

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the effectiveness and accuracy of the methods advocated by Dr. Narang for detecting BSE. [44894]

Mr. Rooker: Dr. Narang has advocated a method to detect pre clinical BSE in cattle using urine. Research is currently underway in Leeds University to investigate the feasibility of such a method. It is too early to comment on effectiveness or accuracy.

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the urine test method of detecting BSE in cattle. [44890]

Mr. Rooker: It is too early for an assessment to be made. The research currently underway at Leeds University to investigate the feasibility of using cattle urine to diagnose pre clinical BSE is in its early stages.

An independent advisory panel set up by the Medical Research Council is overseeing the work and will be meeting in early July to consider preliminary findings.

E. Coli

Mr. Steen: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what research, by whom and at what cost, his Department has commissioned into E. coli in (a) cow's milk, (b) sheep's milk and (c) goat's milk. [45016]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 9 June 1998]: The Department has recently undertaken a survey of the microbiological quality of unpasteurised sheep and goats' drinking milk on sale in England and Wales, at a cost of £11,926. It is also in the process of carrying out a more general survey of the microbiological quality of unpasteurised sheep and goat's milk, at an expected cost of £35,700. The analyses carried out in the surveys include testing for the presence of E. coli in the milk. ADAS was commissioned by the Department to undertake both surveys.

My Department has also commissioned a significant amount of other research on E. coli much of which will be of relevance to the presence of the organism in milk.

Coastal Erosion

Mr. Prior: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on protecting areas of environmental importance from coastal erosion. [44464]

Mr. Morley: The Department expects coastal authorities to make the potential impact on habitats, and the environment generally, a key consideration when planning works to prevent or reduce coastal erosion. They should start from the presumption that natural river and coastal processes should not be disrupted except where life or important man-made or natural assets are at risk. Schemes which are not environmentally acceptable are not eligible for grant aid.

Last year the Department introduced a priority scoring system (taking account of Ministerial priorities, urgency and benefit:cost ratio) with a view to optimising the allocation of available funds. Sites of environmental significance are specifically identified within Ministerial priorities, with particular priority being given to sites of international importance.

Toxocariasis

Mr. Levitt: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the incidence of toxocariasis in rural areas compared to urban areas. [44443]

Ms Jowell: I have been asked to reply.

The data available on numbers of cases of human toxocariasis are based on laboratory reports received by the Public Health Laboratory Service's Communicable Disease Surveillance Centre (CDSC). However, reporting of cases is not a statutory requirement and therefore not all laboratory diagnosed cases are necessarily reported to the CDSC.

From the data received by CDSC in recent years no significant change has been noted in the number of reports (1993—25; 1994—25; 1995—38; 1996—19; 1997—18).

The location of the laboratory reporting an infection does not necessarily indicate the area of residence of the patient, or whether this is urban or rural, or the country (United Kingdom or overseas) in which infection was acquired.

HEALTH

Chiropody

Angela Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will place in the Library the final version of the recent report on chiropody service levels. [44124]

Mr. Boateng: I understand that the report referred to is entitled "On Your Feet: Older People and NHS Chiropody Services" and was published by Age Concern in March 1998. Copies are available in the Library.

Recruitment Agencies

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the names of agencies which have supplied contract labour from outside the United Kingdom to the NHS in the last 10 years and the total amount paid in commission fees by the NHS to such firms in each of the last 10 years. [44500]

Mr. Milburn: This information is not available centrally and could be collected only at disproportionate cost. Each National Health Service trust is responsible for recruiting its own staff and may choose to use a recruitment agency to help it do so.

Travel Vaccinations

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what representations he has received about the possibility of privatising the provision of travel vaccinations; [44701]

(2) what consultation he is undertaking on proposals for the future provision of travel vaccinations. [44703]

Ms Jowell: Inconsistencies and ambiguities have arisen over the years in the arrangements for travel vaccines and the prescribing of medicines for overseas travel and there are differences in the way that the various vaccines are dealt with. The Department, as part of an ongoing internal review, is seeking to resolve the anomalies which exist at present in the arrangements for travel vaccines. Once we have recommendations to present we will consult the relevant professional bodies.

As a routine, Ministers and officials of the Department receive a number of letters from interested hon. Members and members of the public about the arrangements for travel vaccines and the prescribing of medicines for overseas travel. These letters express a range of views. In particular, letters have been received from the Patients' Association, the Overseas Doctors' Association, various student unions, the Primary Care Virology Group, Pasteur Merieux MSD and the Royal College of Nursing.

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the cost to the NHS of travel vaccinations in each of the last three years. [44702]

Ms Jowell: It is not possible to say how much is spent in total on travel immunisation each year. The net ingredient costs for vaccines which may be given for the purposes of travel were:

Year	£ million
1994	40.5
1995	47.0
1996	[1]49.1

[1] The vaccines are those preparations in the British National Formulary (issue 30, September 1995) section 14.6—International travel: Bacille Calmette-Guérin, cholera, diphtheria, hepatitis A, meningococcal A&C, normal immunoglobulin, poliomyelitis, typhoid, typhoid-paratyphoid A&B and yellow fever. Some of these vaccines will have been prescribed for reasons other than travel.

Note:
The net ingredient cost refers to the costs of the drug before discounts and does not include any dispensing costs or fees.

However, these costs include some vaccines which will have been prescribed for reasons other than travel. It is not possible to identify separately the cost of vaccinating patients in general practice.

Fatal Diseases (Overseas Travel)

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will estimate how many NHS patients are currently suffering from potentially fatal diseases caught while travelling overseas; [44689]

(2) what estimate he has made of the cost to the NHS of treating United Kingdom citizens for potentially fatal diseases caught while travelling overseas in the last year for which figures are available. [44699]

Ms Jowell: Estimates are not available of the cost to the National Health Service of treating United Kingdom citizens for potentially fatal diseases caught while travelling overseas. It is not possible to estimate reliably how many NHS patients are currently suffering from potentially fatal diseases actually caught while travelling overseas, since many diseases which could be caught overseas can also be caught in the UK and it is often impossible to identify where a patient contracted an illness.

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his Department's estimate of the number of United Kingdom citizens making overseas trips in 1997 to areas at risk to potentially fatal diseases. [44700]

Ms Jowell: The Office for National Statistics advise that, during 1997, 46.8 million United Kingdom residents made visits abroad, of which 5.4 million were to areas outside North America and Western Europe (preliminary figures).

There is the risk of contracting a potentially fatal disease anywhere in the world.

Ongar War Memorial Hospital

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects to announce his decision on the proposed closure of the Ongar War Memorial Hospital. [44883]

Mr. Milburn: My right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State will announce his decision when he has given full and proper consideration to the proposals once they have been put forward by North Essex Health Authority.

Pathogen Sales

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what pathogens were sold and at what price to the American Type Culture Collection in Rockville, Maryland, by his Department's installations between (a) 1 January 1980 and 31 December 1984 and (b) 1 January 1990 and 31 December 1997. [44184]

Ms Jowell: The Centre for Applied Microbiology and Research (CAMR) has not sold or supplied any pathogens to the American Type Culture Collection (ATCC) between 1 January 1980 and 31 December 1984, and 1 January 1990 and 31 December 1997.

The National Collection of Type Cultures (NCTC), Public Health Laboratory Service (PHLS) does not have complete records for the whole period 1 January 1980 to 31 December 1984. From the records it does have relating to this period and to the period between 1 January 1990 and 31 December 1997, the NCTC has not sold or supplied to the ATCC pathogens categorised as Hazard Group 3 (pathogens such as Bacillus anthracis and Mycobacterium tuberculosis belong to this group). A wide range of biological agents which are less hazardous are categorised as Hazard Group 2 and, although information on which strains have been supplied to the ATCC can be provided, this will take considerable time to compile. I will write to the hon and learned Member with details as soon as possible.

The National Collection of Pathogenic Fungi, PHLS, has supplied as follows:

Date	Strain number	Species
1984	NCPF 2109	Aspergillus fumigatus
1984	NCPF 2140	Aspergillus fumigatus
1993	NCPF 2808	Ramichloridium mackenziei

These cultures of fungi were supplied in response to requests by the ATCC for strains to be added to their catalogue and as such were not charged for.

Community Hospitals

Mr. Prior: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many doctors and nurses are currently working in community hospitals. [44479]

Mr. Milburn: The information is not collected centrally in the format requested.

Mr. Prior: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance he has given to health authorities on the closure of community hospitals. [44480]

Mr. Milburn: In our White Paper "The New NHS—Modern, Dependable" we set out the important role community hospitals can play in providing locally based services. Within this broad framework, health authorities are responsible for determining the appropriate balance of care for their populations.

Myalgic Encephalomyelitis

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he is taking to promote awareness and understanding of myalgic encephalomyelitis among doctors and the general public; what help is offered to people who suffer from the illness; and if he will make a statement. [44923]

Ms Jowell: The National Health Service provides a wide range of services to which sufferers of myalgic encephalomyelitis (ME)/chronic fatigue syndrome (CFS) have access and such patients are seen within a wide range of community services and hospital specialties. Patients can discuss the options available to them with their general practitioner and they may also request an assessment of their needs by local authority social services departments. It is the responsibility of health authorities to decide how the needs of ME/CFS sufferers should be met and whether or not they should purchase dedicated services. All such decisions are made in the light of competing priorities.

Raising awareness and understanding about ME/CFS is a major part of the work of the ME/CFS voluntary organisations. Since 1988, the Department has provided substantial funding to ME/CFS organisations, amounting to almost a quarter of a million pounds. Some of the ME/CFS organisations provide information packs to GPs about the condition, as well as to sufferers and their families.

Abortion

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the cost of abortions in the first trimester to the National Health Service in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [43490]

Ms Jowell: Information on the costs of specific operations is not held centrally.

Complementary and Alternative Medicine

Mr. Tredinnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Health following the recent review of expenditure, if he will list the reductions in funding for complementary and alternative medicine services by category and amount broken down by (a) homeopathy, (b) acupuncture and (c) therapeutic touch in the East London and The City Health Authority; and if he will make a statement. [45136]

Ms Jowell: This information is not held centrally in the form requested. East London and The City Health Authority ceased funding complementary medicine with effect from 1 April 1997. This represented some £120,000 in contracts with a number of National Health Service trusts and other providers.

Medicines Control Agency

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the key business targets for the Medicines Control Agency for 1998–99. [45278]

Ms Jowell: We have today placed copies of the 1998–99 high level business targets of the Medicines Control Agency in the Library.

DEFENCE

Ex-service Men

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what research his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on the effects of counselling for ex-servicemen. [44387]

Dr. Reid: The Ministry of Defence has not commissioned or evaluated any research into the effects of counselling for ex-Service personnel. However, my Department maintains links with numerous ex-Service organisations and charities, including the Ex-Services Mental Welfare Society (Combat Stress), which provides limited counselling facilities. We very much value the contributions which these organisations make towards the resettlement and aftercare of ex-Service personnel.

Army Personnel

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the personnel numbers for (a) the full strength and (b) the current strength of each Army regiment. [44189]

Dr. Reid: I will write to the hon. and learned Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Royal Navy Vessels (Crew)

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Royal Navy vessels are below full crew complement; and by how many. [44190]

Dr. Reid: The major ships of the Surface Flotilla all experience a degree of gapping which, on average, amounts to 5 per cent. of the full crew complement. In the case of minor ships, this average is 4 per cent. No submarines are operating below their full crew complement.

Nuclear Threat Assessment

Mr. Alasdair Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the (a) extent and (b) sources of the external nuclear threat to the United Kingdom. [45038]

Mr. George Robertson: We do not see any immediate nuclear threats to the United Kingdom. However, while large nuclear arsenals and risks of proliferation remain we cannot be certain that this situation could not change. Our minimum deterrent therefore remains a necessary element of our security.

Western European Union (Training)

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many joint WEU training missions the (a) Royal Navy, (b) British Army, and (c) RAF have participated in over the past five years; and if he will make a statement. [44183]

Dr. Reid: The exercise programme of the Western European Union (WEU) is focused on testing crisis management procedures at the headquarters level; exercises of this type organised by the WEU have involved UK personnel, including Service personnel. UK forces train with those of other WEU nations for the types of missions which the WEU might undertake; this training is organised by nations, not by the WEU.

Royal Navy (Fuel Quota)

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if it is the practice to allocate each ship in the Royal Navy an annual quota of fuel. [44185]

Mr. Spellar: Fuel is allocated to the RN surface Flotilla on an annual basis. Individual HM Ships receive a monthly allocation based on their forward programme requirements.

Soldiers (Exercises and Operations)

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the average annual number of days spent on (a) exercises and (b) operations by an infantry soldier in each of the last 10 years. [44186]

Dr. Reid: This information is not held centrally by my Department and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Iraq

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what has been the cost of the RAF's involvement in policing the air exclusion zones over Northern and Southern Iraq in each year since 1992; and from what budget heading the cost of the operations has been met. [44180]

Mr. George Robertson: The additional costs of the RAF's involvement in policing the air exclusion zones over Northern and Southern Iraq, i.e. in Op Jural and Op Warden, and the budget headings from which the costs were met are shown in the table:

Year	North (£ million)	South (£ million)	Budget
1992–93	3.865	3.303	Class 1. Vote 1. (Personnel cost, support and other services)
	0.038	0.678	Class 1. Vote 2. (Procurement)
1993–94	4.892	2.157	Class 1. Vote 1. (Operational and support costs)
	0.199	0.229	Class 1. Vote 2. (Logistics services)
1994–95	5.963	3.932	Class 1. Vote 1. (Operational and support costs)
	0.333	0.622	Class 1. Vote 2. (Logistics services)
1995–96	0.512	0.457	Class 1. Vote 1. (Operational and support costs)
	0.260	0.728	Class 1. Vote 2. (Logistics services)
1996–97	0.639	0.938	Class 1. Vote 1. (Operational and support costs)
	0.105	0.134	Class 1. Vote 2. (Logistics services)
1997–98	0.165	0.31	Class 1. Vote 1. (Operational and support costs)
	0.296	0.294	Class 1. Vote 2. (Logistics services)

Note:
Changes in the MOD Budget Structure in 1993 resulted in the renaming of Budget Headings.

Persian Gulf

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the cost of the Royal Navy's involvement in operations in the Persian Gulf in each year since 1992; and from what budget heading the cost of the operations has been met. [44181]

Mr. George Robertson: The additional costs of the Royal Navy's involvement in operations in the Persian Gulf, (ie Op Granby and Op Bolton), and the budget headings from which the costs were met are shown in the table:

Year	Cost (£ million)	Budget
1992–93	0.906	Class 1. Vote 1. (Personnel cost, support and other services)
	10.512	Class 1. Vote 2. (Procurement)
1993–94	0.770	Class 1. Vote 1. (Operational and support costs)
	17.031	Class 1. Vote 2. (Logistics services)
1994–95	0.320	Class 1. Vote 1. (Operational and support costs)
	14.854	Class 1. Vote 2. (Logistics services)
1995–96	0.011	Class 1. Vote 2. (Logistics services)
1996–97	0.00	N/A
1997–98	4.506	Class 1. Vote 1. (Operational and support costs)
	0.630	Class 1. Vote 2. (Logistics services)

Note:
Changes in the MOD Budget Structure in 1993 resulted in the renaming Budget Headings.

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what has been the cost of the RAF's involvement in operations in the Persian Gulf in each year since 1992; and from what budget heading the cost has been met. [44191]

Mr. George Robertson: The additional costs of the RAF's involvement in operations in the Persian Gulf, i.e. Op Granby, Op Driver and Op Bolton, and the budget headings from which the costs were met are shown in the table:

Year	Cost (£ million)	Budget
1992–93	1.117	Class 1. Vote 1. (Personnel cost, support and other services)
	54.700	Class 1. Vote 2. (Procurement)
1993–94	2.347	Class 1. Vote 1. (Operational and support costs)
	25.940	Class 1. Vote 2. (Logistics services)
1994–95	0.511	Class 1. Vote 1. (Operational and support costs)
	−2.276	Class 1. Vote 2. (Logistics services)

Year	Cost (£ million)	Budget
1995–96	0.892	Class 1. Vote 2. (Logistics services)
1996–97	0.086	Class 1. Vote 2. (Logistics services)
1997–98	1.688	Class 1. Vote 1. (Operational and support costs)
	0.219	Class 1. Vote 2. (Logistics services)

Note:
Changes in the MOD Budget Structure in 1993 resulted in the renaming of Budget Headings. These figures exclude the costs of the No Fly Zones over Southern and Northern Iraq.

Royal Navy (Peacekeeping)

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the cost of the Royal Navy's involvement in peacekeeping operations IFOR and SFOR; and from what budget heading the cost of the operations was met for (a) 1994–95, (b) 1995–96 and (c) 1996–97. [44182]

Mr. George Robertson: The additional costs of the Royal Navy's involvement in IFOR and SFOR operations and the budgets from which the costs were met are as follows:

Year	IFOR (£ million)	SFOR (£ million)	Budget
1994/95	0.00	0.00	n/a
1995/96	0.360	0.00	Class 1, Vote 1. (Operational and Support Costs)
	7.321	0.00	Class 1, Vote 2. (Logistics Services)
1996/97	4.806	1.693	Class 1, Vote 1. (Operational and Support Costs)
	16.734	6.497	Class 1, Vote 2. (Logistics Services)
1997/98	0.00	1.600	Class 1, Vote 1. (Operational and Support Costs)
	0.124	13.454	Class 1, Vote 2. (Logistics Services).

Overseas Personnel

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the numbers and locations of UK armed forces' personnel stationed overseas. [44187]

Mr. George Robertson: This information is not held centrally. However, the countries in which UK military personnel were serving on 1 April, together with the number in each country, based on those records which we do have available, are given in the table.

Country	Number of UK armed forces personnel
Algeria	12
Angola	1
Antarctica	3
Antigua and Barbuda	1
Argentina	4
Ascension Island	25
Australia	65
Austria	2
Bahrain	86
Baltic States	6
Bangladesh	2
Barbados	11
Belgium	434
Belize	192
Bermuda	3
Bosnia	5,200
Brazil	6
British Virgin Islands	4
Brunei	1,049
Bulgaria	2
Canada	684
Chile	1
China	4
Colombia	3
Croatia	2
Cyprus	3,938
Czech Republic	3
Denmark	29
Diego Garcia	40
Egypt	3
Ethiopia	2
Finland	1
France	50
Georgia	1
Germany	21,480
Ghana	6
Gibraltar	794
Greece	3
Guatemala	2
Guinea	1
Gulf Region (at sea)	1,851
Hungary	2
India	5
Indonesia	4
Iraq	4
Ireland	2
Israel	3
Italy	203
Jamaica	2
Japan	3
Jordan	3
Kenya	36
Korea (South)	3
Kuwait	572
Lebanon	6
Malaysia	6
Mauritius	1
Mediterranean area (at sea)	170
Mexico	2
Morocco	1
Nepal	66
Netherlands	294
New Zealand	9
Norway	70
Oman	239
Pakistan	5
Philippines	1
Poland	880
Portugal	44
Qatar	1
Romania	2
Russia	10
Rwanda	7
Saudi Arabia	413
Sierra Leone	4
Singapore	4
Slovakia	1
South Africa	15
South Atlantic (including Falkland Islands)	1,907

Country	Number of UK armed forces personnel
Spain	10
Sri Lanka	3
Sweden	4
Switzerland	2
Syria	2
Thailand	2
Turkey	189
Turks and Caicos Islands	4
Uganda	1
Ukraine	2
United Arab Emirates	14
United States of America	1,299
Venezuela	1
West Africa Region (at sea)	255
West Indies Region (at sea)	260
Yugoslavia (Fed Rep)	2
Zimbabwe	18
Total	43,074

These figures include personnel attached to Embassies, those on exercise, those on loan or exchange postings, those training overseas personnel or undergoing long term training themselves, and those serving in NATO headquarters and our overseas garrisons. They do not include ships or aircraft on passage or undertaking temporary visits, but do cover personnel on ships engaged on operations or longer deployments overseas. Germany based personnel deployed to countries of the former Yugoslavia are shown against the latter.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Algeria

Dr. Vis: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if the Government will urge the United Nations to appoint a special rapporteur on Algeria with a mandate to co-ordinate an investigation into the massacres and other human rights abuses there. [44065]

Mr. Fatchett: In our regular contacts with the Algerian Government, we continue to emphasise the contribution to transparency and international confidence that would follow from co-operation with Special Rapporteurs. To date the Algerians have declined to allow rapporteurs to visit. We continue to watch developments in Algeria closely and will consider our position carefully at this year's United Nations General Assembly.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what communications he has had with the Algerian Government concerning the human rights situation in Algeria since 19 February. [44384]

Mr. Fatchett: Officials have had a number of discussions with Algerian counterparts on human rights in Algeria since February. This subject was covered when my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary met the Algerian Foreign Minister on 3 June.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the human rights situation in Algeria; and what is his assessment of changes since the visit of the Minister of State on 20 January. [44383]

Mr. Fatchett: We note that the level of violence has decreased substantially since Ramadhan, although terrorist activities do continue, particularly bombings in the capital. We understand that the Algerian Government have successfully carried out counter-insurgency operations. The authorities have arrested a number of officials on charges of human rights abuses; and over a hundred members of the Algerian police force languish in prison on similar charges. Nevertheless, we remain deeply concerned about the situation in Algeria and the allegations of continued human rights abuses there. We continuously monitor the situation, through official, NGO and media reports. Throughout our Presidency of the European Union we have maintained a broad-based political dialogue with Algeria, most recently a meeting between my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary and the Algerian Foreign Minister.

Sudan

Mr. McWalter: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what actions he is taking to make the Sudanese government more mindful of the rights of the people of Southern Sudan. [44125]

Mr. Fatchett: We continue to put pressure on the Government of Sudan to respond to the concerns of the international community about human rights violations in Sudan. The UK co-sponsored the UNHCR resolution which was passed by the 54th session of the Commission on Human Rights on 21 April 1998 and was highly critical of the Sudanese Government.

The UK has long supported the Inter-Governmental Authority on Development (IGAD) peace process as the best chance to bring an end to the civil war in Sudan through a comprehensive negotiated settlement that respects the rights of all Sudanese.

As Presidency we issued an EU Declaration on 1 May which voiced European concerns and called for an immediate cease-fire. At UK instigation, Sudan was discussed at the UN Security Council on 5 May, and a press statement was made by the President expressing the UN's concerns. As a next step, we have pressed for an early meeting of the Inter-Governmental Authority on Development Partnership Forum. I shall represent the UK at a meeting in The Hague on 18 June.

Chevening Scholarships

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list (a) the countries of the recipients of Chevening scholarships, (b) the names and occupations of the recipients and (c) the amounts spent on Chevening scholarships since May 1997. [44344]

Mr. Fatchett [holding answer 4 June 1998]: Chevening Scholarships are offered each year to scholars from more than 150 countries and territories. A list of those countries and territories is set out in the following list. In the last Financial Year more than 1,800 new Chevening Scholars arrived in the UK to begin their studies. The amount spent on the Chevening Scholarships Programme in the 1997–98 Financial Year was £32 million. The Foreign and Commonwealth Office contributed about £15.5 million of this and the Department for International Development, £12.5 million. The remaining £7 million was raised by co-sponsors. The names and occupants of Chevening Scholars cannot be disclosed for reasons of personal privacy.

List of countries and territories eligible for Chevening Scholarships

Albania
Algeria
Angola
Anguilla
Antigua
Argentina
Armenia
Australia
Austria
Azerbaijan
Bahamas
Bahrain
Bangladesh
Barbados
Belarus
Belgium
Belize
Benin
Bermuda
Bolivia
Bosnia
Botswana
Brazil
British Virgin Islands
Brunei
Bulgaria
Burkina Faso
Burma
Burundi
Cambodia
Cameroon
Canada
Cape Verde
Cayman Islands
Central African Republic
Chad
Chile
China (including Hong Kong Special Administrative Region)
Colombia
Comoros Islands
D.R. Congo
Congo
Costa Rica
Cote d'Ivoire
Croatia
Cuba
Cyprus
Czech Republic
Denmark
Djibouti
Dominica
Dominican Republic
East Jerusalem
Ecuador
Egypt
El Salvador
Equatorial Guinea
Eritrea
Estonia
Ethiopia
Falkland Islands
Fiji
Finland
France
Gabon
Gambia
Georgia
Germany
Ghana
Gibraltar
Greece
Grenada
Guatemala
Guinea
Guinea Bissau
Guyana
Haiti
Honduras
Hungary
Iceland
India
Indonesia
Iran
Irish Republic
Israel
Italy
Jamaica
Japan
Jordan
Kazakhstan
Kenya
Kyrgyzstan
Kiribati
Korea
Kuwait
Laos
Latvia
Lebanon
Lesotho
Liberia
Lithuania
Luxembourg
FYR Macedonia
Madagascar
Malawi
Malaysia
Maldive Islands
Mali
Malta
Mauritania
Mauritius
Mexico

Micronesia and Marshall Islands
Moldova
Mongolia
Montserrat
Morocco
Mozambique
Namibia
Nauru
Nepal
Netherlands
New Zealand
Nicaragua
Niger
Nigeria
Norway
Oman
Pakistan
Panama
Papua New Guinea
Paraguay
Peru
Philippines
Poland
Portugal
Qatar
Romania
Russia
Rwanda
Sao Tome and Principe
Saudi Arabia
St. Helena
St. Kitts/Nevis
St. Lucia
St. Vincent
Senegal
Seychelles
Sierra Leone
Singapore
Slovakia
Slovenia
Solomon Islands
South Africa
Spain
Sri Lanka
Sudan
Surinam
Swaziland
Sweden
Switzerland
Syria
Tadjikistan
Taiwan
Tanzania
Thailand
Togo
Tonga
Trinidad and Tobago
Tunisia
Turkey
Turks and Caicos
Turkmenistan
Tuvalu
Uganda
Ukraine
United Arab Emirates
Uruguay
USA
Uzbekistan
Vanuatu
Venezuela
Vietnam
Western Samoa
Yemen
Yugoslavia
Zambia
Zimbabwe.

People's Europe Event

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which bodies were asked to nominate individuals to serve on the Executive Committee of the People's Europe event in London of 5 to 7 June; what criteria he used in selecting these; and if he will place in the Library a copy of the letter and accompanying material requesting their co-operation. [44449]

Mr. Doug Henderson: Decisions about the composition of the Executive Committee for the People's Europe 98 conference were the responsibility of the organisers. At the Government's suggestion, the organisers sought to ensure that a wide range of opinion was represented on the Executive Committee. The Committee included representatives of the CBI SME Unit, the TUC, the Local Government International Bureau, the National Council for Voluntary Organisations, the European Movement, Chatham House, Green Alliance and the office staff.

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what will be the cost to public funds of the People's Europe event in London on 5 to 7 June; and what sums will be received from (a) Her Majesty's Government, (b) the European Commission, (c) the European Parliament, (d) other public bodies and (e) voluntary bodies. [44450]

Mr. Doug Henderson: I refer my hon. Friend to answers I gave on 1 April 1998, Official Report, columns 534–35.

The European Parliament is providing 30,000 ECU, or £20,313, towards the costs of the People's Europe event.

Sierra Leone

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list those inquiries requested by his Department or other agencies launched without Ministers being informed since 1 May 1997. [42097]

Mr. Robin Cook [holding answer 14 May 1998]: No formal investigations have been launched since 2 May 1997 by officials of the FCO without my knowledge. In the case of the alleged breach of the arms embargo on Sierra Leone, officials acted perfectly properly in referring allegations to Customs and Excise. It is general practice for allegations and information about potential breaches of arms embargoes or UK export controls to be reviewed in the Restricted Enforcement Unit, whatever case was, without Ministers being consulted. The decision on whether it merited investigation was for HM Customs and Excise, not the FCO.

Cameroon

Mr. Fabian Hamilton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assistance the British Government have given to English-speaking opposition parties in Cameroon. [44931]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: Our High Commission in Cameroon supports a wide range of projects to promote good governance and human rights. These are to help all people in Cameroon, regardless of political affiliations or ethnic origin. In addition, the Westminster Foundation for Democracy (WFD) has provided support for the Social Democratic Front (SDF) and Union des Populations Camerounaises (UPC), both opposition parties in Cameroon.

Our priority is to promote a genuine multiparty democracy in Cameroon.

Mr. Fabian Hamilton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is Her Majesty's Government's policy towards proposals for minority rights recognition for the English speaking minority in Cameroon at the Human Rights Convention in Geneva. [44934]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: We expect Cameroon to adhere to the Harare Declaration of Principles which include a commitment to equal rights and opportunities for all citizens regardless of race, colour, creed or political belief. Cameroon is also a party to the UN International Convention on the Elimination of all forms of Racial Discrimination. We welcome any discussion which raises awareness of minority rights issues, including at the UN Minority Rights Working Group in Geneva.

Yemen

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what representations he has made to the Government of Yemen in respect of the kidnapping of three BBC journalists; and what action he proposes to take to secure their release; [44995]

(2) what representations he has received on the kidnapping of three BBC journalists in Yemen; and if he will make a statement. [44994]

Mr. Fatchett: There has been no kidnapping of BBC journalists in Yemen.

Three BBC journalists were detained by the Yemeni authorities on 26 May and released on bail on 28 May. They were subsequently charged with filming in an area without permission. The case was heard in Court on 6 and 7 June and the journalists were found not guilty. When delivering his verdict the Judge observed that Yemen believed in the freedom of the press, and that the press was a necessity in this age. Her Majesty's Government greatly welcome this satisfactory outcome.

We understand that the journalists have now returned to the UK.

James Miles and Paul Loseby

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the cases of James Miles and Paul Loseby, imprisoned in Venezuela. [44996]

Mr. Fatchett: I refer my hon. Friend to my remarks in the Adjournment debate of 9 July 1997, Official Report, columns 1044–52 and to my answer to his question of 18 February 1998, Official Report, column 679. On 18 July, Mr. Miles and Mr. Loseby were informed that they had been sentenced to 4 years imprisonment. On appeal, this was increased to 5 years. The result of the appeal was made known to them on 5 February 1998.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what requests have been made by James Miles and Paul Loseby to the British Embassy in Caracas for dental treatment; what assessment the Embassy has made of the requests; and what steps are in place to ensure that their medical and dental requirements are met. [44997]

Mr. Fatchett: Mr. Miles and Mr. Loseby have made several requests to see a doctor and a dentist. Such requests are always taken seriously and given high priority by the British Embassy in submitting them to the Venezuelan authorities. The British Ambassador has written on 5 occasions to the judges involved in the case requesting appropriate medical attention: on 27 November 1996, 10 April 1997, 10 July 1997, on 27 January 1998 and on 17 March 1998. On 14 April the judges informed the Ambassador that instructions had been issued for Mr. Miles and Mr. Loseby to be seen by a doctor and a dentist.

Mr. Loseby was seen by a doctor on 3 April 1998. Both men were seen by a doctor on 23 April 1998. The Embassy continues to press the Venezuelan authorities to arrange for both men to be seen by a dentist.

Tehran Embassy

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the total forecast cost is of the present refurbishment of the British Embassy in Tehran; and if he will list the works being undertaken and their specifications. [44960]

Mr. Fatchett: The total forecast cost of the refurbishment of the British Embassy in Tehran is £995,000. This figure includes the estimated cost of works, fees, furnishings and travel costs.

The Embassy offices in Tehran are in a 4 storey building built in the 1960s. Essential services, finishes and fittings are in a poor condition and need to be upgraded to a modern and secure standard.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Government Information and Communication Service

13. Mr. Baker: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what action has been taken following the publication of the report of the Working Group on the Government Information Service. [43507]

Mr. Kilfoyle: The Progress Report of the Head of the Government Information and Communication Service shows that the majority of recommendations have been implemented. The Report will be issued to the Select Committee on Public Administration and placed in the Library of the House.

21. Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what recent representations he has received regarding the Government Information Service. [43518]

Mr. Kilfoyle: As the hon. Member will be aware, there is an inquiry into the GICS by the Public Administration Committee. In addition, I have been asked a number of questions by Members of this House.

Better Government White Paper

17. Mr. McNulty: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make a statement on the publication of the Better Government White Paper. [43513]

Dr. David Clark: Work is progressing to publish the Better Government White Paper later this year. This White Paper will outline the measures the Government have in mind to modernise the business of the public services and ensure the delivery of better services to our citizens.

19. Ms Moran: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make a statement on the impact on local democracy of the Better Government project. [43516]

Dr. David Clark: The Better Government programme is about revitalising the public sector. Local government is a key partner. Improving public services will be an important contribution to renewing the democratic relationship between the public and all levels of government. Alongside the important developments in local government democracy being taken forward by my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister, the Better Government programme will contribute to making local government more open and responsive to the needs of users.

Freedom of Information

18. Mr. Edwards: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make a statement on progress towards freedom of information legislation. [43515]

22. Mr. Hanson: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what progress he has made towards publishing draft freedom of information legislation. [43519]

Dr. David Clark: We are making good progress in turning the policy proposals set out in the White Paper Your Right to Know into draft legislation. I greatly welcome the support of the Select Committee on Public Administration in their recent substantial report on our proposals. My colleagues and I are now considering carefully the detailed recommendations that the Committee has made. When we have done so I intend to publish the draft bill, again for consultation, as soon as possible.

23. Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make a statement on his public consultations on measures to make his Department more open. [43521]

Dr. David Clark: My Department like all government departments will be subject to our proposals for a Freedom of Information Act. As regards the result of consultations on those proposals, I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Middlesbrough, South and Cleveland, East (Dr. Kumar) on 1 April 1998, Official Report, columns 587–89.

24. Mr. Paterson: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make a statement on his recent consultations on his proposed freedom of information legislation. [43522]

Dr. David Clark: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Middlesbrough, South and Cleveland, East (Dr. Kumar) on 1 April 1998, Official Report, columns 587–89.

Ms Abbott: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many responses he has received to his Freedom of Information White Paper. [43510]

Dr. David Clark: I received 557 responses to the consultation exercise on the Freedom of Information White Paper, Your Right to Know.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what recent representations he has received on his proposals for open government. [43517]

Dr. David Clark: I recently received the Report of the Select Committee on Public Administration on the Government's White Paper, Your Right to Know, which described the proposals as "a radical advance in open and accountable government".

Clergymen

25. Mr. Peter Bradley: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make a statement on his powers to appoint clergymen to livings; and on how many occasions he has exercised such powers since 1 May. [43524]

Dr. David Clark: The Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster is responsible for appointing incumbents to 42 church livings on behalf of her Majesty the Queen in Right of Her Duchy of Lancaster. Since 1 May 1997 I have approved the appointment of one clergyman and one woman priest to two of these livings which had become vacant.

Civil Service (UK Nationals)

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many posts are classified as restricted to United Kingdom nationals only in the Civil Service, by department. [45114]

Dr. David Clark: A full survey of the number of 'public service' posts (i.e. posts, which, under the terms of the EC Treaty, member states may reserve for their own nationals) was last undertaken in 1994. The findings of that survey, adjusted to include more up to date information from the Ministry of Defence, are as follows:

Department	Number of public service posts	Public service posts as % of total	Number of non public service posts	Non public service posts as % of total	Total number of posts
Agriculture	1,536	14	9,063	86	10,599
Customs and Excise	18,704	72	7,305	28	26,009
Cabinet Office	774	35	1,446	65	2,220
Charity Commission	0	0	714	100	714
Central Office of Information	0	0	515	100	515
CPS	36	1	6,399	99	6,435
Crown Office	52	5	1,001	95	1,053
Defence[1]	46,075	40	69,381	60	115,457
Education	74	3	2,249	97	2,323
Employment Department	637	1	58,472	99	59,109
Environment	243	9	2,513	91	2,756
FCO	6,581	100	0	0	6,581
Government Actuary's Department	10	13	67	87	77
Health	42	1	4,633	99	4,675
HMSO	8	1	2,041	99	2,049
Home Office	728	2	47,772	98	48,500
Inland Revenue[2]	51,015	70	21,721	30	72,736
Intervention Board	20	2	1,020	98	1,040
Land Registry	2	1	8,535	99	8,537
Legal Secretariat Law Officer	21	75	7	25	28
Lord Advocates Department	20	91	2	9	22
Lord Chancellor's Department	1,091	9	11,346	91	12,437
National Heritage	309	28	793	72	1,102
National Investment and Loans Office	0	0	39	100	39
National Savings	31	1	5,569	99	5,600
Northern Ireland Office	185	83	39	17	224
ODA	227	20	882	80	1,109
Office of Fair Trading	47	11	371	89	418
Ofsted	10	2	577	98	587
Office of Water Services	0	0	156	100	156
OPCS	0	0	1,879	100	1,879
Ordnance Survey	11	1	2,053	99	2,064
Paymaster Generals Office	0	0	730	100	730
Privy Council Office	22	67	11	33	33
Public Records Office	11	2	455	98	466
PSA	0	0	458	100	458
Royal Mint	6	1	988	99	994
Scottish Courts Administration	14	1	1,001	99	1,015
Scottish Office	510	8	5,714	92	6,224
Scottish Prison Service	8	1	4,642	99	4,650
Social Security	189	1	84,070	99	84,259
Trade and Industry	1,793	18	8,319	82	10,112
Transport	336	2	15,269	98	15,605
Treasury[2]	121	12	931	88	1,052
Treasury Solicitor	45	9	458	91	503
Welsh Office	522	23	1,768	77	2,290
Total	132,066	25	392,574	75	524,640

[1] 1996 figures
[2] 1992 figures

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster (1) how many posts he estimates will become restricted to United Kingdom nationals only in the Civil Service, due to retirement over the next five years, by department; [45112]

(2) how many posts have become restricted to United Kingdom nationals only since the 1996 Civil Service rule change, due to retirement, by department. [45113]

Dr. David Clark: 'Public Service' posts (i.e. posts which, under the terms of the EC Treaty, member states may reserve for their own nationals) are defined by the nature of the work undertaken in them. For this reason their number is not directly affected by changes of personnel.

Prior to the last change to the civil service nationality rules in 1996, these posts were also open to citizens of the Republic of Ireland and of Commonwealth countries. Post holders from those countries at the date of change were granted reserved rights to continue to work in such posts for the duration of their careers. No central records are available either of the number of 'public service' posts which at the time of the change in the rules were filled by non-UK nationals or of the number of 'public service' posts which are still filled by non-UK nationals.

Marsham Street

Mr. Leigh: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster when the former Department of the Environment building in Marsham Street will be demolished. [44945]

Mr. Kilfoyle: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated under the terms of the Framework Document to Property Advisers to the Civil Estate. I have asked its Chief Executive, Mr. John Locke, to write to the hon. member.

Letter from John C. Locke to Mr. Edward Leigh, dated 10 June 1998

Demolition of 2 Marsham Street

You tabled a written Parliamentary Question to the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster asking when the former Department of Environment building in Marsham Street will be demolished. The care and maintenance of 2 Marsham Street is now the responsibility of the Property Advisers to the Civil Estate (PACE) and as Chief Executive I have been asked to reply to your question.

The Department of Environment and Transport vacated the building at the end of April 1998 and Government's intention was to let a contract for its demolition this summer with the work expected to take some 18 months to complete.

Demolition is however conditional on any overriding Government need for temporary decant accommodation. If such a need materialised then reuse would prove to be a better value for money solution to the Exchequer than immediate demolition.

Two government departments are planning to refurbish their HQ accommodation and are currently considering proposals which might lead to the temporary use of Marsham Street. Temporary reoccupation will have the effect of deferring demolition until Autumn 2002 at the earliest.

Crown Copyright

Mr. Todd: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he has evaluated the responses to his consultation on "Crown Copyright in the Information Age"; and if he will make a statement. [43520]

Dr. David Clark: The responses have been evaluated. As I mentioned in my answer to my hon. Friend the Member for City of Durham (Mr. Steinberg), on 20 May 1998, Official Report, column 374, plans are being formulated for the future administration of Crown copyright which take the responses into account. I shall inform the House in due course of the way forward.

E-mail

Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many Ministers have published their e-mail addresses; and how many are now equipped with electronic red boxes. [43523]

Dr. David Clark: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for North Essex (Mr. Jenkin), on 10 November 1997, Official Report, column 441, regarding Ministers' e-mail addresses.

The electronic red box is still at the prototype stage of development. During this early stage, only the Minister for Science, Energy and Industry and I are experimenting with these prototypes.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

New Deal (Young People)

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list for each of the pilot areas for the New Deal for 18 to 24 year olds, how many of those eligible failed to join any of the four available categories. [43369]

Mr. Andrew Smith: Statistical information on the progress of those joining the New Deal in the Pathfinder areas to 31 March is available in the Library. The bulk of those commencing the New Deal during the period were still in the New Deal Gateway, the period of up to 4 months help before New Deal participants start on New Deal options.

Teachers' Pay

Mr. Flight: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what representations he has received from individual teachers regarding the staging of their pay award. [44373]

Mr. Byers: The Department has received 89 letters from members of the general public about staging the pay award.

GCSE/GNVQ Scores

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what was the national average GCSE point score of (a) male, (b) female and (c) all 15 year old pupils (i) in total and (ii) in maintained schools including special schools in 1997; and if he will indicate the numbers of pupils in each category. [44952]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 9 June 1998]: The information requested in respect of national average GCSE point scores is shown in the table.

GCSE average point score of 15 year old pupils by institution and gender 1997

	Maintained schools[1]		All schools
	Average GCSE point score	Number of pupils	Average GCSE point score	Number of pupils
Male	32.5	273,136	33.5	299,509
Female	37.3	264,526	38.3	287,257
All 15 year old pupils	34.9	537,662	35.8	586,766

[1] Including special schools

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what were the average GCSE/GNVQ point scores in 1997 of (a) male, (b) female and (c) all 15 year old pupils in maintained schools including special schools with 15 year old pupils assigning GNVQ grades points on the basis that at intermediate level a distinction equals 7.5 points, a merit equals 6 points and a pass equals 5 points, and at foundation level a distinction equals 4 points, a merit equals 3 points, and a pass equals 1.5 points. [44954]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 9 June 1998]: The information requested in respect of average GCSE/GNVQ point scores in maintained schools is:

	Average GCSE/GNVQ point score
Male	32.5
Female	37.4
All 15 year old pupils	34.9

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what was the national average GCSE/GNVQ point score of (a) male, (b) female and (c) all 15 year old pupils in 1997, assigning GNVQ grades points on the basis that at intermediate level a distinction equals 7.5 points, a merit equals 6 points, and a pass equals 5 points, and at foundation level a distinction equals 4 points, a merit equals 3 points, and a pass equals 1.5 points. [44953]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 9 June 1998]: The information requested in respect of national average GCSE/GNVQ point scores in all schools is:

	Average GCSE/GNVQ point score
Male	33.5
Female	38.4
All 15 year old pupils	35.9

Music Funding

Mr. Prior: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list the local education authorities which have reduced funding for music in schools in 1998–99. [44481]

Mr. Byers: This information is not collected centrally.

Mr. Prior: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on future funding of music in schools. [44486]

Mr. Byers: Music teaching which forms part of the National Curriculum will continue, as now, to be funded through schools' delegated budget shares. So far as instrumental music tuition is concerned, the Government's recently published consultation paper 'Fair Funding: Improving Delegation to Schools' set out a proposal to fund LEA provision for such tuition through the Standards Fund. A decision on this will be announced at the same time as decisions on the new Devolved Funding system.

School Closures

Mr. Prior: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many schools have been notified to his Department as being subject to proposals for closure since 1 May 1997; and if he will indicate their size. [44490]

Mr. Byers: Statutory proposals for the closure of 167 mainstream schools have been published since 1 May 1997. This figure includes 17 nursery schools. Of the closure proposals, 101 involved the amalgamation of schools to form new schools. The numbers of pupils on the rolls of the schools proposed for closure ranged from 1 to 980.

Village Schools

Mr. Prior: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what guidance his Department has issued to local education authorities on the future of rural village schools. [44485]

Mr. Byers: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Selby (Mr. Grogan) on 26 February 1998, Official Report, column 364.

Our announcement of 28 February 1998, made it clear that all proposals to close rural schools would be called in for decision by the Secretary of State and that there would be a presumption against the approval of proposals to close such schools.

Primary Schools

Mr. Prior: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many primary schools with fewer than 40 pupils there are in (a) England and (b) Norfolk. [44644]

Mr. Byers: As at January 1997, there were 364 maintained primary schools with less than 40 full-time pupils in England. The equivalent figure for Norfolk Local Education Authority area was 34 schools.

School Exclusions (West Chelmsford)

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many children at (a) primary and (b) secondary schools in the West Chelmsford constituency were excluded from school in each of the past five years. [44415]

Ms Estelle Morris: Information on the number of pupils permanently excluded from schools in the West Chelmsford constituency is shown in the table. Information on permanent exclusions was not collected prior to 1994–95. The Department does not currently collect information on fixed period exclusions:

Permanent exclusions from maintained schools in the West Chelmsford constituency

Type of school	1994–95	1995–96
Primary	2	3
Secondary	4	8
Special	0	0
Total	6	11

Exclusions data for 1996–97 are currently being collated and will be published later this year.

Grant-maintained Schools

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on the future position of grant-maintained schools. [44922]

Mr. Byers: Subject to the School Standards and Framework Bill gaining Royal Assent, a new framework for the organisation of schools will be established on 1 September 1999. All existing types of school, including grant-maintained (GM) schools, will be replaced by five new categories: community, foundation, voluntary, community special and foundation special. Schools will be allocated to the category which most closely reflects their current characteristics. However, GM schools will be able to choose an alternative category at the outset if they wish. Under the new framework, GM schools will be able to retain many of their present characteristics, for example in terms of employment of staff and ownership of premises. But all categories of school will operate within a framework based on fair funding, fair admissions and partnership between schools and LEAs.

Assisted Places Scheme

Mr. Prior: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on arrangements for the transfer of children on the assisted places scheme to another school (a) on compassionate grounds, (b) where there is a financial saving and (c) where there is an educational need. [44491]

Mr. Byers: The Education (Schools) Act 1997 allows the transfer of an assisted place between schools only where a school closes, merges with another school, or notifies the Secretary of State that it no longer wishes to participate in the scheme. Transfer is not legally permitted in any other circumstances.

Written Answers to Questions

Thursday 11 June 1998

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Freedom of Information

Siobhain McDonagh: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster when he intends to publish the 1997 report on the operation of the code of practice on access to Government information. [45947]

Dr. David Clark: I have published this report today. Copies have been placed in the Library.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Public Bodies (Boundaries)

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the public bodies which it is proposed to reorganise to make their boundaries coterminous with those of the Government Offices of the Regions. [44224]

Angela Eagle: Of bodies within my Department's area of responsibility, the regional office structure of English Partnerships is being reorganised to match the boundaries of the Government Offices for the Regions, in order to facilitate the transfer of functions from English Partnerships to Regional Development Agencies in April 1999. There will similarly be some reorganisation of the regional office structure of the Rural Development Commission.

Road Fuel Gases

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what action his Department is taking (a) to encourage the spread of gas-powered vehicles and (b) widening of access to LPG. [44799]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Government have already undertaken a number of measures to promote the use of road fuel gases including freezing the duty on road fuel gases in successive budgets and providing £6.5 million to the Energy Saving Trust's Powershift programme to help stimulate the market for alternative fuels. The Government have also announced the introduction from January 1999 of an incentive of up to a £500 reduction in VED for lorries and buses meeting stringent emission standards.

These measures are significantly reducing the operating costs of gas-powered vehicles in order to make them competitive with conventional petrol and diesel fuelled vehicles. By stimulating demand in this way the Government anticipate that refuelling facilities will gradually increase though it seems likely that they will be confined, at least initially, to urban sites for use by dedicated fleets.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the environmental impact of propane as a fuel; what steps he proposes to encourage its use; and if he will make a statement. [45129]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Vehicles powered by liquefied petroleum gas (LPG), of which propane and butane are the primary constituents, can make a contribution towards meeting our air quality objectives, particularly when used in well engineered applications by commercial fleets operating in urban areas. The steps being taken to encourage the use of LPG were the subject of my reply today to a question from the hon. Member for Taunton (Jackie Ballard).

Hedgerows

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Blaby (Mr. Robathan) on 19 March 1998, Official Report, column 693, if he will include in the information to be collected centrally under the Hedgerow Regulations 1997 the lengths of hedgerow for each local planning authority in England that have been the subject of (a) notification under the regulations, (b) hedgerow removal notices and (c) hedgerow retention notices. [44808]

Angela Eagle: My Department's consultation with representatives of local government on what information should be collected centrally in relation to the operation of the Hedgerows Regulations 1997 sought views on whether this should include data on the length of hedgerow for each local planning authority in England or Wales subject to hedgerow removal notices (served by those wishing to remove a hedge), and subject to hedgerow retention notices (served by the local authority). It also sought views on whether the information collected should include data on length of important hedgerow for each planning authority in England and Wales in respect of which retention notices were not issued. We are considering the results of that consultation.

This information is currently held at the local level. Each local planning authority in England and Wales is required, under the Hedgerows Regulations 1997, to compile and make publicly available a record containing, among other items, a copy of every hedgerow removal notice received by it; every notice given by it stating that a hedgerow may be removed; and every hedgerow retention notice issued by it.

East Midlands Regional Development Agency

Mr. Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what progress has been made in establishing a regional development agency for the East Midlands; and what consideration has been given to locating its headquarters in Loughborough. [44939]

Angela Eagle: The Regional Development Agencies Bill, under which Regional Development Agencies (RDAs) will be established, received its second reading in Another Place on 18 May 1998, Official Report, House of Lords, columns 1290–1354. Work is continuing at a regional and national level in anticipation of the creation of RDAs. As I stated in my answer on 27 January 1998, Official Report, column 305, the RDA for the East Midlands will be best placed to decide where its offices should be.

"Access to the Open Countryside in England and Wales"

Mr. Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the respondents to his consultation paper, "Access to the Open Countryside in England and Wales", indicating what arrangements have been made for these comments to be viewed by the public. [44645]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 10 June 1998]: Responses to the consultation paper, Access to the Open Countryside in England and Wales, were requested by Friday 5 June. A list of non-confidential responses will be placed in the libraries of both Houses once all responses have been logged. Copies of non-confidential responses will be placed in my Departments's library and will be available to members of the public for inspection by appointment.

Blight

Mrs. Ellman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what was the outcome of consultation on the final report of the Interdepartmental Working Group on Blight; what proposals he has to change the law relating to compulsory purchase and blight; and if he will make a statement. [45538]

Mr. Caborn: The results of the consultation have shown that blight is just one issue which needs to be reviewed in relation to compulsory purchase and land compensation. I have, therefore, commissioned a fundamental review of the law and procedures which relate to the compulsory acquisition of land. I have placed a copy of the terms of reference of the review in the Library of the House. I would expect to have an interim report on this by the end of the year.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland will consider separately the case for reform of the law in Scotland.

Nuclear Materials (Transportation)

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many aeroplane flights he estimates occurred in (a) 1996 and (b) 1997 in UK airspace in which radioactive material was carried. [45378]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Department does not collect information of the kind requested. The Department has no more recent estimate than that given to the hon. Member on 14 July 1997, Official Report, column 15.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if the Government will make it their policy further to restrict the transportation of radioactive materials (a) via the Channel Tunnel and (b) on their passenger ferries. [45379]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Such transport is permitted subject to (a) the rules and restrictions of Eurotunnel, as approved by the Channel Tunnel Safety Authority of the UK/France Intergovernmental Commission and (b) compliance with The Merchant Shipping (Dangerous Goods and Marine Pollutants) Regulations 1990 (SI 1990 No. 2605) and Merchant Shipping Notice No. M 1620, "The Carriage of Dangerous Goods and Marine Pollutants in Packaged Form on Ships". These place no restriction on the number of transports.

Local Authorities (Pilot Schemes)

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the pilot schemes announced since 1 May by his Department that involve local authorities in a lead or partnership capacity; if he will list each of the local authorities involved in each case; and what revenue and capital funding each local authority will receive through the pilot in 1997–98, 1998–99, 1999–2000 and 2000–01. [45337]

Angela Eagle: Local authorities are involved in a wide range of activities across my Department, and it is not possible to provide a definitive list.

However, pilot schemes that have been announced by my Department since May 1997 and which involve local authorities in a lead or partnership capacity include Best Value pilots and the joint commissioning of new social housing schemes.

The relevant details are as follows:

Best Value

On 4 December 1997, my hon. Friend the Minister for Local Government and Housing announced the selection of 37 pilot projects to test the best value framework in advance of the introduction of the Government's best value policy. The pilots began on 1 April 1998 and are expected to run for 2 or 3 years. No additional funding is being provided by the Government. The successful authorities were:

Birmingham City Council
Bradford City Council
Braintree DC
Brent LB
Brighton/Hove, Tandridge, Wealden DCs
Bristol City Council
Camden LB
Carrick DC
Cleveland Police Authority
Cumbria County Council
CWOIL group (Cambridge, Welwyn, Oxford, Ipswich, Lincoln)
Exeter City Council
Gosport BC
Great Yarmouth BC
Greater Manchester Police
Greenwich LB
Harrow LB
Ipswich BC
Leeds City Council
Lewisham LB
Lincolnshire County Council

Manchester City Council
Newark and Sherwood DC
Newcastle upon Tyne City Council
Newham LB
Northamptonshire County Council
Oldham MBC
Portsmouth City Council
Reading BC
Redcar and Cleveland BC
Southampton City Council
South Norfolk DC
Sunderland City Council
Surrey County Council
Warwickshire County Council
Watford BC
York City Council.

Joint Commissioning

Joint Commissioning involves the development of a long term housing strategy and a set of investment priorities for both ADP and non-ADP funding, agreed between the Housing Corporation and a local authority. It also often involves the competitive selection of a set of RSLs who are then invited to bid for funding for social housing schemes. The objectives are to ensure that investment in social housing is based on sound long term strategies and to reduce the amount of wasteful competition between RSLs for ADP funds each year. The 42 local authorities involved in the Joint Commissioning pilot scheme are set out according to the Housing Corporation Region in which they are located:

London Region
Redbridge
Hillingdon
Kensington
Greenwich

South West Region
Bournemouth
Cotswold
Cornwall SNAP (Special Needs Across the County)
Taunton Dean

South East Region
Surrey
Eastbourne
Crawley
Spelthorne
Swale
Brighton and Hove
Portsmouth
New Forest
Reading
East Hampshire

East Midlands and Eastern Regions
Ipswich
Essex Strategic Reserve (supported housing)
Harlow
Newark and Sherwood
Ashfield
Northampton
Fenland
Leicester

North West Region
Chester
Oldham
Manchester
Preston
Bolton

Merseyside
Wirral

West Midlands Region
Oswestry
Wrekin
Wychavon
Cannock

Yorkshire and Humberside and North Eastern Regions
NE Lincolnshire
Sheffield
Sunderland
Derwentside
South Tyneside
Hull.

Workplace Injuries

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 27 October 1997, Official Report, column 721, on work-place injuries, if he will publish the finalised figures for 1996–97 and provisional figures for 1997–98, indicating the percentage change in each year since 1992–93. [45426]

Angela Eagle: The table shows the total number of fatal and major injuries to employees and self employed people reported to all enforcing authorities between 1992–93 and 1996–97 (years commencing 1 April) and indicates the percentage change from the previous year since 1992–93.

Year	Employees	Percentage change from previous year	Self-employed	Percentage change from previous year
Fatal Injuries
1992–93	276	—	63	—
1993–94	245	−11	51	−19
1994–95	191	−22	81	+59
1995–96	209	+9	49	−40
1996–97[1]	207	−1	80	+63
Major Injuries
1992–93	16,938		1,115	—
1993–94	16,705	−1	1,274	+14
1994–95	17,041	+2	1,313	+3
1995–96	16,568	−3	1,166	−11
1996–97[1]	27,964	+69	1,356	+16

[1] Definition of a major injury extended when The Reporting of Injuries, Disease and Dangerous Occurrences Regulations 1995 came into force on 1 April 1996

Note:
Provisional figures will be available in July 1998 and a copy will be placed in the House of Commons Library

Greater London Authority

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make it his policy to ensure that the aims and methods of the

Better Government Programme for Older People are applied to the transitional arrangements for the establishment of the Greater London Authority. [45421]

Mr. Raynsford: Yes, where relevant.

Air Safety

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what proposals he has to improve (a) airport and (b) aircraft safety. [45044]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Civil Aviation Authority is responsible for the safety regulation of UK civil aircraft and airports. They constantly monitor the civil aviation industry and seek to improve safety standards by systematically defining and addressing safety risks. Consequently the UK has one of the best civil aviation safety records in the world.

The UK also plays a leading role in raising international aviation safety standards through its active membership of the International Civil Aviation Organisation and the joint Aviation Authorities. In addition, as part of the Presidency of the EU we are progressing proposals to establish a European Aviation Safety Authority.

Airport Noise

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) what plans he has to introduce measures for the control of airport noise for airports outside London; [45040]

(2) what assessment he has made of the report on the Review of Airport Noise Legislation prepared for the previous Government; [45041]

(3) what plans he has to introduce noise abatement schemes at or in the neighbourhood of airports. [45043]

Ms Glenda Jackson: We are examining airports policy generally in the context set by the wider Integrated Transport Policy review. I am aware of proposals arising from the review of aircraft noise legislation in 1991–93. The environmental impacts of airports and the case for new legislation are being considered and proposals will be made in due course.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what recent representations he has received on (a) noise and (b) safety issues at airports. [45042]

Ms Glenda Jackson: My right hon. Friend and I have received various representations from time to time on noise and safety issues at airports. These tend to focus on current concerns, which include night restrictions and noise limits at the designated London airports, Heathrow, Gatwick and Stansted.

Derbyshire County Council

Mr. McLoughlin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Gravesham (Mr. Pond) of 8 June 1998, Official Report, column 420, on the final cap for Derbyshire County Council, what estimate he has made of the cost for each property in the county to be re-billed. [45361]

Mr. Raynsford: The County Council's estimate of the cost of re-billing is £320,000

Mr. McLoughlin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Gravesham (Mr. Pond) of 8 June 1998, Official Report, column 420, on the final cap for Derbyshire County Council, what estimate he has made of the council tax reduction for a person living in a property in (a) Band A, (b) Band B, (c) Band C, (d) Band E, (e) Band F, (f) Band G and (g) Band H. [45376]

Mr. Raynsford: The amounts are (a) £2.87, (b) £3.35, (c) £3.83, (d) £5.27, (e) £6.23, (f) £7.18 and (g) £8.62. These figures are for a two person household (i.e. a dwelling which does not attract any discount), and the amounts of the reduction given may be a penny different in practice, owing to rounding.

South Downs

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what representations he has received following the Countryside Commission recommendation to the Government not to designate the South Downs as a national park; and if he will make a statement. [45363]

Angela Eagle: Ministers have not yet received the Countryside Commission's formal advice on the future status of the South Downs; we expect to receive it later this month. We will need to look at the precise terms of the Commission's recommendations very carefully, together with all the information available, before taking any final decisions. We hope to be able to announce our conclusions in the autumn.

London Road Network

Mr. Colman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he intends to consult on which roads should form the strategic London road network for which the Greater London Authority will have responsibility. [45989]

Ms Glenda Jackson: We have today published our consultation document on a strategic London road network. Copies have been placed in the Library and sent to the London local authorities, the Association of London Government, London Transport and others with an interest in the movement of people and goods in London.

This fulfils an undertaking in the White Paper—A Mayor and Assembly for London (Cm 3897 published on 25 March 1998) to consult about precisely which roads should be part of the strategic London road network. The White Paper made clear that we start from the presumption that this network should be based on the present primary and red route networks. This comprises about 220 miles of trunk roads and 105 miles of borough roads. The transfer of the trunk roads to the GLA will represent a major shift in responsibilities from central to local Government.

The consultation document sets out possible additions to and deletions from the primary and red route networks in order to form the strategic network for which the Greater London Authority will take responsibility. Comments on the proposals are invited by 7 August.

National Air Traffic Services

Mr. Geraint Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if the Government have reached a decision on the future of the national air traffic services. [46057]

Dr. Strang: We have been considering the future of the National Air Traffic Services (NATS) taking account of the views expressed in the Report by the Environment, Transport and Regional Affairs Committee on Air Traffic Control published in April.

Safety is paramount. The Select Committee raised major concerns about the current arrangements in their report. The Civil Aviation Authority is currently responsible both for the provision of air traffic control services through NATS and for regulating the safety of those services. The Government will bring forward proposals to ensure that air safety regulation will be conducted independently from NATS. We will ensure that regulation is open and transparent and that the aviation industry and its employees can play a full part. The regulator's remit will be to enforce the toughest safety standards in the world.

We have looked at a number of options for the future of NATS, including those mentioned in the Select Committee's Report.

In the planned multi-billion investments in the Channel Tunnel Rail Link and London Underground, we have demonstrated our ability to mobilise private capital to serve the public interest through public/private partnerships.

The Government believe that the level of investment and efficiency that we need in our National Air Traffic Services can best be achieved through a partnership between the public and private sectors. A partnership of this kind would help NATS to finance the investment it needs to operate effectively and would mobilise private sector resources.

Our preference is that 49 per cent. of the shares, and a golden share, are held by the Government; and 51 per cent. by private investors including employees.

This package, taken together, will guarantee the highest safety standards as air transport increases in the future. It will retain a large public stake and golden share in NATS. And it will ensure that NATS can finance its future investment effectively within a secure framework of safety and economic regulation.

The Government will consult interested parties further on the implementation of their decision in principle and will then bring forward the necessary legislation.

Local Authority Airports

Mr. Charles Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what changes are planned by the Government to free local authority airports from borrowing controls. [46056]

Dr. Strang: All borrowing via local authority airports currently counts against the public expenditure control total. This is not conducive to the proper commercial management of these airports.

We now intend that local authority airports whose finances are sufficiently sound should be given the flexibility to borrow to finance airport related capital investment in the UK, where the lending would be genuinely commercial. This will allow airports such as Manchester, Newcastle, Leeds Bradford and Norwich to compete for business on a level playing field with private sector airports, while safeguarding the interest of the taxpayer.

DEFENCE

Foreign Nationals (Security Clearance)

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many defence projects for which foreign nationals have been cleared have then been reclassified to a higher security classification in each of the last five years. [45093]

Mr. Spellar: Information is not held on the number of defence projects for which foreign nationals have been cleared which have then been reclassified to a higher classification. However, it is rare for any major defence project to be so upgraded.

TRACER Programme

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he will sign a memorandum of understanding with the Government of the USA on the TRACER programme; and if he will make a statement. [45091]

Mr. Spellar: We are currently considering the TRACER programme and hope to reach a decision shortly.

HMS Ocean

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much has been spent on repairs for HMS 'Ocean' since her launch; and what repairs have been carried out. [45127]

Mr. Spellar: The cost of repairs to the damage sustained to the hull of HMS Ocean during her launch on 11 October 1995 amounted to £1.125 million and was paid by the MOD under its Indemnity scheme. The ship also underwent repairs, by VSEL sub contractors, to her tail shaft bearings while in dry dock at Portsmouth in May 1998. The cost and liability for the damaged tail shaft has yet to be established.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of damage caused to HMS 'Ocean' during refloating at Portsmouth naval base following repairs; and if he will make a statement. [45126]

Mr. Spellar: During the re-floating of HMS Ocean on 2 June 1998, some very minor damage was sustained to a handrail. This was repaired immediately at no significant cost.

Arms Tactical Training Centre

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the cost of the new arms tactical training centre due to be installed in Germany for the British Army. [45029]

Dr. Reid [holding answer 9 June 1998]: The latest estimated acquisition costs of the Combined Arms Tactical Trainer facility to be installed at Sennelager in Germany are £57 million.

Heavy Lift Aircraft

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what proposals he has evaluated for a heavy lift aircraft for HM forces to be manufactured by the Airbus consortium. [45277]

Mr. Spellar: A provisional Request for Proposals has been issued to Airbus, Turkish Aerospace Industries, Alenia and FLABEL pending the formation of Airbus Military Company. We are still discussing with our partners when Requests for Proposals will be issued to potential suppliers under competitive arrangements. A procurement decision will be made in the light of the conclusions of the Strategic Defence Review and of the responses to the Request for Proposals.

Low Flying (Brecon Beacons)

Mr. Livsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to reduce low-level flying exercises in the Brecon Beacons. [45139]

Mr. Spellar: The amount of low flying training undertaken throughout the United Kingdom is already limited to that strictly necessary for aircrews to achieve and maintain operational effectiveness. We remain committed to achieving as equitable a distribution of low flying activity as practicable, taking into account geographical, climatic and operational considerations. Since 1988, low flying in Wales has reduced by about half accordingly. There are no plans to reduce military low flying training carried out in the Brecon Beacons.

Apache Helicopter

Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the implementation of the direct industrial offset commitments by the Boeing company for the construction in the United Kingdom of the Apache helicopter for the British Army. [44874]

Mr. Spellar: The Boeing company, in common with all other overseas companies holding Industrial Participation obligations, is required to submit regular reports of the work placed in the United Kingdom in order to fulfil the commitment it has made. These reports are monitored and assessed within the Ministry of Defence. The company is progressing satisfactorily towards its direct Industrial Participation target.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Prisoners (Incentives and Earned Privileges Scheme)

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 1 June to the hon. Member for Newark (Mrs. Jones), Official Report, columns 50–51, what plans he has for the future provision of in-cell televisions with access to (a) satellite television services, (b) sporting events broadcast on satellite television services and (c) adult channels on satellite television services. [44610]

Ms Quin: There are no plans for the future provision of non-terrestrial in-cell television.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 1 June to the hon. Member for Newark (Mrs. Jones), Official Report, columns 50–51, what limits will be placed on the times at which prisoners will be able to have access to in-cell television. [44611]

Ms Quin: This will be a matter for local rules. Steps will be taken in all establishments holding juveniles to ensure observation of the threshold for unsuitable programmes set by the broadcasting authorities.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 1 June to the hon. Member for Newark (Mrs. Jones), Official Report, columns 50–51, how many levels of privilege are generally in operation throughout the Prison Service. [44616]

Ms Quin: Three: the basic, standard and enhanced privilege levels.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 1 June to the hon. Member for Newark (Mrs. Jones), Official Report, columns 50–51, if video recorders are to be made available to prisoners as part of the increased availability of in-cell television. [44614]

Ms Quin: There are no plans to allow prisoners to have video recorders as part of the policy on in-cell television.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 1 June to the hon. Member for Newark (Mrs. Jones), Official Report, columns 50–51, in respect of the procurement process for in-cell television, what is the average cost per television; if the televisions will be new; and if they will contain (a) digital technology and (b) teletext. [44615]

Ms Quin: The Prison Service has begun a procurement process for new, non-digital, 14 inch colour television sets. Teletext will not be included but, where there is networked aerial cabling, there will be the capacity to use spare channels to communicate by text information such as establishment routines. The unit cost of televisions purchased depends on the outcome of the tendering process and will not be known until a contract is awarded.

Probation Service

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the programme of inspections of each county probation force by HMIP and what thematic inspections are planned. [44846]

Ms Quin: Between 1994 and the end of 1998, Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Probation will have inspected each area probation service once under its quality and effectiveness inspection programme. This programme also involves a follow up inspection about 18 months after the publication of the area inspection report. Consideration is now being given to the form of inspection which will follow the completion of the quality and effectiveness programme.

Future thematic inspection reports will cover probation hostels, life sentence prisoners (jointly with Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Prisons) and supervision plans.

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the average number of days sick leave taken by probation staff in each grade in each probation service in England and Wales in each of the last three years. [44852]

Ms Quin: The information requested is not collected centrally; however, a recent study based on samples of probation service staff suggested that the average sick leave across services in 1997 was about nine days.

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what (1) was the staff turnover rate for each category of staff in each probation service in England and Wales in each of the last three years; [44851]

(2) what were the absenteeism or unauthorised absence rates for each grade of probation staff in each probation service in England and Wales in the last three years. [44850]

Ms Quin: The information is not collected centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the average case load for each probation service in England and Wales in each of the last three years. [44853]

Ms Quin: The readily available information refers to the court order caseload for 1995 and 1996 and is shown in the table. In addition to the 15.6 cases per officer shown, there were 12.0 cases of pre and post-release supervision for England and Wales. The latter figure would be available by probation area only at disproportionate cost.

Table: Average caseload [1] of criminal court orders per maingrade officer [2]

England and Wales 31 December	Cases per officer 1995	1996
Avon	19.2	20.2
Bedfordshire	13.2	14.3
Berkshire	15.1	16.5
Cambridgeshire	11.5	12.9
Cheshire	13.1	16.2
Cornwall	14.4	24.3
Cumbria	11.8	14.2
Derbyshire	15.1	18.0
Devon	14.7	15.0
Dorset	16.9	16.4
Durham	18.5	22.8
Essex	13.9	14.7
Gloucestershire	18.0	17.6
Hampshire	14.1	15.3
Hereford & Worcester	10.7	12.9
Hertfordshire	14.2	16.3
Humberside	18.0	19.6
Kent	16.5	18.6
Lancashire	16.3	16.4
Leicestershire	11.5	13.2
Lincolnshire	13.4	13.0
Greater Manchester	15.9	17.1
Merseyside	12.5	13.2
Norfolk	11.8	14.2
Northamptonshire	9.3	10.0
Northumbria	13.6	14.9
Nottinghamshire	12.3	14.1
Oxford & Buckingham	12.2	13.3
Shropshire	13.6	13.3
Somerset	14.3	16.0
Staffordshire	15.5	16.6
Suffolk	10.7	12.8
Surrey	12.3	13.3
East Sussex	11.9	13.7
West Sussex	13.1	12.5
Teesside	18.0	20.3
Warwickshire	14.3	16.1
West Midlands	14.9	15.7
Wiltshire	15.3	16.0
North Yorkshire	16.6	18.4
South Yorkshire	13.1	15.1
West Yorkshire	15.2	16.2
Inner London	15.6	15.9
NE London	12.2	14.0
SE London	15.1	14.4
SW London	11.8	13.3
Middlesex	13.4	14.8
Dyfed	18.3	20.4
Gwent	15.3	17.9
North Wales	14.0	15.8
Powys	18.3	20.1
South Glamorgan	12.1	11.2
Mid Glamorgan	13.8	14.2
West Glamorgan	15.1	15.0
All areas	14.4	15.6

[1] Excludes community services. Includes cases supervised by staff other than maingrade officers

[2] Excludes persons with life supervision. Persons receiving more than 1 supervision are counted in the court orders caseload only for the first supervision which applies

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if it is his policy to maintain a network of probation offices outside the largest towns and cities. [45331]

Ms Quin: The probation service needs to provide supervision programmes and facilities which are reasonably accessible to offenders who are required to attend. The number and location of offices are for probation committees to determine within the grant provision they have. In reaching decisions, I look to committees to take account of the potential additional costs and savings which more centralisation of accommodation could bring; the potential effect on operations and enforcement; and the potential contribution which other, more flexible, arrangements (such as mobile offices) might make in their circumstances.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Fabian Hamilton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the British Government's policy towards asylum seekers who have been active in opposition parties and are from the English speaking regions of Cameroon. [44930]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Every application for asylum is decided in accordance with the provisions of the 1951 United Nations Convention relating to the Status of Refugees and its 1967 Protocol. Anyone who demonstrates a well-founded fear of persecution for reasons of race, religion, nationality, membership of a particular social group or political opinion would be recognised as a refugee. Any rejected applicant has the opportunity to appeal to the Immigration Appellate Authority.

The Government's assessment of the conditions prevailing in Cameroon is based on information from a variety of sources, including the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, the United States Department of State and international organisations, such as Amnesty International. A country assessment on Cameroon, prepared by the Country Information and Policy Unit of the Immigration and Nationality Directorate, has been produced and will be revised and updated approximately every six months.

The Home Office country assessment reports concerns about human rights abuses in Cameroon. At this time we have received no evidence to show that mere membership of an opposition party or a Cameroonian's status as an anglophone would single a person out for persecution for those reasons alone.

Sir Norman Fowler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the estimated total cost to public funds in the last 12 months of making provision for applicants for political asylum. [45182]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Costs directly attributable to asylum seekers are not separately identified within spending figures, hence only a broad estimate is available. This estimates that the costs to public funds of provision for asylum seekers is around £500 million for 1997–98. This cost includes processing costs of asylum applications and appeals, and costs for providing support to asylum seekers via Department of Social Security benefits, support provided by local authorities under the National Assistance Act 1948, legal aid and health and education.

Recent claims that the total cost of asylum is in excess of £2 billion are wildly misleading.

Extradition

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list for each of the last 15 years the number of extradition warrants issued by police forces in England and Wales for persons sought by them for terrorist type crimes whom the police believed to be resident in the United States of America; how many of the persons sought were returned to the United Kingdom in each year; and if he will give the same information in respect of persons sought for crimes not related to terrorism. [44916]

Mr. Straw: My right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Northern Ireland and for Scotland are responsible for extradition requests based on offences committed within those jurisdictions.

An arrest warrant issued in England and Wales cannot form an extradition request. Extradition arrangements with the United States are conducted on a treaty basis. A formal extradition request by the United Kingdom is prepared by the relevant prosecuting authority and is made through diplomatic channels, typically when the fugitive has been located in a particular country.

Home Office records of extradition requests do not indicate as a matter of course whether the offence which formed the basis of an extradition request was related to terrorism. Records do show, however, that between 1983 and 1997, one request was made to the United States for the return of a person on the basis of terrorist offences. That person was returned to the United Kingdom in 1996.

The table sets out the total number of requests made by the Home Office to the United States in each of the last 15 years, and the number of people returned from there in each of those years.

Year	Number of requests made to the United States	Number of people returned from the United States
1983	3	3
1984	4	5
1985	6	4
1986	4	7
1987	10	5
1988	8	8
1989	5	3
1990	7	5
1991	6	7
1992	7	6
1993	4	5
1994	2	3
1995	8	3
1996	3	4
1997	8	3

Note:
Twelve requests made during the period were subsequently withdrawn.

Animal Research

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 6 April 1998, Official Report, column 26, concerning wild-caught primates, what were the scientific procedures the wild-caught baboon was subjected to; when the transplantation occurred; if the baboon is still alive; how many visits to the establishment where the procedures took place have been made by the Home Office Inspectorate since 1 January 1997; and what regulated procedures will be performed on the second wild-caught baboon. [45427]

Mr. George Howarth: The first animal was used in an orthotopic heart transplant procedure (in which it received a heart from a transgenic pig) on 23 March. It has since been humanely killed.

Since 1 January 1997, inspectors have visited the establishment on five occasions.

The second animal was considered to be an unsuitable candidate for surgery and was humanely killed without being used in any regulated procedures.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to the letter of the Under-Secretary of State, Lord Williams of Mostyn, to the hon. Member for Linlithgow (AP/98 1/10/86), what action he is taking to reduce journey times of primates imported for research; and what plans he has to facilitate the flying of such animals directly to the United Kingdom. [44048]

Mr. George Howarth: Journey times are unduly long in some cases because, following a campaign by anti-vivisection groups, airlines stopped flying primates directly into the United Kingdom. Instead, the animals are flown into mainland Europe to be transported to this country by road and ferry. The Home Office has no powers to insist that airlines carry primates or other animals directly into the United Kingdom.

In deciding whether to allow primates to be acquired from overseas sources, the transport arrangements are taken into account.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what statistics his Department collates about the countries from which primates are imported to the United Kingdom. [44049]

Mr. George Howarth: I assume that my hon. Friend is interested in statistics relating to the breeding and supplying centres and not in general statistics about the countries concerned.

In deciding whether to give approval for the acquisition of primates from overseas for use in regulated procedures in the United Kingdom, information about the breeding centre is scrutinised. This information includes details of the breeding colony (its size and composition); animal accommodation and husbandry; health status and monitoring arrangements; breeding performance; staffing; and arrangements for transportation to the United Kingdom.

Metropolitan Police Review

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make it his policy that changes in the level of police resources arising from the review of Metropolitan Police boundaries and divisional commands are subject to full public consultation. [45213]

Mr. Straw: Under the 1996 Police Act, I have a power to alter police areas by order. I have no power to alter police divisional boundaries within a police area, as this, and the deployment of police resources within a police area, are matters for the chief officer of the relevant police force. However, section 96 of the Police Act 1996 requires police authorities and, in the case of the Metropolitan Police District, the Commissioner, to make arrangements for obtaining the view of local people about matters concerning the policing of their area.

I am currently considering representations that changes to the boundaries of the Metropolitan Police District should make them conterminous with those of the proposed new Greater London Authority.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will assess the advantages of introducing greater conterminosity between police divisions and borough council boundaries in his review of the boundary of the Metropolitan Police. [45214]

Mr. Michael: Yes. The Government are keen to align boundaries in the criminal justice system wherever possible. Conterminous boundaries improve efficiency in the delivery of local services, increasing the effectiveness of joint working between agencies, particularly in partnership arrangements such as those proposed in the Crime and Disorder Bill [Lords].

Under the Police Act 1996, the Home Secretary has a power to alter police areas by order but has no power to determine police divisional boundaries within a police area, which are a matter for the chief officer of the relevant police force.

We are currently considering representations for changes to the boundaries of the Metropolitan Police District to make them conterminous with those of the proposed new Greater London Authority.

Epsom Police Station

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to relocate the command, control and management functions currently located at Epsom Police Station to within the Greater London boundary. [45212]

Mr. Michael: The Commissioner tells me that a new station for Epsom and Sutton Division of 4 Area is planned at Sutton. It will be funded through the private finance initiative. It is planned that the divisional headquarters staff and the command and control suite currently based at Epsom Police station will be relocated to the new Sutton police station.

Animal Rights Activists

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to the letter of 12 January from the Under-Secretary of State, Lord Williams of Mostyn, to Dr George Poste of Smith Kline Beecham, what monitoring he has conducted of the efficacy of the Protection from Harassment Act 1997 in relation to violence by animal rights activists. [44067]

Mr. George Howarth: We have undertaken to review the use of the Protection from Harassment Act 1997 and to report our findings. The review will cover all types of cases brought under the Act and will start later this year.

Immigration Service

Sir Norman Fowler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many immigration service staff are currently employed for on-entry control duties at ports; and if he will make a statement. [45186]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: On 1 June 1998, the Immigration Service Ports Directorate employed a total of 2,343 staff at ports, of whom 2,172 were operational grades of Inspector, Chief Immigration Officer, Immigration Officer and Assistant Immigration Officer.

Police Service Budget

Sir Norman Fowler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the real term increase in the budget for the police service for the current year; and if he will make a statement. [45184]

Mr. Michael: The revenue budgets of police authorities in England and Wales rose by £255 million in 1998/99. This represents an increase of 3.7 per cent. over 1997/98.

Port Arrivals

Sir Norman Fowler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the total number of arrivals at ports, in the last 12 months, broken down to show (a) EC and (b) other arrivals; and if he will make a statement. [45187]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Provisional data for the 12 months April 1997 to March 1998 are given in the table.

	Million
Total passenger arrivals	80.1
of which British citizens[1]	[2]52.4
other nationals of countries in the European Economic Area (EEA)	[2]16.7
non-EEA nationals	11.0

[1] Including residents of the Irish Republic and passengers of all nationalities in direct transit who did not pass through immigration control

[2] Estimated

Embarkation Controls

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what embarkation controls he has removed or reduced at which airports and ports; and what protection he has put in place at those ports and airports for children who are victims of attempted abduction from Britain. [44908]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The previous administration had already removed, in 1994, embarkation checks for passengers departing from ferry ports and small airports for destinations within the European Union/European Economic Area, with the consequence that some 40 per cent. of all departing passengers were not seen by an immigration officer. This meant that those seeking to evade embarkation controls could do so by using these ports.

Implementation of the new embarkation arrangements, which I announced on 16 March 1998, Official Report, columns 506–07, commenced on 14 April at Heathrow Terminal 3, Gatwick North and Stansted. Gatwick South started on 7 June. These arrangements are due to come into place at the remaining major ports—Heathrow Terminals 1, 2 and 4, Birmingham, Glasgow and Manchester—on 1 July, or as soon as possible thereafter.

These intelligence-led embarkation checks are more effective than those which existed before; they include the increased use of Closed Circuit Television and enhanced co-operation between border agencies, port operators, and airlines. An important part of this liaison is the operation by the police of the All Ports Warning System in order to frustrate child abduction.

Human Rights

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to the answer of 24 April 1998, Official Report, column 722, on human rights, if he will state which aspects of the Government's human rights policy are his Department's responsibilities. [44877]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The Home Office is responsible for the Human Rights Bill [Lords]. We also work with other Departments on the operation and application of international mechanisms for protecting human rights, with a particularly strong interest in the European Convention on Human Rights, the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights and the European and United Nations Conventions against torture.

Non-custodial Sentences (Electronic Monitoring)

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what criteria will be used in evaluating bids by companies to manage electronic monitoring arrangements for home detention and community orders. [43877]

Ms Quin: The main criteria used in elevating bids both technically and commercially concern:

the deliverability of the whole project;

the quality and reliability of the service;

the ability of the proposed equipment to meet the required standards; and the price.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

South Africa

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will provide help to the Republic of South Africa in the form of secondments of academic staff and administrators to South Africa. [44047]

Clare Short: There are in fact already extensive academic links between British and South African universities arranged under the Higher Education Links programme funded by my Department and managed by the British Council. 26 such links have been established.

Iwokrama International Rainforest Centre

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development, pursuant to the letter of 17 June 1997 from the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State to the hon. Member for Linlithgow, what support her Department has given to the Iwokrama International Rainforest Centre to provide forest research capacity for the Guyana Shield. [44066]

Clare Short: My Department has committed £3 million to the Centre's Sustainable Human Development Project in order to develop sustainable forest management approaches which will benefit forest-dependent communities living in the Iwokrama Rainforest. It will include support for applied research and capacity building. The European Commission is appraising for EU funding a complementary project on the sustainable and equitable use of biodiversity in the Forest.

The United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) is committing £100,000 to the Centre's research programme which is also being assisted by Canada and which will benefit from close association with the Guyana Forestry Commission, also supported by DFID. Some of the Centre's research will be conducted in collaboration with the Tropenbos Foundation.

Annual Policy Forum

Mr. Heppell: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on progress in setting up the annual policy forum proposed in the Government's White Paper on International Development. [45990]

Clare Short: The National Development Policy Forum will take place in Birmingham on 9 November. This will be preceded by a series of regional forums in ten locations around the UK. The dates and locations are as follows:

	Date	Location
Monday	7 September	Norwich
Wednesday	9 September	Birmingham
Monday	14 September	Bristol
Wednesday	16 September	Portsmouth
Monday	21 September	York
Thursday	24 September	Cardiff
Monday	5 October	Manchester
Wednesday	7 October	Edinburgh
Tuesday	13 October	Belfast
Friday	16 October	London

The Forum is one of a number of ways in which we are seeking to share experience and strengthen analysis of development issues across different sectors of society, and to broaden public awareness. This will be an annual process and full reports of the outcome will be available.

Our current estimate of the cost is between £200,000 and £300,000.

TREASURY

Tax Avoidance

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the number of personal portfolio bond holders who hold such instruments with the sole or main objective of avoiding tax. [45120]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 9 June 1998]: It is not known how many people hold personal portfolio bonds with the sole or main object of avoiding tax.

Public Houses (Uniform Business Rate)

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if his Department publishes guidelines in relation to uniform business rates and the value of public houses; [45019]

(2) what measures are taken to monitor the accuracy of information given on forms used to assess uniform business rates for public houses; [45020]

(3) if (a) turnover prices and (b) the value of a property are taken into account in the setting of uniform business rates for public houses. [45018]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 9 June 1998]: No general guidelines are published in relation to uniform business rates by HM Treasury. A guide relating to the valuation of public houses, entitled "Public Houses—Approved Guide to Valuation", is available to the general public as part of the Tolley's Tax Link CD-ROM from Tolley Publishing Co. Ltd. The guide forms part of the Valuation Office Agency's Rating Manual and sets out the agreement between the Valuation Office Agency and the Brewers and Licensed Retailers Association as to the method and broad levels of the value to be adopted for public houses as part of the revaluation of non-domestic property for business rates purposes, which came into effect on 1 April 1995.

The rateable value of a public house, in common with other non-domestic property subject to business rates, is an estimate of the amount of rent for which the property might reasonably be expected to be let. The capital value of the property is not taken into account. In arriving at the rateable value for public houses, the Valuation Officer, an employee of the Valuation Office Agency, has regard to turnover when estimating fair maintainable receipts. This yardstick is adopted to analyse rents and to compare properties.

The Valuation Officer has a statutory power to request information which is required to compile and maintain lists of rateable values for business rates purposes. Those supplying the information, usually the occupiers/owners of the property or their representatives, sign a declaration of authenticity. The supply of false information can lead to prosecution. The accuracy of information given on forms will be considered at both the valuation stage and when dealing with appeals.

Self-assessment

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many demands for a sum of 24 pence or less have been issued by the Inland Revenue since 1 January to taxpayers who have been held to have under-declared their earnings under the self-assessment scheme. [44816]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 9 June 1998]: The information is not available.

Ms Stuart: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many taxpayers were billed for amounts of less than £5 under self-assessment. [44318]

Dawn Primarolo: The information is not available.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many tax demands have been issued under the self-assessment initiative for sums under (a) £1 and (b) £10. [44973]

Dawn Primarolo: The information is not available.

Economic and Fiscal Strategy

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will make a statement on his policy in respect of surpluses on the current balance measure of the UK budget deficit over the next five years; [44294]

(2) what is his policy on the ratio of public debt to national income; and if he will make a statement. [45174]

Mr. Darling [holding answer 4 June 1998]: I refer the hon. Gentlemen to the statement my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer made to the House today, Official Report, columns 1195–1201.

Disabled Person's Tax Credit

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will provide details of the timetable for consultation on the eligibility criteria for the disabled person's tax credit. [44900]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 8 June 1998]: The disabled person's tax credit will replace the disability working allowance from October 1999. The Government are presently considering ways to ensure the disabled person's tax credit can be made more effective and attractive than the disability working allowance, and will be making announcements and consulting in due course.

Child Benefit

Mr. Webb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what would be the tax yield from making child benefit taxable for (a) mothers who are higher-rate tax payers and (b) fathers who are higher-rate tax payers; and what would be the administrative cost of doing so. [44626]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 8 June 1998]: If child benefit were taxed as part of the income of those mothers or lone fathers liable to tax at the higher rate of 40 per cent., the yield for 1998–99 would be about £40 million. If the benefit were taxed as part of the income of fathers and lone mothers liable to tax at the higher rate of 40 per cent., the yield for 1998–99 would be about £450 million. The administrative costs would depend on the precise way in which any tax charge was imposed.

Pensions (Tax Relief)

Mr. Webb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what would be the yield for allowing income tax relief only on pension contributions up to a ceiling of (a) £4,000 per annum, (b) £6,000 per annum, (c) £8,000 per annum and (d) £10,000 per annum. [44627]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 8 June 1998]: The distribution of tax relief by level of contribution of participants in occupational and personal pension schemes is not available.

Mr. Webb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what would be the cost to the Exchequer of giving tax relief on that part of employee and employer national insurance contributions which are treated as contributions to SERPS and which are not payable by those who have contracted out of SERPS. [44628]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 8 June 1998]: The cost of income tax relief at the basic rate for the employee part of the age-related national insurance rebate if all those currently in SERPS contracted out into appropriate personal pensions is tentatively estimated at around £300 million each year at 1998–99 levels of earnings. Extending basic rate relief to the employer part of the national insurance rebate would cost approximately an additional £850 million.

Departmental Running Costs

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what action he is taking to constrain the growth of Departments' running costs; and if he will make a statement. [45181]

Mr. Darling: The Government are committed to delivering high-quality public services at best value to the taxpayer. Expenditure on Departments' running costs is being closely scrutinised in the Comprehensive Spending Review. Controls on running costs will be maintained within the new spending plans announced at the conclusion of the Review.

Savings Income (Channel Islands)

Mr. Fallon: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make it his policy to oppose the application to the Channel Islands of the proposed Council Directive on the minimum effective taxation of savings income (COM(1998)295). [43687]

Dawn Primarolo: We will be discussing this issue with the Channel Islands.

Golden Rule

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the Treasury definition of capital expenditure for the purposes of the Golden Rule. [45178]

Mr. Darling: Definitions used for the purposes of the golden rule were set out in Annexe B of the March 1998 Financial Statement and Budget Report.

Foreign Earnings Deduction

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the proportions of the expected yield arising from the proposed abolition of the foreign earnings deduction to be paid by media and entertainment personalities with very high incomes. [44642]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 10 June 1998]: About one half of the yield arising from the proposed changes to the rules for foreign earnings deductions will come from media and entertainment personalities.

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many of those claiming foreign earnings deduction earned (a) less than £40,000 per annum, (b) between £40,000 to £50,000 per annum, (c) £50,000 to £60,000 per annum, (d) £60,000 to £75,000, (e) £75,000 to £100,000 and (f) above £100,000 per annum, in the latest year for which figures are available. [44641]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 10 June 1998]: The degree of disaggregation requested is not available.

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many of those claiming the foreign earnings deduction were people considered by the Treasury to be very high-earning individuals in the latest year for which figures are available. [44643]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 10 June 1998]: There is no standard definition of what constitutes very high earnings.

Tax Evasion

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what measures he is taking to end tax evasion through the use of company status by persons who would normally be considered to be (a) employees and (b) in receipt of additional income from sources outside their main employment. [45183]

Dawn Primarolo: Arrangements for the evasion or avoidance of tax are kept under review by the Inland Revenue who take action where appropriate. In addition, legislative steps are taken if necessary.

Sierra Leone

Mr. Lilley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) on what dates HM Customs and Excise interviewed (a) Mr. Peter Penfold, (b) Mr. Craig Murray, (c) Linda St. Cook, (d) Mr. Tim Andrews, (e) Mr. Philip Packham, (f) Lt. Col. Peter Hicks and (g) Colonel Andrew Gale in the course of their investigation into possible breach of UN Resolution 1132 and the consequent Order in Council; [41820]

(2) which civil servants have been interviewed by HM Customs and Excise in the course of their investigation into possible breach of UN resolution 1132 and the consequent Order in Council; and on what dates. [41821]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 14 May 1998]: Customs have announced the conclusion of their investigation into the alleged breaches of the UN/Sierra Leone arms embargo. It is established practice that the Commissioners do not comment further on the details of their investigations.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what action the Government are taking to investigate possible violations of arms sanctions in respect of Sierra Leone. [41114]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 8 May 1998]: Customs have conducted an investigation of alleged breaches of the UN/Sierra Leone arms embargo and have announced their conclusions.

I also refer the right hon. Member to the statement by the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs in the House on 18 May 1998, Official Report, columns 604–11, in which he announced the investigation by Sir Thomas Legg KCB QC into allegations about Government involvement with the supply of arms to Sierra Leone by UK citizens and firms, and said that the Terms of Reference would be placed in the Library of the House. The Foreign Secretary intends to publish the report of the investigation.

Sir Alastair Goodlad: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans Customs and Excise have to interview the Secretary of State for International Development or officials of her Department in the course of their investigation into possible breaches of the UN Security Council Resolution 1132 concerning Sierra Leone. [41944]

Dawn Primarolo: None. The Customs and Excise investigation has been concluded in the terms of the announcement of 18 May 1998, Official Report, columns 604–11.

Information

Mr. Lilley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if it is his policy not to supply factual information requested by hon. Members if that information would be liable to misinterpretation. [43980]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 1 June 1998]: I refer the right hon. Gentlemen to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Ceredigion (Mr. Dafis) on 12 May 1998, Official Report, column 82.

Taxable Pay Tables

Mrs. Lait: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the cost of the reprint of taxable pay tables LR+B to D marked May 1998; and what was the reason for the mistake in the originals. [44337]

Dawn Primarolo: The cost of reprinting the tables was £127,363.

The user testing did not identify errors within the instructional guidance contained in the new Calculator Tables. However, the revised tables (identified as May 1998 Issue 2) were issued by 16 May 1998 in time for the implementation of the Budget changes on the first pay day after 17 May 1998 in line with the original implementation date.

Training (Tax Relief)

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received regarding the administration of the vocational training tax relief scheme and the possible introduction of a composite form for use by training providers. [44913]

Dawn Primarolo: In an Inland Revenue Budget press release issued on 26 November 1996, comments were requested on a draft new form to replace the two eligibility forms in use for vocational training relief (VTR). The draft form was not welcomed by all training providers and, in the light of representations received, the Inland Revenue felt that they could not go ahead with the proposals as they stood.

Partnership Initiative

Mr. Alan Simpson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the treatment for tax purposes of contributions made by private companies to educational institutions under the Partnership Initiative. [44680]

Dawn Primarolo: I am not sure what my hon. Friend has in mind. There are special rules granting tax relief for gifts of equipment to educational establishments. Otherwise, normal tax rules apply. If my hon. Friend wishes to write to me about any specific point, I will be happy to look into it for him.

Borrowing Targets

Mr. Timms: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement about the Government's performance against targets in reducing borrowing in 1997–98. [45870]

Mrs. Liddell: As a result of the lower than expected outturn in government borrowing in 1997–98, and taking account of the Government's latest forecast for Central Government net borrowing in 1998–99, the Government have reduced their financing requirement to £12.1 billion in 1998–99. This is a reduction of £3.1 billion, compared with previous plans. The revised financing requirement is expected to be met from gilt sales of £11.6 billion, and a net contribution from National Savings of £½ billion. The revised financing arithmetic is set out in the table, followed by revisions to paragraph 4 of the Debt

Management Office remit for 1998–99, and the revised auction calendar for 1998–99. There are no other changes to the Government's plans for debt management, or to the rest of the Debt Management Office remit, as set out in the 1998–99 Debt Management Report.

Central Government Financing Requirement 1998–99

	£ billion
Central Government net borrowing	0.2
Loans and sales of financial assets	1.9
Accruals adjustments	1.4
Central Government net cash requirement	3.5
Expected net change in official reserves	0.0
Gilt redemptions	16.8
Gilt sales residual from 1997–98	–8.2
Financing requirement	12.1
Less net financing from:
National Savings	0.5
Certificates of Tax Deposit	0.0
Treasury bills and other short term debt	0.0
Gross gilt sales required	11.6
of which:
Ultra-short conventionals (1–3 years)	0
Short conventionals (3–7 years)	2.5
Medium conventionals (7–15 years)	2.5
Long conventionals (over 15 years)	3.1
Index-linked gilts	3.5

Over 1998–99 as a whole, the Debt Management Office will aim to make 30 per cent. of its gilts sales in index-linked stocks, with the remainder in conventional stocks, spread across the maturity ranges. On current forecasts, this implies index-linked gilt sales of £3.5 billion and conventional gilt sales of £8.1 billion. Three auctions of conventional stocks are now scheduled for 1998–99, including the auction already held on 20 May, when the DMO successfully auctioned £3 billion of long stock. The remaining two auctions of conventional stocks will be used to issue short and medium stocks, in broadly even proportions. The Government do not necessarily intend to maintain issuance in each maturity area in these proportions in future years.

Auction calendar 1998–99

Date
Wednesday 20 May 1998	Conventional
Wednesday 29 July 1998	Conventional
Wednesday 28 October 1998	Index-linked
Wednesday 27 January 1999	Index-linked
Wednesday 24 March 1999[1]	Conventional

[1] Subject to Chancellor's decision on the Budgetary timetable

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Legal Aid (Northern Ireland)

Mr. Walker: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will list the 10 legal establishments in Northern Ireland which were awarded most in legal aid in the last two financial years and the amount awarded in each case. [44589]

Mr. Hoon: The administration of the legal aid scheme in Northern Ireland is the responsibility of the Law Society of Northern Ireland under the Legal Aid, Advice and Assistance (Northern Ireland) Order 1981. This function is exercised through the Legal Aid Committee which is a Committee of the Council of the Law Society of Northern Ireland and the Legal Aid Department which is a Department of the Law Society. The Legal Aid Department is also responsible for the administration of criminal legal aid on the Lord Chancellor's behalf.

The information can be provided only at disproportionate cost. The computer system in the Legal Aid Department is out of date and the Department is presently in the process of procuring a new computer. It will then take some considerable time before all new cases are in the system and in respect of which such information could be readily available.

Child Abduction

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what was the outcome of the international review meeting in 1997 of the Hague Convention on Child Abduction; and what follow-up action the British Government are taking. [44906]

Mr. Hoon: The review of the operation of the 1980 Hague Convention in March 1997 achieved a wide measure of consensus between contracting states on improvements to the operation of the Convention, and in particular on the standards needed to ensure that new states parties can implement the provisions of the Convention effectively. The Government have followed up the review by promoting judicial and administrative contacts to discuss and improve the operation of the Convention between the UK and other contracting states. In the wider international field, my Department has been working to promote improvements in relations with justice ministries in other European Union Member states as part of the UK's Presidency of the European Union.

Human Rights

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, pursuant to the answer of 24 April 1998, Official Report, column 722, on human rights, if he will state which aspects of the Government's human rights policy are his Department's responsibility. [44875]

Mr. Hoon: As a central part of their human rights policy the Government are giving further effect to the rights in the European Convention on Human Rights, through the provisions of the Human Rights Bill which is currently before Parliament. The Lord Chancellor is Chairman of the Cabinet Committee responsible for taking this forward.

The Lord Chancellor is responsible for ensuring compliance with the relevant Convention rights as they affect the machinery of justice in England and Wales. The Lord Chancellor is also responsible for ensuring that civil and family law give effect to Convention rights.

SCOTLAND

Road Accidents

Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment he has made of the European Commission's Statistical Office figures for road death rates in the Highlands and Islands region relative to the rest of Scotland. [44685]

Mr. McLeish: Detailed information about road accidents in Scotland is published annually by the Scottish Office in "Road Accidents Scotland", copies of which are available in the Library of the House. This publication includes information about the number of casualties and casualty rates per 100,000 population by each police force area, each local authority area and by severity, whereas the European Commission's Statistical Office figures show casualties for only 4 sub-divisions of Scotland.

The Scottish Office reviews annually accidents on trunk roads in Scotland with the aim of identifying clusters of accidents at particular locations and routes with high accident rates. This review provides the basis for the investigation of accidents on trunk roads and for appropriate remedial measures. The investigation and prevention of accidents on local roads are the responsibility of local road authorities.

Breast Cancer

Ms Perham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give a breakdown by age range of the incidence of breast cancer in women in Scotland in each of the last five years. [44935]

Mr. Galbraith: The information requested is set out in the table:

Number of registrations of incident cases of breast cancer (ICD-9[1] 174) among women in Scotland by age group and year of registration, 1992–1996

Age Group	1992	1993	1994	1995	1996
15–24	4	2	5	1	2
25–34	76	67	80	59	73
35–44	284	302	294	289	285
45–54	654	659	627	706	766
55–64	874	751	762	806	741
65–74	615	624	634	654	641
75–84	512	497	455	468	451
85+	225	220	240	235	189
All ages	3,244	3,122	3,097	3,218	3,418

[1] International Classification of Diseases, Ninth Revision

Note:

As cancer registration is a dynamic process, some late registrations may not be included in the figures

Source:

Scottish Cancer Intelligence Unit, ISD

Holyrood Parliament Building

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what powers the Scottish Parliament will have to (a) amend and (b) reject the Government's proposals for the Holyrood Parliament Building; and if he will make a statement. [45329]

Mr. McLeish: It is intended that responsibility for the Parliament Building at Holyrood will transfer to the Parliament's Corporate Body at an appropriate point after it is established following the elections in May 1999. The completion of the project will then be a matter for the Parliament.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what estimate he has made of the cost of each of the options on the shortlist for the Holyrood Parliament Building. [45330]

Mr. McLeish: The intention is that whichever team of designers is chosen will produce a building which can be constructed within the building cost estimate of around £50 million announced previously.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

EU Fisheries Council

Miss Begg: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the outcome of the Fisheries Council held in Luxembourg on 8 June; and if he will make a statement. [45615]

Dr. John Cunningham: I chaired the meeting of the Fisheries Council in Luxembourg on 8 June. The Parliamentary Secretary, my hon. Friend the Member for Scunthorpe (Mr. Morley) represented the United Kingdom together with my noble Friend the Under-Secretary of State for Scotland, Lord Sewel.

The Council agreed by qualified majority, with France and Ireland voting against and Italy abstaining, a ban on high seas drift nets. The use of drift nets to catch tuna and swordfish will be phased out by 31 December 2001. The UK favoured a shorter phase out but several delegations were sympathetic to arguments for a longer one. The compromise of 3½ years secured the necessary qualified majority and was accompanied by a commitment that in 1998 the number of vessels licensed to fish with drift nets in each Member State will be at least 40% below the number that fished in 1995, 1996 or 1997 in that Member State. In a joint statement the Council and Commission agreed to decide before the end of 1998 on compensatory measures to help fishermen adapt to the ending of the drift net fishery.

The Commission proposal on drift nets has been on the Council's table since 1994. The UK Presidency made it a priority to reach an agreement in order to protect dolphins in particular and I am delighted that, after a long and hard negotiation, this has now been achieved.

The European Commission introduced a proposal to strengthen fisheries monitoring, inspection and surveillance, together with an action plan for further improving enforcement under the Common Fisheries Policy over the next 2–3 years. In an orientation debate, the UK welcomed the prospect of more effective and consistent enforcement and called for an annual report from the Commission to enable the Council to review progress. As chairman, I concluded that there was agreement that the Commission's proposal addressed key areas where enforcement can be enhanced and a decision should be taken at the Council's next meeting in October. The action plan will be used as a framework for improving control standards.

There was also an orientation debate on a communication from the Commission on options for the future of the Community's fisheries market regime. In a wide ranging discussion, delegations, including the UK, generally shared the Commission's view that it is important to maximise the value of scarce fish resources, maintain competitive catching and processing industries in an increasingly global market and take account of consumers' concerns. Many delegations agreed that changes to both the internal and international aspects of the current market organisations are called for. The Commission will now take account of the points made in drawing up detailed proposals for consideration by the Council.

The Council considered a communication from the Commission reporting on steps taken to follow up discussions by North Sea Ministers at a meeting in Bergen in 1997. The Council unanimously agreed conclusions stressing the importance of integrating fisheries and environmental policies and of making further progress in implementing the Bergen commitments. It also invited the Commission to provide a full report on further progress next year.

The European Commission reported on preparations being made for the review of the Common Fisheries Policy in 2002.

The Council had a preliminary discussion of the implications for fisheries of the reform of the Structural Funds under Agenda 2000.

The Council also adopted a decision providing for ratification by Member States and the Community of the UN Agreement on Straddling Fish Stocks and Highly Migratory Species. This will in due course add the 15 EU member states to the list of countries which have ratified the Agreement. It will become law when 30 countries have ratified.

Organic Farming

Kate Hoey: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many farms have converted to organic farming in the past year. [44870]

Mr. Morley: 134 farms have converted to organic farming in the past year in the UK.

Kate Hoey: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what percentage of United Kingdom farms is classified as organic. [44869]

Mr. Morley: The percentage of United Kingdom farms classified as organic is 0.5 per cent.

Animal Welfare

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the policy statements which he has made during the United Kingdom presidency of the European Community on the welfare of farm animals throughout the Community; and if he will make a statement. [44698]

Mr. Morley: My right hon. Friend and I have repeatedly made clear during the presidency that the Government's policy is to press for new and revised EU measures to improve standards of farm animal welfare throughout the European Community. Under our presidency we have made considerable progress in resolving the long-standing deadlock on the proposed general Directive on the welfare of animals on farm. We have also prevailed on the European Commission to bring forward its overdue proposals on the welfare of laying hens, and have opened the negotiations on these without delay.

Flood Defence

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what flood defence works for the Cumbrian coast are planned over the next four years. [44865]

Mr. Morley: While this Department has overall policy responsibility for flood and coastal defence in England and administers grant aid for capital defence schemes, the planning, design, construction, maintenance and operation of defence measures is the responsibility of local operating authorities. Full information on coastal defence plans is therefore obtainable from the Environment Agency and relevant maritime councils.

However, from information submitted to this Department, I can advise that their plans for the remainder of 1998–99 and the following three years include the following proposed capital works for which they would hope to obtain Ministry funding:

Operating authority	Proposed works
Allerdale Borough Council	Harrington (coast protection)
Allerdale Borough Council	Silloth Skinburness (coast protection)
Allerdale Borough Council	Maryport Harbour (coast protection)
Copeland Borough Council	Salthom Pit (coast protection)
Barrow Borough Council	Askam in Furness (coast protection)

Other works may be proposed following the completion of ongoing studies. Ministry funding of all such schemes is considered if proposals meet technical, economic and environmental criteria and achieve an appropriate priority scheme.

Fish Quotas

Mrs. Humble: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he intends to proceed with the introduction of fixed-quota allocations; and if he will make statement. [45991]

Mr. Morley: From 1 January 1999, the annual allocation of fish quotas to producer organisations, the non sector and other groups will be linked to fishing activity (catches) that took place in the reference period 1994 to 1996. These arrangements, referred to as fixed quota allocations (FQAs), will apply to all quota stocks caught in domestic waters except for North Sea herring taken as a by-catch in industrial fishing, and to certain stocks taken in external waters. The Fisheries Departments are writing to the owners of over 10 metres vessels, producer organisations and other interests to advise them of the new arrangements.

A consultative paper setting out proposals for the introduction of fixed quota allocations for domestic waters was issued by the Fisheries Departments last November and was sent to the owners of some 2,300 fishing vessels over 10 metres, as well as producer organisations and other interests. Almost 300 replies have been received. There was strong support for a system of fixed quota allocations from producer organisations who, together, represent some two thirds of the over 10 metre fleet and catch more than 90 per cent. of the UK's quota. That was not the case with individual responses, although the vast majority of individual fishermen offered no comment. After careful consideration of all the arguments we have come to the view that there would be significant benefits to be gained from moving to fixed quota allocations although we would wish to review such a system in 3 years' time in the light of the experience gained.

Producer organisations will have a key role to play during the introduction of fixed quota allocations. There is apprehension among fishermen that moving to a fixed quota allocation system may disadvantage those whose fishing activities were curtailed during the reference period 1994 to 1996. The arrangements that are being introduced will provide scope for POs, acting with their members, to undertake internal adjustments to take account of anomalies that may have arisen in the reference period. Separate arrangements are also being made to cater for those fishermen that belong to the non sector.

Concern was expressed during the consultation exercise that fixed quota allocations would pave the way to the introduction of individual transferable quotas (ITQs) and separately could lead to increased pressure on non quota stocks. On the first point, the Government have no plans to introduce ITQs and no such action would be taken without full and proper consultation with the industry. On the second point, the Fisheries Departments will be monitoring the impact of fixed quota allocations and if necessary action to safeguard the position of non-quota stocks will be considered. In this context, and given more general concern over growing pressure on scallop stocks, we shall be consulting the fishing industry and other interests about proposals to limit future access to the scallop fisheries.

The proposals would involve the introduction of new licensing arrangements with effect from 1 January 1999. From that date, in the case of vessels over 10m in length, permission to fish for scallops would be granted only to vessels which met the qualifying criteria at 31 May 1998. These criteria may include both a track record of scallop landings prior to that date and the use of appropriate fishing gear during the corresponding period. No activity in the scallop fishery after 31 May 1998 would be taken into account. The arrangements for fishing by under 10 metre vessels would not be affected by the proposed licensing changes, although they will continue to be required to comply with the technical conservation rules applying to scallop fisheries. These rules are under separate review.

A separate consultation exercise on the application of fixed quota allocations to external waters stocks at North Norway, Svalbard and Greenland met with unanimous support. Fisheries Departments therefore intend to introduce fixed quota allocations for these fisheries on 1 January 1999 as part of the process of applying fixed quota allocations more generally. Detailed aspects will be explained in a forthcoming consultative letter on proposals for the future licensing of fishing opportunities in external waters.

Wild Boar

Mrs. Gilroy: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the plans for shooting enthusiasts to kill wild boar on private land near Tiverton, Devon; and what representations he has received on this matter. [45103]

Angela Eagle: I have been asked to reply.

The Government have not been consulted about this proposal. The responsibility for licensing the keeping of wild animals, including wild boars, rests with local authorities. The control of the keeping of firearms is a matter for the police in this context.

It is not an offence to kill a wild boar humanely. However, under the Wild Mammals (Protection) Act 1996, it would be an offence to inflict unnecessary suffering on a boar.

My Department has received an inquiry from the League Against Cruel Sports on this matter.

Milk Development Council

Mr. Livsey: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when his Department's guidelines for the Milk Development Council will be published. [40106]

Mrs. Beckett: I have been asked to reply.

I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to him by my hon. Friend the Minister for Science, Industry and Energy on 1 June 1998, Official Report, column 124.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Damien Thorne

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Attorney-General if he will use his powers relating to unduly lenient sentences in respect of the sentence imposed on Damien Thorne on 21 May. [45216]

The Attorney-General: The Criminal Justice Act 1988 gives me power, in specific circumstances, to apply to the Court of Appeal for sentences which I consider to be unduly lenient to be reviewed. The Act imposes a twenty-eight day time-limit, starting from the date of sentence, within which an application in a particular case must be notified to the Court of Appeal. The Crown Prosecution Service is to provide me with the necessary case papers so that I can consider the sentence imposed on Damien Thorne within the statutory time-limit.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Paramilitary Violence

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will list the acts of paramilitary violence carried out in April, indicating to which paramilitary organisation the police have attributed responsibility. [42162]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 18 May 1998]: The following acts of paramilitary violence were carried out in April:

Offence	Total number	By Loyalist	By Republican	Unknown
Deaths	4	2	[1]2	—
Shooting Incidents	18	9	8	1
Bombing Incidents	5	2	2	1
Casualties as a result of paramilitary style attacks	15	9	6	—
Shootings	8	3	5	—
Assaults	7	6	1	—

[1] 1 claimed by INLA

Note:

1. The RUC advise that it is not possible at present to be more specific on attribution other than for the incident claimed by INLA. Attribution is based on the information currently available and may be subject to change or adjustment. In addition there was one further shooting incident when the RUC shot at a stolen car which tried to run down a member of a patrol
2. Care should be taken not to add all incidents together as some are included in more than one heading, e. g. all four deaths were as a result of shooting incidents as were all eight paramilitary style shooting attacks

Veterinary Students

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many Northern Ireland students are presently studying veterinary science in (a) the Irish Republic and (b) Great Britain; what estimate she has made of the number of graduates in veterinary science required in Northern Ireland in each of the next four years; and what has been the number of applicants for university places in that science from Northern Ireland in each of the last five years. [44555]

Mr. Worthington: There are 52 Northern Ireland students studying veterinary science in the Irish Republic and 115 in Great Britain. It is not possible to estimate the overall number of graduates in veterinary science required in Northern Ireland; however, it is anticipated that the Department of Agriculture for Northern Ireland will require the following:

1998: 5

1999: 3

2000: 3

2001: 3.

The number of applicants for university places is:

Before 1994: No details available

1994: 110

1995: 85

1996: 90

1997: 92.

Guardsmen Fisher and Wright

Mr. MacKay: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland on what date she commenced her review of the cases of guardsmen Fisher and Wright. [45362]

Marjorie Mowlam: I am currently looking at the cases in light of Mr. Justice Coghlin's judicial review judgment which was delivered on 22 May. I received advice on this matter on 2 June—i.e. within 5 working days.

Correspondence

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland on what dates she referred the letter of 8 April from the hon. Member for Thurrock to the RUC Chief Constable; and when she expects the Chief Constable to issue a substantive reply. [44646]

Mr. Ingram: My hon. Friend's letter dated 8 April was received in my office on 29 April 1998. The matter was referred to the RUC Chief Constable on 8 May 1998 and I received his reply on 9 June.

PRIME MINISTER

Special Advisers

Dr. Fox: To ask the Prime Minister if he will state the number of special advisers in each Government department and the total annual cost of employing each adviser, broken down by departments. [39914]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 27 April 1998]: On the number of Special Advisers in each Government department, I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Surrey Heath (Mr. Hawkins) on 13 November 1997, Official Report, columns 615–17, and my answer to the right hon. Member for Bromley and Chislehurst (Mr. Forth) on 5 May 1998, Official Report, column 278.

In addition, one Special Adviser has been appointed to each of the following Departments: Privy Council Office, Department for Trade and Industry, Lord Chancellor's Department and Scottish Office. One Special Adviser has resigned from No.10.

In line with the practice under previous administrations, individual salaries are not detailed in order to protect the privacy of the individuals concerned.

Based on the number in post on 5 May, the total annual salary cost of employing Special Advisers in 1998–99 is estimated to be some £3.6 million.

Sierra Leone

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Prime Minister on what dates between 2 May 1997 and 4 May 1998 his Private Office received submissions or briefing notes on the situation in Sierra Leone. [42083]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 14 May 1998]: As part of the usual flow of information on international issues, various submissions and briefing notes referring to the events in Sierra Leone were received in my Private Office during the period in question.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Prime Minister which ministers were consulted on the decision by Sir Thomas Legg QC to advertise for witnesses to the Sierra Leone investigation in a national newspaper; and if he will make a statement. [45270]

The Prime Minister: Ministers were rightly not consulted, although my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary was informed of Sir Thomas Legg's decision before the advertisement appeared.

Government Buildings

Mr. Baker: To ask the Prime Minister what is his policy in respect of the use of Government buildings for Labour party events. [44217]

The Prime Minister: Paragraph 63 of the Ministerial Code states that Government property should not generally be used for constituency work or party activities. A particular exception is recognised in the case of No. 10 and No. 11 Downing Street, Carlton House Terrace and other official residences where senior Ministers are required to live for the purpose of the job. Where Ministers host Party events in these residences or other Government property, it should be at their own or Party expense with no cost falling to the public purse. This was the practice of the previous administration and there has been no change in the arrangements.

Intelligence Services

Mr. Baker: To ask the Prime Minister what assessment he has made of the potential for increasing parliamentary accountability of the central intelligence machinery consistent with the need to protect national security. [44412]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 9 June 1998]: The central intelligence machinery in the Cabinet Office is accountable to Ministers, and through them to Parliament, in the same way as any part of the Government service. While the nature of its task necessarily means that details of its work have to be protected, my colleagues and I seek to provide as full information about it as is consistent with the public interest.

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Prime Minister what changes have been made to the composition of the Intelligence and Security Committee. [45807]

The Prime Minister: In accordance with Section 10 of the Intelligence Services Act 1994, and after consultation with the Leader of the Opposition, I have appointed the Right Honourable the Lord Archer of Sandwell QC to be a member of the Intelligence and Security Committee as a replacement for Baroness Ramsay, who was appointed as a Minister on 2 December 1997.

Lord Archer's appointment came into effect on 30 March 1998.

Duty Free

Mr. Gale: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer of 3 June 1998, Official Report, column 215, concerning duty free, what the stance was of Germany and Italy at the ECOFIN Council meeting on 19 May towards reversal of the decision to end the duty free trade; if support for a study into the effects of the ending of duty free trade was given by France, Spain and Greece; and if he will make a statement. [45015]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 9 June 1998]: The Rules of Procedure of the Council of Ministers make clear that, in general, deliberations in Council meetings are covered by the rules of professional privacy. It would therefore be inappropriate to give details of the views expressed by other delegates in the Council's discussion of duty free on 19 May, at which no formal vote was taken.

Lockerbie

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to the oral answer from the Secretary of State for Scotland of 19 May 1998, Official Report, column 718, if he will review the Government's policy of not disclosing details of discussions between the office of the Lord Advocate and US officials. [44905]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 10 June 1998]: I have no intention of doing so.

Telephone Tapping

Mr. Baker: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer of 4 June 1998, Official Report, column 301, if he will make it his policy to inform hon. Members, on a confidential basis if necessary, when an hon. Member has been party to a communication where an authorised interception is in force in respect of the other party to the communication. [45428]

The Prime Minister: No. It would be contrary to long-established policy and to common sense to notify a third party that another person's telephone was, or had been, subject to interception under warrant, and would divert the clear will of Parliament as expressed in the Interception of Communications Act, 1985.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

UK Sports Institute

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the budget for the UK Sports Institute is in the current financial year. [44728]

Mr. Banks [holding answer 10 June 1998]: A budget has not been set. Consistent with the competition set in motion by the previous Government, Lottery funding will be a key element and is dependent on the achievement of project milestones in order to draw down lottery funds, agreed by the Lottery Distributing Bodies, the United Kingdom Sports Council and Sheffield.

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the relationship will be between the UK Sports Institute and (i) the English Sports Council and (ii) the Sports Councils for Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland. [44737]

Mr. Banks [holding answer 10 June 1998]: The Home Country Sports Councils are represented on the United Kingdom Sports Council which will provide strategic direction to the United Kingdom Sports Institute (UKSI).

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how the budget for UK Sports Institute is planned to be distributed between the central site and the network of regional sites. [44729]

Mr. Banks [holding answer 10 June 1998]: Public funding will come mainly from the Lottery and the decisions will be taken by the Lottery distributors. However, they have indicated that between £40 million and £60 million of capital Lottery Sports Fund may be made available for the United Kingdom Sports Institute Headquarters development by the home Countries' Sports Councils out of £160 million which may be available for the whole network.

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he has identified sites for the network of regional centres for the UK Sports Institute. [44733]

Mr. Banks [holding answer 10 June 1998]: The Home Country Sports Councils have been asked to identify prospective regional centres, and details of the United Kingdom Sports Institute network will be announced in due course.

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what steps he will take to ensure the participation of sports men and women from Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland in the UK Sports Institute. [44736]

Mr. Banks [holding answer 10 June 1998]: The intention is that sportsmen and women from Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland will have the same opportunity to use the services and facilities of the United Kingdom Sports Institute Network as those from England.

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many regional centres there are planned to be in the UK Sports Institute network. [44735]

Mr. Banks [holding answer 10 June 1998]: There are likely to be about eight regional centres planned for England, and other separate centres planned for Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland.

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport which body will have responsibility for the UK Sports Institute. [44738]

Mr. Banks [holding answer 10 June 1998]: The United Kingdom Sports Institute (UKSI) will be subject to the strategic direction of the United Kingdom Sports Council. A separate corporate body will be agreed and set up to run the UKSI Headquarters.

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when construction is planned to begin on the UK Sports Institute central site. [44730]

Mr. Banks [holding answer 10 June 1998]: Construction of the Headquarters building is planned to commence in May 1999.

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans he has for the funding of the UK Sports Institute following the initial National Lottery grant. [44739]

Mr. Banks [holding answer 10 June 1998]: In addition to capital Lottery funding, the Lottery distributors have indicated that up to £9 million of revenue funding per annum may be made available to help operate the United Kingdom Sports Institute Headquarters, provided a suitable application is made to the Lottery Distributing Bodies.

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how the programme of activities at the UK Sports Institute is planned to be structured. [44731]

Mr. Banks [holding answer 10 June 1998]: The UK Sports Council will determine the overall strategy, which will reflect the Government's key policy aims. The UK Sports Institute will deliver that national strategy and the arrangements will be decentralised with many services provided in the regional centres to standards accredited by the Headquarters in Sheffield.

Technical and support services in particular will be developed in close consultation with the governing bodies of the sports concerned, and the athletes and coaches who will use them.

There will be three main phases of development, each going forward as Lottery funding is made available. The first phase (1998–2000) will see the UK Sports Institute drawing together the threads of the World Class Performance Programme. The second phase (1999–2002) will be marked by better co-ordination nationally of these services. In phase three (2000–2004) new buildings and related facilities will be used to provide significantly more support than is possible at present.

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) what the criteria will be for the involvement of individual sports in the UK Sports Institute; [44732]

(2) if he will list the sports that (a) have agreed to participate in and (b) have been invited to participate in the UK Sports Institute. [44726]

Mr. Banks: All sports will be encouraged to participate. The United Kingdom Sports Institute (UKSI) will provide first class facilities for a range of Olympic and other non-commercial sports for our very best sportsmen and women.

Discussions have been taking place with eight sports—athletics, swimming, cycling (road), judo, triathlon, netball, squash and table tennis—about the development of their national training facilities at the UKSI HQ in Sheffield. Major spectator sports like football, cricket and rugby league which have plans for their own sports specific academics will also be able to tap into the top quality sports science, medicine and coaching expertise offered across the Institute's HQ facilities.

Mr. Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what progress he has made in the allocation of the regional centres of excellence for the Institute of Sport. [44944]

Mr. Banks: There are likely to be about eight regional centres planned for England, and other centres planned for Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland. The Home Country Sports Councils have been asked to identify prospective regional centres with a view to siting the centres where they are needed most. Details of the United Kingdom Sports Institute network will be announced in due course.

National Lottery

Yvette Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much National Lottery

funding has been distributed by (a) the National Lottery Charities Board, (b) the Millennium Commission, (c) the Heritage Lottery Fund, (d) the English Sports Council and (e) the Arts Council of England for projects in (i) Pontefract and Castleford constituency and (ii) the Yorkshire and Humberside Region. [44588]

Mr. Banks: The table shows the value and the number of Lottery awards made to date in (i) Pontefract and Castleford constituency and (ii) the Yorkshire and Humberside Region. Details of Lottery awards can be found on the Department's internet website, at www.lottery.culture.gov.uk.

£

Distributing body[1]	Pontefract and Castleford		Yorkshire and Humberside Region
	Value of awards	Number of awards	Value of awards	Number of awards
Arts Council for England	244,933	6	54,818,541	798
National Lottery Charities Board	561,655	7	61,073,053	809
Heritage Lottery Fund	100,700	1	53,653,345	146
Millennium Commission[2]	Nil	Nil	142,272,924	18
Sports Council for England	2,016,484	6	64,601,230	264
Total	2,923,772	20	360,478,430	2,035

[1] The information for this table has been provided by the distributing bodies
[2] The Millennium Commission has set aside £200 million for 34 award partners to run the Millennium awards scheme which will benefit 15,000 individuals around the country

Minimum Wage

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what representations he has received on the impact of the minimum wage on the uptake of the new deal places for 18 to 24 year olds by the tourism industry. [43778]

Mr. Tom Clarke: I have received representations on the impact of the minimum wage from a number of companies and associations in the tourism, hospitality and leisure industry. The Independent Low Pay Commission, in formulating its recommendations, received written and oral evidence from a large number of individuals and organisations, including many of the industry's representative bodies. I am very impressed by the response from the tourism industry to the initiative on the New Deal. Neither at the conference my Department, the Department for Education and Employment and the British Hospitality Association hosted last November, nor in my frequent contacts with the tourism industry since, has specific representation been made to me about the impact of the minimum wage on the New Deal.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Regional Affairs Committee

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the President of the Council what plans she has to refer matters to the Standing Committee on Regional Affairs under Standing Order No. 117. [45313]

Mrs. Ann Taylor: None at present. I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Newcastle upon Tyne, Central (Mr. Cousins) on 14 May 1998, Official Report, column 533. There has been no significant demand from hon. Members for reference of matters to the Standing Committee on Regional Affairs although the Government have not ruled it out and I will consider any representations about appropriate topics.

WALES

M4

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what estimate he has made of (x) the current traffic flows and (y) the (i) high and (ii) low predictions of traffic flow on the M4 from (a) Newhouse to Magor, (b) Magor to Coldra, (c) Coldra to Caerleon, (d) Malpas to Tredegar Park, (e) Tredegar Park to Castleton and (f) Castleton to Coryton in (1) 2000, (2) 2005, (3) 2010, (4) 2015 and (5) 2020. [44075]

Mr. Hain: The Annual Average Daily Traffic Flows (AADT) based on the current High and Low National Road Traffic Forecasts (NRTF) 1997 are given in the table:

Section	1997 AADF	2000 AADF	2005 AADF	2010 AADF	2015 AADF	2020 AADF
High Growth Forecast
M48 Newhouse-Rogiet Jns. 2–23	10,400	11,300	12,600	13,800	15,100	16,300
M4 Rogiet-Magor Jns. 32–23A	54,900	59,600	66,300	72,700	79,400	85,800
M4 Magor-Coldra Jns. 23A-24	61,000	66,200	73,700	80,800	88,200	95,300
M4 Coldra-Caerleon Jns. 24–25	83,700	90,900	101,200	110,900	121,200	130,900
M4 Caerleon-Malpas Jns. 25–26	69,300	75,200	83,700	91,800	100,300	108,300
M4 Malpas-High Cross Jns. 26–27	91,200	99,000	110,200	120,800	132,000	142,500
M4 High Cross-Tredegar Park Jns. 27–28	85,500	92,800	103,200	113,200	123,700	133,600
M4 Tredegar Park-Castleton Jns. 28–29	89,500	97,200	108,100	118,600	129,600	140,000
M4 Castleton-Pontprennau Jns. 29–30	49,900	54,100	60,300	66,100	72,200	78,000
M4 Pontprennau-Coryton Jns. 30–32	56,700	61,500	68,400	75,100	82,000	88,600

Section	1997 AADF	2000 AADF	2005 AADF	2010 AADF	2015 AADF	2020 AADF
Low Growth Forecast
M48 Newhouse-Rogiet Jns. 2–23	10,400	10,700	11,300	12,000	12,700	13,300
M4 Rogiet-Magor Jns. 32–23A	54,900	56,000	59,400	63,100	66,800	69,800
M4 Magor-Coldra Jns. 23A-24	61,000	62,200	66,000	70,100	74,200	77,500
M4 Coldra-Caerleon Jns. 24–25	83,700	85,400	90,700	96,300	101,900	106,500
M4 Caerleon-Malpas Jns. 25–26	69,300	70,700	75,000	79,700	84,300	88,100
M4 Malpas-High Cross Jns. 26–27	91,200	93,000	98,800	104,900	111,000	115,900
M4 High Cross-Tredegar Park Jns. 27–28	85,500	87,100	95,600	98,300	104,000	108,640
M4 Tredegar Park-Castleton Jns. 28–29	89,500	91,300	97,000	103,000	109,000	113,800
M4 Castleton-Pontprennau Jns. 29–30	49,900	50,900	54,000	57,400	60,700	63,400
M4 Pontprennau-Coryton Jns. 30–32	56,700	57,800	61,400	65,200	69,000	72,000

BSE

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many BSE cases he has recorded in 1998; and if he will make a statement. [44599]

Mr. Win Griffiths: The number of suspected cases of BSE reported in Wales in 1998 up to 29 May was 139, of which 49 cases had been confirmed.

The BSE epidemic continues in sharp decline. The number of suspected cases so far reported in 1998 in Wales is 32 per cent. less than for the same period in 1997.

Cataract Operations

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what measures he proposes to tackle waiting lists in (a) Wales and (b) North East Wales for cataract operations; and if he will make a statement. [44601]

Mr. Win Griffiths: (a) An additional £20 million will be spent in 1998–99 on reducing inpatient and day case waiting lists to below the level which the Government inherited. This supports the Government's commitment to reduce waiting lists over the lifetime of this Parliament by 100,000.

(b) £4.124 million of this is available to North Wales Health Authority to reduce waiting lists in its area. The Authority is also considering establishing an ophthalmic treatment centre to provide additional capacity to treat patients with cataracts.

Prostate Cancer

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what steps he proposes to reduce the incidence of prostate cancer; how many prostate cancer deaths there were last year; and if he will make a statement. [44602]

Mr. Win Griffiths: In relation to the steps we are taking to reduce the incidence of prostate cancer, I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Ynys Mon (Mr. Jones) on 11 February 1998, Official Report, column 255. In 1997, there were 532 deaths in Wales from prostate cancer registered with the Office for National Statistics.

Knacker Trade

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many people are employed in the knacker trade in Wales; and if he will make a statement. [45002]

Mr. Hain: The Office for National Statistics 1996 Annual Employment Survey estimated that there were 700 employees in Wales employed in industries concerned with the production and preserving of meat. No further breakdown is available.

Directors of Education

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many directors of education there were in Wales in (a) 1988 and (b) 1998; and if he will make a statement. [45006]

Mr. Hain: In 1988, there were eight, one for each of the old counties. In 1998, there are 22, one for each of the new unitary counties.

Mental Health

Ms Julie Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what psychological therapy services are available in Wales for individuals with mental health problems. [45001]

Mr. Win Griffiths: Psychological therapies are provided on the NHS as appropriate to the needs of the individual. A wide range of therapies are available; the most common interventions include supportive psychotherapy, dynamic individual psychotherapy, group therapy, cognitive and behavioural therapy.

Electro-convulsive Therapy (Bro Taf)

Ms Julie Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many ECT treatments were carried out in the Bro Taf Health Authority in each of the last five years; and how many of these were carried out without the consent of the patient. [45000]

Mr. Win Griffiths: Centrally held statistics are not robust for the years in question. The best indication of the number of ECT treatments comes from a Welsh Office-funded survey of the first 6 months of 1996. This showed that in the Bro Taf area over that period a total of 90 patients received this treatment. The mean number of treatments per patient was 6.75 per completed course of treatment.

ECT treatment may not be administered to informal patients without consent, and may only be administered to formally detained patients in very exceptional circumstances. The Mental Health Act Commission monitors the proper use of the Act, including the administration of ECT. The survey quoted above shows that in the first 3 months of 1996, in all of Wales, 161 patients commenced ECT treatment, of whom 12 received it without their consent.

Health Trust Mergers

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many and which of the proposed mergers of health trusts in Wales have been subject to objections by (a) individuals and (b) organisations affected; what consultation procedures will apply to the hearing of such objections; and what is the time scale for this process. [45155]

Mr. Win Griffiths: My right hon. Friend and I have received a number of objections, in particular, to our proposals for the creation of a single trust in Carmarthenshire and a new trust for Powys and Ceredigion. We have also received a smaller number of objections to our proposals affecting other areas of Wales. I refer my hon. Friend to my previous reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Alyn and Deeside (Mr. Jones) on 14 May 1998, Official Report, columns 159–60, in which I gave details of the number of these objections.

Formal consultation on our proposals will commence later this month and will last for three months. My right hon. Friend and I hope that many groups and individuals will take this opportunity to make their views on these matters known. We shall consider all views we receive during this formal consultation period carefully before making final decisions, which we expect to do in the autumn.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many letters he has received from (a) hon. Members and (b) others expressing opposition to the proposed merger of health trusts in Wales. [45157]

Mr. Win Griffiths: I have received over 2,800 representations in respect of our plans to restructure NHS trusts in Wales. Eighty-seven of these have been from hon. Members. I have also received over 15,000 petition signatures on the same matter. Of these views expressed, some have opposed any restructuring, while others have opposed individual options and supported alternatives. A small number have expressed full support for the process of particular proposals.

Employment

Mr. Denzil Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his estimate of public sector employment as a percentage of private sector employment in (i) 1970, (ii) 1975, (iii) 1980, (iv) 1985, (v) 1990 and (vi) 1995 in Wales. [45371]

Mr. Peter Hain: Information on public and private sector employees in Wales is available from the quarterly Labour Force Survey. The Autumn 1995 survey estimated that public sector employees as a percentage of private sector employees was 49 per cent.; there were an estimated 673,000 employees in the private sector and 331,000 in the public sector.

Comparable data for the earlier years requested are not available.

Gross Domestic Product

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish the gross domestic product per head for 1996, for each of the new unitary authorities which are being used by his Department for economic policy purposes. [45162]

Mr. Peter Hain: I will write to the right hon. Member as soon as possible and will place a copy of my reply in the Library.

Rural Areas (Social Exclusion)

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what provisions are being made for the needs of rural areas within the Social Exclusion Initiative of his Department. [45160]

Mr. Win Griffiths: The Social Exclusion Programme for Wales, which I announced on 1 May, will address social exclusion in a range of geographical and cultural settings, including rural areas.

Students

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his current estimate of the number of students in (a) further education and (b) higher education in Wales broken down for (i) North Wales and (ii) South Wales and by individual institution; and if he will make a statement. [45005]

Mr. Hain: The numbers of student enrolments for the 1997–98 academic year are shown by individual institution in the table.

Institution	Number
Further Education Enrolments[1]
Aberdare College	2,395
Afan College	2,756
Barry College	6,900
Bridgend College	8,201
Carmarthenshire College of Technology & Art	12,104
Coleg Ceredigion	2,178
Deeside College	7,996
Coleg Glan Hafren	10,162
Groseinon College	3,607
Gwent Tertiary College	28,312
Coleg Harlech	266
Coleg Llandrillo	13,018
Coleg Llysfasi	1,997
Coleg Meirion Dwyfor	2,424
Coleg Menai	9,937
Merthyr Tydfil College	3,496
Neath College	10,370
Pembrokeshire College	7,166
Pencoed College	849
Pontypridd College	8,123
Coleg Powys	5,043
St. Davids Sixth Form College	940
Swansea College	15,119
Welsh College of Horticulture	1,680
Workers Educational Association (North)	1,670
Workers Educational Association (South)	4,272
Yale College	9,798
YMCA	569
Ystrad Mynach College	5,575
University of Wales, Aberystwyth	906
University of Wales Institute Cardiff	512
University of Wales College, Newport	648
Swansea Institute of Higher Education	143

Institution	Number
University of Wales, Bangor Welsh for Adults	1,127
University of Wales, Cardiff Welsh for Adults	608
University of Glamorgan Welsh for Adults	245
North East Wales Institute	49
University of Wales, Swansea Welsh for Adults	424
Trinity College Carmarthen Welsh for Adults	22
Sponsored Institutions	395
Higher Education Enrolments[2]
University of Glamorgan	15,179
University of Wales, Aberystwyth	6,968
University of Wales, Bangor	7,726
University of Wales, Cardiff	14,555
University of Wales, Lampeter	2,398
University of Wales, Swansea	9,635
University College of Medicine	2,777
University of Wales Institute, Cardiff	7,209
University of Wales College, Newport	7,057
North East Wales Institute of Higher Education	4,520
Swansea Institute of Higher Education	3,888
Trinity College	1,730
Welsh College of Music & Drama	549
Carmarthenshire College of Technology & Art	359
Llandrillo College	155

[1] All FE enrolments in Wales at November 1997
Source:
Further Education Funding Council Wales
[2] All HE enrolments in Wales at November 1997
Source:
Higher Education Funding Council Wales

Nurses, Midwives and Health Visitors

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what functions are ascribed to the Welsh National Board for Nursing, Midwifery and Health Visiting under section 6(1)(e) of the Nurses, Midwives and Health Visitors Act 1997; and if the board receives funding in respect of these functions. [45949]

Mr. Win Griffiths: The Board is required to provide training for teachers and those intending to become teachers of nurses, midwives and health visitors and also to provide information to the public about careers in the professions of nursing, midwifery and health visiting in Wales (SI 1993/614).

Funding for this is not authorised by statute and is the subject of separate approval by the Treasury until March 1999, after which new arrangements will be introduced.

Rural Transport

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the distribution to Welsh local authorities of the additional funding for rural transport announced in the Budget. [45948]

Mr. Hain: The Welsh share of the additional funding announced in the Budget is £2.5 million in 1998–99. Of this, £2.25 million is being distributed to local authorities to provide additional funding for socially necessary bus services in rural area, with the remaining £250,000 retained centrally to be used in support of rural community transport initiatives.

A Special Grant Report will shortly be laid before the House setting out the proposed allocation of the £2.25 million to local authorities and the conditions attached to the grant. Following consultation with the Welsh Local Government Association, I intend to distribute the additional resources using a formula which is based on the population of electoral wards where the population density is less than 4 persons per hectare. The provisional allocations are:

	£
Isle of Anglesey	119,523
Gwynedd	197,250
Conwy	76,293
Denbighshire	90,764
Flintshire	107,241
Wrexham	76,471
Powys	221,080
Ceredigion	125,236
Pembrokeshire	145,130
Carmarthenshire	276,750
Swansea	58,017
Neath Port Talbot	117,660
Bridgend	91,448
The Vale of Glamorgan	85,212
Rhondda Cynon Taff	95,587
Merthyr Tydfil	29,686
Caerphilly	75,782
Blaenau Gwent	23,418
Torfaen	52,151
Monmouthshire	109,472
Newport	33,443
Cardiff	42,386

Class Sizes

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what percentage of classes in (a) primary, (b) middle and (c) secondary schools have over (i) 30, (ii) 35 and (iii) 40 pupils in each local education authority; what has been the annual percentage change in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [45458]

Mr. Hain: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 17 December 1997, Official Report, column, 204–05, in response to his question on primary school class sizes. Figures for January 1996 are the earliest available for the current local education authorities. Results from the January 1998 Schools' Census are not yet available.

There are no middle schools in Wales and no information is collected centrally about class sizes in secondary schools.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Arms Exports

Sir Peter Emery: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) how many references were made to the Restricted Enforcement Unit during the two years up to 18 February concerning breaches of regulations arising from a United Nations resolution, reinforced by British law, relating to the export of arms; [43686]

(2) how many references were made by the Foreign Office to the Restricted Enforcement Unit during the two years up to 18 February concerning breaches of regulations arising from a United Nations resolution, reinforced by British law, relating to the export of arms. [45188]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: During the two years up to and including 18 February, FCO representatives raised at meetings of the Restricted Enforcement Unit three items of information concerning possible breaches of UN arms embargoes by UK companies or individuals.

Panchen Lama

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress was made in securing the freedom of the Panchen Lama during the visit of EU ambassadors to China in May. [44234]

Mr. Fatchett [holding answer 8 June 1998]: During their visit to Tibet in May, the EU Troika Ambassadors expressed their concerns for the welfare of Gedhun Choekyi Nyima, who has been recognised by the Dalai Lama as the reincarnation of the Panchen Lama, and asked to meet him in order to confirm his well-being. The authorities of the Tibetan Autonomous Region did not permit such a meeting, but said that the boy was in good health. We shall continue to raise his case at every appropriate opportunity.

China

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the advances in human rights in China which have followed his decision not to support a resolution against China at the United Nations Commission on Human Rights. [44233]

Mr. Fatchett [holding answer 8 June 1998]: Since the EU's decision on 23 February not to support a resolution on China at the Commission on Human Rights, China has announced that it is preparing a sign the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights and has released Wang Dan, a leading dissident.

Club of Three

Mr. Cash: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the role of his Department in supporting the visit of the Minister without Portfolio to the Club of Three meeting of September 1997. [44999]

Mr. Doug Henderson: The Minister without Portfolio attended the Club of Three meeting in Munich in his Ministerial capacity, following an official visit to Bonn. The FCO provided him with background briefing for his official calls, and the Ambassador in Bonn accompanied him on these and to the Club of Three meeting, for which the Ambassador had a separate invitation.

World Cup Tickets

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what hospitality tickets are available to officials of the European Commission for the 1998 World Cup; [45171]

(2) how many world cup tickets have been purchased at what cost by European Community institutions for (a) members of staff and (b) guests; and what guidelines determine eligibility of award of tickets. [45172]

Mr. Doug Henderson: The Foreign and Commonwealth Offices does not have this information.

General Affairs Council

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the outcome of the General Affairs Council on 8 and 9 June. [45658]

Mr. Doug Henderson: The outcome is as follows:

General Affairs Council: 8–9 June 1998

1. At the General Affairs Council in Luxembourg on 8–9 June, the Council took note of the EP Resolutions, Decisions and opinions adopted in its part-session in Strasbourg from 11–15 May, and listed in document 8459/98, copies of which will be placed in the House Library as soon as they become available. The Council adopted the A points in Document 9125/98, with the exception of point 14 which had previously been agreed by the Committee of Permanent Representatives on 3 June. A copy of this document will also be placed in the House Library.
2. We provided a draft progress report on Agenda 2000 negotiations. Foreign Ministers agreed this should go to the Cardiff European Council as a basis for discussion. Some emphasised key national concerns.
3. The Presidency set out its programme for the Cardiff European Council.
4. The Council had a detailed discussion of the deteriorating situation in Kosovo. A declaration was agreed sending a firm message (including on the possibility of Chapter VII action in the UN Security Council) that the escalation in violence and reported ethnic cleansing would not be tolerated. A Common Position was also adopted banning new investments in Serbia, with agreement to adopt a regulation on a freeze of funds belonging to the FRY and Serbian Governments as soon as possible.
5. Separately, the Council approved a Joint Action providing financial support for the mission of the EU Special Representative to the FRY, Mr. Felipe Gonzalez. The Council also welcomed the results of the recent parliamentary elections in Montenegro and agreed to consider ways to provide further assistance to Montenegro.
6. The Council agreed an EU declaration on Bosnia, and to the establishment of a Consultative Task Force. Both are aimed at fostering peace and economic regeneration by helping Bosnia in its efforts toward a closer relationship with Europe. Ministers also held a working lunch with Bosnian Foreign Minister Prlic and Deputy Foreign Ministers Zivalj and Bozanic, representing all three ethnic communities in Bosnia and Herzegovina.
7. The Council agreed that the ad hoc meeting of Euro-Mediterranean Foreign Ministers in Palermo on 3–4 June had revitalised the Euro-Mediterranean Partnership. It noted that this should provide a good foundation for a successful third Euro-Mediterranean Ministerial Conference in Stuttgart in April 1999.
8. The Council had a brief discussion of Iran. Ministers welcomed the positive report of the first exploratory meeting of the EU/Iran dialogue held in Brussels on 19 May and reaffirmed their interest in resuming substantive and comprehensive talks soon.
9. The Council issued a Declaration on the nuclear tests by India and Pakistan condemning the tests; calling upon the leaders of India and Pakistan to engage urgently in dialogue on regional stability issues, including with China, and to agree Confidence Building Measures to reduce tension; and urging India and Pakistan to take early steps to adhere to international non-proliferation regimes, including signing the Comprehensive Test Ban Treaty. The Council agreed it would take all necessary measures if India and Pakistan fail to comply. Member States agreed to review the advisability of IFI lending to Pakistan. The Council asked the Commission to extend its review of India's GSP preferences to Pakistan, and withdraw its earlier request to the Commission to expedite signature of an EC/Pakistan Trade and Cooperation Agreement.

10. The Council discussed the provisions for future trade arrangements between the EU and the 71 African, Caribbean and Pacific (ACP) States. Discussions will continue in Coreper with a view to reaching agreement on the EU's negotiating mandate at the General Affairs Council on 29 June.

11. The Council welcomed political reforms announced by President Habibie of Indonesia and called for the release of remaining political prisoners. It looked forward to early rescheduling of the visit to East Timor by EU Troika Heads of Mission in Jakarta, and called for renewed commitment to the UN sponsored talks on East Timor.

12. The Council expressed its dismay at the hostilities between Ethiopia and Eritrea, and called on both sides to cease hostilities immediately and to resume peaceful negotiations. The EU stood ready to offer assistance to this effect.

13. The inaugural Cooperation Council under the terms of the Partnership and Cooperation Agreement (PCA) between the EU and Ukraine took place in the margins of the GAC on 8–9 June. Over dinner on 8 June, Ministers had a useful exchange of views on foreign policy issues of mutual interest and EU/Ukraine relations in general. On 9 June, the Council discussed the implementation of the PCA and adopted the Rules of Procedure establishing the foundations for the future work of the Cooperation Council and Committee as well as the Joint Work Programme for 1998–99.

14. The ninth Council of the European Economic Area (EEA) took place on 9 June. The Council noted with satisfaction the continued expansion of the EEA agreement to include more of the EC acquis and discussed the impact EU enlargement would have for the EEA. A political dialogue was held after the main Council session.

Legg Inquiry

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what are is the postal address, E-mail address, telephone number and fax number of Sir Thomas Legg's Inquiry. [44907]

Mr. Robin Cook: The details are:

Sir Thomas Legg KCB QC
Sierra Leone Arms Investigation
26 Old Queen Street
London SW1H 9HP
Fax 0171 222 3874
e-mail Sir Thomas Legg slai@btinternet.com

Nuclear Reprocessing

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will set out the arrangements by which articles 2(b), 3, and 4(1)a(i) of the Agreement between the United Kingdom and Japan for Co-operation in the Peaceful Uses of Nuclear Energy (Cm 3948, May 1998) will be put into effect in respect of Tokai Mura magnox spent fuel reprocessed with magnox fuel from British Nuclear Fuel reactors, at Sellafield; what segregation arrangements will be made; and if Article 12(g) will cover commercial confidentiality in respect of contractors. [44111]

Mr. Battle: I have been asked to reply.

The purpose of the new UK/Japan Agreement is to provide the necessary secure framework for ensuring that trade in civil nuclear materials and equipment is carried out only in conformity with the UK's nuclear non-proliferation obligations. In particular, it updates commitments concerning the application of safeguards and physical protection measures to nuclear material transferred between Japan and the UK.

Irradiated fuel from Tokai Mura and other safeguard magnox reactors has, since December 1986, been reprocessed in campaigns which are separate from those for unsafeguarded fuel. These safeguards arrangements for such sequential campaigns were agreed with the Euratom Safeguards Directorate in June 1986. Article 12(g) of the UK/Japan Agreement defines the term "unclassified information" as meaning information not classified as restricted, confidential, secret or top secret; such a term is used in the context of article 1(b) of the Agreement.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Millennium Compliance

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what progress her Department has made in compiling a directory of organisations offering solutions to the Millennium bug; how much each organisation is charged for an entry; and if she will make a statement. [44603]

Mrs. Roche: In conjunction with the Computing Services and Software Association, Action 2000 issued in January 1998 a Factsheet which registers over 50 companies which offer Year 2000 products or services. The register is also available on the CSSA website. The supplier must either be a member of the CSSA or have agreed to abide by the CSSA code of practice. The structure and content of this register are under review for a new edition of the Action 2000 Information Pack due for release in July. The intention is to collate additional data and to make the information available dynamically through the Action 2000 Helpdesk and Website. At this stage entry to the Register is free of charge.

A further, more detailed register of providers of Tools and Techniques has been drafted by Action 2000, initially as part of its support to Business Links but also as a major component of the revised Information Pack. This will be accessible in the same way and entry will also be free of charge.

Cloning

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will review the recommendation of the Banner Committee that an advisory standing committee be created with a remit covering broad ethical questions relating to current and future developments in the use of animals. [44069]

Mr. Battle: As I said in my reply to my hon. Friend's similar question on 15 January 1998, Official Report, column 295, we shall be giving careful consideration to this recommendation in the light of the results of the public consultation exercise on developments in the biosciences, which is now underway.

Ecology Institutes (Merlewood and Windermere)

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to the letter of 27 November from the Chief Executive of the Natural Environment Research Council to the hon. Member for Linlithgow, if she will list the new scientific opportunities arising from the merger of Merlewood and Windermere. [44046]

Mr. Battle: I am advised by NERC that the merger of the Natural Environment Research Council's (NERC) Institute of Terrestrial Ecology at Merlewood and the Institute of Freshwater Ecology at Windermere (part of NERC's Centre for Ecology and Hydrology) provides the opportunity to bring together scientists from a wider range of disciplines to pursue research in environmental microbiology, environmental chemistry, pollutant transport, surface water acidification, and environmental monitoring.

The merger will also facilitate access to workshops, chemical analytical facilities and expertise in geographical information systems.

Music (Internet)

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans she has to regulate the distribution of British music over the Internet. [44987]

Mr. Ian McCartney: In general, the law applies to material sent on-line, such as over the Internet, in the same way that it does off-line. United Kingdom copyright law already covers transmission in this way, and the UK supports work at EU and international level to ensure comparable levels of protection elsewhere.

Institute of Chartered Accountants

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will list the number of complaints she has received (a) from hon. Members and (b) from others in each of the last five years about the Institute of Chartered Accountants; and how many of these relate to their arbitration scheme. [44914]

Mr. Ian McCartney: The information is not available in the form requested; the approximate number of representations made to the Department about the Institute's role as a Recognised Statutory Body for company auditors is as follows:

	Number of cases
	MPs	Others
1994	10	—
1995	11	—
1996	6	6
1997	22	18
1998	14	16

Note:
The figures include ongoing representations from the same person on the same issue. Figures do not include duplicate copies

The Department's responsibility is for the effectiveness of the system of audit regulation. We do not know whether the underlying disputes with the Institute's members went to independent arbitration, nor is the information available from the Institute.

Comparable information is not available in connection with the Institute's responsibilities as an Insolvency recognised professional body.

Sierra Leone

Mr. Redwood: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many export licences for the sale of weapons to Sierra Leone were granted in the last 12 months. [41177]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 8 May 1998]: The Export Control Organisation's computer databases have been interrogated and the following results were obtained.

Between 2 May 1997 and 3 April 1998, one Standard Individual Export Licence was issued covering the export to Sierra Leone of goods subject to export control by being listed in Part III of Schedule 1 to the Export of Goods (Control) Order 1994, the so-called Military List. This licence covered goods controlled under entry ML1 of the legislation. It was revoked by the Secretary of State on 16 October 1997, because of the introduction of the arms embargo against Sierra Leone in accordance with UN Security Council Resolution 1132 (1997). No Open Individual Export Licences covering such exports were issued in that period.

This information does not cover Media OIELs issued during this period. Media OIELs authorise the export to all destinations of protective clothing, mainly for the protection of aid agency workers and journalists, when working in areas of conflict.

This information should be considered in light of the answer given by my hon. Friend the Minister for Small Firms, Trade and Industry, to my hon. Friend the Member for Don Valley (Caroline Flint) on 30 October 1997, Official Report, columns 870–71. For part of this period, Sierra Leone was a permitted destination on two Open General Licences:

The OGEL (Export After Exhibition: Military Goods), which covers the export after exhibition in the UK of any Military List goods except anti-personnel landmines and specially-designed components therefor; leg-irons, gangchains, shackles and electric-shock belts, specially designed for restraining human beings; portable devices designed or modified for the purpose of riot control or self-protection by the administration of an electric shock (including electric-shock batons, electric shock shields, stun guns and electric shock dart guns (tasers)) and components therefor specially designed or modified for such a purpose.

The OGEL (Military Surplus Vehicles), which covers ground vehicles and components therefor specially designed or modified for military use including trailers but excluding tanks, self-propelled guns, armed vehicles, armoured vehicles, vehicles fitted with mountings for arms, half-tracks, gun-carriers, tractors and trailers specially designed for towing or transporting ammunition or weapons systems and related load-handling equipment, mobile repair shops specially designed to service military equipment, and components specially designed or modified for military use for goods specified above.

It cannot be assumed from this that any such export to Sierra Leone actually took place. Sierra Leone was removed from both licences in accordance with Resolution 1132 on 17 October 1997.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what export licences have been granted to Sandline International in the last year. [42379]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 18 May 1998]: The Export Control Organisation's computer databases have been interrogated and the following results were obtained. Between 2 May 1997 and 26 May 1998, no Standard or Open Individual Export Licences were issued to Sandline.

This information should be considered in light of the answer given by my hon. Friend the Minister for Small Firms, Trade and Industry to my hon. Friend the Member for Don Valley (Caroline Flint) on 30 October 1997, Official Report, columns 870–871.

During this period, there were a number of Open General Export Licences (OGELs) in force. OGELs are not issued to individual exporters but instead are valid for any exporter wishing to export the goods listed to the destinations allowed, providing they meet the restrictions and conditions of the licence. Copies of all OGELs valid at any time during the period are in the Library of the House.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what contacts (a) officials and (b) ministers in her Department have had with Sandline over the last year. [42380]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 18 May 1998]: I am not aware of any contacts between my Department and Sandline International since this Government took office, prior to receipt by my office of a copy of the letter of 24 April to the Foreign Secretary from the company's legal representatives, S. J. Berwin & Co.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) when information was first placed in her red boxes about military intervention to restore the Government of President Kabbah of Sierra Leone; [42593]

(2) when she was first notified of the involvement of Sandline International in Sierra Leone; [42589]

(3) when information was first placed in her red boxes about the involvement of Sandline International in operations in Sierra Leone; [42595]

(4) when (a) she and (b) her Private Office first received reports of proposed military intervention to restore the Government of President Kabbah of Sierra Leone; [42591]

(5) when information was first placed in her red boxes about the Customs and Excise investigation into involvement of Sandline International in operations in Sierra Leone; [42594]

(6) when her Private Office was first informed of the involvement of Sandline International in operations in Sierra Leone; [42590]

(7) when she was first notified of the Customs and Excise investigation into the involvement of Sandline International in operations in Sierra Leone; [42588]

(8) when her Private Office was first notified of the Customs and Excise investigation into the involvement of Sandline International in operations in Sierra Leone; [42592]

(9) when she was first informed of the involvement of a British company in the restoration of the democratic Government in Sierra Leone. [42377]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 18 May 1998]: In relation to when I first saw the letter from Sandline's solicitors, I refer the right hon. Member to my answer to the hon. Member for Spelthorne (Mr. Wilshire) on 4 June 1998, Official Report, column 317. In relation to more general questions about Sandline, I refer the right hon. Member to the statement by the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs in the House during the debate on 18 May 1998, Official Report, columns 604–11, in which he announced the investigation by Sir Thomas Legg KCB QC into allegations about Government involvement with the supply of arms to Sierra Leone by UK citizens and firms, and said that the Terms of Reference would be placed in the Library of the House. The Foreign Secretary intends to publish the report of the investigation.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when she expects to answer the questions for answer on 18 May from the right hon. Member for Wokingham relating to Sandline and Sierra Leone, question numbers (a) 42379, (b) 42380, (c) 42588, (d) 42589, (e) 42590, (f) 42591, (g) 42592, (h) 42593, (i) 42594 and (j) 42595. [45720]

Mrs. Beckett: I have answered these today.

Social Chapter

Mr. Evans: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what representations she has received from businesses in the North West on the impact of the UK signing up to the Social Chapter. [43759]

Mr. Ian McCartney: I am not aware of having received any representations specifically from business in the North West on the impact of the UK signing up to the Social Chapter.

Unfair Dismissal

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment she has made of the impact on employment in smaller firms of proposals to reduce the qualifying period for unfair dismissal claims from two years to one year. [43789]

Mr. Ian McCartney: Reducing the qualifying period should help to promote a more flexible labour market and encourage a more committed and productive workforce. It will therefore contribute to a fair and competitive labour market which will benefit small firms as well as large.

Shipbuilders

Dr. Whitehead: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list those United Kingdom shipbuilders which have been in receipt of regional selective assistance in each of the last five years; and what is the value of the grants paid in each case. [45101]

Mrs. Roche: There have been no payments of RSA to UK shipbuilders over this period.

HEALTH

Health and Social Services (Co-operation)

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps the Government have taken to promote co-operation between social care professionals and health care professionals. [44837]

Mr. Boateng: The Department encourages joint training between health and social services and fosters projects for staff from both services to share practice placements in the early years of training. We expect that the Social Services white paper, due in the summer, will further develop the theme of joint training. The proposed establishment of National Training Organisations in both the health and social care sectors offers an additional opportunity for working together.

The National Health Service White Paper calls for co-operation between the services on service delivery. In particular the establishment of Primary Care Groups, from 1 April 1999, will enable primary care and social services to call on their different local knowledge and agree programmes with local people to improve services for users, thereby ensuring closer working and cooperation between health and social care professionals and the community served by the group.

Health Targets

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what, representations he has received alleging agism in the Government's proposed targets to reduce death from heart disease, strokes and cancer among the under 65s. [45011]

Ms Jowell: We have received a substantial number of representations from both organisations and individuals suggesting extending the age limit for the targets on coronary heart disease, stroke and cancers, proposed in "Our Healthier Nation", to people aged 65 and over. These representations will receive careful consideration in the formulation of our health strategy for England, which will be outlined in a White Paper later this year.

Smoking

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the estimated gross cost of anti-smoking campaigns in England aimed at children and young people has been since 1988; and what assessment he has made of the impact of the campaigns on teenage (a) boys and (b) girls. [44018]

Ms Jowell: The gross cost of anti-smoking campaigns in England aimed at children and young people, each year since 1988 is currently being looked into and I shall write to my hon. Friend with further information, as soon as it is available.

However, all of the Government's anti-smoking campaigns are continually evaluated. The Health Education Authority make qualitative and quantitative assessments of the campaigns and the Office for National Statistics track the impact of the campaigns by monitoring national prevalence figures.

The assessments of previous campaigns will be considered as preparations continue for the forthcoming Tobacco Control White Paper.

Surplus NHS Property

Ms Jenny Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the value for money criteria used by the NHS Executive in assessing bids for the development of former hospital sites. [44964]

Mr. Milburn: Surplus National Health Service land is sold on the open market in accordance with the advice contained in the Department's Estatecode, which follows Her Majesty's Treasury rules. The criteria are that surplus NHS property should be sold as quickly as possible, at the best price which can reasonably be obtained on the open market. In order to obtain the best price, consideration should be given to obtaining planning permission for the highest value alternative use. All proceeds from sales are re-invested in the NHS.

The NHS employs, both in-house and externally, professionally qualified valuers to advise on disposal methods; to advise on which offers represent best value for money for the NHS (usually the highest bid); and to obtain information on the creditworthiness of any bidder.

Children (Employment Byelaw)

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the new Model Byelaw on the Employment of Children will be published. [45301]

Mr. Boateng: The new model byelaw on the employment of children was issued to all relevant local authorities, and copied to interested parties, on 15 April 1998.

Viagra

Mrs. Browning: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he intends to licence Viagra under section 58 of the Medicines Act 1968. [45360]

Ms Jowell: The European Agency for the Evaluation of Medicinal Products is currently considering an application for a European marketing authorisation for this product. Decisions on whether to grant marketing authorisations for such products are taken by the European Commission after consultation with the competent authorities of the Member States. The United Kingdom is not, therefore, in a position to consider any application for a national authorisation under Section 58 of the Medicines Act 1968.

Podiatric Services

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make it his policy to encourage health authorities to draw up and adopt footcare strategies. [45420]

Mr. Boateng: We already encourage health authorities to give priority to services that will enable people to live as independently as possible in their own homes or in homely settings in the community. We are reviewing the provision of podiatric services to identify a strategy that will take into account examples of good practice and promote the provision of a cost-effective service.

Prescribing

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 17 November 1997, Official Report, column 60, concerning administration of medication, when the review of the prescribing, supply and administration of medicines in nursing and residential care homes will be concluded and submitted to Ministers. [45430]

Mr. Milburn: The review of prescribing, supply and administration of medicines, chaired by Dr. June Crown, is currently developing its second and final report which is expected to be submitted to Ministers later this summer. The review is not focused on nursing and residential care homes. It is looking more broadly at the current arrangements under which medicines are prescribed, supplied and administered, and considering whether health professionals inside and outside the National Health Service might take on new responsibilities with regard to those functions.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 17 November 1997, Official Report, column 60, concerning information technology and prescribing, over what period PRODIGY is to be evaluated; and when decisions will be made about its extension to all general practitioner practices. [45429]

Mr. Milburn: The fieldwork for phase I of PRODIGY was carried out from October 1995 to April 1996, and that for phase II from April 1997 to September 1997. The phase I final report has been completed and will be published shortly. Decisions will be made about the future of the project when the findings from both phases have been carefully considered.

Hospital Readmissions

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 23 March 1998, Official Report, columns 45–48, concerning hospital readmissions, if he will publish the equivalent figures for the last quarter of 1997–98; and if he will update the table to show the percentage change from one quarter to the next since April 1996. [45173]

Mr. Milburn: The number of patients aged 75 and over who were readmitted as an emergency within 28 days of discharge for each quarter since April 1996 is shown in table 1. Table 2 shows the per cent. change from one quarter to the next since April 1996.

Table 1: The number of patients aged 75 and over who were readmitted to hospital as an emergency within 28 days of discharge for each quarter since April 1996

	1996–97				1997–98
	Quarter 1	Quarter 2	Quarter 3	Quarter 4	Quarter 1	Quarter 2	Quarter 3	Quarter 4
Northern and Yorkshire	2,154	3,283	3,380	3,713	3,691	3,147	3,712	3,802
Trent	2,916	2,785	2,752	3,031	3,056	3,173	2,973	2,932
Anglia and Oxford	1,309	1,875	2,512	2,258	2,086	2,013	2,273	2,371
North Thames	1,614	2,470	2,730	2,183	3,021	2,569	2,948	3,270
South Thames	3,645	3,107	3,190	4,251	4,007	3,563	3,871	4,029
South and West	3,637	3,511	3,285	3,125	3,093	3,389	3,481	3,496
West Midlands	792	1,650	1,809	1,894	2,087	2,108	2,241	1,809
North West	2,537	2,767	3,195	3,170	3,157	3,125	2,907	3,333
England	18,604	21,448	22,853	23,625	24,198	23,087	24,406	25,042

Table 2: The per cent. change on the previous quarter in the number of patients aged 75 and over who were readmitted to hospital as an emergency within 28 days of discharge

Per cent.

	1996–97			1997–98
	Quarter 2	Quarter 3	Quarter 4	Quarter 1	Quarter 2	Quarter 3	Quarter 4
Northern and Yorkshire	52.4	3.0	9.9	–0.6	–14.7	18.0	2.4
Trent	–4.5	–1.2	10.1	0.8	3.8	–6.3	–1.4
Anglia and Oxford	43.2	34.0	–10.1	–7.6	–3.5	12.9	4.3
North Thames	53.0	10.5	–20.0	38.4	–15.0	14.8	10.9
South Thames	–14.8	2.7	33.3	–5.7	–11.1	8.6	4.1
South and West	–3.5	–6.4	–4.9	–1.0	9.6	2.7	0.4
West Midlands	108.3	9.6	4.7	10.2	1.0	6.3	–19.3
North West	9.1	15.5	–0.8	–0.4	–1.0	–7.0	14.7
England	15.3	6.6	3.4	2.4	–4.6	5.7	2.6

Direct Payments

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 23 March 1998, Official Report, column 46, if he will publish the terms of reference and timetable for his Department's review of scope for extending direct payments to people over 65 years of age; and what arrangements have been made to consult older people in the course of the review. [45175]

Mr. Boateng: I announced a review of direct payments on 24 April 1998, whose scope and timetable were set out in Local Authority Social Services Letter (98)7, copies of which are available in the Library. Letters were sent inviting comments from various interested bodies and individuals, including voluntary groups such as Age Concern and Help the Aged.

Local Authorities (Pilot Schemes)

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the pilot schemes announced since 1 May by his Department that involve local authorities in a lead or partnership capacity; if he will list each of the local authorities involved in each case; and what revenue and capital funding each local authority will receive through the pilot in (i) 1997–98, (ii) 1998–99, (iii) 1999–2000 and (iv) 2000–2001. [45334]

Mr. Boateng: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State announced the first wave of successful Health Action Zone pilots on 31 March 1998, Official Report, columns 1033–36. These are listed in Table 1. We have not yet announced the funding arrangements.

Table 1:

First Wave HAZs	Local authorities
Plymouth	Plymouth City Council
East London and the City	The Corporation of London London Borough of Hackney London Borough of Newham London Borough of Tower Hamlets
Manchester and Salford and Trafford	Manchester City Council Salford City Council Trafford Metropolitan Borough Council
Sandwell	Sandwell Metropolitan Borough Council
Bradford	Bradford Metropolitan Borough Council
Northumberland	Northumberland County Council Berwick District Council Alnwick District Council Castle Morpeth District Council Wansbeck District Council Blyth Valley District Council Tynedale District Council
Tyne and Wear	Gateshead Metropolitan District Council Sunderland City Council Newcastle City Council North Tyneside Metropolitan District Council
Lambeth, Southwark and Lewisham	London Borough of Lambeth London Borough of Southwark London Borough of Lewisham
Luton	Luton Borough Council
South Yorkshire Coalfields	Barnsley Metropolitan Borough Council Doncaster Metropolitan Borough Council Rotherham Metropolitan Borough Council
North Cumbria	Allerdale Borough Council Copeland Borough Council Carlisle City Council Cumbria County Council Eden District Council

Twelve of the thirty-five Best Value pilots, which started in April 1998, have a personal social services element. Table two lists the PSS pilots, which are expected to be self-financing. Successful bids were announced by the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions which has the lead on Best Value in local government.

Table 2:

Authority	Subject Area
Birmingham	Services for the elderly
Bradford	Home care and domiciliary services; youth justice
Cumbria	Residential facilities; day care and home care
Exeter	Community care
Greenwich	Domiciliary care
Harrow	Domiciliary care
Leeds	Social services
Lincolnshire	Children in care; home care
Northamptonshire	Residential care for the elderly
Portsmouth	Social services
Redcar	Occupational therapy
Sunderland	Youth justice; After care

My hon. Friend the Minister for Public Health launched the Health Schools Initiative on 14 May 1998. Eight pilot health education partnerships will each receive £150,000 from the Healthy Schools Initiative. The partnerships are:

Cornwall

Doncaster

Durham

Hounslow

Manchester

Norfolk

Staffordshire

West Sussex.

Hospital Ventilation Systems

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to the letter of 21 October 1997 from the Minister of State, the hon. Member for Darlington (Mr. Milburn), to the hon. Member for Linlithgow, POH (2) 5437/17, what monitoring he has carried out of ventilation systems in hospitals with regard to bacteria testing. [44068]

Ms Jowell: The responsibility for monitoring ventilation systems in hospitals with regard to bacteria testing, in line with regulation, guidance, and in accordance with well developed good practice principles, is determined locally by National Health Service trusts.

Organ Transplants

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to the oral answer of 20 May 1997, Official Report, column 505, concerning shortages of organs, what was the outcome of the talks with the United Kingdom Transplant Support Service Authority, the medical profession, the British Kidney Patients' Association and the National Kidney Federation; and what are the latest figures for organ shortage. [44070]

Ms Jowell: A publicity committee, including clinicians and people from the relevant voluntary organisations, has been set up to help the Department develop a new organ donation publicity campaign to start in the autumn. We are watching with interest a postal campaign being conducted by the British Kidney Patients Association. My noble Friend the Minister of State, Department of Health, Baroness Jay of Paddington, had discussions recently with the newly appointed chairman of the United Kingdom Transplant Support Service Authority (UKTSSA) who is giving urgent consideration to this problem with health officials. A review of UKTSSA is due this year. We will continue to consider options for the way forward in organ transplantation, working with the professional and voluntary organisations involved.

2,788 solid organ transplants were performed in the United Kingdom in 1997, of which 1,523 involved the transplantation of kidneys. At the end of May 1998, 6,474 people were awaiting organs, 5,684 of them for kidney transplants.

Health Authority and Trust Boards

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) when he last met representatives of health authorities and National Health Service trusts to discuss matters relating to the appointment of chairpersons and non-executive directors to these organisations; [45279]

(2) what guidance he has issued to health authorities and NHS trust boards on the appointment of chairpersons and non-executive directors to health authorities and trusts; [45281]

(3) what representations he has received from hon. Members and others regarding the appointment of chairpersons and non-executive directors to health authorities and NHS trust boards. [45280]

Mr. Milburn: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has not issued any guidance to health authorities and National Health Service trusts on appointments as he is responsible for the appointment of chairmen and non-executive members to health authority and trust boards. However, details of our new procedures for the appointment of non-executives and chairmen to trust and health authority boards are available in the Library. The Secretary of State has regular meetings with representatives of health authorities and NHS trusts at which the appointments process, among other issues, is discussed. Since we took office we have received a number of letters from hon. Members and others about different aspects of the NHS appointments process. We have also received over 1,400 recommendations from hon. Members alone in response to our requests for nominations of people to serve on the boards of NHS bodies.

Dr. Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his oral answer to the hon. Member for Cheadle (Mr. Day) of 2 June 1998, Official Report, columns 157–58, if he will list the Labour hon. Members who did not reply to his letter requesting nominations for trust boards last year. [44910]

Mr. Milburn: The overall picture for nominations by hon. Members for membership of National Health Service trust boards in the 1997 round of appointments is as follows:

	Labour	Conservative	Liberal Democrat
MPs invited to submit nominations	308	162	33
MPs submitting nominations	200	52	16
Nominations received	714	135	68
Per cent. MPs submitting nominations	64.9	32.1	48.5
Average nominations per MP	2.3	0.8	2.1

Hon. Members were invited to submit nominations where vacancies were due to arise at trusts which served their constituencies.

Hospital Services (London)

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has for a further review of hospital services in South West London. [45268]

Mr. Milburn: A review of burns and plastics currently provided at Queen Mary's Hospital, Roehampton has been completed and following objections by the Wandsworth Community Health Council, we are considering Merton, Sutton and Wandsworth Health Authority's recommendations.

Following the changes to services provided at Queen Mary's, Roehampton and the publication of the White Paper "The New NHS" a further review is underway on the configuration of services currently provided at the following trusts: Merton and Sutton Community National Health Service Trust; Wandsworth Community NHS Trust; Teddington Memorial NHS Trust; and Richmond, Twickenham and Roehampton NHS Trust.

A strategic review has also been initiated by the chairman and chief executives of the six south west London acute trusts and the two south west London health authorities to determine how the trusts can work together to improve health services and make best use of available resources.

Any major changes to health services in the area will be subject to public consideration.

NHS Ambulances

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the typical mileage covered by an NHS ambulance after it has been in service for seven years. [45332]

Mr. Milburn: Owing to the wide variations in conditions between different Ambulance National Health Service trusts, there is no typical mileage.

Paediatric Cardiac Services (Bristol)

Mrs. Browning: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 4 June 1998, Official Report, column 337, concerning paediatric cardiac surgery services at the United Bristol Healthcare NHS Trust, if a public inquiry is one of the options being considered. [45377]

Mr. Milburn: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave on 4 June 1998, Official Report, column 337.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Access-to-work Scheme

15. Mr. Russell Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of the access-to-work scheme. [43770]

Mr. Alan Howarth: Independent research into the effectiveness of the Access to Work programme was carried out in 1995 and in 1997. Reports of the research have been published.

Sixth-form Colleges

19. Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on the Government's future funding for sixth-form colleges. [43774]

Mr. Byers: This Government have already announced an additional £100 million for the further education sector, including sixth-form colleges, over and above the plans of the previous Government for 1998–99. Funding for 1999–2000 and beyond will be announced later in the year.

21. Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will visit Godalming and Farnham sixth form colleges to discuss funding of sixth-form colleges. [43776]

Mr. Byers: My right hon. Friend presently has no plans to do so.

Drug Misuse

20. Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what steps his Department has taken to provide information to primary schools on the dangers of drug misuse. [43775]

Ms Estelle Morris: Certain aspects of drug education remain a statutory requirement of the National Curriculum at all key stages, including the primary key stages. In support of the Government's recently published new 10-year anti-drugs strategy, the Department will be issuing further guidance on the provision of drug education to teachers, youth workers and other professionals later this year. The guidance will outline the vital role that primary schools can play in the very early stages of a child's school career in concentrating on the development of the skills they need to resist drugs before they are drawn into experimentation.

Higher Education (Access)

23. Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to increase the opportunities for people to go on to higher education. [43779]

Ms Estelle Morris: The Government are committed to the principle that anyone who has the capability for higher education should have the opportunity to benefit from it. The funding package for higher education for 1998–99 includes £4 million to enable a start to be made on resuming growth at sub-degree level. Plans for later years will be announced in the light of the outcome of the Comprehensive Spending Review.

New Deal

24. Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what will be the nature of the help offered to unemployed people aged over 25 years in the pilot schemes announced in the Budget. [43780]

Mr. Andrew Smith: The New Deal pilots for unemployed people aged 25 and over will provide help and support for adults who have been unemployed for a year or more. The pilot provision will be individually tailored, and will give participants a range of help to get them back to work, including: a job with an employer supported by trial periods and an employment subsidy; job-related training; help into self-employment; and work in the voluntary sector. The Department is currently consulting widely on the details of the provision.

28. Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on progress on the new deal in the pathfinder areas. [43784]

Mr. Andrew Smith: It is, of course, early days for this ambitious undertaking, but I am encouraged by the progress in the New Deal Pathfinder areas which started on 5 January. 22,851 clients have been invited to initial Gateway interview.

Of those who have left the Gateway;

1,176 have started unsubsidised jobs;

1,501 have started subsidised jobs;

955 have started on the Full Time Education and Training Option;

258 have started on the Voluntary Sector;

241 have started on the Environment Task Force.

New Deal was launched nationally on 6 April and early results are equally encouraging.

Further Education (East Sussex)

25. Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on his Department's plans for the further education sector in East Sussex. [43781]

Mr. Byers: For the 1997–98 and 1998–99 financial years, East Sussex has received capital funding of some £23 million from Annual Capital rounds and the New Deal for Schools to support building improvements at its schools. Applications have been submitted in response to the Secretary of State's recent announcement of an extra £90 million to improve heating systems, remove outside toilets and reduce infant class sizes. We hope to announce decisions on this latest initiative later this month.

In England, the New Deal for Schools has enabled capital projects to proceed worth £115 million in 1997–98 and over £500 million in 1998–99. There are still three further phases of New Deal for Schools to come, by the end of which the Government expect that an extra £2 billion will have been spent on capital projects at schools.

School Exclusions and Truancy

26. Ms Dari Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on the publication of the social exclusion unit's first report on school exclusions and truancy. [43782]

Ms Estelle Morris: The report has highlighted the devastating effects of truancy and exclusions.

We are taking urgent action to implement the report's recommendations. These include new targets for reductions in truancy and exclusion; new financial incentives to schools to prevent exclusion; incentives to admit children excluded from other schools, and new statutory guidance to prevent schools from excluding for trivial reasons.

30. Mr. Blizzard: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what measures he is taking to reduce truancy and exclusions in schools. [43786]

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what measures he is taking to reduce school exclusions and truancy. [43754]

Ms Estelle Morris: We are implementing the wide-ranging recommendations in the recently published report on Truancy and School Exclusion. A copy of this report has been placed in the Libraries.

My hon. Friend the Minister for School Standards will chair a cross-departmental Task Force in order to make swift progress.

Education Action Zones

27. Mr. Hope: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on the progress made in developing education action zones. [43783]

Mr. Byers: The Department has now completed its round of visits to those proposals that are candidates for the 12 education action zones to start in September 1998 and the 13 to start in January 1999. We expect to make an announcement later this month.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment he has made of the potential of education action zones for raising standards in deprived areas. [43952]

Mr. Byers: Education Action Zones are a key part of the Government's strategy to drive up standards in schools. They will allow groups of schools in deprived areas to work in partnership with others to provide a better education for their pupils. They will test new ways of delivering that service.

After-school Clubs

31. Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on the Government's strategy for encouraging after-school clubs in rural areas. [43787]

Mr. Alan Howarth: Our aim is to ensure good quality, affordable childcare for children aged up to 14 in every neighbourhood. We recognise that there may be particular problems in rural areas. The Green Paper, 'Meeting the Childcare Challenge' asks whether there are areas of the country which particularly require attention under the strategy.

Independent Schools

32. Jackie Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to change the regulatory and inspection regime for independent boarding schools; and if he will make a statement. [43788]

Mr. Byers: All independent boarding schools are monitored to check compliance with their statutory duties to provide satisfactory standards of premises, accommodation, instruction, staffing, and pupil welfare. Following the consultations on Sir William Utting's report on safeguards for children living away from home, we will be announcing our plans to improve these arrangements.

Literacy

Gillian Merron: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what progress has been made in implementing the Government's literacy strategy in primary schools. [43758]

Mr. Goggins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what progress has been made in implementing the Government's literacy strategy in primary schools. [43777]

Mr. Byers: Since the beginning of the year, we have agreed literacy targets for 11 year olds by 2002 with every LEA in the country; allocated £59 million of Standards Funding to support training and development at LEA and school level; produced a detailed scheme of work for teaching literacy—300,000 copies have been distributed since the end of March to meet demand from schools; and prepared and distributed distance learning materials to every primary school in England. These materials will support the INSET training all primary schools will devote to literacy in the next school year.

Over 300 LEA appointed literacy consultants have been trained, and every primary school will be trained this term on the management of literacy at school level.

Education Authority Funding

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make arrangements to meet representatives of the E8 group of least-funded education authorities. [43785]

Mr. Byers: I have agreed to meet representatives from the E8 group of education authorities at a date to be arranged in due course.

Schoolchildren (Farm Visits)

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what guidance his Department has issued to schools and local authorities regarding visits to farms by schools. [45282]

Ms Estelle Morris: The Department wrote to schools and local education authorities in June 1997 with a checklist of the precautions they should take to ensure pupils' health and safety during visits to farms. A further reminder appears in the Department's more widely ranging draft guidance in The Health and Safety of Pupils on Visits: A Good Practice Guide, on which we are currently consulting. We intend to publish the final version for schools this autumn. The Department was also involved in the preparation of Avoiding Ill Health at Open Farms: Advice to Teachers, an information sheet recently published by the Health and Safety Executive.

Pre-school Groups

Miss Melanie Johnson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on the provision of interim funds for pre-school groups threatened with closure. [43764]

Ms Estelle Morris: Following discussions with the Pre-school Learning Alliance and other organisations, we shall shortly announce how eligible pre-schools and playgroups can apply for grant.

New Deal (Young People)

Ms Blears: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what progress he is making in securing the involvement of employers in the new deal for the young unemployed. [43763]

Mr. Andrew Smith: We are making excellent progress. I am pleased to announce that over 10,100 employers have now signed New Deal employer agreements, of which 128 are leading national employers, covering over 400 subsidiary businesses.

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many participants in the New Deal for 18 to 24 year olds there were in each of the four categories available in each of the pilot areas. [43368]

Mr. Andrew Smith: On the 27 May, I made public the latest statistical data for the Pathfinder areas, for the period 5 January to 31 March 1998. This information has been placed in the Library. It is, of course, early days for this ambitious undertaking, but I am encouraged by the progress in the New Deal Pathfinder areas.

University Applications

Mr. Cranston: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on the latest university applications figures. [43750]

Dr. Howells: The latest figures will be published tomorrow. I expect them to confirm that the gap between last year's and this year's applicant numbers has been narrowing and that the number of young home applicants is running above the 1997 level. This is a welcome sign that many prospective students and their parents now understand the fairness of our proposals.

Accountancy Students

Mr. Pearson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how much was spent by the Further Education Funding Council in 1997–98 in support of students studying for accountancy qualifications. [43432]

Dr. Howells: In 1995–96, the latest year for which information is available, total expenditure by the Council in support of students studying for accountancy qualifications was £34 million.

Mr. Pearson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the current unit cost of providing Further Education Funding Council supported training for the (a) CIMA and (b) ACCA accounting qualifications. [43356]

Dr. Howells: In 1995–96, the latest year for which information is available, the Further Education Funding Council provided an average of £610 in support of CIMA accountancy qualifications and an average of £630 in support of ACCA accountancy qualifications.

Training and Enterprise Councils

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what steps he is taking to ensure TECs are accountable for their spending [43112]

Dr. Howells: As private companies delivering public services, TECs have a responsibility to be fully accountable organisations. We believe the arrangements we have put in place, including those in the TEC contract, provide a sound basis for accounting for public funds spent through TECs. As part of the review of the future role of TECs, which the Secretary of State announced on 13 May, we will be looking at the way we fund and contract with TECs to ensure that the funding system properly supports the achievement of our objectives and provides best possible value for money.

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what research his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated into the role of (i) monitoring systems, (ii) evaluation and (iii) performance indicators to measure the efficiency and effectiveness of TECs; and if he will make a statement. [43110]

Dr. Howells: DfEE has implemented a research and evaluation programme on TECs as policy delivery mechanisms. Studies have been commissioned on the role of TEC Boards, relationships with stakeholders, employers' views of TECs and their services, use of local flexibility and discretionary funding. These are available in the House of Commons library. Through its monitoring systems, the Department receives monthly information on TEC programmes. Performance indicators are publicised each year on a number of measures of outcomes for trainees, including on equal opportunities.

Mr. Healey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when he expects to issue new strategic guidance to TECs. [42677]

Dr. Howells: The Government plan to issue new Strategic Guidance to TECs in the autumn.

School Inspections

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many schools in England were placed into the special measures category following OFSTED inspections in 1997. [44697]

Mr. Byers: In 1997, 242 schools in England were judged by HMCI to require special measures. Five of those schools no longer require special measures and five have been closed.

Special Educational Needs

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many referrals since 1 September 1994 have been made to his Department under section 99 of the Education Act 1993 and section 497 of the Education 1996 regarding failure of local education authorities to discharge their statutory duties towards children with special educational needs; and in how many cases action has been taken by his Department on behalf of parents which has resulted in local education authorities discharging their legal obligations. [45014]

Ms Estelle Morris: Since 1994, the Department has received annually some 1,500 letters from parents about special educational provision for their child. Few specify whether they are making a formal complaint under the legislation mentioned; some are complaints about a school rather than an LEA; but in every case the Department investigates the parent's concerns until it is clear either that there is no breach of a statutory duty, or appropriate remedial action has been taken, in some cases following a formal direction by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State.

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many children in Cumbria were statemented; and what was the total funding available for their needs in each of the last 10 years. [44863]

Ms Estelle Morris: The number of statements maintained by Cumbria in January of each year was as follows:

Statements maintained in January by Cumbria—1989–1997

Year	Amount
1989	1,510
1990	1,511
1991	1,708
1992	2,049
1993	2,076
1994	2,506
1995	2,660
1996	2,874
1997	2,642

Figures are taken from Cumbria Local Education Authority's returns to the Department. They include all pupils statemented by Cumbria LEA, including those placed outside Cumbria, and exclude pupils with statements maintained by other LEAs who are in Cumbria. Figures before January 1989 are not readily available.

Expenditure information is not available on a consistent basis for this period. In 1995–96, the most recent year for which Cumbria have supplied full information, their net expenditure on provision in support of pupils with statements was £11,078,000.

Further Education Funding

Mr. Michael J. Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what representations have been received supporting single value funding for full-time students aged 16 to 19 years. [43682]

Dr. Howells: We have received representations supporting greater equity of funding from the Further Education Sector, and right hon. Members and hon. Members.

Wheelchair Users (Welfare to Work)

Mr. Berry: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) what inter-departmental meetings have been held to consider how severely-disabled people can be enabled to participate in Welfare to Work through having their clinically-assessed needs for indoor/outdoor powered wheelchairs met; [43372]

(2) what action his Department is taking to ensure that severely disabled people, with clinically-assessed needs for indoor and outdoor powered wheelchairs have these needs met to enable them to participate in Welfare to Work. [43373]

Mr. Alan Howarth: The Department has close contact with the Department of Health on a range of issues including the development of the New Deal for Disabled People.

Clinically assessed need for severely disabled people to have access to indoor/outdoor powered wheelchairs is a matter for the Department of Health. Between 1996 and 2000, the Department of Health is making an additional £50 million available to NHS wheelchair services to enable them to provide electrically powered indoor/outdoor wheelchairs for those severely disabled people who can benefit from them.

This, together with Access to Work, will help people who need such wheelchairs in order to lead a full working and independent life.

Schools (Cumbria)

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what estimate he has made of (a) the extra number of teachers which will be required in Cumbria in order to reduce all class sizes to 30 and (b) the consequent funding required in Cumbria over the next three years. [44862]

Mr. Byers: Cumbria education authority has been allocated £146,000 to keep 600 infant pupils out of classes over 30 from this September. For future years, the LEA will have to submit to the Secretary of State in the autumn an implementation plan setting out, among other things, the number of extra teachers needed to reduce infant class sizes in the schools in its area by September 2001. Funding for the authority to reduce class sizes in those years will be determined in due course.

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment which schools in Cumbria did not submit (a) papers and (b) results for the (i) Key Stage 2 tests and (ii) Key Stage 3 tests in 1997. [44864]

Ms Estelle Morris: All maintained mainstream schools in Cumbria submitted 1997 Key Stage 2 and Key Stage 3 National Curriculum Assessment results. It is not possible to determine the number of special schools which will not submit results, as it is impossible to differentiate between those schools whose pupils were all disapplied from the National Curriculum Assessments, and therefore had no results to return, and those schools which chose not to return results. Participation by independent schools in the National Curriculum Assessment tests is voluntary and, therefore, they have not been included in this analysis. It is not possible to differentiate between results and papers.

Graduates

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what estimate he has made of the number of people who will graduate from United Kingdom universities and places of higher education in 1998. [44696]

Dr. Howells: Our latest published forecasts of the annual numbers of new first-degree graduates were reproduced in Chart 3.1, Report 7 of 'Higher Education in the Learning Society' produced by The National Committee of Inquiry into Higher Education in July 1997. The Department produces forecasts of graduates from British institutions only.

It is estimated that around 230,000 home domiciled students will graduate from British higher education institutions in academic year 1997–98.

Further Education

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many students currently attend further education colleges (a) full-time and (b) part-time. [44693]

Dr. Howells: Provisional figures for 1997 are 736,800 full-time and 1,670,000 part-time students studying on 1 November 1997 in further education colleges in England.

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to end the incorporated status of further education colleges. [44695]

Dr. Howells: None.

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many local education authorities have discontinued discretionary awards to further education college students. [44798]

Dr. Howells: The latest available information on discretionary awards made by local education authorities in England and Wales to further education students is for academic year 1996–97. Provisional information indicates that four authorities did not make any discretionary awards to further education students and a further two made no new awards. In addition, four authorities were unable to supply full information.

School Leavers

Yvette Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what percentage of 18 year olds leaving further education entered (a) full-time or part-time education, (b) job-related training (Government or employer-based), (c) employment without a training element and (d) unemployment in (i) England and (ii) Wakefield Local Education Authority area in each year since 1988. [44288]

Dr. Howells: The proportion of all 18 year olds in the given categories are shown in the table. It is not possible to indicate how many of these had previously been in further education, post-16 schooling or other routes. Information on 18 year olds in Wakefield could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Participation and labour market status of 18 year olds, England, end 1988 to end 1996

Percentage

	End 1988	End 1989	End 1990	End 1991	End 1992	End 1993	End 1994	End 1995	End 1996
England
Full-time education[1]	19	21	24	28	33	37	38	39	38
Part-time education or training excluding job related training	6	6	6	7	8	8	8	8	9
Job-related training[2]	16	16	16	15	14	14	13	13	13
of which full-time education[3]	0	0	0	0	0	0	1	1	0
of which part-time education	8	9	9	8	7	6	5	4	4
Employment without training or study	51	48	40	34	28	26	28	27	28
ILO unemployment without training or study	6	6	10	10	12	11	8	9	7
Economically inactive without training or study[4]	2	4	5	6	5	5	5	4	6

[1] Includes those in education who are also in job related training, unemployment or inactive. The size of the overlap between education and job related training is shown at[3]
[2] Includes all in Government-supported training and employer funded training; including the overlap with those in full-time education
[3] Also shown in the full-time education category
[4] Those not in employment nor seeking work on the ILO unemployment definition
Sources:
Education Censuses, TECs' Management Information Database, the Trainee Databases and the Labour Force Survey

Yvette Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what percentage of school leavers at age 16 years entered (a) full-time or part-time education, (b) job-related training (Government or employer-based), (c) employment without a training element and (d) unemployment in (i) England and (ii) Wakefield Local Education Authority area in each year since 1988. [44287]

Dr. Howells: The proportion of 16 year olds in each category is shown in the table.

Participation of 16 year olds, England, end 1988 to 1996

Percentage

	End 1988	End 1989	End 1990	End 1991	End 1992	End 1993	End 1994	End 1995	End 1996
England
Full-time education[1]	52	55	59	67	70	73	71	71	70
Part-time education and training excluding job related training	5	4	3	3	3	3	5	4	5
Job-related training[2]	26	26	22	19	16	14	14	13	12
of which full-time education[3]	2	2	2	2	1	1	2	1	1
of which part-time education	13	12	10	7	6	5	4	3	3
Employment without training or study	14	12	8	5	6	5	7	6	7
ILO unemployment without training or study	3	3	5	7	5	4	3	4	5
Economically inactive without training or study[4]	2	3	4	2	2	2	2	3	2

Participation of 16 year olds, England, end 1988 to 1996

Percentage

	End 1988	End 1989	End 1990	End 1991	End 1992	End 1993	End 1994	End 1995	End 1996
Wakefield LEA
Full-time education	52	55	53	59	65	66	65	67	[5]—
Part-time education	11	10	10	8	7	7	8	4	[5]—
Government supported training	[5]—	[5]—	[5]—	[5]—	[5]—	[5]—	16	14	[5]—

[1] Includes those in education who are also in job related training, unemployment or inactive. The size of the overlap between education and job related training is shown at footnote 3.
[2] Includes all in Government-supported training and employer-funded training; including the overlap with those in full-time education.
[3] Also shown in the full-time education category
[4] Those not in employment nor seeking work on the ILO unemployment definition
[5] Not available
Sources:
Education Censuses, TECs' Management Information Database, the Trainee Databases and the Labour Force Survey

Teachers' Pay

Mr. Flight: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what factors led his Department to stage the pay award for teachers for 1998–99; and if he will make a statement. [44374]

Mr. Byers: The Government have taken a common approach to staging for all the pay review body group's recommendations this year. Public Sector pay settlements need to be fair, affordable within existing spending plans, consistent with the good inflation prospects, and responsible in terms of a general approach to pay throughout the economy that will contribute to higher growth and more jobs.

Veterinary Medicine

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many places there are for students of veterinary medicine in each university providing such courses; how many students currently studying on such courses are from (a) the United Kingdom, (b) the EU and (c) overseas; what estimate he has made of the number of graduates in veterinary science required in the United Kingdom in each of the next four years; and what assessment he has made of the extent to which adequate numbers of veterinary surgeons will qualify in each of the next four years to meet demand. [44558]

Dr. Howells: The number of students on first degree veterinary medicine courses in the UK for 1997–98 is given in the table.

	Home	EU	Overseas	Total
Nene College	7	1	0	8
The University of Bristol	333	1	22	356
The University of Cambridge	373	9	2	384
The University of Liverpool	339	8	70	417
The Royal Veterinary College	458	6	62	526
University of Edinburgh	381	15	49	445
University of Glasgow	372	9	28	409
Total	2,263	49	233	2,545

The Government do not assess requirements for veterinary student places. Under the current funding arrangements, institutions are free to respond to market forces when deciding which courses they will offer and how many students they will enrol on each programme. However, the Royal College of Veterinary Students, the British Veterinary Association and the Society of Practising Veterinary Surgeons are jointly conducting a survey of the manpower requirements of the profession, the results of which are expected soon.

Aggregated Schools Budget (Hereford and Worcester)

Mr. Michael J. Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what was the aggregated schools budget for (a) 1992–93, (b) 1993–94, (c) 1995–96, (d) 1996–97 and (e) 1996–97 for Hereford and Worcester Local Education Authority (i) in cash terms and (ii) at 1998 prices. [44971]

Mr. Byers: The table shows the amount of the Aggregated Schools Budget for Hereford and Worcester local education authority for the financial years 1992–93 to 1997–98 inclusive, both in cash terms and at 1998 prices.

Hereford and Worcester LEA

£000

Aggregated schools budget	Actual	1998 Prices
1992–93	146,187	165,898
1993–94	146,957	162,062
1994–95	157,182	170,765
1995–96	157,335	166,316
1996–97	164,598	169,042
1997–98	168,404	168,404

Delegated Schools Budget

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what was the amount of the delegated schools budget spent (a) per primary pupil and (b) per secondary pupil in each local education authority area for the last 10 years for which figures are available. [44461]

Mr. Byers: The table shows, for England, the amount of the Aggregated Schools Budget per primary pupil and per secondary pupil for the financial year 1997–98, taken from the section 122 Budget Statements published by local education authorities for that year. Figures for earlier years could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Aggregated schools budget per pupil—England—1997–98

	Primary school	Secondary school
City of London	2,968	0
Camden	2,060	2,845
Greenwich	1,909	2,604
Hackney	2,078	2,772
Hammersmith and Fulham	2,103	2,868
Islington	1,982	2,720
Kensington and Chelsea	2,384	3,241
Lambeth	2,325	3,035
Lewisham	1,995	2,810
Southwark	1,995	2,608
Tower Hamlets	2,014	2,590
Wandsworth	1,935	2,521
Westminster	2,051	2,736
Barking/Dagenham	1,790	2,332
Barnet	1,725	2,456
Bexley	1,408	2,202
Brent	1,906	2,583
Bromley	1,630	2,196
Croydon	1,715	2,379
Ealing	1,796	2,303
Enfield	1,648	2,319
Haringey	1,798	2,508
Harrow	1,827	2,625
Havering	1,598	2,478
Hillingdon	1,684	2,549
Hounslow	1,867	2,295
Kingston	1,608	2,212
Merton	1,758	2,281
Newham	1,587	2,415
Redbridge	1,553	2,378
Richmond	1,787	2,312
Sutton	1,666	2,358
Waltham Forest	1,819	2,560
Birmingham	1,716	2,313
Coventry	1,574	2,252
Dudley	1,578	2,174
Sandwell	1,496	2,134
Solihull	1,560	2,123
Walsall	1,493	2,139
Wolverhampton	1,464	2,242
Knowsley	1,570	2,191
Liverpool	1,509	2,086
St. Helens	1,452	2,154
Sefton	1,483	2,251
Wirral	1,453	2,024
Bolton	1,432	2,050
Bury	1,368	2,000
Manchester	1,463	2,218
Oldham	1,470	2,149
Rochdale	1,424	2,117
Salford	1,484	2,159
Stockport	1,458	2,015
Tameside	1,350	1,875
Trafford	1,284	2,161
Wigan	1,473	2,231
Barnsley	1,288	1,958
Doncaster	1,483	2,189
Rotherham	1,452	1,985
Sheffield	1,452	1,959
Bradford	1,479	1,752
Calderdale	1,420	2,119
Kirklees	1,412	2,043
Leeds	1,615	2,171
Wakefield	1,377	1,864
Gateshead	1,486	2,092

Aggregated schools budget per pupil—England—1997–98

	Primary school	Secondary school
Newcastle	1,485	2,112
North Tyneside	1,463	2,012
South Tyneside	1,436	1,963
Sunderland	1,525	2,107
Isles of Scilly	2,537	4,361
Bath and North East Somerset	1,615	2,235
Bristol	1,619	2,399
North Somerset	1,523	2,218
South Gloucestershire	2,239	2,242
Hartlepool	1,363	2,045
Middlesbrough	1,408	2,218
Redcar and Cleveland	1,435	2,136
Stockton on Tees	1,423	2,074
Hull	1,524	2,108
East Riding	1,503	2,128
North East Lincolnshire	1,538	2,152
North Lincolnshire	1,519	2,089
North Yorkshire	1,486	2,198
York	1,415	2,141
Luton	1,476	2,223
Milton Keynes	1,394	2,310
Derby City	1,236	2,118
Poole	1,391	2,016
Bournemouth	1,320	1,985
Darlington	1,316	1,993
Brighton and Hove	1,475	2,211
Portsmouth	1,637	2,213
Southampton	1,670	2,276
Leicester City	1,450	2,051
Rutland	1,716	0
Stoke-on-Trent	1,424	1,984
Swindon	1,376	2,079
Bedfordshire	1,447	1,965
Berkshire	1,528	2,187
Buckinghamshire	1,367	2,221
Cambridgeshire	1,389	2,030
Cheshire	1,486	2,142
Cornwall	1,473	2,042
Cumbria	1,495	2,147
Derbyshire	1,275	2,026
Devon	1,466	2,127
Dorset	1,445	1,956
Durham	1,414	2,045
East Sussex	1,498	2,257
Essex	1,518	2,264
Gloucestershire	1,435	2,008
Hampshire	1,609	2,164
Hereford/Worcester	1,456	1,943
Hertfordshire	1,500	2,247
Isle of Wight	1,544	1,925
Kent	1,480	2,142
Lancashire	1,430	2,098
Leicestershire	1,495	2,081
Lincolnshire	1,486	2,257
Norfolk	1,583	2,302
Northamptonshire	1,469	2,048
Northumberland	1,474	1,863
Nottinghamshire	1,290	2,112
Oxfordshire	1,534	2,018
Shropshire	1,394	2,249
Somerset	1,514	2,082
Staffordshire	1,367	1,936
Suffolk	1,295	2,579
Surrey	1,642	2,102
Warwickshire	1,444	2,035
West Sussex	1,505	2,191
Wiltshire	1,436	2,023
England average	1,521	2,165

Social Exclusion

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will estimate how many young people aged 18 to 24 years regarded by the Government as socially excluded are not eligible for the New Deal. [43969]

Mr. Andrew Smith: No such estimate is available. However, the Government believe that their Welfare to Work policy, of which the New Deals form part, together with the work of the Social Exclusion Unit, provide extensive help for those at risk of social exclusion. Depending on their circumstances, individuals may have access to help as part of the New Deal for the Young Unemployed, or the New Deals for Lone Parents or People with Disabilities.

Under the New Deal for the Young Unemployed, individuals likely to be particularly disadvantaged in the labour market—such as those with disabilities; returners to the labour market; ex-regulars in HM forces; ex-offenders; lone parents; people whose first language is not English, Welsh or Gaelic; those with reading, writing or numeracy problems; those who have become unemployed due to large-scale redundancies; and those who have recently left local authority care—can get early access if they are claiming Jobseeker's Allowance. The Employment Service will also have discretion to enable early access to others where their New Deal adviser believes they are at particular disadvantage in their search for work.

There are also a range of other policies being developed to tackle disadvantage and social exclusion, including the New Deal for Partners and the New Deal for Communities.

Disabled People

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list by disability for each month since December 1996 the number of people who sought Access to Work support in the first six weeks of their employment. [45031]

Mr. Alan Howarth [holding answer 9 June 1998]: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its Chief Executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Peter Collins to Mr. Mark Oaten, dated 10 June 1998:

As the Employment Service is an Executive Agency, the Secretary of State has asked Leigh Lewis to reply to your question about the number of people who sought Access to Work support in the first six weeks of their employment since December 1996, listed by disability. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to Mr. Lewis as Chief Executive of the Employment Agency.

I am afraid that we do not hold information centrally on the number of people who seek Access to Work support in the first six weeks of employment broken down by disability. However, recent research carried out for the Employment Service in 1997 has provided an analysis by disability of people applying for Access to Work support. The results are set out in the attached table. It is based on a sample of 492 Access to Work applicants who applied for support between 1 February and 31 May 1997.

I am sorry that I cannot be more helpful.

Clients receiving Access to Work support by type of disability[1]

	Percentage
Problems or disabilities connected with the arms or hands	17
Problems or disabilities connected with the legs or feet	21
Problems or disabilities connected with the back or neck	29
Difficulty in seeing	18
Difficulty in hearing	18
Severe disfigurement	—[2]
Skin conditions, allergies	2
Chest or breathing problems, asthma, bronchitis	3
Heart, blood pressure or blood circulation problems	2
Stomach, liver, kidney or digestive problems	1
Diabetes	—[2]
Depression, bad nerves or anxiety	1
Epilepsy	3
Specific learning difficulties	3
Severe learning difficulties (mental handicap)	1
Mental illness or suffer from phobia, panics or other nervous diseases	1
Progressive illness not included elsewhere	7
Other health problems or disabilities	17

[1] IES Survey of ATW applicants, 1997
[2] Not sufficient numbers with this category of disability to provide a percentage

Nursery Education (Worcester)

Mr. Michael J. Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many nursery places were available for 4 year olds in Worcester in each year between 1979 and 1997. [43681]

Ms Estelle Morris: Figures for Worcester Local Education Authority (LEA) area are not available.

For Hereford and Worcester LEA area, there were 1,879 four year olds in maintained nursery schools and nursery classes in maintained primary schools in January 1997; there were 1,613 in January 1996. Figures for four year olds prior to January 1996 were not collected centrally.

Figures for pupils under five years of age in maintained nursery schools and nursery classes in maintained primary schools in the Hereford and Worcester LEA area in January 1981 through 1997 are shown in the table. Figures prior to January 1981 are not available.

Numbers of pupils under five years of age[1] in maintained nursery schools and nursery classes in maintained primary schools January 1979–1997

Hereford and Worcester local education authority area	Number
1979	—[2]
1980	—[2]
1981	719
1982	799
1983	797
1984	964
1985	941
1986	997
1987	909
1988	974
1989	998

Numbers of pupils under five years of age[1] in maintained nursery schools and nursery classes in maintained primary schools January 1979–1997

Hereford and Worcester local education authority area	Number
1990	1,204
1991	1,289
1992	1,274
1993	1,296
1994	1,287
1995	1,682
1996	2,179
1997	2,639

[1] Excludes those pupils who became 5 years of age by 1 January
[2] Not available

SOCIAL SECURITY

Industrial Injury Benefit (Bladder Disease)

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many applicants have been successful in claiming industrial injury disablement benefit for prescribed diseases for C23 primary neoplasm of the epithelial lining of the urinary tract in each of the last 10 years; and how many of the (a) successful and (b) unsuccessful applicants were in the printing and related industries. [44352]

Mr. Denham: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is set out in the tables.

The information on claims has only been collected in this form since 1995 and cannot be broken down by industry. The information on assessments has been collected since 1990 and can be broken down by industry.

Number of claims to industrial injury disablement benefit prescribed disease C23 (papilloma of the bladder)

Period	Number
April 1995-March 1996	110
April 1996-March 1997	100
April 1997-March 1998	50

Source:
DSS Analytical Services Division, 10 per cent. sample data.

Figures for assessments, i.e. those whose disablement has been assessed by a doctor are available from April 1990.

Numbers of diagnoses of prescribed disease C23 (Papilloma of the bladder)

	All industries		Printing and related industries
Year	Under 14 per cent.	14 per cent. or over	Under 14 per cent.	14 per cent. or over
1990–91	5	7	0	0
1991–92	4	14	0	0
1992–93	13	19	0	0
1993–94	4	23	0	0
1994–95	10	21	0	1
1995–96	1	17	0	0
1996–97	6	22	1	1

Note:
Benefit is payable only if a person's disablement is assessed at 14 per cent. or more.
Source:
DSS Analytical Services Division 100 per cent. count.

Local Authorities (Pilot Schemes)

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will list the pilot schemes announced since 1 May by her Department that involve local authorities in a lead or partnership capacity; if she will list each of the local authorities involved in each case; and what revenue and capital funding each local authority will receive through the pilot in (i) 1997–98, (ii) 1998–99, (iii) 1999–2000 and (iv) 2000–2001. [45338]

Mr. Keith Bradley: Local Authorities have an important role to play in the development of a Social Security system that promotes the wider aims of welfare reform work.

Also, in my Written Answer on 15 May 1998, Official Report, column 124, we announced that the Department had begun two prototypes to test integrated service delivery, in partnership with Camden local authority and Lewisham local authority (LA).

The Camden prototype aims to provide a single point of contact to lone parents who are claiming Income Support, Housing Benefit and Council Tax Benefit and who make applications for child support. Camden will not receive revenue or capital funding as the prototype is reciprocal and aims to provide benefits to both partners as well as for the lone parents themselves.

The Lewisham prototype aims to provide better sharing of information and will provide an integrated service to customers by the co-ordination of visits to this Department's and LA customers and the provision of advice and information from central points within the borough.

During 1997–98, Lewisham received funding of £73,500. £19,000 of this amount was required for the implementation of video-conferencing links between the Benefits Agency (BA), the Local Authority and Public Video Booths. The remainder was required for information technology development, project management, communications and training costs. A similar bid has been submitted for 1998–99 and is currently under consideration.

No other specific initiatives have been announced since these, although Local Authorities can apply for funding to be provided in relation to a number of initiatives. These include, for example, funding to assist with the resourcing of fraud investigation work, joint BA/LA anti-fraud activities and improved liaison/information sharing (e.g. installation of terminals with access to this Department's systems within LAs).

Paternity Pay

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what assessment her Department has made of the advantages of introducing statutory paternity pay; and if she will make a statement. [43608]

Mr. Denham: The Government support a strong family-friendly culture in the workplace. Family-friendly employment policies are good for parents—mothers and fathers—good for children, good for business and good for the economy. We are working with employers, voluntary organisations and trade unions to promote family-friendly policies and encourage best practice. We are also introducing for the first time a framework of rights for employees—these rights will include time off for mothers and fathers at the time of the birth, as well as time off for parents when their children are taken ill. We are reviewing maternity pay and considering the introduction of statutory paternity pay as part of our wider review of family-friendly working arrangements.

Sick and Disabled People

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will establish a database of case studies of good employment practices, available to disabled jobseekers and employers as part of the New Deal for Sick and Disabled People. [43557]

Mr. Denham: The evaluation of the New Deal for Disabled People will include research with employers and disabled jobseekers into employment practices affecting disabled people. The results of this research will be published, and will be available to disabled jobseekers, employers and others with an interest.

Laryngectomy Patients

Mr. Alan Johnson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will ensure that laryngectomy patients automatically qualify for disability benefits; what representations she has received on this issue; and if she will make a statement. [44389]

Mr. Denham: We have received no recent representations from people with laryngectomies or from any organisations representing laryngectomy patients.

Normal eligibility rules apply to people with laryngectomies who claim a disability benefit. Entitlement to Disability Living Allowance and Attendance Allowance is based not on specific disabilities, but on the effects that a person's disability has on their need for help with personal care and/or mobility.

Reviews

Mr. Allan: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will list, for each of the last four years, the departmental inquiries and reviews instigated by Ministers which have been chaired by individuals outside her Department; and in each case if he will give the date of establishment and the name of the chairman. [44364]

Mr. Field: The reviews instigated by Ministers in this Department are listed in the table.

Inquiry/review	Established	Chairman
War pensions: review of the scientific basis of the assessment of noise-induced sensorineural hearing loss	June 1997	Sir Kenneth Calman, Chief Medical Officer
Pension provision group	September 1997	Tom Ross, Aon Consulting

INDEX TO THE

PARLIAMENTARY DEBATES

SIXTH SERIES

OFFICIAL REPORT

SESSION 1997–98

VOLUME 313

1st June—11th June 1998

SCOPE OF THE INDEX, ARRANGEMENT AND ABBREVIATIONS

This index is derived from the House of Commons Library's Parliamentary On-Line Information System (POLIS), and the subject terms used are based on those used in POLIS. There are often changes in column numbering, etc., between the daily part or weekly Hansard (which simply collects together the daily parts without revision) and the bound volume. The index for the bound volume is revised to take account of these changes and cannot therefore, be used in connection with the daily part or weekly Hansard. For these versions use the Fortnightly Index.

Scope and arrangement of the Index

Oral and Written Parliamentary Questions are indexed under subject headings and the names of Members asking and Ministers replying to them. Questions are not listed under the names of Departments replying. Departmental listings can be arrived at indirectly by looking under the names of the Minister(s) of that Department. There are, however, the headings 'Northern Ireland', 'Scotland', and 'Wales' under which one can find not only most Questions answered by the Northern Ireland Office, Scottish Office, Welsh Office but also Questions about these areas of the United Kingdom which are answered by other Departments. Ministerial statements are indexed under subject headings, under 'Ministerial statements' and the names of Ministers making them and Members speaking on them. General debates are indexed under broad subject headings and under the names of all Members and Ministers taking part. Debates on legislation (Bills, Orders, Regulations etc.) are indexed under the name of the Bill, Statutory Instruments etc, under subject headings and under the names of those taking part.

Rulings and Statements by Speaker and deputies are brought together under the heading 'Speaker's rulings and statements'.

Other contributions by Speaker and deputies appear under the heading Speaker.

Opposition Day Debates and Estimates Day Debates and Standing Order No. 10 applications are listed under those respective headings and under subject headings too.

The date of each item except Parliamentary Questions is inserted immediately before the reference.

Members' names are given in the form by which they prefer to be known and are printed in bold italics. Under their names, entries are arranged under one of the two headings Debates, etc. (to include interventions on statements, points of order and so on) or Questions.

Abbreviations

Bills 1R = first reading, 2R = second reading, Money res = money resolution, Comm = Committee stage, Rep = Report stage, 3R = third reading, amendt/amendts = amendment/amendments, * = matter taken formally, without debate.

Column numbers followed by the letter W refer to Written Questions. These appear at the end of each daily part or volume with their own sequence of column numbers printed in italics.

A49
Road works 155w

Abbott, Ms Diane
Debates etc.
Teaching and Higher Education Bill (HL), Rep adjourned (08.06.98) 809, 814, 816, 818
Questions
Hong Kong, Elections 362
Millennium Exhibition, Finance 15–6
Open government 620w
Pensioners, Means tested benefits 697

Abortion
135w, 605w

Access courses
New deal schemes 138w

Access funds
203w

Access to countryside
Liability for animals 518w

"Access to Justice with Conditional Fees Consultation Paper"
301w

"Access to the Open Countryside in England and Wales Consultation Paper"
631w

Access to work programme
543w, 692w, 707–8w
Wheelchairs 365–6w

Accidents
Customs and Excise 499
Inquiries 4w
Legal costs 4w

Accountants
Training 697w

Admission charges
Millennium Exhibition 183w

Advisory Committee on Releases to the Environment
5w

Advisory services
NHS Executive 239w

Aerials
Planning permission 574–5w

Aerospace industry
Defence procurement 227–8w

Afghanistan
Arms embargoes 349w
Human rights 461w
Overseas aid 39w

Africa
Arms trade 126w
Visas 346–7w

After school clubs
New Opportunities Fund 10
Rural areas 695w

Age discrimination
Health services 685w

Agenda 2000
Rural areas 321w

Agenda 21
(03.06.98) 476–84

Aggregates
24w

Agricultural land
Waste disposal 28w, 420w

Agricultural products
Export rebates 454–5w

Agricultural subsidies
455–6w
Administrative costs 185w
Beekeeping 247–8w, 275w
Euro 453w
Northern Ireland 185w
Sheep 531w
Tobacco 344w, 530–1w

Agriculture
493
Exchange rates 492
Harmonisation of standards 491–2

Ainger, Mr Nick
Questions
Access funds 203w
Seas and oceans, Nature conservation 1–3w

Ainsworth, Mr Peter
Debates etc.
National Lottery Bill, Rep and 3R (01.06.98) 113–6
Sports (05.06.98) 674, 680

Air accidents
Chinook helicopters 183w

Air bags
Aircraft 154w

Air force bases
102w

Air pollution
Asthma 128–9w
Carbon monoxide 211w
Health education 167
Ozone 415–6w

Air pollution control
Carbon dioxide 211–2w, 299w
Fossil fuels 211w
Greenhouse effect 511–2w

Air Quality Standards Expert Panel
580w

Air routes
Regional airports 580w

Air safety
635w

Air traffic control
West Drayton 523–4w

Air transport
Transport of radioactive materials 631w

Air travel
Duty free allowances 21w, 570–1w

Aircraft
Air bags 154w

Aircraft noise
635w

Alcoholic drinks
Children 309w

Alcoholic drinks duties
Beer 326w

Alcoholism
Medical treatments 336–7w

Algeria
Human rights 611–2w
Visas 459–60w

Allan, Mr Richard
Debates etc.
House of Commons procedure (04.06.98) 565, 576–7
Referendums (03.06.98) 283–6, 291–2
Teaching and Higher Education Bill (HL), Rep adjourned (08.06.98) 830

Allan, Mr Richard*—*continued
Questions
Home Office, Private finance initiative 51–2w
Inquiries, Dept for Culture Media and Sport 559w
Inquiries, Dept of Social Security 712w
Inquiries, President of the Council 509w
Inquiries, Welsh Office 588–9w
Prison population, Foreigners 567–8w

Allan, Timothy
British Sky Broadcasting 91w

Allison, Clive
148w

Alternative energy
Dept for Culture Media and Sport 493w
EC action 507w
Ministry of Agriculture Fisheries and Food 526–8w
Non-fossil fuel obligation 228–9w
Treasury 440w

Alternative medicine
538w
East London 605w
Medical research 538w

Ambulance services
Performance standards 537w

Ambulances
692w

Amess, Mr David
Questions
Open government 620w
Retirement pensions 467w

Ancram, Rt Hon Michael
Debates etc.
Electoral systems (02.06.98) 171–9, 188, 205

Anderson, Mr Donald
Debates etc.
European Council (11.06.98) 1235, 1242–6, 1281
Nuclear weapons tests (01.06.98) 25
Questions
North Korea 325–6w

Animal experiments
Cosmetics 566w
Primates 644–5w
Transport of animals 644–5w

Animal feed
Antibiotics 76w, 494

Animal products
Import controls 22w

Animal welfare
495
EC trade 248w
Livestock 659–60w
Pigs 534w
Poultry 73–4w
Protection from Harassment Act 1997 646w
Protest 646w
Slaughterhouses 533–4w

Antibiotics
495
Animal feed 76w, 494

Antismoking campaign
Northern Ireland 375w
Scotland 260–1w
Wales 324w
Young people 260–1w, 324w, 375w, 685w

Apache AH-64 helicopter
639w

"Appraisal and the Environment"
300w

Arable area payments scheme
201–2w
Suffolk 452w

Archaeological sites
Public buildings 44w

Areas of outstanding natural beauty
579w

Argentina
Arms embargoes 246w

Argyll and Bute
Educational finance 432w

Armed conflict
Kosovo 360, 1071
Museums and galleries 8

Armed forces
Germany 491w

Armed forces casualties
95–6w, 105–6w

Armed forces catering services
Beef 95w

Armed forces civilians
Skill shortages 394w

Armed forces deployment
609–11w
Bosnia-Herzegovina 609w
Iraq 607w
Persian Gulf 608–9w
Sierra Leone 97–101w, 182w, 314w

Armed forces housing
393w
Kingston 422w

Armed forces reserves
NATO countries 491–2w

Armed forces strength
Wales 492w

Armed forces training
Costs 101–2w
Defence equipment 489w, 638–9w
Germany 489w
Indonesia 102–3w

Armed forces uniforms
102w

Armed forces women
312w

Arms embargoes
Afghanistan 349w
Argentina 246w
China 246–7w
Iran 245–6w

Arms exports
Export licensing 594w

Arms to Sierra Leone Inquiry
679w

Arms trade
355, 421–3w
Africa 126w
EC action 147w, 240–1w, 488w
Indonesia 151–2w, 227w, 240w
Nigeria 459w
Restricted Enforcement Unit 317–8w, 676–7w
Sierra Leone 92w, 142–5w, 240w, 301w, 317–8w, 345–6w, 424–5w, 456–7w, 586–7w, 616–7w, 653w, 664w, 682–4w, 1068–70
Taiwan 349w
Trade promotion 422w

Armstrong, Hilary, Minister of State for Local Government and Housing, Dept of the Environment Transport and the Regions
Questions
Council tax, Second homes 509–10w
Leasehold housing, Service charges 158–9w
Local government finance 511w, 857–8
Non-domestic rates, Debt collection 374–5w
Redcar and Cleveland Borough Council, Government grants 579w
Standard spending assessments 512w, 861
Standard spending assessments, Leicestershire 512w

Army
607w

Army Air Force and Naval Discipline Acts (Continuation) Order 1998
Debates etc.
(08.06.98) 846

Army bases
York 103w

Army in Northern Ireland
Prisoners 359, 663w

Army strength
606w

Art works
4
Greater London 124w
VAT 3

Artificial insemination
Cattle 535–6w

Arts Council of England
2–3, 46w

Arts finance
Theatres 1–2
Wales 589w

Arts sponsorship
Scotland 581w

Asbestos
Health hazards 521–2w
Import controls 517w

Ascension Island
247w

Ashdown, Rt Hon Paddy
Debates etc.
Electoral systems (02.06.98) 192, 194
Questions
Kosovo, Armed conflict 360, 1071

Ashford and St Peter's Hospital NHS Trust
Managers 410w

Asia
Economic situation 91w

Asia-Europe meeting
93–4w

ASSIST programme
Indonesia 487w

Assisted places scheme
628w

"Assisting and Encouraging Crime"
220–1w

Association of Chief Police Officers
381–2w
Company law 320w

Association of Chief Police Officers (Scotland)
83w, 430w

Association of Chief Police Officers (Scotland)—continued
Finance 83w

Asthma
Air pollution 128–9w
Hospital admissions 128w
Scotland 85w
Wales 62–4w

Astra Holdings
118w

Asylum
see Political refugees

Atherton, Ms Candy
Debates etc.
Restoration of Damage to Sites of Special Scientific Interest Bill, 1R (10.06.98) 1079–81
Questions
Land pollution, Industrial wastes 16–7w
Nomenclature of statistical territorial units, Population distribution 319w
Regional aid, EC grants and loans 161w, 319–20w

Atkinson, Mr David
Questions
Coastal protection 344w
Diabetes, Medical equipment 541w
Millennium compliance, Directories 680w

Atkinson, George
Prisoners (02.06.98) 270–6

Attendance allowance
470w

Attorney General
Ministerial duties 499

Audit Commission Bill (HL) 1997/98
Debates etc.
2R* and rem stages* (01.06.98) 53
Royal Assent (11.06.98) 1241

Austin, Mr John
Questions
Jubilee line 869

Autism
Children 142w
Special education 368w

Baker, Norman
Debates etc.
Business questions (11.06.98) 1223
Ports, Newhaven (03.06.98) 324–8
Questions
Animal experiments, Primates 644w
Bishops, Travelling expenses 16
China, Human rights 677w
Church Commissioners, Investment 295–7w
Drift nets 201w, 344w
Further education, East Sussex 694w
Government Information and Communication Service 619w
Intelligence services, Accountability 665w
Iran, British embassies 618w
Labour Party, Government buildings 665w
Members, Telephone tapping 301w, 666w
Millennium Exhibition, Finance 14
Panchen Lama 677w
Pigs, Animal welfare 534w
Poultry meat, Imports 248–9w
RAF Menwith Hill, Defence expenditure 96–7w
Railway fares 513w
Slaughterhouses 452w
Slaughterhouses, Animal welfare 533–4w
Slaughterhouses, Veterinary services 532–3w

Baker, Norman—continued*
Transport, Dept for Culture Media and Sport 47w
Transport, Northern Ireland Office 64–5w
Transport of radioactive materials 577w
Transport of radioactive materials, Air transport 631w
Transport of radioactive materials, Ferries 631–2w
Treasury, Official hospitality 584w
Treaties, Parliamentary procedure 244–5w
Welfare of Animals (Transport) Order 1997 534w
Whales, Japan 94w
Wild boar 155–6w

Baldry, Mr Tony
Debates etc.
Nuclear weapons tests (01.06.98) 28
Questions
Class sizes 1181–2
Eggs, EC action 338w
Electronic government 1062–3

Ballard, Jackie
Debates etc.
Registration of Political Parties Bill, 2R (04.06.98) 538
Questions
Aerials, Planning permission 574w
Defence land, Hunting 209w
Family credit, Child care 706
Forestry Commission, Hunting 427–8w
Non-departmental public bodies, Dept of the Environment Transport and the Regions 3w
Non-departmental public bodies, Dept of Trade and Industry 112w
Non-departmental public bodies, Lord Chancellor's Dept 71w
Non-departmental public bodies, Northern Ireland Office 184w
Petrol alternatives 629–30w
Private education, Inspections 695w
Public appointments, Dept of the Environment Transport and the Regions 3w
Public appointments, Dept of Trade and Industry 113w
Public appointments, Lord Chancellor's Dept 71–2w
Public appointments, Northern Ireland Office 184w
Public appointments, Scottish Office 77w
Tax allowances, Vocational training 654w

Bank of England
Monetary Policy Committee 329w
Seigniorage 585w

Banking supervision
Economic and monetary union 329–30w

Banks, Mr Tony, Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Dept for Culture Media and Sport*
Debates etc.
National Lottery Bill, Rep and 3R (01.06.98) 61, 71, 75, 96–9
Sports (05.06.98) 620–1, 628, 635, 646, 656, 661, 666, 677–82
Questions
Bradenstoke Priory Barn 427w
Cricket, Racial discrimination 48–9w
Gascoigne, Paul 7
Historic buildings 426w
National Lottery, Yorkshire and Humberside 668–9w
National Lottery, Youth clubs 302w
Sports, Disadvantaged 6–7
Sports, Finance 7
Sports, Governing bodies 48w

Banks, Mr Tony—continued*
Sports, Young people 42–3w
Sportsmatch, Chorley 46w
Sportsmatch, Government grants 218w
UK Sports Council 48w
UK Sports Institute 666–8w

Bar Council
see General Council of the Bar

Barley
Export subsidies 532w
USA 532w

Barnes, Mr Harry
Debates etc.
Belfast Agreement (01.06.98) 39
Electoral systems (02.06.98) 183
Questions
Business questions 505
Health education, Air pollution 167
Ministers' domestic visits, Northern Ireland 63–4w

Barnsley
Pre-school education 364w

Barristers
Legal aid 70–1w

Barron, Mr Kevin
Questions
Tobacco advertising 160

Battle, Mr John, Minister of State, Dept of Trade and Industry*
Debates etc.
Gas supply industry, Regulatory systems (09.06.98) 983–6
Questions
Aerospace industry, Defence procurement 227–8w
Alternative energy, EC action 507w
Alternative energy, Non-fossil fuel obligation 228–9w
Coal mining 113w
Coal mining, Compensation 505w
Corporation tax 124w
Dounreay, Nuclear fuel reprocessing 385–6w, 595–6w, 709–15
Dounreay, Nuclear safety 120w, 715
Dounreay, Uranium 594–5w
Electricity tariffs, Low incomes 503–4w
EUREKA 597w
Gas fired power stations 507w
Gas fired power stations, Planning permission 113–4w
Genetic engineering 597w
Genetic engineering, Departmental coordination 321w
Genetic engineering, Ethics 680w
Industrial investment 318w
Institute of Terrestrial Ecology 681w
Lorries, Noise control 228w
Nuclear fuels, Japan 679–80w
Nuclear power 714
Nuclear power stations, Decommissioning 713
Nuclear power stations, Health hazards 597–8w
Petroleum exploration licences 502–3w
Plant power 318w
Plutonium 162w
Plutonium, Export controls 597w
Research councils, Men 596w
Solar power, Research 122–3w
Wind power 506–7w

Bayley, Mr Hugh
Debates etc.
Channel tunnel (03.06.98) 382
Electoral systems (02.06.98) 175, 201, 242–4

Bayley, Mr Hugh—continued*
House of Commons accommodation, Points of order (08.06.98) 736
Teaching and Higher Education Bill (HL), Rep adjourned (08.06.98) 738
Questions
Armed forces housing 393w
Army bases, York 103w
International trade, Business corruption 350
Railway travel, Information services 513w

BBC
492–3w

Beard, Mr Nigel
Questions
Bees, Varroasis 496–7
Crown Prosecution Service 337w

Beckett, Rt Hon Margaret, President of the Board of Trade*
Questions
Arms trade, Africa 126w
Astra Holdings 118w
British Manufacturing and Research Company 226–7w
Dept of Trade and Industry, Millennium compliance 122w
Dounreay, Nuclear safety 120–1w
Duty free allowances, Redundancy 122w
EC Internal Market Council 322–3w
Export financing 321w
Government information services, Dept of Trade and Industry 126w
Green papers, Dept of Trade and Industry 126w
Milk Development Council 662w
Ministers, Information 317w
Non-departmental public bodies, Dept of Trade and Industry 112w
Power industry 117w
Public appointments, Dept of Trade and Industry 113w
Public utilities, Regulatory systems 116w
Restricted Enforcement Unit, Arms trade 317–8w
Sierra Leone, Arms trade 317w, 682–4w
Trade competitiveness 126w

Beef
Armed forces catering services 95w
Exports 339–40w, 497–8, 531–2w, 1072

Beekeeping
529–30w
Agricultural subsidies 247–8w, 275w
Scotland 275w

Beer
Alcoholic drinks duties 326w

Bees
Varroasis 247–8w, 275w, 341w, 496–7

Begg, Miss Anne
Debates etc.
Teaching and Higher Education Bill (HL), Rep adjourned (08.06.98) 745–6
Questions
EC Fisheries Council 658–9w

Beith, Rt Hon A J
Debates etc.
Electoral systems (02.06.98) 195, 199, 211, 260
Teaching and Higher Education Bill (HL), Rep adjourned (08.06.98) 775, 786, 791–2
Questions
Africa, Visas 346–7w
Sierra Leone, Governments in exile 486–7w

Belfast Agreement
Publications 481w

Bell, Mr Stuart, Second Church Estates Commissioner*
Debates etc.
Electoral systems (02.06.98) 208–14
Questions
Bishops, Travelling expenses 16–7
Christianity, Millennium Exhibition 34w
Church and state 35w
Church Commissioners, Investment 17–8, 34w, 295–7w
Church Commissioners, Taxation 34w
Church finance 17, 20
Church of England, Investment 18
Clergy, Pensions 17

Benefit integrity project
Disability living allowance 110w, 545–6w, 704–5

Benefits Agency
see Social Security Benefits Agency

Benn, Rt Hon Tony
Debates etc.
Teaching and Higher Education Bill (HL), Rep adjourned (08.06.98) 826–7

Bennett, Mr Andrew F
Debates etc.
House of Commons procedure (04.06.98) 554–5, 567–9
Questions
Fines, Greater Manchester 485–6w
Pensioners, Income support 468w
River Tame, Sewage 372–3w
Sites of special scientific interest, Countryside stewardship scheme 529w
Sites of special scientific interest, Lancashire 370–1w
Social rented housing 510–1w

Benzodiazepines
Pregnant women 463w

Bercow, Mr John
Debates etc.
European Communities (Amendment) Bill, Allocation of time motion and Lords amendts (09.06.98) 931
Human Rights Bill (HL), Com (03.06.98) 399, 406, 409
Sports (05.06.98) 610–1, 650, 654, 656, 658–63, 679
Questions
Business questions 511–2
Millennium Exhibition, Finance 60w
Museums and galleries, Finance 7–8
Sierra Leone 92w
Sierra Leone, Armed forces deployment 99–101w
Sierra Leone, Arms trade 346w, 456–7w, 664w
Winter fuel payments 707–8
World Cup, Tickets 677w

Beresford, Sir Paul
Questions
Greater London Authority 862–3
Greater London Authority, Town and country planning 513w
New deal for young people, Guildford 543–4w

Berry, Mr Roger
Questions
Disability Discrimination Act 1995 544w
New deal for disabled people 364–5w, 699–700w
New deal for disabled people, Departmental coordination 365w
Wheelchairs 336w

Best, Mr Harold
Questions
Sports, Disadvantaged 6–7

Better government programme
619w
Elderly 634–5w, 1066
Greater London Authority 634–5w

Better Regulation Task Force
Public appointments 1–2w

Better Regulation Unit
Manpower 1w

Betts, Mr Clive, An Assistant Whip*
Debates etc.
Late Payment of Commercial Debts (Interest) Bill, Rep and 3R (01.06.98) 126

Bicycles
Safety equipment 14w

Bilateral aid
232w

Billing
NHS trusts 539w

Biological weapons
132w

Birds
Nature conservation 30w

Birmingham Relief Road
865–6
Construction costs 209w
Contracts 865

Births and Deaths Registration Act 1953
Questions
224w

Bishops
Travelling expenses 16–7

Blair, Rt Hon Tony, Prime Minister, First Lord of the Treasury and Minister for the Civil Service*
Questions
Allan, Timothy, British Sky Broadcasting 91w
Army in Northern Ireland, Prisoners 359
Asia-Europe meeting 93–4w
Beef, Exports 1072
Blind, Internet 215w
Camelot Group 360–1
Computers in schools 1071–2
Crime prevention, St Helens 364
Departmental correspondence 300w
Developing countries, Debts 215–6w, 370w
Developing countries, Poverty 215w
Dounreay, Uranium 364–5
Drug crimes 1076
Duty free allowances 215w, 665–6w
Duty free allowances, Redundancy 1074
EC presidency 362
Educational finance, Derbyshire 1075
Educational finance, Suffolk 1072
Educational standards 1074
Elderly, Departmental coordination 214w, 369w
Evacuees Reunion Association 424w
Exservicemen, Departmental responsibilities 94–5w
Government information services 424w
Government information services, Prime Minister 94w
Green papers, Costs 92w
Hereditary peers, House of Lords reform 366, 1068
Hong Kong, Elections 362
Hospital waiting lists 364
Hospital waiting lists, Wiltshire 361
Hospitals, Construction 359–60

Blair, Rt Hon Tony—continued*
Hospitals, Cornwall 1070
Housing standards, Disadvantaged 214w
Intelligence and Security Committee 665w
Intelligence services, Accountability 665w
Interest rates, Industry 1070
Intimidation of witnesses 1075–6
IRA, Weapons 366
Kock, Stephen 213w, 425w
Kosovo, Armed conflict 360, 1071
Labour Party, Government buildings 665w
Local government corruption 1074–5
Local government corruption, Scotland 362–4
Local government reform 1070–1
Lockerbie, Bombings 666w
Medical profession, Accountability 365–6
Members, Telephone tapping 301w, 666w
Minimum wage 364
Ministerial policy advisors, Government departments 664w
Ministers' visits abroad, China 93w
North Korea 93w
Northern Ireland Assembly, Elections 369–70w
Northern Ireland government, Referendums 361–2
Political parties, Finance 95w
Pornography, Internet 425w
Primary care groups 1076
Prime Minister's questions 358–9
Sierra Leone 91–2w, 370w
Sierra Leone, Arms trade 92w, 301w, 424–5w, 664w, 1068–70
Sierra Leone, Governments in exile 92w
Smuggling, Tobacco 1076
Social Exclusion Unit, Homelessness 213–4w
Tax burden, Statistics 1072–3
Technique LLC 300w
Whales, Japan 94w

Blears, Ms Hazel
Questions
New deal for young people 696w

Blind
Internet 215w
Public libraries 560w

Blizzard, Mr Bob
Questions
Arable area payments scheme, Suffolk 452w
Better government programme, Elderly 1066
Pensioners, Poverty 699
Petroleum exploration licences 502–3w
Respite care 541w
Stray dogs 516–7w
Truancy 694–5w

Blunkett, Rt Hon David, Secretary of State for Education and Employment*
Debates etc.
Teaching and Higher Education Bill (HL), Rep adjourned (08.06.98) 805, 807–14, 833–4
Teaching and Higher Education Bill (HL), Rep and 3R (09.06.98) 911–5, 926
Questions
Class sizes, Leicestershire 1178–80
Higher education admission 1182–3
St Austell College 401w

Blunt, Mr Crispin
Debates etc.
Eritrea (08.06.98) 735
European Communities (Amendment) Bill, Allocation of time motion and Lords amendts (09.06.98) 943, 959
Millennium compliance (08.06.98) 725

Blunt, Mr Crispin—continued*
Sports (05.06.98) 632–3, 666–9
Questions
Connex Rail 524w
Restricted Enforcement Unit, Arms trade 317–8w
Sierra Leone 91–2w, 143w, 145–6w, 325w, 345w
Sierra Leone, Armed forces deployment 100w
Sierra Leone, Arms trade 144–5w, 345–6w, 616–7w

Boateng, Mr Paul, Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Dept of Health*
Questions
Asthma, Hospital admissions 128w
Autism, Children 142w
Breast cancer, Screening 237w
Cancer, Medical treatments 171w
Cancer, North West region 133w
Cardiomyopathy 131w
Child workers 686w
Children, Health services 130w
Children Act 1989 133w
Children in care 174w
Children's rights 175w
Chiropody 602w, 686w
Chiropody, Elderly 132–3w, 536w
Community care, Elderly 687–8w
Cosmetic surgery 127w
Epilepsy 131–2w, 407–8w
Foster care 409–10w
Glaucoma 163–4
Glaucoma, Hospital waiting lists 164
Haemophilia, Hepatitis 135w
Handicapped, Concessionary television licences 316–7w
Health action zones, Finance 169w
Hospital discharges, Geriatric patients 170w, 466w
Kent and Canterbury Hospital, Pathology 407w
Leeds Health Authority, Finance 172w
Medical profession, Interagency cooperation 685w
Mental health, Telephone services 129w
Mental health community care 157
Mental health services, North West region 172w
Mentally disadvantaged, Data banks 539w
Mentally disturbed offenders, Homicide 407w
Mentally handicapped 408w
Mobility of disabled 132w
NHS finance 169w
Personal social services, Handicapped 132w
Pilot schemes, Dept of Health 688–90w
Residential care, Elderly 463–4w
Residential care of children, Social workers 408–9w
Respite care 541w
Secure accommodation, Greater London 181w
Suicide, Young people 156–7
Wheelchairs 334–6w

Body, Sir Richard
Debates etc.
European Communities (Amendment) Bill, Allocation of time motion and Lords amendts (09.06.98) 956, 964–5

Bombings
Lockerbie 666w

Bosnia-Herzegovina
Armed forces deployment 609w

Boswell, Mr Tim
Questions
Coal mining 113w
Crops 495–6
Customs, Postal services 328w
Gas fired power stations, Planning permission 113–4w
Inland waterways, Navigation 510w
Local government constituencies, Northamptonshire 519w
Parcelforce 115–6w
Parking 515w
Petrol, Retail trade 114–5w
Post Office, External financing limits 115w
Post Office, Reviews 319w
Postal services 115–6w
Postal services, USA 503w
Royal Mail, Complaints 116w
Teachers, Skill shortages 1183–4

Bottomley, Mr Peter
Debates etc.
Sports (05.06.98) 668
Questions
Government information services 424w
Sierra Leone 370w
Sierra Leone, Governments in exile 92w

Bottomley, Rt Hon Virginia
Questions
Environmental health 162
Sixth form colleges, Godalming 693w

Bottomley Forum
see Ministerial Tourism Advisory Forum

Bovine spongiform encephalopathy
489–90, 493–4, 599–601w
Disease control 490
Northern Ireland 490–1
Slaughterhouses 598–9w
Wales 671w
West country 489

Bovine tuberculosis
Vaccination 529w

Bradenstoke Priory Barn
427w

Bradley, Mr Keith, Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Dept of Social Security*
Questions
Child benefit 402w
Child Support Agency, Manpower 185–6w
Council tax benefits, Wales 551w
Family credit, Child care 706
Family income 475–6w
Fathers, Tax rates and bands 401–2w
Habitual residence test 250w
Handicap benefits, Earnings rules 109w
Housing benefits, Scotland 547w
Lone parents, Social security benefits 315–6w
Low incomes, Wales 250w
Maintenance, Children 187–9w, 552–4w
Means tested benefits 251–2w
New deal for lone parents 110–1w, 314–5w, 402w, 467w, 706
Pilot schemes, Dept of Social Security 710w
Social security, Performance standards 479–80w
Social security appeals 468–9w
Social security benefits, Children 473w
Social security benefits, Scotland 698
Social security benefits, Young people 474w
Social Security Benefits Agency, Manpower 189w

Bradley, Mr Keith—continued*
Social Security Benefits Agency, Personnel 472w
Working benefits campaign 546–7w

Bradley, Mr Peter
Questions
Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, Ministerial powers 620w
Disability living allowance 549w
Handicapped, Concessionary television licences 316–7w
Pensioners, Income support 468w

Bradshaw, Mr Ben
Questions
Church finance 17
Cycling 514w
Euro 492–3

Brady, Mr Graham
Debates etc.
Registration of Political Parties Bill, 2R (04.06.98) 519, 547, 550
Teaching and Higher Education Bill (HL), Rep adjourned (08.06.98) 831
Teaching and Higher Education Bill (HL), Rep and 3R (09.06.98) 885–6, 914
Questions
Millennium Exhibition 61w
Millennium Exhibition, Admission charges 183w
Tobacco advertising 1193–4

Brake, Mr Tom
Debates etc.
Channel tunnel (03.06.98) 382
Questions
Birmingham Relief Road 865–6
Energy prices, Business premises 568–9w
Greenhouse effect, Air pollution control 512w
London Underground, Joint public-private sector ventures 515–6w
Palace of Westminster, Recycling 557–8w
Sewage, Water treatment 17w
Water abstraction 153w
Water conservation 17w

Brand, Dr Peter
Debates etc.
Community hospitals, Oxfordshire (03.06.98) 347
Domestic energy conservation (10.06.98) 1010–1, 1017–8, 1024

Brazier, Mr Julian
Questions
Pensions, Personal savings 703
Social security reform 469w

Breast cancer
499–500w
Scotland 657w
Screening 237w
Wales 166w

Breast feeding
Publicity 404–5w

Brecon Beacons National Park
Low flying 639w

Brinton, Mrs Helen
Questions
Health education, Curriculum 166–7

British dependent territories
150–1w, 243w

British embassies
Iran 618w

British Gas TransCo
see Transco

British Manufacturing and Research Company
226–7w

British nationality
Civil servants 620–2w

British residents abroad
Tax allowances 652w

British Road Federation
Finance 515w

British Sky Broadcasting
Allan, Timothy 91w

Bro Taf Health Authority
Electroconvulsive therapy 672–3w

Broadcasting
45w

Bromsgrove
Playing fields (08.06.98) 848–54

Brooke, Rt Hon Peter
Debates etc.
Belfast Agreement (01.06.98) 38
Economic policy (11.06.98) 1209
National Lottery Bill, Rep and 3R (01.06.98) 76–9, 94–6, 98
Questions
Business questions 507
Film industry, Taxation 43w
National Lottery, Tourism 11

Brown, Rt Hon Gordon, Chancellor of the Exchequer*
Debates etc.
Economic policy, Ministerial statements (11.06.98) 1195–215
Questions
Bank of England, Monetary Policy Committee 329w
EC Finance Council 225–6w
Ministers' visits abroad, Indonesia 89w
Ministers' visits abroad, Korea 89w
Treasury, Official hospitality 584w

Brown, Mr Russell
Questions
Access to work programme 692w
NHS, Performance standards 171w

Browne, Mr Desmond
Debates etc.
Northern Ireland (Sentences) Bill, 2R (10.06.98) 1093, 1138–41
Questions
Repatriation, Offenders 53w

Browning, Mrs Angela
Debates etc.
European Communities (Amendment) Bill, Allocation of time motion and Lords amendts (09.06.98) 936
Questions
United Bristol Healthcare NHS Trust, Inquiries 337w, 692w
Viagra 686w

Bruce, Mr Ian
Questions
Beef, Exports 497–8
Mental health community care 157
Ministers, Electronic mail 624w
Nigeria, Arms trade 459w
Regional development agencies, South West region 509w
Road construction, Dorchester 297w
Sierra Leone, Overseas aid 236w

Bruce, Mr Malcolm
Debates etc.
Economic policy (11.06.98) 1205

Bruce, Mr Malcolm—continued*
Questions
Consultants, Northern Ireland Office 183w
Economic policy, Public sector debt 650w
Government departments, Operating costs 651w
Official hospitality, Dept for Culture Media and Sport 47–8w
Public sector earnings 392w
Repairs and maintenance, Scottish Office 77–8w
Tax burden, Statistics 224w

Buck, Ms Karen
Debates etc.
Leasehold housing (10.06.98) 992–6
Questions
Defence Secondary Care Agency, Performance standards 395–6w
Employment schemes, Ethnic minorities 1185

Building regulations
Housing construction 575–6w

Bulgaria
EC aid 459w
Overseas aid 459w

Burden, Mr Richard
Debates etc.
Electoral systems (02.06.98) 172, 185, 197, 211, 219–24, 257

Burma
Overseas aid 41w
Refugees 168–9w

Burnett, Mr John
Debates etc.
Crown Prosecution Service (01.06.98) 48
Questions
Customs and Excise, Prosecutions 498–9

Burns, Mr Simon
Questions
Class sizes, Essex 401w
Driving tests, Chelmsford 156w
Litter, Chelmsford 299w
New deal for lone parents 696
Non-departmental public bodies, Northern Ireland Office 183–4w
Pupil exclusions, Chelmsford 626w
Vacancies, Chelmsford 367–8w

Burstow, Mr Paul
Questions
Asthma, Scotland 85w
Asthma, Wales 62–4w
Children Act 1989 133w
Chiropody 686w
Chiropody, Elderly 132–3w
Community care, Elderly 687–8w
Disability living allowance, Benefit integrity project 110w, 545–6w
Disabled facilities grants 416w
Disabled facilities grants, Elderly 17w
Elderly, Departmental coordination 214w
Exhaust emission controls 871
Greater London Authority, Better government programme 634–5w
Homicide 220–1w
Homicide, Children 222w
Hospital admissions, Geriatric patients 688w
Hospital waiting lists 133w
Industrial accidents 634w
Metropolitan Police 645–6w
Mobility of disabled 132w
National Institute for Clinical Excellence 178w
Personal social services, Handicapped 132w
Pilot schemes, Dept of Health 688–90w

Burstow, Mr Paul—continued*
Pilot schemes, Dept of Social Security 710w
Pilot schemes, Dept of the Environment Transport and the Regions 632–4w
Police stations, Epsom 646w
Political refugees, Category A prisoners 222w
Political refugees, Immigrant detainees 221w
Prodigy prescribing system 687–8w
Residential care, Drugs 686–7w
Residential care, Elderly 463–4w

Bury
Schools 1180–1

Bus lanes
Motorcycles 519w

Bus services
Performance standards 514w

Business
Millennium Exhibition 14–5

Business corruption
International trade 350

Business Link London North West
Finance 161–2w

Business motions
(01.06.98) 119, 143

Business premises
Energy prices 568–9w

Business questions
505–13

Business statements
503–5, (11.06.98) 1216–26

Butter
EC law 454w

Butterfill, Mr John
Questions
Sierra Leone, Arms trade 92w

Byers, Mr Stephen, Minister for School Standards, Dept for Education and Employment*
Debates etc.
Teaching and Higher Education Bill (HL), Rep adjourned (08.06.98) 738–44, 746–9, 752–3, 778
Teaching and Higher Education Bill (HL), Rep and 3R (09.06.98) 886–91, 893–4
Questions
Assisted places scheme 628w
Class sizes, Cumbria 700w
Class sizes, Essex 401w
Cost per pupil 704–6w
Education action zones 695w
Education development plans 204–5w
Educational finance, Hereford and Worcester 704w
Educational finance, Worcestershire 1187–8
Educational standards 698w
Further education, East Sussex 694w
Grammar schools, Voting methods 256w
Grant maintained schools 139–40w, 627–8w
Literacy, Primary education 695–6w
Local education authorities 696w
Music education 625w
Primary education, School population 626w
Private education 1178
Private education, Inspections 695w
Private education, Surrey 1178
School administration 141w
School closures 626w
School closures, Rural areas 255–6w

Byers, Mr Stephen*—*continued
Schools 399–400w
Schools, Bury 1180–1
Sixth form colleges 692w
Sixth form colleges, Godalming 693w
Student loans, Part-time education 1186–7
Teachers, Pay 624w, 703w
Tuition fees, Higher education admission 1192–3
Village schools 626w

C17 aircraft
421w

Cable, Mr Vincent
Questions
Agricultural subsidies, Euro 453w
Beekeeping 529–30w
Disability living allowance 547–8w
EC Finance Council, Economic and monetary union 88–9w
Economic and monetary union 88w
Economic and monetary union, Information technology 193w
Feltham Young Offender Institution and Remand Centre, Prison staff 52w
Health services, Age discrimination 685w
Heathrow Airport 7–8w
Heathrow Airport, Public inquiries 8w
Housing benefits, Finance 575w
Pharmacists, Primary care groups 537–8w
Physiotherapists, Greater London 403–4w
Radioactive waste disposal, River Thames 525w
Schools 399–400w
Secure accommodation, Greater London 181w
Self-assessment of tax 650w
Special education, Training 366–7w
Water charges 855

Cable television
Local broadcasting 163–4w

Caborn,Mr Richard, Minister for the Regions Regeneration and Planning, Dept of the Environment Transport and the Regions*
Questions
Compulsory purchase 631w
Deprivation indicators 157w
Derelict land 510w
Dredging, Licensing 525–6w
Heathrow Airport, Public inquiries 8w, 512w, 863–4
Housing, South Devon 524w
Housing construction, Derelict land 510w
Regional government 30w

Cambodia
Export licensing 117–8w

Camelot Group
360–1

Cameroon
617w
Political refugees 642–3w
Road construction 447w

Campbell, Mr Alan
Debates etc.
Electoral systems (02.06.98) 251–3

Campbell, Mrs Anne
Debates etc.
Electoral systems (02.06.98) 177–8
Teaching and Higher Education Bill (HL), Rep adjourned (08.06.98) 805, 815
Questions
Cycling 867–8
Food standards 485
Heart diseases 171–2w
Higher education admission 693w, 1183

Campbell, Mr Menzies
Debates etc.
European Communities (Amendment) Bill, Allocation of time motion and Lords amendts (09.06.98) 954
European Council (11.06.98) 1229, 1238
Nuclear weapons tests (01.06.98) 24
Questions
Armed forces deployment 609–11w
Armed forces deployment, Bosnia-Herzegovina 609w
Armed forces deployment, Iraq 607w
Armed forces deployment, Persian Gulf 608–9w
Arms exports, Export licensing 594w
Army 607w
Army strength 606w
Helicopters 394w
Microbiology, Exports 604w
Military aircraft 421w
Navy, Fuels 607w
Navy strength 606w
Western European Union 606–7w

Campbell-Savours, Mr Dale
Debates etc.
Electoral systems (02.06.98) 172, 218
Nuclear weapons tests (01.06.98) 28
Private notice question intervention (08.06.98) 711
Questions
British Manufacturing and Research Company 226–7w
Dounreay, Nuclear fuel reprocessing 714
Fertility, Medical treatments 169w
Information technology, Cumbria 1063
Interest rates 493
Kock, Stephen 213w, 425w
Meat Hygiene Service, Intimidation 341–3w, 451–2w
Phoenix companies, Prosecutions 338w
Private education 1178
Technique LLC 300w

Canada
Cattle 454w

Canavan, Mr Dennis
Debates etc.
Teaching and Higher Education Bill (HL), Rep adjourned (08.06.98) 790–1, 802–4, 834–5
Questions
Epilepsy 407–8w
International Whaling Commission 340w
Open government 1067
Student numbers, Scotland 383w
Tuition fees, Scotland 383w

Cancer
see (also) Breast cancer

Cancer
156
Death 155–6
Handicap benefits 711–2w
Hospital waiting lists 155
Medical treatments 171w
Men 155–6
North West region 133w
Thyroid gland 444w
Wales 671w
Young people 444w

Candidate selection
European Parliament Members 436w

Cann, Mr Jamie
Debates etc.
Magistrates' courts, Suffolk (10.06.98) 1043–4

Cannabis
Medical research 464w

Capital gains tax
195w
Pensioners 195w

Capital receipts initiative
89w

Caplin, Mr Ivor
Debates etc.
National Lottery Bill, Rep and 3R (01.06.98) 60
Sports (05.06.98) 624, 655–9
Sportsgrounds, Town and country planning (10.06.98) 1036
Questions
Cable television, Local broadcasting 163–4w
EC Culture Council 165w
Electricity tariffs, Low incomes 503–4w
Funerals, Consumer protection 161w
Industrial health and safety, Curriculum 130w
Open government 1065
Public utilities, Regulatory systems 116w
Social security, Performance standards 479–80w

Caravan sites
Travelling people 574w

Caravans
Consumer protection 126–7w

Carbon dioxide
Air pollution control 211–2w, 299w
Speed limits 211–2w

Carbon monoxide
Air pollution 211w

Cardiff Bay
Property development 545w

Cardiff Prison
Operating costs 483–4w

Cardiff Summit
(11.06.98) 1242–84

Cardiomyopathy
131w

Carers
Pensions 700–1

Carlisle Airport
519w
Transport of radioactive materials 572–3w

Casale, Mr Roger
Debates etc.
European Council (11.06.98) 1235
Review of Health Care in London Independent Advisory Panel (03.06.98) 311–5
Questions
Agenda 2000, Rural areas 321w
Arms trade, EC action 488w
Computers in schools 1071–2
Health, Disadvantaged 168

Cash, Mr William
Debates etc.
Electoral systems (02.06.98) 172–3
European Communities (Amendment) Bill, Allocation of time motion and Lords amendts (09.06.98) 933, 949, 962
House of Commons procedure (04.06.98) 553, 556
Questions
Club of Three 677w
Tobacco advertising 159–60

Category A prisoners
Political refugees 222w

Catering
Work permits 141–2w

Cattle
Artificial insemination 535–6w
Canada 454w

Cattle tracing system
489

Cellular phones
Driving offences 303–4w
Health warnings 439–40w

Central government borrowing
654–5w

Central Railway
30w

Central Science Laboratory
496

Centre for Environment Fisheries and Aquaculture Science
74w

Chairman of Committee of the Whole House
Debates etc.
Amendments and new clauses (03.06.98) 388, 413, 415, 426, 437, 464–5
Conduct of proceedings (03.06.98) 406, 417, 444, 455–6, 460, 466

Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster
Green papers 2w
Ministerial powers 620w
Open government 620w

Chancellor of the Exchequer
see Treasury

"Changes to Enforcement and Levying of Distress for Non-domestic Rate Debts Consultation Paper"
374–5w

Channel Four
Privatisation 4–5

Channel Islands
European Convention on Human Rights 55w
Personal savings 652w

Channel tunnel
Ministerial statements (03.06.98) 367–84
Railway network 13w, 117w, 573–4w
Transport of radioactive materials 631–2w

Chapman, Mr Ben
Questions
Cannabis, Medical research 464w
Intimidation of witnesses 1075–6
Medicines Control Agency 605w
New deal for young people 693–4w
New Opportunities Fund, After school clubs 10
Open government 1067–8
Whales 340w

Chapman, Sir Sydney,
Debates etc.
Business questions (11.06.98) 1221–2
Millennium compliance (08.06.98) 724
Review of Health Care in London Independent Advisory Panel (03.06.98) 301–2
Questions
Clergy, Pensions 17
Developing countries, Debts 230w
Higher education admission 1182–3
Performing arts, Finance 9
Portcullis House, Expenditure 557w
Post Office 594w

Charities
Overseas aid 356

Chaytor, Mr David
Questions
Algeria, Visas 459–60w

Chelmsford
Driving tests 156w
Litter 299w
Pupil exclusions 626w
Vacancies 367–8w

Chelsea-Hackney railway line
568w

Chemical and biological warfare
Iraq 149–50w

Chemicals
Industrial health and safety 17–8w

Chevening scholarship programme
612–6w

Chidgey, Mr David
Questions
Animal welfare, EC trade 248w
Homeworking, Fees and charges 117w
Official receiver, County courts 318–9w

Child benefit
402w
Tax yields 651w
Taxation 392w

Child care
Family credit 706

Child Support Agency
Manpower 185–6w

Child workers
234w, 686w

Children
Alcoholic drinks 309w
Autism 142w
Health services 130w
Homicide 222w
Maintenance 187–9w, 552–4w
Press 43w
Social security benefits 473w

Children Act 1989
Questions
133w

Children in care
174w

Children's rights
175w

China
Arms embargoes 246–7w
Human rights 677w
Ministers' visits abroad 93w
Trade missions 341w

Chinook helicopters
Air accidents 183w

Chiropody
602w, 686w
Elderly 132–3w, 536w

Chisholm, Mr Malcolm,
Questions
Multiple occupation, Scotland 331w

Chlamydiosis
Screening 181w

Chlorofluorocarbons
Refrigeration 15w

Chorley
Sportsmatch 46w

Christianity
Millennium Exhibition 34w

Chronic fatigue syndrome
605w

Church and state
35w

Church Commissioners
Annual reports 295–6w
Investment 17–8, 34w, 295–7w
Taxation 34w

Church finance
17, 20

Church of England
Investment 18

Circuses
Nature conservation 22w

Cities (Process and Criteria for Designation) Bill 1997/98
Debates etc.
1R (02.06.98) 169–70

Civil engineering
Water storage 159w

Civil proceedings
Personal injury 69w

Civil servants
British nationality 620–2w
Northern Ireland Office 65w

Civil service agencies
Food standards 75w
Members' correspondence 1060

Civil service recruitment
Scottish Office 264–5w

Civil wars
Sudan 460–1w

Clapham, Mr Michael
Debates etc.
Business questions (11.06.98) 1220
Lowery, David (11.06.98) 1286–8
Questions
Multinational companies, Human rights 349

Clappison, Mr James
Debates etc.
Human Rights Bill (HL), Com (03.06.98) 388–93, 400, 408, 412–6, 423, 425–8, 433–4
Questions
Driving offences, Drug abuse 434–5w
Drug abuse, Night clubs 434w
Ecstasy, Drug abuse 320w, 433–4w, 568w
Electronic tagging, Contracts 303w, 648w
Forensic Science Service 435w
Home detention curfews 57–8w, 304w
Home detention curfews, Costs 433w, 565w
Home detention curfews, Sexual offences 57w
Prisoners, Self-mutilation 382w
Prisoners, Television 639–40w
Prisoners' incentives and earned privileges scheme 640w
Young offenders 482–3w

Clark, Rt Hon Alan
Debates etc.
Channel tunnel (03.06.98) 381
Intervention during ministerial statement (03.06.98) 370
Leasehold housing (10.06.98) 1003–4
Referendums (03.06.98) 281

Clark, Rt Hon Dr David, Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster
Debates etc.
Millennium compliance, Ministerial statements (08.06.98) 716–27
Questions
Better government programme 619w

Clark, Rt Hon Dr David*—*continued
Better Regulation Task Force, Public appointments 1–2w
Better Regulation Unit, Manpower 1w
Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, Ministerial powers 620w
Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, Open government 620w
Civil servants, British nationality 620–2w
Committee on Standards in Public Life 2w
Crown copyright 623w
Electronic government 1062–4
Information technology, Cumbria 1063
Ministers, Electronic mail 624w
Ministers' domestic visits, Lancaster 1059
Open government 619–20w, 1061–2, 1065–8
Open government, Codes of practice 629w

Clark, Mr Paul
Debates etc.
Channel tunnel (03.06.98) 377
Questions
Channel tunnel, Railway network 117w
Health services 173w

Clarke, Mr Charles
Questions
Regional airports, Local government borrowing 637–8w

Clarke, Rt Hon Tom, Minister for Film and Tourism, Dept for Culture Media and Sport
Questions
Alternative energy, Dept for Culture Media and Sport 493w
Energy consumption, Dept for Culture Media and Sport 558w
English Tourist Board 11–2, 493w
Film industry 43–4w
Film industry, Taxation 43w
Inquiries, Dept for Culture Media and Sport 559w
Ministerial Tourism Advisory Forum, Public appointments 560–4w
National Lottery, Film industry 164w
National Lottery, Tourism 11, 493–4w
New Opportunities Fund, After school clubs 10
Official hospitality, Dept for Culture Media and Sport 47–8w
Royal parks, Festivals and special occasions 44w
Small businesses, Dept for Culture Media and Sport 45w
Tourism 10–1
Tourism, Coastal areas 45w
Tourism, Harrow 11
Tourism, New deal for young people 669w
Transport, Dept for Culture Media and Sport 47w
Travelling expenses, Dept for Culture Media and Sport 558w

Class sizes
1179, 1181–2
Cumbria 700w
Essex 401w
Leicestershire 1178–80
Scotland 282w
Wales 676w

Cleaner Vehicles Task Force
16w

Clergy
Pensions 17

Clifton-Brown, Mr Geoffrey
Debates etc.
Nuclear weapons tests (01.06.98) 30

Clifton-Brown, Mr Geoffrey*—*continued
Questions
Delegated legislation 557w
Kashmir, UN resolutions 392w
National Audit Office 19
New Opportunities Fund, After school clubs 10
Pensions 467w
Taxation, Quarrying 494w
Vitamin B6 486

Closed circuit television
439w

Club of Three
677w

Clwyd, Ann
Questions
Afghanistan, Overseas aid 39w
Armed forces training, Indonesia 102–3w
Arms trade 421–2w
Arms trade, EC action 147w
Arms trade, Trade promotion 422w
Chevening scholarship programme 612–6w
Church Commissioners, Investment 17–8
Defence equipment, Exhibitions 385w, 504w
Defence Military Assistance Fund 422w
East Timor, EC external relations 355w
Export licensing, Cambodia 117–8w
Export licensing, Indonesia 440w
Indonesia, Arms trade 227w, 240w
Indonesia, ASSIST programme 487w
Millennium Exhibition, Sports 60w
Sudan, Overseas aid 352, 449w
Turkey, Human rights 146w

Coaker Mr Vernon
Debates etc.
Teaching and Higher Education Bill (HL), Rep adjourned (08.06.98) 777, 788, 820, 827–9
Teaching and Higher Education Bill (HL), Rep and 3R (09.06.98) 890, 920–1
Questions
Arms trade, EC action 240–1w

Coal mining
113w
Compensation 505w

Coastal areas
Tourism 45w

Coastal protection
344w, 601w

Cohen, Mr Harry
Questions
Armed forces training, Costs 101–2w
Astra Holdings 118w
Breast feeding, Publicity 404–5w
Economic Community of West African States Military Observer Group 101w
Fathers, Pay 710–1w
Industrial health and safety, Chemicals 17–8w
Intelligence services, Personal records 52w
National Lottery, Youth clubs 302w
Patients, Nutrition and health 179w
Sentencing 167w
Sexual offences, Interagency cooperation 303–4w

Collins, Mr Tim
Debates etc.
Belfast Agreement (01.06.98) 41
National Lottery Bill, Rep and 3R (01.06.98) 57–8, 69–71
Questions
Allison, Clive 148w
Occupational pensions 692

Colman, Mr Tony
Debates etc.
Review of Health Care in London Independent Advisory Panel (03.06.98) 300–3, 313, 318
Questions
Greater London Authority, Roads 636w

Colombia
Human rights 241–2w, 458w

Colvin, Mr Michael
Questions
Child workers 686w
Discretionary student grants 701–2w
Diseases, Travel 603w
Further education colleges 701w
Further education colleges, Student numbers 701w
Vaccination, Travel requirements 602–3w

Commercial television
12

Commission for Health Improvement
178w

Committee of Selection
(08.06.98) 691

Committee on Standards in Public Life
2w

Common agricultural policy
488
Green rates 531w
Tobacco 161

Common fisheries policy
74w

Common land
374w

Community care
Elderly 687–8w

Community Care (Residential Accommodation) Bill 1997/98
Debates etc.
Royal Assent (11.06.98) 1241

Community hospitals
604w
Oxfordshire (03.06.98) 341–8
Wales 62w

Community Legal Service
301w

Community service orders
482w

Community transport
Coventry 519–20w
West Midlands 519–20w

Company law
Association of Chief Police Officers 320w

Competition law
Ice cream 124w

Complaints against police
Scotland 77–9w

Comptroller and Auditor General
see National Audit Office

Compulsory purchase
631w

Computers in schools
1071–2

Concessionary television licences
Handicapped 316–7w

Conditional fee agreements
70w
General Council of the Bar 583w
Personal injury 69w

Confiscation of Alcohol (Young Persons) Act 1997
Questions
223w

Connex Rail
524w

Construction costs
Birmingham Relief Road 209w

Construction materials
Fire prevention 297–9w

Consultants
Northern Ireland Office 183w

Consumer protection
Caravans 126–7w
Funerals 123w, 161w

Contraceptives
136w, 180w, 238–9w, 462–3w
Publicity 536w

Contracting Out (Functions Relating to National Savings) Order 1998
Debates etc.
(08.06.98) 840–3

Contracts
Birmingham Relief Road 865
Electronic tagging 303w, 648w

Contracts for services
National Savings Agency (08.06.98) 840–3

Convention on the Civil Aspects of International Child Abduction
656w

Convictions
Road traffic offences 307–9w

Cook, Rt Hon Robin, Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs
Debates etc.
European Council (11.06.98) 1227–34, 1237–8, 1240
Nuclear weapons tests, Ministerial statements (01.06.98) 21–32
Questions
Arms to Sierra Leone Inquiry 679w
Foreign and Commonwealth Office, Inquiries 152w
Sierra Leone 143–6w, 345w
Sierra Leone, Arms trade 142–5w, 240w, 345–6w, 456–7w, 616–7w
Sierra Leone, Departmental correspondence 346w

Cooper, Ms Yvette
Debates etc.
Teaching and Higher Education Bill (HL), Rep adjourned (08.06.98) 830–1
Questions
National Lottery, Yorkshire and Humberside 668–9w
School leaving 701–3w
Shipping accidents 870
Unemployment, Educational qualifications 498–9w

Copthorne Barracks
105w

Corbett, Mr Robin
Questions
Drift nets 344w
Film industry 43–4w
Intelligence and Security Committee 665w
Multiple sclerosis, Health services 163
Police national computer, Probation and aftercare 52–3w

Corbyn, Mr Jeremy
Debates etc.
Teaching and Higher Education Bill (HL), Rep adjourned (08.06.98) 823, 830
Questions
Church and state 35w
Colombia, Human rights 241–2w
South Asia, Nuclear weapons tests 242–3w

Cormack, Sir Patrick
Debates etc.
Business questions (11.06.98) 1225
House of Commons procedure (04.06.98) 566, 585–9
Questions
Members' correspondence, Administrative delays 1060–1

Cornwall
Hospitals 1070

Cornwall and Isles of Scilly Health Authority
238w

Coroners
Judges 56w

Corporation tax
124w

Cosmetic surgery
127w

Cosmetics
Animal experiments 566w

Cost per pupil
704–6w

Cost per student
Further education 699w
Wales 229w

Cotter, Mr Brian
Debates etc.
Late Payment of Commercial Debts (Interest) Bill, Rep and 3R (01.06.98) 131–3, 138–9
Questions
Mediation UK 567w
Shipping, Government assistance 18w

Council housing
Scotland 330–1w

Council of Ministers
350–4w

Council tax
Second homes 509–10w, 576w

Council tax benefits
Wales 551w

Council tax capping
Derbyshire 420w, 635–6w

Counselling
Exservicemen 606w

Countryside
Public petitions (04.06.98) 595

Countryside stewardship scheme
Sites of special scientific interest 529w

County courts
Official receiver 318–9w

Court Funds Office
302w

Court of Protection
Loans 69w
Public Trust Office 69w

Court rules and procedures
584w

Courts
Information technology 584w

Cousins, Mr Jim
Debates etc.
Human Rights Bill (HL), Com (03.06.98) 473
Questions
Office for National Statistics, Public sector borrowing requirement 586w
Public sector borrowing requirement, Statistics 585–6w

Coventry
Community transport 519–20w

Cox, Mr Tom
Questions
Air force bases 102w
Armed forces, Germany 491w
Armed forces women 312w
Cycleways, Greater London 414w
Driving offences, Cellular phones 303–4w
Food standards, Civil service agencies 75w
Housing, Wandsworth 373w
Metropolitan Police, Ethnic minorities 305–6w
Priority routes, Greater London 18w
Prison population, Young offenders 382w
Prisoners, Suicide 306w
Road construction, Greater London 18w

Cran, Mr James
Questions
Ministry of Agriculture Fisheries and Food, Members' correspondence 199w, 451w
Ministry of Agriculture Fisheries and Food, Serials 197–8w

Cranston, Mr Ross
Debates etc.
Crown Prosecution Service (01.06.98) 50
Questions
Court rules and procedures 584w
General Council of the Bar, Conditional fee agreements 583w
Higher education admission 697w
Judiciary, Training 584w
Legal aid 583w

Crawley
New deal schemes 1188

Creative Industries Task Force
44w

Cricket
Racial discrimination 48–9w
Wales 591w

Crime and Disorder Bill (HL) 1997/98
Questions
219–20w

Crime prevention
St Helens 364

Crimes of violence
Health service staff 181w

Crops
495–6
Genetically modified organisms 417–8w

Crown copyright
623w

Crown Prosecution Service
337w, 500–2
Harmonisation of standards 499–500
Information technology 338w
Ministerial statements (01.06.98) 42–52

Cryer, Mrs Ann
Questions
Export credit guarantees, Indonesia 121w
Museums and galleries, Public transport 376w
Railway land 19w

Cryer, Mr John
Debates etc.
Business questions (11.06.98) 1221

Cultural heritage
UNESCO 560w

Cumbria
Class sizes 700w
Dentists 540w
Flood control 660w
Housing improvement 571w
Housing policy 571w
Information technology 1063
Road works 416w
Special education 699w
Standard assessment tasks 700w

Cummings, Mr John
Questions
Breast cancer, Screening 237w

Cunliffe, Mr Lawrence
Questions
Cancer, North West region 133w
Death, North West region 86–7w
Non-alcoholic drinks, Prices 868

Cunningham, Rt Hon Dr Jack, Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food
Questions
Beef, Exports 497–8
Bovine spongiform encephalopathy 493–4
Common agricultural policy 488
Drift nets 344w
EC Agriculture Council 202–3w
EC Fisheries Council 658–9w
Food standards 485
Ministry of Agriculture Fisheries and Food, Members' correspondence 199w, 451w
Ministry of Agriculture Fisheries and Food, Serials 197–8w
Supermarkets, Food prices 486
Trade missions, China 341w
Vitamin B6 486

Cunningham, Mr Jim
Questions
Air safety 635w
Aircraft noise 635w
Carbon dioxide, Air pollution control 211–2w, 299w
Carbon monoxide, Air pollution 211w
Channel tunnel, Railway network 573w
Community transport, West Midlands 519–20w
Cycleways 19w
Dental students, Higher education admission 140w
Elderly, Departmental coordination 369w
Film industry 43w
Fossil fuels, Air pollution control 211w
Health Service Commissioner 174w
Heavily indebted poor countries initiative 42w
Plutonium, Export controls 597w
Police, Manpower 437w
Police, Public holidays 437w
Pollution control, Prosecutions 299w
Rough sleepers initiative, West Midlands 19–20w
Social Exclusion Unit, Homelessness 213–4w
Transport of radioactive materials 577–8w

Cunningham, Ms Roseanna
Questions
Dounreay, Nuclear safety 120w
Dounreay, Uranium 594–5w
Radioactive materials, Export controls 119–20w

Cunningham, Ms Roseanna—continued
Road traffic offences, Scotland 196–7w

Curriculum
Health education 166–7
Industrial health and safety 130w

Curry, Rt Hon David
Debates etc.
Channel tunnel (03.06.98) 379
Electoral systems (02.06.98) 237–9
European Communities (Amendment) Bill, Allocation of time motion and Lords amendts (09.06.98) 936

Curtis-Thomas, Ms Claire
Debates etc.
Herring, Raymond (10.06.98) 1049–56

Customs
Postal services 328w

Customs and Excise
Accidents 499
Inquiries 142–3w
Prosecutions 498–9

Cycleways
19w
Greater London 414w
West Midlands 19w

Cycling
514w, 867–8

Cyprus
Peace negotiations 457–8w
Visas 168w

Dafis, Mr Cynog
Questions
School transport 1191
Water meters 855–6

Dairy farming
Farm incomes 341w
Wales 324–5w

Dalyell, Mr Tam
Debates etc.
Business questions (11.06.98) 1219
Channel tunnel (03.06.98) 381
Economic policy (11.06.98) 1209–10
Eritrea (08.06.98) 734
European Council (11.06.98) 1229, 1232, 1271–4, 1282
Millennium compliance (08.06.98) 726
Northern Ireland (Sentences) Bill, 2R (10.06.98) 1083
Teaching and Higher Education Bill (HL), Rep adjourned (08.06.98) 795, 810–1
Teaching and Higher Education Bill (HL), Rep and 3R (09.06.98) 883, 889, 898, 913, 919
Questions
Aircraft, Air bags 154w
Animal experiments, Primates 644–5w
Animal welfare, Protest 646w
Archaeological sites, Public buildings 44w
Bovine spongiform encephalopathy 494
Business questions 508
Dounreay, Nuclear fuel reprocessing 711–2
Genetic engineering, Ethics 680w
Guyana, Rain forests 648w
Hospitals, Ventilation 690w
Institute of Terrestrial Ecology 681w
Iraq, International assistance 231w
Lockerbie, Bombings 666w
Nature conservation, Departmental coordination 520w
Organ donors 690w
Scottish Parliament, Parliamentary buildings 657–8w
Social security benefits, Scotland 698
South Africa, Higher education 648w
Temporary employment, Research 1194

Dalyell, Mr Tam—continued
West coast railway line, Investment 520w

Darling, Mr Alistair, Chief Secretary to the Treasury
Questions
Capital investment 652w
Capital receipts initiative 89w
Economic policy, Public sector debt 650w
Government departments, Operating costs 651w
Government loans 494w
Local government finance 224w
Private finance initiative 223–4w
Public sector earnings 392w

Darvill, Mr Keith
Debates etc.
Review of Health Care in London Independent Advisory Panel (03.06.98) 306–9

Data banks
Government buildings 1064–5
Mentally disadvantaged 539w

Data Protection Act 1984
Questions
52w

Davey, Mr Edward
Debates etc.
Millennium compliance (08.06.98) 720

Davey, Mrs Valerie
Debates etc.
Teaching and Higher Education Bill (HL), Rep and 3R (09.06.98) 907, 921

Davidson, Mr Ian
Debates etc.
Teaching and Higher Education Bill (HL), Rep adjourned (08.06.98) 777
Questions
Water storage, Civil engineering 159w

Davies, Rt Hon Denzil
Questions
Hospital waiting lists, Wales 229w
NHS, Wales 61–2w
Public sector employment, Wales 673w

Davies, Mr Geraint
Debates etc.
Economic policy (11.06.98) 1209
Questions
National Air Traffic Services 637w

Davies, Mr Quentin
Debates etc.
European Council (11.06.98) 1261–2
Grantham and Kesteven General Hospital, Maternity services (10.06.98) 1170–5
Questions
New deal for lone parents 402w
Occupational pensions 108w
Stakeholder pensions 701

Davies, Rt Hon Ron, Secretary of State for Wales
Questions
Arts finance, Wales 589w
Cardiff Bay, Property development 545w
Cricket, Wales 591w
Football Trust, Wales 166w
Inquiries, Welsh Office 588–9w
Millennium Commission, Wales 590w
Museums and galleries, Wales 591w
Orchestras, Wales 589–90w
Theatres, Wales 590w

Davis, Rt Hon David
Debates etc.
Economic policy (11.06.98) 1208
Millennium compliance (08.06.98) 721–2

Dawson, Mr Hilton
Debates etc.
Teaching and Higher Education Bill (HL), Rep adjourned (08.06.98) 813, 832
Teaching and Higher Education Bill (HL), Rep and 3R (09.06.98) 905–6
Questions
Foster care 409–10w
Ministers' domestic visits, Lancaster 1059
Play groups, Government grants 257w
Residential care of children, Social workers 408–9w
Retirement pensions, Equal opportunities 111w
Roads, Lancashire 863

Day, Mr Stephen
Debates etc.
Electoral systems (02.06.98) 210
Questions
NHS trusts, Public appointments 157–8

Day nurseries
Tax allowances 693–4

Deaf
Juries 213w

Dean, Mrs Janet
Questions
EC Development Council 236w
Health education, Men 170w

Death
Cancer 155–6
Methadone 225w, 323w
North West region 86–7w

Death rate
86–7w

Debt collection
Non-domestic rates 374–5w

Debts
Developing countries 35w, 89–91w, 215–6w, 230–1w, 234w, 354–8, 370w, 588w
Rwanda 232w

Debts written off
Developing countries 494–6w

Defamation Act 1996
Questions
71w

Defence contracts
313w
EC law 313w
Security vetting 638w

Defence Dental Agency
Performance standards 396–7w

Defence equipment
Armed forces training 489w, 638–9w
Exhibitions 385w, 504w

Defence expenditure
RAF Menwith Hill 96–7w

Defence land
Hunting 209w
Land reclamation 207–9w

Defence Medical Training Organisation
Performance standards 394–5w

Defence Military Assistance Fund
422w

Defence Pay and Personnel Agency see Pay and Personnel Agency

Defence procurement
Aerospace industry 227–8w
Lockheed Martin 101w
Military aircraft 227–8w

Defence research
Uranium 182w

Defence Secondary Care Agency
Performance standards 395–6w

Delegated legislation
557w

Democratic Republic of the Congo
244w

Denham, Mr John, Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Dept of Social Security*
Questions
Dept of Social Security, Reviews 192w
Disability living allowance 470–2w, 547–9w, 705–6
Disability living allowance, Benefit integrity project 110w, 545–6w, 704–5
Disability living allowance, Departmental publications 549–50w
Disability living allowance, Social security recipients 548w
Fathers, Pay 710–1w
Handicap benefits 470w
Handicap benefits, Cancer 711–2w
Handicap benefits, Earnings rules 109w
Handicap benefits, Social security benefits rules 109w
Handicap benefits, Social security recipients 190–2w
Handicap benefits, Taxation 469w
Incapacity benefit, Medical examinations 476–7w
Incapacity benefit, Social security claims 253w
Incapacity benefit, Warrington 253–4w
Industrial injuries disablement benefit, Urinary system disorders 709w
National insurance contributions 467–8w
National Insurance Fund 550w
New deal for disabled people 112w, 473w, 711w
Occupational pensions 108w, 469w, 692
Occupational pensions, Scotland 551w
Pension Provision Group 552w
Pensioners, Income distribution 550–1w
Pensioners, Income support 468w, 707
Pensioners, Poverty 699–700
Pensioners, Scotland 477–80w
Pensions 551–2w, 701–2
Pensions, Carers 700–1
Pensions, Personal savings 703
Pensions Education Working Group 552w
Pensions review 702
Personal injury compensation, Social security benefits overpayment 550w
Personal pensions 700
Retirement pensions 111–2w, 467w, 546w
Retirement pensions, Equal opportunities 111w
Social Fund, Floods 187–9w
Social security recipients 189–90w
Stakeholder pensions 701–3
Vaccine damaged children, Compensation 250w, 550w
War pensions 252–3w
Widowers' benefits 250–1w
Widows' benefits 314w, 402–3w
Winter fuel payments 402w, 554–6w, 707–8
Winter fuel payments, Worcester 554–6w

Dental students
Higher education admission 140w

Dentists
239w
Cumbria 540w
Norfolk 129w

Departmental coordination
Elderly 214w, 369w
Genetic engineering 321w
Departmental coordination—continued
Nature conservation 520w
New deal for disabled people 365w

Departmental correspondence
300w, 1059–60
Dept of Social Security 552w
Sierra Leone 346w

Departmental forms
Firearms 220w, 310w, 431w
Integrated administration and control system 492

Departmental publications
Disability living allowance 549–50w

Departmental responsibilities
Exservicemen 94–5w
Human rights 647w, 656w

Deprivation indicators
157w

Dept for Culture Media and Sport
Alternative energy 493w
Energy consumption 558w
Inquiries 559w
Official hospitality 47–8w
Small businesses 45w
Transport 47w
Travelling expenses 558w

Dept for Education and Employment
Government information services 255w
Small businesses 140w

Dept for International Development
EC staff 446–7w
Ministerial policy advisors 37–8w

Dept for the Environment Transport and the Regions see Dept of the Environment Transport and the Regions

Dept of Health
Green papers 334w
Pilot schemes 688–90w
Small businesses 135w

Dept of Social Security
Departmental correspondence 552w
Inquiries 712w
Pilot schemes 710w
Reviews 192w

Dept of the Environment Transport and the Regions
Government buildings 623w
Non-departmental public bodies 3w
Pilot schemes 632–4w
Public appointments 3w
Public bodies 629w
Small businesses 29–30w

Dept of Trade and Industry
Economic and monetary union 122w
Government information services 126w
Green papers 126w
Millennium compliance 122w
Non-departmental public bodies 112w
Public appointments 113w
Small businesses 160–1w

Derbyshire
Council tax capping 420w, 635–6w
Educational finance 1075
Magistrates' courts 212w

Derelict land
510w, 859–60
Housing construction 510w, 858–60
Scotland 428–9w

Derringham School
357w

Developing countries
Debts 35w, 89–91w, 215–6w, 230–1w, 234w, 354–8, 370w, 588w
Debts written off 494–6w
Poverty 215w
Religious freedom 233w
Security industry 232–3w

Development Policy Forum
648–9w

Devon
Pest control 157–8w

Dewar, Rt Hon Donald, Secretary of State for Scotland*
Questions
Class sizes, Scotland 282w
Direct labour departments, Scotland 580–1w
Educational assessment, Scotland 265w
Educational finance, Scotland 262–4w
Government information services, Scottish Office 84w
Green papers, Scottish Office 259w
Housing finance, Scotland 331–2w
Legal aid scheme, Scotland 279–80w, 502w
Ministerial policy advisors, Scottish Office 260w
Moray College 332–3w
Mortgage defaulters, Scotland 291–3w
Pre-school education, Scotland 268–9w, 271–5w
Public appointments, Scotland 78w
Rented housing, Glasgow 333w
Rented housing, Scotland 333w
Repairs and maintenance, Scottish Office 77–8w
School population, Scotland 282–9w
Scottish Office, Civil service recruitment 264–5w
Scottish Office, Private finance initiative 278w
Scottish Office, Public appointments 384w
Scottish Office, Publicity 266–7w
Student loans, Scotland 275–8w
Unemployment, Dundee 332w
Youth employment, Dundee 581–2w

Diabetes
Medical equipment 541w

Diet and disease
Food labelling 249w

Digital television
5, 45w

Diplomatic service
St Helena 247w

Dir85/337/EEC
502–3w

Dir91/271/EEC
517w

Dir97/11/EC
525–6w

Direct labour departments
Scotland 580–1w

Director of Public Prosecutions see Crown Prosecution Service

Directories
Millennium compliance 680w

Disability Discrimination Act 1995
Questions
138w, 544w

Disability living allowance
470–2w, 547–9w, 705–6
Benefit integrity project 110w, 545–6w, 704–5

Disability living allowance*—*continued
Departmental publications 549–50w
Social security recipients 548w

Disabled facilities grants
416w
Elderly 17w

Disabled person's tax credit
650–1w

Disabled workers
Wheelchairs 699–700w

Disadvantaged
Health 168
Housing standards 214w
Sports 6–7

Disaster relief
231–2w, 355–6

Discretionary student grants
205w, 701–2w

Disease control
Bovine spongiform encephalopathy 490
Dogs 530w

Diseases
Travel 603w

Dismore, Mr Andrew
Debates etc.
Crown Prosecution Service (01.06.98) 52
Leasehold housing (10.06.98) 995, 1005–6
Questions
"Access to Justice with Conditional Fees Consultation Paper" 301w
Community Legal Service 301w
EU Justice and Home Affairs Council 378–80w
Health education, Men 170w
Multilateral Agreement on Investment 234w

Distributive trade
Petrol 115w

Dobbin, Mr Jim
Questions
Health education, Men 161–2

Dobson, Rt Hon Frank, Secretary of State for Health*
Questions
Health, Disadvantaged 168
Health authorities, Greater Manchester 541w
Hospital discharges 165–6
Hospital waiting lists 158–9
NHS, Social services 165
NHS trusts, Public appointments 157–9

Doctors' list of patients
130–1w

Dogs
Disease control 530w

Domestic appliances
Energy conservation 7w

Domestic energy conservation
(10.06.98) 1010–32

Domestic violence
Immigration rules 167w
Women 476w, 703–4

Donaldson, Mr Jeffrey M
Debates etc.
Northern Ireland (Sentences) Bill, 2R (10.06.98) 1114, 1129–34

Doncaster
Pre-school education 364w

Dorchester
Road construction 297w

Dorrell, Rt Hon Stephen
Debates etc.
Economic policy (11.06.98) 1207

Double taxation
Tax allowances 391w

Dounreay
Nuclear fuel reprocessing 385–6w, 595–6w, 709–15
Nuclear Installations Inspectorate 120w
Nuclear safety 120–1w, 715
Uranium 364–5, 594–5w

Dredging
Licensing 525–6w

Drew, Mr David
Debates etc.
Agenda 21 (03.06.98) 476–80
Domestic energy conservation (10.06.98) 1021–2, 1030
Electoral systems (02.06.98) 216
Questions
After school clubs, Rural areas 695w
Derelict land 859
Smallholdings, Local government land 339w

Drift nets
201w, 344w

Drinking and driving
868
Road accidents 20w, 22–3w

Drinks Containers (Redemption) Bill 1997/98
Debates etc.
1R (03.06.98) 385–7

Driving licences
Post Office 125w

Driving offences
Cellular phones 303–4w
Disqualifications 309w
Drug abuse 434–5w

Driving tests
Chelmsford 156w

Drug abuse
180w
Driving offences 434–5w
EC action 568w
Ecstasy 320w, 433–4w, 568w
Entertainment licensing 434w
Medical treatments 336–7w, 464–5w
Night clubs 434w
Primary education 693w
Prisoners 310–1w
Road accidents 20w

Drug and Alcohol Misuse Welsh Advisory Committee
see Welsh Advisory Committee on Drug and Alcohol Misuse

Drug crimes
1076
Prison visits 439w

Drugs
Expenditure 130w
Prices 177–8w
Residential care 686–7w

Duncan, Mr Alan
Debates etc.
Review of Health Care in London Independent Advisory Panel (03.06.98) 316–9
Questions
Hospital waiting lists, Worcestershire 154

Duncan Smith, Mr Iain
Questions
Dept of Social Security, Reviews 192w
Handicap benefits, Social security recipients 190–2w
NHS trusts, Greater London 408w
Pensioners, Means tested benefits 697–8
Social security recipients 189–90w
Working benefits campaign 546–7w

Dundee
Unemployment 332w
Youth employment 581–2w

Dunwoody, Mrs Gwyneth
Debates etc.
Crown Prosecution Service (01.06.98) 49
House of Commons procedure (04.06.98) 551, 565–6, 568–9, 571–4, 578, 584, 592
House of Commons procedure, Points of order (10.06.98) 1077
Members' correspondence, Points of order (04.06.98) 514
Questions
Church Commissioners, Taxation 34w
Civil service agencies, Members' correspondence 1060
Crown Prosecution Service 500
Glaucoma 164
School transport 1190

Duty free allowances
194w, 215w, 665–6w
Air travel 21w, 570–1w
Ferries 328w, 417w
Redundancy 122w, 1074

E coli
Milk 601w

Eagle, Angela, Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Dept of the Environment Transport and the Regions
Debates etc.
Agenda 21 (03.06.98) 480–4
Domestic energy conservation (10.06.98) 1024, 1027–32
Questions
Access to countryside, Liability for animals 518w
Advisory Committee on Releases to the Environment 5w
Animal products, Import controls 22w
Asbestos, Import controls 517w
Birds, Nature conservation 30w
Carbon dioxide, Air pollution control 211–2w, 299w
Carbon monoxide, Air pollution 211w
Chlorofluorocarbons, Refrigeration 15w
Dept of the Environment Transport and the Regions, Public bodies 629w
East Midlands Regional Development Agency 630–1w
EC grants and loans, Wales 4w
Energy conservation 574w
Energy conservation, Domestic appliances 7w
Environment Agency, Government buildings 856
Fossil fuels, Air pollution control 211w
Frogs, Import controls 373–4w
Genetically modified organisms, Crops 417–8w
Genetically modified organisms, Environment protection 5–7w
Genetically modified organisms, Maize 524–5w
Ground water, Pollution 31–2w
Hedges and ditches 630w
Hydrofluorocarbons 15w
Hydrofluorocarbons, Refrigeration 14–5w
Industrial accidents 634w
Eagle, Angela—continued
Industrial health and safety, Chemicals 17–8w
Industrial health and safety, Fuels 518–9w
Industrial health and safety, Hazardous materials 520–3w
Inland waterways, Navigation 510w
Land pollution, Industrial wastes 16–7w
Land reclamation 9w, 13w
Litter, Chelmsford 299w
Local authorities, Millennium compliance 4–5w
Mediation UK 13–4w
Millennium Exhibition, Flood control 33w
Millennium Exhibition, Land pollution 30–1w
National air quality strategy 417w
National parks 518w
Nature conservation, Circuses 22w
Nature conservation, Departmental coordination 520w
New Forest, National parks 518w
Non-departmental public bodies, Dept of the Environment Transport and the Regions 3w
Ozone, Air pollution 415–6w
Pennine Way 569–70w
Pilot schemes, Dept of the Environment Transport and the Regions 632–4w
Pollution control, Prosecutions 299w
Pollution monitoring 9–13w
Public appointments, Dept of the Environment Transport and the Regions 3w
Regional development agencies 509w
Regional development agencies, Liverpool 509w
Regional development agencies, South West region 509w
Rights of way 23w
River Tame, Sewage 372–3w
Rivers, Sites of special scientific interest 572w
Seas and oceans, Nature conservation 1–3w
Sewage, Water treatment 17w, 517w
Sewers 32w
Sheep dipping 536w
Sites of special scientific interest 579w
Sites of special scientific interest, Lancashire 370–1w
Small businesses, Dept of the Environment Transport and the Regions 29–30w
South Downs 14w, 636w
Stray dogs 516–7w
Waste disposal, Agricultural land 28w, 420w
Water abstraction 153w
Water conservation 17w
Water storage, Civil engineering 159w
Wild boar 155–6w, 662w

Eagle, Maria
Debates etc.
Eritrea (08.06.98) 735
Millennium compliance (08.06.98) 721
Questions
Accidents, Inquiries 4w
Court Funds Office 302w
EC Telecommunications Council 162–4w
Legal costs, Public inquiries 72w
Open government 1061
Prescription drugs 171w
Regional development agencies, Liverpool 509w

Early retirement
NHS pensions 407w
Teachers 358–63w

Earnings rules
Handicap benefits 109w

East London
Alternative medicine 605w

East Midlands Regional Development Agency
630–1w

East Sussex
Further education 694w

East Timor
EC external relations 355w
Ministers' visits abroad 355–6w

Easter
Sunday trading 168w

EC action
Alternative energy 507w
Arms trade 147w, 240–1w, 488w
Drug abuse 568w
Eggs 338w
Fisheries (01.06.98) 143
Food surpluses 455w
Tibet 149w
Women 473–4w

EC Agriculture Council
202–3w

EC aid
Bulgaria 459w
Disclosure of information 446w
Sierra Leone 236w
Sudan 36w
Sustainable development 447w

EC countries
Public sector debt 327–8w

EC Culture Council
165w

EC Development Council
236w, 447w

EC Draft 6123/98
(01.06.98) 143

EC Education and Social Affairs Council
450–1w

EC external relations
East Timor 355w
Israel 347–8w
Palestinians 243w

EC external trade
Israel 149w

EC Finance Council
193w, 225–6w
Economic and monetary union 88–9w

EC Fisheries Council
658–9w

EC Foreign Affairs Council
354–5w, 678–9w

EC grants and loans
508w
Administrative costs 261w, 481w
Nomenclature of statistical territorial units 384w
Northern Ireland 481w
Regional aid 161w, 319–20w
Scotland 261w
Wales 4w, 146w, 193w, 425–6w, 507–8w

EC Internal Market Council
322–3w

EC law
Butter 454w
Defence contracts 313w
Food labelling 453w
Milk 534w

EC Monetary Committee
442w

EC presidency
362

EC Social Charter
North West region 684w

EC staff
Dept for International Development 446–7w

EC Telecommunications Council
162–4w

EC trade
Animal welfare 248w

Economic and monetary union
88w, 496w
Banking supervision 329–30w
Dept of Trade and Industry 122w
EC Finance Council 88–9w
Information technology 193w
Italy 584–5w
Seigniorage 442w
Wales 589w

Economic Community of West African States Military Observer Group
101w

Economic policy
Ministerial statements (11.06.98) 1195–215
Public sector debt 650w

Economic situation
Asia 91w

Ecstasy
Drug abuse 320w, 433–4w, 568w

Education action zones
695w

Education development plans
204–5w

Educational assessment
Scotland 265w

Educational equipment
Tax allowances 654w

Educational finance
Argyll and Bute 432w
Derbyshire 1075
Hereford and Worcester 704w
National insurance contributions 137w
Scotland 262–4w
Suffolk 1072
Worcestershire 1187–8

Educational publications
Scotland 502w

Educational qualifications
Unemployment 498–9w

Educational standards
698w, 1074

Educational visits
Farms 696w

Edwards, Mr Huw
Questions
Defence Medical Training Organisation, Performance standards 394–5w
Farm incomes, Retail trade 487
Medical Supplies Agency, Performance standards 395w
NHS trusts, Wales 166w
Open government 619–20w
Rural transport, Wales 675–6w
Welsh National Board for Nursing Midwifery and Health Visiting 675w

Eggs
EC action 338w

Elderly
Better government programme 634–5w, 1066

Elderly—continued
Chiropody 132–3w, 536w
Community care 687–8w
Departmental coordination 214w, 369w
Disabled facilities grants 17w
Population projection 442–3w
Residential care 463–4w

Elections
Hong Kong 246w, 362
Northern Ireland Assembly 369–70w

Electoral systems
Opposition days (02.06.98) 171–268

Electricity tariffs
Low incomes 503–4w

Electroconvulsive therapy
Bro Taf Health Authority 672–3w

Electronic government
1062–4

Electronic mail
Ministers 624w

Electronic tagging
Contracts 303w, 648w

Elgin Marbles
3–4, 302w

Ellman, Mrs Louise
Questions
Compulsory purchase 631w
Creative Industries Task Force 44w
Drugs, Expenditure 130w
Drugs, Prices 177–8w
Hospital beds, Liverpool 540w
Regional airports, Air routes 580w

Emergency planning
Local government finance 436–7w

Emery, Rt Hon Sir Peter
Debates etc.
Eritrea (08.06.98) 733
Questions
Restricted Enforcement Unit, Arms trade 676–7w

Employment
86w

Employment agencies
NHS 602w

Employment schemes
Ethnic minorities 1185–6
Lancashire 1188–9

Empty property
NHS 686w

Energy conservation
574w
Domestic appliances 7w

Energy consumption
Dept for Culture Media and Sport 558w
Ministry of Agriculture Fisheries and Food 528w
Ministry of Defence 107w, 492w
Treasury 440–1w

Energy prices
Business premises 568–9w

English Sports Council
National Lottery 6–7

English Tourist Board
11–2, 493w

Ennis, Mr Jeff
Questions
Dredging, Licensing 525–6w
Pre-school education, Barnsley 364w

Entertainment licensing
Drug abuse 434w

Entry clearances
Manpower 356–7w
Nigeria 306–7w
Sri Lanka 53w

Environment Agency
Government buildings 856
Sea level 341w

Environment protection
Genetically modified organisms 5–7w
Government Office for Eastern Region 300w

Environmental health
162

Environmentally sensitive areas
Overseas investment 42w

Epilepsy
131–2w, 407–8w, 537w

Epsom
Police stations 646w

Equal opportunities
Retirement pensions 111w

Eritrea
Ministerial statements (08.06.98) 728–35

Essex
Class sizes 401w

Ethics
Genetic engineering 680w

Ethnic minorities
Employment schemes 1185–6
Foreign and Commonwealth Office 487–8w
Magistrates 484–5w
Metropolitan Police 305–6w
New deal schemes 1177
Northern Ireland 184–5w

EU Justice and Home Affairs Council
378–80w

EUREKA
597w

Euro
441w, 492–3, 496w
Agricultural subsidies 453w
Publicity 585w
Teaching aids 457w

European Charter for Regional or Minority Languages
350w

European Communities
see (also) EC headings

European Communities
Conferences 616w
Wales 426w

European Communities (Amendment) Bill 1997/98
Debates etc.
Allocation of time motion and Lords amendts (09.06.98) 930–79
Royal Assent (11.06.98) 1241

European Convention on Human Rights
311w
Channel Islands 55w

European Council
Furniture 461–2w

European Development Fund
UK contributions to EC budget 448w

European Parliament Members
Candidate selection 436w

European voluntary service for young people
137w

Eurostar
579w

Evacuees Reunion Association
424w

Evans, Mr Nigel
Debates etc.
Business questions (11.06.98) 1224
Electoral systems (02.06.98) 186, 206
Referendums (03.06.98) 284
Registration of Political Parties Bill, 2R (04.06.98) 527, 541–5, 547
Questions
Armed forces casualties 105–6w
Business questions 512–3
EC Social Charter, North West region 684w
Employment schemes, Lancashire 1188–9
Milk, Production quotas 341w
Road accidents, Drinking and driving 20w
Road accidents, Drug abuse 20w
Road traffic 209–10w
Road traffic offences, Lancashire 53w

Ewing, Mrs Margaret
Questions
Beekeeping, Agricultural subsidies 247–8w, 275w
Bees, Varroasis 247–8w, 275w
Class sizes, Scotland 282w
Council housing, Scotland 330–1w
Defence contracts 313w
Defence contracts, EC law 313w
Direct labour departments, Scotland 580–1w
East Timor, Ministers' visits abroad 355–6w
Educational assessment, Scotland 265w
Educational finance, Scotland 262–4w
Export credit 504–5w
Financial institutions, Jersey 443–4w
Fireworks, Safety measures 162w
Hospital waiting lists, Scotland 289–90w
Housing finance, Scotland 429–30w
Legal aid scheme, Scotland 279–80w
Lone parents, Social security benefits 315–6w
Means tested benefits 251–2w
Merchant seamen, Medical examinations 578–9w
Moray College 332–3w
Mortgage defaulters, Scotland 291–3w
Negligence, Scotland 280w
NHS, Administrative costs 265–6w
NHS finance, Scotland 197w
NHS trusts, Executives 266w
NHS trusts, Expenditure 264w
Pre-school education, Scotland 268–75w
Prison population, Scotland 280–2w
Private finance initiative 223–4w
School population, Scotland 282–9w
Scottish Office, Civil service recruitment 264–5w
Scottish Office, Private finance initiative 278w
Scottish Office, Publicity 266–7w
Student loans, Scotland 275–8w
Unemployment, Dundee 332w
War pensions 252–3w
Youth employment, Dundee 581–2w

Exchange rates
Agriculture 492

Executives
NHS trusts 266w

Exhaust emission controls
871

Exhibitions
Defence equipment 385w, 504w

Expert Panel on Air Quality Standards
see Air Quality Standards Expert Panel

Export controls
Plutonium 597w
Radioactive materials 119–20w

Export credit
504–5w

Export credit guarantees
593w
Indonesia 121w

Export financing
321w

Export licensing
125–6w
Arms exports 594w
Cambodia 117–8w
Indonesia 440w

Export rebates
Agricultural products 454–5w

Export subsidies
41w
Barley 532w

Exports
Beef 339–40w, 497–8, 531–2w, 1072
Indonesia 121w
Microbiology 604w

Exservicemen
Counselling 606w
Departmental responsibilities 94–5w

Ex-Services Mental Welfare Society
422w

External financing limits
Post Office 115w

Extradition
USA 643–4w

Eye disorders
Wales 671w

Eye tests
542w
Glaucoma 176–7w

Faber, Mr David
Questions
Import duties, Israel 327w
Israel, EC external relations 347–8w
Palestinians, EC external relations 243w
Parliamentary Commissioner for Administration 411–2w
Public Trust Office 68–9w, 411–2w
Sierra Leone, Arms trade 144w

Fabricant, Mr Michael
Debates etc.
Human Rights Bill (HL), Com (03.06.98) 474–5
Referendums (03.06.98) 278, 281, 287
Questions
Business questions 512
Crown Prosecution Service 500–1
Employment schemes, Ethnic minorities 1185–6
Farmers, Bureaucracy 491
House of Commons procedure, Disclosure of information 558w
Standard spending assessments 861

Fallon, Mr Michael
Questions
Evacuees Reunion Association 424w
Personal savings, Channel Islands 652w

Families
Women's employment 708
Working hours 692–3

Family credit
Child care 706

Family income
475–6w

Family planning
129–30w
Northern Ireland 65–6w

Farm incomes
340w, 486–7
Dairy farming 341w
Interest rates 487–8
Retail trade 487

Farmers
Bureaucracy 491

Farms
Educational visits 696w
Furs 72–3w

Fatchett, Mr Derek, Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Office*
Debates etc.
Atkinson, George, Prisoners (02.06.98) 272–6
Lowery, David (11.06.98) 1288–92
Western Sahara (03.06.98) 336–40
Questions
Afghanistan, Arms embargoes 349w
Afghanistan, Human rights 461w
Africa, Visas 346–7w
Algeria, Human rights 611–2w
Algeria, Visas 459–60w
Allison, Clive 148w
Arms trade, EC action 240–1w
Ascension Island 247w
British dependent territories 150w
Chevening scholarship programme 612–6w
China, Arms embargoes 246–7w
China, Human rights 677w
Colombia, Human rights 241–2w
Democratic Republic of the Congo 244w
East Timor, EC external relations 355w
East Timor, Ministers' visits abroad 355–6w
Entry clearances, Manpower 356–7w
European Charter for Regional or Minority Languages 350w
Hong Kong, Elections 246w
India, Nuclear weapons tests 152w
Indonesia, Arms trade 151–2w, 240w
Indonesia, ASSIST programme 487w
Indonesia, Human rights 146–7w
Iran, Arms embargoes 245–6w
Iran, British embassies 618w
Kashmir, UN resolutions 392w
Ottawa Convention 356w
Panchen Lama 677w
St Helena, Diplomatic service 247w
St Helena, Migrant workers 356w
Sierra Leone, Governments in exile 486–7w
Small businesses, Foreign and Commonwealth Office 149w
Sudan, Civil wars 460–1w
Sudan, Genocide 460w
Sudan, Human rights 612w
Taiwan, Arms trade 349w
Thailand, Overseas aid 168–9w
Tibet, EC action 149w
Travelling expenses, Foreign and Commonwealth Office 168w
Turks and Caicos Islands, Ministers' visits abroad 348–9w
Turks and Caicos Islands, Overseas aid 349w
Venezuela, Prisoners 618w
Western Sahara, Referendums 239w
Yemen, Journalists 617–8w

Fathers
Pay 710–1w
Tax rates and bands 401–2w

Feltham Young Offender Institution and Remand Centre
Prison staff 52w

Ferries
Duty free allowances 328w, 417w
Transport of radioactive materials 631–2w

Fertility
Medical treatments 169w
North Cumbria Health Authority 169w

Festivals and special occasions
Royal parks 44w

Field, Rt Hon Frank, Minister of State, Dept of Social Security*
Questions
Dept of Social Security, Departmental correspondence 552w
Housing benefits, Social security abuse 478–9w
Housing benefits, Social security benefits overpayment 253w
Inquiries, Dept of Social Security 712w
Members' correspondence, Administrative delays 112w
Pensioners, Means tested benefits 697–8
Social security, Expenditure 475w
Social security reform 469w
Stakeholder pensions 697

Film industry
43–4w
National Lottery 164w
Taxation 43w

Finance and Services Select Committee
(05.06.98) 682

"Finance for UK Capital Goods and Project Exports"
321w

Financial institutions
Jersey 443–4w

Fines
Greater Manchester 485–6w
Lincolnshire 67w
Road traffic offences 309w

Fire prevention
Construction materials 297–9w

Fire services
Northern Ireland (08.06.98) 846

Fire Services (Amendment) (Northern Ireland) Order 1998
Debates etc.
(08.06.98) 846

Firearms
Compensation 438–9w, 566–7w
Departmental forms 220w, 310w, 431w

Fireworks
Import controls 162w
Safety measures 162w

Fish conservation
Scotland 582w

Fisher, Mr Mark, Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Dept for Culture Media and Sport*
Debates etc.
National Lottery Bill, Rep and 3R (01.06.98) 64, 77–80, 109–11
Questions
Archaeological sites, Public buildings 44w
Art works, VAT 3
Arts Council of England 2–3
BBC 492–3w

Fisher, Mr Mark—continued*
Cable television, Local broadcasting 163–4w
EC Culture Council 165w
Elgin Marbles 302w
Museums and galleries, Public transport 376w
National Lottery, Performing arts 9
Performing arts, Finance 9
Performing arts, Kettering 5–6
Public libraries, Blind 560w
Public libraries, Information technology 165w
S4C 302w
Theatres, Arts finance 1–2
UNESCO, Cultural heritage 560w

Fisheries
EC action (01.06.98) 143

Fishery protection
Spain 106w

Fishing grounds
75w

Fishing quotas
660–1w

Fitzpatrick, Jim
Debates etc.
Channel tunnel (03.06.98) 382–3
Leasehold housing (10.06.98) 987–90, 1005
Questions
Colombia, Human rights 458w
Greyhound racing 435–6w

Fitzsimons, Lorna
Debates etc.
Teaching and Higher Education Bill (HL), Rep adjourned (08.06.98) 829–30
Questions
Health authorities, Greater Manchester 541w
Hospitals, Construction 171w
Pay and Personnel Agency, Performance standards 488w
Women's employment, Families 708

Flexible working
Manufacturing industries 508w

Flight, Mr Howard
Questions
Dept of Trade and Industry, Millennium compliance 122w
Economic and monetary union, Italy 584–5w
Housing construction, West Sussex 9w
Occupational pensions 469w
Taxation, Child benefit 392w
Teachers, Pay 624w, 703w
Terminal care 174w
Tuition fees, Higher education admission 1192–3

Flint, Caroline
Debates etc.
Teaching and Higher Education Bill (HL), Rep adjourned (08.06.98) 768, 778, 817
Teaching and Higher Education Bill (HL), Rep and 3R (09.06.98) 908, 923–4
Questions
Coal mining, Compensation 505w
Women, EC action 473–4w

Flood control
Cumbria 660w
Millennium Exhibition 33w

Floods
Northampton 187–9w
Social Fund 187–9w

Flynn, Paul
Debates etc.
Electoral systems (02.06.98) 171
Questions
Antismoking campaign, Young people 260–1w, 324w, 375w, 685w
Benzodiazepines, Pregnant women 463w
Business questions 511
Cardiff Prison, Operating costs 483–4w
Dept of Social Security, Departmental correspondence 552w
Drug abuse 180w
Drug abuse, Medical treatments 336–7w, 464–5w
M4, Road traffic 670–1w
Methadone, Death 225w, 323w
National Insurance Fund 550w
Nuclear power 714
Nuclear power stations, Health hazards 597–8w
Ottawa Convention 356w
Pension Provision Group 552w
Pensions 551–2w
Pensions Education Working Group 552w
Prescription drugs, Wales 545w
Prison population 223w
Prisoners, Drug abuse 310–1w
Prisons, Private sector 382–3w
Retirement pensions 546w
Smoking, Young people 136w, 260w, 323–4w
Stakeholder pensions 702–3
Sudan, Genocide 460w
Tobacco, Agricultural subsidies 344w
Tobacco, Retail trade 505w
Tobacco duties 327w
Welsh Advisory Committee on Drug and Alcohol Misuse, Public appointments 376–8w

Food hygiene
Inspections 535w

Food labelling
340w
Diet and disease 249w
EC law 453w
Genetically modified organisms 498

Food poisoning
535w
Untreated milk 76w

Food prices
Supermarkets 486

Food standards
485
Civil service agencies 75w

Food Standards Agency
339w

Food surpluses
EC action 455w

Football Trust
Wales 166w

Foreign and Commonwealth Office
Ethnic minorities 487–8w
Inquiries 152w
Small businesses 149w
Travelling expenses 168w

Foreigners
Prison population 567–8w

Forensic Science Service
435w

Forestry Commission
Hunting 427–8w

Forth, Mr Eric
Debates etc.
Electoral systems (02.06.98) 174

Forth, Mr Eric—continued*
House of Commons procedure (04.06.98) 555–6
Late Payment of Commercial Debts (Interest) Bill, Rep and 3R (01.06.98) 121–2, 124, 130, 139–41
Referendums (03.06.98) 277, 279–81
Registration of Political Parties Bill, 2R (04.06.98) 539–40
Questions
Art works 4
Business questions 513
Members' correspondence, Administrative delays 1066
Taxis, Greater London 565w

Fossil fuels
Air pollution control 211w

Foster, Rt Hon Derek
Questions
Employment schemes, Ethnic minorities 1186
Interest rates, Industry 1070
New deal for lone parents 706

Foster, Mr Don
Debates etc.
Teaching and Higher Education Bill (HL), Rep adjourned (08.06.98) 751–3, 775, 810, 824–6
Teaching and Higher Education Bill (HL), Rep and 3R (09.06.98) 890–1
Questions
Class sizes 1179
General Certificate of Secondary Education 624–5w
Teachers, Early retirement 358–63w

Foster, Mr Michael, (Hastings and Rye)*
Questions
Business questions 511

Foster, Mr Michael John, (Worcester)*
Questions
Educational finance, Hereford and Worcester 704w
Further education, Cost per student 699w
Hospitals, Worcestershire 154–5
Magistrates' courts, Worcester 412w
Motor vehicles, Lighting 20–1w
Pre-school education, Hereford and Worcester 708–9w
School crossing patrols 21w
Teacher training, Student numbers 363w
Television, Sports 46–7w
Urban areas, Management 20w
Winter fuel payments, Worcester 554–6w

Foster care
409–10w

Foulkes, Mr George, Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for International Development*
Questions
Niger, Overseas aid 231w
Overseas aid 231w
Overseas aid, Charities 356
Sudan, Overseas aid 355–6, 449w

Fowler, Rt Hon Sir Norman
Debates etc.
Registration of Political Parties Bill, 2R (04.06.98) 524–8, 546
Questions
Immigration Service (Ports), Manpower 646w
Police, Finance 646w
Political refugees, Expenditure 643w
Political refugees, Work permits 437–8w

Fowler, Rt Hon Sir Norman—continued*
Ports, Passengers 646–7w

Fox, Dr Liam
Debates etc.
Electoral systems (02.06.98) 256–60, 264
Questions
Ministerial policy advisors, Government departments 664w

France
Transport of radioactive materials 414w

Fraser, Mr Christopher
Debates etc.
National Lottery Bill, Rep and 3R (01.06.98) 64–8, 71, 90–1
Referendums (03.06.98) 288–90
Questions
Educational standards 698w
Graduates 700–1w
Livestock, Animal welfare 659–60w
Overseas investment, Russia 505–6w

Fraud
Motor vehicles 16w

Free school meals
Scotland 431w

Frogs
Import controls 373–4w

Fuels
Industrial health and safety 518–9w
Navy 607w

Funerals
Consumer protection 123w, 161w

Furniture
European Council 461–2w

Furs
Farms 72–3w

Further education
Cost per student 699w
East Sussex 694w
Wales 63w

Further education colleges
701w
Student numbers 701w

Future large aircraft
421w

Fyfe, Maria
Debates etc.
Teaching and Higher Education Bill (HL), Rep adjourned (08.06.98) 786, 822
Questions
Student grants, Scotland 428w
Women, Government departments 694–5

G8
see Group of Eight

Galbraith, Mr Sam, Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Scottish Office*
Questions
Antismoking campaign, Young people 260–1w
Arts sponsorship, Scotland 581w
Asthma, Scotland 85w
Breast cancer, Scotland 657w
Hospital waiting lists, Scotland 289–90w
Negligence, Scotland 280w
NHS, Administrative costs 265–6w
NHS finance, Scotland 197w
NHS trusts, Executives 266w
NHS trusts, Expenditure 264w
Pre-school education, Scotland 269–71w
Scottish National Sleep Laboratory 81–2w
Secure accommodation, Scotland 429w
Smoking, Young people 260w

Gale, Mr Roger
Questions
Duty free allowances 215w, 665–6w
Duty free allowances, Redundancy 122w
Ferries, Duty free allowances 417w
Firearms, Compensation 438–9w
New deal schemes, Thanet 449–50w

Gangmasters
339w, 527–9w

Gapes, Mr Mike
Debates etc.
Channel tunnel (03.06.98) 384
European Communities (Amendment) Bill, Allocation of time motion and Lords amendts (09.06.98) 938
European Council (11.06.98) 1237, 1241, 1255–9
Nuclear weapons tests (01.06.98) 31–2
Questions
New deal for long term unemployed 693w
New deal schemes 1189

Gardiner, Mr Barry
Debates etc.
Gas supply industry, Regulatory systems (09.06.98) 980–3
Leasehold housing (10.06.98) 998–1003
Questions
Business Link London North West, Finance 161–2w
Leasehold housing, Service charges 158–9w

Garnier, Mr Edward
Debates etc.
Human Rights Bill (HL), Com (03.06.98) 398, 401, 407, 411, 437–45, 450, 460–1
Questions
Business questions 513
Civil proceedings, Personal injury 69w
Conditional fee agreements 70w
Crown Prosecution Service 500
Defamation Act 1996 71w
Legal aid, Barristers 70–1w
Legal aid, Personal injury 69w
Legal aid, Solicitors 70w
Open government 1067
Theatres, Market Harborough 6

Garth Prison
Prison accommodation 439w

Gas fired power stations
507w
Planning permission 113–4w

Gas supply industry
Regulatory systems (09.06.98) 980–6

Gascoigne, Paul
7

General Certificate of Secondary Education
624–5w

General Council of the Bar
Conditional fee agreements 583w

General practitioners
Primary care groups 181w

Genetic engineering
597w
Departmental coordination 321w
Ethics 680w

Genetically modified organisms
496
Crops 417–8w
Environment protection 5–7w
Food labelling 498
Maize 524–5w
Public opinion 535w

Genocide
Sudan 460w

George, Mr Andrew
Questions
Council tax, Second homes 509–10w

Geriatric patients
Hospital admissions 688w
Hospital discharges 170w, 466w

Germany
Armed forces 491w
Armed forces training 489w
Costs 638–9w
Territorial Army 489–91w

Gerrard, Mr Neil
Debates etc.
House of Commons procedure (04.06.98) 573–6
Questions
Children, Health services 130w
Electronic government 1062
Greater London Authority 862
Political refugees, Immigration appeals 55w
Political refugees, Legal representation 167w

Gibb, Mr Nick
Questions
Capital investment 652w
Double taxation, Tax allowances 391w
Government loans 494w
Tax allowances, British residents abroad 652w
Tax allowances, Interest payments 390–1w
Tax avoidance 649w
Tax credits 88w, 391–2w
Tax credits, Pensioners 87–8w

Gibraltar
Identity cards 148w

Gibson, Dr Ian
Debates etc.
House of Commons accommodation, Points of order (08.06.98) 736
Questions
Chlamydiosis, Screening 181w
Derelict land 510w
EUREKA 597w
Genetic engineering 597w
Housing construction, Derelict land 859
Industrial injuries disablement benefit, Urinary system disorders 709w
Land reclamation 9w, 13w
Pollution monitoring 9–13w
Scientists, Women 204w
Smoking, Health education 465w

Gifts and endowments
Tax allowances 654w

Gill, Mr Christopher
Debates etc.
European Communities (Amendment) Bill, Allocation of time motion and Lords amendts (09.06.98) 960, 966–8
Questions
Common fisheries policy 74w
Fishery protection, Spain 106w
Fishing grounds 75w
Public sector debt, EC countries 327–8w

Gillan, Mrs Cheryl
Debates etc.
Late Payment of Commercial Debts (Interest) Bill, Rep and 3R (01.06.98) 120–1, 125–34, 139, 141–2
Questions
Hospital waiting lists 364

Gilroy, Mrs Linda
Debates etc.
Domestic energy conservation (10.06.98) 1014–6, 1023, 1026
Questions
Naval Bases and Supply Agency, Performance standards 397w
Ships Support Agency, Performance standards 397–8w
Wild boar 662w

Glasgow
High rise flats 84w
Rented housing 333w

Glaucoma
163–4
Eye tests 176–7w
Hospital waiting lists 164

Gloucestershire
Local government constituencies 212w

Godalming
Sixth form colleges 693w

Godman, Dr Norman A
Debates etc.
Electoral systems (02.06.98) 182
Eritrea (08.06.98) 733
European Communities (Amendment) Bill, Allocation of time motion and Lords amendts (09.06.98) 931, 935, 940, 952–5, 973
Northern Ireland (Sentences) Bill, 2R (10.06.98) 1082–3, 1110–1, 1117–22
Teaching and Higher Education Bill (HL), Rep adjourned (08.06.98) 789–91, 794–5
Questions
Dounreay, Nuclear safety 715
Industrial health and safety, Hazardous materials 520–3w

Godsiff, Mr Roger
Debates etc.
Nuclear weapons tests (01.06.98) 26
Questions
Entry clearances, Nigeria 306–7w

Goggins, Mr Paul
Debates etc.
Economic policy (11.06.98) 1213–4
Questions
Literacy, Primary education 695–6w
Overseas aid 231w

"Good Practice Guide on Managing the Use of Common Land"
374w

Goodlad, Rt Hon Sir Alastair
Questions
Export subsidies 41w
Group of Eight, Overseas aid 40w
Kosovo, Overseas aid 41–2w
No Mans Heath bypass 154w
Overseas aid, Human rights 37w
Overseas aid, Non-governmental organisations 38–9w
Overseas aid, Rule of law 36w
Police training 36w
Sierra Leone 325w
Sierra Leone, Arms trade 586–7w, 653w
Sierra Leone, Military intervention 587w
Sierra Leone, Overseas aid 445–6w, 587w
Solar power, Research 122–3w
Sudan, EC aid 36w
UN agencies, UK contributions 38w
UN Convention on the Rights of the Child 147–8w

Gorman, Mrs Teresa
Debates etc.
European Communities (Amendment) Bill, Allocation of time motion and Lords amendts (09.06.98) 942
Questions
Organophosphates 127–8w

Gorrie, Mr Donald
Debates etc.
Teaching and Higher Education Bill (HL), Rep adjourned (08.06.98) 776–9
Questions
Children's rights 175w
Complaints against police, Scotland 77–9w
Greenbelt, Scotland 79–81w
Occupational pensions, Scotland 551w
Pensioners, Income distribution 550–1w
Pensioners, Scotland 477–80w

Governing bodies
Sports 48w

Government buildings
Data banks 1064–5
Dept of the Environment Transport and the Regions 623w
Environment Agency 856
Labour Party 665w
Political activities 665w

Government departments
Ministerial policy advisors 664w
Operating costs 651w
Women 694–5

Government Information and Communication Service
619w

Government information services
424w
Dept for Education and Employment 255w
Dept of Trade and Industry 126w
Prime Minister 94w
Scottish Office 84w
Treasury 85w
Women 691–2

Government loans
494w

Government Office for Eastern Region
Environment protection 300w

Governments in exile
Sierra Leone 92w, 486–7w

Graduates
700–1w

Grammar schools
Voting methods 256w

Grampian Police
83w

Grant maintained schools
139–40w, 627–8w

Grantham and Kesteven General Hospital
Maternity services (10.06.98) 1170–6

Gray, Mr James
Debates etc.
Referendums (03.06.98) 282
Questions
Bees, Varroasis 497
Closed circuit television 439w
Hospital waiting lists, Wiltshire 361
Local government finance 511w

Greater London
Art works 124w
Cycleways 414w
Health service staff 181w

Greater London*—*continued
Methicillin resistant staphylococcus aureus 539–40w
NHS trusts 408w
Physiotherapists 403–4w
Priority routes 18w
Road construction 18w
Secure accommodation 181w
Sports 42–3w
Taxis 565w

Greater London Authority
861–3
Better government programme 634–5w
Roads 636w
Town and country planning 513w

Greater Manchester
Fines 485–6w
Health authorities 541w

Green, Mr Damian
Debates etc.
Channel tunnel (03.06.98) 377–8
National Lottery Bill, Rep and 3R (01.06.98) 71–4, 91–3
Teaching and Higher Education Bill (HL), Rep adjourned (08.06.98) 760–2, 774, 817, 831–3
Teaching and Higher Education Bill (HL), Rep and 3R (09.06.98) 891, 898–903, 908–11, 925
Questions
Digital television 5
Disability living allowance 705
EC presidency 362
Millennium Exhibition, Finance 60w
New deal schemes 1189

Green papers
Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster 2w
Costs 92w
Dept of Health 334w
Dept of Trade and Industry 126w
Northern Ireland Office 64w
Scottish Office 259w

Green rates
Common agricultural policy 531w

Greenbelt
Scotland 79–81w

Greenhouse effect
Air pollution control 511–2w

Greenway, Mr John
Debates etc.
Northern Ireland (Sentences) Bill, 2R (10.06.98) 1085–6
Registration of Political Parties Bill, 2R (04.06.98) 550

Greyhound racing
435–6w

Grieve, Mr Dominic
Debates etc.
Electoral systems (02.06.98) 232, 236, 254, 262
Human Rights Bill (HL), Com (03.06.98) 395–7, 404, 408, 414, 418–9, 422, 424, 428–9,454, 457–8
Northern Ireland (Sentences) Bill, 2R (10.06.98) 1087–8, 1115, 1148, 1156–7
Referendums (03.06.98) 283–4

Griffiths, Jane
Debates etc.
Cities (Process and Criteria for Designation) Bill, 1R (02.06.98) 169–70
Questions
Argentina, Arms embargoes 246w
China, Arms embargoes 246–7w
Families, Working hours 692–3
Hong Kong, Elections 246w

Griffiths, Jane*—*continued
Iran, Arms embargoes 245–6w

Griffiths, Mr Nigel*, *Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Dept of Trade and Industry
Questions
Caravans, Consumer protection 126–7w
Ecstasy, Drug abuse 320w
Fireworks, Safety measures 162w
Funerals, Consumer protection 123w, 161w
Ice cream, Competition law 124w
Insolvency 384–6w
Money lenders, Licensing 229w
Monopolies and Mergers Commission 123w
More Group, JC Decaux 123w
Official receiver, County courts 318–9w
Petrol, Distributive trade 115w
Petrol, Retail trade 114–5w
Post Office Users' National Council 159–60w
Post Office Users' National Council, Public appointments 124w

Griffiths, Mr Win*, *Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Welsh Office
Questions
Antismoking campaign, Young people 324w
Asthma, Wales 62–4w
Bovine spongiform encephalopathy, Wales 671w
Breast cancer, Wales 166w
Bro Taf Health Authority, Electroconvulsive therapy 672–3w
Cancer, Wales 671w
Community hospitals, Wales 62w
Dairy farming, Wales 324–5w
Economic and monetary union, Wales 589w
Eye disorders, Wales 671w
Health service staff, Occupational health 62w
Hospital waiting lists, Wales 229w
Housing improvement, Wales 592–3w
Incontinence, Wales 377–8w
Local government constituencies, Wales 591–2w
Local government reform, Wales 545w
Local government social services, Wales 545w
NHS, Wales 61–2w
NHS trusts, Wales 166w, 673w
Prescription drugs, Wales 545w
Psychiatry, Wales 672w
Sites of special scientific interest, Wales 62w
Slums, Wales 592w
Smoking, Young people 323–4w
Social Exclusion Unit, Wales 674w
Welsh Advisory Committee on Drug and Alcohol Misuse, Public appointments 376–8w
Welsh National Board for Nursing Midwifery and Health Visiting 675w

Grimsby Hospital
Performance standards 170w

Grocott, Mr Bruce
Questions
Sports, Finance 7

Ground water
Pollution 31–2w

Group of Eight
Overseas aid 40w

Guildford
New deal for young people 543–4w

Gummer, Rt Hon John
Debates etc.
Electoral systems (02.06.98) 175, 187, 189, 199–200, 205, 221, 229–31, 263
European Communities (Amendment) Bill, Allocation of time motion and Lords amendts (09.06.98) 934, 939, 947–52, 961
Human Rights Bill (HL), Com (03.06.98) 438, 443, 445–9, 456
Magistrates' courts, Suffolk (10.06.98) 1044–5, 1047

Gunnell, Mr John
Debates etc.
Channel tunnel (03.06.98) 379–80

Guyana
Rain forests 648w

Habitual residence test
250w

Haemophilia
Hepatitis 135w

Hague, Rt Hon William,
Questions
Army in Northern Ireland, Prisoners 359
Local government corruption, Scotland 362–4
Sierra Leone, Arms trade 1068–70
Tax burden, Statistics 1072–3

Hain, Mr Peter*, *Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Welsh Office
Questions
Class sizes, Wales 676w
Cost per student, Wales 229w
EC grants and loans, Wales 425–6w
European Communities, Wales 426w
Further education, Wales 63w
Local education authorities, Wales 672w
M4, Road traffic 670–1w
National income, Wales 674w
Public sector employment, Wales 673w
Rendering industry, Wales 671–2w
Rural transport, Wales 675–6w
Small businesses, Welsh Office 61w
Student numbers, Wales 674–5w
Tourism, Wales 591w

Hamilton, Mr Fabian
Questions
Cameroon 617w
Political refugees, Cameroon 642–3w

Hammersmith bridge
517–8w

Hammond, Mr Philip
Debates etc.
Business questions (11.06.98) 1219
Questions
Court of Protection, Loans 69w
Lloyd's of London 328–9w
Public Trust Office 67–8w
Public Trust Office, Court of Protection 69w

Hancock, Mr Mike
Questions
Aerospace industry, Defence procurement 227–8w
Algeria, Human rights 611–2w
Civil servants, British nationality 620–2w
Defence contracts, Security vetting 638w
Defence research, Uranium 182w
Exservicemen, Counselling 606w
Exservicemen, Departmental responsibilities 94–5w
Ex-Services Mental Welfare Society 422w
Food labelling, EC law 453w
HMS Ocean 638w

Hancock, Mr Mike—continued
International Whaling Commission 199–201w
Parishes 415w
Petrol alternatives 630w
Regional development agencies 509w
Uranium 107–8w

Handicap benefits
470w
Cancer 711–2w
Earnings rules 109w
Social security benefits rules 109w
Social security recipients 190–2w
Taxation 469w

Handicapped
Concessionary television licences 316–7w
Personal social services 132w
Railway travel 864–5

Hanson, Mr David
Debates etc.
Eritrea (08.06.98) 731
Questions
Deprivation indicators 157w
Hereditary peers, House of Lords reform 366
Housing benefits, Social security abuse 478–9w
Open government 619–20w
St Austell College 401w
Suicide, Young people 156–7

Harman, Rt Hon Harriet, Secretary of State for Social Security*
Questions
Day nurseries, Tax allowances 693–4
Families, Working hours 692–3
New deal for lone parents 695–6
Pensions 254–5w, 467w
Women, EC action 473–4w

Harmonisation of standards
Agriculture 491–2
Crown Prosecution Service 499–500

Harris, Dr Evan
Debates etc.
Community hospitals, Oxfordshire (03.06.98) 341–5, 348
Questions
Health service staff, Occupational health 405–6w
NHS pensions, Early retirement 407w
NHS trusts, Industrial health and safety 406w
NHS trusts, Performance standards 237w
NHS trusts, Public appointments 691w

Harrow
Tourism 11

Harvey, Mr Nick
Questions
Housing construction, Derelict land 510w
Insects, Pest control 157–8w

Haskins Task Force
see Better Regulation Task Force

Hawkins, Mr Nick
Debates etc.
Sports (05.06.98) 635, 656–7, 671–7
Questions
Railway safety 872

Hayes, Mr John
Debates etc.
Electoral systems (02.06.98) 189, 231, 249–51, 262
Grantham and Kesteven General Hospital, Maternity services (10.06.98) 1171
Teaching and Higher Education Bill (HL), Rep adjourned (08.06.98) 819–21, 827–8

Hayes, Mr John—continued
Teaching and Higher Education Bill (HL), Rep and 3R (09.06.98) 883–4, 907
Questions
Access to work programme 543w
Fines, Lincolnshire 67w
Handicap benefits, Taxation 469w

Hazardous materials
Industrial health and safety 520–3w

Heal, Mrs Sylvia
Questions
Developing countries, Debts 356–7
NHS finance 169w

Heald, Mr Oliver
Debates etc.
Countryside, Public petitions (04.06.98) 595
Electoral systems (02.06.98) 188
Human Rights Bill (HL), Com (03.06.98) 400, 402–3, 407–12
Structure plans, Hertfordshire (04.06.98) 601–2, 604, 607–8

Healey, Mr John
Questions
Access to work programme, Wheelchairs 365–6w
NHS, Performance standards 536–7w
Skill shortages, Regional development agencies 203w
Training and enterprise councils 698w
Training and enterprise councils, Finance 203w
Wheelchairs 336w

Health
Disadvantaged 168

Health action zones
Finance 169–70w

Health and Safety at Work Etc Act 1974
Questions
406w

Health authorities
Greater Manchester 541w

Health education
Air pollution 167
Curriculum 166–7
Men 161–2, 170w
Smoking 465w

Health hazards
Asbestos 521–2w
Mesothelioma 521w
Nuclear power stations 597–8w
Silica 520–1w

Health Service Commissioner
174w

Health service staff
Crimes of violence 181w
Greater London 181w
Manpower 466w
Northern Ireland 323w
Occupational health 62w, 175–6w, 323w, 405–6w
Vacancies 406w
Wales 62w

Health services
173w
Age discrimination 685w
Children 130w
Multiple sclerosis 163
Worcestershire 153–4

Health warnings
Cellular phones 439–40w

Heart diseases
171–2w

Heath, Mr David
Debates etc.
European Communities (Amendment) Bill, Allocation of time motion and Lords amendts (09.06.98) 960–4
European Council (11.06.98) 1245–8, 1280, 1283
Sports (05.06.98) 629
Questions
Glaucoma 163–4
Government buildings, Data banks 1064–5
National Audit Office, Non-departmental public bodies 18–9
School transport 1189–90

Heathrow Airport
7–8w
Public inquiries 8w, 512w, 863–4

Heavily indebted poor countries initiative
42w, 225w
Millennium 60–1w

Hedgerow Regulations 1997
Questions
630w

Hedges and ditches
630w

Helicopters
394w

Hemp
454w

Henderson, Mr Doug, Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Office*
Debates etc.
European Communities (Amendment) Bill, Allocation of time motion and Lords amendts (09.06.98) 930–7, 940, 970
European Council (11.06.98) 1278–84
Questions
Bulgaria, Overseas aid 459w
Club of Three 677w
Council of Ministers 350–4w
Cyprus, Peace negotiations 457–8w
EC Foreign Affairs Council 354–5w, 678–9w
EC grants and loans, Wales 146w
Euro, Teaching aids 457w
European Communities, Conferences 616w
European Council, Furniture 461–2w
Gibraltar, Identity cards 148w
Israel, EC external relations 347–8w
Israel, EC external trade 149w
Lome Convention, Human rights 458–9w
Palestinians, EC external relations 243w
Turkey, Human rights 146w
World Cup, Tickets 677w

Hepatitis
Haemophilia 135w

Heppell, Mr John
Debates etc.
Channel tunnel (03.06.98) 379
Questions
Development Policy Forum 648–9w
Prison Service, Performance standards 380–1w
Women, Domestic violence 703–4

Hereditary peers
House of Lords reform 366, 1068

Hereford and Worcester
Educational finance 704w
Pre-school education 708–9w

Heritage Lottery Fund
43w

Herring, Raymond
(10.06.98) 1049–58

Hertfordshire
Structure plans (04.06.98) 596–608

Hewitt, Ms Patricia
Questions
Disability living allowance, Departmental publications 549–50w

High rise flats
Glasgow 84w
Scotland 84–5w

Higher education
Manpower 398–9w
South Africa 648w

Higher education admission
693w, 697w, 1182–3
Dental students 140w
Tuition fees 1192–3

Hill farming
487

Historic buildings
426w

HM Prison Service
see Prison Service

HMS Cornwall
97–100w, 182w

HMS Monmouth
100–1w

HMS Nottingham
100–1w

HMS Ocean
638w

Hodge, Ms Margaret
Debates etc.
Channel tunnel (03.06.98) 378
Review of Health Care in London Independent Advisory Panel (03.06.98) 317, 322
Teaching and Higher Education Bill (HL), Rep adjourned (08.06.98) 762, 771–6, 780, 782

Hoey, Miss Kate
Debates etc.
Belfast Agreement (01.06.98) 38
Questions
Construction materials, Fire prevention 297–9w
Money lenders, Licensing 229w
Organic farming 659w

Hogg, Rt Hon Douglas
Debates etc.
Electoral systems (02.06.98) 202–3
Grantham and Kesteven General Hospital, Maternity services (10.06.98) 1173
Human Rights Bill (HL), Com (03.06.98) 395, 398–9, 402–4, 406, 409–10, 412, 417–8, 421–2, 424–5, 429, 431–2
Questions
Dounreay, Nuclear fuel reprocessing 715
Sierra Leone, Departmental correspondence 346w

Home Affairs Select Committee
(08.06.98) 846

Home detention curfews
57–8w, 304w
Costs 433w, 565w
Sexual offences 57w

Home Office
Private finance initiative 51–2w
Small businesses 54w

Home Robertson, Mr John
Debates etc.
Referendums (03.06.98) 282–3, 286, 288, 292, 295, 298

Homelessness
Social Exclusion Unit 213–4w

Homeworking
484w
Fees and charges 117w

Homicide
220–1w
Children 222w
Lawrence, Stephen 302w
Legal aid 302w
Mentally disturbed offenders 407w

Homosexuality
Local Government Act 1988 28w

Hong Kong
Elections 246w, 362

Hoon, Mr Geoffrey, Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Dept*
Debates etc.
Human Rights Bill (HL), Com (03.06.98) 390, 392, 394, 399, 401–5, 411, 413–5, 431–3, 451, 454, 458–60
Magistrates' courts, Suffolk (10.06.98) 1046–8
Questions
"Access to Justice with Conditional Fees Consultation Paper" 301w
Civil proceedings, Personal injury 69w
Community Legal Service 301w
Conditional fee agreements 70w
Convention on the Civil Aspects of International Child Abduction 656w
Court Funds Office 302w
Court of Protection, Loans 69w
Court rules and procedures 584w
Defamation Act 1996 71w
Fines, Greater Manchester 485–6w
Fines, Lincolnshire 67w
General Council of the Bar, Conditional fee agreements 583w
Human rights, Departmental responsibilities 656w
Judges, Members' correspondence 485w
Judiciary, Training 584w
Juries, Deaf 213w
Lawrence, Stephen, Homicide 302w
Legal aid 583w
Legal aid, Barristers 70–1w
Legal aid, Northern Ireland 655–6w
Legal aid, Parent and child 412–3w
Legal aid, Personal injury 69w
Legal aid, Solicitors 70w
Legal Aid Board, Training 413w
Magistrates, Ethnic minorities 484–5w
Magistrates' courts, Derbyshire 212w
Magistrates' courts, Public transport 212w
Magistrates' courts, Worcester 412w
Magistrates' courts committees 213w
Mentally disadvantaged 413w
Non-departmental public bodies, Lord Chancellor's Dept 71w
Parliamentary Commissioner for Administration 411–2w
Public appointments, Lord Chancellor's Dept 71–2w
Public Trust Office 67–9w, 411–2w
Public Trust Office, Court of Protection 69w

Hope, Mr Phil
Debates etc.
Teaching and Higher Education Bill (HL), Rep adjourned (08.06.98) 821

Hope, Mr Phil—continued*
Questions
Education action zones 695w
Sudan, Overseas aid 233w

Hospital admissions
Asthma 128w
Geriatric patients 688w

Hospital beds
Liverpool 540w

Hospital discharges
165–6
Geriatric patients 170w, 466w

Hospital waiting lists
133w, 158–9, 364, 466w
Cancer 155
Glaucoma 164
North Yorkshire 541w
Scotland 289–90w
Wales 229w
Wiltshire 361
Worcestershire 154

Hospitals
Construction 171w, 359–60
Cornwall 1070
South West London 691–2w
Ventilation 690w
Worcestershire 154–5

House of Commons
Expenditure 557w

House of Commons procedure
(04.06.98) 551–94
Disclosure of information 558w
Speaker's rulings and statements (03.06.98) 281–2

House of Commons Modernisation Select Committee see Modernisation of the House of Commons Select Committee

House of Commons questions
Speaker's rulings and statements (11.06.98) 1226

House of Commons times of sittings
159w

House of Lords reform
Hereditary peers 366, 1068

Households
Single people 154–5w

Housing
South Devon 524w
Tewkesbury 30w
VAT 328w
Wandsworth 373w

Housing Act 1996
Questions
158–9w

Housing benefits
511w
Finance 575w
Scotland 547w
Social security abuse 478–9w
Social security benefits overpayment 253w

Housing construction
24–6w, 859
Building regulations 575–6w
Derelict land 510w, 858–60
Playing fields 511w
Vacant land 510w
West Sussex 9w

Housing Corporation
Operating costs 569w
Pay 569w

Housing finance
Scotland 331–2w, 429–30w

Housing improvement
Cumbria 571w
Wales 592–3w

Housing insulation
(10.06.98) 1078

Housing policy
Cumbria 571w

Housing standards
Disadvantaged 214w

Howard, Rt Hon Michael
Debates etc.
European Communities (Amendment) Bill, Allocation of time motion and Lords amendts (09.06.98) 932, 937–42, 962, 975
European Council (11.06.98) 1234–41, 1247, 1279, 1282–3
Nuclear weapons tests (01.06.98) 22–3
Sandline, Point of order (09.06.98) 873–4
Questions
Foreign and Commonwealth Office, Inquiries 152w
Sierra Leone 143–5w
Sierra Leone, Arms trade 142–4w, 240w

Howarth, Mr Alan, Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Dept for Education and Employment
Questions
Access to work programme 543w, 692w, 707–8w
Access to work programme, Wheelchairs 365–6w
After school clubs, Rural areas 695w
Disability Discrimination Act 1995 138w, 544w
Employment schemes, Ethnic minorities 1185–6
New deal for disabled people 138–9w, 364–5w, 699–700w
New deal for disabled people, Departmental coordination 365w
Supported employment programme 140w
Temporary employment, Research 1194
Vacancies, Chelmsford 367–8w
Work permits, Catering 141–2w

Howarth, Mr George, Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Home Office
Debates etc.
Electoral systems (02.06.98) 261–5
Referendums (03.06.98) 281, 297–9
Registration of Political Parties Bill, 2R (04.06.98) 539, 545–50
Questions
Alcoholic drinks, Children 309w
Animal experiments, Cosmetics 566w
Animal experiments, Primates 644–5w
Animal welfare, Protest 646w
Coroners, Judges 56w
Drug abuse, Night clubs 434w
Ecstasy, Drug abuse 433–4w, 568w
Emergency planning, Local government finance 436–7w
European Parliament Members, Candidate selection 436w
Greyhound racing 435–6w
Intelligence services, Personal records 52w
Prison visits, Drug crimes 439w
Prisoners, Drug abuse 310–1w
Sunday trading, Easter 168w

Howarth, Mr Gerald
Debates etc.
House of Commons accommodation, Points of order (08.06.98) 736

Howarth, Mr Gerald—continued
Human Rights Bill (HL), Com (03.06.98) 433, 438, 455–7
Questions
Bilateral aid 232w
Heathrow Airport, Public inquiries 863–4
More Group, JC Decaux 123w

Howells, Dr Kim, Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Dept for Education and Employment
Debates etc.
Teaching and Higher Education Bill (HL), Rep adjourned (08.06.98) 756–60, 763–5, 767–8
Teaching and Higher Education Bill (HL), Rep and 3R (09.06.98) 881, 886, 896–9, 901–2, 908, 921–2
Questions
Access funds 203w
Accountants, Training 697w
Dental students, Higher education admission 140w
Discretionary student grants 205w, 701–2w
Educational finance, National insurance contributions 137w
Further education, Cost per student 699w
Further education colleges 701w
Further education colleges, Student numbers 701w
General Certificate of Secondary Education 624–5w
Government information services, Dept for Education and Employment 255w
Graduates 700–1w
Higher education, Manpower 398–9w
Higher education admission 697w
Printing industry, Training 364w
School leaving 701–3w
Scientists, Women 204w
Skill shortages, Regional development agencies 203w
Staffordshire Training and Enterprise Council 358w
Student loans, Privatisation 256–7w
Teachers, Early retirement 358–63w
Training and enterprise councils 357–8w, 698w
Training and enterprise councils, Finance 203w, 697–8w
Training and enterprise councils, Performance standards 698w
Training and enterprise councils, West Midlands 140–1w
Tuition fees 204w
Tuition fees, Administrative costs 138w
Veterinary medicine, Student numbers 703–4w

Hoyle, Mr Lindsay
Questions
Air travel, Duty free allowances 21w
Animal products, Import controls 22w
Armed forces training, Defence equipment 489w, 638–9w
C17 aircraft 421w
Camelot Group 360–1
Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, Open government 620w
Channel tunnel, Railway network 13w
Duty free allowances 194w
Education action zones 695w
Exports, Indonesia 121w
Future large aircraft 421w
International Whaling Commission 199–201w
Nature conservation, Circuses 22w
Prison Officers' Association, Private sector 55–6w
Prisoners of war, Japan 107w
Railway travel, Compensation 523w

Hoyle, Mr Lindsay—continued
Sportsmatch, Chorley 46w
Sportsmatch, Government grants 218w
Tibet, EC action 149w
Whales 201w
Wymott Prison, Prison accommodation 439w

Hughes, Ms Beverley
Debates etc.
House of Commons procedure (04.06.98) 570, 577–9
Questions
Internet Watch Foundation 506w
Museums and galleries, Armed conflict 8
Pornography, Internet 425w
Public libraries, Information technology 165w

Hughes, Mr Simon
Debates etc.
Domestic energy conservation (10.06.98) 1016–21, 1024–5, 1028
Electoral systems (02.06.98) 176
Preventative Healthcare and Home Insulation Bill, 1R (10.06.98) 1078
Review of Health Care in London Independent Advisory Panel (03.06.98) 303–6, 320
Questions
Church of England, Investment 18
Local government finance 857
Mental health, Telephone services 129w
Millennium, Heavily indebted poor countries initiative 60–1w
Music, Internet 681w
NHS trusts, Public appointments 158

Human rights
Afghanistan 461w
Algeria 611–2w
Annual reports 147w
China 677w
Colombia 241–2w, 458w
Departmental responsibilities 647w, 656w
Indonesia 146–7w
Lome Convention 458–9w
Multinational companies 349
Overseas aid 37w
Sudan 352–3, 612w
Turkey 146w

Human Rights Bill (HL) 1997/98
Debates etc.
Programme motion* (01.06.98) 143–4
Programme motion* and Com (03.06.98) 387–475

Humble, Mrs Joan
Questions
Fishing quotas 660–1w
Magistrates, Ethnic minorities 484–5w

Hunter, Mr Andrew
Debates etc.
Northern Ireland (Sentences) Bill, 2R (10.06.98) 1083, 1095, 1099, 1106–7, 1115–7

Hunting
Defence land 209w
Forestry Commission 427–8w

Hurst, Mr Alan
Debates etc.
Electoral systems (02.06.98) 247–9
Questions
Community service orders 482w
Mentally handicapped 408w
Milk, Prices 453–4w

Hutton, Mr John
Questions
Hospitals, Construction 359–60

Hutton, Mr John—continued
Pensioners, Income support 707

Hydrocarbon oil duties
194w

Hydrofluorocarbons
15w
Refrigeration 14–5w

I Spy Strangers
(04.06.98) 594

Ice cream
Competition law 124w

Iddon, Dr Brian
Debates etc.
Leasehold housing (10.06.98) 1005, 1007
Teaching and Higher Education Bill (HL), Rep adjourned (08.06.98) 794, 813
Teaching and Higher Education Bill (HL), Rep and 3R (09.06.98) 897
Questions
Child Support Agency, Manpower 185–6w
Disability living allowance, Benefit integrity project 705
Fireworks, Safety measures 162w
Higher education, Manpower 398–9w
NHS, Performance standards 169w

Identity cards
Gibraltar 148w

Illegal immigrants
Turks and Caicos Islands 243w

Illsley, Mr Eric
Questions
Motor vehicles, Petrol additives 516w

Immigrant detainees
Political refugees 221w

Immigration
49–50w

Immigration appeals
Political refugees 55w

Immigration applications
55w

Immigration controls
Kidnapping 647w

Immigration rules
Domestic violence 167w

Immigration Service (Ports)
Manpower 646w

Immobilisation of vehicles
153w

Import controls
Animal products 22w
Asbestos 517w
Fireworks 162w
Frogs 373–4w

Import duties
Israel 327w

Imports
Poultry meat 248–9w

Incapacity benefit
Medical examinations 476–7w
Social security claims 253w
Warrington 253–4w

Income distribution
Pensioners 550–1w
Scotland 550–1w

Income support
Pensioners 468w, 707

Income tax
194–5w, 386–9w

Incontinence
Wales 377–8w

Independent Advisory Panel Review of Health Care in London
see Review of Health Care in London Independent Advisory Panel

Independent Commission on Policing for Northern Ireland
216–7w

Independent Television Commission
12

India
Nuclear weapons 40w
Nuclear weapons tests 152w

Indonesia
Armed forces training 102–3w
Arms trade 151–2w, 227w, 240w
ASSIST programme 487w
Export credit guarantees 121w
Export licensing 440w
Exports 121w
Human rights 146–7w
Ministers' visits abroad 89w
Overseas aid 235–6w

Industrial accidents
634w

Industrial health and safety
Chemicals 17–8w
Curriculum 130w
Fuels 518–9w
Hazardous materials 520–3w
NHS trusts 406w
Offshore fixed platforms 578–9w

Industrial injuries disablement benefit
Urinary system disorders 709w

Industrial investment
318w

Industrial tribunals
NHS trusts 134w

Industrial wastes
Land pollution 16–7w

Industry
Interest rates 1070

Inflation
195–6w

Information
Ministers 317w

Information services
Railway travel 513w

Information technology
Courts 584w
Crown Prosecution Service 338w
Cumbria 1063
Economic and monetary union 193w
Public libraries 165w

Ingram, Mr Adam, Minister of State, Northern Ireland Office
Debates etc.
Northern Ireland (Sentences) Bill, 2R (10.06.98) 1095–6, 1160–5
Questions
Lisnevin Training School, Prison riots 432–3w
Members' correspondence, Administrative delays 664w
Petrol, Smuggling 66w
Small businesses, Northern Ireland Office 67w
Terrorism, Northern Ireland 662–3w

Inheritance tax
Tax rates and bands 586w

Inland waterways
Navigation 510w

Insects
Pest control 157–8w

Insolvency
384–6w
Scotland 431–2w

Institute of Chartered Accountants in England and Wales
681–2w

Institute of Freshwater Ecology
681w

Institute of Terrestrial Ecology
681w

Integrated administration and control system
Departmental forms 492

Intelligence and Security Committee
665w

Intelligence services
Accountability 665w
Personal records 52w

Interagency cooperation
Medical profession 685w
Sexual offences 303–5w

Interdepartmental Working Group on Vulnerable or Intimidated Witnesses see Vulnerable or Intimidated Witnesses Interdepartmental Working Group

Interest payments
Tax allowances 390–1w

Interest rates
445w, 493
Farm incomes 487–8
Industry 1070

International Bank for Reconstruction and Development
see World Bank

International trade
Business corruption 350

International Union for Conservation of Natural Resources
520w

International Whaling Commission
199–201w, 340w

Internet
Blind 215w
Music 681w
Pornography 425w
Women 691–2

Internet Watch Foundation
506w

Intimidation
Meat Hygiene Service 341–3w, 451–2w

Intimidation of witnesses
1075–6

IRA
Weapons 366

Iran
Arms embargoes 245–6w
British embassies 618w

Iraq
Armed forces deployment 607w
Chemical and biological warfare 149–50w
International assistance 231w

Israel
EC external relations 347–8w
EC external trade 149w
Import duties 327w
Orange juice 327w

Italy
Economic and monetary union 584–5w
Milk 344–5w

Jack, Rt Hon Michael
Questions
Farm incomes, Interest rates 487–8
Prison Service, Property transfer 307w

Jackson, Ms Glenda, Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Dept of the Environment Transport and the Regions*
Debates etc.
Ports, Newhaven (03.06.98) 328–32
Questions
A49, Road works 155w
Accidents, Inquiries 4w
Air safety 635w
Air travel, Duty free allowances 21w, 570–1w
Aircraft, Air bags 154w
Aircraft noise 635w
Bicycles, Safety equipment 14w
Birmingham Relief Road, Construction costs 209w
British Road Federation, Finance 515w
Carlisle Airport 519w
Carlisle Airport, Transport of radioactive materials 572–3w
Central Railway 30w
Channel tunnel, Railway network 13w, 573–4w
Chelsea-Hackney railway line 568w
Cleaner Vehicles Task Force 16w
Community transport, West Midlands 519–20w
Connex Rail 524w
Cycleways 19w
Cycleways, Greater London 414w
Cycling 514w
Driving tests, Chelmsford 156w
Ferries, Duty free allowances 417w
Greater London Authority, Roads 636w
Hammersmith bridge 517–8w
Heathrow Airport 7–8w
Heathrow Airport, Public inquiries 8w
Immobilisation of vehicles 153w
Lead free petrol, Motor vehicles 16w
Legal costs, Public inquiries 72w
London and Continental Railways 579w
London Underground, Joint public-private sector ventures 515–6w
M4, Motorway service areas 29w
M62, Road traffic 156w
Merchant seamen, Medical examinations 578–9w
Millennium Exhibition, Transport 33–4w
Motor vehicles, Fraud 16w
Motor vehicles, Lighting 20–1w
Motorcycles, Bus lanes 519w
Motorcycles, Transport policy 28w, 157w
Motorway service areas 519w
No Mans Heath bypass 154w
Pedestrians, Multiply handicapped 3–4w
Petrol alternatives 629–30w
Piracy 210w
Polegate bypass, Compensation 33w
Priority routes, Greater London 18w
Railway fares 513w
Railway land 19w
Railway network, Finance 23w
Railway network, Leeds 514w
Railway safety 872
Railway travel, Compensation 523w
Railway travel, Information services 513w
Railway travel, Mobility of disabled 29w
Regional airports, Air routes 580w
Road accidents 22w
Road accidents, Drinking and driving 20w, 22–3w
Road accidents, Drug abuse 20w

Jackson, Ms Glenda—continued*
Road construction, Dorchester 297w
Road construction, Greater London 18w
Road finance 516w
Road safety 156w
Road signs 572w
Road signs, Rural areas 572w
Road traffic 209–10w
Road works 153w
Road works, Cumbria 416w
Roads, Lancashire 863
School crossing patrols 21w
Shipping, Government assistance 18w
Shipping accidents 870
Swanwick Air Traffic Control Centre 31w, 523–4w
Train operating units, Performance standards 513w
Transport of radioactive materials 577–8w
Transport of radioactive materials, Air transport 631w
Transport of radioactive materials, Ferries 631–2w
Transport of radioactive materials, France 414w
West coast railway line, Investment 520w

Jackson, Helen
Debates etc.
House of Commons procedure (04.06.98) 567
Questions
Families, Working hours 692–3
NHS, Performance standards 173w
Redcar and Cleveland Borough Council, Government grants 579w

Jamieson, Mr David, An Assistant Whip*
Debates etc.
Teaching and Higher Education Bill (HL), Rep adjourned (08.06.98) 743, 767

Japan
Nuclear fuels 679–80w
Prisoners of war 107w
Whales 94w

JC Decaux
More Group 123w

Jenkin, Mr Bernard
Debates etc.
Domestic energy conservation (10.06.98) 1010, 1022–7
Questions
Monopolies and Mergers Commission 123w
Royal Deeside Partnership 262w
Transport policy 867

Jenkins, Mr Brian
Questions
Church finance 20
Civil servants, Northern Ireland Office 65w
Educational visits, Farms 696w
NHS, Public appointments 690–1w
Staffordshire Training and Enterprise Council 358w
Training and enterprise councils 357–8w
Training and enterprise councils, Finance 697–8w
Training and enterprise councils, Performance standards 698w
Training and enterprise councils, West Midlands 140–1w

Jersey
Financial institutions 443–4w

Johnson, Mr Alan
Questions
Derringham School 357w

Johnson, Mr Alan—continued*
Handicap benefits, Cancer 711–2w
Midwives 237w
Midwives, Vacancies 178w

Johnson, Miss Melanie
Debates etc.
Teaching and Higher Education Bill (HL), Rep adjourned (08.06.98) 815–9
Teaching and Higher Education Bill (HL), Rep and 3R (09.06.98) 918
Questions
Genetic engineering, Departmental coordination 321w
Pre-school education 696w

Johnson Smith, Rt Hon Sir Geoffrey
Questions
Millennium Exhibition, Tickets 15

Joint public-private sector ventures
London Underground 515–6w

Joint Service Command and Staff College
Shrivenham 423w

Jones, Mr Barry
Debates etc.
Crown Prosecution Service (01.06.98) 50
Questions
Armed forces strength, Wales 492w
Arts finance, Wales 589w
Bovine spongiform encephalopathy, Wales 671w
Cancer, Wales 671w
Cricket, Wales 591w
Eye disorders, Wales 671w
Local education authorities, Wales 672w
Local government reform, Wales 545w
Local government social services, Wales 545w
Millennium Commission, Wales 590w
Museums and galleries, Wales 591w
Open government 1061–2
Orchestras, Wales 589–90w
Rendering industry, Wales 671–2w
Student numbers, Wales 674–5w
Sudan, Overseas aid 355–6
Theatres, Wales 590w
Tourism, Wales 591w
Transport aircraft 639w

Jones, Ms Fiona
Debates etc.
Grantham and Kesteven General Hospital, Maternity services (10.06.98) 1173–6
Questions
Gangmasters 527–9w
Prisoners' incentives and earned privileges scheme 50–1w

Jones, Helen M
Debates etc.
Winwick, Public petitions (02.06.98) 269
Questions
Export financing 321w
Heritage Lottery Fund 43w
Incapacity benefit, Social security claims 253w
Incapacity benefit, Warrington 253–4w
M62, Road traffic 156w
Nurses 337w
Offences against children, Young people 304–5w
Prison medical services 56w
Pupil exclusions, Warrington 367w
Social Security Benefits Agency, Manpower 189w
Social Security Benefits Agency, Personnel 472w
Student loans, Privatisation 256–7w

Jones, Ms Jenny
Questions
Housing Corporation, Operating costs 569w
Housing Corporation, Pay 569w
Methicillin resistant staphylococcus aureus, West Midlands 539–40w
NHS, Empty property 686w

Jones, Dr Lynne
Debates etc.
Teaching and Higher Education Bill (HL), Rep adjourned (08.06.98) 773, 785, 795, 803, 816–7
Teaching and Higher Education Bill (HL), Rep and 3R (09.06.98) 921
Questions
Ambulance services, Performance standards 537w
Housing benefits 511w
Institute of Chartered Accountants in England and Wales 681–2w
Local authorities, Millennium compliance 4–5w
Registration of births deaths and marriages 224w

Jones, Mr Nigel
Debates etc.
Sports (05.06.98) 629–36
Questions
Asthma, Air pollution 128–9w
Asthma, Hospital admissions 128w
Cancer, Thyroid gland 444w
Cost per pupil 704–6w
Funerals, Consumer protection 123w
Local government finance 511w

Journalists
Yemen 617–8w

Jowell, Ms Tessa, Minister for Public Health, Dept of Health
Debates etc.
Grantham and Kesteven General Hospital, Maternity services (10.06.98) 1174–6
Questions
Abortion 135w, 605w
Alternative medicine 538w
Alternative medicine, East London 605w
Alternative medicine, Medical research 538w
Antismoking campaign, Young people 685w
Asthma, Air pollution 128–9w
Benzodiazepines, Pregnant women 463w
Biological weapons 132w
Breast feeding, Publicity 404–5w
Cancer 156
Cancer, Death 155–6
Cannabis, Medical research 464w
Chlamydiosis, Screening 181w
Chronic fatigue syndrome 605w
Contraceptives 136w, 238–9w, 462–3w
Contraceptives, Publicity 536w
Diseases, Travel 603w
Drug abuse 180w
Drug abuse, Medical treatments 336–7w, 464–5w
Environmental health 162
Epilepsy 537w
Family planning 129–30w
Fertility, Medical treatments 169w
Green papers, Dept of Health 334w
Health education, Air pollution 167
Health education, Curriculum 166–7
Health education, Men 161–2, 170w
Health services 173w
Health services, Age discrimination 685w
Heart diseases 171–2w
Hospitals, Ventilation 690w

Jowell, Ms Tessa—continued
Industrial health and safety, Curriculum 130w
Medicines Control Agency 605w
Methicillin resistant staphylococcus aureus, West Midlands 539–40w
Microbiology, Exports 604w
NHS 162
Nutrition and health, Schools 167
Organ donors 690w
Organophosphates 127–8w
Small businesses, Dept of Health 135w
Smoking, Health education 465w
Smoking, Young people 136w
Tobacco, Common agricultural policy 161
Tobacco, Production 160
Tobacco advertising 159–61
Tobacco advertising, Sports sponsorship 134w
Toxocariasis 601–2w
Tuberculosis 238w
Vaccination, Travel requirements 602–3w
Viagra 686w
Whooping cough, Vaccination 133–4w

Jubilee 2000
234w

Jubilee line
868–70

Judges
Coroners 56w
Members' correspondence 485w

Judgments
Mental health services 541w

Judiciary
Training 584w

Junior hospital doctors
Working hours 180w

Juries
Deaf 213w

Kashmir
UN resolutions 392w

Kaufman, Rt Hon Gerald
Debates etc.
Electoral systems (02.06.98) 182–3, 197–203
Nuclear weapons tests (01.06.98) 23
Questions
Members' correspondence, Administrative delays 482w

Keeble, Ms Sally
Questions
Business questions 509
Social Fund, Floods 187–9w
Supported employment programme 140w
Young offenders, Police custody 483w

Keen, Mr Alan
Debates etc.
Sports (05.06.98) 636–9
Questions
Joint Service Command and Staff College, Shrivenham 423w

Keetch, Mr Paul
Questions
Bees, Varroasis 344w
New deal for young people, Social security benefits reductions 255w
Tuberculosis 238w

Kennedy, Mr Charles
Debates etc.
Knoydart Estate, Land ownership and tenure (05.06.98) 684–5, 688
Questions
Farm incomes 487

Kent and Canterbury Hospital
Pathology 407w

Kent County Council
419w, 577w

Kettering
Performing arts 5–6

Key, Mr Robert
Questions
Chinook helicopters, Air accidents 183w
Defence land, Land reclamation 207–9w
Military exercises, Macedonia 393w
Porton Down 207w
Sierra Leone, Armed forces deployment 182w
Tactical reconnaissance armoured combat equipment requirement 638w

Khabra, Mr Piara S
Debates etc.
Nuclear weapons tests (01.06.98) 27

Kidnapping
Immigration controls 647w

Kidney, Mr David
Questions
Capital receipts initiative 89w
Common land 374w
Crown Prosecution Service 501–2
Driving offences, Disqualifications 309w
Hedges and ditches 630w
Housing standards, Disadvantaged 214w
Mediation UK 13–4w
Petrol, Distributive trade 115w
Police, Road traffic control 223w
Post Office Users' National Council 159–60w
Post Office Users' National Council, Public appointments 124w
Railway network, Finance 23w
Rights of way 23w
Road accidents 22w
Road traffic offences, Convictions 307–9w
Road traffic offences, Fines 309w
Social rented housing, Investment 14w
Women, Domestic violence 476w

Kidney patients
North West region 133w

Kilfoyle, Mr Peter, Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Office of Public Service
Questions
Better government programme, Elderly 1066
Civil service agencies, Members' correspondence 1060
Departmental correspondence 1059–60
Dept of the Environment Transport and the Regions, Government buildings 623w
Government buildings, Data banks 1064–5
Government Information and Communication Service 619w
Green papers, Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster 2w
Homeworking 484w
Members' correspondence, Administrative delays 1060–1, 1066
Open government 1061

King, Mr Andy
Questions
Doctors' list of patients 130–1w

King, Ms Oona
Debates etc.
Leasehold housing (10.06.98) 994–5
Questions
Cardiomyopathy 131w
Metropolitan Police, Training 58w

King, Rt Hon Tom
Debates etc.
Belfast Agreement (01.06.98) 40
Nuclear weapons tests (01.06.98) 25
Questions
Households, Single people 154–5w
Housing construction 24–6w
Structure plans, Public appointments 26–7w
VAT, Housing 328w

King Committee
see Intelligence and Security Committee

Kingham, Ms Tess
Debates etc.
Western Sahara (03.06.98) 333–6
Questions
Defence Dental Agency, Performance standards 396–7w
NHS, Social services 165
Women, EC action 474w

Kingston
Armed forces housing 422w

Kirkbride, Miss Julie
Debates etc.
Playing fields, Bromsgrove (08.06.98) 848–52
Questions
Mass media, Ownership 4–5
Winter fuel payments 402w

Kirkwood, Mr Archy
Questions
EC Education and Social Affairs Council 450–1w
House of Commons, Expenditure 557w
Portcullis House 49w
Sudan, Overseas aid 350–1

Knoydart Estate
Land ownership and tenure (05.06.98) 683–90

Kock, Stephen
213w, 425w

Korea
Ministers' visits abroad 89w

Kosovo
Armed conflict 360, 1071
Overseas aid 41–2w

Kray, Reginald
167w

Kumar, Dr Ashok
Questions
Education development plans 204–5w
School administration 141w
Tuition fees 204w

Labour Party
Government buildings 665w

Ladyman, Dr Stephen
Questions
Animal feed, Antibiotics 76w
Duty free allowances, Ferries 328w
Kent and Canterbury Hospital, Pathology 407w
Road accidents, Drinking and driving 22–3w

Laing, Mrs Eleanor
Debates etc.
Electoral systems (02.06.98) 220
Questions
Sierra Leone, Overseas aid 354
Standard spending assessments 512w

Lait, Mrs Jacqui
Debates etc.
Channel tunnel (03.06.98) 380–1

Lait, Mrs Jacqui*—*continued
Leasehold housing (10.06.98) 990–3
Questions
Beef, Exports 339–40w
Bovine spongiform encephalopathy 494
Channel tunnel, Railway network 573w
London and Continental Railways 579w
NHS trusts, Billing 539w
Smuggling, Tobacco 1076
Taxation, Pay 654w

Lancashire
Employment schemes 1188–9
Low pay 497w
Road traffic offences 53w
Roads 863
Sites of special scientific interest 370–1w

Lancaster
Ministers' domestic visits 1059

Land ownership and tenure
Knoydart Estate (05.06.98) 683–90

Land pollution
Industrial wastes 16–7w
Millennium Exhibition 30–1w

Land reclamation
9w, 13w
Defence land 207–9w
Winterbourne Gunner 207–9w

Landlords
299–300w

Lansley, Mr Andrew
Debates etc.
National Lottery Bill, Rep and 3R (01.06.98) 107–8
Teaching and Higher Education Bill (HL), Rep and 3R (09.06.98) 884–5
Questions
Animal experiments, Cosmetics 566w

Late Payment of Commercial Debts (Interest) Bill (HL) 1997/98
Debates etc.
Rep and 3R (01.06.98) 120–42
Royal Assent (11.06.98) 1241

Law Officers' Dept
see Attorney General

Lawrence, Ms Jackie
Questions
Breast cancer, Wales 166w
Incontinence, Wales 377–8w
Sports, Young people 42w

Lawrence, Stephen
Homicide 302w

Lead free petrol
Motor vehicles 16w

Leasehold housing
(10.06.98) 987–1009
Service charges 158–9w

Leeds
Railway network 514w

Leeds Health Authority
Finance 172w

Legal aid
583w
Barristers 70–1w
Homicide 302w
Northern Ireland 655–6w
Parent and child 412–3w
Personal injury 69w
Solicitors 70w

Legal Aid Board
Training 413w

Legal aid scheme
Scotland 279–80w, 502w

Legal costs
Accidents 4w
Public inquiries 72w

Legal representation
Political refugees 167w

Legg Inquiry
see Arms to Sierra Leone Inquiry

Leicestershire
Class sizes 1178–80
Standard spending assessments 512w

Leigh, Mr Edward
Debates etc.
Human Rights Bill (HL), Com (03.06.98) 397–401, 405–6, 411, 428–30, 442, 449, 454
Members' correspondence, Points of order (04.06.98) 513–4
Questions
Business questions 508
Dept of the Environment Transport and the Regions, Government buildings 623w
Disability living allowance, Benefit integrity project 705
New deal schemes, Lincolnshire 1192
Set-aside schemes 338w

Lepper, Mr David
Questions
Local Government Act 1988, Homosexuality 28w
South Downs 14w
Western Sahara, Referendums 239w

Leslie, Mr Christopher
Debates etc.
Drinks Containers (Redemption) Bill, 1R (03.06.98) 385–7
Millennium compliance (08.06.98) 724
Questions
Air Quality Standards Expert Panel 580w

"Less Waste More Value Consultation Paper"
419–20w

Letwin, Mr Oliver
Debates etc.
European Communities (Amendment) Bill, Allocation of time motion and Lords amendts (09.06.98) 967–8
Playing fields, Bromsgrove (08.06.98) 850
Referendums (03.06.98) 288, 294–7, 299
Questions
Butter, EC law 454w
Cattle, Canada 454w
Direct labour departments, Scotland 581w
Hemp 454w
Hospital waiting lists 466w
New deal for lone parents 467w
Prescriptions 465w

Levitt, Mr Tom
Debates etc.
Electoral systems (02.06.98) 213
Questions
Access to countryside, Liability for animals 518w
Beef, Exports 531–2w
Bovine spongiform encephalopathy, Slaughterhouses 598–9w
Common agricultural policy, Green rates 531w
Dogs, Disease control 530w
Juries, Deaf 213w
Livestock, Waste disposal 452–3w
Milk, Peak District 530w
Ozone, Air pollution 415–6w
Pedestrians, Multiply handicapped 3–4w
Sheep, Agricultural subsidies 531w
Sheep dipping 536w

Levitt, Mr Tom*—*continued
Tobacco, Agricultural subsidies 530–1w
Toxocariasis 601–2w
Waste disposal, Agricultural land 28w, 420w

Lewis, Mr Ivan
Questions
NHS trusts, Public appointments 158
Schools, Bury 1180–1

Lewis, Dr Julian
Debates etc.
Belfast Agreement (01.06.98) 40
National Lottery Bill, Rep and 3R (01.06.98) 95–6
Nuclear weapons tests (01.06.98) 29–30
Questions
Dept of the Environment Transport and the Regions, Public bodies 629w
Disaster relief 231–2w
Independent Television Commission 12
Members' correspondence, Administrative delays 413w
Mentally disturbed offenders, Homicide 407w
NHS administration 542w
Occupational pensions 469w
Personal pensions 700

Liability for animals
Access to countryside 518w

Liddell, Mrs Helen, Economic Secretary to the Treasury
Questions
Alternative energy, Treasury 440w
Bank of England, Seigniorage 585w
Breast cancer 499–500w
Cancer, Thyroid gland 444w
Central government borrowing 654–5w
Death, North West region 86–7w
Debts, Developing countries 89–91w
Debts written off, Developing countries 494–6w
EC Finance Council, Economic and monetary union 88–9w
EC grants and loans, Wales 193w
EC Monetary Committee 442w
Economic and monetary union 88w, 496w
Economic and monetary union, Banking supervision 329–30w
Economic and monetary union, Information technology 193w
Economic and monetary union, Italy 584–5w
Economic and monetary union, Seigniorage 442w
Economic situation, Asia 91w
Employment 86w
Energy consumption, Treasury 440–1w
Euro 441w, 496w
Euro, Publicity 585w
Financial institutions, Jersey 443–4w
Government information services, Treasury 85w
Heavily indebted poor countries initiative 225w
Inflation 195–6w
Interest rates 445w
Lloyd's of London 328–9w
Low pay, Pendle 497w
Methadone, Death 225w
Office for National Statistics, Public sector borrowing requirement 586w
Ombudsman, Investment 193–4w
Population projection, Elderly 442–3w
Public sector borrowing requirement, Statistics 585–6w
Public sector debt, EC countries 327–8w
Registration of births deaths and marriages 224w

Liddell, Mrs Helen*—*continued
Small businesses, Treasury 195w
Travelling expenses, Treasury 326–7w
UK contributions to EC budget 496w
Unemployment, Educational qualifications 498–9w

Lighting
Motor vehicles 20–1w

Lilley, Rt Hon Peter
Debates etc.
Structure plans, Hertfordshire (04.06.98) 596–601, 603
Questions
Debts written off, Developing countries 494–6w
Income tax 194–5w
Open government, Parliamentary questions 653w
Sierra Leone, Arms trade 653w
Tax burden, Statistics 224w

Lincolnshire
Fines 67w
New deal schemes 1191–2

Linton, Mr Martin
Debates etc.
Electoral systems (02.06.98) 189, 202, 218, 254–6
Oral question time intervention (01.06.98) 9
Referendums (03.06.98) 286–8
Registration of Political Parties Bill, 2R (04.06.98) 528–30
Questions
Armed forces catering services, Beef 95w
Chelsea-Hackney railway line 568w
National Lottery, Performing arts 9

Lisnevin Training School
Prison riots 432–3w

Literacy
Primary education 695–6w

Litter
Chelmsford 299w

Liverpool
Hospital beds 540w
Regional development agencies 509w

Livestock
Animal welfare 659–60w
Waste disposal 452–3w

Livingstone, Mr Ken
Debates etc.
Economic policy (11.06.98) 1208
Questions
Contraceptives 462–3w
Contraceptives, Publicity 536w
Furs, Farms 72–3w

Livsey, Mr Richard
Questions
Corporation tax 124w
Housing improvement, Wales 592–3w
Local government constituencies, Wales 591–2w
Low flying, Brecon Beacons National Park 639w
Milk Development Council 662w
Slums, Wales 592w

Lloyd, Rt Hon Sir Peter
Debates etc.
Electoral systems (02.06.98) 224–6, 235

Lloyd, Mr Tony, Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Office
Debates etc.
Eritrea, Ministerial statements (08.06.98) 728–35

Lloyd, Mr Tony*—*continued
Questions
Argentina, Arms embargoes 246w
Arms trade, EC action 147w, 488w
British dependent territories 150–1w, 243w
Cameroon 617w
Colombia, Human rights 458w
Foreign and Commonwealth Office, Ethnic minorities 487–8w
Human rights, Annual reports 147w
Iraq, Chemical and biological warfare 149–50w
Members' correspondence, Administrative delays 393w
Mercenaries, Treaties 459w
Nigeria, Arms trade 459w
Ottawa Convention 488w
Restricted Enforcement Unit, Arms trade 676–7w
South Asia, Nuclear weapons tests 242–3w
Treaties, Parliamentary procedure 244–5w
Turks and Caicos Islands 150w
Turks and Caicos Islands, Illegal immigrants 243w
UN Convention on the Rights of the Child 147–8w

Lloyd's of London
328–9w

Lloyd's TSB Bill (HL) 1996/97
Debates etc.
3R order read (04.06.98) 485, (11.06.98) 1177

Llwyd, Mr Elfyn
Debates etc.
Crown Prosecution Service (01.06.98) 49
Questions
Integrated administration and control system, Departmental forms 492
Prosecutions 338w
Social security benefits, Young people 474w

Loans
Court of Protection 69w

Local authorities
Millennium compliance 4–5w

Local broadcasting
Cable television 163–4w

Local education authorities
696w
Wales 672w

Local Government Act 1988
Questions
Homosexuality 28w

Local government borrowing
Regional airports 637–8w

Local government constituencies
860–1
Gloucestershire 212w
Northamptonshire 519w
Wales 591–2w

Local government corruption
1074–5
Scotland 362–4

Local government finance
224w, 511w, 857–8
Emergency planning 436–7w

Local government land
Smallholdings 339w

Local government reform
1070–1
Wales 545w

Local government social services
Wales 545w

Lock, Mr David
Debates etc.
Crown Prosecution Service (01.06.98) 51
Questions
Arable area payments scheme 201–2w
Attorney General, Ministerial duties 499
Crown Prosecution Service, Information technology 338w
EC Agriculture Council 202–3w
Health services, Worcestershire 153–4
International Whaling Commission 199–201w

Lockerbie
Bombings 666w

Lockheed Martin
Defence procurement 101w

Lome Convention
Human rights 458–9w

London and Continental Railways
579w

London Underground
Joint public-private sector ventures 515–6w

Lone parents
Social security benefits 315–6w

Long stay patients
Mental health services 172w

Lord Chancellor's Dept
Non-departmental public bodies 71w
Public appointments 71–2w

Lorries
Noise control 228w

Loughborough General Hospital
Private finance initiative 179w

Loughton, Mr Tim
Questions
Autism, Children 142w
Autism, Special education 368w
Capital gains tax 195w
Capital gains tax, Pensioners 195w
Housing construction, West Sussex 9w

Love, Mr Andrew
Questions
Whooping cough, Vaccination 133–4w

Low flying
Brecon Beacons National Park 639w
Tewkesbury 424w

Low incomes
Electricity tariffs 503–4w
Wales 250w

Low pay
Lancashire 497w
Pendle 497w

Lowery, David
(11.06.98) 1286–92

Luff, Mr Peter
Questions
Educational finance, Worcestershire 1187–8
Health services, Worcestershire 153

Lyell, Rt Hon Sir Nicholas
Debates etc.
Crown Prosecution Service (01.06.98) 45–6
Electoral systems (02.06.98) 186, 233–5

M4
Motorway service areas 29w
Road traffic 670–1w

M62
Road traffic 156w

M74
Road construction 515w

McAllion, Mr John
Debates etc.
Teaching and Higher Education Bill (HL), Rep adjourned (08.06.98) 779–81
Questions
Disability living allowance, Benefit integrity project 704

McCartney, Mr Ian, Minister of State, Dept of Trade and Industry
Questions
Art works, Greater London 124w
Association of Chief Police Officers, Company law 320w
EC Social Charter, North West region 684w
Homeworking, Fees and charges 117w
Institute of Chartered Accountants in England and Wales 681–2w
Manufacturing industries, Flexible working 508w
Music, Internet 681w
Parcelforce 115–6w
Post Office 594w
Post Office, Driving licences 125w
Post Office, External financing limits 115w
Post Office, Reviews 319w
Post offices, Watford 508w
Postal services 115–6w
Postal services, USA 503w
Royal Mail, Complaints 116w
Small businesses, Unfair dismissal 684w

McCartney, Mr Robert
Debates etc.
Northern Ireland (Sentences) Bill, 2R (10.06.98) 1086, 1095, 1098, 1102, 1108, 1110, 1115, 1120, 1132, 1141–5, 1150
Questions
IRA, Weapons 366
Terrorism, Northern Ireland 662–3w

McDonagh, Ms Siobhain
Questions
Open government, Codes of practice 629w

Macdonald, Mr Calum, Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Scottish Office
Questions
Beekeeping, Agricultural subsidies 275w
Bees, Varroasis 275w
Council housing, Scotland 330–1w
Derelict land, Scotland 428–9w
EC grants and loans, Administrative costs 261w
Fish conservation, Scotland 582w
Forestry Commission, Hunting 427–8w
Greenbelt, Scotland 79–81w
High rise flats, Glasgow 84w
High rise flats, Scotland 84–5w
Housing finance, Scotland 429–30w
Multiple occupation, Scotland 331w
Slums, Scotland 84w
Sports, Rate rebates 84w

McDonnell, Mr John
Debates etc.
Teaching and Higher Education Bill (HL), Rep adjourned (08.06.98) 808, 828

Macedonia
Military exercises 393w

McGrady, Mr Eddie
Debates etc.
Northern Ireland (Sentences) Bill, 2R (10.06.98) 1134–5

MacGregor, Rt Hon John
Debates etc.
Economic policy (11.06.98) 1210
Electoral systems (02.06.98) 188–9, 214–9

McIntosh, Miss Anne
Debates etc.
European Communities (Amendment) Bill, Allocation of time motion and Lords amendts (09.06.98) 965–6
Human Rights Bill (HL), Com (03.06.98) 450–1
Questions
Art works, Greater London 124w
Business questions 512
Central Science Laboratory 496
Customs and Excise, Accidents 499
Departmental correspondence 300w
European Parliament Members, Candidate selection 436w
Gascoigne, Paul 7
Hospital waiting lists, North Yorkshire 541w
Legal aid, Parent and child 412–3w
Legal Aid Board, Training 413w
NHS, Millennium compliance 542w
NHS pensions 542w
Police, Radio 436w
Tourism, New deal for young people 669w
Welfare to work 1192

McIsaac, Shona
Questions
Grimsby Hospital, Performance standards 170w

MacKay, Rt Hon Andrew
Debates etc.
Belfast Agreement (01.06.98) 34–5
Northern Ireland (Sentences) Bill, 2R (10.06.98) 1085, 1089, 1091–6, 1125, 1163–4
Questions
Army in Northern Ireland, Prisoners 663w

Mackinlay, Mr Andrew
Debates etc.
Channel tunnel (03.06.98) 373
Electoral systems (02.06.98) 175, 190, 193
Questions
Armed forces casualties 95–6w
Developing countries, Debts 234w
Environment Agency, Sea level 341w
Heathrow Airport, Public inquiries 864
Junior hospital doctors, Working hours 180w
Members' correspondence, Administrative delays 664w
Military decorations 103w
Military decorations, Northern Ireland 103–4w
NHS trusts, Industrial tribunals 134w
Prime Minister's questions 358–9
Sierra Leone, Armed forces deployment 314w
Sixth form colleges 692w

Maclean, Rt Hon David
Debates etc.
Electoral systems (02.06.98) 182, 223, 241–2, 262–3
Human Rights Bill (HL), Com (03.06.98) 417
Referendums (03.06.98) 290–1
Questions
Air travel, Duty free allowances 570–1w
Animal welfare 495
Armed forces reserves, NATO countries 491–2w
Bovine spongiform encephalopathy 599–601w
Carlisle Airport 519w

Maclean, Rt Hon David—continued*
Carlisle Airport, Transport of radioactive materials 572–3w
Class sizes, Cumbria 700w
EC Foreign Affairs Council 678–9w
Firearms, Compensation 566–7w
Flood control, Cumbria 660w
Housing improvement, Cumbria 571w
Housing policy, Cumbria 571w
Pennine Way 569–70w
Probation and aftercare, Inspections 640–1w
Probation officers 641–2w
RAF Carlisle, Property transfer 491w
Rivers, Sites of special scientific interest 572w
Road signs 572w
Road works, Cumbria 416w
Sierra Leone, Arms trade 664w
Special education, Cumbria 699w
Standard assessment tasks, Cumbria 700w
Territorial Army, Germany 489–91w

McLeish, Mr Henry, Minister for Home Affairs and Devolution, Scottish Office*
Debates etc.
Strathclyde Police, Racial discrimination (01.06.98) 148–52
Questions
Association of Chief Police Officers (Scotland) 83w, 430w
Association of Chief Police Officers (Scotland), Finance 83w
Complaints against police, Scotland 77–9w
Firearms, Departmental forms 431w
Grampian Police 83w
Prestwick Airport, Expenditure 259–60w
Prison population, Scotland 280–2w
Prisoners, Scotland 196w
Procurator Fiscal Service 499–502w
Public appointments, Scottish Office 77w
Road accidents, Scotland 582–3w, 657w
Road traffic offences, Scotland 196–7w
Scottish Parliament, Parliamentary buildings 657–8w
Scottish Parliament, Railway industry 84w
Urban areas, Scotland 499w

Maclennan, Rt Hon Robert
Debates etc.
Electoral systems (02.06.98) 192, 194–5, 203–8, 210
Human Rights Bill (HL), Com (03.06.98) 430–1, 445, 448–50, 453, 470–1
National Lottery Bill, Rep and 3R (01.06.98) 55, 83–4
Questions
Arts Council of England 2
Dounreay, Nuclear fuel reprocessing 709–11
Open government 1065–6

McLoughlin, Mr Patrick
Debates etc.
Business questions (11.06.98) 1221
Derbyshire County Council, Points of order (10.06.98) 1078
Questions
Council tax capping, Derbyshire 635–6w
Educational finance, Derbyshire 1075

McNamara, Mr Kevin
Debates etc.
Northern Ireland (Sentences) Bill, 2R (10.06.98) 1083, 1089, 1091, 1107, 1110–5, 1119, 1144
Questions
Lisnevin Training School, Prison riots 432–3w

McNulty, Mr Tony
Debates etc.
Business questions (11.06.98) 1222
Review of Health Care in London Independent Advisory Panel (03.06.98) 315–6, 318
Questions
Better government programme 619w
Drug crimes 1076
Health action zones, Finance 170w
New deal for lone parents 695
Railway travel, Handicapped 864
Rwanda, Debts 232w
Sports, Young people 42w

MacShane, Mr Denis
Debates etc.
European Council (11.06.98) 1258
Questions
Income tax 386–9w
NHS, Employment agencies 602w

Mactaggart, Fiona
Debates etc.
Electoral systems (02.06.98) 217–9
Human Rights Bill (HL), Com (03.06.98) 444
Millennium compliance (08.06.98) 725
Questions
Committee on Standards in Public Life 2w
Developing countries, Debts 356–7
Entry clearances, Manpower 356–7w
Ice cream, Competition law 124w

McWalter, Mr Tony
Debates etc.
Electoral systems (02.06.98) 239–40
Northern Ireland (Sentences) Bill, 2R (10.06.98) 1099, 1131, 1147–50
Questions
Council of Ministers 350–4w
EC Foreign Affairs Council 354–5w
European Charter for Regional or Minority Languages 350w
Motorcycles, Transport policy 28w, 157w
Road safety 156w
Sudan, Human rights 612w

Madel, Sir David
Debates etc.
Business questions (11.06.98) 1220

Maginnis, Mr Ken
Questions
Royal Ulster Constabulary 216–7w

Magistrates
Ethnic minorities 484–5w

Magistrates' courts
Derbyshire 212w
Private finance initiative 212w
Public transport 212w
Suffolk (10.06.98) 1041–8
Worcester 412w

Magistrates' courts committees
213w

Mahon, Mrs Alice
Debates etc.
Nuclear weapons tests (01.06.98) 30
Questions
Bovine spongiform encephalopathy 489–90

Maintenance
Children 187–9w, 552–4w

Maize
Genetically modified organisms 524–5w

Major, Rt Hon John
Debates etc.
Electoral systems (02.06.98) 191–7

Malins, Mr Humfrey
Debates etc.
Human Rights Bill (HL), Com (03.06.98) 441, 451–5
Questions
Crown Prosecution Service 502
Health service staff, Crimes of violence 181w

Mallaber, Judy
Debates etc.
Business questions (11.06.98) 1223
Questions
Millennium, Public holidays 218w

Mallon, Mr Seamus
Debates etc.
Northern Ireland (Sentences) Bill, 2R (10.06.98) 1101–5, 1123–4, 1131–2, 1143–5, 1150

Managers
Ashford and St Peter's Hospital NHS Trust 410w

Mandelson, Mr Peter, Minister Without Portfolio*
Questions
Millennium, Heavily indebted poor countries initiative 60–1w
Millennium Exhibition 60–1w
Millennium Exhibition, Admission charges 183w
Millennium Exhibition, Business 14–5
Millennium Exhibition, Costs 13–4
Millennium Exhibition, Finance 14–6, 60w
Millennium Exhibition, Sports 14, 60w
Millennium Exhibition, Tickets 15

Manufacturing industries
Flexible working 508w

Marek, Dr John
Questions
Ascension Island 247w
Gibraltar, Identity cards 148w
St Helena, Diplomatic service 247w
St Helena, Migrant workers 356w
Scottish Parliament, Railway industry 84w

Market Harborough
Theatres 6

Marketing
Multinational companies 349–50

Marsden, Mr Gordon
Questions
British dependent territories 150–1w, 243w
Turks and Caicos Islands 150w
Turks and Caicos Islands, Illegal immigrants 243w
Turks and Caicos Islands, Ministers' visits abroad 348–9w
Turks and Caicos Islands, Overseas aid 349w

Marsden, Mr Paul
Questions
A49, Road works 155w
Copthorne Barracks 105w
Food labelling, Diet and disease 249w
Local government finance 224w
Standard spending assessments, Rural areas 29w
Territorial Army 104w, 421w
Territorial Army, Costs 490–1w
Territorial Army, Shropshire 104–5w
Truancy 694–5w

Marshall, Mr David
Questions
Derelict land, Scotland 428–9w
High rise flats, Glasgow 84w
High rise flats, Scotland 84–5w

Marshall, Mr David*—*continued
Prestwick Airport, Expenditure 259–60w
Slums, Scotland 84w
Swanwick Air Traffic Control Centre 523–4w

Marshall, Mr Jim
Questions
Class sizes, Leicestershire 1179–80

Martlew, Mr Eric
Debates etc.
Channel tunnel (03.06.98) 380
Questions
Bovine tuberculosis, Vaccination 529w
Dentists, Cumbria 540w
Environment Agency, Government buildings 856
Hill farming 487
M74, Road construction 515w
Northern Ireland Assembly, Elections 369–70w
Untreated milk, Food poisoning 76w

Mass media
Ownership 4–5

Maternity services
Grantham and Kesteven General Hospital (10.06.98) 1170–6

Maude, Rt Hon Francis
Debates etc.
Economic policy (11.06.98) 1201–3
Oral question time intervention (01.06.98) 5
Parliamentary Commissioner for Standards, Points of order (10.06.98) 1077
Questions
Allan, Timothy, British Sky Broadcasting 91w
Arts Council of England 46w
Broadcasting 45w
Digital television 45w
English Tourist Board 11–2
Millennium Exhibition, Finance 16
Museums and galleries 46w
Royal Opera House 46w
Television, Sports 47w
Tobacco advertising, Sports sponsorship 134w
Tourism 45w
UK Sports Institute 46w

Mawhinney, Rt Hon Sir Brian
Debates etc.
Belfast Agreement (01.06.98) 38–9
Channel tunnel (03.06.98) 375

May, Mrs Theresa
Debates etc.
Human Rights Bill (HL), Com (03.06.98) 393–5, 414–7
Teaching and Higher Education Bill (HL), Rep adjourned (08.06.98) 743–5, 749–51
Teaching and Higher Education Bill (HL), Rep and 3R (09.06.98) 878–82, 890–3, 895
Questions
Day nurseries, Tax allowances 693–4
Disabled facilities grants 416w
M4, Motorway service areas 29w
Motorway service areas 519w
Multiple sclerosis, Health services 163
Road finance 516w
Teachers, Skill shortages 1184–5
Wheelchairs 334–5w

Meacher, Rt Hon Michael, Minister for the Environment, Dept of the Environment Transport and the Regions*
Questions
"Access to the Open Countryside in England and Wales Consultation Paper" 631w
Air Quality Standards Expert Panel 580w
Common land 374w
Government Office for Eastern Region, Environment protection 300w
Greenhouse effect, Air pollution control 511–2w
Waste disposal 419–20w
Water charges 855–6
Water meters 855–6

Means tested benefits
251–2w
Pensioners 697–8

Meat Hygiene Service
Intimidation 341–3w, 451–2w

Mediation UK
13–4w, 567w

Medical equipment
Diabetes 541w

Medical examinations
Incapacity benefit 476–7w
Merchant seamen 578–9w

Medical profession
Accountability 365–6
Interagency cooperation 685w

Medical research
Alternative medicine 538w
Cannabis 464w

Medical Supplies Agency
Performance standards 395w

Medical treatments
Alcoholism 336–7w
Cancer 171w
Drug abuse 336–7w, 464–5w
Fertility 169w

Medicines Control Agency
605w

Members
Telephone tapping 301w, 666w

Members' conduct
(04.06.98) 551–94

Members' correspondence
Administrative delays 112w, 393w, 413w, 482w, 664w, 1060–1, 1066
Civil service agencies 1060
Judges 485w
Ministry of Agriculture Fisheries and Food 199w, 451w
Speaker's rulings and statements (04.06.98) 512, 514

Members' speeches
(04.06.98) 594

Members' suspension
(04.06.98) 594

Men
Cancer 155–6
Health education 161–2, 170w
Research councils 596w

Mental health
Telephone services 129w

Mental health community care
157

Mental health services
Judgments 541w
Long stay patients 172w

Mental health services*—*continued
North West region 172w

Mentally disadvantaged
413w
Data banks 539w

Mentally disturbed offenders
Homicide 407w
Inquiries 407w

Mentally handicapped
408w

Mercenaries
Treaties 459w

Merchant seamen
Medical examinations 578–9w

Merchant Shipping (Control of Pollution) (SOLAS) Order 1998
Debates etc.
(08.06.98) 843–6

Merchant ships
Sea pollution (08.06.98) 843–6

Merron, Ms Gillian
Questions
Literacy, Primary education 695–6w

Mesothelioma
Health hazards 521w

Methadone
Death 225w, 323w
Northern Ireland 323w

Methicillin resistant staphylococcus aureus
Greater London 539–40w
West Midlands 539–40w

Metropolitan Police
645–6w
Ethnic minorities 305–6w
Training 58w

Michael, Mr Alun, Minister of State, Home Office*
Debates etc.
Herring, Raymond (10.06.98) 1054–8
Questions
Association of Chief Police Officers 381–2w
Closed circuit television 439w
Confiscation of Alcohol (Young Persons) Act 1997 223w
Driving offences, Cellular phones 303–4w
Driving offences, Disqualifications 309w
Driving offences, Drug abuse 434–5w
Firearms, Compensation 438–9w, 566–7w
Firearms, Departmental forms 220w, 310w
Forensic Science Service 435w
Homicide 220–1w
Homicide, Children 222w
Mediation UK 567w
Metropolitan Police 645–6w
Metropolitan Police, Ethnic minorities 305–6w
Metropolitan Police, Training 58w
Offences against children, Young people 304–5w
Police, Finance 646w
Police, Manpower 437w
Police, Public holidays 437w
Police, Radio 436w
Police, Road traffic control 223w
Police discipline 483w
Police national computer, Probation and aftercare 52–3w
Police stations, Epsom 646w
Road traffic offences, Convictions 307–9w
Road traffic offences, Fines 309w
Road traffic offences, Lancashire 53w
Sentencing 167w

Michael, Mr Alun*—*continued
Sexual offences, Interagency cooperation 303–4w
Taxis, Greater London 565w
Young offenders 219–20w, 482–3w
Young offenders, Police custody 483w

Michie, Mr Bill
Questions
Emergency planning, Local government finance 436–7w
Local government reform 1070–1

Michie, Mrs Ray
Questions
Educational finance, Argyll and Bute 432w
Fish conservation, Scotland 582w
Piracy 210w
Post Office, Driving licences 125w
Scottish National Sleep Laboratory 81–2w
Secure accommodation, Scotland 429w
Widows' benefits 314w, 402–3w

Microbiology
Exports 604w

Midwives
237w
Vacancies 178w

Migrant workers
St Helena 356w

Milburn, Mr Alan, Minister of State, Dept of Health*
Debates etc.
Community hospitals, Oxfordshire (03.06.98) 345–8
Review of Health Care in London Independent Advisory Panel (03.06.98) 319–23
Questions
Ambulance services, Performance standards 537w
Ambulances 692w
Ashford and St Peter's Hospital NHS Trust, Managers 410w
Community hospitals 604w
Contraceptives 180w
Cornwall and Isles of Scilly Health Authority 238w
Dentists 239w
Dentists, Cumbria 540w
Dentists, Norfolk 129w
Diabetes, Medical equipment 541w
Doctors' list of patients 130–1w
Drugs, Expenditure 130w
Drugs, Prices 177–8w
Eye tests 542w
General practitioners, Primary care groups 181w
Glaucoma, Eye tests 176–7w
Grimsby Hospital, Performance standards 170w
Health action zones, Finance 170w
Health Service Commissioner 174w
Health service staff, Crimes of violence 181w
Health service staff, Manpower 466w
Health service staff, Occupational health 175–6w, 405–6w
Health services, Worcestershire 153–4
Hospital admissions, Geriatric patients 688w
Hospital beds, Liverpool 540w
Hospital waiting lists 133w, 466w
Hospital waiting lists, North Yorkshire 541w
Hospital waiting lists, Worcestershire 154
Hospitals, Construction 171w
Hospitals, South West London 691–2w
Hospitals, Worcestershire 154–5

Milburn, Mr Alan*—*continued
Junior hospital doctors, Working hours 180w
Loughborough General Hospital, Private finance initiative 179w
Midwives 237w
Midwives, Vacancies 178w
Multiple sclerosis, Health services 163
National Institute for Clinical Excellence 178w
NHS, Employment agencies 602w
NHS, Empty property 686w
NHS, Millennium compliance 542w
NHS, Performance standards 169w, 171w, 173w, 536–7w
NHS, Public appointments 690–1w
NHS administration 542w
NHS administration, West Yorkshire 170w
NHS Executive, Advisory services 239w
NHS pensions 542w
NHS pensions, Early retirement 407w
NHS trusts, Billing 539w
NHS trusts, Greater London 408w
NHS trusts, Industrial health and safety 406w
NHS trusts, Industrial tribunals 134w
NHS trusts, Performance standards 237w
NHS trusts, Public appointments 691w
Nurses 337w
Ongar War Memorial Hospital 603–4w
Patients, Nutrition and health 179w
Pharmacies 172–3w
Pharmacists, Primary care groups 537–8w
Pharmacists, Primary health care 539w
Physiotherapists, Greater London 403–4w
Prescription drugs 171w, 465w
Prescriptions 465w
Primary care groups 173–4w, 465w
Prodigy prescribing system 687–8w
Residential care, Drugs 686–7w
Spinal injuries 177w
Terminal care 174w
United Bristol Healthcare NHS Trust, Inquiries 337w, 692w
West Kent Health Authority 136–7w, 542w

Military aircraft
421w
Defence procurement 227–8w

Military decorations
103w
Northern Ireland 103–4w

Military discipline
(08.06.98) 846

Military exercises
Macedonia 393w

Military intervention
Sierra Leone 587w

Milk
E coli 601w
EC law 534w
Italy 344–5w
Peak District 530w
Prices 453–4w
Production quotas 341w, 530w

Milk Development Council
662w

Millennium
12–3
Heavily indebted poor countries initiative 60–1w
Public holidays 218w

Millennium Commission
Wales 590w

Millennium compliance
Dept of Trade and Industry 122w

Millennium compliance*—*continued
Directories 680w
Local authorities 4–5w
Ministerial statements (08.06.98) 716–27
NHS 542w

Millennium Exhibition
60–1w
Admission charges 183w
Business 14–5
Christianity 34w
Costs 13–4
Finance 14–6, 60w
Flood control 33w
Land pollution 30–1w
Sports 14, 60w
Tickets 15
Transport 33–4w

Mines
423–4w

Minimum wage
364

Ministerial duties
Attorney General 499

Ministerial policy advisors
Dept for International Development 37–8w
Government departments 664w
Scottish Office 260w

Ministerial powers
Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster 620w

Ministerial statements
Channel tunnel (03.06.98) 367–84
Crown Prosecution Service (01.06.98) 42–52
Economic policy (11.06.98) 1195–215
Eritrea (08.06.98) 728–35
Millennium compliance (08.06.98) 716–27
Nuclear weapons tests (01.06.98) 21–32
Referendums (01.06.98) 33–41

Ministerial Tourism Advisory Forum
Public appointments 560–4w

Ministers
Electronic mail 624w
Information 317w

Ministers' domestic visits
Lancaster 1059
Northern Ireland 63–4w

Ministers' visits abroad
China 93w
East Timor 355–6w
Indonesia 89w
Korea 89w
Turks and Caicos Islands 348–9w

Ministry of Agriculture Fisheries and Food
Alternative energy 526–8w
Energy consumption 528w
Members' correspondence 199w, 451w
Serials 197–8w
Small businesses 249w
Travelling expenses 526w

Ministry of Defence
Energy consumption 107w, 492w
Small businesses 108w

Mitchell, Mr Austin
Debates etc.
Electoral systems (02.06.98) 209, 216, 230
European Communities (Amendment) Bill, Allocation of time motion and Lords amendts (09.06.98) 941–7, 951, 972
Human Rights Bill (HL), Com (03.06.98) 464–70, 475
Teaching and Higher Education Bill (HL), Rep adjourned (08.06.98) 828

Mitchell, Mr Austin*—*continued
Questions
Alternative medicine 538w
Bank of England, Seigniorage 585w
Disability living allowance 470w
EC Monetary Committee 442w
Economic and monetary union 496w
Economic and monetary union, Banking supervision 329–30w
Economic and monetary union, Seigniorage 442w
Euro 441w, 496w
Euro, Publicity 585w
European Communities, Conferences 616w
European Convention on Human Rights, Channel Islands 55w
Interest rates 445w
Millennium Exhibition, Costs 13–4
Millennium Exhibition, Flood control 33w
New deal schemes, Lincolnshire 1191–2
Public libraries, Blind 560w
Standing Committee on Regional Affairs 669–70w

Mobility of disabled
132w
Railway travel 29w

Modernisation of the House of Commons Select Committee
(05.06.98) 682

Moffatt, Laura
Debates etc.
National Lottery Bill, Rep and 3R (01.06.98) 67–9
Questions
Health service staff, Occupational health 175w
New deal schemes, Crawley 1188
Women, Government departments 694

Monetary Policy Committee
Bank of England 329w

Money lenders
Licensing 229w

Monopolies and Mergers Commission
123w

Moonie, Dr Lewis
Questions
Dounreay, Nuclear fuel reprocessing 385–6w
Plutonium 162w

Moore, Mr Michael
Questions
Scottish Office, Public appointments 384w

Moran, Ms Margaret
Debates etc.
Northern Ireland (Sentences) Bill, 2R (10.06.98) 1127–9
Questions
Better government programme 619w
Immigration rules, Domestic violence 167w

Moray College
332–3w

More Group
JC Decaux 123w

Morecambe
Prisons 31w, 54w, 168w, 417w, 484w

Morgan, Mr Alasdair
Questions
Nuclear weapons policy 606w

Morgan, Ms Julie
Questions
Bro Taf Health Authority, Electroconvulsive therapy 672–3w

Morgan, Ms Julie*—*continued
Psychiatry, Wales 672w

Morgan, Mr Rhodri
Questions
Cardiff Bay, Property development 545w
Council tax benefits, Wales 551w
Train operating units, Performance standards 513w

Morley, Mr Elliot, Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food*
Debates etc.
European Communities (Amendment) Bill, Allocation of time motion and Lords amendts (09.06.98) 956–7, 961, 966, 972–5
Questions
Agriculture 493
Agriculture, Exchange rates 492
Agriculture, Harmonisation of standards 491–2
Alternative energy, Ministry of Agriculture Fisheries and Food 526–8w
Animal welfare, EC trade 248w
Arable area payments scheme 201–2w
Central Science Laboratory 496
Centre for Environment Fisheries and Aquaculture Science 74w
Coastal protection 344w, 601w
Common fisheries policy 74w
Crops 495–6
Drift nets 201w, 344w
Energy consumption, Ministry of Agriculture Fisheries and Food 528w
Environment Agency, Sea level 341w
Euro 492–3
Farm incomes 340w, 486–7
Farm incomes, Interest rates 487–8
Farm incomes, Retail trade 487
Farmers, Bureaucracy 491
Fishing grounds 75w
Fishing quotas 660–1w
Flood control, Cumbria 660w
Furs, Farms 72–3w
Gangmasters 339w
Genetically modified organisms 496
Hill farming 487
Integrated administration and control system, Departmental forms 492
Interest rates 493
International Whaling Commission 199–201w, 340w
Livestock, Animal welfare 659–60w
Organic farming 340w, 659w
Pigs, Animal welfare 534w
Poultry, Animal welfare 73–4w
Set-aside schemes 338w
Sites of special scientific interest, Countryside stewardship scheme 529w
Slaughterhouses, Animal welfare 533–4w
Small businesses, Ministry of Agriculture Fisheries and Food 249w
Smallholdings, Local government land 339w
Travelling expenses, Ministry of Agriculture Fisheries and Food 526w
Welfare of Animals (Transport) Order 1997 534w
Whales 201w, 340w

Morris, Ms Estelle, Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Dept for Education and Employment*
Questions
Autism, Special education 368w
Derringham School 357w
Educational visits, Farms 696w
Higher education admission 693w
Play groups, Government grants 257w

Morris, Ms Estelle*—*continued
Pre-school education 696w
Pre-school education, Barnsley 364w
Pre-school education, Hereford and Worcester 708–9w
Primary education, Drug abuse 693w
Pupil exclusions 1181
Pupil exclusions, Chelmsford 626w
Pupil exclusions, Warrington 367w
School transport 1189–91
Special education 139w
Special education, Complaints 698w
Special education, Cumbria 699w
Special education, Training 366–7w
Standard assessment tasks, Cumbria 700w
Teacher training 1184
Teacher training, Student numbers 363w
Teachers, Skill shortages 1183–5
Truancy 694–5w

Morris, Rt Hon John, Attorney-General*
Debates etc.
Crown Prosecution Service, Ministerial statements (01.06.98) 42–52
Questions
Attorney General, Ministerial duties 499
Crown Prosecution Service 337w, 500–2
Crown Prosecution Service, Harmonisation of standards 499–500
Crown Prosecution Service, Information technology 338w
Customs and Excise, Accidents 499
Customs and Excise, Prosecutions 498–9
Phoenix companies, Prosecutions 338w
Prosecutions 338w
Thorne, Damien, Sentencing 662w

Mortgage defaulters
Scotland 291–3w

Moss, Mr Malcolm
Debates etc.
Northern Ireland (Sentences) Bill, 2R (10.06.98) 1157–60

Motability
110w

Mothers
Tax rates and bands 401–2w

Motor vehicles
Fraud 16w
Lead free petrol 16w
Lighting 20–1w
Petrol additives 516w

Motorcycles
Bus lanes 519w
Transport policy 28w, 157w

Motorway service areas
519w
M4 29w

Mowlam, Rt Hon Marjorie, Secretary of State for Northern Ireland*
Debates etc.
Belfast Agreement, Ministerial statements (01.06.98) 33–41
Northern Ireland (Sentences) Bill, 1R (04.06.98) 514
Northern Ireland (Sentences) Bill, 2R (10.06.98) 1082–92, 1096, 1126
Referendums, Ministerial statements (01.06.98) 33–41
Questions
Army in Northern Ireland, Prisoners 663w
Royal Ulster Constabulary 216–7w

Mullin, Mr Chris
Debates etc.
Crown Prosecution Service (01.06.98) 47

Mullin, Mr Chris—continued
Questions
Better Regulation Task Force, Public appointments 1–2w
Better Regulation Unit, Manpower 1w
Business questions 506–7
Commercial television 12
Coroners, Judges 56w
Police discipline 56w
Prisoners, Suicide 56w
Pupil exclusions 1181
Sewage, Water treatment 517w

Multilateral Agreement on Investment
234w

Multinational companies
Human rights 349
Marketing 349–50

Multiple occupation
Scotland 331w

Multiple sclerosis
Health services 163

Multiply handicapped
Pedestrians 3–4w

Murphy, Mr Jim
Questions
Epilepsy 131–2w
Sports, Governing bodies 48w

Murphy, Mr Paul, Minister of State, Northern Ireland Office
Questions
Agricultural subsidies, Administrative costs 185w
Belfast Agreement, Publications 481w
Civil servants, Northern Ireland Office 65w
Consultants, Northern Ireland Office 183w
EC grants and loans, Administrative costs 481w
Green papers, Northern Ireland Office 64w
Ministers' domestic visits, Northern Ireland 63–4w
Non-departmental public bodies, Northern Ireland Office 183–4w
Public appointments, Northern Ireland Office 184w
Sites of special scientific interest, Northern Ireland 184w
Sports, Rate rebates 185w
Transport, Northern Ireland Office 64–5w

Museums and galleries
8, 46w
Armed conflict 8
Finance 7–8
Public transport 376w
Wales 591w

Music
Internet 681w

Music education
625w

National air quality strategy
417w

National Air Traffic Services
637w

National Audit Office
19
Non-departmental public bodies 18–9

National Board for Nursing Midwifery and Health Visiting in Wales
see Welsh National Board for Nursing Midwifery and Health Visiting

National House Building Council
155w

National income
Wales 674w

National Institute for Clinical Excellence
178w

National insurance contributions
386–9w, 467–8w
Educational finance 137w

National Insurance Fund
550w

National Lottery
5–6
English Sports Council 6–7
Film industry 164w
Performing arts 9
Pontefract 668–9w
Tourism 11, 493–4w
Voluntary organisations 44–5w
Yorkshire and Humberside 668–9w
Youth clubs 302w

National Lottery Bill (HL) 1997/98
Debates etc.
Rep and 3R (01.06.98) 54–119

National Meat Hygiene Service
see Meat Hygiene Service

National parks
518w
New Forest 518w

National Savings Agency
Contracts for services (08.06.98) 840–3

National Sports Institute
see UK Sports Institute

NATO countries
Armed forces reserves 491–2w

Nature conservation
Birds 30w
Circuses 22w
Departmental coordination 520w
Seas and oceans 1–3w

Naval Bases and Supply Agency
Performance standards 397w

Navigation
Inland waterways 510w

Navy
Fuels 607w

Navy strength
606w

Negligence
Scotland 280w

Neill Committee
see Committee on Standards in Public Life

New deal for disabled people
112w, 138–9w, 364–5w, 473w, 699–700w, 711w
Departmental coordination 365w

New deal for lone parents
110–1w, 314–5w, 402w, 467w, 695–6, 706

New deal for long term unemployed
693w

New deal for young people
137w, 624w, 693–4w, 696–7w, 707w
Guildford 543–4w
Social security benefits reductions 255w
Tourism 669w

New deal schemes
1189
Access courses 138w
Crawley 1188
Ethnic minorities 1177
Lincolnshire 1191–2
Private sector 205w

New deal schemes—continued
Thanet 449–50w

New Forest
National parks 518w

New Opportunities Fund
After school clubs 10

Newhaven
Ports (03.06.98) 324–32

NHS
162
Administrative costs 265–6w
Employment agencies 602w
Empty property 686w
Millennium compliance 542w
Performance standards 169w, 171w, 173w, 536–7w
Public appointments 690–1w
Scotland 265–6w
Social services 165
Wales 61–2w

NHS administration
542w
West Yorkshire 170w

NHS Direct
Training 129w

NHS Executive
Advisory services 239w

NHS finance
169w
Scotland 197w

NHS pensions
542w
Early retirement 407w

NHS trusts
Billing 539w
Executives 266w
Expenditure 264w
Greater London 408w
Industrial health and safety 406w
Industrial tribunals 134w
Pay 266w
Performance standards 237w
Public appointments 157–9, 691w
Scotland 264w
Wales 166w, 673w

Nicholls, Mr Patrick
Debates etc.
Business questions (11.06.98) 1224–5
European Communities (Amendment) Bill, Allocation of time motion and Lords amendts (09.06.98) 937, 968–72
Questions
Bovine spongiform encephalopathy, West country 489
Cornwall and Isles of Scilly Health Authority 238w
General practitioners, Primary care groups 181w

Niger
Overseas aid 231w

Nigeria
Arms trade 459w
Entry clearances 306–7w

Night clubs
Drug abuse 434w

No Mans Heath bypass
154w

Noise control
Lorries 228w

Nolan Committee
see Committee on Standards in Public Life

Nomenclature of statistical territorial units
EC grants and loans 384w
Population distribution 319w

Non-alcoholic drinks
Prices 868

Non-departmental public bodies
Dept of the Environment Transport and the Regions 3w
Dept of Trade and Industry 112w
Lord Chancellor's Dept 71w
National Audit Office 18–9
Northern Ireland Office 183–4w

Non-domestic rates
Debt collection 374–5w

Non-fossil fuel obligation
Alternative energy 228–9w

Non-governmental organisations
Overseas aid 38–9w

Norfolk
Dentists 129w
School population 626w

Norman, Mr Archie
Debates etc.
Sports (05.06.98) 639–42

Norris, Dan
Questions
Medical profession, Accountability 365–6

North Cumbria Health Authority
Fertility 169w

North Korea
93w, 325–6w

North West region
Cancer 133w
Death 86–7w
EC Social Charter 684w
Kidney patients 133w
Mental health services 172w

North Yorkshire
Hospital waiting lists 541w

North Yorkshire Police
Police equipment 436w

Northampton
Floods 187–9w

Northamptonshire
Local government constituencies 519w

Northern Ireland
Agricultural subsidies 185w
Antismoking campaign 375w
Bovine spongiform encephalopathy 490–1
EC grants and loans 481w
Ethnic minorities 184–5w
Family planning 65–6w
Fire services (08.06.98) 846
Health service staff 323w
Legal aid 655–6w
Methadone 323w
Military decorations 103–4w
Ministers' domestic visits 63–4w
Petrol 66w
Prisoners' release (04.06.98) 514, (10.06.98) 1082–168
School transport 217–8w
Sites of special scientific interest 184w
Smoking 323w
Sports 185w
Terrorism 662–3w
Veterinary medicine 663w

Northern Ireland Arms Decommissioning Act 1997
Debates etc.
(01.06.98) 33–41

Northern Ireland Assembly
Elections 369–70w

Northern Ireland government
Referendums 361–2

Northern Ireland Office
Civil servants 65w
Consultants 183w
Green papers 64w
Non-departmental public bodies 183–4w
Public appointments 184w
Small businesses 67w
Transport 64–5w

Northern Ireland (Sentences) Bill 1997/98
Debates etc.
1R (04.06.98) 514
2R and money res* (10.06.98) 1082–168
Programme motion* (11.06.98) 1284–5

Nuclear fuel reprocessing
Dounreay 385–6w, 595–6w, 709–15

Nuclear fuels
Japan 679–80w

Nuclear Installations Inspectorate
Dounreay 120w

Nuclear power
714

Nuclear power stations
Decommissioning 713
Health hazards 597–8w

Nuclear safety
Dounreay 120–1w, 715

Nuclear weapons
India 40w

Nuclear weapons policy
606w

Nuclear weapons tests
India 152w
Ministerial statements (01.06.98) 21–32
South Asia 242–3w

Nurses
337w

Nurses Midwives and Health Visitors Act 1979
Questions
337w

Nutrition and health
Patients 179w
Schools 167

Oaten, Mr Mark
Debates etc.
Registration of Political Parties Bill, 2R (04.06.98) 522
Questions
Access to work programme 707–8w
Blind, Internet 215w
Disability Discrimination Act 1995 138w
Disability living allowance 470w
Disabled person's tax credit 650–1w
Eye tests 542w
Handicap benefits, Earnings rules 109w
Handicap benefits, Social security benefits rules 109w
Housing construction, Building regulations 575–6w
Landlords 299–300w
New deal for disabled people 112w, 138–9w, 711w
Plant power 318w
Railway travel, Mobility of disabled 29w
UK National Data Centre 312–3w
Uniform business rate, Public houses 649–50w
Wheelchairs 335w

Oaten, Mr Mark—continued*
Wind power 506–7w
Winter fuel payments 554–6w

O'Brien, Mr Mike, Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Home Office*
Questions
Entry clearances, Nigeria 306–7w
Entry clearances, Sri Lanka 53w
European Convention on Human Rights 311w
European Convention on Human Rights, Channel Islands 55w
Human rights, Departmental responsibilities 647w
Immigration 49–50w
Immigration applications 55w
Immigration controls, Kidnapping 647w
Immigration rules, Domestic violence 167w
Immigration Service (Ports), Manpower 646w
Political refugees, Cameroon 642–3w
Political refugees, Category A prisoners 222w
Political refugees, Expenditure 643w
Political refugees, Immigrant detainees 221w
Political refugees, Immigration appeals 55w
Political refugees, Legal representation 167w
Political refugees, Work permits 437–8w
Ports, Passengers 646–7w
Visas, Cyprus 168w

O'Brien, Mr William
Questions
Local government finance 858
National Lottery, Voluntary organisations 44–5w
NHS administration, West Yorkshire 170w
Pensions 701–2

Occupational health
Health service staff 62w, 175–6w, 323w, 405–6w

Occupational pensions
108w, 469w, 692
Scotland 551w

Offences against children
Young people 304–5w

Offenders
Repatriation 53w

Office for National Statistics
Public sector borrowing requirement 586w

Official hospitality
Dept for Culture Media and Sport 47–8w
Treasury 584w

Official receiver
County courts 318–9w

Offshore fixed platforms
Industrial health and safety 578–9w

O'Hara, Mr Edward
Questions
Mentally disadvantaged 413w

Ombudsman
Investment 193–4w

Ongar War Memorial Hospital
603–4w

Open government
619–20w, 1061–2, 1065–8
Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster 620w
Codes of practice 629w
Parliamentary questions 653w

Opik, Mr Lembit
Questions
Class sizes, Wales 676w
Retirement pensions 111–2w

Opposition days
Electoral systems (02.06.98) 171–268

Orange juice
Israel 327w

Orchestras
Wales 589–90w

Ordnance Disposal School Chattendon
394w

Organ, Mrs Diana
Debates etc.
Teaching and Higher Education Bill (HL), Rep and 3R (09.06.98) 906

Organ donors
690w

Organic farming
340w, 659w

Organophosphates
127–8w

Osborne, Ms Sandra
Debates etc.
Strathclyde Police, Racial discrimination (01.06.98) 145–52

Ottawa Convention
356w, 488w

Ottaway, Mr Richard
Debates etc.
Referendums (03.06.98) 291–3
Questions
Jubilee line 869–70

Overseas aid
231w
Afghanistan 39w
Bulgaria 459w
Burma 41w
Charities 356
Group of Eight 40w
Human rights 37w
Indonesia 235–6w
Kosovo 41–2w
Niger 231w
Non-governmental organisations 38–9w
Rain forests 235w
Rule of law 36w
Sierra Leone 236w, 354, 445–6w, 587w
Sudan 233w, 350–3, 355–6, 449w
Thailand 41w, 168–9w
Turks and Caicos Islands 349w

Overseas investment
Environmentally sensitive areas 42w
Russia 505–6w

Oxfordshire
Community hospitals (03.06.98) 341–8

Ozone
Air pollution 415–6w

Page, Mr Richard
Debates etc.
Late Payment of Commercial Debts (Interest) Bill, Rep and 3R (01.06.98) 122–5, 136–8,140
Questions
Small businesses, Dept for Culture Media and Sport 45w
Small businesses, Dept for Education and Employment 140w
Small businesses, Dept of Health 135w
Small businesses, Dept of the Environment Transport and the Regions 29–30w

Page, Mr Richard—continued
Small businesses, Dept of Trade and Industry 160–1w
Small businesses, Foreign and Commonwealth Office 149w
Small businesses, Home Office 54w
Small businesses, Ministry of Agriculture Fisheries and Food 249w
Small businesses, Ministry of Defence 108w
Small businesses, Northern Ireland Office 67w
Small businesses, Scottish Office 85w
Small businesses, Treasury 195w
Small businesses, Welsh Office 61w

Paice, Mr James
Questions
Agricultural subsidies 455–6w
Agriculture, Harmonisation of standards 491–2

Paisley, Rev Ian
Debates etc.
Northern Ireland (Sentences) Bill, 2R (10.06.98) 1084, 1094, 1122–7

Palace of Westminster
Recycling 557–8w

Palestinians
EC external relations 243w

Palmer, Dr Nick
Debates etc.
Teaching and Higher Education Bill (HL), Rep adjourned (08.06.98) 820
Questions
Developing countries, Debts 230w
Tobacco advertising 160–1

Panchen Lama
677w

Paper
Waste disposal 28w, 420w

Parc Prison
Operating costs 483–4w

Parcelforce
115–6w

Parent and child
Legal aid 412–3w

Parishes
415w

Parking
515w

Parliamentary buildings
Scottish Parliament 657–8w

Parliamentary Commissioner for Administration
411–2w

Parliamentary procedure
Treaties 244–5w

Parliamentary questions
Open government 653w
Sierra Leone 684w

Part-time education
Student loans 1186–7

Passengers
Ports 646–7w

Paterson, Mr Owen
Questions
Export licensing 125–6w
Open government 620w
Power industry 117w

Pathology
Kent and Canterbury Hospital 407w

Patients
Nutrition and health 179w

Patten Commission
see Independent Commission on Policing for Northern Ireland

Pay and Personnel Agency
Performance standards 488w

Peace negotiations
Cyprus 457–8w

Peak District
Milk 530w

Pearson, Mr Ian
Debates etc.
Sportsgrounds, Town and country planning (10.06.98) 1033–6, 1040
Questions
Accountants, Training 697w
Housing construction, Playing fields 511w
Prison visits, Drug crimes 439w

Pedestrians
Multiply handicapped 3–4w

Pendle
Low pay 497w

Pendry, Mr Tom
Debates etc.
National Lottery Bill, Rep and 3R (01.06.98) 107
Sports (05.06.98) 623–9, 662
Questions
Developing countries, Poverty 215w
Sports, Rate rebates 84w, 185w
UK Sports Council 48w

Pennine Way
569–70w

Pension Provision Group
552w

Pensioners
Capital gains tax 195w
Income distribution 550–1w
Income support 468w, 707
Means tested benefits 697–8
Poverty 699–700
Scotland 477–80w
Social security benefits 477–8w
Tax credits 87–8w

Pensions
254–5w, 467w, 551–2w, 701–2
Carers 700–1
Clergy 17
Personal savings 703
Tax allowances 651w

Pensions Act 1995
Questions
108w

Pensions Education Working Group
552w

Pensions review
702

Performing arts
Finance 9
Kettering 5–6
National Lottery 9

Perham, Ms Linda
Debates etc.
Review of Health Care in London Independent Advisory Panel (03.06.98) 307
Questions
Breast cancer 499–500w
Breast cancer, Scotland 657w

Persian Gulf
Armed forces deployment 608–9w

Personal injury
Civil proceedings 69w
Conditional fee agreements 69w
Legal aid 69w

Personal injury compensation
Social security benefits overpayment 550w

Personal pensions
700

Personal records
Intelligence services 52w

Personal savings
Channel Islands 652w
Pensions 703

Personal social services
Handicapped 132w

Pest control
Devon 157–8w
Insects 157–8w

Petrol
Distributive trade 115w
Northern Ireland 66w
Retail trade 114–5w
Smuggling 66w

Petrol additives
Motor vehicles 516w

Petrol alternatives
629–30w

Petroleum Bill (HL) 1997/98
Debates etc.
2R* and rem stages* (01.06.98) 53
Royal Assent (11.06.98) 1241

Petroleum exploration licences
502–3w

Pharmacies
172–3w

Pharmacists
Primary care groups 537–8w
Primary health care 539w

Phoenix companies
Prosecutions 338w

Physiotherapists
Greater London 403–4w

Pickles, Mr Eric
Debates etc.
Channel tunnel (03.06.98) 380
Questions
Channel tunnel, Railway network 573–4w
Ongar War Memorial Hospital 603–4w
Railway travel, Handicapped 864–5

Pickthall, Mr Colin
Questions
Departmental correspondence 1059–60
Gangmasters 339w
Niger, Overseas aid 231w

Pigs
Animal welfare 534w

Pike, Mr Peter L
Debates etc.
House of Commons procedure (04.06.98) 581–2
Leasehold housing (10.06.98) 1000, 1004
Nuclear weapons tests (01.06.98) 31
Questions
Church Commissioners, Investment 34w
Social security appeals 468–9w
Tobacco advertising 1194
Tourism 10–1

Pilot schemes
Dept of Health 688–90w
Dept of Social Security 710w
Dept of the Environment Transport and the Regions 632–4w

Piracy
210w

Planning permission
Aerials 574–5w
Gas fired power stations 113–4w

Plant power
318w

Play groups
Government grants 257w

Playing fields
Bromsgrove (08.06.98) 848–54
Housing construction 511w

Plutonium
162w
Export controls 597w

Polegate bypass
Compensation 33w

Police
Finance 646w
Manpower 437w
Public holidays 437w
Radio 436w
Road traffic control 223w

Police custody
Young offenders 483w

Police discipline
56w, 483w

Police equipment
North Yorkshire Police 436w

Police national computer
Probation and aftercare 52–3w

Police stations
Epsom 646w

Police training
36w

Policing for Northern Ireland Independent Commission
see Independent Commission on Policing for Northern Ireland

Political activities
Government buildings 665w

Political parties
(04.06.98) 515–60
Finance 95w

Political refugees
Cameroon 642–3w
Category A prisoners 222w
Expenditure 643w
Immigrant detainees 221w
Immigration appeals 55w
Legal representation 167w
Work permits 437–8w

Pollard, Mr Kerry
Debates etc.
Structure plans, Hertfordshire (04.06.98) 604, 607
Questions
Afghanistan, Arms embargoes 349w
Taiwan, Arms trade 349w

Pollution
Ground water 31–2w

Pollution control
Prosecutions 299w

Pollution monitoring
9–13w

Pond, Mr Chris
Debates etc.
Channel tunnel (03.06.98) 374–5
Questions
Council tax capping, Derbyshire 420w
Pensions 254–5w

Pontefract
National Lottery 668–9w

Population distribution
Nomenclature of statistical territorial units 319w

Population projection
Elderly 442–3w

Pornography
Internet 425w

Portcullis House
49w
Expenditure 557w

Porton Down
207w

Ports
Newhaven (03.06.98) 324–32
Passengers 646–7w

Post Office
594w
Driving licences 125w
External financing limits 115w
Reviews 319w

Post Office Users' National Council
159–60w
Public appointments 124w

Post offices
Watford 508w

Postal services
115–6w
Customs 328w
USA 503w

Poultry
Animal welfare 73–4w

Poultry meat
Imports 248–9w

Pound, Mr Stephen
Debates etc.
Sports (05.06.98) 631, 655, 660, 662
Questions
Central Railway 30w
Gas fired power stations 507w
National air quality strategy 417w
Waste disposal 419–20w

Poverty
Developing countries 215w
Pensioners 699–700

Power industry
117w

Pregnant women
Benzodiazepines 463w

Prentice, Ms Bridget, An Assistant Whip
Debates etc.
European Council (11.06.98) 1284

Prentice, Mr Gordon
Debates etc.
Business questions (11.06.98) 1220–1
Electoral systems (02.06.98) 198
Nuclear weapons tests (01.06.98) 32
Questions
Animal feed, Antibiotics 494
Bradenstoke Priory Barn 427w
Bulgaria, Overseas aid 459w
Channel tunnel, Railway network 573w
Cosmetic surgery 127w

Prentice, Mr Gordon—continued
Electronic government 1064
Elgin Marbles 3–4, 302w
Green papers, Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster 2w
Green papers, Costs 92w
Green papers, Dept of Health 334w
Green papers, Dept of Trade and Industry 126w
Green papers, Northern Ireland Office 64w
Green papers, Scottish Office 259w
Industrial health and safety, Fuels 518–9w
Kray, Reginald 167w
Low pay, Pendle 497w
UNESCO, Cultural heritage 560w

Pre-school education
696w
Barnsley 364w
Doncaster 364w
Hereford and Worcester 708–9w
Scotland 268–75w

Prescott, Rt Hon John, Deputy Prime Minister and Secretary of State for the Environment Transport and the Regions
Debates etc.
Channel tunnel, Ministerial statements (03.06.98) 367–84
Questions
Council tax capping, Derbyshire 420w
Cycling 867–8
Derelict land 859–60
Housing construction 859
Housing construction, Derelict land 858–60
Jubilee line 868–70
Members' correspondence, Administrative delays 413w
School transport 865–6
Transport policy 866–7
Transport policy, White papers 211w

Prescription drugs
171w, 465w
Wales 545w

Prescriptions
465w

President of the Council
Inquiries 509w

Press
Children 43w

Prestwick Airport
Expenditure 259–60w

Preventative Health Care and Home Insulation Bill 1997/98
Debates etc.
1R (10.06.98) 1078

Primarolo, Ms Dawn, Financial Secretary to the Treasury
Questions
Alcoholic drinks duties, Beer 326w
Capital gains tax 195w
Capital gains tax, Pensioners 195w
Customs, Postal services 328w
Disabled person's tax credit 650–1w
Double taxation, Tax allowances 391w
Duty free allowances 194w
Duty free allowances, Ferries 328w
EC Finance Council 193w
Hydrocarbon oil duties 194w
Import duties, Israel 327w
Income tax 194–5w, 386–9w
Inheritance tax, Tax rates and bands 586w
Open government, Parliamentary questions 653w
Pensions, Tax allowances 651w
Personal savings, Channel Islands 652w
Self-assessment of tax 650w

Primarolo, Ms Dawn—continued
Sierra Leone, Arms trade 653w
Tax allowances, British residents abroad 652w
Tax allowances, Educational equipment 654w
Tax allowances, Interest payments 390–1w
Tax allowances, Vocational training 654w
Tax avoidance 649w
Tax burden, Statistics 224w
Tax credits 391–2w
Tax evasion 652w
Tax yields, Child benefit 651w
Taxation, Child benefit 392w
Taxation, Pay 654w
Taxation, Quarrying 494w
Tobacco duties 327w
Uniform business rate, Public houses 649–50w
VAT, Housing 328w

Primary care groups
173–4w, 465w, 1076
General practitioners 181w
Pharmacists 537–8w

Primary education
Drug abuse 693w
Literacy 695–6w
School population 626w

Primary health care
Pharmacists 539w

Primates
Animal experiments 644–5w

Prime Minister
Government information services 94w

Prime Minister's questions
358–9

Printing industry
Training 364w

Prior, Mr David
Debates etc.
National Lottery Bill, Rep and 3R (01.06.98) 57, 64, 68, 75–6, 93–4, 108–9
Questions
Aerials, Planning permission 575w
Areas of outstanding natural beauty 579w
Assisted places scheme 628w
Coastal protection 601w
Community hospitals 604w
Council tax, Second homes 576w
Dentists, Norfolk 129w
Food Standards Agency 339w
Music education 625w
Primary education, School population 626w
Road signs 572w
Road signs, Rural areas 572w
School closures 626w
Sites of special scientific interest 579w
Village schools 626w

Priority routes
Greater London 18w

Prison accommodation
Garth Prison 439w
Wymott Prison 439w

Prison medical services
56w

Prison Officers' Association
Private sector 55–6w

Prison population
223w
Foreigners 567–8w
Scotland 280–2w
Young offenders 382w

Prison riots
Lisnevin Training School 432–3w

Prison Service
Performance standards 380–1w
Property transfer 307w

Prison staff
Feltham Young Offender Institution and Remand Centre 52w

Prison visits
Drug crimes 439w

Prisoners
Army in Northern Ireland 359, 663w
Atkinson, George (02.06.98) 270–6
Drug abuse 310–1w
Scotland 196w
Self-mutilation 382w
Suicide 56w, 306w
Television 196w, 639–40w
Venezuela 618w

Prisoners' incentives and earned privileges scheme
50–1w, 640w

Prisoners of war
Japan 107w

Prisoners' release
Northern Ireland (04.06.98) 514, (10.06.98) 1082–168

Prisons
Construction 54w
Morecambe 31w, 54w, 168w, 417w, 484w
Private sector 382–3w
Surveys 417w

Private education
1178
Inspections 695w
Surrey 1178

Private finance initiative
223–4w
Home Office 51–2w
Loughborough General Hospital 179w
Magistrates' courts 212w
Scottish Office 278w

Private Hire Vehicles (London) Bill 1997/98
Debates etc.
(09.06.98) 979

Private sector
New deal schemes 205w
Prison Officers' Association 55–6w
Prisons 382–3w

Privatisation
Channel Four 4–5
Student loans 256–7w

Probation and aftercare
Finance 58–60w
Inspections 640–1w
Police national computer 52–3w

Probation officers
641–2w

Procurator Fiscal Service
499–502w

Prodigy prescribing system
687–8w

Production quotas
Milk 341w, 530w

Property development
Cardiff Bay 545w

Property transfer
Prison Service 307w
RAF Carlisle 491w

"Proposals for a Strategic London Road Network Consultation Paper"
636w

Prosecutions
338w
Customs and Excise 498–9
Phoenix companies 338w
Pollution control 299w

Protection from Harassment Act 1997
Questions
Animal welfare 646w

Protest
Animal welfare 646w

Psychiatry
Wales 672w

Public appointments
Better Regulation Task Force 1–2w
Dept of the Environment Transport and the Regions 3w
Dept of Trade and Industry 113w
Lord Chancellor's Dept 71–2w
Ministerial Tourism Advisory Forum 560–4w
NHS 690–1w
NHS trusts 157–9, 691w
Northern Ireland Office 184w
Post Office Users' National Council 124w
Reservoirs Act 1975 159w
Scotland 78w
Scottish Office 77w, 384w
Structure plans 26–7w
Welsh Advisory Committee on Drug and Alcohol Misuse 376–8w

Public bills
(04.06.98) 551–94

Public bodies
Dept of the Environment Transport and the Regions 629w

Public buildings
Archaeological sites 44w

Public holidays
Millennium 218w
Police 437w

Public houses
Uniform business rate 649–50w

Public inquiries
Heathrow Airport 8w, 512w, 863–4
Legal costs 72w

Public libraries
Blind 560w
Information technology 165w

Public opinion
Genetically modified organisms 535w

Public petitions
Countryside (04.06.98) 595
Winwick (02.06.98) 269

Public sector borrowing requirement
Office for National Statistics 586w
Statistics 585–6w

Public sector debt
EC countries 327–8w
Economic policy 650w

Public sector earnings
392w

Public sector employment
Wales 673w

Public sector housing
Scotland 330–1w

Public transport
Magistrates' courts 212w
Museums and galleries 376w

Public Trust Office
67–9w, 411–2w
Court of Protection 69w

Public utilities
Regulatory systems 116w

Publications
Belfast Agreement 481w

Publicity
Breast feeding 404–5w
Contraceptives 536w
Euro 585w
Scottish Office 266–7w

Pupil exclusions
694–5w, 1181
Chelmsford 626w
Warrington 367w

Pupil-teacher ratios
Scotland 282–9w

Purchase, Mr Ken
Questions
New deal for disabled people 473w

Quarrying
Taxation 494w

Queen Mary's University Hospital
(03.06.98) 300–23

Quin, Ms Joyce, Minister of State, Home Office*
Questions
Cardiff Prison, Operating costs 483–4w
Community service orders 482w
Electronic tagging, Contracts 303w, 648w
Feltham Young Offender Institution and Remand Centre, Prison staff 52w
Home detention curfews 57–8w, 304w
Home detention curfews, Costs 433w, 565w
Home detention curfews, Sexual offences 57w
Kray, Reginald 167w
Police discipline 56w
Prison medical services 56w
Prison Officers' Association, Private sector 55–6w
Prison population 223w
Prison population, Foreigners 567–8w
Prison population, Young offenders 382w
Prison Service, Performance standards 380–1w
Prison Service, Property transfer 307w
Prisoners, Self-mutilation 382w
Prisoners, Suicide 56w, 306w
Prisoners, Television 639–40w
Prisoners' incentives and earned privileges scheme 50–1w, 640w
Prisons, Construction 54w
Prisons, Morecambe 168w, 484w
Prisons, Private sector 382–3w
Probation and aftercare, Finance 58–60w
Probation and aftercare, Inspections 640–1w
Probation officers 641–2w
Repatriation, Offenders 53w
Wymott Prison, Prison accommodation 439w

Quinn, Mr Lawrie
Questions
Beef, Exports 1072
Electronic government 1063–4
Pensioners, Poverty 699–700
School transport 865–6

Racial discrimination
Cricket 48–9w
Strathclyde Police (01.06.98) 145–52

Radice, Mr Giles
Debates etc.
Economic policy (11.06.98) 1204

Radio
Police 436w

Radioactive materials
Export controls 119–20w

Radioactive waste disposal
River Thames 525w

RAF Carlisle
Property transfer 491w

RAF Menwith Hill
Defence expenditure 96–7w

Railway fares
513w

Railway industry
Scottish Parliament 84w

Railway land
19w

Railway network
Channel tunnel 13w, 117w, 573–4w
Finance 23w
Leeds 514w

Railway safety
872

Railway travel
Compensation 523w
Handicapped 864–5
Information services 513w
Mobility of disabled 29w

Rain forests
Guyana 648w
Overseas aid 235w

Rammell, Mr Bill
Debates etc.
European Council (11.06.98) 1240
Teaching and Higher Education Bill (HL), Rep adjourned (08.06.98) 821–4
Teaching and Higher Education Bill (HL), Rep and 3R (09.06.98) 917–8, 924–5
Questions
Child workers 234w
Local government corruption 1074–5
Theatres, Arts finance 1–2

Randall, Mr John
Debates etc.
Teaching and Higher Education Bill (HL), Rep adjourned (08.06.98) 772, 784
Questions
Birds, Nature conservation 30w
Sites of special scientific interest, Northern Ireland 184w
Sites of special scientific interest, Wales 62w

Rapson, Mr Syd
Questions
Lockheed Martin, Defence procurement 101w
Young offenders 219–20w

Rate rebates
Sports 84w, 185w

Raynsford, Mr Nick, Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Dept of the Environment Transport and the Regions*
Debates etc.
Leasehold housing (10.06.98) 991, 1007–9
Playing fields, Bromsgrove (08.06.98) 852–4
Sportsgrounds, Town and country planning (10.06.98) 1037–40

Raynsford, Mr Nick—continued
Structure plans, Hertfordshire (04.06.98) 602–8
Questions
Aerials, Planning permission 574–5w
Areas of outstanding natural beauty 579w
Construction materials, Fire prevention 297–9w
Council tax, Second homes 576w
Council tax capping, Derbyshire 635–6w
Disabled facilities grants 416w
Disabled facilities grants, Elderly 17w
Energy prices, Business premises 568–9w
Greater London Authority 861–3
Greater London Authority, Better government programme 634–5w
Greater London Authority, Town and country planning 513w
Households, Single people 154–5w
Housing, Tewkesbury 30w
Housing, Wandsworth 373w
Housing benefits 511w
Housing benefits, Finance 575w
Housing construction 24–6w
Housing construction, Building regulations 575–6w
Housing construction, Playing fields 511w
Housing construction, West Sussex 9w
Housing Corporation, Operating costs 569w
Housing Corporation, Pay 569w
Housing improvement, Cumbria 571w
Housing policy, Cumbria 571w
Insects, Pest control 157–8w
Kent County Council 419w, 577w
Landlords 299–300w
Local Government Act 1988, Homosexuality 28w
Local government constituencies 860–1
Local government constituencies, Gloucestershire 212w
Local government constituencies, Northamptonshire 519w
National House Building Council 155w
Parishes 415w
Prisons, Morecambe 31w
Prisons, Surveys 417w
Rough sleepers initiative, West Midlands 19–20w
Second homes 576w
Social rented housing 510–1w
Social rented housing, Investment 14w
Standard spending assessments, Rural areas 29w
Structure plans, Public appointments 26–7w
Travelling people, Caravan sites 574w
Urban areas, Management 20w

Recycling
Palace of Westminster 557–8w

Redcar and Cleveland Borough Council
Government grants 579w

Redundancy
Duty free allowances 122w, 1074

Redwood, Rt Hon John
Debates etc.
Millennium compliance (08.06.98) 718–9
Questions
Arms trade, Africa 126w
Dounreay, Nuclear fuel reprocessing 712–3
Dounreay, Nuclear safety 120–1w
Ministers, Information 317w
Sierra Leone, Arms trade 653w, 682–4w

Reed, Mr Andrew
Debates etc.
Sports (05.06.98) 649–52, 660, 675
Teaching and Higher Education Bill (HL), Rep and 3R (09.06.98) 903–4, 906

Reed, Mr Andrew—continued
Questions
Class sizes, Leicestershire 1179
Developing countries, Debts 370w
East Midlands Regional Development Agency 630–1w
Heavily indebted poor countries initiative 225w
Loughborough General Hospital, Private finance initiative 179w
Thailand, Overseas aid 168–9w
UK Sports Institute 668w

Referendums
(03.06.98) 277–99
Ministerial statements (01.06.98) 33–41
Northern Ireland government 361–2
Western Sahara 239w

Refrigeration
Chlorofluorocarbons 15w
Hydrofluorocarbons 14–5w

Refugees
Burma 168–9w

Reg(EC)258/97
453w

Reg(EC)577/97
454w

Reg(EC)623/98
454w

Regional aid
EC grants and loans 161w, 319–20w

Regional airports
Air routes 580w
Local government borrowing 637–8w

Regional development agencies
509w
Liverpool 509w
Skill shortages 203w
South West region 509w

Regional government
30w

Regional selective assistance
Shipbuilding 684w

Registration of births deaths and marriages
224w

Registration of Political Parties Bill 1997/98
Debates etc.
2R and money res* (04.06.98) 515–60

Regulatory systems
Gas supply industry (09.06.98) 980–6
Public utilities 116w

Reid, Dr John, Minister for the Armed Forces
Questions
Armed forces, Germany 491w
Armed forces casualties 95–6w, 105–6w
Armed forces housing 393w
Armed forces reserves, NATO countries 491–2w
Armed forces training, Costs 101–2w
Armed forces training, Defence equipment 489w, 638–9w
Armed forces training, Indonesia 102–3w
Armed forces uniforms 102w
Armed forces women 312w
Army 607w
Army bases, York 103w
Army strength 606w
Chinook helicopters, Air accidents 183w

Reid, Dr John—continued
Copthorne Barracks 105w
Defence Dental Agency, Performance standards 396–7w
Defence Medical Training Organisation, Performance standards 394–5w
Defence Military Assistance Fund 422w
Defence Secondary Care Agency, Performance standards 395–6w
Exservicemen, Counselling 606w
Ex-Services Mental Welfare Society 422w
Fishery protection, Spain 106w
Helicopters 394w
Medical Supplies Agency, Performance standards 395w
Military aircraft 421w
Military decorations 103w
Military decorations, Northern Ireland 103–4w
Naval Bases and Supply Agency, Performance standards 397w
Navy strength 606w
Ordnance Disposal School Chattendon 394w
RAF Menwith Hill, Defence expenditure 96–7w
Ships Support Agency, Performance standards 397–8w
Sierra Leone, Armed forces deployment 314w
Territorial Army 104w, 421w
Territorial Army, Costs 490–1w
Territorial Army, Germany 489–91w
Territorial Army, Shropshire 104–5w
WE 177 nuclear bomb 96w
Western European Union 606–7w

Religious freedom
Developing countries 233w

Rendel, Mr David
Questions
Maintenance, Children 552–4w
New deal for lone parents 695–6

Rendering industry
Wales 671–2w

Rented housing
Glasgow 333w
Scotland 333w

Repatriation
Offenders 53w

Research councils
Men 596w

Reservoirs Act 1975
Questions
Public appointments 159w

Residential care
Drugs 686–7w
Elderly 463–4w

Residential care of children
Social workers 408–9w

Respite care
541w

Restoration of Damage to Sites of Special Scientific Interest Bill 1997/98
Debates etc.
1R (10.06.98) 1079–81

Restricted Enforcement Unit
Arms trade 317–8w, 676–7w

Retail trade
Farm incomes 487
Petrol 114–5w
Tobacco 505w

Retirement pensions
111–2w, 467w, 546w
Equal opportunities 111w

Review of Health Care in London Independent Advisory Panel
(03.06.98) 300–23

Reviews
Dept of Social Security 192w
Post Office 319w

Rights of way
23w

River Tame
Sewage 372–3w

River Thames
Radioactive waste disposal 525w

Rivers
Sites of special scientific interest 572w

Road accidents
22w
Drinking and driving 20w, 22–3w
Drug abuse 20w
Scotland 582–3w, 657w

Road construction
Cameroon 447w
Dorchester 297w
Greater London 18w
M74 515w

Road finance
516w

Road safety
156w

Road signs
572w
Rural areas 572w

Road traffic
209–10w
M4 670–1w
M62 156w

Road traffic control
Police 223w

Road traffic offences
Convictions 307–9w
Fines 309w
Lancashire 53w
Scotland 196–7w

Road Traffic Regulation Act 1984
Questions
21w

Road works
153w
A49 155w
Cumbria 416w

Roads
Greater London Authority 636w
Lancashire 863

Robathan, Mr Andrew
Debates etc.
Northern Ireland (Sentences) Bill, 2R (10.06.98) 1084, 1111, 1135–8, 1163
Questions
Armed forces uniforms 102w
Art works, VAT 3
Business questions 510
Class sizes, Leicestershire 1178–9
Cycling 514w
Glaucoma, Hospital waiting lists 164
Poultry, Animal welfare 73–4w
Sierra Leone, Armed forces deployment 99w, 182w
Standard spending assessments, Leicestershire 512w
Transport policy 866–7

Robertson, Rt Hon George, Secretary of State for Defence*
Questions
Armed forces deployment 609–11w
Armed forces deployment, Bosnia-Herzegovina 609w
Armed forces deployment, Iraq 607w
Armed forces deployment, Persian Gulf 608–9w
Economic Community of West African States Military Observer Group 101w
Joint Service Command and Staff College, Shrivenham 423w
Military exercises, Macedonia 393w
Mines 423–4w
Nuclear weapons policy 606w
Prisoners of war, Japan 107w
Sierra Leone, Armed forces deployment 97–101w, 182w

Robertson, Mr Laurence
Questions
Afghanistan, Human rights 461w
Bovine spongiform encephalopathy 493–4
Business questions 510
Chronic fatigue syndrome 605w
Crown Prosecution Service 337w
Dentists 239w
Developing countries, Religious freedom 233w
Disability living allowance 471–2w
Exhaust emission controls 871
Grant maintained schools 139–40w, 627–8w
Health service staff, Manpower 466w
Hospital discharges, Geriatric patients 466w
Housing, Tewkesbury 30w
Indonesia, Arms trade 240w
Lorries, Noise control 228w
Low flying, Tewkesbury 424w
Prescription drugs 465w
Primary care groups 465w
Regional government 30w
School closures, Rural areas 255–6w
Small businesses, Unfair dismissal 684w
Special education 139w
Sudan, Civil wars 460–1w

Robinson, Mr Geoffrey, Paymaster General*
Questions
Tax credits 88w
Tax credits, Pensioners 87–8w

Robinson, Mr Peter D
Debates etc.
Northern Ireland (Sentences) Bill, 2R (10.06.98) 1088–9, 1094, 1110, 1150–4

Roche, Mrs Barbara, Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Dept of Trade and Industry*
Debates etc.
Late Payment of Commercial Debts (Interest) Bill, Rep and 3R (01.06.98) 123–8, 132–6
Questions
Agenda 2000, Rural areas 321w
Arms exports, Export licensing 594w
Arms trade, Indonesia 227w
Business Link London North West, Finance 161–2w
Cellular phones, Health warnings 439–40w
Channel tunnel, Railway network 117w
Defence equipment, Exhibitions 385w, 504w
EC grants and loans 508w
EC grants and loans, Wales 507–8w
EC Telecommunications Council 162–4w
Export credit 504–5w

Roche, Mrs Barbara—continued*
Export credit guarantees 593w
Export credit guarantees, Indonesia 121w
Export licensing 125–6w
Export licensing, Cambodia 117–8w
Exports, Indonesia 121w
Internet Watch Foundation 506w
Millennium compliance, Directories 680w
Nomenclature of statistical territorial units, EC grants and loans 384w
Nomenclature of statistical territorial units, Population distribution 319w
Overseas investment, Environmentally sensitive areas 42w
Overseas investment, Russia 505–6w
Radioactive materials, Export controls 119–20w
Regional aid, EC grants and loans 161w, 319–20w
Shipbuilding, Regional selective assistance 684w
Small businesses, Dept of Trade and Industry 160–1w
Tobacco, Retail trade 505w

Roe, Mrs Marion
Questions
Cancer, Death 155
Palace of Westminster, Recycling 557–8w
Portcullis House 49w
Primary care groups 1076

Rogers, Mr Allan
Debates etc.
Teaching and Higher Education Bill (HL), Rep adjourned (08.06.98) 823

Rooker, Mr Jeff, Minister of State, Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food*
Questions
Agricultural products, Export rebates 454–5w
Agricultural subsidies 455–6w
Agricultural subsidies, Euro 453w
Animal feed, Antibiotics 76w, 494
Animal welfare 495
Antibiotics 495
Arable area payments scheme, Suffolk 452w
Artificial insemination, Cattle 535–6w
Barley, Export subsidies 532w
Beef, Exports 339–40w, 531–2w
Beekeeping 529–30w
Beekeeping, Agricultural subsidies 247–8w
Bees, Varroasis 247–8w, 344w, 496–7
Bovine spongiform encephalopathy 489–90, 599–601w
Bovine spongiform encephalopathy, Disease control 490
Bovine spongiform encephalopathy, Northern Ireland 490–1
Bovine spongiform encephalopathy, Slaughterhouses 598–9w
Bovine spongiform encephalopathy, West country 489
Bovine tuberculosis, Vaccination 529w
Butter, EC law 454w
Cattle, Canada 454w
Cattle tracing system 489
Common agricultural policy, Green rates 531w
Dogs, Disease control 530w
Eggs, EC action 338w
Food hygiene, Inspections 535w
Food labelling 340w
Food labelling, Diet and disease 249w
Food labelling, EC law 453w
Food poisoning 535w
Food standards, Civil service agencies 75w
Food Standards Agency 339w

Rooker, Mr Jeff—continued
Food surpluses, EC action 455w
Gangmasters 527–9w
Genetically modified organisms, Food labelling 498
Genetically modified organisms, Public opinion 535w
Hemp 454w
Livestock, Waste disposal 452–3w
Meat Hygiene Service, Intimidation 341–3w, 451–2w
Milk, E coli 601w
Milk, EC law 534w
Milk, Italy 344–5w
Milk, Peak District 530w
Milk, Prices 453–4w
Milk, Production quotas 341w, 530w
Poultry meat, Imports 248–9w
Sheep, Agricultural subsidies 531w
Slaughterhouses 452w
Slaughterhouses, Veterinary services 532–3w
Tobacco, Agricultural subsidies 344w, 530–1w
Untreated milk 339w
Untreated milk, Food poisoning 76w

Ross, Mr William
Debates etc.
Northern Ireland (Sentences) Bill, 2R (10.06.98) 1088, 1121, 1131, 1145–7, 1149
Questions
Association of Chief Police Officers 381–2w
Association of Chief Police Officers, Company law 320w
Association of Chief Police Officers (Scotland) 83w, 430w
Association of Chief Police Officers (Scotland), Finance 83w
Belfast Agreement, Publications 481w
Business questions 508–9
Extradition, USA 643–4w
Firearms, Departmental forms 220w, 310w, 431w
Grampian Police 83w
Petrol, Smuggling 66w
Veterinary medicine, Northern Ireland 663w
Veterinary medicine, Student numbers 703–4w

Rough sleepers initiative
West Midlands 19–20w

Rowe, Mr Andrew
Debates etc.
Channel tunnel (03.06.98) 376
Youth Parliament Bill, 1R (09.06.98) 875–7
Questions
Bishops, Travelling expenses 16–7
Christianity, Millennium Exhibition 34w
Multinational companies, Marketing 349–50

Rowlands, Mr Ted
Debates etc.
Teaching and Higher Education Bill (HL), Rep adjourned (08.06.98) 810–1
Questions
Cost per student, Wales 229w
Further education, Wales 63w
Lome Convention, Human rights 458–9w
UK contributions to EC budget 496w

Roy, Mr Frank
Questions
Housing benefits, Social security benefits overpayment 253w
Prisoners, Scotland 196w

Royal Deeside Partnership
262w

Royal Mail
Complaints 116w

Royal Opera House
46w

Royal parks
Festivals and special occasions 44w

Royal Ulster Constabulary
216–7w

Ruddock, Ms Joan, Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Dept of Social Security
Questions
Women, Domestic violence 476w, 703–4
Women, Government departments 694–5
Women, Government information services 691–2
Women's employment, Families 708

Ruffley, Mr David
Debates etc.
Magistrates' courts, Suffolk (10.06.98) 1045–6
Questions
Government Information and Communication Service 619w
Millennium Exhibition, Land pollution 30–1w
Road finance 516w

Rule of law
Overseas aid 36w

Rural areas
After school clubs 695w
Agenda 2000 321w
Road signs 572w
School closures 255–6w
Standard spending assessments 29w

Rural transport
Wales 675–6w

Russell, Bob
Debates etc.
Electoral systems (02.06.98) 192
Registration of Political Parties Bill, 2R (04.06.98) 530–3
Questions
Bicycles, Safety equipment 14w
Hospital discharges, Geriatric patients 170w
Millennium Exhibition 60w
Ombudsman, Investment 193–4w
Pensions review 702

Russell, Ms Christine
Questions
Children in care 174w

Russia
Overseas investment 505–6w

Rwanda
Debts 232w

S4C
302w

Safety equipment
Bicycles 14w

Safety measures
Fireworks 162w

St Aubyn, Mr Nick
Debates etc.
Teaching and Higher Education Bill (HL), Rep adjourned (08.06.98) 834
Questions
Haemophilia, Hepatitis 135w
Local government constituencies 860–1

St Aubyn, Mr Nick—continued
Pharmacies 172–3w
Private education, Surrey 1178

St Austell College
401w

St Helena
Diplomatic service 247w
Migrant workers 356w

St Helens
Crime prevention 364

Salmond, Mr Alex
Debates etc.
Economic policy (11.06.98) 1211
Referendums (03.06.98) 289, 292, 297
Questions
Dounreay, Uranium 364–5
Public appointments, Scotland 78w

Salter, Mr Martin
Debates etc.
Electoral systems (02.06.98) 208, 226–8
Questions
Grammar schools, Voting methods 256w

Sanders, Mr Adrian
Debates etc.
Leasehold housing (10.06.98) 996–8
Registration of Political Parties Bill, 2R (04.06.98) 518, 521, 532, 536–7, 539, 542
Questions
Asbestos, Import controls 517w
Biological weapons 132w
EC grants and loans, Administrative costs 261w, 481w
EC grants and loans, Wales 425–6w
Government information services, Dept for Education and Employment 255w
Government information services, Dept of Trade and Industry 126w
Government information services, Prime Minister 94w
Government information services, Scottish Office 84w
Government information services, Treasury 85w
Ministerial Tourism Advisory Forum, Public appointments 560–4w
National House Building Council 155w
Second homes 576w
Tourism, Coastal areas 45w

Sandline
92w, 101w, 144–5w, 240w, 301w, 317w, 354, 586–7w, 682–4w, 1067

Sarwar, Mr Mohammad
Questions
Arts sponsorship, Scotland 581w
Free school meals, Scotland 431w
Housing benefits, Scotland 547w
Insolvency 384–6w
Insolvency, Scotland 431–2w

Savidge, Mr Malcolm
Debates etc.
Millennium compliance (08.06.98) 726

Sawford, Mr Phil
Questions
Overseas aid, Rain forests 235w
Performing arts, Kettering 5–6

Sayeed, Mr Jonathan
Debates etc.
Referendums (03.06.98) 277–9
Questions
Alcoholic drinks duties, Beer 326w
Ministerial policy advisors, Dept for International Development 37–8w

Sayeed, Mr Jonathan—continued
Ministerial policy advisors, Scottish Office 260w
School transport 1190–1
Sierra Leone, Armed forces deployment 100w
Transport policy, White papers 211w

School administration
141w

School closures
626w
Rural areas 255–6w

School crossing patrols
21w

School leaving
701–3w

School population
Norfolk 626w
Primary education 626w
Scotland 282–9w

School Standards and Framework Bill 1997/98
Questions
256w

School transport
865–6, 1189–91
Northern Ireland 217–8w

Schools
399–400w
Bury 1180–1
Nutrition and health 167

Scientists
Women 204w

Scotland
Antismoking campaign 260–1w
Arts sponsorship 581w
Asthma 85w
Beekeeping 275w
Breast cancer 657w
Class sizes 282w
Complaints against police 77–9w
Council housing 330–1w
Derelict land 428–9w
Direct labour departments 580–1w
EC grants and loans 261w
Educational assessment 265w
Educational finance 262–4w
Educational publications 502w
Fish conservation 582w
Free school meals 431w
Greenbelt 79–81w
High rise flats 84–5w
Hospital waiting lists 289–90w
Housing benefits 547w
Housing finance 331–2w, 429–30w
Income distribution 550–1w
Insolvency 431–2w
Legal aid scheme 279–80w, 502w
Local government corruption 362–4
Mortgage defaulters 291–3w
Multiple occupation 331w
Negligence 280w
NHS 265–6w
NHS finance 197w
NHS trusts 264w
Occupational pensions 551w
Pensioners 477–80w
Pre-school education 268–75w
Prison population 280–2w
Prisoners 196w
Public appointments 78w
Public sector housing 330–1w
Pupil-teacher ratios 282–9w
Rented housing 333w
Road accidents 582–3w, 657w
Road traffic offences 196–7w

Scotland—continued
School population 282–9w
Secure accommodation 429w
Slums 84w
Smoking 260w
Social security benefits 698
Sports 84w
Student grants 428w
Student loans 275–8w
Student numbers 383w
Tuition fees 383w
Urban areas 499w

Scottish National Sleep Laboratory
81–2w

Scottish Office
Civil service recruitment 264–5w
Government information services 84w
Green papers 259w
Ministerial policy advisors 260w
Private finance initiative 278w
Public appointments 77w, 384w
Publicity 266–7w
Repairs and maintenance 77–8w
Small businesses 85w

Scottish Parliament
Parliamentary buildings 657–8w
Railway industry 84w

Screening
Breast cancer 237w
Chlamydiosis 181w

Sea level
Environment Agency 341w

Sea pollution
Merchant ships (08.06.98) 843–6

Seas and oceans
Nature conservation 1–3w

Second homes
576w
Council tax 509–10w, 576w

Secondary Care Agency
see Defence Secondary Care Agency

Secure accommodation
Greater London 181w
Scotland 429w

Security industry
Developing countries 232–3w

Security vetting
Defence contracts 638w

Sedgemore, Mr Brian
Questions
Arms trade 423w

Seigniorage
Bank of England 585w
Economic and monetary union 442w

Self-assessment of tax
650w

Self-mutilation
Prisoners 382w

Sentencing
167w
Thorne, Damien 662w

Serials
Ministry of Agriculture Fisheries and Food 197–8w

Service charges
Leasehold housing 158–9w

Set-aside schemes
338w

Sewage
River Tame 372–3w
Water treatment 17w, 517w

Sewers
32w

Sexual offences
Home detention curfews 57w
Interagency cooperation 303–5w

Sheep
Agricultural subsidies 531w

Sheep dipping
536w

Sheerman, Mr Barry
Debates etc.
Business questions (11.06.98) 1223–4
Economic policy (11.06.98) 1212
Questions
Cancer, Death 155–6
Crown Prosecution Service, Harmonisation of standards 499–500
Derelict land 860
Developing countries, Debts 354–5
Farmers, Bureaucracy 491
Handicap benefits 470w
Higher education admission 1182
Historic buildings 426w
Millennium Exhibition, Business 14–5

Sheldon, Rt Hon Robert
Debates etc.
Economic policy (11.06.98) 1206–7
House of Commons procedure (04.06.98) 552, 558
Questions
Elgin Marbles 4
National Audit Office 19
National Audit Office, Non-departmental public bodies 18–9

Shephard, Rt Hon Gillian
Debates etc.
Channel tunnel (03.06.98) 370–2
Questions
Local government finance 857–8

Shepherd, Mr Richard
Debates etc.
House of Commons procedure (04.06.98) 569–71, 574–5, 583, 592

Shipbuilding
Regional selective assistance 684w

Shipping
Government assistance 18w

Shipping accidents
870

Ships Support Agency
Performance standards 397–8w

Short, Rt Hon Clare, Secretary of State for International Development*
Questions
Afghanistan, Overseas aid 39w
Arms trade 355
Bilateral aid 232w
Burma, Overseas aid 41w
Cameroon, Road construction 447w
Child workers 234w
Dept for International Development, EC staff 446–7w
Developing countries, Debts 35w, 230–1w, 234w, 354–8, 588w
Developing countries, Religious freedom 233w
Developing countries, Security industry 232–3w
Development Policy Forum 648–9w
Disaster relief 231–2w
EC aid, Disclosure of information 446w
EC aid, Sustainable development 447w
EC Development Council 236w, 447w

Short, Rt Hon Clare—continued
European Development Fund, UK contributions to EC budget 448w
Export subsidies 41w
Group of Eight, Overseas aid 40w
Guyana, Rain forests 648w
Heavily indebted poor countries initiative 42w
India, Nuclear weapons 40w
Indonesia, Overseas aid 235–6w
International trade, Business corruption 350
Iraq, International assistance 231w
Kosovo, Overseas aid 41–2w
Ministerial policy advisors, Dept for International Development 37–8w
Multilateral Agreement on Investment 234w
Multinational companies, Human rights 349
Multinational companies, Marketing 349–50
North Korea 325–6w
Overseas aid, Human rights 37w
Overseas aid, Non-governmental organisations 38–9w
Overseas aid, Rain forests 235w
Overseas aid, Rule of law 36w
Police training 36w
Rwanda, Debts 232w
Sierra Leone 325w
Sierra Leone, Arms trade 586–7w
Sierra Leone, Military intervention 587w
Sierra Leone, Overseas aid 236w, 354, 445–6w, 587w
South Africa, Higher education 648w
Stabex 448–9w
Sudan 36–7w
Sudan, EC aid 36w
Sudan, Human rights 352–3
Sudan, Overseas aid 233w, 350–3, 449w
UN agencies, UK contributions 38w
World Bank 587–8w

Shrivenham
Joint Service Command and Staff College 423w

Shropshire
Territorial Army 104–5w

Sierra Leone
91–2w, 143–6w, 325w, 345w, 370w
Armed forces deployment 97–101w, 182w, 314w
Arms trade 92w, 142–5w, 240w, 301w, 317–8w, 345–6w, 424–5w, 456–7w, 586–7w, 616–7w, 653w, 664w, 682–4w, 1068–70
Departmental correspondence 346w
EC aid 236w
Governments in exile 92w, 486–7w
Military intervention 587w
Overseas aid 236w, 354, 445–6w, 587w
Parliamentary questions 684w

Sierra Leone (United Nations Sanctions) Order 1997
Questions
145w

Silica
Health hazards 520–1w

Simpson, Mr Alan
Debates etc.
Economic policy (11.06.98) 1211–2
European Council (11.06.98) 1262–7
Questions
Advisory Committee on Releases to the Environment 5w
Genetically modified organisms, Environment protection 5–7w

Simpson, Mr Alan—continued
Tax allowances, Educational equipment 654w

Simpson, Mr Keith
Questions
Sierra Leone 144w
Sierra Leone, Arms trade 143w

Single people
Households 154–5w

Sites of special scientific interest
579w, (10.06.98) 1079–81
Countryside stewardship scheme 529w
Lancashire 370–1w
Northern Ireland 184w
Rivers 572w
Wales 62w

Sixth form colleges
692w
Godalming 693w

Skill shortages
Armed forces civilians 394w
Regional development agencies 203w
Teachers 1183–5

Skinner, Mr Dennis
Debates etc.
House of Commons procedure (04.06.98) 555, 561–3, 582
Intervention during ministerial statement (08.06.98) 718
Nuclear weapons tests (01.06.98) 29
Questions
Local government finance 857
Nuclear power stations, Decommissioning 713

Slaughterhouses
452w
Animal welfare 533–4w
Bovine spongiform encephalopathy 598–9w
Spain 533–4w
Veterinary services 532–3w

Slums
Scotland 84w
Wales 592w

Small businesses
Dept for Culture Media and Sport 45w
Dept for Education and Employment 140w
Dept of Health 135w
Dept of the Environment Transport and the Regions 29–30w
Dept of Trade and Industry 160–1w
Foreign and Commonwealth Office 149w
Home Office 54w
Ministry of Agriculture Fisheries and Food 249w
Ministry of Defence 108w
Northern Ireland Office 67w
Scottish Office 85w
Treasury 195w
Unfair dismissal 684w
Welsh Office 61w

Smallholdings
Local government land 339w

Smith, Rt Hon Andrew, Minister for Employment and Disability Rights, Dept for Education and Employment
Questions
EC Education and Social Affairs Council 450–1w
Employment schemes, Lancashire 1188–9
European voluntary service for young people 137w
New deal for long term unemployed 693w
New deal for young people 137w, 624w, 693–4w, 696–7w, 707w

Smith, Rt Hon Andrew—continued
New deal for young people, Guildford 543–4w
New deal for young people, Social security benefits reductions 255w
New deal schemes 1189
New deal schemes, Access courses 138w
New deal schemes, Crawley 1188
New deal schemes, Ethnic minorities 1177
New deal schemes, Lincolnshire 1191–2
New deal schemes, Private sector 205w
New deal schemes, Thanet 449–50w
Small businesses, Dept for Education and Employment 140w
Tobacco advertising 1193–4

Smith, Angela
Questions
Chiropody 602w
Chiropody, Elderly 536w
Educational standards 1074
Immigration 49–50w
Vulnerable or Intimidated Witnesses Interdepartmental Working Group 481–2w

Smith, Rt Hon Chris, Secretary of State for Culture Media and Sport
Debates etc.
National Lottery Bill, Rep and 3R (01.06.98) 111–3, 115
Sports (05.06.98) 609–16, 620–1, 628, 673, 681
Questions
Art works 4
Arts Council of England 46w
Broadcasting 45w
Commercial television 12
Creative Industries Task Force 44w
Digital television 5, 45w
Elgin Marbles 3–4
Heritage Lottery Fund 43w
Independent Television Commission 12
Mass media, Ownership 4–5
Millennium 12–3
Millennium, Public holidays 218w
Museums and galleries 8, 46w
Museums and galleries, Armed conflict 8
Museums and galleries, Finance 7–8
National Lottery, Voluntary organisations 44–5w
Press, Children 43w
Royal Opera House 46w
Television, Sports 46–7w
Tourism 45w
UK Sports Institute 46w

Smith, Miss Geraldine
Questions
Food labelling 340w
Prisons, Construction 54w
Prisons, Morecambe 31w, 168w, 484w
Prisons, Surveys 417w

Smith, Mr Llew
Debates etc.
Teaching and Higher Education Bill (HL), Rep adjourned (08.06.98) 809
Questions
Dounreay, Nuclear fuel reprocessing 595–6w
Epilepsy 537w
India, Nuclear weapons tests 152w
Indonesia, Arms trade 151–2w
Nuclear fuels, Japan 679–80w
S4C 302w
Transport of radioactive materials, France 414w
WE 177 nuclear bomb 96w

Smith, Sir Robert
Debates etc.
Channel tunnel (03.06.98) 383–4
Teaching and Higher Education Bill (HL), Rep adjourned (08.06.98) 773, 787, 794

Smoking
Health education 465w
Northern Ireland 323w
Scotland 260w
Wales 323–4w
Young people 136w, 260w, 323–4w

Smuggling
Petrol 66w
Tobacco 1076

Smyth, Rev Martin
Debates etc.
Economic policy (11.06.98) 1213
Northern Ireland (Sentences) Bill, 2R (10.06.98) 1118, 1131, 1133
Referendums (03.06.98) 285
Questions
Family planning, Northern Ireland 65–6w
Sudan, Human rights 352–3
Tobacco, Common agricultural policy 161

Soames, Mr Nicholas
Debates etc.
House of Commons procedure (04.06.98) 560
Nuclear weapons tests (01.06.98) 26
Oral question time intervention (10.06.98) 1063
Questions
Bovine spongiform encephalopathy 490
Members' correspondence, Administrative delays 1060

Social Exclusion Unit
Homelessness 213–4w
Wales 674w
West Midlands 213–4w

Social Fund
Floods 187–9w

Social rented housing
510–1w
Investment 14w

Social security
Expenditure 475w
Performance standards 479–80w

Social security abuse
Housing benefits 478–9w

Social security appeals
468–9w

Social security benefits
Children 473w
Lone parents 315–6w
Pensioners 477–8w
Scotland 698
Young people 474w

Social Security Benefits Agency
Manpower 189w
Personnel 472w

Social security benefits overpayment
Housing benefits 253w
Personal injury compensation 550w

Social security benefits reductions
New deal for young people 255w

Social security benefits rules
Handicap benefits 109w

Social security claims
Incapacity benefit 253w

Social security recipients
189–90w
Disability living allowance 548w

Social security recipients—continued
Handicap benefits 190–2w

Social security reform
469w

Social services
NHS 165

Social workers
Residential care of children 408–9w

Solar power
Research 122–3w

Soley, Mr Clive
Questions
Press, Children 43w

Solicitors
Legal aid 70w

South Africa
Higher education 648w

South Asia
Nuclear weapons tests 242–3w

South Devon
Housing 524w

South Downs
14w, 636w

South West London
Hospitals 691–2w

South West region
Regional development agencies 509w

Southworth, Ms Helen
Questions
Mentally disadvantaged, Data banks 539w
New deal schemes, Ethnic minorities 1177

Spain
Fishery protection 106w
Slaughterhouses 533–4w

Speaker and deputies, For rulings and statements see separate heading Speaker's rulings and statements
Debates etc.
Amendments and new clauses (01.06.98) 54, 83, 102, 120, 127, 129, (02.06.98) 171, (08.06.98) 738, 748, 751, 756, 765, 801, 840, (09.06.98) 878, 894, 896, 899–900
Conduct of proceedings (01.06.98) 65, 70, 76, 95, 128, 134, (02.06.98) 166–8, 223–4, 231, 247, 251, 264, (03.06.98) 2 78, 286, 313, 359, 363, 374–5, 380, 384, (04.06.98) 517, 519, 540, 601, (05.06.98) 630, 645, (08.06.98) 691, 697, 738, 753, 772–3, 775–7, 781, 807, 810, 828, 847, 849, (09.06.98) 885, 931–2, 939, 957, 960, (10.06.98) 1007, 1043, 1048, 105 5, 1065, 1086, 1126, 1164, (11.06.98) 1200, 1202, 1206, 1215, 1240, 1272, 1274
Disallowed questions (01.06.98) 6, (11.06.98) 1179, 1182, 1192
House of Commons accommodation, Points of order (08.06.98) 776
Orders and regulations motions (08.06.98) 840
Points of order (02.06.98) 168, (05.06.98) 629, (08.06.98) 736, 771–2, (09.06.98) 874, (10.06.98) 1004, 1077–8
Royal Assent (11.06.98) 1241
Teaching and Higher Education Bill (HL), Rep adjourned (08.06.98) 697

Speaker's rulings and statements
House of Commons procedure (03.06.98) 281–2
House of Commons questions (11.06.98) 1226

Speaker's rulings and statements—continued
Members' correspondence (04.06.98) 512, 514
Ten minutes rule (02.06.98) 171

Special education
139w
Autism 368w
Complaints 698w
Cumbria 699w
Training 366–7w
West Sussex 368w

Speed limits
Carbon dioxide 211–2w

Spellar, Mr John, Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Ministry of Defence
Questions
Air force bases 102w
Apache AH-64 helicopter 639w
Armed forces catering services, Beef 95w
Armed forces civilians, Skill shortages 394w
Armed forces housing, Kingston 422w
Armed forces strength, Wales 492w
Arms trade 421–3w
Arms trade, Trade promotion 422w
C17 aircraft 421w
Defence contracts 313w
Defence contracts, EC law 313w
Defence contracts, Security vetting 638w
Defence land, Hunting 209w
Defence land, Land reclamation 207–9w
Defence research, Uranium 182w
Export licensing, Indonesia 440w
Future large aircraft 421w
HMS Ocean 638w
Lockheed Martin, Defence procurement 101w
Low flying, Brecon Beacons National Park 639w
Low flying, Tewkesbury 424w
Ministry of Defence, Energy consumption 107w, 492w
Navy, Fuels 607w
Pay and Personnel Agency, Performance standards 488w
Porton Down 207w
Radioactive waste disposal, River Thames 525w
RAF Carlisle, Property transfer 491w
Small businesses, Ministry of Defence 108w
Tactical reconnaissance armoured combat equipment requirement 638w
Transport aircraft 639w
UK National Data Centre 312–3w
Uranium 107–8w

Spelman, Mrs Caroline
Debates etc.
Teaching and Higher Education Bill (HL), Rep and 3R (09.06.98) 904–7, 923–4
Questions
Agriculture, Exchange rates 492
Housing construction, Derelict land 858–9
Parking 515w

Spicer, Sir Michael
Debates etc.
Economic policy (11.06.98) 1212
Electoral systems (02.06.98) 221–2
Questions
Common agricultural policy 488

Spinal injuries
177w

Sports
(05.06.98) 609–82

Sports—continued
Disadvantaged 6–7
Finance 7
Governing bodies 48w
Greater London 42–3w
Millennium Exhibition 14, 60w
Northern Ireland 185w
Rate rebates 84w, 185w
Scotland 84w
Television 46–7w
Young people 42–3w

Sports sponsorship
Tobacco advertising 134w

Sportsgrounds
Town and country planning (10.06.98) 1033–40

Sportsmatch
Chorley 46w
Government grants 218w

Spring, Mr Richard
Debates etc.
Magistrates' courts, Suffolk (10.06.98) 1041–3
National Lottery Bill, Rep and 3R (01.06.98) 54–64, 68, 80, 84–90, 99, 102–7, 110–1
Sports (05.06.98) 616–23, 628, 649–50, 653–4
Questions
Arts Council of England 2–3
Educational finance, Suffolk 1072
English Tourist Board 493w
Millennium Exhibition, Sports 14
National Lottery, Tourism 493–4w
UK Sports Institute 666–8w
Untreated milk 339w

Squire, Ms Rachel
Questions
House of Commons, Expenditure 557w
Portcullis House, Expenditure 557w

Sri Lanka
Entry clearances 53w

Stabex
448–9w

"Stability and Investment for the Long Term"
(11.06.98) 1195–215

Staffordshire Training and Enterprise Council
358w

Stakeholder pensions
697, 701–3

Standard assessment tasks
Cumbria 700w

Standard spending assessments
512w, 861
Leicestershire 512w
Rural areas 29w

Standards of Conduct in Public Office Standing Committee
see Committee on Standards in Public Life

Standing Committee on Regional Affairs
669–70w

Standing Order No 163
(04.06.98) 594

Stanley, Rt Hon Sir John
Questions
Arms to Sierra Leone Inquiry 679w
Convention on the Civil Aspects of International Child Abduction 656w
Human rights, Departmental responsibilities 647w, 656w
Immigration controls, Kidnapping 647w

Stanley, Rt Hon Sir John—continued
Sierra Leone, Arms trade 145w, 301w, 457w

Starkey, Dr Phyllis
Debates etc.
House of Commons procedure (04.06.98) 580
Questions
Developing countries, Debts 230w
Israel, EC external trade 149w
NHS trusts, Public appointments 159
Primary care groups 173–4w
Research councils, Men 596w

Statistics
Public sector borrowing requirement 585–6w
Tax burden 224w, 1072–3

Steen, Mr Anthony
Debates etc.
Registration of Political Parties Bill, 2R (04.06.98) 518, 521
Questions
Farm incomes 340w
Food hygiene, Inspections 535w
Food poisoning 535w
Genetically modified organisms, Crops 417–8w
Genetically modified organisms, Maize 524–5w
Genetically modified organisms, Public opinion 535w
Homeworking 484w
Housing, South Devon 524w
Milk, E coli 601w
Milk, EC law 534w
Milk, Italy 344–5w

Stevenson, Mr George
Questions
Standard spending assessments 861

Stewart, Mr David
Debates etc.
Knoydart Estate, Land ownership and tenure (05.06.98) 683–90
Questions
Road accidents, Scotland 582–3w, 657w
Urban areas, Scotland 499w

Stewart, Mr Ian
Questions
Beef, Exports 497
Developing countries, Debts 230–1w

Stinchcombe, Mr Paul
Debates etc.
Human Rights Bill (HL), Com (03.06.98) 418–9
Questions
Habitual residence test 250w
Immigration applications 55w

Stoate, Dr Howard
Questions
Abortion 135w
Health service staff, Occupational health 62w, 176w, 323w

Stott, Mr Roger
Debates etc.
Northern Ireland (Sentences) Bill, 2R (10.06.98) 1092
Questions
Northern Ireland government, Referendums 361–2

Strang, Rt Hon Dr Gavin, Minister of State for Transport, Dept of the Environment Transport and the Regions
Questions
Birmingham Relief Road 865–6

Strang, Rt Hon Dr Gavin—continued
Birmingham Relief Road, Contracts 865
Bus services, Performance standards 514w
Drinking and driving 868
Exhaust emission controls 871
M74, Road construction 515w
Motor vehicles, Petrol additives 516w
National Air Traffic Services 637w
Non-alcoholic drinks, Prices 868
Parking 515w
Railway travel, Handicapped 864–5
Regional airports, Local government borrowing 637–8w
Road finance 516w

Strathclyde Police
Racial discrimination (01.06.98) 145–52

Straw, Rt Hon Jack, Secretary of State for the Home Dept
Debates etc.
Electoral systems (02.06.98) 173, 180–91, 200
Human Rights Bill (HL), Com (03.06.98) 407, 419–25, 467, 471–4
Registration of Political Parties Bill, 2R (04.06.98) 515–23, 527, 532
Questions
EU Justice and Home Affairs Council 378–80w
Extradition, USA 643–4w
Home Office, Private finance initiative 51–2w
Members' correspondence, Administrative delays 482w
Metropolitan Police 645w
Small businesses, Home Office 54w
Vulnerable or Intimidated Witnesses Interdepartmental Working Group 481–2w

Stray dogs
516–7w

Streeter, Mr Gary
Questions
Cyprus, Peace negotiations 457–8w
Developing countries, Debts 357–8, 588w
Euro, Teaching aids 457w
Sudan, Overseas aid 353

Stringer, Mr Graham
Debates etc.
Sports (05.06.98) 663–6, 681
Questions
Non-domestic rates, Debt collection 374–5w

Structure plans
Hertfordshire (04.06.98) 596–608
Public appointments 26–7w

Stuart, Ms Gisela
Debates etc.
Electoral systems (02.06.98) 179, 182, 199, 212, 217, 228, 231–3
Questions
Genetically modified organisms, Food labelling 498
Self-assessment of tax 650w

Student grants
Scotland 428w

Student loans
Part-time education 1186–7
Privatisation 256–7w
Scotland 275–8w

Student numbers
Further education colleges 701w
Scotland 383w
Teacher training 363w
Veterinary medicine 703–4w
Wales 674–5w

Stunell, Mr Andrew
Debates etc.
Electoral systems (02.06.98) 197, 203, 214
House of Commons procedure (04.06.98) 582–5
Waste disposal, Points of order (09.06.98) 874
Questions
Alternative energy, Dept for Culture Media and Sport 493w
Alternative energy, EC action 507w
Alternative energy, Ministry of Agriculture Fisheries and Food 526–8w
Alternative energy, Non-fossil fuel obligation 228–9w
Alternative energy, Treasury 440w
Business questions 509–10
Electricity tariffs, Low incomes 503–4w
Energy conservation 574w
Energy conservation, Domestic appliances 7w
Energy consumption, Dept for Culture Media and Sport 558w
Energy consumption, Ministry of Agriculture Fisheries and Food 528w
Energy consumption, Treasury 440–1w
Glaucoma, Eye tests 176–7w
Ministry of Defence, Energy consumption 107w, 492w
Travelling expenses, Dept for Culture Media and Sport 558w
Travelling expenses, Foreign and Commonwealth Office 168w
Travelling expenses, Ministry of Agriculture Fisheries and Food 526w
Travelling expenses, Treasury 326–7w

Sudan
36–7w
Civil wars 460–1w
EC aid 36w
Genocide 460w
Human rights 352–3, 612w
Overseas aid 233w, 350–3, 355–6, 449w

Suffolk
Arable area payments scheme 452w
Educational finance 1072
Magistrates' courts (10.06.98) 1041–8

Suicide
Prisoners 56w, 306w
Young people 156–7

Sunday trading
Easter 168w

Supermarkets
Food prices 486

Supported employment programme
140w

Surrey
Private education 1178

Sustainable development
EC aid 447w

Sutcliffe, Mr Gerry
Questions
Health action zones, Finance 169w
Suicide, Young people 157
Teacher training 1184

Swanwick Air Traffic Control Centre
31w, 523–4w

Swayne, Mr Desmond
Debates etc.
Atkinson, George, Prisoners (02.06.98) 270–2, 275
Electoral systems (02.06.98) 253–4
House of Commons procedure (04.06.98) 554

Swayne, Mr Desmond—continued
Human Rights Bill (HL), Com (03.06.98) 400, 419
Northern Ireland (Sentences) Bill, 2R (10.06.98) 1082
Referendums (03.06.98) 286
Registration of Political Parties Bill, 2R (04.06.98) 516, 518, 524–5, 529, 537–40
Teaching and Higher Education Bill (HL), Rep adjourned (08.06.98) 774, 830
Questions
Farm incomes 486
Frogs, Import controls 373–4w
Greenhouse effect, Air pollution control 511–2w
Stakeholder pensions 697
Water charges 856

Swinney, Mr John
Questions
Dounreay, Nuclear fuel reprocessing 713–4
Social security benefits, Scotland 698

Syms, Mr Robert
Debates etc.
Electoral systems (02.06.98) 244–7
House of Commons procedure (04.06.98) 579–80, 583
Referendums (03.06.98) 293–4
Registration of Political Parties Bill, 2R (04.06.98) 517, 527, 533–5, 538
Sports (05.06.98) 652–5
Questions
Drinking and driving 868

Tactical reconnaissance armoured combat equipment requirement
638w

Taiwan
Arms trade 349w

Tapsell, Sir Peter
Questions
Electronic government 1064

Tax allowances
British residents abroad 652w
Day nurseries 693–4
Double taxation 391w
Educational equipment 654w
Gifts and endowments 654w
Interest payments 390–1w
Pensions 651w
Vocational training 654w

Tax avoidance
649w

Tax burden
Statistics 224w, 1072–3

Tax credits
88w, 391–2w
Pensioners 87–8w

Tax evasion
652w

Tax rates and bands
Fathers 401–2w
Inheritance tax 586w
Mothers 401–2w

Tax yields
Child benefit 651w

Taxation
Child benefit 392w
Church Commissioners 34w
Film industry 43w
Handicap benefits 469w
Pay 654w
Quarrying 494w

Taxis
Greater London 565w

Taylor, Rt Hon Mrs Ann, President of the Council and Leader of the House of Commons*
Debates etc.
Business statements (11.06.98) 1216–26
House of Commons procedure (04.06.98) 551–8, 589–94
Questions
Business statements 503–13
Delegated legislation 557w
House of Commons procedure, Disclosure of information 558w
House of Commons times of sittings 159w
Inquiries, President of the Council 509w
Standing Committee on Regional Affairs 669–70w

Taylor, Ms Dari
Questions
Truancy 694w
Women, Government information services 691–2

Taylor, Mr Ian
Debates etc.
Millennium compliance (08.06.98) 723
Questions
Health education, Curriculum 167

Taylor, Rt Hon John D
Debates etc.
Northern Ireland (Sentences) Bill, 2R (10.06.98) 1163
Questions
Visas, Cyprus 168w

Taylor, Mr John M
Debates etc.
Human Rights Bill (HL), Com (03.06.98) 405–7
Questions
Housing construction, Derelict land 510w
Jubilee line 868–9

Taylor, Mr Matthew
Debates etc.
Channel tunnel (03.06.98) 373–4
Domestic energy conservation (10.06.98) 1011–4, 1023, 1031
Intervention during ministerial statement (03.06.98) 378
Questions
Cameroon, Road construction 447w
Dept for International Development, EC staff 446–7w
EC aid, Disclosure of information 446w
EC aid, Sustainable development 447w
EC Development Council 447w
EC Finance Council 193w
European Development Fund, UK contributions to EC budget 448w
Government Office for Eastern Region, Environment protection 300w
Hospitals, Cornwall 1070
Housing construction 859
Stabex 448–9w
Trade competitiveness 126w
WE 177 nuclear bomb 96w

Taylor, Sir Teddy
Debates etc.
Electoral systems (02.06.98) 186
European Communities (Amendment) Bill, Allocation of time motion and Lords amendts (09.06.98) 943, 958
Teaching and Higher Education Bill (HL), Rep adjourned (08.06.98) 762, 767, 769, 775, 781–3, 796
Questions
Agricultural products, Export rebates 454–5w
Barley, Export subsidies 532w

Taylor, Sir Teddy—continued
Food surpluses, EC action 455w
Ordnance Disposal School Chattendon 394w

Teacher training
1184
Student numbers 363w

Teachers
Early retirement 358–63w
Pay 624w, 703w
Skill shortages 1183–5

Teaching aids
Euro 457w

Teaching and Higher Education Bill (HL) 1997/98
Debates etc.
Programme motion* and Rep adjourned (08.06.98) 738–842
Rep and 3R (09.06.98) 878–929

Technique LLC
300w

Telephone services
Mental health 129w

Telephone tapping
Members 301w, 666w

Television
Prisoners 196w, 639–40w
Sports 46–7w

Temporary employment
Research 1194

Ten minutes rule
Speaker's rulings and statements (02.06.98) 171

Terminal care
174w

Territorial Army
104w, 421w
Costs 490–1w
Germany 489–91w
Shropshire 104–5w

Terrorism
Northern Ireland 662–3w

Tewkesbury
Housing 30w
Low flying 424w

Thailand
Overseas aid 41w, 168–9w

Thanet
New deal schemes 449–50w

Theatres
Arts finance 1–2
Market Harborough 6
Wales 590w

Thomas, Mr Gareth
Debates etc.
Domestic energy conservation (10.06.98) 1020
Review of Health Care in London Independent Advisory Panel (03.06.98) 310, 314, 321
Sports (05.06.98) 669–71
Questions
Alcoholic drinks, Children 309w
Confiscation of Alcohol (Young Persons) Act 1997 223w
EC grants and loans, Wales 4w, 146w, 193w, 507–8w
Organic farming 340w
Sports, Young people 42–3w
Sunday trading, Easter 168w
Tourism, Harrow 11

Thompson, Mr William
Debates etc.
Northern Ireland (Sentences) Bill, 2R (10.06.98) 1108, 1154–6
Questions
Bovine spongiform encephalopathy, Northern Ireland 490–1

Thorne, Damien
Sentencing 662w

Thyroid gland
Cancer 444w

Tibet
EC action 149w

Tickets
Millennium Exhibition 15
World Cup 677w

Timms, Mr Stephen
Debates etc.
Channel tunnel (03.06.98) 376
Economic policy (11.06.98) 1214
Millennium compliance (08.06.98) 726–7
Questions
Bank of England, Monetary Policy Committee 329w
Central government borrowing 654–5w
EC Finance Council 225–6w

Tipping, Mr Paddy
Debates etc.
Business questions (11.06.98) 1218
Registration of Political Parties Bill, 2R (04.06.98) 538
Questions
"Access to the Open Countryside in England and Wales Consultation Paper" 631w Millennium 12–3

Tobacco
Agricultural subsidies 344w, 530–1w
Common agricultural policy 161
Production 160
Retail trade 505w
Smuggling 1076

Tobacco advertising
159–61, 1193–4
Sports sponsorship 134w

Tobacco duties
327w

Todd, Mr Mark
Questions
Crown copyright 623w
Local education authorities 696w
Magistrates' courts, Derbyshire 212w
Magistrates' courts, Public transport 212w
Magistrates' courts committees 213w
Milk, Production quotas 530w
Widowers' benefits 250–1w

Tonge, Dr Jenny
Debates etc.
Eritrea (08.06.98) 732
Nuclear weapons tests (01.06.98) 27
Questions
Abortion 605w
Armed forces housing, Kingston 422w
Arms trade 355
Burma, Overseas aid 41w
Contraceptives 136w, 180w, 238–9w
Democratic Republic of the Congo 244w
Developing countries, Debts 89–91w, 215–6w
Economic situation, Asia 91w
Entry clearances, Sri Lanka 53w
Family planning 129–30w
Family planning, Northern Ireland 66w
Hammersmith bridge 517–8w

Tonge, Dr Jenny—continued
Heathrow Airport 8w
Heathrow Airport, Public inquiries 8w
Hospitals, South West London 691–2w
India, Nuclear weapons 40w
Mercenaries, Treaties 459w
Overseas investment, Environmentally sensitive areas 42w
Special education, Complaints 698w
Swanwick Air Traffic Control Centre 31w
World Bank 587–8w

Touhig, Mr Don
Questions
Cattle tracing system 489
Hereditary peers, House of Lords reform 1068

Tourism
10–1, 45w
Coastal areas 45w
Harrow 11
National Lottery 11, 493–4w
New deal for young people 669w
Wales 591w

Town and country planning
Greater London Authority 513w
Sportsgrounds (10.06.98) 1033–40

Townend, Mr John
Debates etc.
European Communities (Amendment) Bill, Allocation of time motion and Lords amendts (09.06.98) 935, 955–8
Questions
Developing countries, Debts 358

Toxocariasis
601–2w

Trade competitiveness
126w

Trade missions
China 341w

Trade promotion
Arms trade 422w

Train operating units
Performance standards 513w

Training
Accountants 697w
Judiciary 584w
Legal Aid Board 413w
Metropolitan Police 58w
NHS Direct 129w
Printing industry 364w
Special education 366–7w

Training and enterprise councils
357–8w, 698w
Finance 203w, 697–8w
Performance standards 698w
West Midlands 140–1w

Transco
(09.06.98) 980–6

Transport
Dept for Culture Media and Sport 47w
Millennium Exhibition 33–4w
Northern Ireland Office 64–5w

Transport aircraft
639w

Transport of animals
Animal experiments 644–5w

Transport of radioactive materials
577–8w
Air transport 631w
Carlisle Airport 572–3w
Channel tunnel 631–2w
Ferries 631–2w
France 414w

Transport policy
866–7
Motorcycles 28w, 157w
White papers 211w

Travel
Diseases 603w

Travel requirements
Vaccination 602–3w

Travelling expenses
Bishops 16–7
Dept for Culture Media and Sport 558w
Foreign and Commonwealth Office 168w
Ministry of Agriculture Fisheries and Food 526w
Treasury 326–7w

Travelling people
Caravan sites 574w

Treasury
Alternative energy 440w
Energy consumption 440–1w
Government information services 85w
Official hospitality 584w
Small businesses 195w
Travelling expenses 326–7w

Treaties
Mercenaries 459w
Parliamentary procedure 244–5w

Tredinnick, Mr David
Debates etc.
Business questions (11.06.98) 1222
Questions
Alternative medicine, East London 605w
Alternative medicine, Medical research 538w
Nutrition and health, Schools 167

Trend, Mr Michael
Debates etc.
Eritrea (08.06.98) 729–30
European Council (11.06.98) 1274–8, 1284

Trimble, Rt Hon David
Debates etc.
Northern Ireland (Sentences) Bill, 2R (10.06.98) 1096–101

Truancy
694–5w

Truswell, Mr Paul
Questions
Leeds Health Authority, Finance 172w

Tuberculosis
238w

Tuition fees
204w
Administrative costs 138w
Higher education admission 1192–3
Scotland 383w

Turkey
Human rights 146w

Turks and Caicos Islands
150w
Illegal immigrants 243w
Ministers' visits abroad 348–9w
Overseas aid 349w

Turnberg Review
see Review of Health Care in London Independent Advisory Panel

Turner, Dr George
Debates etc.
European Communities (Amendment) Bill, Allocation of time motion and Lords amendts (09.06.98) 939, 948, 958–60
Teaching and Higher Education Bill (HL), Rep adjourned (08.06.98) 783–6

Twigg, Mr Derek
Debates etc.
Teaching and Higher Education Bill (HL), Rep adjourned (08.06.98) 806
Questions
Developing countries, Security industry 232–3w
EC Internal Market Council 322–3w
Inheritance tax, Tax rates and bands 586w
Social security benefits, Children 473w
Tuition fees, Higher education admission 1193

Twigg, Mr Stephen
Questions
New deal schemes, Private sector 205w

Tyler, Mr Paul
Debates etc.
Business questions (11.06.98) 1218
Electoral systems (02.06.98) 201
House of Commons procedure (04.06.98) 563–7, 570, 577, 588
Questions
Bovine spongiform encephalopathy, Disease control 490
Business questions 505–6

Tyrie, Mr Andrew
Debates etc.
National Lottery Bill, Rep and 3R (01.06.98) 74–5
Questions
Sierra Leone, Armed forces deployment 97–9w

UK contributions to EC budget
496w
European Development Fund 448w

UK National Data Centre
312–3w

UK Sports Council
48w

UK Sports Institute
46w, 666–8w

UN agencies
UK contributions 38w

UN Convention on the Rights of the Child
147–8w

UN resolutions
Kashmir 392w

Unemployment
Dundee 332w
Educational qualifications 498–9w

UNESCO
Cultural heritage 560w

Unfair dismissal
Small businesses 684w

Uniform business rate
Public houses 649–50w

United Bristol Healthcare NHS Trust
Inquiries 337w, 692w

Untreated milk
339w
Food poisoning 76w

Uranium
107–8w
Defence research 182w
Dounreay 364–5, 594–5w

Urban areas
Management 20w
Scotland 499w

Urinary system disorders
Industrial injuries disablement benefit 709w

USA
Barley 532w
Extradition 643–4w
Postal services 503w

Vacancies
Chelmsford 367–8w
Health service staff 406w
Midwives 178w

Vacant land
Housing construction 510w

Vaccination
Bovine tuberculosis 529w
Travel requirements 602–3w
Whooping cough 133–4w

Vaccine damaged children
Compensation 250w, 550w

Varroasis
Bees 247–8w, 275w, 344w, 496–7

VAT
Art works 3
Housing 328w

Vaz, Mr Keith
Questions
Asia-Europe meeting 93–4w
Cricket, Racial discrimination 48–9w
Ethnic minorities, Northern Ireland 184–5w
Foreign and Commonwealth Office, Ethnic minorities 487–8w
Heathrow Airport, Public inquiries 512w
Human rights, Annual reports 147w
Immigration applications 55w
Indonesia, Human rights 146–7w
Mines 423–4w
Ministers' visits abroad, China 93w
Ministers' visits abroad, Indonesia 89w
Ministers' visits abroad, Korea 89w
North Korea 93w
Sudan 36–7w
Trade missions, China 341w
Venezuela, Prisoners 618w
Work permits, Catering 141–2w
Yemen, Journalists 617–8w

Venezuela
Prisoners 618w

Ventilation
Hospitals 690w

Veterinary medicine
Northern Ireland 663w
Student numbers 703–4w

Veterinary services
Slaughterhouses 532–3w

Viagra
686w

Viggers, Mr Peter
Questions
Dounreay, Nuclear fuel reprocessing 714–5
Museums and galleries 8
Probation and aftercare, Finance 58–60w

Village schools
626w

Vis, Dr Rudi
Questions
Algeria, Human rights 611w
Common agricultural policy 488

Visas
Africa 346–7w
Algeria 459–60w
Cyprus 168w

Vitamin B6
486

Vocational training
Tax allowances 654w

Voluntary organisations
National Lottery 44–5w

Voting methods
Grammar schools 256w

Vulnerable or Intimidated Witnesses Interdepartmental Working Group
481–2w

Wales
Antismoking campaign 324w
Armed forces strength 492w
Arts finance 589w
Asthma 62–4w
Bovine spongiform encephalopathy 671w
Breast cancer 166w
Cancer 671w
Class sizes 676w
Community hospitals 62w
Cost per student 229w
Council tax benefits 551w
Cricket 591w
Dairy farming 324–5w
EC grants and loans 4w, 146w, 193w, 425–6w, 507–8w
Economic and monetary union 589w
European Communities 426w
Eye disorders 671w
Football Trust 166w
Further education 63w
Health service staff 62w
Hospital waiting lists 229w
Housing improvement 592–3w
Incontinence 377–8w
Local education authorities 672w
Local government constituencies 591–2w
Local government reform 545w
Local government social services 545w
Low incomes 250w
Millennium Commission 590w
Museums and galleries 591w
National income 674w
NHS 61–2w
NHS trusts 166w, 673w
Orchestras 589–90w
Prescription drugs 545w
Psychiatry 672w
Public sector employment 673w
Rendering industry 671–2w
Rural transport 675–6w
Sites of special scientific interest 62w
Slums 592w
Smoking 323–4w
Social Exclusion Unit 674w
Student numbers 674–5w
Theatres 590w
Tourism 591w

Walker, Mr Cecil
Questions
Legal aid, Northern Ireland 655–6w

Wallace, Mr James
Questions
Educational publications, Scotland 502w
Housing finance, Scotland 331–2w
Legal aid scheme, Scotland 502w
Procurator Fiscal Service 499–502w
Rented housing, Glasgow 333w
Rented housing, Scotland 333w
School transport, Northern Ireland 217–8w
Self-assessment of tax 650w

Walley, Ms Joan
Questions
Cellular phones, Health warnings 439–40w

Walley, Ms Joan—continued
Disability living allowance, Social security recipients 548w
Export credit guarantees 593w
Genetically modified organisms 496
Ground water, Pollution 31–2w
Population projection, Elderly 442–3w
Sewers 32w

Walter, Mr Robert
Debates etc.
European Council (11.06.98) 1258, 1267–71
Questions
Artificial insemination, Cattle 535–6w

Wandsworth
Housing 373w

War pensions
252–3w

Ward, Ms Claire
Questions
Beef, Exports 339–40w
Post offices, Watford 508w
Railway safety 872
Travelling people, Caravan sites 574w

Wareing, Mr Robert N
Questions
Developing countries, Debts 230w

Warrington
Incapacity benefit 253–4w
Pupil exclusions 367w

Waste disposal
419–20w
Agricultural land 28w, 420w
Livestock 452–3w
Paper 28w, 420w

Water abstraction
153w

Water charges
855–6

Water conservation
17w

Water meters
855–6

Water storage
Civil engineering 159w

Water treatment
Sewage 17w, 517w

Waterson, Mr Nigel
Debates etc.
Registration of Political Parties Bill, 2R (04.06.98) 515
Questions
Judges, Members' correspondence 485w
Polegate bypass, Compensation 33w
South Downs 636w
Thorne, Damien, Sentencing 662w

Watford
Post offices 508w

Watts, Mr Dave
Questions
Crime prevention, St Helens 364

WE 177 nuclear bomb
96w

Weapons
IRA 366

Webb, Mr Steve
Questions
Ambulances 692w
Child benefit 402w
Family income 475–6w
Fathers, Tax rates and bands 401–2w

Webb, Mr Steve—continued
Local government constituencies, Gloucestershire 212w
Maintenance, Children 187–9w
National insurance contributions 467–8w
New deal for lone parents 110–1w, 314–5w
Pensioners, Poverty 700
Pensions, Tax allowances 651w
Probation officers 642w
Sierra Leone, Armed forces deployment 99–100w
Social security, Expenditure 475w
Tax yields, Child benefit 651w

Welfare of Animals (Transport) Order 1997
Questions
534w

Welfare to work
1192

Wells, Mr Bowen
Debates etc.
European Council (11.06.98) 1251–4

Welsh, Mr Andrew
Debates etc.
Teaching and Higher Education Bill (HL), Rep adjourned (08.06.98) 753, 762–3, 786–90, 793, 814–6
Teaching and Higher Education Bill (HL), Rep and 3R (09.06.98) 907–8

Welsh Advisory Committee on Drug and Alcohol Misuse
Public appointments 376–8w

Welsh National Board for Nursing Midwifery and Health Visiting
675w

Welsh Office
Inquiries 588–9w
Small businesses 61w

West coast railway line
Investment 520w

West country
Bovine spongiform encephalopathy 489

West Drayton
Air traffic control 523–4w

West Kent Health Authority
136–7w, 542w

West Midlands
Community transport 519–20w
Cycleways 19w
Methicillin resistant staphylococcus aureus 539–40w
Rough sleepers initiative 19–20w
Social Exclusion Unit 213–4w
Training and enterprise councils 140–1w

West Sussex
Housing construction 9w
Special education 368w

West Yorkshire
NHS administration 170w

Western European Union
606–7w

Western Sahara
(03.06.98) 333–40
Referendums 239w

Whales
201w, 340w
Japan 94w

Wheelchairs
334–6w
Access to work programme 365–6w
Disabled workers 699–700w

White, Mr Brian
Debates etc.
Millennium compliance (08.06.98) 719–20
Questions
Indonesia, Overseas aid 235–6w
Royal parks, Festivals and special occasions 44w
School transport 866

White papers
Transport policy 211w

Whitehead, Dr Alan
Questions
Bus services, Performance standards 514w
Chlorofluorocarbons, Refrigeration 15w
Hydrofluorocarbons 15w
Hydrofluorocarbons, Refrigeration 14–5w
National parks 518w
New Forest, National parks 518w
Shipbuilding, Regional selective assistance 684w

Whittingdale, Mr John
Questions
Centre for Environment Fisheries and Aquaculture Science 74w
National Lottery, Film industry 164w

Whooping cough
Vaccination 133–4w

Wicks, Mr Malcolm
Questions
Pensions, Carers 700–1

Widdecombe, Rt Hon Ann
Debates etc.
House of Commons procedure, Points of order (02.06.98) 168
Questions
Hospital discharges 165–6
Hospital waiting lists 158–9

Widowers' benefits
250–1w

Widows' benefits
314w, 402–3w

Wigley, Rt Hon Dafydd
Debates etc.
Economic policy (11.06.98) 1215
European Council (11.06.98) 1230–1, 1249, 1259–62, 1281
Questions
Agricultural subsidies, Administrative costs 185w
Cancer 156
Community hospitals, Wales 62w
Dairy farming, Wales 324–5w
Developing countries, Debts 216w
Economic and monetary union, Wales 589w
European Communities, Wales 426w
European Convention on Human Rights 311w
Football Trust, Wales 166w
Low incomes, Wales 250w
Medical profession, Interagency cooperation 685w
Motorcycles, Bus lanes 519w
National income, Wales 674w
NHS Executive, Advisory services 239w
NHS trusts, Wales 673w
Nomenclature of statistical territorial units, EC grants and loans 384w
Ottawa Convention 488w
Social Exclusion Unit, Wales 674w
Vaccine damaged children, Compensation 550w
Wheelchairs 334w

Wild boar
155–6w, 662w

Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981
Questions
30w

Wilkinson, Mr John
Debates etc.
Channel tunnel (03.06.98) 378–9
Review of Health Care in London Independent Advisory Panel (03.06.98) 309–11, 320
Questions
Apache AH-64 helicopter 639w
Cancer, Medical treatments 171w
Duty free allowances, Redundancy 1074
Millennium Exhibition, Transport 33–4w
Tobacco, Production 160

Willetts, Mr David,
Debates etc.
Teaching and Higher Education Bill (HL), Rep adjourned (08.06.98) 765–72, 778–9, 797, 804–7, 812
Teaching and Higher Education Bill (HL), Rep and 3R (09.06.98) 914–9, 922
Questions
Class sizes, Leicestershire 1180
Educational finance, National insurance contributions 137w
Employment 86w
European voluntary service for young people 137w
Higher education admission 1183
Inflation 195–6w
New deal for young people 137w, 707w
New deal schemes, Access courses 138w
Tuition fees, Administrative costs 138w

Williams, Rt Hon Alan
Debates etc.
Economic policy (11.06.98) 1210

Williams, Mr Alan W
Debates etc.
European Council (11.06.98) 1237, 1239, 1249–51
Registration of Political Parties Bill, 2R (04.06.98) 517
Questions
Antibiotics 495
Incapacity benefit, Medical examinations 476–7w

Williams, Mrs Betty
Questions
EC grants and loans 508w

Willis, Mr Phil
Debates etc.
Belfast Agreement (01.06.98) 37
Northern Ireland (Sentences) Bill, 2R (10.06.98) 1086, 1105–10
Teaching and Higher Education Bill (HL), Rep adjourned (08.06.98) 740, 757, 771, 773–4, 803, 819
Teaching and Higher Education Bill (HL), Rep and 3R (09.06.98) 897, 919–23
Questions
Discretionary student grants 205w
New deal for young people 624w, 697w
Personal injury compensation, Social security benefits overpayment 550w
Pharmacists, Primary health care 539w
Police discipline 483w
Railway network, Leeds 514w
Student loans, Part-time education 1186–7

Wills, Mr Michael
Questions
Armed forces civilians, Skill shortages 394w

Wilshire, Mr David
Questions
Ashford and St Peter's Hospital NHS Trust, Managers 410w
European Council, Furniture 461–2w
Members' correspondence, Administrative delays 393w
Sierra Leone, Armed forces deployment 100w
Sierra Leone, Arms trade 317w, 424–5w, 457w
Sudan, Overseas aid 449w

Wilson, Mr Brian, Minister for Education and Industry, Scottish Office
Debates etc.
Knoydart Estate, Land ownership and tenure (05.06.98) 685–90
Teaching and Higher Education Bill (HL), Rep adjourned (08.06.98) 766, 768–9, 778, 781, 792–7
Teaching and Higher Education Bill (HL), Rep and 3R (09.06.98) 891, 893–5
Questions
Educational finance, Argyll and Bute 432w
Educational publications, Scotland 502w
Free school meals, Scotland 431w
Insolvency, Scotland 431–2w
Royal Deeside Partnership 262w
Small businesses, Scottish Office 85w
Student grants, Scotland 428w
Student numbers, Scotland 383w
Tuition fees, Scotland 383w

Wiltshire
Hospital waiting lists 361

Wind power
506–7w

Winnick, Mr David
Debates etc.
Belfast Agreement (01.06.98) 36
Electoral systems (02.06.98) 184, 201
Northern Ireland (Sentences) Bill, 2R (10.06.98) 1092–3, 1118, 1151, 1155
Questions
Business questions 507–8
Disability living allowance 706
Iraq, Chemical and biological warfare 149–50w
Lawrence, Stephen, Homicide 302w
Members' correspondence, Administrative delays 112w
NHS 162
Tax evasion 652w

Winter fuel payments
402w, 554–6w, 707–8
Worcester 554–6w

Winterbourne Gunner
Land reclamation 207–9w

Winterton, Mrs Ann
Debates etc.
Electoral systems (02.06.98) 190
Questions
Agriculture 493
Developing countries, Debts 35w
Primary education, Drug abuse 693w

Winterton, Mr Nicholas
Debates etc.
Economic policy (11.06.98) 1214
Questions
British Road Federation, Finance 515w
Developing countries, Debts 35w
Greater London Authority 861–2
Industrial investment 318w
Manufacturing industries, Flexible working 508w

Winterton, Mr Nicholas—continued
Mental health services, North West region 172w
Open government 1067
Printing industry, Training 364w
Sudan, Overseas aid 350–2

Winterton, Ms Rosie
Questions
Cleaner Vehicles Task Force 16w
Hydrocarbon oil duties 194w
Immobilisation of vehicles 153w
Lead free petrol, Motor vehicles 16w
Motor vehicles, Fraud 16w
Road works 153w

Winwick
Public petitions (02.06.98) 269

Wise, Audrey
Debates etc.
House of Commons procedure, Points of order (02.06.98) 168
Questions
NHS trusts, Public appointments 158

Women
Domestic violence 476w, 703–4
EC action 473–4w
Government departments 694–5
Government information services 691–2
Internet 691–2
Scientists 204w

Women's employment
Families 708

Woodward, Mr Shaun
Debates etc.
Community hospitals, Oxfordshire (03.06.98) 343, 346
Sports (05.06.98) 646–9, 655
Questions
Overseas aid, Charities 356
Spinal injuries 177w

Woolas, Mr Phil
Questions
Caravans, Consumer protection 126–7w

Worcester
Magistrates' courts 412w
Winter fuel payments 554–6w

Worcestershire
Educational finance 1187–8
Health services 153–4
Hospital waiting lists 154
Hospitals 154–5

Work permits
Catering 141–2w

Work permits—continued
Political refugees 437–8w

Working benefits campaign
546–7w

Working hours
Families 692–3
Junior hospital doctors 180w

World Bank
587–8w

World Cup
7
Tickets 677w

Worthington, Mr Tony,
Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Northern Ireland Office
Questions
Antismoking campaign, Young people 375w
Ethnic minorities, Northern Ireland 184–5w
Family planning, Northern Ireland 65–6w
Health service staff, Occupational health 323w
Methadone, Death 323w
School transport, Northern Ireland 217–8w
Smoking, Young people 323w
Veterinary medicine, Northern Ireland 663w

Wright, Mr Anthony D
Questions
Minimum wage 364

Wright, Dr Tony
Debates etc.
Electoral systems (02.06.98) 177, 187, 235–7
Registration of Political Parties Bill, 2R (04.06.98) 519
Questions
Birmingham Relief Road, Construction costs 209w
Birmingham Relief Road, Contracts 865
House of Commons times of sittings 159w
Political parties, Finance 95w
Vaccine damaged children, Compensation 250w

Wyatt, Derek
Debates etc.
Millennium compliance (08.06.98) 722
Sports (05.06.98) 635, 642–5, 660–1
Questions
BBC 492–3w
Kent County Council 419w, 577w
Mass media, Ownership 5
Student loans, Part-time education 1187

Wyatt, Derek—continued
Supermarkets, Food prices 486
West Kent Health Authority 136–7w, 542w

Wymott Prison
Prison accommodation 439w

Yemen
Journalists 617–8w

Yeo, Mr Tim
Debates etc.
Leasehold housing (10.06.98) 988–9, 1005–7
Questions
Housing construction, Derelict land 859–60

York
Army bases 103w

Yorkshire and Humberside
National Lottery 668–9w

Young, Sir George
Debates etc.
Business questions (11.06.98) 1216–7
House of Commons procedure (04.06.98) 558–61
House of Commons questions, Point of order (11.06.98) 1226
Questions
Business statements 503–5
Electronic government 1063

Young offenders
219–20w, 482–3w
Police custody 483w
Prison population 382w

Young people
Antismoking campaign 260–1w, 324w, 375w, 685w
Cancer 444w
Offences against children 304–5w
Smoking 136w, 260w, 323–4w
Social security benefits 474w
Sports 42–3w
Suicide 156–7

"Your Right to Know White Paper"
620w

Youth clubs
National Lottery 302w

Youth employment
Dundee 581–2w

Youth Parliament Bill 1997/98
Debates etc.
1R (09.06.98) 875–7

CAMBRIDGESHIRE LIBRARIES